A letter from Frank M. Northrop at Weeber, Idaho, indicates that he is very much pleased with that country and will no doubt locate there.

The Chicago Weekly Inter Ocean prints interesting short stories of love, travel and adventure each week, in addition to all the news of the world at large.

The new subscribers for February were Chas. Gilderleeve, W. R. Bradford, John Sane, Fred Niemann, Alvin Reeg, John Koefoed, G. E. French, and Wm. Dorman.

The postmaster general has issued forbidding rural carriers from collecting mail from rural free delivery boxes of persons who are under quarantine for contagious diseases.

Eli Thompson was down from Carroll Monday to settle up some business matters. Mr. T. has sold his farm near that town and has gone to Pennsylvania where he will reside in the future.

The fellows who talked spring in last week's HERALD was a trifle to enthusiastic about the weather. Since that time an old fashioned blizzard occurred on Saturday and on Tuesday a genuine snow storm.

Wm. Blecke returned home Thursday evening from a three months visit in the old country at Berlin and other points. He met his father and brother whom he had not seen for 20 years. His visit and trip was a most enjoyable one.

Thos Shafer and Floyd Criss have gone to Oklahoma where they will look up a location and start a grocery store and restaurant. The HERALD regrets seeing these two splendid young men leave Wayne, but wishes them abundant success in their business venture.

The city election is approaching and for once there does not seem to be any issue to make the citizens tear their hair. The disposition to down somebody because he smiled at another citizen seems to have vanished also, and it is hoped that no blood will be shed. Everybody seems to be pretty busy engaged in attending to their own business.

Winside Tribune: The Winside lodge K of P. had a splendid time Tuesday night, consisting of lodge work and ending up with a banquet at Hodgsons where twenty-five of the merry ones did full justice to the banquet spread. Among the visitors present were Judge J. F. Boyd of Neligh, Co. Atty. A. A. Welch of Wayne, E. W. Closson and M. W. Evans, of Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anderson entertained a few friends very pleasantly on Friday evening at high tea. Refreshments were served during the evening.

To the people that have known me as Thomas Cook I wish to tell that I have taken the name of my father and will hereafter go by my lawful name, Thos. E. Shafer.

Mrs. S. T. Wilson left for Chicago Monday morning to purchase a large line of spring and summer millinery for their millinery opening to be held in the near future.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs and colds, cures bronchitis and asthma, cures croup and whooping cough, cures hoarseness and bronchial troubles, cures pneumonia and la grippe. Raymond.

Winside has organized a commercial club to provide for the interests of that town. The officers elected were: E. R. Gurney, president; H. Q. Chapin, vice-president; J. C. Ecker, secretary; Walter Gaebler, treasurer; and L. S. Needham, W. M. Gne and G. H. Glasier, executive committeemen. The officers are representative men of the county and they will no doubt accomplish much good for our neighboring town.

The spring is approaching and the farmer does not know what to look for. He has no knowledge and no way of finding out whether it is going to be a season of drought, frost, flood, or insect ravages, serious plant and animal diseases, or varied accidents that are likely to occur. He probably knows he will have to meet more or less unjust taxation and will have to look after the middleman to some extent. He will be required to do his very best under the circumstances.—Homestead.

Wakefield Republican: Miss Mable Kimball visited over Sunday at Wayne. J. M. Johnson, Dr. Harmon, and Chas. and Will Beith were Wayne visitors Tuesday. Captain J. H. Brown has appointed the Wakefield band the Third Regiment band, which appointment was accepted at the band meeting Monday night. Mr. Brown is chairman of the committee which had the matter in charge and he naturally favored Wakefield. The boys will get $100 per year and uniforms. W. S. Ebersole was at Wayne on Tuesday and secured several members of the band at that place to join the Third Regiment Band. This will make an organization of twenty to twenty-four pieces and will give Wakefield a band that will be a big advertisement to the town besides giving us some excellent music. All the boys from Wayne are "sight-players" as well as those of the Wakefield band and we shall expect big things from the Third Regiment Band. Three cheers for the band boys.

The following article was clipped from the North Bend (Wash.) Chief, of Feb. 2: "Last Friday evening, a little south of Stratford, people could be seen coming from every direction as if drawn by some powerful centripetal force till all were gathered at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Layman. The assemblage represented every stage of life from blitheomeness of youth to the steadiness of old age. The occasion was a supper given on the anniversary of Mr. Layman's birthday. Mr. Layman claimed to have seen the snows of fifty-four winters but the vivacity he displayed called for the records of the old family bible to establish the fact. Soon after arrival all were gathered around a spacious table laden with delicacies of a richness and profusion that would appeal to the palate of the faintest epicure. When each had feasted to overwhelming satisfaction, all obstacles were cleared away and plays began with a spirit that showed that things were not to be done by halves. Age tried to outlive youth and displayed a degree of activity that made gray hairs try to hide themselves. Time seemed to have been forgotten until the old family clock rang out with unworldly loudness, "one, two, three," when the company ceased their merry-making, and after wishing Mr. Layman many happy returns of his birthday anniversary, departed for their homes. This was an occasion not to soon be forgotten, and to some, brought sweet memories of yore. Mr. and Mrs. Layman have shown themselves to be charming entertainers of the old style, in which restraint and formality are less prominent than cordiality and good cheer, and it could only be wished that the Dispenser of all blessings may yet vouchsafe to them many happy returns of the same event.

Herman Milder received a message Friday afternoon from Carl Fahrenner of Plankinton, S. D., announcing the news of the death of the latter's son, Mrs. Milder, who is a sister of Mr. F. left Saturday morning to attend the funeral.

H. J. Felber attended a wedding at Wayne yesterday. Notwithstanding the conjectures of his friends, Jake strantously insists it was not his own. Think the young man will bear watching, however. Coming events cast their shadows before, and when bachelors rent cottages etc., it's safe to predict that "sumpion gwine to happen."—Laurel Advocate.

Carroll Index: James Ritchie and family were Wayne visitors Sunday last. L. C. Gilderleeve was in the city Wednesday from Wayne. John Walbaum of Wayne, has been visiting his brothers here for two or three days past. Bonham, the sign painter of Wayne, has been putting up some of his handiwork around town this week. F. A. Berry and family came up from Wayne Friday and took in the band concert. The band boys drew out a large crowd to their concert last Friday evening, and their program seemed to be very much appreciated by the audience, as a large portion of the numbers, especially the vocal quartettes, were given encores. A large number remained to the dance, and the whole affair netted the band something over $20.

With few weeks of the close of the season a very beautiful Frenchwoman came to London, and was received at once into the best society. Her story was a strange one, and one, that excited the fancy of all who heard it. She had been married at fifteen to a Russian prince, many years older than herself, and of dissolute character. At first he had loved her passionately; then, as he found it impossible to overcome her coldness and indifference, he had come to dislike and hate her with increasing hatred. He had taken her to Russia very young, very beautiful, and intensely unhappy. There he had neglected her. She had two children—boys; and all her love seemed bound up in them. Then they died; the cold of Russia killed them, and she almost died of the grief. She could do nothing but weep at St. Petersburg. She said she should return at once to Paris. He said to her husband, "So after three years' weary absence, she returns to her birthplace, and there after a time she recovers." He had taken her to London, and she had been married to a young man of high rank, and she had passed her life in the most brilliant society. He was so handsome, so distinguished, no one but she could resist the devotion he offered her, and she had married him. It was not long after this that she was again married. CHAPTER XVI.—(Continued.)

Some days after Lady Dora Amesty arrived at the Court with her husband, a young, good-tempered man, very fond of her, and not in the least inclined to be jealous.

There had been a very decided betrothal between Mr. Hastings and Lady Dora some years ago, before she was married or engaged; they sometimes reviewed it even now. He let her have her own wayward will in the matter of coming to stay at the Court and inviting guests and turning the old house upside down for private theatricals, and in return she was very bright and kind to him and consulted his pleasure in every possible way.

Lady Dora made all her plans and Errol carried them out. He called on Mrs. Chapman, gave her some hints about the tableaux and a desire for her co-operation. She readily agreed to be managed by calling on Lady Dora, and the two departed Dora appeared at Hurst Manor. The ladies, especially the young ones, were charmed with her; she was so graceful, so fascinating.

There was a great many calls, conversations, hints, proposals and suggestions. Mr. Hastings arranged to be married to her, and he was very bright and kind to him and consulted his pleasure in every possible way.

WHY NEW BREAD IS HURTFUL.

Bakery Products Fresh from the Oven Are Not Well Masticated.

It is a commonly accepted opinion that new bread is hurtful to people generally because of the gases it contains. A well-known writer disputes this, and claims that bread fresh from the oven is no more injurious than that which is stale, provided it is masticated as thoroughly. He says stale bread when broken between the teeth resolves itself into gritty particles, which, if they were not softened with saliva, would be next to impossible to swallow, consequently man thoroughly masticates stale bread, and in doing so impregnates it with saliva, which partially digests and adapts it to the alimentary tract.

But new bread, being soft and plastic, is more apt to be swallowed without mastication. He thinks that the injury exists and not in the character of the bread. Hot rolls would be just as digestible as stale ones if they were properly masticated. He refers in this connection to the dog as a teacher of an important physiological lesson. This animal bolts meat, but eats bread broken between the teeth. He, however, seems to overlook the fact that the dog's teeth are illy constructed for chewing, and that is the most likely reason for his expeditious bolting of meat.

Another curious fact which he calls attention to is that stale bread is not more dry than new. This is shown by submitting stale bread for a short time to a high temperature. Under such conditions it became soft and plastic, regaining its newness, and this despite the fact that some moisture must be driven off in the operation. He concludes, it is a sound physiological plan to thoroughly masticate every morsel of food before swallowing it.

Any Excuse in a Storm.

"Only a few weeks ago," said a man who does collecting for a big business house in the city, "I had to call on a delinquent. He was a man of standing. I made bold to venture that he was something like three months tardy. I noticed his right hand was in a sling. 'Why,' he began, 'I've had an accident to my hand, and here he made a great show of his wounded member, and I haven't been able to sign any checks lately.' 'Now, of course,' the collector continued, 'I get all kinds of excuses from all kinds of people. Some say they are very busy, some say they are temporarily pinched and accordingly plead for pity; but if any one had advanced such excuses as a wounded hand I'd have taken it as a bit of irony—I had I heard the man and seen from his face that he expected that the excuse would be good.' Well, it was good. There was not enough of me left to ask him if that hand had held him up for three months from making payments. At any rate, it detained him three weeks more."—Boston Herald.

FARMS AND FARMERS

Protecting Stable Windows.

To ventilate a stable without exposing the animals to direct drafts of air, take three half-inch boards and arrange them at the bottom and sides of a window, these side boards will cut off any side drafts and enable one to leave the window open a considerable space. Then take another half-inch board and hinge it to the top of the window casing inside, after boring a number of holes in it. When the wind is blowing strongly, drop this shutter, after sliding the window to one side far enough to admit what air is desired, to the strongest blows a small amount of will easily be worth twenty cents a hundredweight. The trouble is that not one feeder in a hundred feeds skunk milk properly. It usually goes into the trough at any time when convenient and is often mixed with other slops that is not so clean, and it is made to fall the place of grain to some extent.

Horse for the Farmer.

Speaking of the most useful horse for the farmer before the West Virginia Live Stock Breeders' Association, C. E. Lewis said in part: "The heavy horse has a special advantage in some farm operations. In plowing or operating a manure spreader or flail the crops to the barn or to market the heavy horse is just what is wanted, but in harrowing he does not have an advantage proportionate to his size. For drawing a mowing machine the lighter horse is better. Hitch a heavy horse to the shovel plow or cultivator and start him up and down the corn field, with scarcely room between the three-foot rows for him to put his hoofs feet, walking on two rows at once and breaking down more corn than a light horse could do in one day, and you will quickly decide that it was not made for that kind of work. Besides, to carry 1,000 pounds of manure, useless horseflesh over the ground of the cornfield takes a great deal of energy, and that energy has to be supplied by an extra amount of feed. Then through the long winter months of illness it requires a great deal of grain to keep the heavy horse's huge body in repair."

Poultry Lice in Bars.

It is unfortunate that farmers will not learn that the rovs have no place in the barn with cattle; indeed, the poultry-house ought not to be placed near the barn at all, for poultry lice will get on to cattle, and especially of calves, and are hard to get rid of. If the poultry-houses are properly cared for there ought not to be any lice in them. At this season of the year the most boxes, roosts and the dropping boards under the roosts should be well cleaned at least once a week, and the nest boxes and the fowls be well dusted with insect powder. It is especially necessary that the hens which are to be used as mothers be kept free from lice or their chicks will be greatly injured. If poultry lice are in the barn it will require considerable work to get rid of them. White wash and insect powder will need to be freely used to accomplish it.

Three-Horse Evener.

To make a good three-horse evener take two pieces of hickory or red oak, or any tough wood one inch thick, six inches wide and thirty-eight inches long, for the main pieces, and a hook with an eye large enough for the center bolt to pass through. Then get two sticks one inch thick, three inches wide and eighteen inches long, and a single tree with an iron pulley will answer for the middle horse. A short-twisted link chain should pass from the two ends of the evener over the pulley. The illustration shows the manner of construction better than can be described.—Iowa Homestead.

Heat in Bee Culture.

While it is possible to do many things with artificial heat, all attempts to hasten activity on the part of the bees by artificial heat have proved failures—more, have been fatal to the colony. Pronounce is given this note by view of several items giving the result of the press advising the packing of hives in stable manure to furnish the artificial heat. In experiments brood rearing was hastened. It is true, and more bees hatched, but they were weak, and succumbed to the weather when they left the hives, and many of the honey gatherers started out earlier owing to the artificial heat, and never returned. The hives should, of course, be packed with some material so that the bees will not suffer during the winter, but all attempts to force them to gather honey before settled weather will result in disaster.

Early Plowing for Corn.

Some of the best corn crops in all corn sections, as a rule, were from soils plowed in March or early April. Experience has shown that this early spring plowing is to be preferred to fall plowing, for corn. The stable manure is hauled to the field during the winter as made and in March, as soon as the ground can be worked. It is plowed, the plowing being rather shallow. This plowing is done in the regular manner, but nothing more is done until corn-planting time, when the ground is further prepared for the crop. The seeding is done with drills and the summer system of cultivation started with the weeder early and continued as long as possible. The plan is comparatively new in some localities, but it has brought good results, and is well worth trying.

Care of Stock.

Feed and management have much to do with the health as well as the fertility of stock. Young and growing animals require feed which will make bone and muscle rather than fat. Bedding them with some other dry material will add greatly to the comfort of the animals during the winter.—Kansas Farmer.

Feeding Skim Milk.

There is no doubt that skim milk will bring the greatest returns when fed to laying hens, provided one can get twenty cents or more a dozen for winter eggs; and if one has few hogs and many hens the latter should have the skim milk by all means. On the other hand, it may be fed to hogs with profit, and if fed with corn meal

BEAUTIFUL CHILDREN

Made Well and Strong by Pe-ru

Mrs. Schaffer writes: "I have been a patient physician for a good many years, and was always successful in my treatment of children. I have seen many children who were taken with the grip, and who were not able to get on their feet for a long time. Finally I sent out a bottle of Pe-ru and commenced to take it. I took two bottles and my child became healthy and my child took the same way. She looked as though she would die, but it seemed to do her little good. I sent out another bottle of Pe-ru and commenced to give it to her. It was only a short time until she was getting all right, so I give your medicine to all the children I know who are sick. I did it for me and my dear little daughter."—Dr. R. Robbins.

A Doctor's Little Daughter

Cured of Grip by Pe-ru

Dr. R. Robbins, Physician and Surgeon of Muskogee, Indian Territory, writes: "I have been a patient physician for a good many years, and was always successful in my treatment of children. I have seen many children who were taken with the grip, and who were not able to get on their feet for a long time. Finally I sent out a bottle of Pe-ru and commenced to take it.
