Beet Sugar Factory.

In regard to the above we can state that the different committees are working like beavers for the success of the project, and The HERALD feels safe in saying that if the business men do their duty and wish to see our city advance and the farmers within a radius of four or five miles of the city wish to see their lands increase in value, and they properly subscribe for stock a factory with a 200 ton capacity will be erected this year, although beets enough to run it may not be raised this year.—The factory is to be increased to a 300 ton capacity by the fall of next year. The committee on stock subscriptions is meeting with pretty good success so far, and when it is known that a site and several thousand dollars will be donated from outside parties, it looks pretty favorable for the establishment of the factory. The HERALD prays for the success of the undertaking.

After years of untold suffering from piles, E. W. Pursell of Knitnersville, Pa., was cured by using a single box of De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. Skin diseases such as eczema, rash, pimples and obstinate sores are readily cured by this famous remedy. L. P. Orth.

Zola has taken an appeal from the decision of the court which condemned him to a year in prison and a fine of 3,000 francs, and the French case will again be heard in the French courts.

Henry W. Corbett was on Monday denied admission to the Senate as a Senator.

Henry W. Corbett was on Monday denied admission to the Senate as a Senator from Oregon by a vote of 60 to 19.

The Senate began consideration of the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill, and had not concluded it when it adjourned.

The House passed the sundry civil appropriation bill after four days' debate.

The House entered upon the consideration of the Loud bill relative to second-class mail matter, on Tuesday.

Mr. Moor (Dem., Tenn.) spoke in opposition to the bill, and Mr. Perkins (Rep., Iowa) in favor of it.

Mr. Moor (Dem., Tenn.) spoke in opposition to the bill, and Mr. Perkins (Rep., Iowa) in favor of it.

Wednesday's debate in the Senate on the Alaska homestead and railway right-of-way bill was spirited.

Mr. Carter (Mon.) delivered a vigorous speech in reply to that made by Mr. Rawlins (Utah), in the course of which he made a strong defense of the honor of Congressional committees and of officials in the several government departments.

The speech drew replies from Mr. Hoar (Mass.), Mr. Chilton (Texas), and Mr. Nelson (Minn.).

The House spent another day in debating the bill relative to second-class mail matter.

The speakers were Messrs. Brownell (Rep., Ohio), and Orden (Dem., La.) in favor of the measure, and Messrs. Ball (Pop., Colo.), Simpson (Pop., Kan.), Clark (Dem., Mo.), Brown (Rep., Ohio), and Lentz (Dem., Ohio), in opposition to it.

In the Senate on Thursday the House amendments to the bankruptcy bill were non-concurred in, and Messrs. Hoar, Nelson and Lindsay were appointed as Senate conferees.

During almost the entire session the Senate had under consideration the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill.

One of the features of the discussion was a speech delivered by Mr. Vest, in which he ridiculed the idea of homesteading any part of Alaska or constructing railroads in that district.

His motion to eliminate the homestead feature of the bill by striking out the first section was defeated.

The resolution for a congressional investigation of the murder of the postmaster at Lake City, S. C., was referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

A bill was passed to establish an assay office in Seattle, Wash.

In the House the Loud bill, to correct alleged abuses of the second-class-mail matter privilege, was laid on the table by a vote of 102 to 110.

After a debate lasting several days the Senate on Friday passed the bill extending the homestead laws and providing for right of way for railroads in the district of Alaska.

Comparatively little discussion of general interest was created by the bill. Section 13, providing for certain bonding concessions to Canada in lieu of privileges to be extended by the Dominion Government to this country, however, induced a pretty lively debate.

Two more appropriations were sent to the President Friday, the pension bill and the consular and diplomatic, both of which went through their final stages in the House.

The most important action taken was the passage in an agreement to make the bill, which had been pending between the United States and Great Britain for 100 years.

Cochran went over to Wayne last Saturday night to attend a citizens meeting for the erection of best sugar factory. He reports a warm meeting and things are looking promising.

Stanton Picket: Mrs. A. Lobe came over from Wayne Monday to look after her property interests here. Her farm north of town she has rented to R. C. Patrick. Mrs. Lobe says she is pleased with Wayne and its school facilities but feels that Stanton is her home, and cannot get along without the Picket. To furnish the news from here for herself and family.

Winer Chronicle: While Henry Albers living north of town in Wayne county, was dehorning cattle one day this week he made a mistake that was very painful for his hired man, John Naber, who was assisting him at the work. In some way Albers caught Naber's thumb instead of the horn which they intended to amputate and the dehorning shears pruned off the latter's thumb as smoothly as a skillful surgeon could have done the job.

Pender Republic: The enterprising city of Wayne is going after public improvements with such an energy that it is sure to bring success. A proposition to bond the city for $4500, for an electric light plant will be voted on at the approaching election. While a court house is almost an assured fact, and to cap the climax to the whole shock of enterprises is a 200 ton daily capacity beet sugar factory, which is in fair way of being secured. May she secure them all.

The South Omaha Drover's Journal of Saturday says: "A load of 1482 lb. western branded steers was marketed from Winside today at $5.65 by W. H. Piekard, a prominent Wayne county farmer and stock raiser. These cattle had been fed five months. Mr. P. reports a good gain, what was of more importance to him, a good profit and a satisfactory price."

It does not necessarily follow that because you may refuse to advertise with a home paper that the paper will be disfigured; in other words, become ruined. Oh no! A first-class newspaper man does not depend altogether on his newspaper for success. He generally has bustling qualities in other lines that bring about the required result.

"I can say one thing for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, and that is that it excels any proprietary medicine I have ever seen on the market, and I have been in the practice of medicine and the drug business for the past 40 years," writes J. M. Jackson, M. D., Bronson, Pa. Physicians like Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy because it is a scientific preparation, and always gives quick relief. Get a bottle at Orth's drug store.

Laurel Advocate: The Wayne papers are still punching their readers up on the matter of a new court house: Why don't a rich county like Wayne go at it and build a decent capitol building, like Cedar did and stop talking about it. . . . A trio of good counties. Wayne, Madison and Stanton, are discussing the advisability of going "cahooots" and making a grand display of their products, at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition and putting a man in charge of it. Now what is the matter of Cedar joining this trio and making it a quartet? We can show up just as good products as any of the three counties named. The exhibit that the four could make would out-shadow anything in the agricultural building and cause the fat eastern man to want to see and invest in some of the soil which grew that big corn and wheat and those sugar beets. By going in together, the expense would be very light in each county. If Cedar has any enterprise, now let her show it. The time and money expended will return with big interest.

Tim Sedgwick assumed a serious attitude recently, and while in this condition avowed that "it seems strange that so many people look upon as a terrible calamity and spend all their lives in mortal terror of the great destroyer. To one whose opportunities have been improved and whose characters have been strengthened and developed on the better side there is nothing terrible in laying down the everlasting cares, labor and annoyances of life. To rest is sweet. To die is to go to eternal rest. No pain, no sorrow, no anxious care invades the tomb. Were it not for the ray of hope that shines always through the present clouds we would all prefer death to life and yet by sad experience we know too that hope is delusive. If we have troubles this year they may be gone next year but others probably as bad, perhaps worse, will take their place. When a good and holy person passes over the river, in mature years, after many burdens and much tribulation, it is much more sensible to rejoice that the weary one has found rest, that the pain and woes of life are ended and that sweet and lasting peace has come at last. Then to the christian, whose faith reaches beyond the veil, there is the assurance of an awakening to immortal joys and high rewards. A few years more or less of life does not matter so much as how we spend it and how we are prepared to quit it."

The Artillery bill, appropriating $50,000,000 for national defense, passed the House by almost a unanimous vote on Monday, and will meet with little opposition in the Senate.

The ground hog may be all right back east, but he is not onto his job in Nebraska. After this his hog-skip will be satisfied that we are from Nebraska therefore, he has got to "show us."

Billy Bryan's large, round voice is not heard these days on the tariff question. His silence in regard to that terrible Dingley tariff bill, is painful. He is now in search of the lost issue.

The fact that the government Treasury is overflowing with gold must be the result of another conspiracy on the part of the "plutocrats." At least they were charged with conspiracy when the treasury was being steadily drained of its gold.

Spain's request that the United States recall Gen. Fitzhugh Lee from his post as Consul-General of the United States at Havana, was beautifully nipped in the bud by President McKinley, and the request was withdrawn quicker than it was made.

President McKinley is beginning to be admired by the whole American people, regardless of politics. They begin to recognize his sterling integrity, his love for America, and his great statesmanship; and that he is the coolest man of the nation in this impending crisis.

Bryan is down south "letting the mills of the gods grind slowly," but they are grinding exceedingly coarse. When the time arrives William Jennings will be placed under the stamp act—the New York democracy will stamp upon his presidential aspiration.

There are those individuals who claim special privileges for themselves that they very quickly and unjustly deny to others. Such as they can see nothing discreditable in some small piece of trickery and deceit if it originates with themselves, and yet if emanating from other sources they rush into print and bitterly denounce it and often turn a mole hill into a mountain. Wayne is afflicted in this respect and undoubtedly most every community is, more or less. Certainly the time will come when such childish notions will have had their run, and a more charitable feeling will spring forth to ally the miserable selfishness that abounds within them and do away with a vast amount of unjust criticism, back biting, etc.

Colorado has just decided to make a state exhibit at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition on a far more magnificent scale than was first contemplated. This determination was expressed after a visit of Colorado's representatives to arrange for space for a building and display. Lieut. Gov. Brush of the party, after visiting the Exposition grounds said: "The half has not been told," in referring to the splendid preparations and progress which have been made for the opening of an exposition that will be second only to the World's Fair. In minerals, fine arts, manufactures, food products, agriculture, fruits, educational features and diversified industries Colorado proposes to make a showing that will be a credit to the Centennial state, and assist in a general way in denoting the wondrous development accomplished in that rich section of the west. A special day, to be known as "Colorado Day," will be fittingly observed during the Exposition season, on which occasion the people of the state will visit the Trans-Mississippi Exposition in large numbers. Denver, styled "The Paris of the West," will erect a building of its own for the entertainment of visitors and distinguished guests.

A WISE MEASURE.

The republican tariff is justifying the faith of its friends and vindicating the predictions of its farmers. The Wilson bill was intended to be "tariff for revenue" measure. Instead it proved a tariff of deficit. The new law is both an aid to American industry and a revenue raiser. According to official report the Dingley law produced over a million a day of revenue last month. It presented the treasury with a surplus, the first surplus the shortest month of the year has exhibited since Mr. Cleveland was elected in 1892. This result is exclusive of the receipts from the sale of the Pacific railroads, and comes entirely from the operation of the Dingley law. While the Dingley law was on its passage through congress there was great activity among the importers. The effect of this was of course to keep the revenue from imports small in the first months of the law's operation. Its farmers however were undaunted by the prospect. They had faith in the principle of protection upon which the law was founded, and foresaw that the prosperity the measure would insure would swell the revenue to the point of the government's needs when the temporary effect of these excessive importations had passed. Developments have proved the absolute correctness of this view. The revenues have been gradually creeping higher and higher until in the seventh month of the tariff's operation they overtopped the expenditures of the treasury.

The enemies of the Dingley law had at first a good deal of satisfaction in comparing its working with the operation of the law and its friends can now enjoy some of the same sort of satisfaction with the added pleasure that comes from the knowledge that he laughs best who laughs last. The Wilson bill, like a grub worm, with biggest when born, or nearly so, with respect to its revenue producing capacity. It brought in the first month over $3,000,000 more than the first month's income from Dingley law. But it didn't grow. The next three months it shrank. The effect is well remembered. It aggravated the hard times that came with it, supplied motive power for the "endless chain" that impoverished the treasury and helped to create the necessity for the sale of bonds to provide for the expenses of the government and protection of the national credit. On the other hand, the Dingley law has provided a uniformly increasing income. The increase is practically all from customs duties. The friends of the law have good ground for felicitation on its success as a revenue as well as industrial measure. It is an American law. It caused no rejoicing in Bradford, Eng. or other foreign manufacturing centers, but it brought comfort to American households and employment to American hands, and will continue to do so, for it discriminates in favor of American labor and fosters American enterprise. It does, in short, just what its advocates claimed it would do.—Sioux City Journal.

WAR AND TRADE.

What effect would war with Spain have upon the trade and commerce of the United States? In the first place, it would fill every shipyard, every gun factory, every woolen mill, every cotton factory with orders for the supply of material required by the army and navy. The mines, the flocks and the cotton fields would be taxed to the utmost of their productive capacity for raw material. With increased activity in manufactures would come increased wages, which means increased expenditure in the stores, increased demand for houses, increased demand for all necessities and comforts of life.

But, say the timorous or the unpatriotic, all these things would have to be paid for some day, money would have to be raised by loans, and interest and principal would have to be repaid when the war was over. Very true. But Germany made France pay the cost of war; Japan made China pay. The modern rule is that the loser in the court of war pays the cost, as the loser pays in courts of law. So that in the event of a war in which the armies and navies of the United States shall triumph, and no other event is to be contemplated, Spain would pay the debt. And it would be a debt paid to American lenders, for it would be an unnecessary scandal were our bonds to be hawked in foreign markets. Any conceivable demand for money at low interest would be met by the people of the United States. Even during Cleveland's administration, when revenues were shrinking and trade decaying, there was no difficulty in raising a loan, and that without intervention of brokers. Both in the civil war and in the Cleveland panic the administration was able to do a profitable business directly with the people.

The most timid need not fear the financial result of war. If war should be necessary for the maintenance of national honor, such prosperity would be attendant in its train as was noticeable in the Northern states during the great rebellion. Our imports would be decreased, our home manufactures greatly stimulated, and the country would live more independently, because thrown upon its own resources than in time of peace. We should become more protective and more productive of valetable and mineral wealth, and such loss as we might suffer in our ocean carrying trade would be more than counterbalanced by the increase in our internal traffic. Moreover, it is probable that after the war our maritime trade would increase as a result of the stimulus to the sea-faring impulse that a war upon the ocean always begets. Inter Ocean.

Saying men are dishonest does not make them so. It is very easy to charge an entire community or a whole political party with being dishonest, but that does not prove it. Neither is it an evidence that a community is made up of murderers because a murder has been committed in it. One or two dishonest men in a party do not make the party dishonest.—York Times.

Those 12,195 farm and city real estate mortgages, cancelled in Nebraska during the last six months of 1897 will pay a large-sized room in the Nebraska exhibit at the Omaha exposition for the delectation of the Bryanites. But they probably will not learn anything by it.—Fremont Tribune.

SMUT IN WHEAT AND OATS.

H. J. Bootley of the Agricultural college of Fargo, N. D., has been making some experiments in treating seed wheat and oats for the prevention of smut, and has issued the following circular explaining his method. He says the directions will do the work cheaply and with certainty, increasing the yield of grain from one to twenty bushels per acre, according to the need of treatment. His formula for treating oats is as follows:

For oats make a solution of formalin, using at the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of water. Put the oats in a pile on the barn floor. Sprinkle the pile thoroughly with the solution and shovel over at the same time. Leave the grain piled for two or more hours and then repeat the sprinkling and shoveling process until you are quite sure that all the grains have become wet, when the oats may be sacked or piled in the pile until the next day. It is an advantage for the grain to be kept in the pile over night after treatment, because the chemical has better opportunity to attack the smut spores. If it is your habit to sow two and one-half bushels of oats per acre, the drill should be set to seed three and one-fourth bushels of these swelled oats.

HOW TO TREAT WHEAT.—Bulletin No. 27 of this station gives the complete method of treating wheat with corrosive sublimate, as developed at this station. The method is satisfactory beyond a question. Dissolve one pound of pulverized corrosive sublimate in a few gallons of hot water, add enough water to this solution to make it equal to fifty gallons. Treat the wheat just as if we have explained for the treatment of oats.

Last year's work with the formalin method showed that it will probably be as successful for the treatment of wheat smut as it is for oat smut, but needs to be used in a little stronger solution. For wheat, make the solution at the rate of one pound of formalin to forty gallons of water, and apply as described for oats.

I recommend either one of these treatments for wheat, according as you see fit to undertake them. The cost will be about the same. The cost of the corrosive sublimate should be something less than $1 per pound. It must be remembered that this substance is a strong poison. Formalin is said by chemists to be non-poisonous.

ONE OF TWO WAYS.

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such it is not liable to any form of disease except by one of two ways. The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys; the second is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

CHIEF CAUSE.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief cause of bladder troubles. So the womb, like the bladder was created for one purpose, and if not doctored too much is not liable to weakness or disease except in rare cases. It is situated back of and very close to the bladder, therefore any pain, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or urinary passage is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort. The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided. To find out correctly, set your urine aside for 24 hours; a sediment or settling indicates kidney or bladder trouble. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention THE WAYNE HERALD and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Priceless Pain

"If a price can be placed on pain, 'Mother's Friend' is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did all together with her last, having previously used four bottles of 'Mother's Friend.' It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother," says a customer.

Thus writes Henderson Dale, Druggist, of Carmi, Ill., to the Bradfield Regulator Company, of Atlanta, Ga., the proprietors and manufacturers of "Mother's Friend." This successful remedy is not one of the many internal medicines advertised to do unreasonable things, but a scientifically prepared liniment especially effective in adding strength and elasticity to those parts of woman's organism which bear the severest strains of childbirth.

The liniment may be used at any and all times during pregnancy up to the very hour of confinement. The earlier it is begun, and the longer used, the more perfect will be the result, but it has been used during the last month only with great benefit and success.

It not only shortens labor and lessens the pain attending it, but greatly diminishes the danger to life of both mother and child, and leaves the mother in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery.

"Mother's Friend" is sold by druggists at $1.00, or sent by express on receipt of price.

WOODRUFF AND MARRIED

BY CHARLOTTE M. BRAEME

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

"The woman was waiting to see her in one of the ante-rooms. Lady Caraven's generous heart was touched as she looked at her, she was so thin, so worn, with a face so white and so sad, and great deepening eyes; her clothes were a thin, shabby dress and a still thinner and shabbier shawl. As the young countess stood before her in all the pride of her youth and beauty, amid all the luxury of her surroundings, she felt, in some vague way, ashamed of the contrast.

"Did you want me?" she said, in a low, gentle voice. "I am Lady Caraven. Did you wish to see me?"

"The thin, worn hands were clasped tightly. The woman hardly seemed to have the power of speech.

"Do not be afraid," said the young countess; "tell me what you want."

"Oh, my lady, my lady," was the cry that seemed to come from a breaking heart, "will you take pity on me?"

"I will indeed, if I can. If I can help you, I promise that I will. What is the matter? You must not fear to tell me. I can understand the sorrows of others, and feel for them."

The woman looked up into the kindly, beautiful face.

"I hardly know how to tell you, my lady. It is not the earl's fault. None of us blame him; he does not know it. It is all Mr. Blantyre's doing."

"But what is it?" she asked, gently.

"You forget that I do not know."

"My lady, it is this: My husband—a fine, strong, handsome young man—was killed here in the woods two years ago; he was a keeper, and there was a fight with the poachers—my husband, John Woodruff, was killed. He was a fine, handsome young man, my lady, and we had three little children. I was fetched to him after he was hurt. He had been struck with the butt-end of a gun, and the doctor said that the moment he was moved he would die. So his companions fetched me to him, in a little cottage. We had three little children, and we saw him in the early dawn of the morning, lying in the clover, dying—dying, my lady—the dear man who had never given me an angry word. We knelt down beside him and he tried to raise his head to look at the children for the last time; but he could not see them—his eyes were dim, he groped with his hands, as though he was in darkness. He neither saw them nor me, but he knew that I was there."

"Ellen," he said, and even in dying the words sounded quite clear—"Ellen, you have been a good wife to me. I am losing my life for a few birds of my lord's; but he will see to you. The earl will see to you—he will never let you want."

"That is right enough; the earl will never let you want."

"But, my lady, it was the keepers who buried my husband; I think the earl forgot him. We lived then in a little cottage belonging to the earl; and my lady, since my husband's death I have lived there. I do not know why—rent free. Living there has been my livelihood. I have had no rent to pay, and every week I have earned a few shillings by taking in washing for the people at Court-Raven. So, my lady, the little cottage has, after a fashion, kept me and my children. But now a paper has come, to say that henceforth we must pay rent—four-and-sixpence each week—for the place; and, my lady, if I pay it, I shall not be able to buy bread for my children to eat."

"But you shall not pay it," said the young countess.

"Oh, my lady, bless you! If you would but speak to the earl for me! He is young, and he does not think—he does not know. If you would but speak to him for me."

"I will do all I can," said the countess; "come and see me again in three days from now."

And Lady Caraven placed in the thin hand that which made the widow's heart beat fast for joy.

"Lord Caraven," she said that evening, "I have a favor to ask from you—a great favor. Will you grant it?"

Then she told him. Her heart sank as she saw his face grow dark and angry.

"Which of the servants told you that woman was here?"

"Will you tell me why you wish to know, Lord Caraven?"

"Yes; the moment I know I shall dismiss him without a character, for disobedience."

"If he disobeyed you," she said, "I am sorry for it. But pray do not allow that to influence you against my petition."

He turned round angrily.

"I really speak," Hildred said, "I have quite enough annoyance with my tenants without interference from you, and I cannot allow—"

"Lord Caraven," she interrupted, eagerly, "do believe me—I have not the least wish to interfere, but this poor woman—she has seen her pale, hungry face and sad eyes."

"It is easy enough to look hungry," he said, impatiently.

Her face flushed, her eyes shone brightly.

"Let me ask you, my lord," she said, "have you ever remembered that all this wealth was given to you, not for your own special self-indulgence, but in trust for the poor and the needy?"

"It struck like a bolt," said Blantyre that night, and the earl, "I have never remembered anything of the kind."

"Then let me tell you it is true. I would sooner be the poorest beggar turned from your door than I would be you, with your own title, your estates, your wealth, your dead conscience, and your dead heart."

And with an air of dignity, the young countess swept from the room, leaving her door ajar.

CHAPTER XIII.

It was a humiliation for Lady Caraven for once to give herself up to a full sense of her misery, of her disappointment, of her blighted life—for once to dare to look the truth full in the face, and own to herself that she was one of the most miserable, most wretched girls in the whole wide world.

She sobbed out the words. It was a relief to say them, a relief to say even to herself that she was miserable; she had been so proudly reticent, so self-restrained.

Suddenly a hand was laid upon her shoulder, and looking up, she saw Sir Raoul standing by her side. In his pale face, worn with pain and suffering, she saw infinite pity, infinite love; compassion and tenderness shone in his eyes. He had never looked so true and so noble as he did just then. He bent over her.

"Hildred, poor child, is it so bad as this?"

"It is so bad," she said, "that it could not be worse, Raoul—nothing could be worse. I am tired of it. I am going away."

"Going away?" he repeated, slowly.

"That is what I feared. Have your patience, your forbearance, come to an end at last, Hildred?"

"Yes," she replied, truthfully, "they have, at last."

He was silent for a few minutes, and then, as she looked up at him, a great awe stole over her. His eyes were raised to the clear skies, his lips moved. Surely in a picture she had seen a figure something like this, with a serene light on his brow. Her anger, her impatience, her bitter contempt and dislike seemed to fall away from her, even from that one look at his face. She rose suddenly into something nobler than a weeping, vengeful, unhappy woman.

"You are going away, Hildred—you can bear it no longer? Poor child! You may run away and leave your home, Hildred; but that will be a commonplace ending. Do that which is nobler, higher, better—reign yourself, submit to your fate and make the best of it. As a handsome and noble woman use your influence with your husband to rouse him from his slough of Despond into a higher life."

She was looking at him in sheer wonder.

"How can I influence Lord Caraven?" she asked.

"You can do it by patience and perseverance. Say to yourself that the task you lay before you shall be to make him a good man. Instead of running away from it, devote yourself to it. There is much said of a woman's mission—let that be yours, and surely there can be no higher or holier mission than to rouse an indolent man to a sense of his duty, a selfish man from his self-indulgence."

"But how could I do it, Raoul?" she asked.

"You could do it in some fashion. The well-being—nay, the very souls of men lie in women's hands. Here is a lifelong task for you—a glorious mission, a noble task. Give your life to your husband—to the task of awakening him to a sense of his duties—to the task of making him a good man and a useful member of society, a conscientious steward of great wealth, a just landowner; teach him how to lead a just and merciful, helpful and noble life. Can you not do it?"

Some of the light that shone on his face was reflected on hers.

"It would be a noble task," she said, thoughtfully. "Could I accomplish it, Raoul?"

"With perseverance and self-control that would amount to heroism in my opinion," he replied. "You must be the sculptor who, from a mass of qualities, good and bad intermixed, must try to produce a perfect character."

"But," she said, doubtfully, "he does not love me."

"That does not matter. I prophesy that he will love you in the end—that when you have roused his soul from its sleep it will turn to you naturally, as the sun here. I shall never see these high-voiced walls or touch a crimson carnation without thinking of you, Raoul, and all that you have said."

Then he watched her as she went from one bed of magnolias to another, looking eagerly for the choicest sprays, holding them up to him with wistful, eager face and sweet, pathetic eyes.

"Will this do, and this?" she asked as simply as a child. "Oh, Raoul, I hope he will not be angry—I hope he will be pleased! I shall tell you how I get on. I am nervous about it."

In another minute the beautiful face had disappeared, and Sir Raoul was left in the pleasure alone.

"A man might lay down his life for such a woman as that," he said, with what was almost a sigh.

Castle Soap.

The plague in India developed some interesting facts about the manufacture of castle soap, which has such a favorable reputation from a hygienic standpoint. The prevailing impression has been that the renowned soap of Marseilles was made from the pure olive oil from the south of France, while the truth is that it is manufactured from common linseed oil imported from India.

The truth came out by peculiar means. When the quarantine was placed against India, it served to cause a stoppage of all commercial relations. Shipping was discontinued, and the soap factories were forced to close. As there is always a constant demand for the soap, people began to wonder why the factories ceased to produce it. An investigation proved that the manufacturers have for twenty years been duping the public.—Diet and Hygiene Gazette.

The French used the bicycle in 1871, during the siege of Belfort, for carrying dispatches. The wheel adopted at that time was, of course, the "ordinary" or high wheel. This was the earliest introduction of the cycle in the

THIS discourse of Dr. Talmage is one of the most powerful and pungent of books. While it has the sweetness of a mother's hush for human trouble, and the crushing power of a lightning bolt, it is one stroke picturing a heavenly power, and a judgment conflagration. The strings of this great harp are fingered by all the splendors of the future, now sounding with the crackle of consuming words, now thrilling with the joy of the everlasting emancipation. It tells how the forbidden tree in the garden blasted the earth with sickness and death, and how another tree, though leafless and bare, yet, planted on Calvary, shall yield a fruit which shall more than antidote the poison of the other. It tells how the red, ripe clusters of God's wrath were brought to the wine press, and Jesus trod them out, and how, at last, all the golden chalices of heaven shall glow with the wine of that awful vintage. It dazzles the eye with an Ezekiel's vision of wheel and wing and fire and whirlwind, and stoops down so low that it can put its lips to the ear of a dying child and say, "Come up higher."

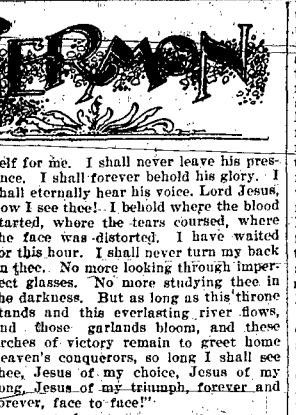

And yet Paul, in my text, takes the responsibility of saying that it is only an inspiring mirror and that its mission shall be suspended. I think there may be one Bible in heaven, fastened to the throne. Just as now, in a museum, we have a lamp, exhibited from Herculaneum or Nineveh, and we look at it with great interest and say, "How poor a light it must have given compared with our modern lamps!" so I think that this Bible, which was a lamp to our feet in this world, may lie near the throne of God, exciting our interest to all eternity by the contrast between its comparatively feeble light and the illumination of heaven. The Bible, now, is the scaffolding of the rising temple, but when the building is done, there will be no use for the scaffolding.

Finite Vision.

The idea I shall develop to-day is, that in this world our knowledge is comparatively dim and unsatisfactory, but nevertheless, introductory to grander and more complete vision. This is eminently true in regard to our view of God. We hear so much about God that we conclude that we understand him. He represents the firmness of a judge, the majesty of a king and the love of a mother. We hear about him, talk about him, write about him. We list his name in infancy, and it trembles on the tongue of the dying octogenarian. We think that we know very much about him.—Take the attribute of mercy. Do we understand it? The Bible blossoms all over with that word—mercy. It speaks again and again of the tender mercies of God; of the sure mercies; of the great mercies; of the mercy that endureth forever; of the multitude of his mercies. And yet I know that the views we have of this great Being are most indefinite, one-sided and incomplete. When at death, the gates shall fly open and we shall look directly upon him, how new and surprising! We see upon canvas a picture of the morning. We study the cloud in the sky, the dew upon the grass, and the husbandman on the way to the field. Beautiful picture of the morning! But we rise at daybreak and go up on a hill to see for ourselves that which was represented to us. While we look the mountains are transfused. The burnished gates of heaven swing open and shut, to let past a host of fiery splendors. The clouds are all a bloom, and hang pendent from arbors of alabaster and amethyst. The waters make pathway of inland pearl for the light to walk upon, and there is morning on the sea. The crags uncover their scarred visage, and there is morning among the mountains. Now you go home and how tame your picture of the morning seems in contrast! Greater than that shall be the contrast between this Scriptural view of God and that which we shall have when standing face to face. This is a picture of the morning that will be the morning itself.

Christ's Excellence.

Again, my text is true of the Saviour's excellency. By image and sweet rhythm of expression and startling antithesis, Christ is set forth—his love, his compassion, his work, his life, his death, his resurrection. We are challenged to measure it, to compute it, to weigh it. In the hour of our broken enthrallment, we mount up into high experience of his love, and shout until the countenance glows, and the blood bounds, and the whole nature is exhilarated, "I have found him!" And yet it is through a glass, darkly. We see not half of that compassionate face. We feel not half the warmth of that loving heart. We wait for death to let us rush into his outspread arms. Then shall he face to face. Not shadow then, but substance. Not hope then, but the fulfilling of all prefiguration. That will be a magnificent unfolding. The rushing out in view of all hidden excellency, the coming again of a long absent Jesus, to meet us, not in rags and in penury and death, but amidst a light and pomp and outbursting joy such as none but a glorified intelligence could experience. Oh, to gaze full upon the brow that was lacerated, upon the side that was pierced, upon the feet that were nailed; to stand close up in the presence of him who prayed for us on the mountain, and thought of us by the sea, and agonized for us in the garden, and died for us in horrible crucifixion; to feel him, to embrace him, to take his hand, to kiss his feet, to run our fingers along the scars of ancient suffering, to say: "This is my Jesus! He gave himself for me. I shall never leave his presence. I shall forever behold his glory. I shall eternally hear his voice. Lord Jesus, now I see thee! I behold where the blood started, where the tears coursed, where the face was distorted. I have waited for this hour. I shall never turn my back on thee. No more looking through imperfect glasses. No more studying thee in the darkness. But as long as this throne stands and this everlasting river flows, and those garlands bloom, and these arches of victory remain to greet home heaven's conquerors, so long I shall see thee, Jesus of my choice, Jesus of my song, Jesus of my triumph, forever and forever, face to face!"

The Puzzles of Life.

The idea of the text is just as true when applied to God's providence. Who has not come to some pass in life through inexplicable? You say: "What does this mean? What is God going to do with me now? He tells me that all things work together for good. This does not look like it." You continue to study the dispensation and after awhile guess about what God means. "He means to teach me that. I think he means to teach me that. Perhaps it is to humble my pride. Perhaps it is to make me feel more dependent. Perhaps to teach me the uncertainty of life." But after all it is only a guess—a looking through the glass, darkly. The Bible assures us there shall be a satisfactory unfolding. "What I do not knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." You will know why God took himself that only child—Next-door there was a household of seven children. Why not take one from that group instead of your only one? Why single out the dwelling in which there was only one heart beating responsive to yours? Why did God give you a child at all if he meant to take it away? Why fill the cup of your gladness brimming if he meant to dash it down? Why allow all the tendril of your heart to wind around that object and then, when every fiber of your own life seemed to be interlocked with the child's life, with strong hand to tear you apart, until you fall, bleeding and crushed, your dwelling desolate, your hopes blasted, your heart broken? Do you suppose that God will explain that? Yes. He will make it plainer than any mathematical problem—as plain as that two and two make four. In the light of the throne you will see that it was right—all right. "Just and true are all thy ways, thou King of saints!"

Here is a man who cannot get on in the world. He always seems to buy at the wrong time and to sell at the worst disadvantage. He tries this enterprise and fails; that business and is disappointed; that man next door to him has a lucrative trade but he loses his customers. A new prospect opens, his income is increased. But that year his family are sick, and the profits are expended in trying to cure the ailments. He gets a discouraged look. Becomes faithless as to success. Begins to expect disasters. Others wait for something to turn up; he waits for it to turn down. Others with only half as much education and character get on twice as well. He sometimes guesses as to what it all means. He says: "Perhaps riches would spoil me. Perhaps poverty is necessary to keep me humble. Perhaps I might, if things were otherwise, be tempted into dissensions." But there is no complete solution of the mystery. He sees through a glass darkly and must wait for a higher unfolding. Will there be an explanation? Yes; God will take that man in the light of the throne and say: "Child immortal, hear the explanation! You remember the hour of that great enterprise—your misfortune in 1857, your disaster in 1867. This is the explanation." And you will answer, "It is all right."

Mysteries of Providence.

I see, every day, profound mysteries of Providence. There is no question we ask of Providence Why? There are hundreds of graves in Oak Hill and Greenwood, and Laurel Hill that need to be explained. Hospitals for the blind and lame, asylums for the idiotic and insane, almshouses for the destitute and a world of pain and misfortune that demand more than human solution. Ah, God will clear it all up. In the light that pours from the throne, no dark mystery can live.—Things now utterly inscrutable will be illumined as plainly as though the answer were written on the Jasper wall or sounded in the temple anthem. Bartimeus will thank God that he was blind, and Lazarus that he was covered with sores, and Joseph that he was cast into the pit, and Daniel that he was hump-backed, and David that he was driven from Jerusalem, and that sewing woman that she could get only a few pennies for making a garment, and that child that for twenty years he could not lift his head from the pillow, and that widow that she had such hard work to earn bread for her children. You know that in a song different voices carry different parts. The sweet and overwhelming part of the halleluiah of heaven will not be carried by those who rode in high places and gave sumptuous entertainments, but pensive children will sing it, beggars will sing it, redeemed bond carriers will sing it, those who were once the offscouring of earth will sing it. The halleluiah will be all the grander for our weeping eyes and aching heads and exhausted hands and scorched backs and martyred agonies.

Again, the thought of the text is just when applied to the enjoyments of the righteous in heaven. I think we have but little idea of the number of the righteous in heaven. Infidels say, "Your heaven will be a very small place compared with the world of the lost; for, according to your teaching, the majority of men will be destroyed." I deny the charge. I suppose that the multitude of the finally lost, as compared with the multitude of the finally saved, will be a handful. I suppose that the few sick people in the hospital to-day, as compared with the hundreds of thousands of well-people in the city, would not be smaller than the number of those who shall be cast out and suffering compared with those who shall have upon them the health of heaven. For we are to remember that we are living in comparatively the beginning of the Christian dispensation and that this world is to be populated and redeemed and that ages of light and love are to flow on. If this be so, the multitudes of the saved will be in vast majority.

A Countless Multitude.

Take all the congregations that have to-day assembled for worship. Put them together and they would make but a small audience compared with the thousands and tens of thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand, and the hundred and forty and four thousand that shall stand around the throne. Those flashed up to heaven in martyr fires, those toiled for many years upon the invalid couch, those fought in the armies of liberty and rose as they fell, those tumbled from high-sea foldings or slipped from the mast or were washed off into the sea. They came up from Corinth, from Laodicea, from the Red sea bank and Genesareth's wave, from Egyptian brickyards and Gideon's thrashing floor. Those thousands of years ago slept the last sleep, and these are this moment having their eyes closed, and their limbs stretched out for the sepulchre.

A general expecting an attack from the enemy stands on a hill and looks through a misty glass and sees in the great distance multitudes approaching, but has no idea of their numbers. He says: "I cannot tell anything about them. I merely know that there are a great number." And so John, without attempting to count, says: "A great multitude that no man can number."

We are told that heaven is a place of happiness, but what do we know about happiness? Happiness in this world is only a half-fledged thing—a flowery path, with a serpent hissing across it; a broken pitcher, from which the water has dropped before we could drink it; a thrill of exhilaration, followed by disastrous reactions. To help us understand the joy of heaven, the Bible takes us a river. We stand on the grassy bank. We see the waters flow on with ceaseless wave. But the filth of the cities are emptied into it, and the banks are torn, and unhealthy exhalations spring up from it, and we fail to get an idea of the river of life in heaven.

The Reunion of Heavens.

We get very imperfect ideas of the reunions of heaven. We think of some restful day on earth, when father and mother were yet living, and the children were all good and happy. But it had this drawback—all were not there. That brother went off to sea and never was heard from. That sister—did we not lay her away in the freshness of her young life, never more in this world to look upon her? Ah, there was a skeleton at the feast, and tears mingled with our laughter on that Christmas day. Not so with heaven's reunions. It will be an uninterrupted gladness. Many a Christian parent will look around and find all his children there. "Ah!" he says, "can it be possible that we are all here—life's perils over? The Jordan passed, and not one wanting? Why, even the prodigal is here. I almost gave him up. How long he disappeared, my counsels, but grace hath triumphed. All here, all here! Tell the mighty joy through the city! Let the bells ring, and the angels mention it in their song. Wave it from the top of the walls. All here!"

No more breaking of heartstrings, but face to face. The orphans that were left poor and in a merciless world, kicked and cursed of many hardy hearts, shall join their parents, and those graves they long wept and gazed into their glorified countenances forever, face to face. We may come up from different parts of the world, one from the land and another from the depths of the sea; from lives affluent and prosperous, or from scenes of ragged distress, but we shall all meet in rapture and jubilee, face to face.

Many of our friends have entered upon that joy. A few days ago they sat with us studying these gospel themes, but they only saw through a glass, darkly—now revelation hath come. Your time will also come. God will not leave you foundering in the darkness. You stand wonder struck and amazed. You feel as if all the loveliness of life were dashed off! You stand gazing into the open chasm of the grave. Wait a little. In the presence of your departed and of him who carries them in his bosom you shall stand face to face, and that our last hour may be able to say, like the Christian poet long ago, departing, "Though a pilgrim walking through the valley, the mountain tops are gleaming from peak to peak!" or, like my dear friend and brother, Alfred Cookman, who took his flight to the throne of God, saying in his last moment that which has already gone into Christian classics, "I am sweeping through the pearly gate, washed in the blood of the Lamb!"

Short Sermons.

Human Ills.—Men often think that if they could change their circumstances even slightly they would escape trouble, but this is an illusion. The sick recover health, the poor become rich, the lowly gain the coveted positions of honor, and their common testimony is that, having gained these advantages, their burdens are no less heavy.—Rev. W. S. Perkins, Universalist, Meriden, Conn.

Goodness.—There is no end to the plans of saving people in other ways than by making them good, but the vital question is whether goodness constitutes salvation. This is the one question in theology. In this, our every-day life on this world, the good man is the saved man. He has the respect of the community and the love of his friends.—Rev. W. S. Crowe, Episcopalian, New York City.

Little Things.—A sudden change and conversion are not likely, perhaps not possible, but a gradual change is. A small advance is possible day by day. Little by little the improvement of the race is writ. We sigh for great results at once. We forget that it is the little things which count. We forget that faithfulness in the little things of life makes the great deeds possible.—Rev. David Phillips, Hebrew, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Woman and the Gospel.—Woman had much to do, perhaps as much as man, in the spreading of the gospel. The story that remains to us of the first two centuries of Christianity is largely a story of noble women. Prudentia, Pionnia Graecina and other noble ladies were great helpers of St. Peter and Paul. Priscilla and other women of the same age are remembered in the inscriptions on their tombs in the catacombs.—Rev. Wm. O'Ryan, Catholic, Denver, Colo.

Goldsmith wrote "The Vicar of Wakefield" in six weeks. It is said to have been a story of his own recollections.

young friends Tuesday eve. Gentlemen were not allowed to attend without their best girl. All report a delightful time.
Many of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lloyd planned a surprise for them last Thursday which was enjoyed by all present.

OBITUARY.
Elvera Hanson, daughter of H. E. and E. M. Hanson, departed this life March 4th, 1898, after an illness of over six months. She was born in Stanton, Montgomery Co., Iowa, May 3, 1880, and was at the time of her death aged 17 years, 10 mo. and 1 day. Eleven years ago she removed with her parents to Fender, Neb., where she lived three years, thence moving to her present home.

It was in March, cold and dreary.
That our friend passed away:
Alas! We cannot count the hours
Since that unhappy day,
We had waited for her coming,
As in happy days gone by:
We had listened for her foot-steps,
For we knew she would die,
But down through the gathering sadness
Did the tones of a seraph come,
Whistling the lights of heaven round
And called her to her home.
Then we heard the mournful message,
That our early friend had passed,
Death's cold portals had entered
Heaven's harbor safe at last.
She was called away from trouble,
And this life so full of care,
To a rest not known to mortals;
For she must be happy there.
Our dear friend was a true one;
And our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God who has bereft us,
And to Him we humbly yield.
Sad and lonely is the home,
Death has made an empty chair;
Hearts now filled with grief unspoken,
Mouths for who is not there,
She was always mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer's breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening
When the fountains of the trees,
She was ever kind and faithful;
Always to her parents true;
Dressing always in her manners,
And whatever she tried to do,
She was an obedient scholar.
Tried to do her very best,
Loved and praised the God of Heaven,
Till he took her to her rest.
She is gone, but will not soon be forgotten
Her name floats among the trees,
Long in memory's chair unbroken,
Gilded with affection pure,
Will each loving word and token
Keep its life to the end,
Angel sister now is sleeping
In her long, last quiet rest,
And no such choir of weeping
E'er will harm her pulseless breast.
She went early to her slumbers:
But we hope that the last
Will be her only cry
When the night of life is past.

Trans-Mississippi Educational Convention
At Omaha, June 28, 29 & 30, 1898.
The Trans-Mississippi Educational Convention has been organized to promote the educational interests of the states participating in the Trans-Mississippi Exposition. It aims to give teachers and schoolmen the benefits accruing from a great gathering of representative educators interchanging ideas and listening to addresses of recognized leaders in the different branches of pedagogic work. While following in general scope the meetings of the National Educational Association, it seeks to supplement its work and extend its influence. The plan and object of the Convention have been endorsed by resolution of the State Teachers' Associations of Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, South Dakota, Montana, Colorado. The date of the Convention has been fixed for the last three days of June. This will give ample time for finishing up the closing work of the schools, for attending the Convention for visiting the Exposition and, if desirable, to go on East for the National Educational Association. The days of the week are Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The time assures fair weather and moderate temperature.

IN MEMORIAM.
(Walnut, Kansas, Eagle, Feb. 26.)
The tolling of the iron tonged bell of the Baptist church on Thursday morning announced that death was abroad in the land, and that the grim messenger had laid his icy hands on Grand-ma Chiochester. It was a clear, bright February morning. The woodland was musical with the songs of birds. The golden rays of the sun glistened over the forests and streamed through the windows. It was at early dawn of nature and in the evening of her life that her sun went down to rise no more forever on the shores of time. She died at the ripe old age of 87 years, 7 months and 14 days. What a stretch of time considered from a human standpoint. Years of toil and of sunshine. To-day on the mountain top basking in bright light and untroubled by the morrow in the valley of despondency. Days of grief and sorrow, hopes and fears, coming and going like the clouds before a strong wind. Mrs. Mary Chiochester was born on Long Island in the state of New York, July 10, 1810, and was married to Elephat Chiochester, Jan. 13, 1836. Four children were born to them; two sons and two daughters, all living. Besides her own children she leaves sixteen grand children; and a large circle of friends to mourn her death. She died Feb. 24, 1898, at the home of E. Chiochester, north of town. At the age of 14 she joined the Christian church, but later united with the Baptist church. She was an earnest and faithful christian, and died with a bright hope of an immortal life beyond the grave. The funeral services were held at the residence of her son on Saturday morning, conducted by Rev. E. A. Miller, and her remains rest in Glenwood cemetery.

The republican central committee of Wyoming has decided to drop the free silver, sixteen to one, nonsense and come out squarely for the St. Louis platform. The sheep and cattle industry of Wyoming is a far more important interest than her silver mines, and the failure of wheat and silver bullion to connect as soon as the burden of democratic economies was taken off trade, has persuaded the republicans of Wyoming that they misused two years ago and they are not too proud to acknowledge their error.—State Journal.

From all over the country come words of praise for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Here is a sample letter by Mrs. C. Shep, of Little Rock, Ark.: "I was suffering from a very severe cold, when I read of the cures that had been effected by Chamberlain's cough remedy. I concluded to give it a fair trial and accordingly procured a bottle. It gave me prompt relief and I have the best reason for recommending it highly, which I do with pleasure." For sale by L. P. Sheriff's Sale.
Mar. 10-5 W.
By virtue of an order of sale to me directed by the clerk of the district court of Wayne county, Nebraska, upon a decree rendered at the April, 1897, term thereof, in a certain pending in said court whereof Charles H. Burr was plaintiff and Frank P. Wilbur, B. Swan, Wayne National Bank, J. S. French, John Lewis, et al. were defendants, I will, on the 10th day of April, 1898, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the door of the office of the clerk of said court, in the court house of said county, sell to the highest bidder for cash, the following described real estate situated in said county, to-wit:
