TUB TRUTHS.

A DROP of ink will color a whole glass of water. It is an inch of yeast which makes a pan of bread rise, and a single cake of soap containing unabsorbed alkali can ruin a hundred times its cost in laces and fine embroidery. After all, is it wise to take such risks with common soap? Of course you can get along without Ivory Soap. So can a wagon without axle grease—but it goes hard.

The southern states greatly reduced the majorities for Bryan at the recent election.

There will be a general cleaning out at the state house in January. Perhaps it's well that it's so.

It is presumed that Wm. V. Allen will resume the practice of law but the old firm has been somewhat shot to pieces.

The race for official appointments is now on and there is a general squabble the country over. Some will be charged with all the crimes on the calendar and many others will be disappointed.

Senator Pettigrew wants to organize a new party but one would think that after he had had three on his hands with such disastrous results he wouldn't be crazy enough to want another.

The selection of the Fourth of July as the date for holding the Kansas City convention seems to have been a boomerang. The west could not stand for this wanton trifling with the nation's natal day.

Once redeemed, and with a clean record in the management of the state's affairs, republican officials may expect Nebraska to remain in the republican column for years to come. Let it be so.

The nature of humanity in many instances is to tender assistance to the government, where there are plenty of jobs and appointments in sight. The rule is in evidence in Nebraska as the Governor and legislators elect are beset with applicants and also the friends of applicants.

Not satisfied with getting the stuffing punched out of him on election day Gov. Poynter, C. J. Rundell, et al, propose to contest the election of Dietrich on the grounds of having violated the election law. It's hard to let go of the governor's office and the Gulf railway snap. But Governor Dietrich will be the next governor just the same.

Some good and loyal people have been led to criticize President McKinley's Porto Rican policy by a misunderstanding of his position. Before we criticize so strong and honest a man as the president we ought to be very sure that we fully comprehend the situation. There are people who denounce law placing duty on Porto Rican goods equal to fifteen per cent of the Dingley schedule whom we give credit for fairness and intelligence and whom we do justice to believe do not fully understand the import of the law or the necessity of it. In the first place it must be remembered that the islanders must have a revenue to meet the expenses of their government and that they had no adequate means of raising it. The receipts of this tariff are devoted to that purpose by the terms of the law. Moreover the law is limited to two years, by which time it is hoped the Porto Ricans will be able to devise some means of raising a revenue equal to their expenses. By the terms of the law it is also provided that it shall terminate whenever they are able to do this if it should be within less than the term fixed. When ever Porto Rico can pay the running expenses of their government without the aid of this tariff it will be removed. Can any of the outlaws of the administration devise a better means of meeting the emergency? The tariff is paid by the wealthy exporters of Porto Rican products and every dollar of it goes into the treasury of the island. They have two years in which to devise some better means of raising revenue and should they fail some other revenue law will have to be devised for them by this government.—York Times.

It is to be hoped that the best interests of the republican party in Wayne county will be observed in the future for there never was a better opportunity to have it thoroughly united than now, while there is a chance of democratizing it again if two or three individuals are to dictate its destinies.

The republicans have much to be thankful for and there is no occasion for demora feeling sad. They have the privilege of enjoying four more years of good times, the same as republicans.

Gov. Dietrich goes right along making appointments every day and those receiving the plums are not only efficient in every respect to fill the positions but are deserving of them likewise.

BAD BLOOD, BAD COMPLEXION.

The two utterances of Colonel Bryan that cost him the greatest number of votes were probably his ridiculous solicitude over the fate of the Fourth of July and his notorious sentence, "Great is Tammany and Croker is its prophet." The first one is likely to have a curious and unexpected effect upon the next Fourth of July, for a number of towns in Nebraska are already planning for the biggest celebrations in their history on the next Fourth. In fact the whole country may take it into its need to do something handsome on that day, and the old Fourth may "renew its youth like the eagle."—State Journal.

The skin is the seat of an almost endless variety of diseases. They are known by various names, but are all due to the same cause, acid and other poisons in the blood that irritate and interfere with the proper action of the skin. To have a smooth, soft skin, free from all eruptions, the blood must be kept pure and healthy. The many preparations of arsenic and potash and the large number of face powders and lotions generally used in this class of diseases cover up for a short time, but cannot remove permanently the ugly blotches and the red, disfiguring pimples.

Eternal vigilance is the price of a beautiful complexion
Mr. H. T. Stode, 2704 Lucas Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., says: "My daughter was afflicted for years with a disfiguring eruption on her face which resisted all treatment. She was taken to two celebrated hospitals, but received no benefit. Many medicines were prescribed, but without result until we decided to try S. S. S. and the time the first bottle was finished the eruption began to disappear. A dozen bottles cured her completely and left her skin perfectly smooth. She is now seventeen years old, and not a sign of the embarrassing disease has ever returned."
S. S. S. is a positive, soothing cure for the worst forms of skin troubles. It is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and the only one guaranteed purely vegetable.

SSS Bad blood makes bad complexions. It purifies and invigorates the old and makes new, rich blood that nourishes the body and keeps the skin active and healthy and in proper condition to perform its part towards carrying off the impurities from the body. If you have Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis, or your skin is rough and pimply, get our book on Blood and Skin Diseases and write our physicians about your case. No charge whatever for this service.

Senatorial Struggle Now on in Nebraska.

Ron. D. E. Thompson of Lincoln, a prominent candidate for United States senator two years ago to succeed W. V. Allen, is again a candidate and a far more prominent one than ever at that time. Mr. Thompson has now, as he had then, the solid support of Lancaster county and many leading republicans over the state consider that he has gained enough and more than enough in the past two years in strength and influence to make his nomination at the coming session of the legislature an assured fact.

Two years ago the untried and untried position to Mr. Thompson, as well as to several other candidates, any one of them in a clear field formidable and acceptable, arose from the fact that the republican rank and file in the state at large considered that the nomination fairly belonged to Judge Hayward, and to him it was finally given. Now the field is an open one. Mr. Thompson is conceded to be a man of extraordinary ability, a lifelong worker in the party at all times and at all hazards and a business man of such standing and experience that he is particularly fitted to represent in the U. S. Senate, a great state like Nebraska with its multifarious and vast interests. If elected he will make no fourteen-hour speeches for he present a subject for intelligent consideration in a few words, but if it is freely predicted that in less than two years from the date of election he will be generally admitted to be one of the best representatives this or any other state ever sent to Washington.

Should Mr. Thompson be elected as one of the senators this leaves Mr. Meiklejohn in a fine position as his splendid record makes the assistant secretary of war, strong and popular with the people. Mr. Rosewater also holds an unknown number of votes and if he shall prove himself able to attract enough more from out in the state to put him in the lead in the caucus the nomination may go to the potent Omaha editor, whose general ability is beyond question. The North Platte country is a field full of candidates and intelligence and whom we do justice to believe do not fully understand the import of the law or the necessity of it. In the first place it must be remembered that the islanders must have a revenue to meet the expenses of their government and that they had no adequate means of raising it. The receipts of this tariff are devoted to that purpose by the terms of the law. Moreover the law is limited to two years, by which time it is hoped the Porto Ricans will be able to devise some means of raising a revenue equal to their expenses. By the terms of the law it is also provided that it shall terminate whenever they are able to do this if it should be within less than the term fixed. When ever Porto Rico can pay the running expenses of their government without the aid of this tariff it will be removed. Can any of the outlaws of the administration devise a better means of meeting the emergency? The tariff is paid by the wealthy exporters of Porto Rican products and every dollar of it goes into the treasury of the island. They have two years in which to devise some better means of raising revenue and should they fail some other revenue law will have to be devised for them by this government.—York Times.

The contest will be unlike that of two years ago. The scene has not shifted but the times have changed. It will be sharp, short and decisive. The people want level headed business men, not mere talkers against time to represent them at the national capital, and the sign is right that they are going to get the best the state has.—Wakefield Republican.

The Potency of Prosperity.

In 1900 as in 1896, the people of the United States have said in unmistakable terms that, of the two, they prefer "open mills" to "open mines." Experience has made them more sure than they were before that they began at the right end of the industrial line when they declared that the basis of wealth was work and the surest way the only way to bring prosperity to the country was to give employment to the American people and to make the people of this country producers as well as consumers. The Dingley law by assuring American manufacturers of the American market, opened American factories and set American laborers at work producing American goods and thereby creating American wealth. The money which had lain idle during the industrial paralysis of Free-Trade days went out once more into circulation to pay for labor and, in time, passed through the pockets of capitalists, factory employes, farmers, storekeepers, clerks, teachers, errand boys, bringing to everybody the necessities, the comforts even the luxuries of life. The American people have learned from experience during the last four years what protectionism do in the way of changing idleness into hustling activity and of transmitting poverty and hardship into plenty and prosperity. It is an experience which they were not willing to have come to an end, and, whatever reason be assigned for it, the fact is that the great body of voters who cast their ballots for McKinley and Roosevelt on Nov. 6th, voted that way because they wanted a continuance of the prosperity that came in with the Dingley law. The American voter sees nothing sordid in a full dinner pail, however Mr. Bryan may regard it.—American Economist.

Amusements of Chibamen.
Outdoor amusements for Chibamen are few and not popular. They try to carry birds on perches and throw eggs high in the air for the birds to catch, or row boats in a lazy fashion on the lagoons or rivers. They pick up crickets, fight crickets or quail, juggle balls and play games with jackstraws and snappers.

The Effect.
Mrs. Winterbloom—Did you find the snappers as intoxicating?
Jagway—Very. I didn't draw a sober breath while I was there.

Wanted—A Grandmammy.
A little 3-year-old liddle who had gone with his papa and mamma from an Eastern to a Western home, sadly missed his grandmammy, and one day his mother, who had been too busy in the new home to give usual attention to the small man, saw him make a hole in the ground and put an old digger, type of his grandmammy (the old digger), in the hole. "What are you doing, baby?" she asked. "I fought," he said, with a wailing lip and a world of pent-up feelings and homesickness in his eyes. She tried to explain, "maybe it was an old digger grandmammy grow." "I scolded."

A LIFE SAVED.
Druggist's Tandy and Straitford—ward Advice Saw the Life of a Prominent Citizen.
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 26.—(Special.)—Among the Catholic Foresters in this city, none is better known or more universally respected than Mr. J. H. Tandy, president of Holy Name Club, No. 26.

His many friends, inside the Order and outside of its ranks, were there fore much startled to learn that his life was in danger, he having Bright's disease, the most terrible and fatal disease.

Mr. Tandy, how, made a grand struggle for his life, taking prescriptions and pills and powders, until his stomach refused food. At last, his doctor, Dr. J. H. Tandy, advised Mr. Tandy to buy and try some. This he did, and to his delight he was restored to health and strength.

Mr. Tandy says that after commencing the use of Dr. J. H. Tandy's Kidney Pills, he felt better, but it took two months to effect a cure.

"I took nothing else but Dr. J. H. Tandy's Kidney Pills during that time, so I know that it was his life and health to them."

"What this wonderful remedy has done for me, I can't say, but I certainly do feel better. It is the only remedy that has done more to cure Bright's disease."

Mr. Tandy is just now receiving the congratulations of his friends, but also of the fact that it took two months to effect a cure.

FEAR "WHITE DEATH"
INDIANS ARE MORTALLY AFRAID OF FROZEN FOG.

Natural Phenomenon, Met with in Parts of Colorado, Wyoming and Montana, that Science Has Not Yet Had Opportunity of Investigating.

"Of all the natural phenomena peculiar to the Rocky Mountain region none is more strange or terrible than the mysterious storm known to the Indians as the 'white death.' Scientific men have never yet had an opportunity of investigating it, because it comes at the most unexpected times and may keep away from a certain locality for years. Well-read men who have been through it say that it is really a frozen fog. But where the fog comes from is more than anyone can say. This phenomenon occurs most frequently in the northern part of Colorado in Wyoming, and occasionally in Montana.

About two years ago a party of three women and two men were crossing North Park in a wagon in the month of February. The air was utterly cold, but dry as a bone and motionless. The sun shone with almost startling brilliancy. As the five people drove along over the crisp snow they did not experience the least cold, but really felt most comfortable, and rather enjoyed the trip. Mountain peaks fifty miles away could be seen as distinctly as the pine trees by the roadside.

"Suddenly one of the women put her hand up to her face and remarked that something had stung her. Then other members of the party did the same thing, although not a sign of an insect could be seen. All surprised greatly at this. A moment later they noticed that the distant mountains were disappearing. It was a mist in Colorado is known as 'white death.' Surely there must be some mistake. But there was no mistake, because within ten minutes a gentle wind began to blow and the air became filled with the particles of something that scintillated like diamond dust in the sunshine. Still the people drove on until they came to a cabin where a man signaled them to stop. With his head up in a bundle of numbers, he rushed out and handed the driver a piece of paper on which was written: 'Come into the house quick, or this storm will kill all of you. Don't talk outside here.'

Of course no time was lost in getting under cover and putting the horses in the stables. But they were a little late, for in less than a hour the whole party was sick with violent coughs and fever. Before the next morning one of the women died with all the symptoms of pneumonia. The others were violently sick, and it was nearly a week before they were able to get up after long sickness.

"I saw you people driving along the road long before you got to my house, and I know you didn't know what you were driving through," said the man, as soon as the surviving members of the party were able to talk. "That stuff you see in the air is small pieces of ice frozen so cold it goes clear down into your lungs without melting. If any man stayed out a few hours without his head covered he would be sure to die. One winter about eight years ago it cleared out a whole Indian tribe across the Wyoming line. They are more afraid of it than they are of rattlesnakes. That's the reason they call it the 'white death.'"—Will Sparks, in Allister.

NEW JAPANESE MINISTER.
His Wife One of the Accomplished Ladies of the Capital.

The Japanese minister at Washington is one of the most popular and best administered of the legations at the capital. His name is Mr. Takahira. The first minister from Japan visited this government only 40 years ago, and it is scarcely 30 years since the famous embassy with Mr. Iwakura at its head arrived here. This embassy had as its object the making of treaties with the United States and other civilized powers, and started out to make a tour of the world, but so impressed was Ambassador Iwakura with the advantages to be gained from a long residence in the American capital that he remained in Washington for six months. In that time he gave official dinners and a banquet for 1,000 people which rivaled in elegance anything ever seen here, and picturesque tales are still told of his princely entertaining. Diplomatic intercourse between the United States and Japan was established by Mr. Iwakura's visit, and since then it has never been interrupted.

The present Japanese minister, recently appointed, is Mr. Takahira, who served as consul general in New York in 1891 and who also represented his government as minister to China at several European capitals.

His wife is an accomplished lady. She comes of a noble family and was educated at one of the best schools for women in Japan, established and conducted after western models. She was married to Mr. Takahira in 1887, shortly after his education was finished, and since then has been with him upon all of his diplomatic missions. She is a fine looking woman, even from the occidental point of view, which differs so materially regarding the beauty of women from that of the Orient. Her complexion has the tinge and softness for which Japanese women are famous. Her eyes are large and expressive, and her mouth of glossy black hair is worn in the prevailing style, brushed back from the forehead. She dresses in exquisite taste and no woman in the diplomatic corps possesses more gorgeous jewels.

ESCAPED FROM THE BOLT.
Man Struck by Lightning Tells What His Sensations Were.

This is the story told by Peter O'Brien, stable boy for J. G. McIlvaine, of Fifty-ninth street and Elmwood avenue, who was struck by lightning.

"When the storm got so bad I went into a shed that we used to wash rigs in and sit down. Jim Freeburn, a young fellow who works around the stable, was with me. I was sitting with my left leg and shoulder and the left side of my head pressed against the wall of the barn. Freeburn was about four feet away from me. A lightning rod runs from the stable at the point where I was sitting, but I never thought of that.

"All of a sudden there was the loudest noise I have ever heard, and the most blinding light I have ever seen. It was lifted clean off my chair and thrown out into the center of the shed. I felt just as though a thousand spikes had been run into my side. Quick as thought the feeling changed into one of utter vacancy. It was as though someone had cut off my right leg and arm and scooped out the left side of my head with a shovel. My tongue seemed to have been broken into a thousand pieces and I could not move a single piece. I remember that I was afraid to open my mouth for fear the fragments would drop out.

"All these were sensations of a moment. I can remember feeling about in the endeavor to find something to hold on to and saying, 'Oh, my! Oh, my! the guttural noise deaf-mute makes.' I wanted Jim to come to me, but he is only a young fellow and I guess I look a so horrible he was afraid of me. I could hear the horses plunging and snorting and my impulse was to go to them. As I started through the door leading to the stalls I heard Jim say: 'Don't go in there, don't go in there!'

"Then I felt myself falling. I hung onto the door with all my might, but my hands slipped, slipped, slipped—"

"That's all I know about it. I feel all right now except that I am partly paralyzed in my left side and find some difficulty in talking. I wouldn't go through the experience again for any amount of money. When I heard in the English paper that I have stood beside the largest gun made when they were fired on, but I have never heard anything to compare to that thunder. When I think of it my left side tingles, my right side chills, and the cold sweat stands out on my forehead."

O'Brien was found lying almost under the hoofs of a horse that was standing stock still, fearing to tread on him. He was taken to the University Hospital, where the doctors worked over him for five hours before there was any sign of returning consciousness.

Freeburn, the boy, was not injured at all. Philadelphia North American.

GOLD AND JACKETS.

They supply most of the season's newness.

Holeros with Trimmings of Fur—Tiny Accessory that is Most Useful—Aids to the Separate Skirt—Jackets with Low Necks.

New York correspondence:

OLD and jackets are the two items of woman's dress that supply the most newness. Both have had already longer life than is accorded to most fashions, but neither wanes. Holeros have been in fashion continuously for several years, but still there are new ones and many more that include some forgotten development, so as to be counted as having a new side outside. Now that the trimmings are reasonable, the substitution of bits of handsome peltry for the trimmings used in the early fall is enough to lead the desired new look, and novelty of cut and of style finish need not be present. If chosen with good judgment the fur, too, will lend a look of richness, and that lessens still further the need of unsuitability. A thick trimmed holero is shown in today's first picture, and the outlines and finish of the jacket had no surprise. But with

WESTERN HORSES IN FAVOR.

Best bred animals of West Liked in the Hunting Field.

Horses bred in our Northwestern States are finding favor on every hunting field in the world. As a class, they have greater endurance, quicker sight and brighter intelligence for adapting themselves to new conditions than any other.

Like the human prairie livers, their will become sharpened perforce through the necessities of the conditions surrounding their early years. Rustling in youth develops character and makes muscle, and they must rustle if they would live.

A stud farm in Montana consists of a plain loghouse for the owner, a few corrals and a log building or two for sheltering imported thoroughbred horses. There is no elaborate stabling for daintily prepared food for the young hunter. He may hope for such pampering when he is older and has learned his business. At present he runs free on the open prairie, where the light, pure atmosphere strengthens his lungs, and his legs and feet grow tough and elastic on the hard rugged ground. His food, the lusciant brush grass, is almost as nourishing as hay and oats combined. So well do horses thrive on that, it is no uncommon thing to catch up a horse from grass, and after riding him seventy or eighty miles within twelve hours turn him out again to whet the worse for his journey.

Roaming from wee childhood among the rough bad lands, where they must follow their mothers over many dangerous cliffs nearly concealed by sage brush bushes, the young things early become observant-eyed natural jumpers, so that by the time they are the right age to be broken they have already attained a kind of untutored proficiency in the art of hunting.

Horses from the country in close keeping bunches which are as naturally distinct as communities of men. They keep to the creek districts, and though they often wander miles into the hills for food the place to look for any particular bunch may safely be located in the vicinity of the creek they were driven to when they were turned out. A curious butterfly exists in India. The male has the left wing yellow and the right one red; the female has these colors reversed.

The regular army of the United States is made up of twenty-five per cent of foreigners, while in the navy fifty-two per cent of the petty officers and forty-two per cent of the seamen are foreign born.

The surface area of the Chinese Empire is eight times greater than that of Great Britain. The open line of the empire extends 2,570 miles, and the land frontier 4,400 miles. The country gives the total area of China as 2,181,401 square miles.

There are now thirteen cable lines across the Atlantic in successful operation, yet the charge for sending messages remains what it has been for twenty years or more—25 cents a word for commercial messages, and 10 cents a word for press dispatches.

According to Chinese annals, the earth in consequence of the extreme wickedness of its inhabitants was destroyed by a deluge in the reign of Yao, B. C. 2357. This date nearly corresponds with that at which, according to our chronology, the Noachian deluge took place, and many have come to the conclusion that it is identical with the deluge referred to in the Hebrew Scriptures.

After years of struggle and failure women have finally learned the important secret of the tying of shoestrings so that they will stay tied. A man marvels that a woman's shoe is always untied, but he does not take into consideration the fact that the hem of her skirt continually brushes with every step the knot in the shoe string until at last it yields. A sure way of tying that will prevent all future dangling is to make the first loop the bow with the end that is under the knot, instead of the end that is over it.

Common clay or, in fact, any of the clays, may be made insoluble by the addition of bi-chromate of potash in the glue in solution before applying to the paper, and the mixture will be come insoluble after exposure to the light of the sun. To a considerable extent the glue is rendered insoluble by the admixture of the bi-chromate, but exposure to light is necessary to complete the process, after which the paper may be soaked for an indefinite period without softening the glue, even if coated with the latter substance like an enamel.

The main duties of a wife, according to a traveler in Central Africa, are the cultivation and preparation of the food of her husband and children. She has to do all the hoeing required, and this generally occupies the morning and forenoon. On the evening she has to wash and pound the children's stools into lita, which is the staple diet, and pay attention to the brewing of pombe (native beer). When the lita is cooked so little does her lord and master appreciate all this work, so little does he even care for her, that she may not share his meal, but wait patiently for what he may leave, or if he has not left enough, wait till he has finished eating before she may cook some for herself. Such a thing as women and girls eating out of the same pot as the men and boys is never known.

John Chittenden's Varied Climate

Many of the popular misconceptions about the physiological and psychological makeup of the Chinaman are to be traced to a general impression that the Chinese are a tropical people. Of course, when we deliberately set out to consider the matter we realize at once that only a small part of China lies within the tropics, and that a great part of the empire enjoys a winter at least as severe as that of New England. Those who have had reason to pay some attention to Chinese affairs have constantly in mind the fact that the climatic discipline of the Chinaman has been that of the Frenchman, the German, the Austrian, the American,

Usually there are impels for a collar. An example of these boleros appears in the second gown of the next illustration. Skirt and jacket were biseit ladies' cloth. The bolero was tucked white silk, and black velvet overlaid with gold dots, gilt cord and gilt buttons were trimmings. These tab boleros often are very richly stitched with gold and have brilliant finish. Finished in this way they lend a formal look to the dress, with separate skirt does not always suggest.

Two other illustrations of permissible use of the separate skirt are shown in this picture. In the lower one, skirt and bolero were of the same material, electric blue cashmere. The bolero was ivory white lace over white satin. Bands of silver braid appeared on the bolero, but were not echoed in the skirt, so the latter was suitable for separate use. In the gown shown at the right the skirt was sea colored cloth, and the bolero was old rose albatross, with cream lace yoke outlined with bands of the tea colored fabric. Point as this matching was, it is

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It comes upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you, you might after a night's rest, find your eyes fairly buried in the darkness, and your head in nervous agony praying for sleep.

You ought to have known that indigestion, as the first of your troubles, leads to fainting, dizziness, headache, and a bad backache send the nerves wild with affliction, and you cannot sleep.

A LIFE SAVED.

A Druggist's Timely and Straightforward Advice Saved the Life of a Chicagoan.
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 26.—(Special.)—Among the Catholic Foresters in this city, none is better known or more universally esteemed than Mr. S. P. Hish, conductor (president) of Holy Name Society, No. 28.

Hish's many friends, inside the Order and outside of its ranks, were there fore much startled to learn that his life was in danger, he having Bright's disease, that most terrible and fatal disease.

Hish, however, made a grand struggle for his life, taking prescriptions and pills and powders, until his stomach refused food. At last, his total druggist, guided by the numerous inquiries being made at his store for Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised Mr. Hish to buy and try some. This he did, and to his delight he was restored to health and strength.

Mr. Hish says that after commencing the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills he felt much better, but it took two months to effect a cure.

"I took nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills during that time, so I know that I love life and health to them."

What this wonderful remedy has done for Mr. Hish will certainly do for anyone. It is the only remedy that has never failed to cure Bright's disease.

Mr. Hish is just now receiving the congratulations of his friends, but always finds time to say a good word for the medicine that saved his life.

"I sold for 50 cents a box, all dealers."

FEAR "WHITE DEATH"

INDIANS ARE MORTALLY AFRAID OF FROZEN FOG

Natural Phenomenon, Meeting in Parts of Colorado, Wyoming and Montana, That Science Has Not Yet Had Opportunity of Investigating.

"Of all the natural phenomena peculiar to the Rocky Mountain region none is more strange or terrible than the mysterious storm known to the Indians as 'the white death.' Scientific men have never yet had an opportunity of investigating it, because it comes at the most unexpected times and may keep away from a certain locality for years. Well-meaning men who have been through it say that it is really a frozen fog. But where the fog comes from is more than anyone can say. This phenomenon occurs most frequently in the northern part of Colorado, in Wyoming, and occasionally in Montana.

"About two years ago a party of three women and two men, were crossing North Park in a wagon in the month of February. The air was bitterly cold, but dry as a bone and motionless. The sun shone with almost startling brilliancy. As the five people drove along over the crisp snow, they did not expect the least cold, but really felt most comfortable, and rather enjoyed the trip. Mountain peaks fifty miles away could be seen as distinctly as the pine trees by the roadside.

"Suddenly one of the women put her hand up to her face and remarked that something had stung her. Then other members of the party did the same thing, although not a sign of an insect could be seen. All remarked greatly at this. A moment later they noticed that the distant mountains were disappearing behind a cloud of mist. Mist in Colorado in February! Surely there must be some mistake. But there was no mistake, because within ten minutes a gentle wind began to blow and the air became filled with fine particles of something that scintillated like diamond dust in the sunlight. Still the people drove on until they came to a cabin where a man signaled them to stop. With his hand tied up in a bundle of mufflers, he pushed out and handed the driver a piece of paper on which was written: 'Come into the house, quick, or this storm will kill all of you. Don't talk outside here!'

"Of course no time was lost in getting under cover and putting the horses in the stables. But they were a little late, for in less than a hour the whole party was sick with violent colic and fever. Before the next morning one of the women died with all the symptoms of pneumonia. The others were violently ill of it, but managed to pull through after long sickness.

"I saw you people driving along the road long before you got to my house, and I know you didn't know what you were drivin' through," said the innkeeper, as the surviving members of the party were able to talk. "That stuff you seen in the air is small pieces of ice, froze so cold it goes clear down into your lungs without melting. If any man stayed out a few hours without his head covered up he would be sure to die. One winter about eight years ago it came down on about 100 Indian tribes across the Wyoming line. They were more afraid of it than they are of mosquitoes. That's the reason they call it 'the white death.'"—Will Sparks, in Alutse's.

NEW JAPANESE MINISTER.

His Wife One of the Accomplished Ladies of the Capital.

The Japanese legation at Washington is one of the most popular and best administered of the legations at the capital, yet it is one of the youngest. The first minister from Japan visited this government only 40 years ago, and it is scarcely 30 years since the famous embassy with Mr. Iwakura at its head arrived here. This embassy had as its object the making of treaties with the United States and other civilized powers, and started out to make a tour of the world, but so impressed was Ambassador Iwakura with the advantages to be gained from a long residence at the American capital that he remained in Washington for six months. In that time he gave eight official dinners and a banquet for 1,000 people which rivaled in elegance anything ever seen here, and picturesque tales are still told of his princely entertaining. Diplomatic intercourse between the United States and Japan was established by Mr. Iwakura's visit, and since then it has never been interrupted.

The present Japanese minister, recently appointed, is Mr. Takahira, who served his consular general in New York in 1891 and who also represented his government as minister to China at several European capitals.

His wife is an accomplished lady. She comes of a noble family and was educated at one of the best schools for women in Japan, established and conducted after western models. She was married to Mr. Takahira in 1887, shortly after his education was finished, and since then has been with him upon all of his diplomatic missions. She is a fine looking woman, even from the accidental point of view, which differs so materially regarding the beauty of women from that of the Orient. Her complexion has the tinge and softness for which Japanese women are famous, her eyes are large and expressive, and her wealth of glossy black hair is parted in the prevailing style, brushed back in a pretty bow. She dresses in exquisite taste and no woman in the diplomatic corps possesses more gorgeous jewels.

GOLD AND JACKETS.

THEY SUPPLY MOST OF THE SEASON'S NEWNESS.

Boleros with Trimmings of Fur—Tux Accessories that is Most Useful. Aids to the Separate Skirt—Jackets with Low Necks.

New York correspondence:
OLD and jackets are the two items of women's dress that supply the most newness. Each have had already longer life than is accorded to most fashions, but neither waxes. Boleros have been in fashion continuously for several years, but still there are new ones and many more that include some forgotten developments, as to be counted on to have a new side outside. Now that fur trimmings are seasonable, the substitution of bits of handsome animal skins for the trimmings used in the old days is enough to lend the desired new look and novelty of cut and of color or finish need not be present. If chosen with good judgment the fur, too, will lend a look of richness, and that lessens the risk of being out of fashion in the picture, and the outlines and finish of the jacket had no surprise. But with far preferable, according to current standards, to a tatty bodice in which is no feature of likeness to the skirt.

A type of jacket that has come into great favor is the low-neck sort. It shows above the slope of the jacket collar and more or less of the bodice collar arrangement, and always is dressed and becoming. Then it has the practical advantage of not crushing the inner collar. The jacket at the left in this picture was of this type, which has several modifications. This one was dark green cheviot, with revers of white cloth stiffened in gold and edged with black velvet. Revers are not white, and usually are faced with stitched velvet or cloth that contrasts with the rest. Jackets in suite are less desirable than are jaunty covers, plain, child-like, and mixed tweeds. In the case of a costume of tweed, however, a jacket may be made to match, though planned for wear with other gowns. Fur dealers have made special provision for the low-necked jacket by offering little fur pieces fitted with close, high or spreading collar. Such a yoke is worn over the jacket, or its edge may be slipped under the edge of the jacket-collar band, seeming then to be a part of the garment. Collars to match are provided. These sets are made sometimes of velvet instead of fur, and when gaily threaded with lines of narrow gold braid not only supply the needed warmth, but give transform the appearance of the jacket. Skirts for house wear are very long, making a graceful and dignified carriage matter of necessity. Importers but of skirts made full about the hips, but close-fitted hips are insisted on, all here coming below. There is a tendency to great elaboration of the house gown. Embroidery, application of lace, satin, lining, buttons in impossible places, inlaying of one material or another, cut and a thousand other devices for breaking the simplicity of surface are in favor, though simplicity of line is held in its own right. Boleros have quaint little effects, yokes showing at one side only, and tabs, one sided revers and unexpected touches of lace. The straight front effect is maintained through it all. By a very stout woman may be seen as graceful in outline as the slender woman. Lovely princess gowns have the front loose, and the whole is graced with ornately applied bands that lengthen the waist and straighten the side lines. The combination of the two is the fashion in house dresses is indicated by the three models of the concluding illustration. First comes a white broadcloth gown, the skirt's front breadth being white satin. On the foot blouse, this was applied pink velvet roses and foliage. The blouse was freely appliqued with the satin. The princess gown next was delicate gray and white, with gold embroidery trimmed it, and gold braid band. The white silk yoke and collar. Last is an open front princess gown of fair, just a pair of sleeves that may be shoulder cap or may slip any where lower, and a pair of tabs, hanging over the shoulder. They are held together by a strip of braid. Usually there are labels for a collar. An example of the next illustration. Skirt and jacket were biscuit like cloth. The bodice was tucked white silk, and black velvet embroidered with gold dots, gilt cord and gilt braid were trimmings. These tabs boleros often are very richly stitched with gold and have brilliant finish. Finished in this way, they lend a formality that the fancy waist with separate skirt does not always suggest.

Two other illustrations of permissible use of the separate skirt are shown in this picture. In the lower one skirt and bolero were of the same material, electric blue cashmere. The bodice was ivory white lace over white satin. Bands of silver braid appeared on the bolero, but were not echoed in the skirt, so the latter was suitable for separate use. In the gown shown at the right the skirt was lace colored cloth, and the bodice was old rose albatross, with cream lace yoke and lined with bands of the tea colored fabric. Faint as this matching was, it is

WESTERN HORSES IN FAVOR.

Beat Breed Animals of West Liked in the Hunting Field.

Horses bred in our Northwestern States are finding favor on every hunting field in the world. As a class, they have greater endurance, quicker sight and brighter intelligence for adapting themselves to new conditions than any other.

Like the human prairie riders, their wits become sharpened perforce through the necessities of the conditions surrounding their early years. Rustling in youth develops character and makes muscle, and they must rustle if they would live.

A stud farm in Montana consists of a plain loghouse for the owner, a few corrals and a log building or two for sheltering imported thoroughbred horses. There is no elaborate stabling for daintily prepared food for the young hunter. He may hope for such pampering when he is older and has learned his business. At present he runs free on the prairie, where the high, pure atmosphere strengthens his lungs, the alkali water enlarges his bones, and his legs and feet grow tough and elastic on the hard rugged ground. His food, the luxuriant bunch grass, is almost as nourishing as hay and oats combined. So well do horses thrive on that, it is no uncommon thing to catch up a horse from grass, and after riding him seventy or eighty miles within twelve hours turn him out again no whit the worse for his journey.

Roaming from wee childhood among the tough bad lands, where they must follow their mothers over many difficult obstacles from fallen logs to dangerous cliffs nearly concealed by sage brush bushes, the young things early become observant-eyed natural jumpers, so that by the time they are the right age to be broken they have already attained a kind of untutored proficiency in the art of hunting.

Horses from the country are closely keeping bunches, which are as jealously distinct as communities of men. They keep to the creek districts, and though they often wander miles into the hills for food the place to look for any particular bunch may safely be located in the vicinity of the creek they were bred to when they were turned out.—Rider and Driver.

The surface area of the Chinese Empire is eighteen times greater than that of Great Britain. The coast line of the empire extends 25,700 miles, and the land fronted 4,400 miles. The country gives the total area of China as 4,218,401 square miles.

There are now thirteen cable lines across the Atlantic in successful operation, yet the charge for sending messages remains very high. It has been found that twenty cents or more is a word for communication, and 10 cents a word for press dispatches.

According to Chinese annals, the earth in consequence of the extreme wickedness of its inhabitants was deluged by a deluge in the reign of Yao, B. C. 2357. This date nearly corresponds with that at which, according to our chronology, the Noachian deluge took place, and many have come to the conclusion that it is identical with the deluge referred to in the Hebrew Scriptures.

After years of struggle and failure women have finally learned the important secret of the tying of shoestrings that they will stay tied. A man marvels that a woman's shoes is always untied, but he does not take into consideration the fact that the hem of her skirt continually brushes with every step the knot in the shoe string until at last it yields. A sure way of tying that will prevent all future dangling is to make the first loop of the bow with the end that is under the knot, instead of the end that is over it.

Common glue, or, in fact, any of the gelatines, may be made insoluble by the addition of bi-chromate of potash to the glue in solution (before applying to the paper), and the mixture will become insoluble after exposure to the light of the sun. To a considerable extent the glue is rendered insoluble by the admixture of the bi-chromate, but exposure to light is necessary to complete the process, after which the paper may be soaked for an indefinite period without softening the glue, even if coated with the latter substance like an enamel.

The main duties of a wife, according to a traveler in Central Africa, are the cultivation and preparation of the food of her husband and children. She has to do all the hoeing required, and this generally occupies the morning and forenoon. On her return she has to wash and pound the chikungu seeds into ufa, which is the staple diet, and pay attention to the brewing of pombe (native beer). When the ufa is cooked so little does her lord and master appreciate all this work, so little does he even care for her, that she may not share his and not wait patiently for what he may have for it, but he will before she may cook some for herself. Such a thing as women and girls eating out of the same pot as the men and boys is never known.

John Chinaman's Varied Opinions.
Many of the popular misconceptions about the physiological and psychological makeup of the Chinamen are to be traced to a general impression that the Chinese are a tropical people. Of course, when we deliberately set out to consider the matter we realize at once that only a small part of China lies within the tropics, and that a great part of the empire enjoys a winter at least as severe as that of New England. Those who have had reason to pay some attention to Chinese affairs have constantly in mind the fact that the climatic discipline of the Chinaman has been that of the Frenchman, the German, the Austrian, the American

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick, what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer is, "Nervous prostration, nervous exhaustion." It comes upon you so quickly, that, beginning, that you are not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night, until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MEET MRS. HARTLEY.

You ought to have known that when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to know that indigestion, extra tension, womb displacements, fainting, dizzy spells, headaches, and backache send the nerves wild with fright, and you cannot sleep.

Mrs. Hartley, of 221 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill., whose portrait we publish, suffered all these agonies, and was entirely cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Her cure should be a warning to others, and her cure carry conviction to the minds of every suffering woman of the unfailing efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

With the present administration to be continued for another four years, we didn't suppose there would be any attempt to make any change in the post office here. But it seems that there are others who are desirous of being postmaster. Of course it is the privilege of anyone to aspire to any office for which they may believe themselves capable. But when that office is filled by a capable person, we would say let well enough alone. Mr. Baker our present postmaster has given complete satisfaction and as an old resident expressed himself Tuesday, he has been the best postmaster Carroll ever had. And if for no other reason, his efficiency the past three and a half years would enable him to hold over another term. But that is not the only reason, Mr. Baker is an old soldier. He has served his country well and the best office that the government could bestow upon him will be none too good for the sacrifice made for his country. There is no cause of complaint, there are no good grounds for wanting a change. The office has been open at all times. The mail has been handled with alacrity. Mr. Baker has proved himself a trustworthy official, and commands the confidence and respect of everyone. And when the postoffice is in charge of such a man it ought to remain there. The report has been quite generally circulated that Mr. Baker did not want the office any longer and intended to retire as soon as his successor could be appointed. This is not true. Mr. Baker has had no thoughts of giving up the post office unless by some "hocus pocus" Billy Bryan had been elected president. But Billy was buried very very deep and we hope to see the strife for the postoffice meet the same fate.

SCHOOL NOTES.

This is examination week in the public schools and all of the pupils are wondering how they will rank.

Mr. W. S. Gilpin, a music teacher from Lincoln attended opening exercises at the high school Wednesday morning.

The tenth grade will begin Physics next week. They are just completing Rhetoric. The eleventh grade will take up Literature instead of Physics.

The teachers report a pleasant time visiting the Sioux City schools. Many are of the opinion that just as good work in some respects can be found at home.

The attendance in the high school this year is again large but the enlarged high school room and the recitation rooms makes ample accommodations for all.

The required course of study together with the new apparatus and additional facilities for work places the Wayne high school in the front rank of Nebraska's high schools.

The literary societies give their programs on alternate Friday afternoons. These programs have been better than ordinary this year partly on account of the music we are enabled to have on our new piano.

The new courses of study have just been printed and those desiring to know what is required of their children in the various departments may find the desired information by reading one of these books.

The pupils of the two societies of the high school, assisted by some of the primary children will give an entertainment at the opera house on the evening of Dec. 7. The proceeds of the entertainment will go toward paying for the piano. Everybody should arrange to be present at that time and help out the school as well as to enjoy the excellent program which has been prepared.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Nine new students enrolled Monday and Tuesday.

There are no classes today but all classes meet tomorrow.

The literary societies are doing good work. Many of the new students have joined.

The young ladies of the Y. W. C. A. will hold a social tonight to students and ex-students.

Mr. Douglass and Mr. Woods of Emerson enrolled Monday. They spent several months here last winter.

Rev. Weldon was a visitor Friday morning. He conducted chapel after which he spoke briefly to the students.

But few students went home for Thanksgiving as they did not wish to miss any of the classes. Several had friends come to visit them and these friends will remain to visit the various classes tomorrow. Friends of students are always made welcome.
