

House Work

Seems easy to a man, but there is a great deal of lifting and reaching to do; a great many trips up and down stairs to make in the course of day's house work. It's hard where a woman is well. For a woman suffering with some form of "female trouble" it is daily torment. There are thousands of such women struggling along day by day, in increasing misery. There are other thousands who have found a complete cure of their disease in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stops debilitating drains, cures irregularity, heals inflammation, nourishes the system, and gives vitality and vigor. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. It contains no opium, cocaine, or other narcotic.

For a number of months I suffered with female trouble, and was treated by the best of the doctors, but to no avail. I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and after taking a few bottles, I felt better than I had in months. My appetite improved, and I was able to do my usual work. I am now perfectly well, and I feel that I owe my recovery to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I have recommended it to all my friends, and I am sure it will do the same for them. I have written to Dr. Pierce, and he has kindly sent me a copy of his book, "The Weak and Sickly," which is a most valuable work. I have also written to him, and he has kindly sent me a copy of his "Medical Advertiser," which is a most valuable work. I have also written to him, and he has kindly sent me a copy of his "Medical Advertiser," which is a most valuable work.

Robinson Unworthy of Populist Support

The following exhibition of Congressman John S. Robinson, member of the political trust at Madison, from the editor of the Creighton News, the populist organ of Knox county, shows one populist editor at least to be honest in his advocacy of reform. The News says: "The sentiment is that John S. Robinson will be defeated this fall by John R. Hays of Norfolk and will be might as there are few papers in this section of the country but what believe that Robinson is unworthy of the support of any honest populist. The News has stated at the opening of the campaign that we could not conscientiously support John S. Robinson for congress and we are still of that opinion and want to see him defeated, as the News believes him unworthy of public support. Robinson said he 'didn't care a d—d' for the people two years ago and was only too willing to place that unworthy and unscrupulous being (Dr. Mackay) at the head of the campaign committee because he believed the unscrupulous motives of his henchman would pull him through all right. It is time for the common people to set down on Robinson and give the fusion party to decidedly understand that such motives would not be tolerated by any party, and much less by the fusion forces who claim to be the ideal of perfection along lines of reform. Owing to these and other reasons the News will openly denounce Robinson as unworthy of its support and do all in its power to elect John R. Hays whom he believes possesses merit worthy of the support of the News. The News has never wavered in its support of the fusion nominee in past years, but there is an end to all consistent things, that is unworthy of

HEALTHY OLD AGE SSS

The majority of persons upon reaching middle age and past find their blood becomes weak and thin, and diseases that were easily controlled in earlier life begin to affect the constitution. Those predisposed to Scrofula, Cancer, Rheumatism, Gout and other hereditary troubles may escape till then, but as they age the blood, so long tainted and weakened by accumulated waste matters, is no longer able to properly nourish the body, and it becomes an easy mark for disease. At this critical period of life the blood must be re-enforced before it can perform its legitimate functions and rid the system of these poisons, and nothing so surely and effectually does this as S. S. S. It is not only the best blood purifier, but the best tonic for old people. It warms the blood, tones up the nerves, removes all taint from the blood, and prevents the development of disease. S. S. S. is the only purely vegetable blood medicine known. Not one particle of mercury, potash or other mineral poison can be found in it, and it may be taken for any length of time without harm. S. S. S. is the only remedy that reaches deep-seated blood troubles like Scrofula, Cancer, Rheumatism, Pezema, Tetter, etc. It purifies and restores the blood to a healthy, normal condition, and makes it impossible for any poisonous waste materials to accumulate. If you have an old running sore or an obstinate ulcer that refuses to heal, or are troubled with boils and carbuncles, try S. S. S. If you fail to make a quick and permanent cure of these pests. If your system is run down and you feel the need of a tonic, S. S. S. will strengthen and help you as it has many others to a happy, healthy old age. S. S. S. cured Mr. H. Borden of Satusville, Va., of a case of Rheumatism of thirty-five years' standing, after the best physicians had failed. This was seven years ago, and there has been no return of the disease. Mrs. D. K. Johnson, of Blackshear, Ga., was for years afflicted with a severe type of rheumatism, and had used every remedy known and recommended as a cure without receiving any benefit. S. S. S. promptly reached the seat of the disease and made a complete and permanent cure. If you are in doubt about your disease, and will send us a statement of your case, our physician will give you any information or advice wanted, for which we make no charge. Book on Blood and Skin Diseases sent to any desiring it. Address Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

FATAL ECONOMY.

VERY old maxim declares that it isn't economy to pick up pins; the time is worth more than the pins. Similarly it is not true economy to do without Ivory Soap; your health requires the daily removal of the bodily excretions which are discharged through the pores of the skin. These tiny mouths must be kept open, and they should be opened only with a pure soap. IVORY SOAP—99% PER CENT PURE.

Humor in the Campaign.
The independent: We notice that the American people are not only taking their politics this year with all seriousness that the importance of pending questions suggests, but also seem inclined to repress sternly their traditional sense of humor when the many curious and amusing things in the campaign are brought to their attention. It is well that they should argue and meditate; it is also well that they should laugh over what may reasonably provoke laughter. For a long time there has not been so much to laugh about in a campaign. Take, for example, Tillman of South Carolina, reading so impressively in the Kansas City convention those declarations of the democrat platform of the "consent of the governed" and that menacing militarism which means "intimidation at home" and the destruction of "free institutions." Or Mr. Bryan in an address of 10,000 words eloquently saying to the members of the notification committee from Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and North Carolina that it is our duty to give the brown man in the Philippines the rights which have been taken from the black men in those states. Ought there not be an irresistible appeal to the Yankee nation's sense of humor in the profound utterances of Croker, who advises that the coinage rate be changed every four years, and now urges young men to support the imperialism of Tammany in order that they may overthrow that imperialism in the Philippines which he commended six months ago because it "gave them a chance?" Is there not food for laughter in this authoritatous boss' sage remark: "I don't know where we will end if we keep on going this way. One man power is getting to be a serious thing."

Republican Candidate for State Auditor.
Charles Weston, republican nominee for state auditor was born in New York City in 1824. He moved with his parents to Campaign county, Illinois, in 1855 and spent much of his time on the farm, until he reached manhood. Mr. Weston is a man of thorough education. He received his elementary education in the public schools of Chicago and Campaign City, Illinois. He entered the university of Illinois in 1872 and graduated from the institution in 1876, having completed in a very creditable manner a four years course in the College of Literature and Science. For two years after graduation he taught in the public schools of Illinois and although since engaged in other pursuits, he has always found time and inclination to take an active interest in educational work. In 1878 he commenced the study of law in the office of J. W. Langley, of Campaign, Illinois, and subsequently studied with William H. King of Chicago, at that time president of the Board of Education of Chicago. Mr. Weston was admitted to the bar by the Supreme court of Illinois in 1880, having passed the most creditable examination in a class of forty-five. For four years he was associated in business with William H. King and Frederick W. Packard, at that time one of the leading firms of Chicago. In 1884, Mr. Weston removed to Washington Territory and was for a time editor of the Lewis County Bee in

The Journal doesn't need to tell its readers that it is pleased with the nomination of W. W. Young for senator from this district. It was a clear case of the office seeking the man, and his election will be ratified at the polls. Mr. Young is far above the ordinary in point of ability and in the next state senate he is destined to be a leader who will reflect credit on his constituents. His opponent is a wily politician who will be willing to do all things for the sake of getting votes but the people ought to have learned the lesson that that is not the sort of a man to send to Lincoln to make laws for them. Mr. Young was given the nomination without his seeking, has no strings to him in any way and will for that reason be a fearless as well as able leader. He will be elected and will acquit himself as the right man in the right place. —Norfolk Journal.

Several Wayne people went to Winside Monday to witness the game of ball between Coleridge and Stanton, both teams having "loaded up" with strong players. John Hayes of this city umpired the game. At the end of the eighth inning the score stood 11 to 11. In the ninth inning the game broke up in a row over a decision of the umpire, who decided the game in favor of Coleridge. The Winside people divided the money equally among the teams and as a result a bitter feeling exists among some of the players and Winsiders, so it is reported.

WAYNE STREET CARNIVAL.

Always on the Wrong Side.

In his speech at Youngtown, Ohio, on Friday, Senator Foraker said that the democratic party has been on the wrong side of every question for more than fifty years. "Slavery was abolished, the union was preserved, the constitution was amended, our finances were re-established, specie payments were resumed, our credit was restored, prosperity was made universal by the republican party," said the Ohio senator, "not only with the help of the democratic party, but in spite of its bitter and determined opposition." This is unquestionable. The statesmanship that has made this nation great in material power and in moral influence has been republican statesmanship and every achievement for national progress has been won against the most determined democratic opposition.

This is familiar to every intelligent student of our political history for the last half century. There has not been a great question during that period affecting the well being of the government and people, as to which the democracy has not been on the wrong side. In 1861, in the midst of the civil war, that party declared that the effort to put down the rebellion was a failure. After the war it opposed every proposition for the reconstruction of the union. It denounced as unconstitutional the issue of paper currency by the government to carry on the war and later opposed the legislation that made this currency as good as gold. The policy of protection, under which the United States has attained industrial pre-eminence and American labor has reached a higher standard than that of any other country, has been always fought, and still opposed by the democratic party.

Ivy Wreath.

During all this period it has been the party of obstruction and reaction and it is as distinctly so now as at any previous time. It is not less unsound now in regard to the currency than it was thirty years ago; it is equally hostile to protection; it puts itself in the path of national progress and with even greater boldness and recklessness than ever before it makes war upon established institutions, even threatening to take from the highest judicial tribunal its independence, and subject it to the party will. In all these years the democratic party has taken no position which was justified by events; and has made no prophecy that was fulfilled.

Ivy Wreath.

It gave us a tariff law that brought with it industrial stagnation and business depression. In 1896 it assailed the gold standard, demanded the free coinage of silver and prophesied immeasurable disaster if that demand was rejected. The people would not be again fooled and events have shown how false was the democratic position and prophecies. A party that has been uniformly wrong upon every great question has no claim upon the popular confidence. In view of past events what faith can be placed in the judgment of the democratic party regarding present questions? Where is the wisdom or the statesmanship in the democracy at this time which gives it a superior claim to the support of the American people? —Bee.

With corn selling at nearly 30 cents per bushel, with every steer worth from $12 to $16 more than four years ago, with all farm products selling at a profit, instead of a loss as in 1896, what excuse can a Nebraska farmer give to his family for voting the democrat-fusion ticket?—Nellig Leader.

The work of disfranchising the negro goes steadily along in the south. Doesn't it favor of the worst kind of hypocrisy?

Bryan makes a great ado about the miners strike in the coal regions and then goes on to say that many of the miners gets less than $20 per year. This may not be big wages if true, but nevertheless it is a whole lot better than the thousands and thousands of working men got under a democratic administration when they sought to maintain life by visiting free soup houses. There are no free soup houses now and none needed and never was the demagoguery of apostle Bryan more in evidence than now. House Work

Seems easy to a man, but there is a great deal of lifting and reaching to do; a great many trips up and down stairs to make in the course of day's house work. It's hard where a woman is well. For a woman suffering with some form of "female trouble" it is daily torment. There are thousands of such women struggling along, day by day, in increasing misery. There are other thousands who have found a complete cure of their disease in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stops debilitating drains, cures irregularity, backache, indigestion and ulceration, nourishes the nerves, and gives vitality and vigor. It makes weak women strong, and sick women well. It contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

For a number of years I suffered with female troubles, and was treated by Mrs. Agnes McGovern, of 1212 Park St., New York. I tried various remedies, but none seemed to do me any permanent good. The doctor said it was the worst case of internal trouble they ever had. I decided to write to you for help. I received a very encouraging reply, and completed treatment at once. I had not used your Favorite Prescription a week before I began to feel better, and as I continued, my health gradually improved. It is marvelous, every day.

A woman will come down the street clasping a handful of the back part of her skirt, when, if she noticed a man watching down the public highway clutching a handful of the bosom of his pants in the same manner, she would say he was insane, or had just sadly and pathetically arisen from a set down on a cactus.—Ex.

In talking to a man recently about corn, he seemed to be afraid of frost. The early planted corn this year came up and went to growing and has been growing right along and is now out of the way of frost. I told him I was not as much afraid of frost as some people. He said he was afraid of frost. I asked him how many times he had suffered from frost in the thirty years he had been farming. He could not recall a single year when he had thus suffered. It is always well to fear frost about the first of May when planting time approaches. If we delay planting until June, we may expect frost to injure the corn. Frost will reduce a corn crop if planting is late, but as a rule most of the corn is ready for frost when it comes.—Homestead.

Winslow Tribune: Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Siman drove to Wayne last Thursday. They transacted their business and were about ready to return, Mr. Siman was holding the team in front of the court house waiting for his wife and in some way the buckle on the line slipped through one of the rings on one of the horses harness and when it was pulled at it pulled the girth and caused the horse to kick. There was a couple of circles made about the street and then the team took cross lots and just before they ran into a tree Mr. Siman made his escape from the vehicle. The horses broke loose from the buggy with doing but little damage to harness or rig. Mr. Siman was a little the worse for the wear, having his skin skinned and a little crippled or stiffened up otherwise.

Homestead: As a rule there is not much wrong with the average boy. A goodly portion of soap and water applied before meals will be very good medicine for young America these days. The democrats claim the exclusive privilege of worshipping Abraham Lincoln during this campaign but they are very phobic of that eminent statesman's quotations. For instance here is one that has not yet been noticed in a fusional exchange and which undoubtedly came from the depths of the great man's heart: "He who dissuades one man from volunteering or induces one to desert, weakens the cause as much as he who kills an American soldier in battle. Must I shoot a simple minded soldier boy while I must not touch a hair of the wily agitator who induces him to desert? This is none the less injurious when effected by getting father or mother or friend into a public meeting and there working upon feelings till he is persuaded to write the soldier boy that he is fighting a bad cause, for wicked administration of a contemptible government. I think that, in such a case, to silence the agitator and save the boy is not only constitutional, but withal a great mercy."

Robinson Unworthy of Populist Support.

The following exhortation of Congressman John S. Robinson, member of the political trust at Madison, from the editor of the Creighton News, the populist organ of Knox county, shows one populist editor at least to be honest in his advocacy of reform. The News says: "The sentiment is that John S. Robinson will be defeated this fall by John R. Hays of Norfolk and well he might as these are few papers in this section of the country but what believe that Robinson is unworthy of the support of any honest populist. The News has stated at the opening of the campaign that we could not conscientiously support John S. Robinson for congress and we are still of that opinion and want to see him defeated, as the News believes him unworthy of public support. Robinson said he 'didn't care a—' for the people two years ago and was only too willing to place that unworthy and unscrupulous being (Dr. Mackay) at the head of the campaign committee because he believed the unscrupulous motives of his benefactor would pull him through all right. It is time for the common people to set down on Robinson and give the fusion party to decidedly understand that such motives would not be tolerated by any party, and much less by the ideal of perfection along lines of reform. Owing to these and other reasons the News will openly denounce Robinson as unworthy of its support and do all in its power to elect John E. Hays whom we believe possesses merit worthy of the support of the News. The News has never wavered in its support of the fusion nominee in past years, but there is an end to all contemptible things that is unworthy of any honor at the hands of the people of this country or district."

MALARIA AND FEVER.

At this season of the year the atmosphere teems with malaria. The germs that cause typhoid and malarial fever are not only in the air but in the water you drink. The weak and debilitated become an easy prey to these germs, as they have not the vitality to resist them. Now is the time to fortify yourself against these diseases. Heed nature's danger signals: Tired and weak, no ambition, loss of appetite, coated tongue, headache, indigestion, constipation, unrestful sleep, and "all run down." If you have any of these symptoms, beware! Do not delay, but attend to your case at once, before malaria or fever has fastened their grip upon you. Thousands have prevented a fever by timely assistance with Dr. Kay's Renovator, thoroughly cleansing their sluggish system from germs of disease and impure matter, and avoiding large doctor bills. Quinine will not cure you nor prevent a fever. Dr. Kay's Renovator will, as it renovates the entire system, and eliminates all malarial poison. The blood is purified and every organ toned up to healthy vigorous action. If taken in large enough doses to move the bowels two or three times a day, it will prevent a fever and months of illness. Just think how much this means to you! Dr. Kay's Renovator is sold by druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price 25c and 50c, by Dr. E. J. Kay Medical Co., Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Twixt Life and Death

BY FRANK BARRETT

As soon as she was out of sight Mrs. Redmond took the letters up to her room, where her husband was sitting in a dressing gown, with a bottle of whisky and a sporting paper for refreshment. She laid the letters side by side on the table with the flap turned under a handkerchief and spread it carefully over them. Then she began to dress. Making off the handkerchief ten minutes later she found that the flap yielded to the inscription of a knife blade.

"Oh, then and read what she has been writing about," she said in a whisper to the husband who had been watching the proceeding in silence, obeying.

"Does she talk about walking in her sleep?" the woman asked.

"Oh, yes, something about it in every one of them."

Mrs. Redmond expressed her satisfaction with a nod. "No suspicion that she has been deceived?"

"No, a word."

"That will all serve as evidence on our side if there should be any question. Close the letters, carefully and seal them over to the post, when we are gone. I'm going to take her over to Dr. Shaw. She must have something to take a mixture of some kind."

She was standing beside Redmond, plaiting her hair, as he replaced the letters and closed the envelopes. He nodded without looking up.

"It will have to be done to-night for certain," she continued. "You can set the where she's in fall from. We shall be back about four. You'd better keep your eyes on her while I'm gone."

Redmond's hands trembled so violently that he had to lay down the letter he was trying to enclose.

Mrs. Redmond turned from him in silence with a contemptuous look of her head. When she looked in the glass to see if her hair was all right, she caught a glimpse of him wiping the perspiration from his forehead with a handkerchief.

"Remember," she said, going back to him, "there's no shuffling out of this. It's your only escape from the groat and the workhouse! If you're not here when the time comes I'll take the girl away and set the lawyers to work."

CHAPTER VI.

When Mrs. Redmond reached Dr. Shaw's house, the physician resigned himself to the inevitable. Not a week passed without a visit from this woman upon some imaginary ailment of her own or Emma's. He listened, his eyes resting on the paper which he toyed in his long fingers, but his thoughts were chiefly occupied with Nissa. Who was she? How had she fallen into the hands of Mrs. Redmond? What was the painted woman doing with this fresh, innocent girl? What on earth were the girls' friends about to let her associate with this woman?

"He disliked Mrs. Redmond. He knew her, and wondered how anyone could fail to see her devilishness through the pallid mask of paint and dye and some unnumbered ailments."

"It's an ordinary bilious attack—nothing more," he said, looking up, his eyes resting first on Nissa, as Mrs. Redmond concluded her account of Emma's symptoms.

"I believe it is the beginning of fever. I must see you to-morrow and see her. If it is anything serious I must send her away to her friends at once."

"I am very much occupied. However, if you insist, I will do my best to call in the course of the day."

"Oh, thanks, awfully—thanks! And now, doctor, I wish you to prescribe for this young lady." Mrs. Redmond said, laying her hand on Nissa's arm.

Dr. Shaw looked sharply at the girl, who seemed no less astonished than herself by this demand. He smiled, as Nissa's surprise gave way to uncontrolable mirth.

"There's nothing whatever to laugh at," said Mrs. Redmond. "It is not natural, and it is certainly dangerous for a young girl to walk in her sleep."

The doctor assented to this, and listened with serious attention to Mrs. Redmond's account of the affair, while Nissa sat with head bent, amused and vexed by turns. It was so ridiculous to make a fuss about such a trifle. She raised her head, and met the doctor's eyes, blushing as if she had committed a fault, and she spoke to Nissa.

"You do not look a likely subject for nervous disorders of this kind," he said, kindly.

"I am sure I have never misbehaved myself before in that way," she replied, with a laugh.

"You have never been so violently excited as you were yesterday the day before," suggested Mrs. Redmond.

Nissa admitted that this was true.

"Of course," said Dr. Shaw, "great and unusual mental excitement might account for a case of this kind, but I really see no cause for serious alarm. There is no reason to suppose that repetition of the attack, especially if the excitement abates."

"But the excitement may not abate—the attack may be repeated," insisted Mrs. Redmond.

"Then you had better have someone to sleep in the same room for a few nights," Dr. Shaw said, however, he was able to close his eyes for the fear of something happening. And you cannot expect me to get a servant in the room who is probably sleeping for some horrid, infectious complaint. Surely you can give something to prevent sleep."

"I have not detected a moment. What was he to do with this obstinate foot of a woman? It was impossible to convince her that Nissa would be better without the use of drugs. If he refused to administer anything, he was perfectly sure that she would go to the chemist and procure some potent drug, such as she often had in the habit of taking—a concoction strong enough to kill a young girl unaccustomed to the use of narcotics. The best way was to comply with the request and practice a harmless deception. With this conclusion he rose, saying that possibly a mild sedative might have a beneficial effect, and left the ladies alone a few minutes.

"If I will do you no harm to take this before going to bed," he said, putting a bottle wrapped in white paper into Nissa's hand.

That was true enough; the bottle contained nothing but warm water, with a few medicinal and disguised with red vermilion.

Mrs. Redmond went away triumphant. But she was not simple enough to believe that she had overcome the doctor's scruples. When they returned to the bedroom, and she was alone in her room, she took the bottle from her sash and in which she had put it "for safety," removed the paper carefully, and poured away the pink liquid. She refilled the bottle from one of her own. The efficacy of that mixture in producing sleep she knew.

"Dr. Shaw is responsible for whatever happens now," she said to herself, as she wrapped the bottle in the paper she had taken it from.

Upstairs, after dinner, Mrs. Redmond found her husband, with a face the color of lead, pacing the bedroom.

"A very good night," she asked in a low tone, as she took up the sashskin bag.

"He nodded in silence; and then, overcoming the difficulty of speaking, he faltered: "For heaven's sake, be quick. This is torment!"

She scanned the quaking record from head to foot, and, seeing his irresolution, thought it advisable on quitting the room to turn the key in her hand.

Downstairs she found Nissa sitting in the gloaming by the open window, and for the first time that day looking grave. Her mind seemed to have taken on the saddened tone of the trees and sky. Night was falling upon her.

Mrs. Redmond sat down in the chair opposite her, and in her lap.

"Why, how awfully solemn you look," she exclaimed.

"I've been thinking," said Nissa; and then, in a tone of interrogation, she added, "Mr. Redmond has not come home?"

"No, surely he has nothing to do with your gravity."

"Yes, it was. I want to see him. I have something to say."

"Mrs. Redmond laughed.

"Of course you have, my dear; so have I, he's perfectly aware of that, and keeps out of our way in consequence."

"But I want to apologize to him," said Nissa, quietly.

"Apologize!" exclaimed Mrs. Redmond, with superabundant indignation. "I never apologized to anyone in all my life!"

"But when you go to acknowledge yourself in the wrong?"

"I never did have to acknowledge myself in the wrong, my dear."

"How nice!" said Nissa, naively, with a sigh. "I'm always doing wrong, an finding out just when it's too late to be ashamed. I have wronged him. Oh, you don't know what dreadful things I thought he might be guilty of doing—the most horrible wickedness."

"And pray what reason have you to change your opinion?"

"Why, surely a man who is afraid to face a school girl cannot be capable of such desperate designs?"

Mrs. Redmond made no response, but set her lips, and, not saying a word, the girl who had fallen into a swoon.

Then she pressed the fastening of her bag. It opened with a snap that aroused Nissa from her meditations.

"My dear, we were both going to sleep, I do believe," said Mrs. Redmond. "Get a glass. Here's the mixture Dr. Shaw told you to take."

It had grown so dark that they had to light the lamp to find a clean glass. Mrs. Redmond poured out the drug, Nissa, holding the glass, laughing and protesting. "What's the matter with you, Nissa, with a wry face lifted the glass to her lips and drained off the syrup."

"But it's too early to go to bed yet," she said, setting down the empty glass.

"Oh, yes. We will sit down and have a good long chat."

They sat down, but soon Nissa found her friend's light gossip unaccountably drawn down great upon her soles. Mrs. Redmond watched her keenly, and chattered on until the girl's lips dropped.

"You had better go up to your room, dear."

Nissa roused herself with an effort and in a state of stupor submitted to be guided upstairs. When they were in the dining room she set down on the bed, and, with a last effort of consciousness, threw her arms about her friend's neck and kissed her. Mrs. Redmond did not consider it necessary to return the kisses for Nissa was already asleep and the next moment slipped sidelong heavily upon the bed. She stood over her in the dim light, and set down on the bed, and raised the sleeping girl's arm and let it drop. It fell inert. She shook her. Nissa made no sign of consciousness.

Mrs. Redmond went downstairs and unlocked the door of her room. Her husband stood against the window—his figure just visible in silhouette against the gray light.

Mrs. Redmond lit a candle.

"Come on!" she said, beckoning him from the door.

He followed her automatically up the stairs.

CHAPTER VII.

Nissa lay where she had sunk, her cheek pressing the pillow, her head throbbing backward toward the wall. She breathed, faintly, as Mrs. Redmond brought the light close to her eyes; the light slightly closed her eyes, the hand, with the fringe of the turned back, under the long, curved fringe of the lashes, but they made no movement.

"Come on! Do your work!" said Mrs. Redmond.

Her husband drew back to the door, looking back, however, he was able to close his eyes for the fear of something happening. And you cannot expect me to get a servant in the room who is probably sleeping for some horrid, infectious complaint. Surely you can give something to prevent sleep."

"I have not detected a moment. What was he to do with this obstinate foot of a woman? It was impossible to convince her that Nissa would be better without the use of drugs. That was true enough; the bottle contained nothing but warm water, with a few medicinal and disguised with red vermilion.

Mrs. Redmond went away triumphant. But she was not simple enough to believe that she had overcome the doctor's scruples. When they returned to the bedroom, and she was alone in her room, she took the bottle from her sash and in

BRYAN ALTERS ISSUES

CHANGES "PARAMOUNT" ONE WITH EVERY CAMPAIGN.

Country Better Off Because of His Defeat Four Years Ago—His Aid to Aguinaldo's Insurgent Raffle—Porto Rico's Trade Is Growing.

Mr. Bryan has found it so easy to say often and apparently quite thoughtlessly, that in accepting—had better say accepting and conquering—the gold standard, we are subordinating ourselves to England.

On the contrary it is the very declaration of the independence of our equality with England that we hold with her in common, use the best money in her money, is as good as his, our credit is better, and the demonstration is that we are handling England gold now. Instead of our going there to borrow it she comes to us to borrow it.

As to this recent and advance in our position which Mr. Bryan opposed and prophesied downfall for, and all his asserted calamities and ruin, he has no faculty that is not clouded to tell him what has happened. He was mistaken in his representation of the issues on which he made the presentation raised four years ago. The country is immensely better off because he was defeated. He probably knows that that is the opinion of the vast majority of his fellow citizens, though he claims that he is certain of the election, thinking he has a new toy to rattle that will please the population.

He seems also, in his declaration of the silver question, and we welcome his evasions on this thing—he was not worn out, but his countrymen, friends and foes, were tired out—when there fell upon him an inertia that could not be overcome and he escaped from the silver question at the beginning of "the second battle." He dodged it, and it is well to turn that which has been abandoned over to the cranks and the fanatics who had the insanity of insomniacs as adherents and crusaders for the impracticable. Mr. Bryan fails to see and reason over the fact that the silver standard of money is and has long been a sign of the poverty of the people who have it. A secondary place belongs to them among nations, measured by every standard that gives an account of potentiality and international responsibilities. More than all, the payment of labor in silver coins the impoverishment of the laborer. Where labor is paid in gold, it is a sign that his elevated and honorable in the broadest sense of honor, and that the wages are so considerably that he conveniently be counted in gold.

Mr. Bryan has been an anxious student of current events, and through his protracted canvassing candor has acquired the habit of watching the turn of events. He has been keen to see every sign of the times, as in a sweltering city one watches the weather reports, and the necessity of a new thing to give him even a shadowy chance of success in the second Presidential campaign with McKinley has been a live force on his brain. His first thought no doubt was that the "trust question" was the very thing, and he has sounded the trumpet over that for years, but his music was rather sensational than convincing.

Whatever may be the strength or weakness of the Democrats in their political organizations or as individuals they have not caught the confidence of the people's reformers. They are not executive in remedying abuses. They displayed during the Cleveland administration, that they had been outgrown by the country. They were small and the country great.

They did not appreciate the relation of the figures that tell the population and the wealth and power of the American people, and followed their leaders, dwelling upon extravagance without a consciousness of the magnitude of the resources or the necessities of under-standing the demands of the growth of the country. The United States has become too big, too prosperous, too glorious for the happiness of the Democracy who have not regenerated. They have statesmen fall enough to look over the business of our splendor. They are not business men of the caliber to attend to anything but business. The claimer that trusts are progeny of protection is advocated by European statesmen. The Democrats are as much a trust organization as others, and nothing but ever been found in Republicanism as obviously improved in Republican silver and free trade.

There was nothing left for Mr. Bryan to do but to find or create another issue. Wars are always influential in politics. In our country they have made many Presidents. Mr. Bryan needed to get something out of the Spanish-Philippine war on which he could raise an issue. The demand was supplied from his overwrought imagination, with imperialism, and on this Mr. Bryan, in his ratiocination speech, placed the success or failure of the campaign for himself and party. He located, formulated, and emphasized it, so that there could be no mistake. He played it like a gambler and played it on the war in the Philippines, risking the fortunes of his party and his own on the proposition that Aguinaldo was a pure patriot at the head of a legitimate government, and that though he had been our ally in war, he had been scorned after the victory he had helped to win. The issue of our Presidential contest has, by the irrevocable act of Mr. Bryan, become very largely the official character of Aguinaldo and the nature and administration of his personal government.

Mr. Bryan's Indianapolis pronouncement and promise of extra session of Congress in brandishing a torch, kindle wars, and offers a premium for the daily assaults in the Philippines upon American soldiers who are, by Mr. Bryan's fatal necessities of futile policy, presented as the instruments of a ruthless despotism and that we are warring in the Philippines to change the way of our republicanism and character of our government and make it imperialistic. Bryan's extra session, I believe, promises, if the November election approves it, more war and anarchy after Mr. Bryan's election, and guerrilla warfare until that time. The session to be held by Mr. Bryan would be an "open door" not to commerce in the Orient but to European intervention in the Philippines. It seems a surprise that Mr. Bryan should have risked his case on a state of facts in the Philippines and did not know what it was. He has read Pettigrew's Senatorial Interjections of irrelevancy into the Record, and has accepted the sinister compilation as a veritable history.

Mr. Bryan has broken himself by that blunder.

PORTO RICO TRADE GROWING.

In Spite of the Walls of the Democrats the Island Is Brightening.

Commerce between the United States and Porto Rico has developed rapidly since the dew act went into effect on May 1, 1900. Imports into the United States from that island have increased 50 per cent over those of one year ago and are three times as great as the average when Porto Rico was Spanish territory, while exports to the island have increased nearly 150 per cent over one year ago, and are nearly five times as much as the average when Porto Rico was Spanish territory. During the month of July, whose figures have just been completed by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, the exports from the United States to the island were $29,720, against $20,466 in July, 1899, and $156,296 in July, 1897. Taking the entire three months in which the new act has been in operation, May, June and July, the exports to the island were $2,117,297, against $773,435 in the corresponding months of 1899, $485,270 in the corresponding months of 1897, and $393,225 in the corresponding months of '96. On the import side the figures for July, 1900, were $640,023, against $448,207 in July, 1899, $145,273 in 1897, and $254,674 in July, 1896.

It is apparent, therefore, from an examination of these figures that imports from Porto Rico in the three months' operation of the new law are fully 50 per cent in excess of those for the corresponding months of 1899, when the island was under the American flag, and the former tariff relations yet unaffected, while they are nearly three times as much as in the corresponding months of the closing years of Spanish control of the island.

The following shows the commerce between the United States and the island of Porto Rico in May, June and July of each year from 1896 to and including the year 1900, and enables a comparison of the trade of the first three months under the new law with the corresponding months of each year in the former period. No comparison is made with 1898, owing to the fact that the liabilities in existence during June, July and August of that year would make the comparison an unfair one.

Imports from Porto Rico into Porto Rico from July, United States. United States.

1896	$125,243	$38,225
1897	1,090,520	485,270
1898	1,910,250	473,453
1900	2,982,147	2,117,297

Our Trade Outstrips England. Another evidence that the export trade is more successful under protection than under low tariffs is found in a comparison of our export records with those of England. This comparison, dating from 1880 to the present time, during which period the protective system has been in operation almost constantly in the United States and the free trade system constantly in operation in England, gives an excellent opportunity of measuring the effect of the two systems upon foreign commerce. From 1880 to 1889, under protection, the domestic exports of the United States grew from $316,240,424 to $1,203,631,222, an increase of 300 per cent, while those of the United Kingdom, under continuous free trade, increased from $601,314,650 to $1,287,971,039, an increase of but 110 per cent. In manufactures alone the contrast is even more striking, since our exports of manufactures during that period increased from $40,000,000 to $393,000,000, or 750 per cent, while those of the United Kingdom only increased from $613,000,000 to $1,092,000,000, or 78 per cent. Thus our total exports in 1889 are four times as much, and our exports of manufactures eight times as much as in 1880, while the United Kingdom has only increased her total exports 100 per cent and her exports of manufactures 78 per cent. In 1880 manufactures formed but 12.71 per cent of our exports and in 1899 28.34 per cent, while in the case of the United Kingdom, manufactures in 1880 formed 92.75 per cent of her exports and in 1899 but 84.84 per cent.

Labor Steadily Employed. The prosperity of Chicago at the present time is admirably reflected in the "want advertisement" columns of the newspapers of that city. Of course a relative increase in the number of advertisements for "help wanted" means that there is a tendency for positions to seek men instead of men seeking positions—in other words, that the opportunities for employment are more abundant. By looking over the following table of "want" advertisements for Sept. 2, 1900, with Sept. 6, 1896, it will be seen what an interesting change there has been in this ratio of "help wanted" to "situations wanted." All of the advertising columns of the Chicago newspapers tell the same story. The figures are as below:

	Sept. 6, 1896.	Sept. 2, 1900.
Tribune	200	376
Help wanted (male)	123	479
Help wanted (female)	200	356

Times Herald—

Help wanted (male)	43	40
Help wanted (female)	3	8

Record—

Help wanted (male)	78	141
Help wanted (female)	44	40

Total help wanted.....500 1,090

Just so striking is the record of "situations wanted." These show a duplication, indicating that there is far less difficulty in getting places than before.

Are Not Traitors Now. "They are branded as traitors. They shall not come back." So said William Jennings Bryan at Richmond, Va., in 1896. And how he fawns and caresses David Bennett Hill and Arthur P. Gorham and other "traitors" who have returned to the fold. Not only that he encourages Senator Wellington and John Beatty to their responsible assistance in giving comfort to the Tagals. Singular, isn't it?

THE POPOCAT PARROT.

For the Farmers to Decide. By the best figures obtainable it appears that the farmers of the country paid over $800,000,000 in the shrinkage in the value of their live stock alone as a part of the price of the election of the Presidency of Grover Cleveland on a free-trade platform in 1892. Most of this loss they have made good since free trade received a knockout blow in 1896 and protection returned to its own again. If the farmers have more money and more prosperity than they want and would like to get rid of some of it, the surest way in the world is to vote for Bryan and free trade this fall. It wouldn't take long then for Bryan and free trade for live stock to become as little value as it was in the days of Cleveland. But if, on the other hand, the farmers of the country want to keep what they have and to add to it, they need to stand by the policy which gives the American market to the American people and which, by bringing work and money and prosperity to the industrial workers of the country, creates a strong home demand for the products of the farm.

The South's Political Folly. The growth of its textile industries of late years makes it necessary for the South to forget old issues and look to the future of its business interests in its politics. The most sensible businesslike politics of the South have already saved the South from severe losses which it would sustain under Democratic free silver and free-trade policies.

But the question for thinking men in the South is, Can it afford to rely on the North indefinitely to protect it against its own political folly? Isn't it about time the South exercised some political judgment itself? How long is it going to follow blindly in whatever the Democratic party dictates, irrespective of its growing business interests?—Topeka (Kan.) Capital.

How McKinley Could Lose. The Russian Diplomat Won Arthur by a Coup After a Peace Ransom. Count Muraviev's most famous "coup" was the grabbing of Lord Arthur. Concerning that bit of active diplomacy on the part of the late Russian Minister, the following story is being told: Muraviev, it is said, heard of the psychological moment in the negotiations during the Chinese crisis of two years ago of Queen Victoria's avowed determination never to sign another declaration of war. With this knowledge at command he held the key of the situation in the far East.

He knew that Great Britain would not risk a war, and therefore, he read the brave talk about the "open door" with a smile, and received Lord Salisbury's protests thereby as signifying so many pretty phrases and his veiled threats as simply bluff. In this way, says those who believe the story, lies the explanation of that sudden withdrawal of the British ships of war from Port Arthur after they had gone in with such bravado. They were sent back by an ultimatum but the Admiral showed that there was nothing at the back of the ultimatum.

In short, Muraviev's discovery of the alleged determination of the Queen never to sign another declaration of war enabled him to accomplish without a shot what Russia had secretly been striving to reach for centuries. In the language of the new diplomacy, it was the scoop of the century.

Racing Camels. Of all animals the camel would seem to be the least likely to distinguish itself at a race. Yet camel races are held regularly in the south of Algeria, where valuable prizes are offered for the encouragement of the breed of racers; and as much interest is taken in their preparation and performances as in that of race horses at London. The racing camels are the result of very careful breeding through many generations, and in size, temper and appearance they are so different from the ordinary beast of burden that they might almost be considered a different race of animals. The characteristic of the ordinary camel is its extreme slowness. Nothing on earth will ever induce it to hurry. Twenty-five dollars will buy a very fat specimen, but for a matter of racing camel, five or ten times that sum is paid. The racer, however, can be depended on for nine or ten miles an hour, kept up for sixteen or seventeen hours almost without a stop. The pace in a camel race is generally fast and furious at the beginning, when all the animals are together and seem to realize that a contest is in progress.

Bamboo in China. Bamboo is of universal use in China. The windows are delicate lattice work of bamboo, and the furniture is of selected bamboo, bent and curved and plated. The water bucket is a good job of bamboo, sawed off just below the joint and made as deep as needed above it. For a bottle a slender piece is taken and treated in the same way. Hunger is kept off by cutting the little tender shoots just as they peep from the ground and cooking them like asparagus.

Modern Way of Mending Socks. Stockings and socks can be easily repaired by means of iron and heel caps, which are being made for the purpose and are adapted to fit over the worn parts and be sewed in position.

SEA FORESTS.

Where Animals Roam About as They Do on the Land.

The sea has its vegetation as well as the land, and very wonderful it is to think of the forests of great sea weeds waving under the green waters. The weeds in the Sargasso Sea are so thick as to be dangerous to navigation.

The Microcystis pyrifera, a marine plant, attains a length of 500 to 1,500 feet, and is the largest vegetable production known. On the shores of California there are fields of this plant so dense that ships driven toward the land have been saved by it.

The Lessonia, another marine plant, is found on the coast of the Falkland Isles. Its stems, thicker than a man's leg, and from eight to ten feet in length, cling to the rocks, above high water, by means of fibers. Many branches spring from these stems, bearing long leaves, which hang down into the water. Marine plants form vast submarine forests at the southern extremity of America, and are so strong and buoyant that they frequently raise large stones from the bottom. Myriads of animals and parasitical plants inhabit these forests of the deep.

Midsummer Music.

Oh, hear the little humbler bee booming above.

His trail in the garden a ribbon of song; He drifts from the porch to the fern hollow.

Then pauses awhile on the rose-tree to rock.

He tosses and tumbles— About in the sun.

And buzzes and humbles His heart full of fun.

Then out of the garden he whirrs on his way.

To frolic and frisk with the breezes at play.

Oh, hear the gay bolshoi carol in glee, A beam on the bough of the low apple tree.

Or circling about in a dream of delight Where cherry-seeds dimple in crimson and white.

No car his heart troubles; With rapture he beams, While merrily he bubbles.

With song he he skims Across the green field and the swift-flying trees.

Whose gold-hearted lilies in peace dip and dream.

Oh, hear the gay bolshoi carol in glee, A beam on the bough of the low apple tree.

Or circling about in a dream of delight Where cherry-seeds dimple in crimson and white.

No car his heart troubles; With rapture he beams, While merrily he bubbles.

The boy was brought back to Wayne and lodged in jail. The same lad entered the house of Hank Sphr one night last week and stole some shirts, coats, etc., which he has confessed to, and as a result he will no doubt learn to mend his ways at a reform school.
