Homestead: The farmer who sells enough butter and eggs to pay running expenses of the family is to be congratulated. There are a great many who fail to do this and these are the ones who believe it cannot be done. I have in mind those who not only pay all the living expenses out of the farm produce money, but a large share of the clothing is bought with it. Let those who are doubtful about this business find out how it is done and then "Go and do likewise."

The HERALD desires to impress upon the minds of staunch and conservative republicans of Wayne county, and there are hundreds of them, that it is meat for success to place at the head of the party, men who have the success of the party at heart, men who do not wish to aid two or three individuals in carrying out some plan to use the party as a cat's paw to damage others against whom they have a grudge. If this is not done the nominees of the party will suffer and may go down to defeat.

F. M. Sween and wife left last Friday morning for a short visit in Duluth.

The HERALD understands that F. A. Dearborn, so long a resident of Wayne has decided to go to Chicago to live, where he will engage with his brother and others in the real estate business. He will keep an office here for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Dearborn gave a host of friends here who will regret that they have decided to leave Wayne but will wish them success in their new home.

There is so much news that even if it comes by telegraph we overlook some of it. Isn't it a fact that you have seen Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin advertised several times and have neglected to try it? An ounce of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is as good as a three weeks vacation. Ask any druggist or anyone who has taken it. Sold by Raymond.

The Modern Woodmen society has more experienced field men, or soliciting agents, in its service than any other fraternal benefit society in the United States. Its field working system is the creation of Ben W. A. Northrop, Head Consul, and under his direction the past two years the society has made a net gain of 211,470 benefit members, carrying $248,037,500 insurance. The increase in the number of local Woodmen camps, or lodges, during the same period has been 3,702. The record is a marvelous one and the "Old line" life company's recent offer to Mr. Northrop of a salary of $75,000 per annum to leave the Woodmen and take charge of its affairs was warranted. Mr. Northrop, however, remains with the Woodmen.

The sale of thousands of copies of a ten-cent magazine at 21 cities was a very curious happening at the time of the Chicago World's Fair. The Cosmopolitan prepared a World's Fair number contributed to by many famous writers, and so thoroughly illustrated that it surpassed even the most expensive book which had up to that time been issued. In these days the magazine was printed from two sets of plates only, and when those were worn out it was impossible, without a great loss of time, to put further editions of the press. The publishers taking advantage of this condition, raised the price of the Cosmopolitan's World's Fair number to one dollar a copy. A few sales were made toward the close of the phenomenal figure of five dollars. Undoubtedly this happening is unique in the history of magazine literature. The Cosmopolitan will endeavor to repeat its past success, with a Pan-American Exposition Number, which will be even more attractive, if possible, than its World's Fair predecessor. The most famous writers of the country have been invited to take part in the preparation of this issue. After many careful days' study of all the wonderful scenes of the Exposition more than a hundred photographs have been prepared, which, taken as a whole, give a thorough conception of the marvels of this Exposition. It is doubtful if any book selling at forty times the price of the magazine, will give any description of the fair that will approach in interest and artistic value the September Cosmopolitan. Those who visit the Fair will preserve this number as a delightful reference book in the years to come, and those who are unable to go there will secure such a comprehensive view of its main attractions as will be well worthy of preservation.

EXCHANGE NOTES.

Hartington News: Miss Marie Brown of Wayne, returned home Friday, after a pleasant visit with Mr. and Mallatt of St. James. Mr. and Mrs. Mallatt accompanied her to Hartington.

Fremont Tribune: A Wisner bank uses a half page of space in a local newspaper to bid for business. This is a new thing for a bank but, being good for other businesses, why not for a bank?

Jones Journal: Dr. F. E. Gamble of Wayne, accompanied by his father, W. O. Gamble, spent a day or two in town the latter part of last week with a view of locating here for the practice of osteopathy.

The Western Editor says: "Until newspaper men organize on a business basis they will never out an appreciable figure in the business world. Until they banish fool jealousies, banish fool prejudices and ignore fool partisan hates they will always be cutting rates, filling their columns with slush and dead ads and, trying to make attractive ads of worn-out type. Get together!"

Homestead: A friend of mine who has been pretty badly scared about the drought said, "We'll have no corn if it should rain until Christmas." A neighbor tried to buy his field of corn and offered him twenty five bushels per acre for it. He would not sell. I asked another neighbor if he would get half a crop. He said, "I would hate to think I would get no more than that. I'd have had that much if it had rained at all."

An Irishman who was out of work went on board a vessel that was in the harbor and asked the captain if he could find him work on the ship. "Well," said the captain, at the same time handing the Irishman a piece of rope, "if you can find three ends to that rope you shall have some work." The Irishman got hold of the rope and showing it to the captain, said: "That's one end your honor." Then he took hold of the other end and said: "And that's two ends your honor." Then taking hold of both ends of the rope he threw it overboard, saying: "And faith there's another end to that your honor." He was immediately engaged. —London King.

Norfolk News: Under the head of "John R. Hayes not Concerned," the Omaha Bee of yesterday retracts its statement that he had any connection with the Auditorium drawing with the following explanation: "As the statement was made by an officer of the government who was supposed to be fully cognizant of the condition of affairs it was used without question, and the name of Mr. Hayes was among those mentioned to the reporter." It goes on to say that the name of Mr. Hayes was not used in connection with the matter except as explained by the News. The officer mentioned made a deplorable mistake and should in the future exercise greater discretion in the information he conveys to the public.

Homestead: Last year when everything was cool and comfortable we were given an exhibition of liquid air and its wonderful properties. The man who lectured, and showed off the stuff told the people it was three or four hundred degrees below zero, and he proved it by boiling a kettle of it on a big chunk of ice. If he would come around this year and give an exhibition it would draw better than a circus with free red lemonade. This is the year for exploiting that kind of thing. We have all been hankering and thirsting for cold facts ever since the hot spell began. Bring on your liquid air once more and set it to boiling, and don't mind the expense. It would be a good thing to have on tap at the state fair, especially if there should chance to be a hot time in the old town at that time.

WAYNE VS. STANTON.

A pretty game of ball was played at the college grounds on Thursday afternoon by the clubs of Stanton and Wayne. In fact it was one of the best ever played here. Throughout the entire game there was not a single kick, something unusual in a game of ball, and it must have been a source of satisfaction to Umpire Harry Fisher. The Wayne battery, Sherburne and Sween were at their best and played an almost errorless game, the Stanton club being unable to find Pitcher Sherburne for enough hits to score, and it was only through a bunch of errors, on the part of the Wayne club in the ninth inning that the Stanton team scored the one run that saved them from a clean shut out, which they did not deserve, for they were a fine lot of gentlemanly fellows.

The score by inning was as follows: Stanton 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1 Wayne 0 0 0 2 0 2 1 *—7 Batteries: Wayne, Sween and Sherburne; Stanton, Blinson and Dittman.

The History of Spottless Town.
Which early in March, 1906, the public was by means of the car cards designed by Mr. J. K. Fraser, of Ward & Gow's art department, introduced to Spottless Town and its inhabitants, a new chapter had been added to the history of advertising.

The series "took" at once; never since the day of "Punch in the presence of the Passengers" did a single so take possession of the public. Digitized men and women were most numerous in elevated cars crammed with people. There was no other Spottless Town card in sight, while more enterprising people journeyed through the entire plain for the same purpose. Children and sedate matrons read the verses to each other, till, from the haughty Mayor down to the modest cook, the newly created citizens became the friends of the public. As it is usual in giving the history of a town to publish the portraits of those people who have done most to make the place prosperous or famous, we reproduce here pictures of the men and women who have been most prominently connected with the growth of Spottless Town, made directly from the water-color paintings in the Hall of Fame.

THE WORLD'S COAL

Facts and Calculations Touching Increased Price.

ASTOUNDING FIGURES

Annual Output When Considered in Bulk Gives Rise to Fears.

But 1,000 Years of Reserve Left Surely Alleviates All Anxiety—The Imagination Stagnates Under the Array of Facts Illustrated by Diagrams and Fortified by Calculations—A Train 71,000 Miles Long to Transport Our Annual Product.

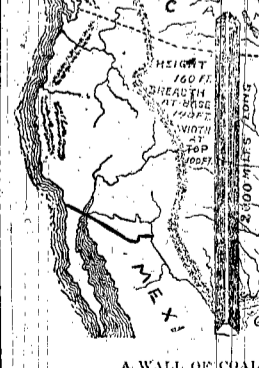

THE coal barons announce that the price of coal will advance by a fixed gradation according to a schedule agreed upon by the producers. We are also told that the coal supply will be exhausted in a few years. The first announcement, says Pennsylvania Grit, of Williamsport, is a stubborn fact which will not yield to argument; the other statement will appear less alarming if we examine it in the light of such information as we are able to get.

According to statistical reports the output of coal in the United States last year was in round numbers 250,000,000 tons. On this basis it would require 12,500,000 cars to hold 250,000,000 tons of coal, and if the cars were put into a train, making no allowance for coupling spaces, the train would be over 71,000 miles long. Such a train would practically extend three times around the globe. Multiply this yearly output by 20 and we have the jumped estimate for the output for thirty years. In this case the train would consist of 150,000,000 cars and would be 1,420,000 miles long, or long enough to reach round the world fifty-nine times. Here is another aspect of the question. Assuming that our average annual output is 250,000,000 tons, a week's output would build a pyramid by the side of which the Great Pyramid of Cheops would be departed to comparative insignificance, and every ten minutes there is raised 15,000 tons of coal. Suppose we take a gigantic pair of scales, and in one pan put one of our large new battleships weighing 14,000 tons, and in the other pan the coal mined in a single period of ten minutes. The battleship would be elevated to a position neither natural nor dignified, yet in accordance with the inexorable law of gravitation. But of the great mass of coal we produced in 1900 only 7,000,000 tons were

HAULING ONE YEAR'S OUTPUT OF AMERICAN COAL.

A WALL OF COAL, 2,000 MILES LONG.

What that means. This quantity of coal, estimated at a ton at a cubic yard, and dealing in round numbers, might make one cubic mile; that is, a block one mile high, one mile broad, and one mile thick. But this calculation is made on the basis of coal closely compacted in the strata. When coal is brought to the surface it gains about one-third in bulk. Let us suppose, therefore, that each ton of coal after being extracted from the mine occupies a space of about forty cubic feet. This is not uncommon allowance for storage. It follows, therefore, that one cubic mile of coal in the mine becomes one and a third cubic miles. A person with a large car, for instance, could haul one and a third carloads of coal in a single haul. The coal barons are not so generous. They will only haul one carload of coal in a single haul. This is not uncommon allowance for storage. It follows, therefore, that one cubic mile of coal in the mine becomes one and a third cubic miles. other words, the coal that has been mined in the United States within thirty years would build a Chinese wall of the dimensions given, across the United States from the lowest point in Texas to the northern boundary of North Dakota, and extending 200 miles into British territory.

Or, 1.43 cubic miles of material would construct an enormous breakerway, running out to sea twenty-two miles, one mile wide and 220 feet high. In order to get a clearer conception of what an enormous bulk is represented by the output of coal for one year, let us undertake to move it. For convenience we will assume that a coal car say, the coal still in the bowels of the earth would make a cube of 100 miles dimensions. As a matter of fact, if the coal supply is 500,000,000,000 tons, the cube would be very close to 173 miles in height, breadth and thickness, and the thirty years' output would be a cube of about 1.73 miles. But for convenience the seven numbers are given, though they are far below the actual figures. The proportions, however, are given with sufficient accuracy.

A London paper has dug up a proclamation issued 600 years ago by Edward I, which indicates that coal was not appreciated so much by the people of the fourteenth century as it is now. The proclamation is referred to in 1652 as follows:

"Whereas by the year of our Lord God 1306, King Edward the I by proclamation prohibited the burning of sea coal in London and the suburbs to avoid the suffocating smoke and savor of the thing. There is so great scarcity of wood throughout the whole kingdom that the inhabitants in general are constrained to make their fires of sea coal or pit coal even in the chambers of honorable persons. Within thirty years past the nice dames of London would not come into any house or room where sea coals were burning nor willingly eat of the meat that was either stewed or roasted with sea coal fire."

merchant marine devoted to the coal-carrying trade would be swelled to the stupendous number of 1,420,000 ships. These calculations give us something of an idea of the extent of the coal-mining industry, and dispose our minds to accept without question the alarmist reports sent out from time to time coincidentally with the announcement of an advance in the market price. However, there is another side to the question. It is estimated that the coal lands in the world is 472,000 acres, distributed as follows: China and Japan, 200,000; United States, 194,000; India, 35,000; Russia, 27,000; Great Britain, 9,000; Germany, 3,000; other countries, 3,200. It is also estimated that the coal supply of China, Japan, Great Britain, Russia, Germany, and India is 303,000,000,000 tons, an amount sufficient to supply the world for 450 years at the present rate of consumption. The coal still unmined in the United States is estimated at 500,000,000,000 tons in round numbers, an amount regarded as sufficient to extend the period of the world's consumption to 1,900 years, at the present rate.

Now, we have here something to allay our anxiety on the score of speedy exhaustion of the coal supply. A few of us will live 1,000 years, and we can safely rely upon the inventive genius or discoveries of future ages to supply a substitute for coal long before the stock runs short. If coal continues to advance in price at the rate at which it is going this year, the capacity of the public to purchase will have ceased long before the available supply shall have been exhausted.

It may not be amiss to attempt to represent the reserve supply of coal in this country by means of a diagram, using only round numbers and approximate dimensions. If the coal mined within thirty years is equivalent to a block of the dimensions of a cubic mile, the reserve may be indicated by a block 100 times as large in cubical contents. That is to

There is so great scarcity of wood throughout the whole kingdom that the inhabitants in general are constrained to make their fires of sea coal or pit coal even in the chambers of honorable persons. Within thirty years past the nice dames of London would not come into any house or room where sea coals were burning nor willingly eat of the meat that was either stewed or roasted with sea coal fire."

Now the world is beginning to worry lest it be not able to get enough coal to burn. It may be of interest to know what proportion of the world's total output of coal is credited to the various coal-producing countries. In 1899, the last year in which statistics are available, the production in metric tons was as follows: United States, 228,717,570; Great Britain, 223,600,888; Germany, 135,824,427; Austro-Hungary, 90,000,000; France, 32,779,935; Belgium, 21,917,740; Russia, 13,000,000; Japan, 6,500,000; Australasia, 6,700,000; India, 742,000; Mexico, 400,125; Sweden, 230,344; Italy, 375,000; and all other countries, 13,900,000; total, partly estimated, 727,942,941.

The dust of charcoal is gathered up and mixed with the chaff from wheat, barley and other grains, and with chopped straw. It is then moistened into a paste, rolled into balls about as big as a billiard ball, and made available for fuel.

STUB AND THE DIAMOND LOCKET

Now, you'll notice," said Stub, "that fellows in books an' stories allers has or clams't ter do sompin' great, dat makes 'em great, an' gits der names in der papers. But do we git dat chance? Not on yer life!"

Stub sliced a splinter of wood off the edge of the empty crate he was sitting on, and began to whittle it with a very rusty knife. "The boys were sitting in the alley, waiting for their 'extray.' The day was hot an' stilling, there was no air stirring, an' der gabs' were feeling very tired. Papers did not sell fast on hot days nor storying days, an' it was hard work to earn enough even to afford the extra penny for a swim in the dingy bathhouse down near the rolling mill."

"It makes yer stek tryin' ter act on der square ah' he honest, sometimes," said Jimmy Hobbs, wiping his dirty face with a still dirtier and very ragged shirt sleeve. Stub picked up his knife again and went back to his whittling, with a sober face. The world seemed all wrong, somehow. Other boys had good clothes and good bones and plenty to eat and long vacations at lakes and in the mountains in the summer. He had never had good clothes in his life. He never remembered having all he wanted to eat except at the Christmas and Thanksgiving "feeds" given to the newboys yearly. All he knew of the lakes was what he could see from the crowded docks, and he knew nothing of the mountains except from picture papers. It did not seem right.

Yes, he had always tried to "keep square." He would not pick pockets. He had a very dim and lazy recollection of a sweet mother-face that he looked close to his heart under the

"WHO TALKS YOU WHAT WAS 'ACTING' RAGGED LITTLE, HIR, AND SOMEBODY THAT MOTHER FACE COMED TO COME TO HIM MORE CLEARLY WHEN ANYTHING RAGGED HIM THAT WAS JUST 'SQUINNY'."

"Extray" yerd it Jimmy staidly. And Stub started up with the rest of the boys as the gang scouted down the alley. The next moment he was in the blue, struggling and yelling with the rest, with the men-shaved families of ropes out to them and they pulled for their little bag of coins at the window. Then he was on the street with the cry that the men had given out: "Extray! All about der big railway an' der Extray!"

Along the running board of an electric car he darted to the smokers' seats. They were always the most hopeful. An elderly gentleman boarded the car at the same time and motioned Stub. He stood on the running board as Stub gave him the paper and took the coin. Then the boy dropped to the ground. As he did so something whizzed at his feet, something bright and glittering. Stub stooped and picked it up, and it proved to be a plain gold locket, with one spot of vivid light in the center. And Stub gasped as he realized that he held in his hand what was, to him, a small fortune. For the spot of vivid, dazzling light was a diamond of considerable size.

Stub, tightly grasping his valuable find in his hand, darted through the throng of waikons and carriages to the sidewalk. There he stood staring after the car. "It was der of 'gents," he muttered to himself. "I seen it, it swung from der chain uh his tucker. It was caught in der seat as he got in der car. An'—uh—he looks a rich an'. He kin—uh—adder—lots more. An'—uh—me—uh—ah! had a square meal dis summer."

"I didn't git even er dime," he said, blankly, to a wooden Indian that stood in front of a cigar store. "Not even er dime."

He shifted his papers to the other arm, pushed his ragged cap back from his yet forehead, wiped his face on his arm, then opened his mouth. "Extray! All 'bout der big rail—"

A hand came down on Stub's shoulder, and he looked up straight into the gold-rimmed glasses of the elderly gentleman. "I want to talk to you a minute, young man," said Stub's customer. "I suppose you eat ice cream and—such things? Come in here. It is rather noisy on the sidewalk for conversation."

A little frightened, and a little delighted, Stub walked along toward a confectioner's near by, the firm band still on his shoulder. Soon he was sitting at a small round table with a big glass of ice cream soda in front of him. Stub set to with a will, and the twinkling eyes of the old gentleman studied his face sharply through the gold-rimmed glasses till the cream had disappeared. "And now," he said quietly, "tell me all about finding that locket."

And Stub told him. The old gentleman listened attentively. "Why didn't you keep the locket?" he asked. "Why—uh—it wouldn't ha' been actin' square," stammered Stub. "Oh! And who taught you what was 'actin' square?" queried the old gentleman. "Me mudder," replied Stub, in a low voice. "And where does she live?"

"She—she's dead," said Stub. "Ah! And what is your name?" asked the old gentleman. "Stub—er—I mean, me right name is Dishro—Stanley Dishro," said Stub, reaching down for his ragged little cap. But when he sat up again the cap dropped from his fingers. He looked at the old gentleman, who had grasped the edge of the table with both hands and was staring at him with terror. For the old gentleman's face was white and his mouth was working strangely. The next moment he had taken the locket from his pocket, he had opened it with shaking fingers and thrust it into the table toward Stub.

And Stub? Stub looked down with wondering eyes and saw, framed in the delicate gold, the fair, sweet mother-face that he had cherished so long in his boy memory. And on the other side of the table the old gentleman was sitting with his head bowed in his hands. And Stub, awed and still, knew that he had a fortune.

And others and Stub learned all about it. How the old gentleman's daughter had married against his wishes and he had disowned her. And then Stub told his part of his father's death, and his young mother's struggle with poverty till she followed her husband to the shadow land. And of her teachings to "keep square," that he could not forget, even though he went hungry.

And two weeks after Stub was living in a snug cottage on the lake shore, far from the city heat and noise, and there were bathing and boating and games in the sand, and three square meals a day, with lunches between, and a donkey and cart, all his own, and a happy old gentleman whom he called affectionately "granddad." And last, but not least, there was a house full of money and delighted guests, who only had been known in newspaper articles as "der gang."—Chicago Record Herald.

Magnetic South Sea Islands.
Recent investigations show that the Hebrides islands possess strong magnetic properties. On the island of Sava is this particularly noticeable. At almost any point on the island compasses (is absolutely useless, the needle changing direction every few minutes, pointing to widely divergent points of the compass. The rocks of the Cluffin hills, composed mainly of saliferous and basaltic, are permanently magnetized. Stone pillars set up to mark topographical survey work became magnetized in a very short time.

A Fable

BY GEORGE ADE.

The owner of a furnishing store gave employment to a boy with dreamy eyes, who took good care of his nails, used scented soap and carried a pocket looking-glass. It was his delight to stand in the doorway and watch the girls all color up when they caught sight of him. He was said to be a divine waiter at those balls that cost 50 cents each, and the ladies got in free.

There was a girl named Essie who was hanging around the front of the store about half of the time, waiting to get a chance to speak to Bert. She chewed gum and kept her sailor hat pulled down to her eyebrows, and had her name worked in wire and used it as a breast pin. After she had waited an hour or so, and he had brooked away long enough to take her side, she would want to know what it was that Ned had said about her or else ask why he had not answered her note. "It was always just about as momentous as that."

If Essie did not come, she sent some one with a message, and sometimes other floor managers with red neckties, and forelocks would come in to see about the arrangements for the next grand hop by the Eucalyptus Pleasure Club.

Bert was so engrossed with his love affairs and the Pleasure Club and the bundle of correspondence, that he carried with him, that he had little time for furnishing goods. It used to annoy him considerably when anyone came in and wanted to spend money. He would set out the goods in a manner that showed it to be something of a come-down to him to be compelled to wait on outsiders. While the customers would be asking questions Bert would be working the flexible neck to see if Essie was still waiting for him. Sometimes when there was a rush, he would get real cross, and if people did not buy in a hurry, he would slam the boxes around and be lippy and give them the eye. Yet he wondered why he did not get a raise in salary.

During the holiday season when the Eucalyptus Pleasure Club was simply in a delirium of all night dances and fried oyster suppers, and when Essie had worn a path in the snow, coming down to tell Bert not to forget, the proprietor decided that the boy's job was interfering with his galaxy. So when Bert got his envelope the furnisher told him he needed more out-door life and exercise, and he had better find it by moving around town and looking for another job.

Moral: Omit the Essie proposition. —The book worm.

Poison Oak Poison Ivy

are among the best known of the many dangerous plants and shrubs. To touch or handle them quickly produces swelling and inflammation with intense itching and burning of the skin. The eruption soon disappears, but the sufferer hopes for ever, but almost as soon as the little blisters and pustules appeared the poison had reached the blood, and will break out at regular intervals and each time in a more aggravated form. This poison will enter the system for years, and every atom of it must be forced out of the blood before you can expect a perfect, permanent cure.

SSS Nature's Antidote FOR Nature's Poisons,

is the only cure for Poison Oak, Poison Ivy, and all noxious plants. It is composed exclusively of roots and herbs. Now is the time to get the poison out of your system, as you may lose your condition worse. Don't experiment longer with salves, washes and soaps—they never cure.

Mr. S. M. Marshall, bookkeeper of the Atlanta (Ga.) Gas Light Co., was poisoned with Poison Oak. He took Sulfate of Arsenic and various other drugs, and applied externally numerous lotions and ointments with no benefit. At times the swelling and inflammation was so severe he was almost blind. For eight years the poison would break out every season. His condition was much improved after taking one bottle of S. S. S., and cured. This is the only medicine of the kind, and all evidences of the disease disappeared.

People are often poisoned without knowing when or how. Explain your case fully to our physicians, and they will tell you exactly what to do. Send for our advice as you require, without charge, and we will send at the same time an interesting book on Blood and Skin Diseases.
