ADMIRAL SAMPSON'S VICTORY OVER CERVERA

Brings Forth General Patriotism Throughout our Beloved Country. How the Day was Observed in Neighboring Towns. Wayne Celebrates Sampson's Victory.

All over this broad and prosperous land of the free and home of the brave, patriotism was at high tide on the Fourth, the Nation's proud natal day. The glad news of the total destruction of Cervera's fleet by Admiral Sampson and the capture of Cervera, the news of the capture of the Ladrone Islands and their governor by the Philippine expedition on the way to Manila, and the arrival at Manila of the first expedition, added to the ardor of the American people, and in every large city in the land the day was celebrated in a manner that has never been excelled. It was glorious, made glorious by the brave boys in blue, many of whom passed into the great beyond, that our people might stand forth as the great exponents and protectors of freedom, and humanity.

So anxious was young America to show his patriotism that the night before the booming of the cannon fire cracker was to be heard on every hand, and the bombardment had the desired effect, for as early as three o'clock buggy after buggy load left the city for different points where they expected to celebrate. While those who were compelled to stay at home had pleasant picnics and provided means of amusement for the children.

The Wayne Corn Palace Band went to Laurel the night before the Fourth where they furnished the music for the celebration, which was a very successful one in every respect. A large delegation of Wayne people were present and very naturally sided the Laurelites in celebrating. A most able oration was delivered by H. C. Erome of Omaha, after a very pretty parade by the M. W. A. In the afternoon a closely contested game of ball between the Laurel and Sioux City clubs was played, resulting in favor of Laurel by a score of 13 to 8. In the bicycle races Harry Craven won three prizes. In the evening the parade was one in which a pyrotechnic display was the principal feature, and the bovery and merry-go-round were liberally patronized.

A few of our people attended the celebration at Omaha and we are informed that it was an event that will long remain a memorable one in the Exposition city.

Quite a number of Wayne people went to Carroll where one of the largest crowds ever seen in the town had assembled, and that the day was properly observed will be seen by referring to an article from our Carroll correspondent on the back page of the HERALD.

Down at the little town of Hoskins the celebration was a huge success, judging from the report of our correspondents which will be found in this issue. The picnic that was to have been held at Grimsley's grove by the Methodist Sunday School was postponed, disappointing a great many of the children, but about three o'clock a large number of people began to assemble at the Presbyterian church lawn, where all those not celebrating elsewhere, had been invited. Basket full after basket full of good things were brought by the many people attending. A social good time was the result and a bounteous picnic supper caused happiness to reign supreme.

The news of Sampson's great victory aroused the patriotism of our citizens and a committee consisting of Alex Williams and H. G. Maute circulated a paper to obtain funds for the evening celebration, and they were given money right and left. Everything in the way of fire works and explosives in the city was purchased and upon court house hill gathered an assemblage large and patriotic to which Hon. W. F. Norris delivered an address, citing the great victories of the army and navy that brought forth continued applause. Guy Wilbur had succeeded in getting together a drum corps that made the welkin ring, and amid the roar of the cannon fire cracker, the burning of a spanish ship and a display of fire works, the celebration was a complete success.

He has traveled a great deal over Iowa, Missouri and Kansas and says the crops of this portion of Nebraska are ahead of those in the other states. The corn crop in Missouri is not to be compared to the corn here and the best of wheat crop of Kansas will fall far short of the crop in Wayne and adjoining counties.

A few of Plum Creek's young farmers, so the story goes, were in Wayne one day last week and decided to remain over night. During the evening the weather became so torrid that they concluded that to sleep in the house would be intolerable and finally sought a roosting place beneath the Logan bridge near the creamery where they listened to the merry hum of the mosquitoes as they lay with their feet in the water of the tranquil Logan that they might reduce the intense heat about their craniums.

Prof. Durrin's statuery intended for the Trans-Mississippi Exposition is now nearing completion. Four months of close application and steady work has been necessary to complete this piece of carving. It will take two weeks more time to have it ready. The marble is from the finest quarry in the world and is the most expensive. As the execution no description can do it justice, but those who are inclined to think America has not the "refinement and culture" to produce art of a high grade will have those ideas dispelled by visiting his studio. It will be a credit to Wayne, to Wayne county and to Nebraska to have this little gem exhibited to the world.

Council Sells Electric Light Bonds
On last Thursday afternoon the city council held a special session for the purpose of opening the bids for the electric light bonds, there being four or five bids on file. The bid of S. A. Keau of Chicago, was found to be the best and to him the bonds were sold at 101 1/4, or $4,556.25 for the $4,500 in bonds. The bonds only bear five per cent. interest, and having thus sold above par is an indication that Wayne's credit is a No. 1. Mr. Keau was at once notified and papers for the completion of the sale are being executed, but at the time of going to press nothing further had been heard from him.

Had His Ankle Dislocated.
Yesterday afternoon a number of young men went to the "cut off" lake on a fishing trip, but before arriving there met with quite a serious mishap. They had taken a boat along in the wagon and while going down a hill the load pushed so heavily against the horses that they started to run. At this juncture the lines broke and away went the team at a break-neck speed with Maute holding the position of honor. The occupants began tumbling out of the wagon in every direction but Maute stuck to the wagon like a leech, with visions of barbed wire trochans flashing before him, while Berry turned two or three revolutions in the air and at the same time cutting a pigeon wing landed without a scratch, as did the rest with the exception of Arthur, Tucker. In jumping to the ground he had the misfortune of dislocating his ankle but was not aware of it at the time believing it was sprained. However before returning home his foot had swollen badly. On arriving Dr. Williams was at once summoned who found the ankle dislocated as above stated and a bone broken. The necessary medical assistance was rendered and he may be able to be about in a few days.

He reports business brisk and himself well satisfied with his new location and business. The wind storm of a couple of weeks ago wrecked the building considerably on his farm in Monona county, Iowa. H. G. Maute and Harry Jones drove up from Wayne Sunday to take in the sights of the metropolis of western Wayne county and things like that. Philip Lundburg of Wayne, and his son, Prof. Edward Lundburg, were in town on Tuesday. They drove over, and this office was favored with a call by the younger gentlemen. They are father and brother of Elmer Lundburg, well known here. Elmer is now a member of Co. F, 1st Reg. Neb. Vol., and is on his way to Manila. His people are now looking daily for a letter from him from Honolulu.

SINGULAR STATEMENT.

From Mrs. Rank to Mrs. Pinkham.

The following letter to Mrs. Pinkham from Mrs. M. Rank, No. 3254 East Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., is a remarkable statement of relief from utter discouragement. She says:

"I never can find words with which to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"Some years ago I had womb trouble and improved for a long time, not seeing any more improvement. At times I would feel well enough, and other times was miserable. So it went on until last October, I felt something terrible creeping over me. I knew not what it was, but kept getting worse. I can hardly explain my feelings at that time. I was so depressed in spirits that I did not wish to live. I had everything to live for. Had hysteria, was very nervous, could not sleep and was not safe to be left alone.

"Indeed, I thought I would lose my mind. No one knows what I endured.

"I continued this way until the last of February, when I saw in a paper a testimonial of a lady whose case was similar to mine, and who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I determined to try it, and felt better after the first dose. I continued taking it, and to-day am a well woman, and can say for my heart, 'Thank God for such a medicine.'

"Mrs. Pinkham invites all suffering women to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. All such letters are seen and answered by women only.

"But how on earth..." "You must tonight write Stephen. State in your letter that a change of climate might be the means of restoring Janette to health, and urge him, if she is able to bear the journey, to send her to you at which I will specially follow your initiative to Chicago, leaving with me a letter of introduction from you; for I never met your brother. If I find you are alive and not beyond the hope of recovery, she shall be saved. I will have her brought back with me in a week's time. If she is unable to bear the journey, I will take other steps. Leave that to my judgment."

"Doctor, you are firm in your convictions. I will write Stephen at once; but why not state in the letter that Dr. Strong, my family physician, will visit Chicago and take charge of Janette on her Southern trip? Better yet, why not include all in your letter of introduction?" "By no means must you state that Dr. Strong will visit Chicago with any such intention, for that he will visit Chicago at all—clearly, I might not find Janette alive."

"Then the other course?" "My plan is best. I prefer that your brother receive your letter. He will submit it to the widow. She will protest that the journey would certainly prove fatal."

"Perhaps this Dr. Hewitt will be of the same opinion?" "Leave the doctor to me. Of course the matter will be mentioned to your niece. It may be decided that she will visit you as soon as she is able to travel. She will never be able if the doctor remains here. No, sir, she will only leave your brother's home a corpse."

"I submit to your will, doctor, in all matters pertaining to this affair."

"I have it. I will bring both girls. Laura, you say, is the elder. That plan will be far the better."

"Why should that plan would probably be necessary in order to accomplish our object. We shall be glad to have them here. They will not get away soon."

"Now there is another matter," said the doctor, "about the past of Elinor Kellogg."

"We know nothing save that she was the widow Newberry of Charleston, South Carolina, before my brother married her."

"Yes, I am aware of that. Andrew married her in Charleston."

"He did."

"She became the wife of Richard Newberry, you said, on the twenty-seventh day of February, 1833."

"Impossible! Why, she was a girl in short dresses then."

"No; she was eighteen years of age. She is over forty now."

"How did you ascertain all of these facts, doctor?"

"You know how culpable I felt after Andrew's death determined to learn more of Elinor Kellogg. I placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Sellers. He traced Newberry and wife. Will you make a statement of your experience, Mr. Sellers?"

"Oh, I simply visited Charleston and took a back trail, as it were. I traced the Newberry man and wife to Augusta, next to Savannah, thence to New Orleans, then to Memphis, Nashville, Baltimore and New York in the order named. From New York Newberry and wife sailed for Europe. It was difficult to find the trail after their return; but I found it at last, and it eventually led me to Norfolk, Newberry was a racing man and a follower of horse racing, or it would have been a more difficult matter."

"I judge so," remarked Amos. "I found several in Norfolk who had a remembrance of Newberry. I visited the court house and impounded the record of marriage licenses granted. I found one printed on the twenty-seventh of February, 1833, authorizing the marriage of Richard Newberry and Elinor Clifford."

"So that was her maiden name—Clifford. She was always reticent as to her past, I think. At least I was unaware until now as to what name she bore prior to becoming the wife of Newberry."

"The registrar searched for and found the license granted," continued the detective. "The document had been filed by the justice of the peace who had performed the ceremony on the date that the license was granted. His signature had been placed on the same. It stood there in bold letters, though somewhat faded."

"John R. Little, J. P." The names of two witnesses to the ceremony appeared, "Alonzo Rusli" and "O. L. Holmes." The magistrate, Little, had been dead some years. Rusli had disappeared. Holmes I succeeded in finding. He remembered distinctly all the circumstances. He stated that the marriage took place in the justice's private office, and that, as he was passing, he was called in to witness the ceremony. He was slightly acquainted with Newberry, but had never before beheld Elinor Clifford. He stated, however, that she was a very beautiful young woman."

"I can well believe that," said Amos. "It was not a difficult task to trace Newberry back to the date of his birth; but it was an entirely different matter with regard to Elinor Clifford. I was unable to trace her history one year into the distant past, though somewhat of a Newberry she stood before the justice."

"Strange, very strange," exclaimed Amos, who was again mixing the tordies. "That name—Clifford—I should suppose that would have aided you."

"If it had led me to discover more of her history, I should have been satisfied. Yes, two Elinor Cliffords; but neither was the Elinor whom I was tracing."

"So you gave it up?" said Amos, as he sipped his toddy. "I returned and reported to the doctor the progress that I had made. I had no desire to give the matter up, but one thing was absolutely necessary to insure further success—I must have a photograph of Elinor Kellogg. I was unable to obtain one."

"You remember, Amos," remarked Dr. Strong, "my calling one evening and inquiring if any member of your family had a photograph of Andrew's widow?"

cluded that we would suspend further operations for a while."

"Twenty hundred dollars! But why, doctor, do you insist on that for funds? You should not have expended a dollar in the matter."

"Feeling as you did then," was the physician's answer, "you would not have cared to take any part in the matter. I felt it my duty, believed no woman would follow the pretext of that order into your brother's family."

"And now?" "I propose to take Sellers with me to Chicago. He may be able to take up the broken threads of over two years ago and obtain more of the past life of Elinor Kellogg than I am capable of doing. It may be necessary, furthermore, to have him within reach."

"Can you go, Mr. Sellers?" asked Amos. "Oh, yes, I will go. And while there, I may be able to work for that reward offered by the doctor. I hope you will win it," said Mr. Kellogg.

"We will leave you now," the doctor said, rising from his chair. "Be sure and write and mail that letter tonight. Mr. Sellers and myself will take the 11 a. m. train for Chicago. I will call in the morning for the letter of introduction, State in it that I was called to Chicago on business and will accompany his daughters to your home. Good night."

"Doctor, I will give you a check for the expenses of this trip. Wait!" "It is unnecessary. The expense is a matter for after consideration. If I am right in my conclusions, the Chicago banker will be glad to defray all bills. I am not, I am willing to stand the loss."

"Oh, well, we will talk about that in the morning. However it turns out, I shall never become reconciled to Andrew Kellogg's death. Half the time I feel like a criminal."

"I shall call on you before you take the train, Mr. Sellers?" "Yes, I will call during the morning. I have now received letters from Elinor Kellogg."

"Certainly."

"I would like one of them, or some part of it, to be of use to me, but there have been times when a sample of handwriting has helped me greatly. Good night."

After his visitors had departed, Amos wrote the desired letter to his brother, which he sent at once to be mailed. He next wrote the letter of introduction which the physician was to take with him. Then, taking his check book from the desk, he filled out a check payable to Sellers for two hundred dollars.

"It will never do for Dr. Strong to be bearing all these expenses," he remarked. "He feels so culpable for the death of Andrew Kellogg and will spend his last dollar to unmask Elinor if she is guilty."

A few minutes later, when Mr. Kellogg joined the other members of his family, he informed them that he had written his brother inviting his niece to visit them as soon as possible, and that, if Janette was willing, he would like to have her look for them in the near future.

"Oh, papa," said Agnes, the elder daughter, "I am so glad! If Janette can only come, we will take the best of care of her."

Amos bent and kissed the glowing cheek of his daughter, remarking: "If she is not here in ten days, my child, I fear you will never see her."

"Why, the same malady that killed poor Andrew?" "I warm, the very same," said Amos, as he shaded his eyes with the evening paper.

CHAPTER XV. On the morning of the seventeenth of July, while Stephen Kellogg and family, aside from Laura and Laura, were seated at the breakfast table, a letter entered the dining room with the early mail.

"Ah, here is a letter from Amos," said the banker. "I will first read that. I know my brother sympathizes with me over Janette's illness. I can see that Dr. Hewitt is at his wits' end. I almost fear that we shall lose Janette."

"Oh, my dear Stephen, it cannot be!" moaned the widow. "Janette is so young that she will surely rally."

"Ah, Elinor, you doubtless had hope in Andrew's case until the very last, and yet he died. Why, Amos urges me to send both of my daughters to him at once. He states that a change of climate and the ocean air might be the means of fully restoring Janette to health."

"He does not realize how low the poor child is," said the widow. "In her condition it would be impossible. My daughter would not survive her journey. Here there is a prospect for her recovery. Remember that with a free ailment, Andrew died in Wilmington."

"True! For a malady of this kind, I doubt if a change of climate would avail. And in any case, I fear my brother's invitation comes too late."

"Laura might visit her Southern cousins."

"What, and leave the entire burden of nursing Janette to you?" "I could never consent to that. But Laura could not be prevailed upon to leave the city while Janette is so low."

"Caring for her is no burden to me, Stephen."

"Oh, I am well aware that you do not consider it such. But Laura would not go South unless Janette accompanied her. The being so, the matter is quite entered."

"I think, father," observed Robert, "that it would be well to submit the matter to Dr. Hewitt. He may decide that Janette is equal to the journey. You know she could be made as comfortable in sleeping car as she is in her room. There would be but two travelers, one at Baltimore for the Chesapeake steamer, the other at Portsmouth."

"Oh, I will speak to the doctor in regard to the matter, but I feel certain he would deem it unwise."

"It is at his wife's end, as you state, with regard to a Southern journey, a change would be well. I am ready to accompany my sisters South. Something should be done to save Janette's life."

"I fear it is too late; it would but fail her."

"Years were tracing their way down the banker's cheeks as he descended the stairs. The widow tenderly removed them with her handkerchief, as she kissed him good-by at the outer door."

"Too late! My brother's letter comes too late to save the despairing father as he entered his carriage."

Earl had taken his departing while Mr. Kellogg was on the floor above; but Robert remained, and soon after his father left the house he ascended the stairs. He found Laura yet in the hall, reading her cousin's letter.

"Oh, Robert," she sobbed, "if but two months ago we had received this letter! If but two months since we had left Chicago, this might not have been. Janette might have been saved. But now—"

"I may not yet be too late, Laura," the young man said. "Did father inform you of the request of Uncle Amos?"

"Yes, Robert, and here is a letter from Cousin Agnes, urging me to bring Janette to them. Oh, if we could but go!"

"Does Janette know of these urgent invitations?"

"Yes, Robert; father thinks she could not bear the journey. He deemed it unwise for me to acquaint her with the contents of the letters."

"I favor your going, and at once, I am prepared to accompany you. Father will consent. Dr. Hewitt will see him. If he regards Janette's case as hopeless here, I do not see how her removal could be unwise."

"It would be terrible should she not survive the journey."

"We would be with her, sister, and all attempts will be made to keep her here where we could bestow on her during the journey."

"Why, brother, could not Dr. Hewitt accompany us?"

"He could; but she does not seem to thrive under the doctor's care. I wish to see a change in regard to our sister's treatment."

"I know. I also have all faith in our good friend; but am not satisfied with his treatment of Janette's case. I must go now. Say nothing to sister until I return."

"I shall not. I wonder what aunt will say about the matter."

"That the journey would prove fatal to Janette. She has already said so. She feels that it is too late. But that does not alter my determination."

"I will not be trifled with. I have entered his father's office, he found him in consultation with Dr. Hewitt."

"I do not think," he said as the young man approached the desk at which the two men were seated, "that Janette would survive the journey. I also doubt if she would derive any benefit from the transfer should she do so."

"Robert," said his father, "you hear what the doctor says—it is too late."

"But, doctor, do you see any hope for my sister if she remains here?"

"I can see none. I have consulted the physician, that I see very little. The case has completely baffled my skill."

"Then, doctor, there would be no risk."

"At this moment the door of the office was opened and the porter ushered Dr. Strong into the apartment."

A English clergyman of eminence was asked by a group of London friends whose was the best sermon he had ever heard.

"If you mean," he answered, "the sermon which has influenced me most directly and never been forgotten, I can tell you at once. It was preached in the streets of Boston many years ago by a blind man."

He had been preaching, he said, in Phillips Brooks' church and had started to walk back to the house where he was staying. Being a stranger in Boston he became confused, and turning to a man who was behind him asked to be directed to the house.

A GUARDSMAN'S TROUBLE.

From the Detroit (Mich.) Journal. The proposition with which the National Guard of the United States responded to President McKinley's call for troops at the beginning of the war with Spain made the whole country proud of its citizen soldiers. Detroit there are a few guardsmen more popular and efficient than Max H. Davies, sergeant of Co. B. He has been a resident of Detroit for the past six years, and his home, 436 Third avenue, for four years he was connected with the Chicago office of the Chicago House of P. and W. Clark, in the capacity of bookkeeper. I have charged up many thousand orders for Dr. Will's Pink Pills for the First Sergeant, Pure People," said Mr. Davies, "but never knew their worth until I used them for the cure of chronic dyspepsia. For two years I suffered from the most aggravating trouble, but could only be helped temporarily."

"I think dyspepsia is one of the most stubborn of ailments, and there is scarcely a clerk or office man but what is more or less a victim. Some days I could eat nothing, while at other times I would be eating. These distressing pains would force me to quit work."

"I tried the hot-water treatment thoroughly, but it did not affect my case. I tried many other verified remedies, but they would help only for a time. A friend of mine recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I did not think much of them. I finally gave up and resorted to the pills and commenced using them. After taking a few doses I found much relief. I do not remember how many boxes of the pills I used, but I used them until the trouble stopped. I know they will cure dyspepsia of the worst form and I am pleased to recommend them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Blood-Cleaning. House-cleaning is a duty in every well-regulated household. People don't wait until the dirt becomes primary and then it stands to reason that in every day use more or less dirt or dirt accumulates. It is so with the human blood. From the enormous variety of eatables taken into the stomach, a quantity of useless matter is bound to accumulate in the blood and clog the life and wholesome flow in the vessels. Every person should from time to time have a "blood-cleaning" and the best cleanser and blood purifier is Cascares Candy Cathartic. We recommend them to all our readers.

Feeding the Fire.

The most powerful engine must stop if the fire are not fed. Man is the most wonderful piece of machinery in the world, yet no matter how strong and well made his bodily frame may be, if the fire of life within him is not constantly fed his limbs and muscles become powerless and useless. The reason men become helpless and diseased is because the food they eat, which is the fuel of life, is not properly digested and appropriated by the stomach and nutritive system. It is not completely transformed into the strength and working power which is to man what steam is to the engine.

That wonderful power-making "Golden Medical Discovery," invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalid and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., imbues the human digestive juices and blood-making glands with capacity to extract abundant nourishment from the food. It builds up organic tissue, nerve fiber, hard muscular flesh and working force. It gives a man steam.

What it did for Mr. F. S. Hughes, of Junction, Minnesota, Co. N. J., is given in his own words. He writes: "I received your kind letter, and in reply would say that mine was a bad case of kidney and liver trouble, and that six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and four bottles of 'Little Pills' effected a complete cure. It is well known that almost every engineer is troubled more or less with kidney trouble, especially on our fast express trains. I run one hundred and fifty-four miles on the road every day in the week, and have had no return of the trouble since taking the remedies, nearly three years ago."

W. H. McNEAL, Editor.
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The war will not end today or tomorrow, and it may last for many months.
Apparently it won't be long until we have Spain on our hands. Camara has made his escape. He'll never reach Manila.

Wayne County is entitled to nine delegates to the republican state convention which will be held at Lincoln August 10th.

The American way of carrying on a war in the interest of humanity is supreme, and victory always perches on their banner.
Spanish ships, flags, and everything Spanish was bombarded on the Fourth and in every instance went up in smoke or down in water.

The American Eagle screamed as it never screamed since the glorious soren of 1776. Its sons of our fathers fighting so gallantly.
Come to think of it, they had Fighting Bob Evans killed, but he beats the ghost of Benjamin Len, sixteen to one, when it comes to real life.

It is not to be expected that in a strange land, and with the enemy driven to desperation and stoutly fortified and entrenched, our troops will not meet with some reverses. It has ever been the history of warfare.

God bless the brave boys at the front who are fighting so heroically for their country in the cause of humanity. That they will ultimately be successful there is no doubt, and the people of this mighty nation should lend them every encouragement.

Every prophecy made by the populists prior to the last presidential election has proven false, while every promise of the republican party has been more than fulfilled. What do candid people think of the two parties now?—York Times.

An editor must not think that everything he publishes editorially is law and gospel, and that his readers must gulp it down as the only real thing. A liberal use of the ideas of other editors published collectively adds weight to any well founded opinion.

The stereotypers on the Chicago daily papers who were getting $3.25 per day struck for $4.00 per day. There was a time not many months ago when people were looking for work, but the man who is out of work today is either too feeble to work, or too lazy, one of the two.

Lieutenant Colonel Roosevelt of the rough riders, deserves the warmest commendation of the American people. One hundred feet in advance of his brave followers he rushed into the thickest of every battle, and in every instance took every position he went after. In one instance his horse was shot from under him.

That meeting with Cervara's fleet was worth waiting for. The result shows that the American victory at Manila was not an accident. It was a part of the naval scheme of the United States government, which includes fine ships, powerful guns, perfect ammunition, good men and excellent gunnery. It is hard to get the better of such a combination.—State Journal.

George Meiklejohn is being urged to make the race for governor next fall, but George probably has no intention of yielding at the present time to the blandishments of his friends. He is Secretary Algie's right arm, and is doing more important work at Washington than better salary, and there is no reason why he should give up that position just now, when Judge Hayward or some other equally good man can be elected as governor. George will stick to his post and then after this war is over there may come a day when he will be available, on which occasion he will stand off the populists with the same success he did when he was lieutenant governor in the winter of 1901.—Fremont Tribune.

The Growth of the Exposition.

A grand transformation scene is going on out at the exposition grounds and those who saw the interior of the buildings on the opening day, would scarcely recognize the scene presented now. Every day makes a wondrous change as exhibit after exhibit goes into place. There is a beauty and symmetry about the whole arrangement that claims the vision and enraptures the soul. To draw a pen picture of the scene to be witnessed within the gates of the Transmississippi Exposition that will give the reader an adequate view of their entrancing beauty, is one of the impossible things. For scenic beauty, many places ahead of the World's Fair. Of course it is upon a much smaller scale but for artistic merit it is considered to take a higher rank. The illumination at night is particularly fine and cannot fail to entrance all beholders, if they have in their soul a particle of love for the beautiful. All doubts as to the character of this exposition can now be set at rest. It is to take high rank among the exhibitions heretofore held, not only in this country but throughout the world, here at home small differences have arisen, kind of fair affairs, as it were, but the whole scheme is on such a grand scale, it has been taken up by such a wide scope of country and is the own of such a diversified interest, that it cannot be effected by these things to any appreciable extent. It rises and scours above them and will be a living memory with a large class of people for years to come.

To attempt to particularize were indeed a hard task for it is all in such perfect harmony, and of such merit as to make it a seeming injustice to do so. Treated as a whole and its unstinted praises can be justly sung and no encomiums pronounced will be more than the just deserts. Any resident of the Transmississippi territory who fails to see this exhibition will certainly miss the opportunity of a life time, and it can scarcely fail to be a matter of regret ever afterward.—Omaha Press.

H. P. Shumway of Wakefield is making no objection to the talk of his friends about making him candidate for governor. Mr. Shumway is a clean man and an implement dealer, a grand old farmer and brother-in-law to Fremont Everett. He can sit in his office in Wakefield and survey every foot of his thousand acre farm a couple of miles to the east, while his bosom leaves with pride. He puts away a few hundred dollars every year, just to have a little fun in politics, and some of these days he may be taken seriously and get in up to his chin. Mean while he spends a good deal of time playing duplicate whist, in which he is standard authority for Northeast, Nebraska.—Fremont Tribune.

One month until the republican state convention assembles. May its every act be harmonious and its proceedings the acme of wisdom. The mistakes of past years will not be made, nevertheless these should be no attempt to drive people from the republican ranks but a special effort should be made to encourage every republican to work for his party, and to win back those who for different reasons wandered away. Nominate men for state offices with the character and fitness possessed by Judge W. F. Norris, who will undoubtedly be nominated for Congress in the third district, and the republican victory will be pronounced.

The government should at once engage the versatile editor of the Sioux City Tribune to take charge of the war. However when we consider that only one man was killed and eight wounded on the American side, and no vessel disabled, in two great naval battles in which the Spanish fleets were sunk, the power that he will perhaps get little head to the warblings of the Tribune.

It is now not disputed that Secretary of the treasury (Age knew what he was talking about when he requested that fifteen days more be granted before the war tax law went into effect. Had this been done the thousand and one inconveniences to business men and manufacturers might have been avoided.

The Pennsylvania democrats voted down the free silver resolution and put at the head of their ticket a free silver man because he is a free silver man. They have set the trap to catch the unwary voter a coming and a-gwine.—Sioux City Journal.

Some of the leading papers of Germany think the Yankees have made great mistakes. Perhaps they hadn't heard from Sampson. The naval feats of Dewey and Sampson are "great mistakes"—for the Spaniards.

Judge W. F. Norris seems to be the popular favorite for the republican nomination for congressman from this district this fall. The Judge is very popular in Burr and would receive a cordial support.—Tekamah Herald.

The Fremont Tribune and Wisner Chronicle came out in patriotic colors last Saturday and presented their customary first-class appearance. Nebraska papers in general, are hard to beat.

We are glad to see the newspaper boys come out for Judge Norris for Congress in this district. If nominated he will give Uncle Samuel the biggest fight he ever had.—Pierces Call.

If Judge Robinson is nominated for congress by the fusionists, he will know that he has been in the prettiest fight this fall that ever fell to the lot of man, in a political way.

One of the first bulletins of the new chief of the Bureau of Statistics, is everywhere hailed by the Free-Trade newspapers as furnishing indisputable evidence of the needlessness of Protection.—Washington correspondence New York Evening Post.

This is because Mr. Austin's recent bulletin showed that our exports of manufactured goods will this year reach the enormous total of $230,000,000, against $130,000,000 two years ago. It is nothing new for Free-Traders to insist on the needlessness of Protection. They have always insisted upon it and no doubt always will. Their favorite point of insistence is that low wages and a low rate of living constitute the ideal condition for the workingman. They tell you that a laborer in Germany lives on less than half what it costs the American laborer to live; but they do not tell you that the German laborer does this because he has to, and that it takes the combined wages of himself, his wife and every member of his family big enough to earn even so much as will pay for this reduced rate of living, and that as regards the quality of food and clothing and the enjoyment of comforts and luxuries the American artisan lives like a prince when compared with European laborers. They do not tell you what even the London Times candidly admits, that "intelligent labor highly paid"—that is, labor enjoying the benefits of the American policy of Protection has made the United States the leading country of the world in the production of manufactured commodities, and has enabled America to extend her trade in these lines to every quarter of the globe.

If Mr. Austin's figures furnish any particular comfort to the Cobdenites they are welcome to it, for their average share of comfort and content has been reduced to a minimum in this year of unparalleled prosperity under the influence of Protection. They ought, then, to be delighted at the selection of this competent gentleman to have charge of the Treasury Department Bureau of Statistics. But it is safe betting they are not overjoyed at the change.

The "Needlessness of Protection," as demonstrated by the wonderful progress of American manufacturing thro' and by reason of the impetus of Protection, is evidently to be the rallying cry. In times past they have vociferated their claim that Protection was a delusion and a snare, that it never did and never could build up or permanently benefit the manufacturing industries of any country. Circumstances compel the abandonment of this claim and in its place the projection of a new dogma, namely, that, having so firmly established American industries, Protection is no longer needed and hence should be discarded! And they are really in earnest about, and from the vigor and unanimity with which Free-Trade newspapers are commenting upon Mr. Austin's statistical bulletins it would appear that the word has passed along the line that shall make this change of front uniform. It does not in the least matter to these able theorists that a reversion to Free-Trade would plunge this prosperous country into an abyss of ruin and wretchedness; their cry is still "The Needlessness of Protection!"—American Economist.

The Policy of Evasion.

Another Democratic state convention has met and adopted the policy of evasion. A convention composed of delegates from all parts of Pennsylvania decided to confine the platform adopted to state issues, except a vague and brief indorsement of the war. The Bryanites were in control, but even they voted down a free-silver resolution brought in by the minority faction for the purpose, apparently, of annoyance. It was not a little embarrassing to be obliged to either violate a general rule agreed upon or openly refuse to indorse the distinctive Bryan policy. Bryanism without free silver is a shadow without substance.

Enough State Democratic conventions have now been held to show plainly that word has been passed all along the line to ignore national politics and raise side issues. It remains to be seen how successful this policy will be. The success of such a departure in Pennsylvania, will not have much weight in other states. The Democrats of that state are Democrats from prejudice more than from principle. Free silver, like free trade, is abhorrent to their intelligence, and was concurred in only as a political necessity. The real test will come when the West and South, where free silver sentiment is genuine, come to be heard from.

In about a fortnight the Illinois Democracy will meet in state convention. There are two factions in Chicago and there may be a very sharp fight in the convention. The Democrats of Illinois are, for the most part, free silverites, and they will hardly follow the lead of Pennsylvania, however strongly the Chicago city hall ring may favor it.

Sometimes the general conditions favor the raising of state issues and the relegating to the background of national affairs, but the present is not one of those times. All eyes are upon matters common to the entire Nation. Never in the history of the country has this been more emphatically true than it is today. It is simply preposterous to think of arousing public interest by substituting for "war's loud alarm" the carping of partisan criticism of state administrations. The party leaders who are responsible for this line of policy are the victims of a strange hallucination.—Inter Ocean.

American Independence Day was celebrated in some places in England. The patriotism of the American people on the Fourth was so pronounced that it could be heard around the entire world.

THE HAY HARVEST.

The farmers of the Northwest are now about to gather one of the most abundant hay harvests that has ever graced their broad acres. It is a matter of very great importance that this harvest should be gathered in the very best condition. Whether it be worth full value or less than half value in the feed lot depends very largely on the weather. We are now past the 18th of the month, a period in which past experience shows that the rainfall gradually decreases, and the two days that have since intervened indicate that this year will be no exception to the general rule. Hence there is hope of good weather upon which the value of the hay crop depends.

A great deal, however, depends upon the farmer himself. There are some farmers who always have reasonably good hay and in good years hay of a very superior quality, while there are other farmers with apparently the same advantages who have inferior hay almost every year and hay worth little or nothing in bad years. One of the highest tests of a farmer's skill is his ability to secure the hay crop in the best condition.

No matter what the weather may be this year it will furnish a supreme test of the skill of the farmer in hay making. The crop is very heavy and is mostly clover. The man who has a hay shed or barn in which to store it, has the proper tools with which to harvest and gather it, and has a gang of men, will, with favorable weather, or even half favorable, secure a good crop this year, while the man who has to stack his hay, has inferior tools, and poor management, will have a poor lot of stuff to feed to poor cattle next spring as a consequence. Once more we caution our readers of the danger of spontaneous combustion this year. The crop is largely clover, rank in growth, and hence difficult to cure except with the best implements and management. Hence there will be a disposition to put it away too green, to store it in the mow imperfectly, all of which greatly increases the danger of mow-burnt and moldy hay and loss by fire.

The best time to cut down the clover is late in the afternoon. If the farmer has a tedder or one of the varieties of side delivery rakes, which practically answers the same purpose, enabling him to make his windrow parallel with the path of the mower, and use his hay loader to the best advantage, he can begin tedding early in the morning and take with the loader out of the swath in the afternoon, the weather being good, or he can commence with his hay rake in the fore noon and a little later in the afternoon begin hauling to the barn.

The great secret in making a good quality of clover hay is to keep it as loose as possible on the ground with the freest motion of air through it in order that the leaves may pump out of the stock the surplus moisture, amounting to about 55 per cent of its total weight, in as short a time as possible and before the structure of the leaf is destroyed by the intense heat and, therefore, its capacity to evaporate the water in the stalk is exhausted. If the farmer will get this idea clearly in his mind, he will be able to adopt means to the end and make good hay. If, however, he has no means of keeping the swath loose so as to allow the evaporation of the sap through the leaves and allows the top of the swath to become sunburnt while the under side is yet green, it is utterly impossible to make good clover hay. Next week haying should be in full swing, except possibly where the rains have prevented the proper cultivation of corn, and it is to be hoped that the weather all over the Northwest will be suitable for hay making as well as for the full development of the wheat and oats crop.—Wallace's Farmer.

There is only one cure for Contagious Blood Poison—the disease which has completely baffled the doctors. They are totally unable to cure it, and direct their efforts toward bottling the poison up in the blood and concealing it from view. S. S. S. cures the disease positively and permanently by forcing out every trace of the taint.

I was afflicted with a terrible blood disease, which was in spots at first, but afterwards spread all over my body. These soon broke out into sores, and it is easy to imagine the suffering I endured. Before I began to use S. S. S. I had spent a hundred dollars, which was really thrown away. I then tried a few patent medicines, but they did not reach the disease. When I had finished my first bottle of S. S. S. I was greatly improved and was delighted with the result. The large red splotches on my chest began to grow paler and smaller, and before long disappeared entirely. I regained my lost weight, became stronger, and my appetite greatly improved, as a piece of glass, well and my skin as clear as a piece of glass. H. L. MYERS, 100 Mulberry St., Newark, N. J.

CARROLL NEWS.

Saturday's rain was a great benefit to wheat and corn.

About fifty Indians from near Bender passed through Carroll Saturday on their way to the Satee agency west of Bloomfield.

The sleigh from H. Bassford's store to the post office has been raised on a level with the rest of the walk, which is a great improvement.

For ideal weather Nebraska is the country. Corn is growing nicely and promises a heavy crop.

Fred Berry came up from Sioux City Tuesday and will spend a few days visiting his brother, Frank.

Oscar Edwards went to Wakefield Saturday to assist in the company of volunteers at that place. He returned Saturday evening, however, as the company was complete, but he has tendered his services to Ed Reynolds at Wayne, who, it is understood, is organizing another company at that place.

We forgot last week to mention the results of our school election. George Baiter was elected treasurer, and Geo. Merrill as moderator. There was quite a bitter fight between the two factions existing at this place, but as is always the case whenever the people of the town have a chance, the man running of Frank Berry was decidedly "knocked out."

A fight between several parties from the country, occurred Saturday night, and there was a "hot time" in the town for a few minutes. No one was seriously hurt but for a short time it looked as though there would be some strange faces in the next world. It was a most disgraceful affair and is sure to reflect on the town as well as the participants. Nothing, however, is done with such people, and as long as they go unpunished for such disorderly conduct it will occur quite often. The town ought to have a jail of some description, and when such things occur the disturbers should be locked up and made to pay a fine of five or ten dollars. It would have a pacifying effect on the pugilist feelings of some people, besides helping to swell the town treasury.

The celebration held here the Fourth was a complete success in every respect. The day was perfect and seemed to have been especially ordered for the grand occasion. Long before sunrise the people were awakened from their peaceful slumbers by the booming of muskets, ringing of bells, and the noise of the ever present fire cracker, which welcomed in one of the most glorious Fourth of July's ever celebrated in America. As early as eight o'clock the crowd began coming into town and by nine-thirty the streets of Carroll were more than crowded. Until the train arrived, however, there was a noticeable feeling of sadness caused by the news of the disaster of the boys in blue at Santiago, and it seemed for a time as though it would be a sad day for us to celebrate. When the morning train arrived bringing the news of the great victory achieved by our navy at Santiago, the enthusiasm of the crowd already assembled knew no bounds. The old soldiers shouted themselves hoarse; women waved their handkerchiefs, while every one young and old, joined in the many hurrahs for the victory of Sampson, and Dewey; and for the balance of the day America's patriotism was strong to its highest cord. The parade formed promptly at ten o'clock, just north of the depot, and headed by the Winside band marched around the town several times and finally to the stand where the literary program was to be carried out. The parade was composed of the Winside band, several decorated wagons representing the different professions, elevators, etc; eight old soldiers with muskets on their shoulders brought forth cheer after cheer from the assembled throng, while the wagon bearing twenty little girls, draped with the American colors, received their share of the enthusiasm. After the parade Rev. Tyson of the Baptist church, delivered the oration. His words were well chosen and were in complete harmony with the feelings of the people. He spoke in part as follows: "When asked this morning if I had my speech prepared I replied I had not, but am looking for it by this mail." Then holding up a morning Journal with the news of the great victory printed in large letters at the top of the paper, he continued by saying "And thank God, it came." After the literary exercises were over, dinner was in order. The first thing after dinner was the ball game between Randolph and Carroll. The game was too much one-sided to be very interesting, and resulted in a victory for Carroll by a score of 17 to 3. Wellbaum and Swartz done the battery work for Carroll, while the Randolph boys changed positions so many times that it would be difficult to say who was in the points for them. After the ball game came the different races which were pulled off in good order. In the evening the grand display of fireworks took place and they would have done credit to a town many times larger than Carroll. After the fireworks were over those who were not already too tired to celebrate further repaired to the houses and enjoyed themselves watching the light fireworks until the "twelve o'clock" of the morning. Taking it all in all it was the greatest day

The Fourth has come and gone and Hoskins had her celebration. The day was as fine as one could wish. The ball was started rolling in the wee small hours of the morning, by a grand salute. By sunrise every business place was gaily decorated, and the town was crowded with people by 9 o'clock. The parade started at 10 o'clock; it was four blocks long and the best parade ever seen in Wayne or surrounding counties. It was led by the German Cornet Band, followed by the old Soldiers, and then the Modern Woodmen of America, which showed by the way they marched that the lodge is composed of good timber. They were followed by the Goddess of Liberty and little girls representing the different states; Uncle Sam followed, leading Spain with boys on horseback, prodding him along; then came the business men Trades Union, which showed skill and taste in decorations, and all were well represented; these were followed by Uncle Josh Hayseed and wife. All headed for the grand stand where they had speaking, music and singing, and when this was over all prepared for dinner. In the afternoon the races occurred and consisted of foot races of all kinds, horse races, both running and trotting. At 4:00 o'clock there was a ball game between Hoskins and Bega, resulting in favor of Hoskins by a score of 30 to 7. The grand bowery dance was commenced in the afternoon and kept on the jump till early morning, when all left for home feeling contented and happy. The day passed off without accidents, rowdiness or fights, and will long be remembered by everybody.

PROCLAMATION BY MCKINLEY!

The Hawaiian Resolution Passes the Senate by a Large Majority.

On the morning of the Fourth, in a dense fog off the coast of Nova Scotia, the French Steamer, La Bourgogne, collided with the iron sailing ship, Cromortyspire, and of 715 passengers and crew aboard only 163 were saved. It is reported that the sailors fought with knives and clubs for possession of the boats. It was a frightful disaster.

President McKinley at 11:40 last night issued a proclamation asking the people of the United States upon next assembling for worship to offer thanksgiving to almighty God, who has thus far vouchsafed to us the light of his face and led our brave soldiers and sailors to victory.

The Hawaii annexation resolution was adopted by the Senate yesterday by a vote of 42 to 21. Hawaii will soon become a part of the United States.
