H. B. Boyd has traded a two-thirds interest in the brick block next to the Boyd hotel for 320 acres of extra good farm land 5 1/2 miles west of Bloomfield. The trade was made by A. B. Charde and is said to be one of the best deals made in this vicinity for a long time. The farm was owned by C. L. Boone, a land broker of Chicago, and was sold by three different parties, Mr. Charde getting his deed filed 10 minutes ahead of the other agents.

It is earnestly requested that farmers on the road between Winside and Wayne on the morning of the Fourth between the hours of nine and ten a. m. will leave a clear road for the bicycle riders in the road race to be run at that time, as it is almost impossible for a wheelman to pass on the side. By looking back occasionally they can soon give a clear road. It will be considered a great favor if farmers will do this as it will help in making a good race. Wayne Cycle Club.

Mrs. E. Weber planned and executed a very successful surprise party Monday evening in honor of Miss Gertrude's birthday. The rooms were prettily decorated with rose and catalpa blossoms which with the evening toilettes of the young ladies, combined to make a very pleasing scene. The evening passed all too quickly with music, dancing and a display of each guests artistic ability. Later small tables were brought in and very nice refreshments were served. Miss Weber was the recipient of a number of beautiful presents and innumerable expressions of good wishes from her friends.

Two Soldiers Shot. Murder of First Sergeant Livingston Executed on the Spot. Just before grand juror at Fort Niobrara on the morning of the 27th, Private Weaver of Company C, who was waiting under arms to go on guard, sitting on the company porch, suddenly drew his rifle and, after taking deliberate aim, shot and instantly killed First Sergeant Livingston of Company D, who was passing along the roadway in front of Company C quarters.

When the sergeant dropped four men ran and picked him up, when Weaver fired four shots at them, forcing them to drop the sergeant and run for shelter. Weaver then fired several more shots, aiming at any one who happened to come within range of his rifle, but without effect.

Then First Lieutenant Clark, Twelfth infantry, who was in D company's quarters, ordered Private Strino, D company, a member of the guard, to shoot Weaver, while he did, the ball striking Weaver's rifle near the butt, shattering it and afterward entering his body, from which he died within an hour.

The only man known for the act is that a few days ago Weaver became engaged in an altercation with Private McLeroy of D company, in which he followed McLeroy into D company barracks and was expelled therefrom by Sergeant Livingston. He swore vengeance on the sergeant at the time.

Weaver has been drinking hard of late and it is thought he was crazed from liquor. First Sergeant Livingston was a young man recently promoted, but of excellent soldierly qualities and very popular.

Jail Bird Makes His Escape. Samuel Smith, who has been confined in the county jail at York for some time awaiting his trial in the district court on the charge of cattle stealing, broke jail the other morning and is still at liberty. Jailor Walsh had just served Smith with breakfast and had come out of the cell and on his return Smith was gone. It was afterward learned that he stole a horse from a barn near the court house and started for more congenial climes. He was pursued by N. M. George and was compelled to abandon the horse he had stolen and hide in the thick brush. A posse surrounded the place where he disappeared, but he has not been caught.

Deserts Wife and Church. W. J. Hatherall, who has been pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Win-side for some months, left a few days since during the absence of his wife. It develops that he has deserted both his wife, an estimable lady, and his church, having notified his presiding elder that he would not return, having backslidden from the church, and written his wife that she might return to her parents. Hatherall has made himself very unpopular in that community by his radical statements regarding personal liberty. He has shown himself not to be altogether unselfish, and this result is not wholly unexpected by those who have studied his character.

Investigating Irrigation Work. Charles W. Ingraham, chief of the irrigation bureau of the agricultural department, is at Fremont for the purpose of looking after the interests of the work of the bureau in that section. He inspected the route of the proposed Platte River Canal, the outlet of which is to be on the south side of the river nearly opposite Fremont.

Berlin Boys Fined. A crowd of boys got drunk at Berlin the other evening and made the night hideous with their oaths and obscenity until about midnight, when a deputation of citizens ordered them home. In the morning City Marshal Taney entered complaint and warrants were issued for five of the boys. All except one were found guilty and fined $5.

Drinks Carbolic Acid and Dies. The wife of Herman Ruch, a German farmer residing ten miles southwest of Tompshel, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. Mrs. Ruch has not been altogether mentally strong for several years and she was just recovering from a prolonged sickness. She died last night aged and leaves a husband and eight children.

Corpse Found in the Elkhorn. The body of Frank Frivot, who was drowned in the Elkhorn River west of Greta, was discovered on a sandbar about 100 yards below the point where he was last seen. The remains were taken in charge by the county authorities and buried in the county cemetery at Springfield. No inquest was held.

Stole Cob Pipes. G. H. Johnson of Weeping Water was arrested and taken to Syracuse on a warrant sworn out by the Syracuse Cob Pipe Company on a charge of stealing pipes from their factory.

Will Warmly Welcome Rioters. For the first time in the history of Fort Calhoun a jail is being built. Calhoun is one of the oldest towns in the state and never until lately has anything of the kind been heard of there. The citizens of that place raised nearly $100 by subscription, the rest being paid by the city. The jail is being built in anticipation of the large crowd on the Fourth of July.

Broke His Leg While Playing Ball. Neil Horne, son of Hon. O. Horne of the Bank of Syracuse, broke his leg to a game of ball.

Jefferson County's Prosperity.

The returns made by the assessors of Jefferson County show a total valuation of real and personal property, not including railroad property, of $1,958,501.49; a decrease from last year's assessment of $82,075.21. The reduction is all in personal property. Farm lands, which are valued at $1,909,463, showing an increase of $2,784.

Horiculturists Meet at York. The summer meeting of the State Horticultural Society will be held at York, July 22 and 23. Horticulturists and others are urgently requested to bring in exhibits of fruits, flowers, trees, seeds and vegetables; also horticultural appliances, traps, pickers, prunes, dryers, sprayers, etc., more especially such as can and are made at home. Nebraska peaches won highest praise for quality at the World's Fair in 1893. L. D. Stillson of York is in charge of local arrangements. Fruit sent in advance of session will be held safely in cold storage.

Shooting Affray at Lincoln. The patrol wagon was called to a Lincoln residence where a row was in progress. It was discovered that Alfred Stokenburg had shot F. W. Ballard twice, one ball passing through his left arm, the other inflicting a glancing wound in his back. Neither of the wounds are considered dangerous. The row occurred over a woman. Both men have been in the insane asylum and are considered mentally unsound. Seven years ago Stokenburg fired twenty-two shots at officers who arrested him for a misdemeanor.

Gets Three Years. Judge Litton, at Beatrice, overruled the motion for a new trial in the case of J. C. Williams, president of the Blue Springs Bank, he having been found guilty of falsifying the books of the bank. After overruling the motion the court sentenced Williams to confinement in the penitentiary for a term of three years. There are still several charges against the defendant, but which will probably not be taken up until a later date.

Burglar Sentenced. Judge Ramsey opened district court at Plattsmouth on the 25th to sentence John Adams, charged with robbing a store at Adams, Mo., for which he was arrested a couple of weeks ago at Auburn. Adams pleaded guilty, stating, in extenuation of his crime, that he was unable to work, being a sufferer from nervous prostration. He was sentenced to three and a half years in the penitentiary.

Killed by Lightning. Mrs. Henry Benck of Fort Calhoun was struck by lightning a few days ago and killed. Mrs. Benck was in the yard looking after some young ducks, when the lightning struck the end of the house, shivering it to pieces and passing on through the window screen, which it melted and then struck her, burning all one side of her body. She was unconscious up to her death.

Secures His Liberty. Charles McHugh, arrested and held at Beatrice in jail for a number of weeks upon the charge of seduction, preferred against him in Iowa, and who was finally taken to Iowa, has returned to Beatrice the charge having been dismissed. He says the charge and arrest were made to get him back to Iowa and force him to release some mortgaged property, but the scheme failed.

Harness Thieves Arrested. Constable Roy of Unadilla, took two young men to Syracuse who were wanted for stealing harness from two farmers near Unadilla. They were located at Beatrice and twelve sets of harness found in their possession. He has also found written confession to the theft, and the county attorney has been summoned to prosecute. Both are young men 17 to 20 years of age.

Enterprise of Omaha People. Parties from Omaha have been at Stromsburg endeavoring to secure the right of way for a telephone line from York to David City. The line to pass through Benedict, Stromsburg, Oscola, Shelby and Rising City. The project seems to meet with general approval, and it is quite probable the line will be built.

May Erect Poles and Wires. The city council of David City passed an ordinance granting the Nebraska Telephone Company the right of way for the erection and maintenance of poles and wires through the streets of the city; also one providing for the working of tramps or vagrants on the streets when convicted of begging in the city.

From a Lamp Explosion. Mrs. Zabish, wife of a farmer, living ten miles west of Grand Island, dropped a lamp setting the house on fire and it was burned. The house was ablaze in a moment and not a thing was saved. One of the children was rescued with difficulty. The loss, about $500, is covered by insurance.

Engineer Badly Scalded. Engineer C. C. Smith was badly scalded at Alliance by the blowing of a plug out of a boiler. He could easily have escaped injury, but instead rushed into the steam to see what had become of his fireman. The latter was blown off the engine but escaped injury.

Struck by a Street Car. Harry Boyer, a young man, was struck by a street car at Lincoln and seriously injured. He will recover.

Postoffice Robbed. The postoffice at Arlington was entered by the back door route and about 300 pennies taken.

West Point Boy Drowned. Bart Odell, the 10-year-old son of Mrs. Odell, was drowned in the Elkhorn at Elk Point. The boy, in company with others, was bathing, and venturing out too far was carried out into the current and drowned. Every effort was made to recover the body but without success.

Big Consignment of Stock. A solid trainload of eighteen cars of stock left Plainview the other night for Omaha. This is the largest consignment of stock ever sent down the branch from any one town.

"The Astronomy of Milton's Paradise Lost" is the title of a book by Dr. Thomas N. Orchard.

Mr. Croggett's new novel, "Cleg Kelly, Arab of the City: His Progress and Adventures," is to be published immediately.

E. F. Knight, a special correspondent during the French invasion of Madagascar last year, has written a book on "Madagascar in War-Time."

Fred J. Wishaw has written a novel depicting the times and court of Ivan the Terrible. It is called "A Boyar of the Terrible."

"Jan Maclaren" is soon to publish a new book entitled "The Mind of the Master." It is not another Scotch novel, however, but an exposition of Christian doctrine.

A series of articles by Andrew D. White, late president of Cornell University, is to be reprinted from the Popular Science Monthly, to which they have been contributed at intervals during the past ten years. The book will be called "A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom."

A new set of College Histories of Art, to be edited by Prof. John C. Van Dyke, is announced. The first volume will be "A Text-Book of the History of Painting," by the editor, and others to follow are "A History of Architecture," by Prof. A. D. F. Hamlin, and "A History of Sculpture," by Prof. Allan Marquand and Prof. A. L. Frothingham, Jr.

Jacques La Lorraine, a Parisian writer of the Decadent school, has opened a cobbler's shop in the Latin quarter. He has tried for fifteen years to live by literature, but he could not make it go. Now, at thirty-five, he has opened a shop, hired a cobbler, and set about learning the trade. He is said to be doing a lively business.

Georges Hugo, grandson of Victor Hugo, is to publish in the spring his first book, "Souvenirs d'un Matelot," chapters of which have been printed in Le Reveu de Paris. Georges Hugo was a sailor for three years. It is said that his book criticizes the French navy in a manner which will cause a sensation. Nothing of this sort appeared in Le Reveu's fragmentary publication.

Robert Louis Stevenson's poems have been gathered together for the first time in a single volume, and will be issued immediately under the title of "Poems and Ballads." The volume will comprise all the poems contained in "A Child's Garden of Verses," "Ballads," and "Underwoods," and in addition over forty pieces of verse written since the publication of those volumes.

Henri Rochefort is having prepared from the five volumes of his autobiography a special English edition in two volumes, intended for the English public. The many bitter things he has said of perillous Albion, based on a long residence there while exiled from France, give reason to think that the English edition will prove very entertaining.

The Athenaeum says: "The late Mr. Murray had for many years collected materials for a complete edition of Byron's works in prose and verse. Mr. Murray had in his possession a considerable number of letters to various persons, including those to his father, some of which were not shown to Moore, as well as many documents and papers of interest. He had also acquired Lord Byron's own continuation of 'Don Juan' and several other unpublished poems and fragments. With the aid of these materials it is hoped that a final edition of Byron's works may be given to the world at no very distant date."

The French Prophetess. Mlle. Coudon, the mystical young lady of the rue de Paradis, who asserts that she is in direct communication with the angel Gabriel, continues to be the talk of Paris, says a correspondent. Her rooms are thronged daily with ecclesiastics and savants, who question her closely on her visions, and with merely curious persons of the upper classes, who want to see the new mystic. It is said that Cardinal Richiard is much perplexed by the nineteenth century sibyl, and that he intends to prohibit priests from seeing her. The prophetess has been announcing terrible things, such as an universal war, the dismemberment of France and a revolution in Paris. "London the proud" is also mentioned in prophetic verse.

For the female Nostradamus and imitator of Dr. Cumming often speaks in stanzas. The damsel's father and mother are fully convinced that their daughter has a heavenly mission, and allow everybody who likes to see her and consult her for nothing. A priest is reported to have given it as his opinion that the young woman is possessed by the devil, and that she ought to be exorcised. This opinion must, however, be taken as that of a blinded mind, for it appears that Mlle. Coudon has been calling the clergy to order, and denouncing them for their pride and their lack of fervor in the pursuit of their sacred calling. One clergyman went even so far as to assert frankly that the supposed angel, speaking through the mouth of the mystical damsel, was an arrant impostor.—Boston Herald.

His Awful Warning. A clergyman in an Eastern town warned his hearers lately "not to walk in a slippery path, lest they be sucked, maelstrom-like, into its meshes."

We don't know of any worse luck than to get the notion in one's head on a Friday that it is Saturday.

McKINLEY THE AMERICAN

FOR PRESIDENT, WM. McKINLEY.

It were something more than a twice-told tale to say that the man whom the Republican party put in nomination at St. Louis for the highest honor in a people's gift stands for the triumph, the vindication, the incarnation of a principle. And so much more may be said than that concerning the nomination of William McKinley that one may pass almost without reference the truth that was crushed to earth in 1890 to rise again in 1896. Not only Protection does this candidature represent, but two things that are nobler than Protection. One is stainless honor, knightly faith. The other is that unshakable adherence to a principle that works it out to the end, be it what may.

This is the man who put twice away from him the crown. This is the man who never in his public life but once betrayed emotion. That was when, in the convention of 1888, his soul revivified at the proffer of a Presidency coupled with a breach of a pledge from which the march of events had absolved him. This is the man who, first among the Protectionist American statesmen of one hundred years, dared to accept as his guide the exact logic of the Protectionist principle and let it lead him where it would, to victory or defeat. This is not only the man whose policy on this account was exalted, traduced, reviled and misrepresented by his foes to a pitch which had before seemed unattainable. This is the man who on this account was feared by his friends as an irreconcilable, an unmanageable extremist and doctrinaire. This is the man who placed his craft upon the highest shelves of the beach to wait for the rising tide. It came at St. Louis.

The Vice Presidency.
That the nomination for the Vice Presidency should go where it would do most good has been the hope of every Republican who had the success of the party rather than that of any candidacy at heart. The only place where it could do any good was in one of the States which had been recently wrested from normal Democratic control and whose probationary status might be confirmed into a regular footing by a slight additional increment to effort.

For this reason it was peculiarly gratifying that the contest at the last narrowed to New Jersey and Tennessee, their respective candidates being the only ones seriously before the convention. Between these two a tradition of sectional balance in the making of a Presidential ticket gave the victory to the Eastern competitor. These are the influences which have led to Mr. Hobart's selection, and he can congratulate himself, as few men who have attained this distinction have been able to do, that the selection was hard won and worthily deserved.

What Protection Will Prevent.
The total American consumption of our own manufactured goods, of our farm products and the foreign goods which we imported in 1890 reached nearly twelve billions of dollars. The total foreign imports of all other countries in the world, representing those foreign markets, aggregated a little more than seven and a half billions of dollars. Our own home market is worth to us nearly four and a half billion of dollars a year more than the foreign trade of all other markets of the world, even if we could hope to secure the whole of it. The policy of free trade is to throw our greater and better markets open to cheap labor competition and to pauperize our wage earners.

The policy of protection is to prevent this.—C. R. Buckland, editor American Economist.

Results of "Cheapness."
The falling off in our imports of foreign merchandise, during March and April, must be very unsatisfactory to European manufacturers. They will begin to realize that, while they are making goods for our market, American wage earners cannot be kept busily employed, and must, consequently, have less money to spend for the "cheap" foreign goods. This is "a condition that confronts" the treasury department also, by reducing the receipts from the customs revenue.

Freedom from England.
We are a continent, not an island, our resources are plural, not singular. In a speech, made in 1844, Webster said that he defied any conversant with our early history from 1787 to 1789 to deny that protection was not the lead-

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE PREACHER USES GOSPEL ARCHERY AS HIS THEME.

He Tells About the Mighty Hunters of Scripture and Shows How to Use the Gospel Arrow—The Kind of Game to Seek.

A Search for Game.
All people who are trying to do good will find this discourse of Dr. Talmage inspiring as well as unique. His text was Genesis x, v, "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."
In our day hunting is a sport, but in the lands and the times infested with wild beasts it was a matter of life or death with the people. It was very different from going out on a sunshiny afternoon with a patent breech-loader to shoot reed-birds on the flats when Polixus and Achilles and Diomedes went out to clear the land of lions and tigers and bears. My text sets forth Nimrod as a hero when it presents him with broad shoulders and shaggy apparel and sun-browned face and arm bunched with muscle—"a mighty hunter before the Lord." I think he used the bow and the arrows with great success practicing archery.

Gospel Archery.
I have thought, if it is such a grand thing and such a brave thing to clear wild beasts out of a country, if it is not a better and braver thing to hunt down and destroy those great evils of society that are stalking the land with fierce eye and bloody paw and sharp tusk and quick spring. I have wondered if there is not such a thing as gospel archery, by which those who have been flying from the truth may be captured for God and heaven. The Lord Jesus in his sermon used the art of angling for an illustration when he said, "I will make you fishers of men." And so I think I have authority for using hunting as an illustration of gospel truth, and I pray God that there may be many a man to-day who will begin to study gospel archery of whom it may after awhile be said, "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

How much awkward Christian work there is done in the world! How many good people there are who drive nails away from Christ instead of bringing them to him! All their fingers are thumbs—religious blunderers who upset more than they right. Their gun has a crooked barrel and kicks as it goes off. They are like a clumsy comrade who goes along with skillful hunters. At the very moment when he ought to be most quiet he is cracking an alder or falling over a log and frightening away the game. How few Christian people have ever learned the lesson of which I read at the beginning of this service; how that the Lord Jesus Christ at the well went from talking about a cup of water to the most practical religious truths, which won the world's soul for God! Jesus in the wilderness was breaking bread to the people. I think it was good bread. It was very light bread, and the yeast had done its work thoroughly. Christ, after he had broken the bread, said to the people, "Beware of the yeast of the leaven of the Pharisees." So natural a transition it was, and how easily they all understood him! But how few Christian people there are who understand how to fasten the truths of God and religion to the souls of men. Truman Osborne, one of the evangelists who went through this country years ago, had a wonderful art in the right direction. He came to my father's house one day, and while we were all seated in the room he said, "Mr. Talmage, are all your children Christians?" Father said, "Yes, all but De Witt." Then Truman Osborne looked down into the fireplace and began to tell a story of a storm that came on the mountains, and all the sheep were in the fold, but there was one lamb outside that perished in the storm. Had he looked me in the eye I should have been angered when he told that story, but he looked into the fireplace, and it was so pathetically and beautifully done that I never found any peace until I was sure I was inside the fold where the other sheep were.

The archers of olden times studied their art. They were very precise in the matter. The old books gave special directions as to how an archer should go and as to what an archer should do. He must stand erect and firm, his left foot a little in advance of the right foot. With his left hand he must take hold of the bow in the middle, and then with the three fingers and the thumb of his right hand he should lay hold of the arrow and affix it to the string—so precise was the direction given. But how clumsy we are about religious work! How little skill and care we exercise! How often our arrows miss the mark! Oh, that there were more institutions established in all the towns and cities of our land, where men might learn the art of doing good—studying spiritual archery, and known as "mighty hunters before the Lord."

Look to Your Weapon.

In the first place, if you want to be effective in doing good, you must be very sure of your weapon. There was something very fascinating about the archery of olden times. Perhaps you do not know what they could do with the bow and arrow. Why? Chief battles fought by the English Plantagenets were with the long bow. They would take the arrow of polished wood and feather it with the plume of a bird, and then it would fly from the bowstring of plaited silk. The broad fields of Agincourt, and Solway Moss, and Neville's cross heard the loud thrum of the archer's bowstring. Now, my Christian friends, we have a mightier weapon than that. It is the arrow of the gospel; it is a sharp arrow; it is a straight arrow; it is feathered from the wing of the dove of God's spirit; it flies from a bow made out of the wood of the cross.

As I can estimate or calculate it has brought down 400,000,000 souls. Paul knew how to bring the notch of that arrow on to that bowstring, and its whir was heard through the Corinthian theaters, and through the court room, until the knees of Paul knocked together. It was that arrow that stuck in Luther's heart when he cried out: "Oh, my sins! Oh, my sins!" If it strike a man in the head, it kills his skepticism; if it strike a man in the heel, it will turn his step; if it strike him in the heart, he throws up his hands, as did the Emperor Julian of old when wounded in the battle, crying, "O Gallienus, thou hast conquered!"

In the army of the Earl of Pembroke there are old corsairs which show that the arrow of the English used to go through the breastplate through the armor of the warrior and out through the backplate. What a symbol of that gospel which is sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of body and soul and of the joints and marrow! Would to God we had more faith in that gospel! The humblest man, if he had enough faith in it, could bring 100 souls to Jesus—perhaps 500. Just in proportion as this age seems to believe less and less in it I believe more and more in it. What are men about that they will not accept their own deliverance? There is nothing proposed by men that can do anything like this gospel. The religion of Ralph Waldo Emerson was the philosophy of circles. The religion of Theodore Parker was a snout of the desert covering up the soul with dry sand. The religion of Renan was the romance of believing nothing, the religion of the Huxleys and the Spencers merely a preface on which human philosophy sits shivering in the night of the soul, looking up to the stars, offering no help to the nations that crouch and groan at the base. Tell me where there is one man who has rejected that gospel for another, who is thoroughly satisfied and helped and contented in his skepticism, and I will take the car to-morrow and ride 600 miles to see him. The full power of the gospel has not yet been touched. As a sportsman throws up his head and catches the ball flying through the air, just so easily will this gospel after awhile catch this round world flying from its orbit and bring it back to the heart of Christ. Give it full swing, and it will pardon every sin, heal every wound, cure every trouble, emancipate every slave and ransom every nation. Ye Christian men and women who go out this afternoon to do Christian work, as you go into the Sunday schools, the lay preaching stations and the penitentiaries and the asylums I want you to feel that you bear in your hand a weapon, compared with which the lightning has no speed, and avalanches have no heat, and the thunderbolts of heaven have no power. It is the arrow of the omnipotent gospel. Take careful aim. Pull the arrow clear back until the head strikes the bow. Then let it fly. And may the slain of the Lord be many.

Searching for Game.

Again, if you want to be skillful in spiritual archery, you must hunt in unfrequented and secluded places. Why does the hunter go there on four days in the Pennsylvania forests or over Baquette lake into the wilds of the Adirondacks? It is the only way to do. The deer are shy, and one "bang" of the gun clears the forest. From the California stage you see as you go over the plains here and there a coyote trotting along, almost within range of the gun—sometimes quite within range of it. No one cares for that; it is worthless. The good game is hidden and secluded. Every hunter knows that. So many of the souls that will be of most worth for Christ and of most value to the church are secluded. They do not come in your way. You will have to go where they are. Yonder they are down in that cellar; yonder they are up in that garret. Far away from the door of any church, the gospel arrow has not been pointed at them. The tract distributor and city missionary sometimes catch a glimpse of them, as a hunter through the trees gets a momentary sight of a partridge or a roebuck. The trouble is we are waiting for the game to come to us. We are not good hunters. We are standing in some street or highway expecting that the timid antelope will come up and eat out of our hands. We are expecting that the prairie fowl will light on our church steeple. It is not their habit. If the church should wait 10,000,000 of years for the world to come in and be saved, it will wait in vain. The world will not come. What the church wants now is to lift its feet from damask ottomans and put them on the stumps. We want to get out on wheels. The church wants not so much cushions as it wants saddles and arrows. We have got to put aside the gown and kid gloves and put on the hunting shirt. We have been fishing so long in the brooks that run under the shadow of the church that the fish know us, that they avoid the hook and escape as soon as we come to the bank, while yonder is Upper Saranac and Big Tupper's lake, where the first swing of the gospel net would break it for the multitude of the fishes. There is outside work to be done. What is that I see in the backwoods? It is a tent. The hunters have made a clearing and camped out. What do they care if they have wet feet, or if they have nothing but a pine branch for a pillow, or for the northeast storm? If a moose in the darkness steps in the lake to drink, they hear it right away. If a loon cry in the moonlight, they hear it.

So in the service of God we have exposed work. We have got to camp out and rough it. We are putting all our care on the people who come to our churches. What are we doing for the thousands up on thousands that do not come? Have they no souls? Are they sinless that they need no pardon? Are there no dead in their hopes that they need no comfort? Are they cut off from God to go into eternity—no wing to bear them, no light to cheer them, no welcome to greet them? I hear to-day, surging up from the lower depths, a groan that comes through our Christian assemblages and through our beautiful churches, and it blots out all that comes from my eyes to-day, as the mists of a great Niagara, or the dash of the plunge of these great torrents of life dropping down into the fathomless and thundering abyss of suffering and woe. I sometimes think that just as God blotted out the churches of Thyratria and Corinth and Laodicea because of their sloth and stolidity he will blot out American and English Christianity and raise on the ruins a stalwart, wide-awake missionary church that can take the full meaning of that command, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Courage.

I remark, further, if you want to succeed in spiritual archery you must have courage. If the hunter stand with trembling hand or shoulder that flinches with fear, instead of his taking the catamount the catamount takes him. Who would look to the Greenlander if, when out hunting for the bear, he should stand shivering with terror on an iceberg? What would have become of Du Chailu and Livingstone in the African thicket with a faint heart and a weak knee? When a panther comes within twenty paces of you, and it has its eye on you, and it has squatted for the fearful spring, "Steady there!"

Courage, O ye spiritual archers! There are great monsters in iniquity prowling all around about the community. Shall we not of the strength of God go forth and combat them? We not only need more heart, but more backbone. What is the church of God that it should fear to look in the eyes of any transgressor? This is the Bengal tiger of drunkenness that prowls around, and instead of attacking it

how many of us hide under the church pew or the communion table! There is so much invested in it that we would to assault it; millions of dollars in breweries, in vats, in spigots, in corkscrews, in saltpalaces with marble floors and Italian top-tubes, and chandeliers and chandeliers, and in the srychnine, and the logwood, and the tartaric acid, and the wax vomica that go to make up our "pure" American drinks. I looked with wondering eyes on the "Heidelberg" It is the great liquor rat of Germany, which is said to hold 800 hogsheads of wine, and only three times in 100 years has been killed. But as I stood and looked at it I said to myself: "That is nothing, 800 hogsheads! Why, an American vat holds 2,500,000 gallons of strong drinks, and we but see 200,000 men with nothing to do, but to see that it is filled." Oh! to attack this great monster of intemperance, and the kindred monsters of fraud and uncleanness, requires you to rally all your Christian courage. Through the press, through the pulpit, through the platform, you must assault it. Would to God that all our American Christians would band together, not for crack-brained fanaticism, but for holy Christian reform. I think it was in 1793 that there went out from Lucknow, India, under the sovereign, the greatest hunting party that was ever projected. There were 10,000 armed men in that hunting party. There were camels and horses and elephants. On some princes rode and royal ladies under exquisite housings, and 500 coolies waited upon the train, and the desolate places of India were invaded by this excursion, and the rhinoceros, the deer and elephant fell under the stroke of saber and bullet. After awhile the party brought back trophies worth 50,000 rupees, having left the wilderness of India gashed with the slain bodies of wild beasts. Would to God that instead of here and there a straggler going out to fight those great monsters of iniquity in our country the million membership of our churches would band together and hew in twain these great crimes that make the land frightful with their roar and are fattening upon the bodies and souls of immortal men! Who is ready for such a party as that? Who will be a mighty hunter for the Lord?

Bring in the Game.

I remark, again, if you want to be successful in spiritual archery, you need not only to bring down the game, but bring it in. I think one of the most beautiful pictures of Thorwaldsen is his "Autumn." It represents a sportsman coming home and standing under a grapevine. He has a staff over his shoulder and on the other end of that staff are hung a rabbit and a brace of birds. Every hunter brings home the game. No one would think of bringing down a reindeer or whipping up a stream for trout and letting them die in the water. The entrance of the camp is adorned with the trophies of the forest—beak and fin and antler. If you go out to hunt for immortal souls, not only bring them down under the arrow of the gospel, but bring them into the church of God, the encampment we have pitched this side of the skies. Fetch them in. Do not let them lie out in the open field. They need our prayers and sympathies and help. That is the meaning of the church of God—help. O ye hunters for the Lord, not only bring down the game, but bring it in!

If Mithridates liked hunting so well that for seven years he never went inland, who, unless his own ought we to have who are hunting for immortal souls? Dominians practiced archery until he could stand a bow down in the Roman amphitheater, with a hand out, the fingers like that, and then the king could shoot an arrow between the fingers without wounding them, to what drill and what practice ought not we to subject ourselves in order to become spiritual archers and "mighty hunters before the Lord!" But, let me say, you will never walk any better than you pray. The old archers took the bow, put one end of it down beside the foot, elevated the other end, and it was the rule that the bow should be just the size of the archer. If it were just the size, then he would get into the little with confidence. Let me say that your power to protect good in the world will correspond exactly to your own spiritual stature. In other words, the first thing in preparation for Christian work is personal consecration.

Oh, for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb!

A Great Hunter.

I am sure that there are some here who at some time have been hit by the gospel arrow. You felt the wound of that conviction, and you plunged into the world deeper, just as the stag, when the hounds are after it, plunges into Schraon lake, expecting in that way to escape. Jesus Christ is on your track to-day, impatient man—not in wrath, but in mercy. O ye chased and panting souls, here is the stream of God's mercy and salvation, where you may cool your thirst! Stop that chase of sin to-day. By the red fountain that leaped from the heart of my Lord I bid you stop. Is there in all this chase any one who can refuse the offer that comes from the heart of the dying Son of God? Why, do you know that there are in the banished world souls that for that offer you get to-day would fling the crown of the universe at your feet if they possessed it? But they went out on the mountains, the storm took them, and they died.

There is in a forest in Germany a place they call the "deer leap"—two crags about eighteen feet apart, between them a fearful chasm. This is called the "deer leap" because once a hunter was on the track of a deer. It came to one of these crags. There was no escape for it from the pursuit of the hunter, and, in utter despair, it gathered itself up and in the death agony attempted to jump across. Of course it fell and was dashed on the rocks far beneath. Here is a path to heaven. It is plain, it is safe. Jesus marks it out for every man to walk in. But here is a man who says, "I won't walk in that path. I will take my own way." He comes on until he confronts the chasm that divides his soul from heaven. Now his last hour has come, and he resolves that he will leap that chasm, from the heights of earth to the heights of heaven. Stand back and give him full swing, for he will never do that successfully. Let him try! Jump! Jump! He misses the mark, and he goes down, depth below depth, "destroyed without remedy." Men, angels, devils, what shall we call that place of awful catastrophe? Let it be known forever as the sinner's death leap.

Professor Ghooste says that if we reckon the depth of all oceans at an average of 200 fathoms, there would be a layer of salt 200 feet thick by their basins, should the waters of all suddenly evaporate.

Beware Of Mercury!

Mr. Henry Roth, of 1848 South 9th Street, St. Louis, was given the usual mercurial treatment for contagious blood-poison. He was twice pronounced cured, but the disease returned each time, he was seized with rheumatic pains, and red lumps and sores covered his body. "It was a horrible fix," he says, "and the more treatment I received, the worse I seemed to get. A New York specialist said he could cure me, but his treatment did me no good whatever. I was stiff and full of pains, my left arm was useless so that I was unable to do even the lightest work. This was my condition when I began to take S. S. S., and a few bottles convinced me that I was being benefited. I continued the medicine, and one dozen bottles cured me sound and well. My system was under the effects of mercury, and would soon have been a complete wreck but for S. S. S."

S. S. S., (guaranteed purely vegetable) is the only cure for real blood diseases. The mercurial treatment of the doctors always does more harm than good. Beware of mercury! Books on the disease and its treatment mailed free to any address by Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

How To Cure Yourself While Using It.
The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort and happiness. To quit suddenly is to sever a shock for the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable, and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent. interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the rheumatic aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition. Yours respectfully, Respectable minorities should always be accorded fair treatment. It is a surer way of bringing about success to the party.

Governor Holcomb has appointed
 Dr. G. F. Keiper of Pierce, superintendent of the Norfolk Asylum, vice Dr. Mackay resigned.

There are a whole lot of newspaper men who will not feel delighted should Geo. W. Wilbue be defeated for the legislature in the counties of Pierce and Cedar.

A Little Currency Catechism.
 Q. What is the whole body of currency of the United States today?
 A. Paper, $475,000,000; silver, $610,000,000; gold, $612,000,000.

Q. What is the existing money standard of the country?
 A. Gold, by means of which all the silver and all the paper are worth 100 cents to the dollar.

Q. What would be the effect if we should abandon the existing gold standard?
 A. All the gold would leave the country in accordance with the never questioned law that a superior money will not remain in a country where an inferior money is the standard. Silverites admit that gold is 16 times more valuable than silver. That is what the "ratio of 16 to 1" means. It truth, today gold is 32 times more valuable than silver.

Q. What amount of money would be thus withdrawn from the country if the silver standard should be substituted for the gold standard?
 A. Six hundred and twelve million dollars, contracting the currency to that amount and crippling the country accordingly.

Q. If the silver standard were substituted for the existing gold standard, what would be the effect on the $610,000,000 of silver now worth 100 cents to the dollar?
 A. The entire quantity of silver dollars would be worth their weight in silver per ounce, which varies from week to week like the price of wheat, and the immediate effect would be to reduce the $610,000,000 to $305,000,000, the present value of silver per ounce in the coins, thus contracting the currency of the country to this additional amount, making a total contraction of $307,000,000.

Q. What would be the effect on the paper in our currency if we should substitute the silver standard for the existing gold standard?
 A. The $475,000,000 of paper, today worth 100 cents to the dollar on the existing gold standard, would at once decline to 50 cents in the dollar, on the silver standard, based on the price of silver today, the immediate effect being to reduce the value of the paper now in the currency to $237,500,000.

Q. By abandoning the existing gold standard for the silver standard, what then would be the first net result?
 A. The loss to the country of $1,155,000,000, every dollar worth 100 cents by reason of the existing gold standard.

Q. What do you deduce from this?
 A. That we need all the money we have and that we want every dollar to be worth 100 cents.

Q. How can we keep all the money we have and keep every dollar worth 100 cents?
 A. By preserving the existing gold standard.

Put this little currency catechism in your pocket. -Times-Herald.

 Aug. 20, 1894 876 00

After due consideration by the board, the report was accepted and adopted. On motion the following communication was ordered to be presented to the county attorney, A. A. Welch Esq., requesting him to file a written opinion in reference to the questions of law arising from the report filed by T. J. Welty in respect to the fees allowed to the county clerk in excess of $1500.00 for salary and $700.00 per year for payment of deputy and to answer the following questions:

Does the law require the county clerk to report as part of the fees of his office the salary as clerk of county board which has been allowed at $400.00 for each year? Also,
 Making the tax list, making and correcting assessors' books, making road books and for issuing election certificates? All these matters being paid by county board to the clerk by county warrant on the general fund of the county.
 And further is the county clerk required by law to report fees received for making final proof of Homestead entry which are sent to the United States Land office. Also Abstracts of Title made from the records of the county.
 And to inform the Board, after a careful examination of reports filed as aforesaid, what credits shall be given to the county clerk for each year from the year 1886 to the year 1895 inclusive, to enable them to legally make a finding of what is due the county, if any, from the several county clerks for the several years set forth in said report.

On motion Board adjourned until July 6th 1896.
 Attest: S. B. RUSSELL, Clerk.

THE WALENTINE MORE.

CHAPTER II.

A few days after Ida Raughton had been indulging in those summer noontide meditations, Walter Cundall arrived at his house in Grosvenor place.

Things were so well ordered in the establishment of which he was master, that a telegram from Liverpool, dispatched a few hours earlier, had been sufficient to cause everything to be in readiness for him.

He walked into his handsome library, followed by a staid, grave man-servant, and sitting down in one of his favorite chairs, said:

"Well, West, what's the news in London?"

"Not much, sir, at least nothing that would interest you. There are a good many balls and parties going on, of course, sir. Sir Paul Raughton's man and me were talking together, sir, last night at our little place of meeting, and he told me as how Sir Paul was going to have quite a large party down at his place, you know, sir, to celebrate—celebrate—I mean for Ascot, sir."

"Well?"

"Well, of course, sir, you'll be wanted there, too, sir. Indeed, Sir Paul's man said as how his master had been making inquiries about the time you was a-coming back, sir, and said he should like to have you there. And, of course, they want to see—I mean to keep it up, sir. Now, I'll go and fetch you the letters that have come since I sent you the last mail."

While the servant was gone Walter Cundall lay back in his chair and meditated. He was a handsome man, with a dark, shapely head, and fine, well-marked features.

As he sat in his chair he wondered why Providence had been so unfaithfully good to him through his life, why it had showered upon him while he was still young enough to enjoy it—the comforts that other men spent their lives in toiling to obtain, and then often failed at last to get.

"And now," he said to himself, "let Fortune give me but one more gift and I am content. Let me have as partner of all I possess the fairest woman in the world; let my sweet, gentle Ida tell me that she loves me—as I know she does—and what more can I ask? Ah, Ida! she went on appropriating the woman he loved."

"I wonder if you have guessed how, night after night, during these long six months, I have sat on my veranda gazing up at the stars that look like moons there, wondering if your dear eyes were looking at them in their feeble glory here? I wonder if you have ever thought during my long absence that not an hour went by, of night or day, when I was not thinking of you? Yes, you must have done so; you must have done so! There was everything in your look, in your voice to tell me that you loved me, that you were only waiting for me to speak. And now I will speak. I will deprive myself no longer of the love that will sweeten my life."

The man-servant came back with an enormous bundle of letters that made Cundall laugh when he saw them.

"Why, West?" he exclaimed, "you don't imagine that I am going to wade through these now, do you?"

"I think they're mostly invitations, sir," the servant answered, "from people who did not know when you would be back."

"Well, give them to me. I will open a few of those the handwriting of which I recognize, and Mr. Stuart can go through the rest to-morrow."

Mr. Stuart was one of Cundall's secretaries, who, when his employer was in town, had sometimes to work night and day to keep pace with his enormous correspondence, but who was now disporting himself at Brighton.

The valet came down at this moment to take his master's orders, and to say that his bath was ready.

"I shall dine quietly at the club to-night," Mr. Cundall said, "and then, to-morrow I will make a few calls and let my friends know I have returned. Is there anything else, West?"

"No, sir. Oh, I beg pardon, sir! I had almost forgot. Lady Chesterton called the day before yesterday to ask when you would be back. When I told her ladyship you were expected, she left a note for you. It's in that bundle you have selected, I think, sir."

Cundall looked through the letters until he found the one in question, and, on opening it, discovered that it contained an invitation for a ball on that evening.

As Lady Chesterton was a friend whom he liked particularly, he made up his mind that he would look in, if only for an hour. It was as good a way as any of letting people know that he was back in town, and his appearance at her house and at the club would be quite enough to do so.

It was eight o'clock when he entered the latter institution, and his arrival was greeted with a chorus of greetings. Two or three of them made up a table and sat down to dinner, and Cundall told them that he was going to Lady Chesterton's later on.

But neither here, nor over their coffee afterwards, did any of his friends tell him that he would meet there the girl he was thought to admire, attended in all probability by her future husband, Lord Penlyn.

As, at eleven o'clock, he made his way up the staircase to greet his hostess, he again met many people whom he knew, and by the time he at last reached Lady Chesterton's, it was rapidly being told about the ball room that Walter Cundall was back in town again.

"I declare you look better than ever," her ladyship said, as she welcomed him, and he looked at her somewhat pale and unattractively. How you must enjoy roaming about the world as you do!"

He answered with a smile and a remark that, after all, there was no place like London, and that he was getting very tired of rambling, when he turned round and saw Ida Raughton coming towards him on the arm of Lord Penlyn.

"How do you do, Miss Raughton?" he said, taking her hand and giving one swift look into her eyes. How beautiful she was, he thought, and as he looked he wondered how he could have gone away and left her without speaking of his love.

Well, no matter, the parting was over. "How do you do, Penlyn?" he said, shaking him cordially by the hand.

"When did you return?" Ida asked. Until this moment she had no idea that he was back in England.

"I landed at Liverpool late last night," he answered, "and came up to town to-day. Lady Chesterton, hearing of my probable arrival, was kind enough to leave an invitation for me to-night."

Before any more could be said the band began to play, and Lord Penlyn turned round to Cundall and said:

"I am engaged for this dance, though it is only a square one. Will you look after Miss Raughton until I return?"

"With pleasure, of course, I am a favored partner comes to claim her. But," turning to her, "I presume you are also engaged for this dance, though it is only a square one."

"No," she said, "you know I never dance them."

"Shall we go round the rooms, then?" he asked, offering her his arm. "It is infernally hot here! How cool and pleasant the conservatory looks!" he said, as they passed the entrance to it. "Shall we go in and sit down until you are claimed for the next dance?"

She assented, and they went in and took possession of two chairs that were standing beneath some great palms and cacti. "I should think that after the heat you have been accustomed to you would feel nothing in England!" she said.

"In Honduras we are suitably clad," he answered, laughing, "and evening dress suits are not in much request. But I am very glad to be wearing one again, and once more talking to you. I can do as I please now, I could not hitherto. I will tell you what I mean. Until a month ago the property I owned in Honduras required my constant attention and necessitated my visiting the place once at least in every two years. But of late this has become irksome to me—I will explain why in a moment—and my last visit was made with a view to disposing of that property. This I have made arrangements for doing, and I shall go no more to that part of the world. Now," and his voice became very low but clear, as he spoke, "shall I tell you why I have broken forever with Honduras?"

"Yes," she said, "you have told me so often of your affairs that you know I am always interested in them. Tell me."

Then, as the strains of the waltz were heard from the ball room, he said:

"It is because I want to settle down in England and make it my home. Because I want a wife to make that home welcome to me, because I have long loved one woman and have only waited until my return to tell her so. Ida, you are that woman! I love you better than anything in this world! Tell me that you will be my wife!"

For answer she drew herself away from him, pale and trembling visibly, and trying to speak.

"You cannot have heard," she said, "no one can have told you that—"

"That what? What is there to tell?"

"That I am engaged!"

"Engaged!" he said, rising to his feet. "Engaged! while I have been away. Oh! it cannot be, it is impossible! You must have seen, you must have known of my love for you. It cannot be true!"

"It is true, Mr. Cundall."

"True!" Then he paused a moment and endeavored to recover himself. When he had done so he said very quietly, but in a deep, hoarse voice: "I congratulate you, Miss Raughton. May I ask who is the fortunate gentleman?"

"I am engaged to Lord Penlyn."

He took a step backward and ejaculated:

"Lord Penlyn! Lord—"

Then once more he recovered himself, and said: "Shall I take you back to the ball room? Doubtless he is looking for you now."

"I am very sorry for your disappointment," she said, looking up at him with a pale face; his emotion had startled her, "very sorry. I would not wound you for the world. And there are so many other women who will make you happy."

"I wanted no other woman but you," he said.

CHAPTER III.

Lord Penlyn and his friend and companion, Philip Smerdon, had returned from their yachting tour about a fortnight before Walter Cundall arrived in London from Honduras.

The discovery he had made at Le Veoc had had such an effect upon his thoughts and mind that he almost dreaded meeting him again at Brighton.

He was an honorable, straightforward man, and, with the exception of being possessed of a somewhat violent and obstinate temper when thwarted in anything he had set his heart upon, had no perceptible failings.

Lord Penlyn offered his friend the post of his secretary, combined with steward, which at that moment was vacant by the death of the previous holder.

"But companion as well," he said, laughing. "I am not going to have you buried alive at Ocleve Chase when I want your society in London, nor vice versa, so you had better find a subordinate."

Smerdon took the post, and no one could say with any truth that his friendship for Lord Penlyn stood in the way of his doing his duty to him as his secretary.

He made himself thoroughly master of everything concerning his friend's property—of his tenants and his servants; he knew to a head the cattle belonging to him, and what timber might be marketed annually, and regulated not only his country estate but also his town house.

And, that his friend should not lose the companionship which he evidently prized so dearly, he thought nothing of traveling half the night from Ocleve Chase to London and of appearing fresh and bright at the breakfast table.

For, so deeply had Penlyn's goodness to him in all things sunk into his heart, that he never thought he had done enough to show his gratitude.

"They had been busy this morning—the morning after Lady Chesterton's ball—in going over their accounts, and in making arrangements for their visit, in the forthcoming Ascot week, to Sir Paul's villa, near the Royal course."

Then, while they had paused for a few moments to indulge in a cigarette, the conversation had again turned upon that discovery at Le Veoc.

"I tell you what I do mean to do," Penlyn said; "I mean to go and see Bell. Although he could have known nothing of what was going on thirty years ago, he may have heard his father say something on the subject. They have been our solicitors for years."

Mr. Bell listened to his client's story, smiling faintly once or twice, at what seemed to his worldly mind, too much remorse for his father's sin on the part of Lord Penlyn, then he said:

"I never knew your father, but I should think the whole affair a simple one, and an ordinary version of the old story."

"What old story?"

"The story of a person of position—forgive me, Lord Penlyn, we are men of the world," he said "we," though he considered his client as the very reverse of "a man of the world"; and can speak plainly; the story of a person of position growing tired of a responsibility, and then—dropping her."

"To starve with her—with his offspring!"

"I should not imagine it!" Mr. Bell said with airy cynicism. "I never saw the late Lord Penlyn, and scarcely ever heard my father mention him. If you like I will have all the papers relative to him gone through; but it is thirty years ago! If the lady is alive she would surely have turned up by now. And I may say the same of the son."

"He may not even know the claim he has."

"Claim! my lord, what claim? He has no claim on you."

"Has he not? Has he not the claim of brotherhood, the claim that my father deserted his mother? I tell you, Mr. Bell, that if I could find that man I would make him the greatest restitution in my power."

The lawyer looked upon Lord Penlyn, when he heard these words, as a Quixotic young idiot, but of course he did not say so.

But he did promise to go through all the papers in his possession relative to the late lord, and to see about this particular case.

Two nights afterwards Penlyn received a letter from him, saying that there was not the slightest trace in any of the Ocleve papers in his possession of the person about whom they had spoken.

"And," he concluded, "I should advise your lordship to banish the whole affair forever from your mind. It is now too late for you to obtain any information about it."

(To be continued.)

What to Cultivate.

"If a girl is anxious to marry—" began the maid.

"Yes?" said the woman of the world, encouragingly.

"If she is anxious to marry and marry well, from the point of view of society, I suppose she should prepare herself as she would for a profession."

"Certainly."

"There are some things that she should cultivate assiduously, and others to which she need devote little attention."

"There are."

"Well, what would advise her to cultivate particularly?"

"A wealthy relative who is likely to die soon."—Chicago Evening Post.

Dr. Nansen.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen began making his experiments in the far north when he was about 21 years of age. Apart from his reputation as an intrepid explorer he is a recognized authority in many departments of zoology, and his published papers on various anatomical subjects are of considerable interest and importance. Mrs. Nansen, like most Norwegian women, whether they need it for a livelihood or not, works hard. She gives lessons in music and sings in public. Before their marriage Dr. Nansen and his fiancée agreed that their mode of life should not be changed—that he should not abandon his explorations and that she should continue her teaching.

Squirrels Destroying Crops.

A prize of $250 for a method of inoculating squirrels with some contagious fatal disease is offered by the Commercial Association of Pendleton, Ore., and it is believed the county authorities and various farmers' organizations will add to the sum offered. The farmers of that region are at their wits' end as to how to mitigate the plague of squirrels. Tons of strychnine have been used in the effort to exterminate the squirrels by poisoning them, but little relief is had from this or any other method heretofore used.

"Well, if that don't beat anything I ever heard tell of before," he said.

"Oh, Joe, where did you get 'em? Glorious, what a lot! Won't we have a bang-up time? Where'd you get 'em, Joe?"

"Bought 'em," answered Joe. "Never mind how. You'll have your Fourth of July, Sim."

"Well, I should say so," said Harry, looking down at the pile of fireworks on the floor of the harness room. "Crackers, pin-wheels, rockets, serpents—I don't understand it, Joe."

"You needn't care about that just now. There was a tremble in Joe's voice which didn't escape Harry's quick ears. He looked at his little brother keenly. Joe was dusty, looked tired, and his eyes were heavy.

They were all in the kitchen an hour later when Miss Silence came in, her arms full of bundles.

Joe didn't eat any supper. Aunt Silence apparently didn't notice his lack of appetite, though she glanced at him occasionally.

After the table was cleared and the dishes put away, Sim crept close to Joe.

"Shall we tell her now?" he whispered. "Yes."

So Sim slowly crossed the kitchen to where Aunt Silence sat by the broad window seat, on which were still piled the bundles she had brought from town.

"To-morrow is going to be the Fourth of July, Aunt Silence," he announced, pausing beside her, "and I've got some fireworks."

"Oh, you have! Well, so have I. Suppose we set off mine to-night and have yours for to-morrow," cried Sim eagerly, dancing up and down with excitement and delight.

"Well, you open these bundles, Joe, you come and help him."

Joe got up slowly and joined Sim in the window. He was thinking of poor little Sukey, wondering if the butcher had killed her already, and feeling as if he had almost been guilty of murder. And if he had only known that Aunt Silence would buy fireworks he could have kept Sukey!

Sim tucked a pin-wheel upon a tree, but Joe stood silently by one of the pillars, his hands in his pockets.

"I'm going in the house a minute. I'll be right back," said Miss Silence.

Harry and Sim came back to the porch to get a match, and just at that moment Miss Silence put her head out at the door.

"There's some one here who wants to see the fireworks," she said.

The door opened wide, there was a scramble of little hoofs, a loud "Ba-a," and straight upon Joe dashed a little red creature about whose neck he threw his arms with a loud cry of delight and astonishment.

"Sukey!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, Sukey," said Miss Silence, "and the next time you want to sell Sukey you let me know and I'll buy her, young man."

Joe kept his face hidden on Sukey's neck while his aunt told Harry and Sim how she happened to rescue the little calf, and when she had finished Sim pushed Joe away that he might take a turn himself in hugging the pretty creature.

"Why, Sukey's neck is all wet," he said.

"Very likely," rejoined Miss Silence. "But never mind that—let's begin on our Fourth of July."

And the next minute the pin-wheel was whizzing around like mad, and a Roman candle shot up into the air with a rush that made Sim shriek with delight.

He remembered that promise now as he went away from the barn and left Sim sobbing beside the oat bin. Sukey was standing beside the bars looking out for him.

"I suppose I've got to do it," he muttered at last. "It would be mean not to, and I promised Sim. Mother used to tell us never to break a promise no matter what it cost to keep it."

A piece of rope hung on a post close by. Joe took it down, and with gentle hands tied it about the neck of the little red calf.

Meantime, having finished making the pies and set the kitchen in order, Miss Silence ordered Harry to "hitch up" for she had to go into Ridgedale on some errands. She drove into town and stopped at the butcher shop. The first thing she saw was a little red calf with a star in its forehead. It was tied to one of the outside stands, and it pulled at its rope as it saw Miss Silence.

"For the land's sake!" exclaimed Miss Silence, and stood staring a moment, then walked into the shop.

"That calf beats all for favorin' one I've got to home," she said to the butcher. "Where'd you get it?"

"Bought it half an hour ago from a little boy. It was a pet calf I guess. He most broke his heart over partin' with it."

"What did the boy look like?"

"Well, he was about ten years old, 'n' had curly hair, blue eyes, 'n' freckles. He said he needed some money for fireworks."

"H-m-m," said Miss Silence, and stared
