From the Diary of a Wife. I am completely disheartened. To-night I entered the parlour suddenly and I found my husband lying on one of my lovely new sofa cushions. How impossible it is for a woman to make a home in the true sense when she is married to such an insensate man! -Detroit Journal.

Dealing with Crimes in Canada. From the Chicago Times-Herald on Jan. 12, 1901. The citizens of the Dominion of Canada have just cause to be proud of their record as law-abiding people.

Further on, there are few court trials in Canada, for another witness is brought to book. They are so a box, two boxes may cure you, but I am quite sure that ten will.

THE NERVES OF WOMEN

"I am so nervous and wretched." "I feel as if I should fly." How familiar these expressions are! Little things annoy you and make you irritable. You can't sleep, you are unfit for ordinary duties, and are subject to dizziness.

That bearing-down sensation helps to make you feel miserable. You have backache and pains low down in the side, pain in top of head, later on at the base of the brain.

Such a condition points unerringly to serious uterine trouble. If you had written to Mrs. Pinkham when you first experienced impaired vitality, you would have been spared these hours of awful suffering.

Happiness will be gone out of your life forever, my sister, unless you act promptly. Procure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. It is absolutely sure to help you. Then write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., if there is anything about your case you do not understand.

You need not be afraid to tell her the things you could not explain to the doctor—your letter is seen only by women and is absolutely confidential. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with such troubles enables her to tell you just what is best for you, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

Mrs. Valentine Tells of Happy Results Accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It is with pleasure that I add my testimony to your list, hoping it may induce others to avail themselves of the benefits of your valuable remedy."

Mrs. Valentine, 666 Ferry Avenue, Camden, N. J. P. VALENTINE, 666 Ferry Avenue, Camden, N. J. "WHY NOT?—It is my final bid as a railroad man, who is always giving the girl a pass to go somewhere."

MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD, LATE CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the eminent lawyer of Washington, D. C., is the only woman who has ever been a candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

"I have used your Peruna both for myself and my mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Bennett, now in her 88th year, and I find it an invaluable remedy for cold, catarrh, hay fever and kindred diseases; also a good tonic for feeble and old people, or those run down, and with nerves unstrung."

to these patients, I fear you have catarrh. "Madam, they will generally reply, 'Oh, no, I never had catarrh. My nose is perfectly clear, and my head is not ached. My eyes are not watering, and I do not feel any of the symptoms of catarrh. But, my dear madam, you may have catarrh all the while. Catarrh is not a disease of the nose, but of the mucous membrane of the throat, and especially of the larynx, and it is not always attended by any of the symptoms which you mention. It is a disease of the throat, and it is a disease of the throat, and it is a disease of the throat."

Occupations Open to Women. Within the last fifteen years schools have sprung up all over the country for the education of women—education both of a general and a special nature—and now a girl chooses a vocation and tries herself for it with as much care as her brother gives to the preparation for his life-work.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Pursuant to announcement by Dr. Hammond and to whose influence we are indebted for obtaining a member of the faculty of the Nebraska Experiment Station to address the farmers of Wayne county on the subject of Animal Husbandry.

The lecture came off on the afternoon of Saturday and was delivered in such an agreeable conversational manner by Dr. Peters that the friendship of the audience was spontaneous and the lecturer's words received with marked attention.

The topic treated were "Animal Diseases," - black leg in cattle, and cholera in hogs - two plagues of the husbandmen of vital importance to cure, or rather prevent.

The doctor's talk was very encouraging that the causes in these cases are now fully understood, that the germs causing them have been hunted down and a vaccine prepared that will as effectually prevent their ravages as vaccination prevents small pox.

It was a pity indeed that more were not present to hear this interesting and very valuable talk. The meeting lacked enthusiastic advertising. However an organization was effected by the election of the following officers: For President, J. H. H. Moss; for Vice-Pres., Wm. Gildersleepe; for Secretary, P. M. Corbit.

At next year's meeting there will doubtless be a large attendance when people may learn what great things the government is doing through the agency of these Experiment Stations. Experimentation is rapidly taking the place of observation in diagnosing diseases and this is the demonstrative plan, no guess work about it.

It was through experimentation that Harvey discovered the movements of the heart and consequently the circulation of the blood. It was through experimentation that that genius - Pasteur, discovered the germs of rabies and was enabled to make a cubic virus for inoculation that successfully prevents rabies and saves mankind from that torturing and horrible of all diseases.

It was through experimentation, too, that that dreaded plague, pleuro-pneumonia was discovered, and its remedy, and now is no longer feared; and now if black leg and cholera have got their quietus the husbandman is greatly encouraged to go on and raise not only stock but improved stock, the risk of death being to these greatly decreased.

Dr. Peters had the different serums and instruments on hand and showed how easily these serums could be administered, and stating that quantities of them would be sent out from the experiment station free of charge upon application of any farmer desiring to use them. Dr. Peters whole talk from first to finish was interesting and profitable to all who heard it.

The Success or Failure of a mercantile business is in the question of profit. If goods are constantly sold below cost, failure is bound to come. If prices are marked away up the people will not come more than once and trade is light. Too high or too low prices mean failure.

Just where the turning point is between too high and too low prices, is difficult to determine. In marking our stock of we have gone low instead of high when we were in doubt where the turning point was.

THURSTON ON 'THE PRESIDENT'

Speech of Nebraska's Senator in New York City on February 16th.

At the annual banquet of the American Protective Tariff League at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, February 16th, Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, responded to the toast, "The President." The banquet was a brilliant affair, typically American in all details. Mr. Thurston spoke as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am full of the best of American products [Great laughter and applause], and I can safely testify that a Tariff League dinner is as good as a Tariff League document [Laughter]. I am asked to respond to the toast, "The President of the United States." The highest and most dignified office in the world [Applause], coming to no man by heredity, depending upon no illustrious line of ancestry, it comes with the heartfelt wishes and cordial approval of the American sovereign who sits at every American fireside [Applause]. I am here tonight to speak of him who became president at the time of the nation's greatest financial and industrial depression, who is President in this glorious year of American pride, American prosperity, American progress, American power, American prestige and American triumph [Applause], and who is to be President for the four opening years of a new century, wherein we are to fashion those policies that will enable us to successfully meet a wider field of American influence than we now exercise as a world power. These are opening years of a new century, in which we are to be laid broad and deep foundations of that mighty temple in which the people of this country for a century to come are to enjoy the fruits of the greatest opportunities, a measure of the greatest justice, and the exercise of the utmost freedom and the splendor of the widest possibilities that have ever yet come to any organized people on the face of the earth. [Applause.] Destiny, Providence, Omnipotence has been good and kind to the American people. It has given us a great leader in every time of great emergency. When it became necessary to launch a thunderbolt against a rule it gave us Thomas Jefferson [Applause]; when it became necessary to successfully complete on the field of battle in order that independence might be gained, it gave us George Washington [Applause]; when it became necessary to formulate and establish a great national system of revenue and finance that would make us successful in time to come, it gave us Alexander Hamilton; when it became necessary to put the spirit of national unity into the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, it gave us John Marshall [Applause]; when it became necessary to make liberty a meaning and not an idle question, it gave us Abraham Lincoln [Applause]; when it became necessary to settle for the Union the mightiest conflict of ancient or modern times, it gave us Ulysses S. Grant [Applause]; when it became necessary to make the Protective Tariff of the United States a thing settled forever, to place upon an eternal basis our financial credit and our monetary system, and to meet the war-like epoch of the close of the nineteenth century in a masterly way it gave us the great man who is now our president, William McKinley of Ohio. [Applause.] And who is William McKinley of Ohio? Soldier, statesman, statesman of the Republic, noted by his country's commission for daring deeds on desperate fields. When Sheridan, summoned by the mighty roar of battle, rode down from Winchester during the night, the first man he saw was a young Lieutenant, "Phil" Sheridan found McKinley there at his post of duty as the Americans have found him from that day to this [Applause]. Through all the great years of his public career he has stood for everything best and wisest and noblest of the American citizen: champion, above all others, of Protection, which means American prosperity to the manufacturer and on the farm, in the forests or mountains or territories. In the preliminary campaigns he added now lustre to the American name. When by the will of his party he was first placed before the people of this country for the great office he now holds, with what dignity and manliness and Americanism he bore himself through all that heated contest and gravely and calmly met every issue with words of wisdom! He never demeaned himself by chasing the American voter hotsped across the country by special train. He waited on the porch of his own vine-clad cottage while the nation came to him. [Applause.]

Now that we have seen the execution of the people's will the country still feels secure. We know that the American interests are safe at home and abroad. We know that there will be American meaning in every fold and every star of the flag under his administration. When the time came, when the people of this country would no longer tolerate the condition of tyranny and oppression in the island of Cuba, when the time came for using the mighty responsibility for using privilege as a good neighbor for the liberties of men, William McKinley was not backward or false to the high sentiment of the American people. And yet we can well say of him that in all the heated discussion of the sentiment of the country that forced us resistibly into that conflict with a foreign power, William McKinley had the clearest head, the best judgement and the most consistent action of any man in the country. Having the greatest responsibilities, he exercised every friendly office of the United States to try and the conflict of arms. When there was no longer any other power that he could call upon to aid our neighbors in Cuba, then it was, and only then, that he exercised the mighty power to carry on the most brilliant, successful and remarkable work for humanity that the annals of history disclose. [Applause.]

There is no one who has passed criticism upon the management of this Administration in our late war with Spain, and yet history will record that in ninety days from the declaration of war a mighty army sprang from the ranks of the citizens of the country, and a victory was won that has amazed and astonished the whole civilized world. [Applause.] In all the results that have grown out of that war, how magnificently this man has stood before the world! Say what you please, this thing is true: When William McKinley became President of the United States, this country was hardly considered in a foreign part, but today such honor has come to the American arms, such respect to the American courage and American statesmanship, that the humblest craft that sails the sea under the American flag is welcomed the world over [Applause].

William McKinley has also been criticised for his administration because he took over to the United States the Philippine Islands, and yet, what else could the United States of America have done? At the close of that war when we went into negotiation with Spain and our commissioners were in Paris, it is known throughout all the length and breadth of the land that our President did not assume to annex to the United States the Philippine Islands. But there came a time in these negotiations when we either had to take the islands or turn these people back to the oppression and tyranny of Spain. [Applause.] Could we, in declared war upon a foreign power to liberate a million and a half of Spain's oppressed subjects from their thralldom in Cuba, could we have justified ourselves to the consciences of men-kind if we had placed twelve millions of people back to the same tyranny of the same despotic power [Applause].

William McKinley has been criticised because he upheld the flag of the United States in the Philippine Islands. Now stop and think. When we annexed the Philippines by a treaty ratified by the American Senate, which could never be ratified except by Republican votes, and Democratic votes, and Populist votes, the Philippine Islands became a part of the United States. [Applause.] And it is the constitutional duty of the President of the United States, imposed upon him by the solemn oath of office, to preserve law and order and safety on every foot of American soil.

He has been criticised because he has kept the armies of the United States in the Philippine Islands; he has been charged with an attempt, as president of this country, to oppose a weak people. It is not true. History will acquit us of the charge. There has never been a moment when the President or the people of the United States have sought to give to the people of the Philippine Islands anything else than the greatest measure of liberty and civil rights consistent with the maintenance of law and order and the progress of civilization. [Applause.] And, as I said the other night, and I repeat tonight, a civilization that has the support of the most enlightened nation of the earth; this nation of ours, that civilization has the right of way over barbarism, and has had it since the beginning of time. No people ought to be left to the formulation of government among themselves until they show themselves capable of administering a government that means law and order to every interest and to every man, woman and child in the country. [Applause.] And to-day let us face the world and say one thing: No American ever yet made terms with an enemy while the gun was firing on the American flag, and no American ever will. [Applause.]

We stand ready to do justice of the highest most enlightened kind to the people of the Philippine Islands, but before they ask us to tell to them what we are to do in the future, we ask them to stop shooting at the blue coated boys of the army of the United States and recognize the flag that has been the only flag that ever meant freedom and liberty to them. [Applause.] And that flag means now what it has ever meant before. How it has grown in meaning with the growth of the nation and expanded in power with the nations expansion of boundaries! Washington made it a flag of independence, Lincoln made it the flag of liberty, and McKinley has made it the flag of man's humanity to man, until to-day, on land and sea, the world round, it flutters the greatest flag of the greatest nation of the earth.

The speaker closed in prolonged applause and three cheers for Senator Thurston were given with great enthusiasm.
