Dr. O. A. King, baritone, was heard in songs by Schumann and Kreutzer. The Musical Critic, Chicago, of January 21, says: "He is a natural artist with a powerful resonant voice, whether it be in the fiery dramatic, romantic or legato modes of expression he is equally at home. Nature and good training have combined in making him what he is—one of the best baritone voices of Chicago."

J. W. Bartlett received word from Denver last week that his son Fred, who left home a few years ago and had not been heard from since, had been seen in Denver. Mr. Bartlett immediately left for that city, and the first of the week Mrs. Bartlett received the welcome news that Fred was in Denver, but he had enlisted in the army. Mr. Bartlett returned home last evening and says that his son is in the 1st regiment of the United States and left for San Francisco Tuesday evening.

Last Sunday was the ninth anniversary of the organization of the Epworth League and the occasion was appropriately observed by the League in Wayne at the M. E. church. The church was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting, the flag of Cuba occupying a very prominent position. At the exercises in the evening the regular program was carried out as authorized by the board of control. It consisted of responsive readings and singing, a short address by Rev. Bithell on "Look Up," and an address by Miss Susie Frazier on "Lift up." The newly elected officers of the League were installed and after taking their positions on the platform were presented with small flags and bouquets by girls of the Junior League. There was a large crowd present and the exercises were very interesting and impressive.

The citizens of Norfolk became quite indignant last week over the appointment of Senator Allen's son as second lieutenant in Company L, of Norfolk. A mass meeting of the citizens was held Friday evening to consider the matter and file a protest against the appointment. Mrs. Allen sent word to Norfolk that she had telegraphed her son to resign, and a message to the same effect was also sent by Senator Allen.

The 13th regiment of Minnesota volunteers passed through Wayne Tuesday forenoon. There were four train loads of the soldier boys, the first train arriving in Wayne about 6:30 and the last one at 11:00 o'clock. Large crowds of citizens were at the depot to meet each train and cheer the boys on their way. Mrs. Mattie Quinn Carey captured the people of Rocky Ford Friday evening at the opera house. The elocutionary recital which she gave was of a very high order. Her recitations showed versatile ability—the humorous prattle of a mischievous child, and Shakespeare's noblest creations being rendered with equal fidelity.—Rocky Ford Enterprise. At Y. M. C. A. Hall in Wayne, Friday evening, May 27th.

The Wayne fisherman returned Tuesday evening from their six day outing at Lake Quinnebough, having had about the most pleasant trip of their lives. Fishing was fine and the 130 pounds of black bass, perch, sunfish, channel cat fish and pickerel they brought home with them went like hot cakes. The lake is one of the largest and prettiest in the state and the accommodations excellent and the Herald takes pleasure in advising any of Wayne's people who desire a two or three weeks outing with their families to go to Lake Quinnebough, fifteen miles northeast of Tekamah, and be sure and stop at Chris Hansen's fishing and hunting resort. Here you will find the finest ash grove in the state.

Frank Broglin M. D., who claims to be from Omaha, has been in Wayne for some time, and one day last week had a few words with the editor of the Democrat over an item published in that paper concerning the doctor. Broglin threatened to Deweyize the editor of the Democrat, who in turn swore out a warrant for the doctor's arrest. He was gathered in by Sheriff Cherry, taken before Judge Hunter Saturday morning and put under $50 bonds to keep the peace. Before he regained his liberty, the editor of Democrat had him arrested again on the charge of practicing medicine without having filed a certificate with the county clerk. Broglin waived examination and was bound over to the district court in the sum of $100. He was unable to furnish bail and was taken to jail where he remained till Monday afternoon, when he was allowed to sign his own bond and was released with the understanding that he leave town at once. When arrested he was searched by the Sheriff, who found on his person a fine revolver, $4.00 in money, and a pawn ticket calling for a gold filled watch and a solid gold band ring. Broglin has a bad reputation and was run out of Stanton not long ago.

FROM THE SECOND REGIMENT!

CAMP ALVIN SWANDERS, Co. L, 2nd Reg. N. V.

LINCOLN, May 15. Special to the Herald. You might be pleased to hear from a 2nd regiment boy as you already have a correspondent from the 1st, but his regiment has been ordered to the far west and it seems now as if the Nebraska troops would be far apart. Rumor has it that we go to Chickamauga as soon as we are fully equipped, which will be in a few days. It was a sad sight to see as the troops boarded their trains. It was the first time the people seemed to realize that many a face would never be seen at home again. They fear disease more than bullets. The belief here is that the troops who go to Manila are to do garrison duty.

Elmer Lundburg wore a long face today. He was the only Wayne county boy in the 1st regiment, and of course, felt rather lonesome.

Most of the boys in the 2nd feel sore because they didn't get to go. They think Co. M is to blame as the 2nd had the most men, and would have been equipped first. It is a good reputation that they get from their former Company.

Yesterday a party of young people came down from Pierce and made our hearts glad by the dainties they left at our tent. Henry Gaertner of Randolph came on the same train.

I have heard so many people say, after seeing dress parade, it was no wonder the boys wanted to enlist. They say it is a grand sight. I haven't seen it yet, am always in it.

Every Sunday there is a large crowd at Camp Saunders. Last Sunday, in spite of the rain, a huge crowd, however, the grand stand was full and the grounds all around were covered with people, on foot and in buggies. Our visitors have a wrong opinion of how we fare. They think we don't get enough to eat, but if the truth were known we probably fare better than they, as we are furnished with pork, beef, bread, potatoes, tomatoes, beans, tea and coffee by the government, and apples, cakes and other dainties by the people.

Gov. Holcomb is a regular visitor at our camp. His tall form would draw attention from every one, even though he were not governor.

Elmer Longnecker has been promoted from the awkward squad to Company drill. Our duties begin at 6:00 in the morning and close at taps which sound at 10:50 at night. We have four drills a day. Our Captain was promoted to Major of the third battalion. Our two lieutenants were promoted—Lieut. Frank Beels to Captain, and Lieut. W. McCleary to 1st Lieutenant. Senator Allen's son was promoted and now is 2nd Lieut. Taps are sounding and lights must be out, so will close.

It is intended especially for these diseases and is famous for its cures. For sale by Orth.

On Sunday Sheriff Cherry and Marshall Miner, in response to a telephone message, made a raid on Geo. Grant's abode in the Danielson building near the post office, where they found a crowd celebrating, drawing their enthusiasm from a keg of beer. The noise the crowd was making was somewhat grewsome and when the officers attempted to take in the most hilarious Danielson offered objections, whereupon Marshall Miner slapped him with his open hand, landing Mr. D. straight out, his proboscis striking the floor first causing a source of regret and a large slit in it—the nose, which had to be sewed up. He and Grant were taken into custody and on Monday appeared before Judge Hunter. Grant on pleading guilty to the charge of intoxication, was fined $10 and costs. Danielson pleaded not guilty and will be given a hearing Saturday. He claims that he had just gone up to the room himself to stop the noise.

Alfred Olson who lives about ten miles northeast of Wayne, suffered a severe loss from fire one day last week. A little five year old boy and a match were the cause of the fire, which burned up Mr. Olson's barn, hog and cattle sheds, a lot of hay, and about sixty head of hogs.

The requirements of a medicine is to lighten the burden of pain and cure. This brings us to the question of a remedy, and "Faters-Buckeye-Pile Ointment" is the only remedy for bleeding, blind or protruding piles that is endorsed by physicians. Cures the most obstinate cases. 50c. Wilkins & Co.

Mr. W. Benton Hilton, Director of the Chicago College of Music, says of Dr. A. O. King: "I want to congratulate you on the splendid way you gave your part in the 'Redemption' last night. The part of 'Jesus' could not have been in better hands. The comments were all unanimous in their admiration of your interpretation and voice quality." At the M. E. church tonight.

Last Thursday, upon hearing that five Americans had been killed and several wounded, a citizen of Carroll exclaimed: "That's good; I wish they would kill more of them. I would like to see as many Americans killed as Spaniards;" and there could not be found enough patriotic men in town to horsewhip him and make him leave town.

About ninety men from the South Dakota militia companies which passed through Wayne on their way to Sioux Falls a week ago last Friday, returned to their homes last week. About one-third of the entire number were rejected for not being up to the standard required by the examining surgeons. Out of one company of 81 men, 45 were rejected, and a great many of them were members of the regular militia and had served as such from three to five years.

Mr. Lundburg is to be congratulated on his advancement to a position of still greater responsibility and the Emerson district also on having secured so thoroughly qualified a Principal of schools.

Mr. John Peterson of Patoutville, La., was very agreeably surprised not long ago. For 13 months he had been troubled with dysentery and had tried three of the best doctors in New Orleans, besides half a dozen or more patent medicines, but received very little relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy having been recommended to him, he gave it a trial and to his great surprise three doses of that remedy effected a permanent cure. Wm. McNamara, a well known merchant of the same place, is well acquainted with Mr. Peterson and attests to the truth of this statement. The remedy is for sale by L. P. Orth, druggist.

There will be a dance given at the opera house on Wednesday evening, June 1. The music will be furnished by Richards' orchestra.

Think of living a year or two after one is dead; dead to all practical intents and purposes. Think of the autograph of death inscribed on brow and cheek and lip. Thousands of women live for a year or two after all helplessness and happiness have gone out of their lives. When a woman becomes hopelessly helpless and unhappy she is practically dead. The young woman to whom the future is a dreary waste, the young wife who is a helpless, nervous invalid, the mother whose babes are a burden instead of a blessing, all these, unless they take the right measures to recover their health, are better dead than living. In the majority of cases these ghosts of women owe their condition to weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism. Frequent times have been deceived by the incorrect diagnosis of some obscure physician and do not understand the true nature of their trouble. It only costs a two-cent postage stamp for a woman to write and describe her condition to Dr. R. V. Pierce, an eminent and skillful specialist, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y. He will answer letters from ailing women without charge. His address is: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Favorite Prescription, the greatest of all known medicines for women. It acts directly on the delicate organs concerned in maternity and makes them strong, healthy and vigorous. It banishes the dispositions of the anxious period and makes baby's coming easy and almost painless. It cures all disorders and displacements and checks exhausting drains. "Previous to motherhood my wife was very sick," writes Dennis H. Connelly, Esq., of Clear Water, Wright Co., Minn. "Two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cured her well and strong." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure bile-rounness and constipation. One a dose. They never gripe.

reason why most of the European nations are not now banded together against us is because they dare not take the part of that behemoth of cruelty, the Spanish Government, against the crusade of mercy which our nation has started. Had it been on our part a war of conquest, a war of annexation, a war of aggrandizement, there would have been by this time enough flying squadrons coming to this country across the Atlantic to throw into public every city on our American seaboard.

The wars of the crusaders were only to regain an empty sepulchre. The Napoleonic wars, with their 1,000,000 slaughtered men, were projected and carried out to appease the ambition of one man; of the 25,000,000 slain in Jewish wars and of the 50,000,000 slain in wars under Julius Caesar, of the 150,000,000 slain in wars with Turks and Saracens, of the 50,000,000 slain in wars of Mexico, of the 20,000,000 slain in wars of Justinian and the 32,000,000 slain in the wars of Genghis Khan not one man was sacrificed by mercy, but in this Hispanic-American war every man, woman and child is slain on a standard banner of skinner or slaughterer of the weak and of the old.

Another allegation of this war is that it is for the advancement of the sublime principle of liberty, which will yet engulf the earth. Not only will we war with Cuba but finally will free Spain. If what right does a dynasty like that stand, and a corrupt court dominate a people for centuries, taxing them to death, riding in gilded chariot over the necks of a beggarly population? There are 10,000 boys in Spain growing up with more capacity to govern that nation than will the weak boy now in the Madrid palace eye possess. Before this conflict is over the Spanish nation will be on its way toward the time when a constitutional convention will assemble to establish a free government instead of the voracious dynasty that now rules.

Another allegation is that the war opens with a great victory for the United States. It took our Government four years to get over the fiasco at Bull Run. A defeat at the start of this present war would have been disheartening to the last degree and would have invited foreign intervention to stop the war before anything practical for God and humanity had been accomplished and would have prolonged the strife for which we are hoping a quick termination. In the most jubilant manner let this victory of our navy be celebrated. With the story of the exploding battleship fresh in the minds of the world, it required no ordinary courage to sail into the harbor of Havana and attack the Spanish ships.

But what a small crime it was compared with the systematic putting into their graves of hundreds of thousands of Cubans or leaving them buried for the bonanzas to take care of. If Spain could destroy 200,000 men, women and children, the slaughter of 200 people was not a very great undertaking. But this one last deed will result in the liberation of Cuba, and the driving of Spain from this hemisphere and the overthrow of that Government, which will soon drop to pieces if it does not go down under bombardment of insulted nations.

There was danger that the long continued oppression of our neighbors in Cuba might be continued from generation to generation without sufficient protest on our part and the pronounced execution of the people on both sides of the Atlantic, but that blinding volcano of destruction in the harbor of Havana fired the nation and shocked the whole civilized world. All nations will learn that such an act cannot be repeated without the anathema of all Christendom. As individual criminals must be punished for the public good, and we have for centuries of years and terminus and penitentiaries and electric chairs and life-gas chambers, so against nations committing high crimes against God and humanity must be signified. When a Spanish warship is sighted and hung up for the world's indignation, looking after our commercial interests and intending nothing but good, was hurled into demolition and gibbets on board, without time to utter one word of prayer, were dashed into the eternal world, the clamor of the righteous house of Spain was pronounced in tones louder than the thunder which that night rolled out over the sea.

God is with Us. Another allegation is the fact that we have a God to go to in behalf of all those of our countrymen who may be in special exposure at the front, for we must not let the world know that we are trifling with 100,000 young men to be put outside of home restraints and sometimes into evil companionship. Many of the brave of the earth are not the good of the earth. To be in the same tent with those who have no regard for God or home, to hear their holy religion sometimes slurred at, to be placed under influences calculated to make one reckless, to have no Sabbath except such Sabbath as in most encampments amounts to no Sabbath at all, to go out from homes where all sanitary laws are observed into surroundings where there is no law, where pestilence hangs in the air, where the night is dark and the stars are dim, where the only light is the light of the field under fire at the mercy of shot and shell, we must admit that those thus exposed need special care, and to the omnipotent God we have a right to commend them and will commend them. Postal communication may be cut off, and letters started from camps or homes may not arrive at the right destination, but, however far away our loved ones may be from us and however wild and deep the seas that separate us, we may hold communion with them via the throne of God.

A shipwrecked sailor was found floating on a raft near the coast of California. While in hospital he told his experience and said that he had a companion on the same raft for some time. While that companion was dying of thirst he said to him, "George, where are you going?" and the dying sailor said, "I hope I am going to God." "If you do," said the rescued sailor, "will you ask him to send some water?" After the death of his companion, the survivor said, the rain came in torrents and slaked his thirst and kept him alive until he was taken to safety. The survivor always thought it was in answer to the message he had sent to heaven asking for water. "Think of it," he said, "if you have direct and instantaneous communication with the Lord Almighty through Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son, and in that faith we may secure the presence of our imperiled kindred. Is not that a mighty alleviation?"

Pray for Our Country. Until this conflict is ended let us be much in prayer for our beloved country. Let us let us depend upon the friendship of foreign nations. Our hope is in God. Out of every misfortune that has befallen this nation to a better moral and spiritual condition, and so let us pray that he will lift us out of this valley of trouble into a higher mountain of blessing.

Morning, noon and night let us commend this beloved land to the care of a gracious God. That he answers prayer is so certain that your religion is a hallucination if he does not answer it. Pray that in reply to such supplication the farmers' boys may get home again in time to reap the harvest of next July. That our business men may return in time to prepare for a fall trade such as has never yet filled the stores and factories with customers, and that all the homes in this country may be saddened by the departure of father or brother or son may months before the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays be full of joy at the arrival of those who will for the rest of their lives have stories to tell of double quick march and narrow escape, and changes upon the prairie, and night set on with bandaged and our flag hauled up to places from which other flags were hauled down.

Away with Barbarism. Now that we have started in the work let us make that Spanish Government get out of this hemisphere. We do not want any more, with her industries and barbarism and salutes of cruelty, hanging around the shores of this free land. She must not breathe her foul breath on our winds; she must not gain reddeu'nsa on our butcheries.

Care to our coffin adds a nail, no doubt; and every grin, so merry, draws one out. - Volcott.

PLAYING THE PENALTY

"Well, be careful. At least it will sharpen your wits; but it is not the life I had marked out for you—I had far different plans—if you only—"

"I will be ready to fall in with all your plans, father, in a year or two; but would like a little more outside experience first."

"Suit yourself, son. Your bank account will be all right one of these days, if you listen to your father and cultivate good habits. But you were about to say that if you have no objection that will prevent, suppose you bring Earl down town with you; show him around and call in the bank before the noon hour."

"Certainly I will, father."

"Well, goodbye," and Mr. Kellogg hastily ascended to the floor above.

The other members of the family offered the parlor, where they were seated when Mr. Kellogg descended the stairs.

"Oh," exclaimed Elinor Kellogg, "there is a matter that I had nearly forgotten," and she joined the banker as he reached the outer door.

"Mr. Kellogg?"

"Yes, my dear madam."

"Oh, perhaps I should not ask it, but—"

"Speak out, madam; have no fear. Anything that I can do for you will be done with pleasure."

"You know, my dear brother, if so I may be permitted to ask you for—"

"But there has been no crime committed. Why, there was, on the part of Mr. Kellogg and her son, no object for the commission of a crime. My brother was greatly attached to his wife, and was less attached to him. Be assured, doctor, that you have not been remiss in any duty. Again I say there has been no crime committed. Not for half a year would I have Elinor made acquainted with your opinions. I fully appreciate your motives and energy, and now say no more about it. Let the matter drop. Forget that such an unfortunate idea ever entered your head."

"That is my advice also," said the doctor, "unless you are prepared to establish the fact that Andrew Kellogg's death was caused by the administration of poison."

"I believe it. I am satisfied of it. But I am utterly unable to demonstrate the fact. I feel that I have performed a tardy duty, and from henceforth my lips will be closed."

"It is as so, Sisters," said the doctor, rising to his feet. "At least, have unbanned my mind."

"First another toady," said Andrew Kellogg. "Five minutes later the physician and detective passed out into the street. Three blocks away their paths diverged."

"That ends the matter, sisters," said the doctor. "But nevertheless Andrew Kellogg died from the effects of a slow but sure poison. He was murdered, and in my opinion we have not heard the last of Elinor Kellogg."

"I judge," said Sisters, as he puffed a wreath of smoke aloft, "that it would be a difficult matter to find anyone guilty of an uncertain crime. First, there is lacking a knowledge of the fact that a crime has been committed. There is nothing tangible in this case. Doctor Strong believes that a crime has been committed—that it would be utterly impossible to establish the fact that Andrew Kellogg was foully dealt with—if so, it would certainly be a foolish act on your part to endeavor to brand anyone with the infamy of murder; not only would you make a ridiculous failure, but you would be liable to heavy damages."

"True, Sisters, true," exclaimed Andrew Kellogg. "But there has been no crime committed. Why, there was, on the part of Mr. Kellogg and her son, no object for the commission of a crime. My brother was greatly attached to his wife, and was less attached to him. Be assured, doctor, that you have not been remiss in any duty. Again I say there has been no crime committed. CHAPTER IV.

When Elinor Kellogg and her son descended the stairs on the morning of August tenth, it was in answer to Julia's summons to breakfast.

The banker met them with all the cordiality of the night before, presented them to his daughters and son, and the party were soon seated at the table in the spacious dining room.

A few hours' rest had indeed added to the attractiveness of the Widow Kellogg. The banker had enhanced the beauty that had been his wife's, the night before, and she shone as brightly as the stars in his wife's room.

"A remarkably well-preserved woman is my sister-in-law. Yes, she is quite a beauty!"

The son and daughters of the banker greeted their aunt by marriage in a spirit of at once glad evidence that they sympathized with her in her great affliction, and their words of sympathy and condolence brought tears to the eyes of Elinor Kellogg.

So great was her emotion when speaking of the last days and death of her late husband that she became almost hysterical, and it was with evident difficulty that the two sympathizing girls were enabled to restore her to a condition of equanimity that would enable her to remain seated at the table.

"How she must have loved Uncle Andrew!" thought both Laura and Janette, the banker's daughters.

"My dear madam," said Mr. Kellogg, "henceforth you must look ahead to what may lie in the future before you. I would not have you forget Andrew, and know that it would be impossible for you to do so, but we must all follow him one day—it is our duty to get what comfort we can out of our sorrow, not in a measure, obliterate it from your memory. My daughters, I am sure, will strive to render your life while beneath our roof a not unhappy one."

"Oh, believe me, aunt," exclaimed the impulsive Laura, "we shall love you dearly. I am sure we shall," said Janette; "if our love will be any consolation."

"Oh, my dear nieces, without your love there would be little charm left for which to continue an existence that has seen such sorrow," said the widow, glancing with her large, luminous eyes tenderly at the two young ladies. "I shall live but in your love and that of my dear son."

"Oh, and you will love mamma—she is so good, so kind and so gentle," said Janette.

"She could not be otherwise, my dear, and be your mother. I am sure I shall love her with my whole heart."

"Poor, patient, suffering mamma," said Laura. "She has been an invalid so long."

"Later, my daughters, you must present your aunt to your mother. I foresee that they will be a great comfort to each other. I must run up and see her a moment before going to the bank."

"Robert," continued Mr. Kellogg to his son, who had accompanied him into the hall, "what will you be doing to-day?"

"Why, I have been dealing a little in the wheat market, father. I will be about something for you."

"Yes, Chicago has a Board of Trade. It is a small affair now, but it will grow with the growth of the city. But you want to look out for that Board of Trade, son. There are sharpers there who will fleece you. I hardly believe in dealing in futures. It is too much like gambling. Still, you are a free man, and must get for yourself."

"If they fleece me, father, they will not gain a fortune—my bank account is not very extensive."

"Well, be careful. At least it will sharpen your wits; but it is not the life I had marked out for you—I had far different plans—if you only—"

"I will be ready to fall in with all your plans, father, in a year or two; but would like a little more outside experience first."

CHAPTER V.

The two young men remained seated in the parlor for perhaps a half hour after Mr. Kellogg had taken his departure, and Earl, who, by the way, was indeed a young man of fine appearance, strove to make a favorable impression on his new-found cousins.

"The young man's conversational powers were of a superior order. He had the happy faculty of adapting himself to any and all surroundings; nor was it long before he found himself chatting with the presumptive heirs of the banker's wealth with all the equanimity of an old acquaintance."

The contrast between these two young men was marked. Robert Kellogg had passed his twenty-second year. He was fully six feet in height, of light complexion, with eyes that very closely resembled his father's—a deep blue. His hair, though not yet gray, was abundant, and his features were masculine and pleasing. He was a young man of fine appearance, strove to make a favorable impression on his new-found cousins.

CHAPTER VI.

It was curious that in what was called the great fog of 1783, when all Europe thought the end of the world had come, London was by no means the chief sufferer. It was not a winter fog at all, but a dry fog. It appeared first at Copenhagen on May 23, reached Dijon on June 14, Italy on the 16th, and thence to Stockholm and Moscow. James Payn in New York Independent.

A Modest Man.

There passed away in Massachusetts one day recently a man who was at one time the firm friend of such men as Webster, Douglas, Lincoln, who presided at the famous convention of 1850 which nominated the martyred President, who was called to Washington in the time of the country's greatest need, whose opinions were sought by men of influence in whatever crisis faced them.

George Ashmun was one of the most modest of men. When he was chosen to preside over the convention of 1850 he consented only on condition that Governor Frisk would accompany him. He and Mr. Frisk both went to Springfield with the committee to notify Mr. Lincoln and it was shortly after that that he received from the President a letter that became famous and which said: "It seems as if the question whether my first name is Abraham or Ashmun will never be settled; it is Abraham, and if the letter of acceptance is not yet in print, if you think it, have my signature thereto printed 'Abraham Lincoln.'" Daniel Webster once wrote to him: "Whenever anything good comes into this house we always thank Mr. Ashmun. A fish came up the Potomac last evening higher than I could see for his species to venture. Will you be so kind as to join Mr. and myself at 5 o'clock to-day to taste him." Philadelphia Press.

CHAPTER VII.

Chicago of that day was not the palatial city that has since become, but a goodly town of some sixty thousand inhabitants. Its packing houses were not the mammoth structures of to-day. The elevated were but planks compared with the towering ones that now tower on every hand. Its Board of Trade—well, a certain down town hall, with a free lunch and barroom attachment.

This was the place where Robert had been dealing in futures—a place his father had heard and read of, yet never entered, though he had foreseen that ultimately it will grow into gigantic proportions.

As we have stated, the contrast between Robert Kellogg and Earl was marked. Earl was very nearly of Robert's height, but less compactly built. He was, it had been indicated, of a dark complexion, black hair, mustache and eyes and small hands and feet. He was much quicker than Robert in his movements and of very different temperament.

Robert was impulsive, and on the same night of the moment would commit an act of which he would afterwards regret. Earl made no moves without consideration—he must reason the matter out before acting.

Robert's companions could influence him against his better judgment. But one person in the world could influence Earl, and that one was his mother.

"How safe should that young man be, who could only be influenced by a loving mother!"

In that his hair and eyes were black, his hands and feet small, his temperament cool and calculating, Earl resembled his mother, there the resemblance ceased; he never heard the madam's clear and icy white, complexion, nor did his features in any way resemble hers. Indeed, as the young man passed from the house, Laura had remarked to her sister:

"But that charming young man Earl is but a certain likeness to his mother's eyes to his mother's eyes in his hair and eyes. 'I presume,' said Janette, 'he resembles his father.'"

"Yes," said the madam, "he is the image of what his father was at his age."

At this moment Julia entered the room.

"Miss Laura," she said, "do missus see you ready to receive her sister-in-law if you will company her to her room. She will stay here to-night."

"I had no thought that mamma would awake, Julia," said Janette. "I'll be at once."

"Bless ye, soul! You maime had had breakfast long ago."

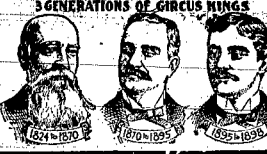

The widow and the two girls left the parlor and passed upstairs.

Julia stood in the hall and looked at them with a strange expression on her face, which was a shake of her head as she looked at the girl who had been her sister-in-law. "I shall be glad to see you," she said, "but I shall be glad to see you."

"I shall be glad to see you," she said, "but I shall be glad to see you."

"I shall be glad to see you," she said, "but I shall be glad to see you."
