This is for You.

Good morning! Have you paid your subscription this year? Perhaps you owe for last year, too; or, maybe for job work or advertising. Now, you understand, we don't need money, for we have millions—to get; but it is really an imposition on our part to let people go on carrying our money around, when we are so strong and healthy and able to bear that burden ourselves. For this reason we ask everybody who has any of our money in their possession to leave it at this office, or send it by mail, express, freight, or any old way, just so it gets here. Silver and gold are heavy, and it would be a matter of life-long regret, if anyone should get bow-legged carrying it around.—

MRS. CAROLINE ORNE

CHAPTER XI.

It was at the close of July which had appeared to Alice longer and more happily than usual, that her uncle entered the apartment where she and her aunt were sitting, with an open letter in his hand.

"Is it from home?" said his wife, who still fondly gave that appellation to her native land.

"Yes," he replied, "it is from my widow sister, Rebecca Filton."

"Good news, I hope," said Mrs. Watworth, noticing that her husband looked gray even than usual.

"The angel of death has entered her dwelling, and taken one of her daughters."

"Which one?"

"The eldest and she is gone now."

"But where is Rebecca?"

"Married, and many miles distant. She says that you will give her Alice for a year, whose presence, she thinks, will cheer her spirits, and help to restore her health."

"Alice, for a few moments flamed at the brightness of Mrs. Watworth's countenance.

"How can we spare her?" said she.

"Do we need her presence as much as Deborah does?" Mr. Watworth inquired.

"In an agent which carried with it a delicate reproach."

"I think you don't, yet her going or remaining is not a question for us to decide. Would you like to go, Alice?"

"It is not for me to leave you, I should," replied Alice, slightly coloring, for she thought of Harleigh, and the long time which must elapse before she could hope to see him again unless she came.

"The subject was now dropped, and Alice sat apparently calm, while her uncle and aunt kept up a desultory conversation. But when she was in her own room she gave way to a burst of tears produced by a strange mingling of joy and sorrow."

"Miss Alice?"

"Alice started a little, and looking round, saw Silas Watkins.

"Good morning, Silas," said she with a smile. "It is a long time since I saw you."

"I've been gone on a short fishing year. I mean to see you before I go, but I had to go away so sudden that I had no convenient chance."

"Why?"

"If you think it isn't better to much liberty, I should like to ask you a question."

"By no means."

"Well, then, should like to have you tell me if you ever gave a triplet, which was fastened to a blue ribbon you wore round your neck, to that proud Englishwoman, Mildred Daeres?"

"I never did. Why do you wish to know?"

"I know Hitty Chassey, the pretty housemaid that used to live at your uncle's, has, for a number of months past, been at Mr. Wyndham's, where Mildred Daeres made it her home, before she went to England."

"Yes."

"Well, one day she had been to see her mother. She was on her way back, and sat down on a rock close to a clump of willows. She hadn't been long before she heard voices, and peeping through the willows, she saw Mildred Daeres and Gilbert Falkland. When they had arrived right against where she sat, she saw Miss Daeres take something from her pocket and give it to Falkland. They halted a little, while Falkland examined it, and that gave her a chance to see that it was a triplet fastened to a blue ribbon, which she was very certain she had seen you wear."

"What did Mildred say?"

"She couldn't make out all that she said, she spoke so low, but she heard enough to make her think that it wasn't by any fair means she came by it. And then, again, she said she knew pretty well that you set to work to a story by it to give it away."

"It was for no good purpose you may be certain of that. Mildred Daeres is a wicked woman. If you had only seen her glitter in her eyes, as I did once, you never would have trusted her. I had all day darkened the autumn sky, and my courage ever failing me, but that look of hers made me shudder, and somehow took all my courage away, just as if a serpent had looked me in the eye, that I knew was going to spring upon me and coil round my neck the very next moment without my having any means to prevent it."

"Alice had, on one or two occasions, caught her more gleam of what Silas Watkins had designated as the evil glitter, and the emotions inspired by it were far from being pleasant, and in a slight degree you resembled those he had described."

"Farewell, Silas," said she, giving him her hand. "I thank you for your counsel, and shall remember it."

"As Alice turned into the path which led towards home, she saw the back of his hand across his eyes."

"That girl," said he, as he stood watching her till a turn in the path hid her from view, "as my wife and I have often said, comes nearer to my idea of an angel than any nation I ever saw with the birth, and I've heard Joe Looney say the same."

That evening it was decided that Alice should go to England, and immediate preparations were made for her departure.

CHAPTER XII.

Mrs. Elliston, Mr. Watworth's sister, resided in a respectable quarter of the great British metropolis. London clouds were clouded dark and the autumn sky, so that though only a little after five, the candles had been brought into the apartment where Mrs. Elliston was sitting in an uncomfortable looking, high-backed chair, some plain sewing resting on her lap.

She had been sitting thus ten or fifteen minutes when a little bustle was heard without; the door was opened by a staid serving man, and a young, bright face looked into the heavy, dark apartment. It almost seemed to Mrs. Elliston that a rush of sunshine had been let into the room.

"Alice, you remind me of Elizabeth," said she, taking the lovely girl by the hand and leading her forward into the room.

Alice, who saw in her pale, sedate countenance a resemblance to her uncle, whom she loved, longed to throw herself in her arms, but the reserve of her man-

"True, and with little or no expectation of ever regaining their liberty, while they had to remain a few days. Did you ever notice the little shop kept by Judothun, the Jew?"

"I have. I remember of going there for you once, before you went to America."

"Yes, you went to hire you a masterpiece dress. Look at this?"

"Can you see it is a piece of green glass. Can it be worth anything?"

"Yes, more than a thousand times its weight in gold," he held it in the sunshine that came into one of the windows, to bring into play its rich and vivid colors.

"It must be as you say. I never saw so magnificent a jewel."

"You must take it to the Jew, and with it, I hand him this piece of paper, on which I have written the sum I expect him to give me for it."

"There will be little danger of that. A single glance at the gem will show him that what I demand is only two-thirds its real value."

In a few minutes, the warden entered with the prisoner's morning man, and the warden, having been instructed by Falkland that he must have his coat withdrawn, and bent his steps towards the shop of Judothun, the Jew. It was in a narrow, dirty street, occupying the front portion of a mean-looking building.

As he stepped into the shop, he caught a glimpse of a young and beautiful woman, as she disappeared through an opposite door. He halted the Jew the opal, who started a little at sight of it, and eyed him rather keenly.

"Who sent you?" he asked.

"That will tell you," replied Redding, and he put the piece of paper into Judothun's hand, giving him the opal.

"It is a well-known gem, when he had read it." The gentleman spoke to me about a gem he wished to dispose of, but gave no description of it."

"My master told me he had written the price he demanded on the piece of paper you gave me."

"Without saying more, the Jew counted the money and handed it to Redding. Having secured it about his person, he lingered a minute as if he wished to say something more, but finally turning abruptly away, left the shop. He had no sooner gone than the Jew, who had deposited it and carefully examined it once more.

"It is the same I gave to Abi, as a birthday gift, three years ago, which soon afterwards she lost," said he, speaking to himself.

He then carefully enclosed it in a paper, which he put in his pocket.

STYLES FOR MY LADY.

WHAT THE NEW SPRING WRAPS ARE LIKE.

Straight Front Fashions, Now Only Firmly Established in Favor, Are Already Threatened with Modification—Velvet Is So Popular Another Season.

New York Correspondent.

PLAID and straight front fashions have become firmly established, their acceptance coming both because of their extreme stylishness and because of the comfort they afford. That would seem to be an indorsement that a long time held for a long time, but as winter chilled indications were not lacking that a successor to them was being sought, and these hints have grown more numerous. Probably the straight front is too strongly entrenched in women's favor to be overthrown now, but the opposition is significant of how rapid is the shift from one idea to another, and it means that even if this first assault is not successful, succeeding ones will be made. The first hint comes in wraps that were made princely short-waisted, and later it was disclosed that some of these wraps shifted from gowns whose wide belts suggested empire

SHEEP HERDERS A BAD SET.

They Do Not Belong to the Same Class as the Cowboys.

In the character of the man who care for the herds and flocks can be found an interesting subject for study. The cowboy, if he be the genuine article, is a man who daily does feats on the range that would win applause at a Wild West show. In his chase after the fleet, unbranded rearing he is compelled to ride at headlong speed over country that a fox hunter would consider sure death. Danger confronts him in varied form and no man can be an efficient cow-puncher who hasn't in him the spirit of recklessness. The writer once witnessed a stampede of wild cattle at midnight. A great herd was being held in a canyon of the Matanzas mountains. The night was as dark as it is possible to imagine. A great bark started the herd, and they broke out. The two riding guards on watch howled for help. They sloping cantarides were up in a twinkling. Patch seized a horse at the pocket line and mounted without saddle, stopping only to twist a loop of his riata about the pony's nose. Barely a dozen seconds had passed before the camp fire was deserted. The cowboys were plunging in the dark after the fleeing cattle, through a wild, rocky, unknown district, filled with mesquite and cactus, and up by dangerous arroyos and canyons. By noon of the succeeding day the drive was resumed. A half dozen steers had been left behind, mangled or dead in the gorges, while a few of the horses in the "wringler's" bunch in the lead were skinned and limping. But the cowboys, their clothing in rags from the thorny midnight ride, merely joked in their mutual appearance and salaced their weariness with tobacco and endless song. As a rule, the cowboy is an American. In the plateau region he may hail from anywhere, but usually comes from either California or from Texas. But all other fraternize, making issue only over the liking of the California for a saddle with a "single-barreled rig," which is a saddle with a single girth. The Texas despise anything but a double-ditched, though usually he does not tighten the second girth.

"The sheep herder has a distinctly lower social place. As a rule, he is a foreigner, the few Americans employed being in positions of unusual trust. Most of the herders appear to be Mexicans or Frenchmen. It is said that Basques are the best and most careful shepherds. They came from northern Spain, many of them especially for this employment. Their wages are not bad, being usually even higher than the pay for cowboys or farm hands, but the nervous American cannot stand the life. The everlasting 'baw' drives him mad. He cannot endure the monotony and the necessary separation from humanity, with only a dog for company, for months at a time. And the diet, mainly fat and mutton, is too simple for his luxurious palate. It is a fact that sheep herders furnish a greater number of inmates for Western insane asylums than does any other occupation. The shepherd, like the cowboy, is gradually assimilated to his surroundings, and naturally acquires much of the nature of his charges. To his credit it must be said that he is rarely unfaithful to the interests of his flock and its owner. There is nothing poetical about him, but he will risk his life for the safety of a lamb and will doggedly search all night if there be a stray. He is a much quieter fellow than the cowboy, even in his cups, when the world has been changed and the hands are in town for a little fling. He has no wild yearning for the shoot and the rifle in the firmament. He is happiest on a sunny hillside, lying at ease, where he may overlook his flock and hear the ceaseless yodeling of his lambs."

—The Ainslee's Magazine.

"A man doesn't mind being mistaken for some one else so long as it isn't a younger brother."

The Editor of "The" has explained the significance of the editor's "we." It may have a variety of meanings. For example: When you read that "we" expect our wife home to-day, "we" refers to the editor; "we are a little late with our work" indicates the whole office; "we are having a boom" the town is meant; "we received over 7,000 emigrants this year" embraces the nation; but "we have long cholera in our midst" means that the man who takes the paper and does not pay for it is very ill.—Paris (Ill.) Beacon.

Frightened Once.

"It seems funny to hear you admit you never had stage fright," said the first-nighter. "It was at the beginning of your career, of course."

"No," replied the great actor. "It was during my last Western tour. The man appeared at the stage door so suddenly and flashed his revolver so expertly the crowd nearly killed us passengers."—Standard and Times.

ON VERGE OF INSANITY.

Mr. E. A. Deacon Tells of a Case Where a Lady Was in This Serious Condition, but Was Saved.

East Randolph, N. Y., March 11, 1901.—(Special.)—Mrs. E. A. Deacon of this town is Vice-President of the Local Women's Christian Temperance Union. She is a lady of splendid capabilities, and has been a most devoted worker towards the uplifting of humanity. What Mrs. Deacon says is accepted in East Randolph without question. No one has ever doubted her truthfulness or honesty of purpose.

Mrs. Deacon says: "My attention was first called to the remarkable curative value of Dodd's Kidney Pills, through the cure of a literary lady who was a friend of mine, and who from mental overwork was on the verge of insanity. After the failure of her physician to help her, her husband was advised to have her try Dodd's Kidney Pills, which she did with gratifying results. She used five boxes before she was completely cured, but at the end of two months' treatment, she was born again, brilliant and self-possessed.

"Feeling languid and worn out myself, I thought the same remedy might be a help to me, and I am very glad to say that two boxes made a new woman of me. I feel ten years younger, am in the very best of health, and appreciate what was entirely through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I give them highest endorsement."

These cases are becoming very common in Chatteraugus County, and many ladies have had experiences similar to those of Mrs. Deacon and her friend. What Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for these suffering women they will do for anyone who gives them a fair trial. They cost 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist, if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Costly Dikes in Japan.

The dikes in Japan cost in the aggregate more money than those of the Netherlands.

He'd Been There.

"You're very kind, old man, but why in the world are you wishing me good luck for the fifth time since I told you of my engagement?"

"Because you'll need it."

Whoever is mean in his youth runs a great risk of becoming a scoundrel in ripper years; meanness leads to villainy with fatal attraction.—Chamberlain.

The lithograph of an actress is apt to be a stuck-up thing.

the under side of pleats and tucks is often removed when such attractiveness provides fitness at back and hips. While the outline of almost all dresses is simple, except about the sleeve, there is a tendency to worry a lot of detail into a dress, and all sorts of wonderful traceries and arabesques are accomplished on the surface of gowns by application of strap trimming or stitching.

Wool and three materials are put together to make one dress, and though so far the leader of the overdress is escaped, still there is a spirit of it suggested in dresses where the under skirt shows only in front at the parting of the upper skirt. There will be much of this for summer dresses, for gaudies and semi-transparent materials falling over silk that shows in front at intervals. There is to be a revival of the use of two or more shades of a single color for this style of dress.

The middle of this picture is typical of the forthcoming treatment so far as it now is indicated. It was the green organza over white tulle, the front breadth of the skirt being a darker green. There is promise of many two shade dresses in gray, too.

The new frock coat is a stunner. The one pictured here was fur trimmed, but collar and double sleeves of velvet will be the thing for spring wear. The hip seams of these garments are curved deeply to bring about the long front effect. The skirts come well below the knee and are comfortably full at the back with almost a suggestion of the double ripple that dressmakers permitted to multiply, a few seasons ago, into a clumsy pipe organ effect. Smooth cloth is the choice for these coats, and they are made in deep red, green, brown and black. Some suggestion of strap trimming is often added. The front may be double breasted and occasionally, or may blouse, with either single or double front effect. There is a tendency to snug fit and small armholes that makes only a

MUSIC IN IRELAND.

The Harper Extract and the Piper Veer Rarely Met With.

The Irish peasant is passionately fond of music. Even the untutored playing of the town fife and drum band will send him into ecstasies. He is unaccompanied, he has no lyrics or no developed melody. There is little or no instrumental capacity, vocal or instrumental, in rural Ireland. The harper was extinct as far back as the days of our grandfathers. But before the famine of 1847—that awful calamity which completely revolutionized the social life of Ireland—every countryside had its "Con the Piper" and "Thady the Fiddler." The piper to-day is very rarely met with, and only at races, fairs and markets, and as a rule he is a wandering vagrant and a most indifferent performer. The fiddler is more abundant, but like the poor piper, he is a professional, and plays badly. The fiddle is only heard now in the cabins of Ireland by blind or otherwise afflicted members of a family, and in these cases solely for the purpose of earning a livelihood. In past times the peasant who could "take a hand" at the fiddle or flute at dances and other social gatherings was by an accomplished musician.

And yet in the cabins of Ireland to-day there is an unrivaled wealth of glorious music without words. I refer to the grand old airs which have come down through the centuries from generation to generation. You will hear them when your old grandmother or the baby she is rocking softly over the babe, humming a lively lil' while she dandling the child upon her knee, or the laborer working the field beguiled the hours by whistling, or at a dance where, no instrumental music being available, the fife and reels are whistled or hummed with an extemporized lil' lal-lal.

Thus has one of our most cherished national possessions, our ancient music, been mainly preserved; and as the love of music is universal in rural Ireland—as this shows—we may perhaps look to the Fife O'Neil, or rarely musical equivalent of the Mod of the Scottish Highlands and the better known "The Redoubt of Water" to awaken again the homely strains of the bagpipes and fiddle in the cabins of Ireland.—McClelland MacDonagh in the Nineteenth Century.

THANKFUL TO MRS. PINKHAM

Letters Proving Positively that there is No Medicine for Woman's Ills Equal to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MRS. ANNIE THOMPSON

(ALL LETTERS ARE PUBLISHED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION.)

"I cannot say enough in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has done me more good than all the doctors. I have been troubled with female weakness in the worst form for about ten years. I had leucorrhoea, and was so weak that I could not do my housework."

"I also had falling of the womb and inflammation of the womb and ovaries, and at menstrual periods I suffered terribly. At times my back would ache very hard. I could not lift anything or do any heavy work; was not able to stand on my feet long at a time. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for me. I have and seven packages of Sanative Wash have made a new woman of me. The Vegetable Compound had done for her, and wanted me to try it, but I did not then think it would do me any good. After a time I concluded to try it, and I can truly say it does all that is claimed for it. Ten bottles of the Vegetable Compound had a wonderful effect on me. I have had a good deal of pain done me. Menstruations were so profuse as to leave me very weak for some time. I was also troubled with hemorrhoids, tired feeling, bearing down sensation, pain across the back and thighs. I felt as though there was a heavy weight in my stomach all the time. I have taken two bottles of the medicine, and now have better health than I have had for four years."

Gratefully yours, Mrs. ANNIE THOMPSON, South Hot Springs, Ark.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

"I was taken sick five years ago with 'The Grippe' and had a relapse and was given up by the doctor and my friends. My Change of Life began to work on me. I flowered very badly until a year ago when my lungs and lungs got so bad, I suffered terribly the blood went up in my lungs and stomach, and I vomited it up. I could not eat anything. I cannot tell what I suffered with my head. My husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before long I was able to get to my feet. I had taken my first medicine, and before long I was able to get to my feet. Mrs. Pinkham's medicine has saved my life. I cannot praise it enough."

M. A. DEKOR, Millport, N. Y.

PROFUSE PERIODS.

"I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound about 3 months ago, and cannot express the wonderful good it has done me. Menstruations were so profuse as to leave me very weak for some time. I was also troubled with hemorrhoids, tired feeling, bearing down sensation, pain across the back and thighs. I felt as though there was a heavy weight in my stomach all the time. I have taken two bottles of the medicine, and now have better health than I have had for four years."

harder makes a beautiful gown, and when trimmed with straps of embroidered white broadcloth, nothing could be more simple and elegant. Black, blue and golden shades of velvet are chosen and are trimmed with string, bands of cloth or silk, and with lace applique. Lace and velvet seem always a beautiful combination. The first gown of the next picture was an example of this treatment. Its golden brown corduroy being hand edged with crystal embroidery and trimmed with lace. Can it be possible that it has been ten days since President McKinley was inaugurated, and yet there is no Empire? Why is this? Where is Bryan, the prophet?

The investigating committees at Lincoln must have a jolly time hunting down men and messengers. But somehow or other the said committees never find anything wrong.

Governor Dietrich may be obliged to call an extra session of the legislature to settle the senatorial question. But in that event the republican party will be obliged to settle with the voters next fall.

The senatorial and representative redoubting bill recommended for passage, places Wayne county as follows: 20th district: Madison, Stanton, Wayne, 1 senator. Representative, 48th district, Wayne county, 1.

Senator Young made a gallant fight in the senate last Thursday and Friday to add an amendment to the Normal School bill, including the third congressional district instead of one of the two included in the fifth and sixth.

If the next four years prove as productive of good results as the past four, President McKinley will retire to private life exalted in the fact that he has served his country well, and that he has proven himself to be among, if not the foremost statesman of the past quarter of a century.

Governor Dietrich voted the bill appropriating $75,000 for new buildings at the Peru Normal. Another instance in which the pen is mightier than men. The Governor's act in this case practically settles the Normal School bill for should the bill be passed, which is not at all propable, it would certainly run up against the Governor's veto.

It is not impossible to find two men whose election as senators would be received with enthusiasm by the republicans of the entire state. This very desirable result can be brought about within forty-eight hours after the members of the legislature out the strings that tie them to individual candidates and set like free and reasonable human beings.—State Journal.

Judge E. Evans, of Dakota City, is likely to be one of the supreme court commissioners which that body will be called on to appoint as soon as the new law provided therefore is passed and goes into effect. No better appointment could be made than to place Judge Evans in that place. As district judge he demonstrated his fine judicial ability and he is a hard and rapid worker and will do his share in clearing the over-burdened docket if he receives the appointment, which we hope he may.—Pender Republic.

TARIFF WAR BUGABOO. Free-Traders utilizing it in order to discredit protection. The Free-Traders again take up the old story to trash the whole Dingley law. Here is the Springfield Republican, for instance, with much talk about "prohibitory tariffs," of the United States—as though we ever had such a tariff. It is through a great danger, "for which the Dingley act as a whole is responsible"—that of a general anti-American tariff war, in which Russia's retaliatory proceeding is the first step. The absurdity of this is apparent at a glance, because Russia itself has disclaimed, so far as official propriety would permit, any idea of retaliation against the United States, and has explained that the new higher duties are aimed at other countries far more directly than at American. This speaker of "a general anti-American tariff war" is one that has often been summoned by frightened free-traders, but has never yet materialized. It is easy to discover the reason why. The old world countries would have far more to lose than to gain by it. The exclusion of American products would literally be taking bread out of the mouths of their own people and depriving them of articles which we can supply on easy terms and of superior quality. European statesmen as a rule are shrewd and far seeing and have much more gumption than American free-traders credit them with. They recognize the legitimate value of protection, but they are not going to use it as a club with which to smash their own economic systems.

The Dingley law may be unpopular in some quarters, and it may fall short of perfection. Yet its many merits cannot be disputed, and a world which sees that under its operation the United States has obtained an industrial and commercial supremacy previously undreamed of is not going to share the blessed notions of the free-traders and make it a ground for declaring a tariff war upon the United States.—Troy "Times."

What Congress Has Done. The Fifty-Sixth Congress, now passed into history, has been prolific of constructive legislation. It found the country prosperous and made sure the essential basis of its prosperity. It secured the fruits of our victories in the war with Spain. It found the nation confronted with grave questions upon new possessions, and went far into the settlement of them. Its first notable act was the establishment of civil government in Porto Rico. While the tariff features of this act were severely and justly criticized, its other provisions have worked well. Then came the gold standard act, making every dollar of our currency good as gold and enabling a large part of our national debt to be refunded at the unprecedented rate of 2 percent. Later came the army reorganization act, making adequate provision for that branch of our national defense.

Meanwhile Congress provided for the government of Hawaii, and passed important legislation for Alaska. It also made needed additions to the navy, authorized many useful public improvements, and extended rural delivery of mails and other desirable activities of the several governmental departments. While some of its appropriations may have been extravagant, yet it must be remembered that in the past acts of this character most bitterly denounced at the time have been justified by subsequent events.

Of the great questions before the Fifty-Sixth Congress only two remain unsettled. Its effort to enlarge our merchant marine was formulated by men who did not command public confidence and failed. It did its best to solve the Nicaragua canal problem, and had Mr. Hay negotiated his treaty with an eye single to American interests, instead of pursuing altruistic dreams, this year would probably have seen the construction of the canal begun. But even with this question Congress did sound constructive work. The Senate's amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, even if rejected by England, are notice to all the world that the American people will have nothing but an American canal. The Fifty-Sixth Congress seems to have made but two real mistakes in general policy. One was the Porto Rico tariff. The other was the failure to provide that the "stamp" taxes tend to equalize the burden of customs duties and should have been retained and revenue reduction effected in other ways. Connected with this error was the Senate's refusal to ratify the reciprocity treaties. But these are not irretrievable mistakes and may be rectified by the coming Congress.

The laborers of the Fifty-Sixth Congress have been fittingly crowned by the provision of civil government for the Philippines and by the definition of our relations with Cuba in accordance with the historic policy of the United States, and in terms most conducive to the welfare of the Cuban people and to our national safety.—Inter-Ocean.

A Market for Labor. The man who has labor to sell must have a market. The more men with money—men denominated as capitalists—he can find who wish to employ, the better the market and higher the wages. If there were no capitalists with money to pay for labor, how could labor exist? If instead of one rich man in a hundred, we had in Nebraska one hundred men out of each thousand worth a million of dollars would the market for labor in this state be worse or better? When wage-earners outnumber capitalists a thousand to one, are not employment and good pay more easily attained? When capitalists are numerous and all demanding more labor, do wages decline or advance? What good comes from the diabolism of discontent, promulgated by the mouthworkers who teach laborers to hate employers? The laborer and the capitalist are interdependent. One cannot thrive without the other.—Conservative.

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison, the nation's twenty-third president and one of the foremost statesmen, died at his home in Indianapolis, yesterday afternoon after but a week's illness of pneumonia. The nation deeply sympathize with the stricken relatives.

Three Great Years in History. It is difficult to correctly gauge the importance of events which lie close at hand. The persons and the things which are involved are too near the eye to throw themselves into their just proportions. A decade or two will be required to get them into their true perspective. This is prominently the case with the events of the three last years of the administration which closed its last stage the 4th inst. Additional difficulties in the way of their correct appraisal are furnished by the circumstance that at the beginning of the administration the events that will give it a distinctive place in the history of the country had not risen in the prospective. The insurrection in Cuba had been dragging along for more than two years at that time, but it presented no novel feature. An insurrection in the same island had ended two decades earlier, and it had been five times as long in progress as the recent rebellion was at the time that the late administration entered power. So far as anybody could foresee it March, 1897, the insurrection which began in February, 1895, would have ended as the one did which started at the time of Isabella's expulsion in 1808, and closed in the early days of the rule of her son Alfonso in 1878.

Yet the Cuban insurrection, a year after the late administration came into power, began to affect the history of the United States, and soon after it touched the current of universal history. So far as anybody in the United States could foresee, the regime which began on March 4, 1897, was to concern itself chiefly with the finance question and the tariff. The former was the dominant issue in the campaign in which the president was chosen. No other question received much attention in that canvass. Both parties in their platforms had said sympathetic words for the Cubans, but neither supposed that the Cubans or their cause would receive any more attention from the country than had been accorded to them in the previous two years, or than had been given to them in the ten years from the latter days of the administration of Johnson to the early part of that of Hayes. It was a repetition of the election of 1880, when nobody in the North, at least, in the campaign of that year supposed that war was anywhere among the possibilities of the near future for the United States.

When the crisis came a year after the administration's life began, however, events followed one another with striking rapidity. For the first time since 1812-15 the United States found itself at war with a European nation. Not only did the United States in these three years wage a great foreign war, but it has gone a long way toward meeting the political and social problems which the war precipitated. Reconstruction followed destruction, and it has proceeded to lengths which makes the work of the past two years in congress memorable for its importance. A territorial government has been provided for Hawaii which was annexed during the Spanish war although not one of the possessions of Spain. A governmental system a little less advanced than that of Hawaii has been provided for Porto Rico. A provisional system still more rudimentary has been adopted for the Philippines, which has displaced the military regime, and established an elementary and temporary civil authority. The relations which will subsist between the United States and Cuba have been formulated. A military system calculated to meet the demands of enlarged domain and world-influence has been provided. A new career has been marked out for the United States by recent events. The country occupies a much larger place in the family of nations than it filled at the beginning of 1898. Its old attitude of isolation has ended. A great deal of very important history has been made here since the United States Minister obtained his passports in April, 1898, and departed from Madrid. The events of the past three years are undoubtedly destined to affect the current of America's life through all coming time.—Globe Democrat.

The First Step. To baby's health must be taken before baby's birth. The child can have no more health than the mother gives it. A healthy mother, strong of body and cheerful of mind, will endow the child with the best of her own physical and mental health. Many a wife who had dreaded motherhood because of her own physical weakness and her own experiences of prenatal misery of mind and body has found a new era opened to her with the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives physical strength, soothes the nerves, and induces refreshing sleep. It gives vigor and elasticity to the system, and it is practically without pain or suffering. It enables the mother to provide a plentiful supply of healthful nourishment for the healthy child. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. All correspondence strictly private and strictly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Omaha Markets. South Omaha, Neb., Mar. 13, 1901. Cattle receipts have been more liberal in the past week both here and in Chicago, consequently prices are a shade lower than this time last week. We had 1500 cattle on sale yesterday and market was fully ten lower. We have about 3700 today and market is quoted steady and this in the face of a blizzard which will likely stop receipts for the balance of the week. We believe prices will be better for the balance of the week on all grades as think receipts will be lighter. Quotations are not materially different from last week except on the commoner stuff which may be called 10 to 15c lower.

The hog market is a big dime higher than last week. The range today is from $5.40 to $5.50 bulk from $5.45 to $5.47. Buyers all appeared to want the hogs and the market closed strong. Provision market is better and it looks like the tendency was for better hog prices right along. We have liberal receipts of sheep for the week and market is in excellent shape. Receipts have been lighter in Chicago and other outside points and that has added strength to the market here and prices can be quoted about 10c higher all around.

REJECT AMENDMENT

Britain Refuses to Accept Our Version of Hay-Panama Treaty.

Washington, Feb. 28.—The answer of the British government to the amendment to the Hay-Panama treaty made by the senate was received Monday.

The British answer is dignified, but a complete rejection of the amendment, and it leaves with the United States government the responsibility of further action that may be deemed expedient.

No opportunity offered Monday afternoon for a conference between the president and Secretary Hay respecting the British answer, therefore it cannot be stated what action, if any, will be taken by our government.

It is stated there is no hurry even in the event that it should be deemed to invite Great Britain to join in fresh negotiations as to an isthmian canal.

The Success or Failure

of a mercantile business is in the question of profit. If goods are constantly sold below cost, failure is bound to come. If prices are marked away up the people will not come more than once and trade is light. Too high or too low prices mean failure.

Just where the turning point is between too high and too low prices, is difficult to determine. In marking our stock of we have gone low instead of high when we were in doubt where the turning point was.

We give the Public

the benefit of the doubt and sell the stock cheaper. You can prove this by examining our stock.

NOTES FROM EXCHANGES.

WANTED: A girl to do laundry work. Inquire at this office.

Emerson Enterprise: M. T. Turner, one of the best reservation farmers, has decided to move to Wayne county.

Randolph Times: Lee Bremer accompanied his father as far as Wayne on the latter's journey to Fremont, Thursday morning. Prof. Voget came up from Wayne yesterday and assisted the local musicians in furnishing music for the play last night.

Oakland Independent: Ang Mickie of Cuming county, loaded up a car of farm stock and machinery and shipped to Wayne Saturday, where he will live in the future. John Elming and family left this week for Wayne where they take up their residence. They were one of the old pioneer families of this section and their many friends will regret to see them moving.

Homestead: The question is raised each year about the propriety of shelling off the butts and tips of seed corn ears. I believe this is an error, since each grain of corn is a perfect grain and contains a complete life-germ within itself. Each kernel produces after its kind. There is liable to be more or less variation in corn breeding. Corn breeding will lead to covering the cob well with corn.

Wisner Chronicle: Mrs. J. R. Russell, son Clarence and daughter Pearl, were down from Wayne the last of the week visiting relatives and friends in town and spent Sunday with Geo. Shirreffs and family. John Liveringhouse is one of the most enthusiastic hustlers for the Royal Highlanders. He evidently proposes to be able to give the grip and pass-word to everyone in his neighborhood, and has an excellent prospect of succeeding.

The families of Chris Harrigfeldt, Fred Ziener, August Garz, Andrew Johnson, A. B. Johnson and Gust Whittdale, numbering in all about 38 people, all from the neighborhood of Hoskins, passed through the city Tuesday morning, enroute for St. Anthony, Idaho, where quite a number of former Hoskins people have preceded them under the leadership of George Harrigfeldt, formerly county commissioner of Wayne county. They expect to engage in farming and stock raising.—Norfolk Tribune.

Wisner Tribune: Wm. Wright was up from Wayne on Tuesday. Miss Marie Brown went to Wayne on Saturday returning to her teaching Monday. Will Averill and wife of Wayne, were visiting Mr. Averill's brother, A. M., and family, last Thursday. C. D. Jones, and brother Eli, went to Omaha with stock Thursday and from there to Missouri, returning on Tuesday. They report it snowing down there when they left and mid until you couldn't rest. They say they are resatisfied with Wayne county. Mrs. W. F. Norris came up from Wayne to visit Mrs. E. R. Garney and family today.

A practical farmer in the Homestead says: "As I pass through the country conversing with this friend and that neighbor, occasionally I meet with an individual who thinks that the social and economic conditions of this country are all wrong. There is a feeling that something is out of joint and yet no one knows just what it is. It is so easy to criticize and find fault that we find many people engaged in the business because it is easy, I suppose. There is a deep rooted conviction that the income and benefits from American capital and labor are not fairly divided; that corporations are sapping the life blood of the nation; that legislators are all corrupt, and everything is going to the bow-rows. It probably has not occurred to these critics and complainers that before they lay down rules of conduct for others they should themselves show in their daily lives examples of strictest rectitude. So many people are ready to say, 'I would not do that if I were he,' and yet all they need is an opportunity and perhaps they may do worse. How we need to keep our own door yard clean in this world. If each man will endeavor to make the best American citizen, what a country this will be."

New Map of the World.

The Union Pacific Passenger Department has just issued a large wall map, a new map of the world, mounted on cloth 44x62 inches. The map shows every square mile of land and water on the globe. The ocean currents are accurately drawn, and all the steamship routes properly shown, with figures giving the exact mileage from any one given point in the world to any other. At the bottom of the large map are detail maps showing the new possessions of Uncle Sam: Philippine Islands, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, etc., as well as Cuba; also South Africa and Northwestern China, which recent military operations have made interesting. Send 25 cents for postage, and map will be forwarded on application to D. M. COLLINS, Gen. Agt., Sioux City, Iowa, or E. L. LOMAX, G. P. & T. A., Omaha, Neb.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Adlegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "I could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough faintly and spit blood, but when all other medicinal failed, three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 35 pounds." Its absolutely guaranteed to cure coughs, colds, la grippe, bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00 bottles free at E. J. Raymond's drug store.

Small Pox Scares

Seen to cause a great deal of excitement when they get started, but we have a line of goods that causes more excitement than the small pox. For instance:

Hoosier Seeders

These seeders we carry in three styles, viz: wide track, narrow track, and the Jumbo, which has on extra large hopper. These seeders are a strictly force feed with a land gauge on end of each showing no of acres you are sowing. They are accurate and reliable. We now have a full line of

the Morrison Old Line

Plow Goods

which have been tested to satisfaction and perfection. The little "Twin Brother" plow is good enough for anybody at the prices we are offering it at.

We are also agents for the best Threshing Machine built: The MINNEAPOLIS

ELI JONES & SON,

Harrows

Nobody can beat us. We also have just received a nice lot of the

which have stood the test of time. This is not a cheap buggy made of brackie materials, but is made of bone-dry, thoroughly seasoned, second growth timber, well painted and striped. Every thing we have is new, the latest the market can produce. If you are thinking of buying anything in our line it will pay you to call and get prices, as we are giving better goods for the money than any one in this section.

Teachers' Association.

An advance program of the coming North Nebraska Teachers' association which is to be held in Norfolk on March 27, 28 and 29, is being sent out by the committee, consisting of H. K. Wolfe, P. F. Paanbaker, Mamie Wallace and Lucy Williams, in which all organizations interested in the educational development of North Nebraska are invited to send delegates to the meetings. The evening entertainments are announced as follows:

The North Nebraska High School Oratorical association will occupy the first evening. The contest promises to be closer than ever before.

Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews will address the teachers and citizens of Norfolk on Thursday evening. The committee hopes to secure a lecture on liquid air with demonstrations of the wonderful properties and powers of this interesting substance.

The program for the meetings is outlined as follows, although this is subject to change when the regular program is issued: One half day will be devoted to foundational features in the child's life, such as the hereditary influences (by a physician); home life before school age; influence of the first school years; effect of the several studies on mind and character; social environment; influence of the superintendent, teacher and school board on pupil.

Another session will be devoted to reading. The school library and how to use it; professional reading of the teacher; reading in the grades; aims and methods; a course in reading for the last three years of the grammar grades; expression by the voice.

Another session will be given to arithmetic. What have we gained and what have we lost by recent changes in teaching elementary arithmetic? Does the grammar school secure satisfactory results in the fundamental operations of arithmetic? The correlation of arithmetic, algebra and geometry in the last years of the grammar grades.

At other sessions will be treated such topics as illustrative work in the grades; the place and purpose of written compositions; relation of high schools to university; construction exercises in the lower grades.

A series of round tables will be arranged so that teachers may meet with those doing similar work for informal discussion on topics of special interest.

An exhibit of school work will be arranged by Supt. O'Connor to include the strongest features of some of the best schools in northern Nebraska.

Reports show a greatly increased death rate from throat and lung troubles, due to prevalence of croup, pneumonia and gripe. We advise the use of One Minute Cough Cure in all of these difficulties. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. Children like it. L. P. Orth.

It is the boast of Senator Tillman that he is a self made man. If he could have had a little help, perhaps he might have been a little more friendly to the rest of us.

For the weakness and prostration following gripe there is nothing so prompt and effective as One Minute Cough Cure. This preparation is highly endorsed as an unfailing remedy for all throat and lung troubles and its early use prevents consumption. It was made to cure very quickly. L. P. Orth.

Chairman Jones ought to testify to the magnanimity of his republican colleagues, who have for several months refrained from making any allusion to the round oobfoobale trust.

A powerful engine cannot be run with a weak boiler, and we can't keep up the strain of an active life with a weak stomach; neither can we stop the human machine, to make repairs. If the stomach cannot digest enough food to keep the body strong, such a preparation as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure should be used. It digests what you eat and simply can't help but do you good. Orth.
