

The Contrabandist: OR One Life's Secret!

A TRUE STORY OF THE SOUTH OF FRANCE

CHAPTER VIII.—(Continued). The next day Robin came again. "Rose," he said, "I saw yesterday, going away from here, when I was coming back to my father. I think I have seen you. Do you know who it was?" "You mean, I think, Gaspard, my cousin," she said. "Here he comes."

HIS ATTITUDE. "There is good reason to believe, that the well-informed Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press speaks with knowledge and authority when he asserts that President McKinley is opposed alike to tariff revision and to the Kasson plan of reducing tariff rates by special trade treaties. The President, it is said, deprecates the opening up of the tariff question as disturbing and injurious to business interests, and the Baibok folly of slaughtering the minor concerns by removing all protective duties from foreign products competing with the products of the Steel Trust will receive no encouragement from the Administration.

FAITHFUL, WATCHFUL, ALERT. She entered her dressing room, and hastened to bathe her face and head and rearrange her hair. But she trembled from her head to foot. She concluded that she should not go to the meeting. Louis himself. He was, he paled and thinner than usual. He came forward with an exclamation of pleasure. "Helen, my dear cousin!" he cried, warmly embracing her.

SUCTION OF A FAST TRAIN. Cautions People Will Avoid the Wake of a Flying Express. There is hardly any person, young or old, who does not like to see a fast railroad train go by. There is a fascination in the rush and roar, the engine represents so much restlessness and strength, and it is all such a triumph of man's skill that it never fails to evoke wonder and admiration.

Otherwiset Employed. It is early yet for the Democratic party to begin "parading" an issue, just now that party has about all it can do to keep the more enlightened and progressive element thereof from breaking into the Republican party.—Morrow (Ill.) Republican.

He Will Not Succeed. He roared the crowd grew dim in his ears. A mist floated before his eyes. Memory plays men strange tricks in strange places; so it happened that, in the grip of the gasping, choking mob, and amidst the clatter of a holiday-making London crowd, the Captain saw a vision of the past—a vision of a sweet woman's face, patient and sad.

Art in the Proper Direction. "Agent—Don't you want an enlarged photograph of yourself?" Stout Gentleman—Enlarged! What for? "Agent—That's so. But—say—let us make you one three sizes smaller."

He said, as he reined Sultan slowly back through the resting crowd. "It's not a bit of a fly now," said the little girl with decision. "You is so kind an' happy!"

face was suggestive of something pleasant. She came on tiptoe to the bedside. "O, I am awake, Jessie," said Helen; "but I have slept a great while."

With equal positiveness it is affirmed that President McKinley has not only exerted no pressure for the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty, but, on the contrary, has been in full sympathy with the protectionist opposition to that ill-advised and mischievous instrument. According to the Press correspondent the President did not examine the French treaty before submitting it to the Senate for approval, and hence was not aware that Commission Kasson had agreed upon a draft distinctly designed to benefit certain industries by withdrawing needed protection from other industries.

They were likely to take full advantage of the opportunity. Whether or not the prospective change in the fiscal policy of the British Government will be injurious to the United States remains to be seen.—Cleveland Leader.

From the duties on wool provided for in the Dingley Tariff Law. Undoubtedly the President is in favor of reciprocal trade arrangements that shall enlarge the foreign demand for American products, but it is real and not bogus reciprocity that he favors—the reciprocity authorized by the Republican National Platform of 1900, in "what we do not ourselves produce."

There is only one logical construction to put upon his statement, and that is that Mr. Bryan will be a candidate for the Presidency unless the Democratic party will adopt a platform and name another man in harmony with his principles. The distinctive Bryan principles are free silver, anti-imperialism, and anti-imperialism. He has no personal claim upon any of the other issues already discussed. It seems wholly incredible that the Democratic party should, in 1904, reiterate the hopeless absurdities that contributed to its failure in the last election, and one of which was the prime cause of defeat in 1896.

A Good Policy to Continue. The Republican protective policy was adopted at the beginning of the Civil War, and it was maintained during all the subsequent years up to 1884, when the enormous war debt was being reduced. Not only did protection serve to provide the revenue needed to meet the burden imposed by the prosecution of the Civil War, but it encouraged and built up the industries that have given this country first place in the fight for the markets of the world.

Otherwiset Employed. It is early yet for the Democratic party to begin "parading" an issue, just now that party has about all it can do to keep the more enlightened and progressive element thereof from breaking into the Republican party.—Morrow (Ill.) Republican.

He Will Not Succeed. He roared the crowd grew dim in his ears. A mist floated before his eyes. Memory plays men strange tricks in strange places; so it happened that, in the grip of the gasping, choking mob, and amidst the clatter of a holiday-making London crowd, the Captain saw a vision of the past—a vision of a sweet woman's face, patient and sad.

they are likely to take full advantage of the opportunity. Whether or not the prospective change in the fiscal policy of the British Government will be injurious to the United States remains to be seen.—Cleveland Leader.

With equal positiveness it is affirmed that President McKinley has not only exerted no pressure for the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty, but, on the contrary, has been in full sympathy with the protectionist opposition to that ill-advised and mischievous instrument. According to the Press correspondent the President did not examine the French treaty before submitting it to the Senate for approval, and hence was not aware that Commission Kasson had agreed upon a draft distinctly designed to benefit certain industries by withdrawing needed protection from other industries.

There is only one logical construction to put upon his statement, and that is that Mr. Bryan will be a candidate for the Presidency unless the Democratic party will adopt a platform and name another man in harmony with his principles. The distinctive Bryan principles are free silver, anti-imperialism, and anti-imperialism. He has no personal claim upon any of the other issues already discussed. It seems wholly incredible that the Democratic party should, in 1904, reiterate the hopeless absurdities that contributed to its failure in the last election, and one of which was the prime cause of defeat in 1896.

A Good Policy to Continue. The Republican protective policy was adopted at the beginning of the Civil War, and it was maintained during all the subsequent years up to 1884, when the enormous war debt was being reduced. Not only did protection serve to provide the revenue needed to meet the burden imposed by the prosecution of the Civil War, but it encouraged and built up the industries that have given this country first place in the fight for the markets of the world.

Otherwiset Employed. It is early yet for the Democratic party to begin "parading" an issue, just now that party has about all it can do to keep the more enlightened and progressive element thereof from breaking into the Republican party.—Morrow (Ill.) Republican.

He Will Not Succeed. He roared the crowd grew dim in his ears. A mist floated before his eyes. Memory plays men strange tricks in strange places; so it happened that, in the grip of the gasping, choking mob, and amidst the clatter of a holiday-making London crowd, the Captain saw a vision of the past—a vision of a sweet woman's face, patient and sad.

Art in the Proper Direction. "Agent—Don't you want an enlarged photograph of yourself?" Stout Gentleman—Enlarged! What for? "Agent—That's so. But—say—let us make you one three sizes smaller."

He said, as he reined Sultan slowly back through the resting crowd. "It's not a bit of a fly now," said the little girl with decision. "You is so kind an' happy!"

just a face in the crowd. SOME of these good people will be said, as he reined Sultan slowly back through the resting crowd. "It's not a bit of a fly now," said the little girl with decision. "You is so kind an' happy!"

With equal positiveness it is affirmed that President McKinley has not only exerted no pressure for the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty, but, on the contrary, has been in full sympathy with the protectionist opposition to that ill-advised and mischievous instrument. According to the Press correspondent the President did not examine the French treaty before submitting it to the Senate for approval, and hence was not aware that Commission Kasson had agreed upon a draft distinctly designed to benefit certain industries by withdrawing needed protection from other industries.

There is only one logical construction to put upon his statement, and that is that Mr. Bryan will be a candidate for the Presidency unless the Democratic party will adopt a platform and name another man in harmony with his principles. The distinctive Bryan principles are free silver, anti-imperialism, and anti-imperialism. He has no personal claim upon any of the other issues already discussed. It seems wholly incredible that the Democratic party should, in 1904, reiterate the hopeless absurdities that contributed to its failure in the last election, and one of which was the prime cause of defeat in 1896.

A Good Policy to Continue. The Republican protective policy was adopted at the beginning of the Civil War, and it was maintained during all the subsequent years up to 1884, when the enormous war debt was being reduced. Not only did protection serve to provide the revenue needed to meet the burden imposed by the prosecution of the Civil War, but it encouraged and built up the industries that have given this country first place in the fight for the markets of the world.

Otherwiset Employed. It is early yet for the Democratic party to begin "parading" an issue, just now that party has about all it can do to keep the more enlightened and progressive element thereof from breaking into the Republican party.—Morrow (Ill.) Republican.

He Will Not Succeed. He roared the crowd grew dim in his ears. A mist floated before his eyes. Memory plays men strange tricks in strange places; so it happened that, in the grip of the gasping, choking mob, and amidst the clatter of a holiday-making London crowd, the Captain saw a vision of the past—a vision of a sweet woman's face, patient and sad.

Art in the Proper Direction. "Agent—Don't you want an enlarged photograph of yourself?" Stout Gentleman—Enlarged! What for? "Agent—That's so. But—say—let us make you one three sizes smaller."

He said, as he reined Sultan slowly back through the resting crowd. "It's not a bit of a fly now," said the little girl with decision. "You is so kind an' happy!"

JUST A FACE IN THE CROWD

SOME of these good people will be said, as he reined Sultan slowly back through the resting crowd. "It's not a bit of a fly now," said the little girl with decision. "You is so kind an' happy!"

With equal positiveness it is affirmed that President McKinley has not only exerted no pressure for the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty, but, on the contrary, has been in full sympathy with the protectionist opposition to that ill-advised and mischievous instrument. According to the Press correspondent the President did not examine the French treaty before submitting it to the Senate for approval, and hence was not aware that Commission Kasson had agreed upon a draft distinctly designed to benefit certain industries by withdrawing needed protection from other industries.

There is only one logical construction to put upon his statement, and that is that Mr. Bryan will be a candidate for the Presidency unless the Democratic party will adopt a platform and name another man in harmony with his principles. The distinctive Bryan principles are free silver, anti-imperialism, and anti-imperialism. He has no personal claim upon any of the other issues already discussed. It seems wholly incredible that the Democratic party should, in 1904, reiterate the hopeless absurdities that contributed to its failure in the last election, and one of which was the prime cause of defeat in 1896.

A Good Policy to Continue. The Republican protective policy was adopted at the beginning of the Civil War, and it was maintained during all the subsequent years up to 1884, when the enormous war debt was being reduced. Not only did protection serve to provide the revenue needed to meet the burden imposed by the prosecution of the Civil War, but it encouraged and built up the industries that have given this country first place in the fight for the markets of the world.

Otherwiset Employed. It is early yet for the Democratic party to begin "parading" an issue, just now that party has about all it can do to keep the more enlightened and progressive element thereof from breaking into the Republican party.—Morrow (Ill.) Republican.

He Will Not Succeed. He roared the crowd grew dim in his ears. A mist floated before his eyes. Memory plays men strange tricks in strange places; so it happened that, in the grip of the gasping, choking mob, and amidst the clatter of a holiday-making London crowd, the Captain saw a vision of the past—a vision of a sweet woman's face, patient and sad.

Art in the Proper Direction. "Agent—Don't you want an enlarged photograph of yourself?" Stout Gentleman—Enlarged! What for? "Agent—That's so. But—say—let us make you one three sizes smaller."

