 Wayne Enterprise-Herald: S. K. West, the rustling proprietor of the Commercial barn is becoming an enthusiastic Wansate. He reports more business than he can handle and says he has no doubt that he has struck the best town in the state. Stand up for Wansas.
 Every indication points to an early spring and evidences on every hand show conclusively that the soil is in magnificent condition, perhaps never better. Therefore, the prospects for one of the best crops this year in the history of the county, is excellent. Farmers are anxious to begin work, and a satisfactory state of affairs exists generally.
 The western farmer certainly has a seat at the first table. The man who is owner of a good, productive farm that will sell at $75 to $100 per acre will not have to wait for the second table, neither will he have to wait for a buyer very long if he puts his farm on the market. A man who has no use for so much money, and who may have use for a farm, had better not sell the farm, certainly those who desire to buy at such prices know what they want and they know what they are getting when they get one of these farms.—Homestead.

 O. C. Lewis came very near being obliged to sell his farm a short time ago, that is he had set a price upon it, and one day a Mr. Davis arrived and told Mr. Lewis that he would take the place, providing the latter could move within such a period. About that time it dawned upon Mr. Lewis that he did not wish to sell. A mighty good thought.
 Columbus Times: We have received the annual catalogue of the Wayne Normal college. It simply reminds us that there is no more thorough or popular educator in Nebraska than Prof. Pile. The college is very justly the pride of the beautiful little city of Wayne, and any young man anxious of a thorough collegiate education has the opportunity at a mere nominal expense.
 Homestead: Please don't forget to clean the seed that is to be sown this spring, whether it is to be broadcast or sown with the sower. Silks and straws fill the measure but they bring little return in the way of plants. Broken and sprouted grains are no good except for obolous feed. The light grains and seeds have a weak vitality and may start a plant, but it may be so weak that it will perish before its rootlets get nourishment from the soil. It pays to have clean seed and if it pays one man it will pay another.
 A Georgia man while driving through near Little Rock the other day saw a boy standing on the edge of a field of corn which did not look very promising. Thinking to have some fun with the youth, the man accosted him, and the following conversation ensued: "Young man, your corn looks kind of yellow." "Yep that's the kind we planted." "Don't look as though you would get more than half a crop." "We don't expect to, the landlord gets the other half." The man saw that he was not going to have all the sport he figured on, so he said rather sharply: "There ain't much difference between you and a fool, is there?" "Nope," replied the boy, "nothin' but a real fence." Then a small voice whispered to the man everyone is not a sucker who looks that way. Whipping up his horses, he disappeared down the road at a Crescenos gait.

 Wayne is to lose one of her best citizens in the person of Nelson Grimsley who has purchased property in Seattle upon which he will build and in which place he has decided to locate. His numerous friends here will wish him and his estimable wife happiness and success in their new home.
 The bank accounts of Wayne's financial institutions are such as to make the average citizens feel proud of where he is at.  The scenes about the depot and railroad yards the past week or more have been of a nature that would cause a stranger to believe that the whole population was moving out, but a much larger population is moving in from elsewhere. Go where you will for where you may there is not a better farming country in the United States than in Wayne county, and land has been selling at way up prices as its value is recognized far and near, while near its center is situated the county seat. Wayne, one of the most beautiful and enterprising cities in the commonwealth of Nebraska. Yes, farmers have sold their lands, but they sold them at nearly double what they paid for them a few years ago, and the gain in the advance was the cause for the sales, while those purchasing are people who had the means to come in and take the places of those moving out.

GRAVEN BROS.

WHEN BABY IS COMING USE Mother's Friend.

Woman's greatest dream of beauty and youth is when nature has chosen her to become a mother. Every faculty is keenly alert and her mind is free and clear. She sees the joy, the satisfaction, the success of the life-long satisfaction coming, especially near, day by day, in the dear and innocent being to see light and the very uncertainty whether she shall see a sweet and fair face or a heavy face beside her. Then, it ever, she should take care of her physical, mental and moral health.

REPUBLICAN
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

This is a great time for Grover Cleveland and the Juoks. Both are flying high.

Wherever Uncle Sam's battle ships go, pay is restored and quiet rest goes supreme.

The Boer war has indeed been an expensive one for Great Britain and the "bell" doesn't seem to be over yet.

G. W. Huntsberger of the Porter Republic has been appointed postmaster at that place. Success old to y.

The amount of capital invested in flouring and grist mills in Nebraska aggregates $4,355,331, and the product $8,100,934.

Prince Henry while here visited the cities of beer and beans and he found them to be full of a most industrious humanity.

The base ball season is near at hand and the enthusiastic "rooters" will have their tinning after a short stop during the winter season.

The new Philippine bill has been passed by congress. From the general standpoint it appears that the present session of congress is to be a business one.

The political pot has commenced to simmer in the Big Third district and numerous candidates have begun to spring up. Nearly every county has a favorite son.

The woman's suffrage movement was again defeated in Iowa by the legislature of the Hawkeye state. The fight was an interesting one, but the men were easily "skered."

When General Funston got down to New York and attended one of those sumptuous banquets, he was in the swim, swim, swim, again, and the General went up a few notches higher.

The republicans in congress propose to stand firmly by Protection. It is the rock of statesmanship that has made this country what it is, and there is no use in further attempting to remove the foundation.

E. R. Gurney of Winslow who is one of Wayne county's most estimable as well as successful young business men, says he is not a candidate for congress. However, there will come a day when Mr. Gurney will be recognized for the merit he possesses.

The government of Cuba will begin business without a government job, and will also have possession of customs and revenues amounting to $16,000,000. Cuba should do well if her government is honestly and economically administered.

The newspaper men of Nebraska will deeply sympathize with Hammond Bros. of Fremont, who had just moved into their handsome new $18,000 building which was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. It was the new home of the Tribune, of which Ross Hammond was editor.

The Fremont Tribune thinks that because a man is "crippled at home" it mars his chance for being a representative candidate for congress. Will the Tribune show us a man in the Third district who is available and who is an ardent and enthusiastic republican, who is not "crippled at home"? Men who are progressive, staunch republicans have enemies, but they generally come by them honestly, for the reason that man's inhumanity to man in most cases, arises from a selfishness that fills the heart when they see others advancing.

TARIFF TINKERING.

Force of the Argument That It Would Disturb Business.

Some of our contemporaries, which are never satisfied or aware of the advisability of letting well enough alone, are howling for more Tariff tinkering on the ground that there are glaring abuses to be remedied. No Tariff is perfect, of course, and the chances are that the tinkered bill would be far less so than that now in force. But the most foolish part of the argument is the querulous complaint against the purpose "not to disturb business." That it would disturb business is not denied, but it seems to be argued that this is a metropolitan consideration and ought therefore to have no weight. But nothing could be more fallacious than to assume that this is a matter which concerns monopoly alone. It is unworthy any but the vilest demagogue. Does anyone forget the recent hard times of Democratic manufacture, and does anyone assume that monopoly was the only sufferer? It was disturbance of business, and the only then was that monopoly did not suffer as much as strikers labor. It is just as well to bear in mind that hard times mean other things than monopolistic loss, and that everyone has an interest in preventing the "disturbance of business." The people are not suffering. It is the consensus of opinion among those who have opportunity to know the facts that the past year has been one of prosperity not so much to the employer as to the employed. The savings banks show this clearly, and so we are asked to give up all this, and fly to evils that we know not of except as far as 1893 et seq. taught us, merely because some Tariff crank has a theory. The objection that such a course would disturb business is vital. Business does not mean monopoly or corporations alone. It includes every ramification of trade, whereby men, from the richest to the poorest get their daily bread. The poor man has everything to lose and nothing to gain by "disturbing business," and he knows it. There is no call for inflammatory talk by these would-be tinkers. This is not election time and the country is well off. Why, pray, not permit this to continue and why not leave it nonsense out?—Lowell (Mass) Courier.

President Roosevelt is compiling another book and it is said the manuscript will be given to the publishers next week. Much has been said of the strenuous life he lives but this announcement is probably a new revelation to the American people. Many people have doubted that he could, or did, do all he was said to have done. That in the midst of all the hurry-burry and excitement incident to assuming the duties of president of the United States; of preparing an exhaustive message, of rare excellence, to congress; of urging and directing legislation to a greater or less extent; of listening to importunities of statesmen for jobs for their friends and of reading every word of evidence, including the official orders and magazine articles, on the Shibley controversy and passing judgement on that case;—that after doing all these and a thousand more things to claim his attention he has found time to sit down calmly and write a semi-scientific treatise, as his new book is, on the deer of America, is almost beyond comprehension. It may be there is another man in the world able to perform a like feat, but we are inclined to believe the only one is Theodore Roosevelt, strenuous president of the great nation on earth.—Fremont Tribune.

The Boer forces in South Africa are not yet done fighting, a fact that Great Britain discovered when the news reached London Sunday that the Boer forces under General Delarey had captured the British commander General Lord Methuen and four guns, also the other British officers. Thirty-eight men of the British army were killed, while the number wounded and missing was very large.

The populist editors of the state are to form an association to counteract that of the Democratic parties. They serve notice on democracy that when the sweeping process commences it must expect a troublesome time. When the strange mixture which constitutes populism is added to the contents of the dyspeptic democratic stomach pain killers will be in active demand.—Bee.

John P. Altgeld, former governor of Illinois, died yesterday morning at the Hotel Monroe, at Joliet, Illinois. He had delivered a speech in behalf of the Boers at a mass meeting held the night before at the Joliet theater. At the close of his speech a sudden dizziness seized him and from that time grew worse until 7:00 in the morning when he died, thus closing his life with an earnest appeal in behalf of the Boers.

Kabell, the great Bohemian violinist was given a rousing reception at Omaha Saturday night. Boyd's theater was packed and the receipts amounted to $3300 of which the managers of the renowned virtuoso received $2000. Kabell is but 22 years of age.

Miss Roosevelt will not attend the coronation of King Edward. It is her father's wish and she gladly obeys. This will be another blow for the anti-evangelists, but they must be getting pretty well used to it now-a-days.

Twenty thousand men are on a strike in the city of Boston, but it is prophesied that it will have no serious effect on the sale of Boston baked beans.

Three New States.

There is a chance that three states will be added to the roll of the forty-five before the end of the present congress. The House committee on territories has, by a unanimous vote, directed a favorable report to be made on the bill for the admission of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona to statehood. The Oklahoma bill has already been reported and the others will be reported in a few days. The action of the committee shows that the bills are likely to pass the House without serious opposition.

A fight will probably take place against some of these bills in the Senate, but the chances are that all of them will pass. The advocates of all three measures have joined forces, so that they will have whatever strength can come from the union. There is no valid reason for opposing New Mexico's appeal for statehood, and of course Oklahoma won the right to admission several years ago, though she is the youngest of the three. New Mexico had a population of about 194,000 in 1900, which is about the number required for a representative in Congress from the states. She has been a territory for over half a century, Oklahoma had 398,000 inhabitants in 1900, or enough to entitle her to two votes in the House of Representatives, though she has been a territory for only a dozen years.

Arizona is the smallest of all the territories, having only 122,000 population at the time the census was taken two years ago. As her growth in the decade, however, was 105 per cent, the chances are she has in the neighborhood of 180,000 people right now. The outlook for all these territories is bright. This is particularly true of Oklahoma. As the silver issue has been shelved for good there will be but little incentive for opposition to the admission of these territories. Partisan reasons may sway some votes, and this may delay the admission of some of the three. Oklahoma, even with the new accessions made to her population in 1901, is likely to be carried by the Republicans, though the Democrats have the better chance in both Arizona and New Mexico. Counting four electoral votes for Oklahoma and three each for the other two territories, the Democrats would gain two votes for President by the admission of the three territories, yet this will hardly be sufficient to give them the election. Leaving partisanship aside altogether there is no good reason to oppose the admission of any of these territories.—Globe Democrat.

Providence, a river boat plying on the Mississippi river between Vicksburg and Palmyra, was overturned by a sudden squall yesterday while entering the port at Lake Palmyra. Twenty passengers and boatman were drowned and only nine escaped. A large amount of freight was also lost.

SCHOOL NOTES.

John Pawliski is reported to be improving as rapidly as possible. It is hoped that he will soon be in school again.

The spring vacation will be the first week in April, during which the Teachers' Association will be held at Norfolk.

A letter was received by Prof. Snodgrass from U. S. Conn, our former principal, which was read before the pupils of the high school.

The seniors rendered a program Wednesday morning which was enjoyed by all present. It was gotten up without the assistance of the teachers in any way.

Two young ladies of the Senior class were sent home from school Wednesday afternoon. This is the first time in two years that anyone has made it necessary to impose such punishment, and it is surely a black mark on the record of the seniors.

The boys of the high school met Tuesday evening and organized a base ball team. John Bell was elected captain, Carl Beckenhauser treasurer, and Don Cunningham, manager. The first game will be played with Wakefield high school sometime in the near future.

The High School Oratorical contest will take place March 19 at the opera house. Four contestants will speak, and several pieces of music will be rendered, so that an enjoyable program is assured everyone who attends. Price of admission, adults 15 cents, children 10 cents.

A Woman's Words of Faith.

Neosho Falls, Kans, Nov. 13, 1901. Pepsin Syrup Co., Mooltoelloid, Ill. Dear Sirs: For almost fifteen years I suffered from indigestion and last winter thought I would die, when my doctor, Dr. A. J. Cleurance of this place, advised me to try Dr. Caldwell's Pepsin Syrup, which I did, and two bottles cured me. It not only relieved me, but it cured me so that I have not been troubled since. If any one should offer me $500 for the good Pepsin Syrup I have done me I would not think of taking it. No one can take your medicine without being convinced of its more than wonderful power. I recommend it to all my friends as a laxative and stomach remedy. Yours with gratitude, Sold by Raymond. Mrs. J. Morgan.

When a woman is nervous her imagination gives fantastic and threatening shapes to the most familiar objects. By day she starts in fear at every sudden or unfamiliar sound. By night the furniture of her room takes on a frightening form of ghost or goblin. You can't reason with the nerves. Neither logic nor love can cure them. They must be nourished and then the outcry of the nerves will cease as naturally as a hungry child ceases to cry when fed.

For nervous women there is no better tonic and nerve than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures the diseases which produce nervousness in women, irregularity, debilitating drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite, and induces refreshing sleep.

"When I began taking your medicine I was not able to stand on my feet ten minutes at a time and Mrs. Eddie Borrahale in 73 Spring Street, Nashville, Tenn., had falling of uterus, and kidney and liver disease, and was so weak and nervous I could not keep still. Would take nervous spells and almost die at times. I had several different doctors attending, but they could not do me any good. The last one I had said I would never get up again. Told him that I was taking your Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and he said, 'Might just as well take that much water each day.' But I thought I would give your medicine a fair trial. Before I had finished the first two bottles I was able to get outside the house and walk around the yard. I kept on taking the medicines and they cured me."

CURIOUS CASE OF WILLIAM GULLY

It may safely be said down that when a millionaire dies, there is usually more interest taken in the subsequent fate of his property than in the fate of the late owner. Millions die so seldom, for obvious reasons, that this statement may perhaps be taken as it stands without further argument.

Mr. William Gully was no exception to the rule. Having spent the greater part of his life in amassing money, and having never spared any time for the cultivation of the domestic affections, it is not surprising that his family hardly mourned him beyond dropping the conventional tear in his own coffin. His vast fortune had been rapidly built up by the immense popularity of the penny weekly newspaper of which Mr. Gully had for years been the publisher and owner.

The millionaire never made any friends, and when he retired at the age of sixty, from taking an active part in the business, he settled down almost to the life of a recluse. His one diversion was the study of Eastern philosophy and occult science, in which subjects he took a very deep interest.

In the pursuit of this hobby he was assisted and encouraged by his private secretary, a half-caste native of India. This man went by the name of Staveley Hunt, and was a peculiar personage. His general appearance suggested that of a typical temperance lecturer, run to fat in some hot climate. Add to this an habitual air of deference, coupled with a shifty look about the eyes, and you will have some idea of the man. To those who were curious to know his history, he would explain that he had been in the service of the King of Outh before its absorption in the British dominions, and had risen to high distinction in that state.

On the death of his royal employer, Mr. Hunt, owing to difficulties with his successor (as he explained), was obliged to leave the country, and started to make his fortune over again in London. It was here that he met the millionaire, whom he won over by promises of instruction in the occult sciences.

From that time became a permanency in Mr. Gully's household, much to the disgust of the other members of the family, who neither believed in his professional powers, nor liked the color of his skin. In fact, none of the family sympathized with their parent's researches into the unknown, regarding them as no indication of childlessness in his old age.

There was one exception to this attitude, and that was in the case of his youngest daughter, Florence, who, at the time of her father's death, had just turned twenty-one. She had been educated at Newnham, where she had attained the highest honor granted to women by a not too generous alumnus. Florence had been the favorite of her father from her childhood, and although she could not participate in his trusting belief in all Staveley Hunt taught, she still showed a considerable interest in his physiological research—having had been her pet subject at college.

A word or two here as to the composition of the Gully household may not be amiss. Besides Florence, there were four other daughters, two of whom were married. The two sons, practically entire on the business, the elder John, editor of the newspaper, and the younger Peter, attending to the publishing department. John Gully inherited his father's capacity for business, and surprised him in ability to make a good bargain and showed an even stronger spirit of misanthropy, and a morose nature prevented him from enjoying the money he so easily gained.

Anna, Mr. William Gully's second wife, had originally been Florence's governess. She had been Mrs. Gully some three years before becoming a widow. There was no love in the contract, and among her friends and acquaintances it was hinted, if not openly admitted, that she had before very long meant a former squire of hers who was considerably wealthier than the old man's death should set her free.

Mr. Gully died quite naturally, suddenly indeed, but with no extraordinary circumstances as to justify any question. After the funeral it was found that his testamentary dispositions were arranged with the respect to the various needs of the members of his family, and every one was satisfied, or flattered, with the exception of Mr. Staveley Hunt, who seemed to consider that his past services justified a more substantial legacy than five hundred pounds. This will had then to be proved, a process which, owing to the eagerness of the inheritors to obtain possession of their legacies, was finished in less than a fortnight. The interval between the reading of the will and the proving, John Gully occupied himself with arranging his late father's papers, assisted by Staveley Hunt, on opening his father's private desk he found, lying on the top of the other papers, this peculiar document, addressed to himself.

"My Dear Son—Of past years, as you are aware, I have devoted myself almost exclusively to the study of Eastern science, assisted by my secretary, Staveley Hunt. I believe that I have made a most wonderful discovery, namely, the art of suspending consciousness at will for a prolonged period. This art is practiced by the Hindus, and perhaps others, but the secret has never been known to Europeans. As it would not be wise to make the secret known until its truth is assured, I shall carry on my experiments privately, in hopes of being able alone to perfect this grand discovery. There is a fear, however, that while doing so I may throw myself into the catatonic state without having previously given warning of it to any one. This state closely resembles death, so much so that no doctor, on a cursory examination, would imagine it to be anything else, and my living body might thus be unwittingly consigned to the daily papers, and troubled themselves no further.

The time came round for Staveley Hunt to receive his second check. On the appointed day he presented himself at Mr. Gully's office, and on being ushered in, said:

"Well, Mr. Gully, the three months is up, I believe."

"I don't know what you mean, Hunt."

"Why, you surely have not forgotten your promise to give me eight hundred pounds on this day if I kept quiet as to the circumstances of your father's death."

"Look here, Hunt. You may not know the law about obtaining money under false pretenses, but if you don't leave this room pretty sharp, I'll soon show you."

Hunt saw the game was up, and departed, vowing vengeance.

Not long after this meeting a letter came from Florence, bearing the postmark of a village in the south of France, saying that her father was alive, and in her care. This put John Gully and his step-daughter into a mild fever, for they saw they were in danger of being called to account for their suppression of the old man's letter. Still their anxiety grew less as time wore on and they heard nothing more. The reason of this silence was given by Florence when she finally rejoined her family. The following is a condensed form of her strange story:

As soon as Staveley Hunt had obtained the check for two hundred pounds from Gully he repaired to Florence and told her the whole story. At the same time proposing, with her assistance, to rescue her father from his living grave. She readily consented for his prey, and she made her preparations for a journey. The next thing was to obtain the services of some trustworthy person to assist in recovering the body.

Acting on the advice of Hunt, she told the secret to a young army doctor named Jansen, who had for some time been paying her attentions. After a little not unattractive hesitation, he agreed to assist them to steal the body. This was done safely, and through Hunt's knowledge of the necessary process they managed to restore Mr. William Gully to life again, and at once made the best of their way to the south of France.

There were good reasons for this last step in their knowledge of John Gully's character. But Mr. William Gully might have been better left where he was. The "experience" had been too much for him. The three attended upon him with untiring care, but his state gradually grew worse and worse until, before many days had elapsed, Mr. William Gully was evidently on the point of death in earnest.

The young doctor to reward his being hogged for his kindness by bestowing on him her hand, and then passed away.

They buried the old man in the village graveyard, and Florence lost no time in obaying her father's last wishes by marrying Dr. Jansen. Staveley Hunt, whom she handsomely rewarded, apparently returned to India, for he was never seen again. Such was the story that Florence told to her brother and stepmother.

It is only fair to supplement the above by the account of the matter given by John Gully. According to his version, he never believed his sister's story, any more than he did Hunt's. To confirm his disbelief, after much trouble, he obtained an order for the exhumation of his father's body in the grave to which it had been originally consigned. He declares that he has ample evidence to prove that the body was there as he expected, and in just the condition as a corpse, intended for that length of time would be likely to be. His opinion, he added, of Florence's story was that she invented it to explain the indecent haste with which she left a house of mourning to marry Dr. Jansen.—Waverley.

"None whatever," replied Hunt, "and if I do not obtain recency from you, I shall find means to procure the exhumation of your father's body, and then prove the truth of my statement. When he comes to life again I think your position will be materially altered, Mr. John Gully."

Gully desisted from his plan of calling a messenger, redacted for a while, and he said:

"Well, Hunt, I've been thinking over your position. Of course I don't believe a word of your ridiculous assertion, but considering the comfort you were so my father's declining years, and perhaps the money you received by his will was hardly an adequate compensation for your devotion. I will write you a cheque now for two hundred pounds, and if you do not trouble me in any way, or attempt to force yourself on any other members of the family, I will give you another for eight hundred pounds at the end of three months. Of course, I must have that paper, though, I do not wish my father's name made public."

A glance of intelligence passed between the two men, and Hunt indicated by a gesture that he agreed to the terms. He took the cheque and bowed himself out, leaving the letter in John Gully's possession.

That night, instead of returning direct to his home, John Gully hailed a cab and drove to Emperor's Gate, where his stepmother resided. A long conference took place between them. They both pressed entire disbelief in Hunt's assertions, and pronounced the late William Gully's letter a piece of nonsense. But, like most people outwardly skeptical, they were not thoroughly convinced in their own minds as to the impossibility of the thing described. Besides, their fears as to the consequences, if it were true, made them all the more anxious to guard against the possibility of its being verified. Both agreed in the end that nothing safe could be done to make the matter safe than what John Gully had already done.

It would be impossible to obtain permission from the authorities to have the body exhumed without good reasons for doing so, and then, supposing Staveley Hunt's story were true, such a course would be worse than leaving things as they were. If Hunt could not get quiet, until the three months expired, it would not matter what he did after that, as by then the late Mr. Gully would be dead indeed, no matter how successful his experiments had been. So they resolved to say nothing to any one about the business.

But now comes the most wonderful part of the story. Florence, the youngest daughter, who since her father's death had been residing with her stepmother, one day disappeared without leaving any message behind her.

Some efforts were made to trace her, but when it was found that she had realized all the property accruing to her under the will, and had drawn out all the money standing to her credit in the bank, her nearest relations concluded that she had vanished of her own free will. As she was of age and fully competent to manage her own affairs, they were content with putting an advertisement in the agony columns

FLOODS WORK HAVOC

LARGE AREAS OF COUNTRY ARE SWEEPED BY FRESHETS.

In the Middle and New England States Numerous Fatalities Are Reported. Property Loss of Many Millions of Dollars.

In destruction of property, in loss of business, even in the number of fatalities, the freshets which have swept over large areas in the Middle Atlantic States and New England will long be remembered. Falling rains and melting snows had swollen rivers into lakes and creeks into torrents, and in hundreds of places the trespassing waters caused destruction and death. Manufacturing plants by the hundreds were forced to suspend mercantile houses were flooded; thousands of people were driven from their homes; tens of thousands of people were thrown out of employment; telegraphic communication was interrupted; and in places totally suspended; lightning bolts drove sparks and embers down into darkened farm houses and barns were carried away; live stock perished and millions of people were subjected to great inconvenience. A summary of the disaster, owing to the wide sweep of the floods, it is difficult to give, but it may, conservatively, be stated that thirty lives were lost, that 20,000 people were driven from their homes, that 76,000 persons were thrown out of employment and that a direct pecuniary loss of at least $15,000,000 was inflicted.

In Afflicted Paterson.

One of the worst flood-swept regions was that along the Passaic river in New Jersey and adjacent Paterson, so recently devastated by fire, was again the scene of almost as great devastation by water. At one time Sunday the very existence of the city was threatened. As it was, however, Paterson suffered severely, the financial loss inflicted being estimated at between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. At Paterson the damage caused by the flood reached several hundred thousand dollars. Many families were rescued by boat, and 10,000 persons were temporarily thrown out of employment, owing to the flooding of mills and factories. Six men while viewing the flood from a bridge found the latter floating away beneath them. They perished. At Wallington, N. J., the river spread over three-quarters of a mile, and many families were rendered homeless. At Newark from the extreme northern end of the city to Newark by the river was many banks, reaching a higher point than ever before in the history of the city. Many manufacturing plants were flooded and those living on the lowlands were forced to flee to higher ground.

Throughout New England freshets were general, but the damage done was not great, the chief loss being confined to flooded crops and some minor damage. However, a bridge of the New York and Haven and Hartford Railroad spanning the Housatonic river was swept away. Many miles of track were inundated and several factories were flooded, thereby throwing nearly 3,000 persons out of employment. At New Haven "the green" for the first time in 106 years was flooded.

New York State Flood-Sweep.

New York State suffered heavily. Along the Delaware and the Neversink rivers great damage was wrought. At Port Jervis and at several towns in Sullivan County the water flooded factories and houses, and forced many persons to flee from their homes. At Conchocton and Narrowsburg, in Sullivan County, a great ice gorge formed and the low-lying lands were inundated. Several buildings, including a church were swept away.

At Middletown a Newfoundland dog saved a girl from perishing, and at Wakefield a little girl was drowned by the cellar of her home. At Pithonot near Chatham, a freight train on the Harlem division of the Central Railroad into a washout early and three of the train cars were lost.

At Elmira, the Chemung river was higher than at any time since the memorable flood of 1880. At Binghamton, Rochester, Batavia, Dansville, Buffalo, Genesee and other New York State towns and cities the high water did considerable damage, flooding cellars and stories, and forcing many persons to leave their homes and in some instances closing down electric lighting plants. At Syracuse the overflowing of Onondaga creek drove 200 families from their homes.

Along the Mohawk and the Hudson rivers the New York Central Railroad was cut off at West of Albany, in the vicinity of Castleth, the opening of the Hudson covered the railroad tracks to a depth of several feet. Here several passenger trains, including the Empire State Express and the Montreal Express, were stranded and the passengers had to be removed by means of boats. Near Kingston a night heater named Barrett was drowned in the presence of his wife and children.

MAP OF THE ITINERARY OF PRINCE HENRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

The triumphal march of Prince Henry of the United Kingdom across the country and the warmth of his reception in the metropolitan cities, emphasizes the good feeling entertained for him everywhere in the United States. Since landing in New York the prince has been the honored guest at a series of most elaborate entertainments, has traveled thousands of miles as a guest of the nation, has seen some of the most noteworthy of the country's historical points of interest, has been cheered by the thousands and everywhere made it feel that the people of the United States respect and admire him.

The only part of the week Prince Henry passed through the Southern States and viewed some of the battlefields made historic by the civil strife of the '60's. At Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Louisville and Nashville, grand demonstrations greeted the appearance of the prince, each municipality also presenting him a handsome testimonial. The prince was most enthusiastically received. From there the royal party proceeded to Chicago, where a tremendous throng was gathered to greet the prince, and the thronged streets were ablaze with electric lights and red fire when they entered the city. The prince was awaiting his appearance, while outside the throng choked the streets for blocks, 50,000 people remaining in the open until he took his departure. The highest at the Auditorium was complete in every detail and Chicago's demonstration awaiting their appearance. Elaborate street decorations had been prepared and electric lights and red fire when they entered the city had arranged a choral festival for his honor to be held at the armory and 8,000 native born Germans were there gathered outside the throng choked the streets for blocks, 50,000 people remaining in the open until he took his departure. The highest at the Auditorium was complete in every detail and Chicago's demonstration awaiting their appearance.

Wednesday Prince Henry visited Milwaukee, then crossed over to Canada, where, as a private citizen, he viewed Niagara Falls. The impression made upon him by the grand cataract was profound, he placing the scene far in advance of anything of a similar nature seen during his travels. Leaving Niagara Falls, the royal party continued their journey eastward, stopping for brief periods and meeting with hearty reception at the principal cities along their route.

Believes in the Lash for Wife-Beaters.

State Senator Puryear Has Introduced a Bill in the Kentucky Legislature Which Provides a Punishment of Forty Lashes on the Bare Back for Wife-Beating.

State Senator Puryear has introduced a bill in the Kentucky Legislature which provides a punishment of forty lashes on the bare back for wife-beating. A similar bill was introduced two years ago and failed to pass.

The Puryear bill is a little different from any wife-beating measure yet proposed. It punishes only in case of brutal beating, and a husband should not be punished for slapping a wife of a hateful and tantalizing nature. But no man should be allowed to be brutal to a woman.

POPE LEO XIII.

Pope Leo XIII. has entered upon his ninety-third year. Owing to his feeble health and his natural aversion to ostentation, the event was not publicly celebrated, but by the members of his household the day was fittingly observed. Leo was elected to the pontifical chair Feb. 20, 1878, and therefore he has begun the twenty-fifth year of his long pontificate. Should he live to complete it he will then celebrate his silver jubilee as Pope, his golden jubilee as a cardinal and his diamond jubilee as an archbishop.

BALKED AT KNEE BREECHES.

Ex-Gov. Hoag Refuses to Wear Regulation Dress to Meet Edward.

A dispatch from London to a Chicago paper told of the emphatic refusal of ex-Gov. Hoag of Texas to attend a court levee to which he had been invited by the American ambassador when he found it would be necessary to wear the regulation dress of knee breeches, sword, etc. Mr. Hoag, who is six feet tall and weighs 400 pounds, said if he could not wear an ordinary dress suit he would forego the pleasure of meeting King Edward, and remarked that his "would not be a pretty figure in knee breeches."

Mr. Hoag is in London promoting a Texas oil deal. He was elected Attorney General of Texas in 1887, and served most bitter enemy in the country of trusts, driving the Standard Oil Company out of Texas and originating stringent legislation against trusts. When he left the Governor's chair seven years ago he is said to have had just $25, but since has amassed a fortune of $2,000,000 in oil lands.

ONLY SURVIVOR OF 1812 WAR.

Hiram Cronk, of Dunn Brook, N. Y., Granted Increase of Pension.

The congressional committee on pensions has reported favorably upon a bill granting an increase of pension to Hiram Cronk, of Dunn Brook, Oneida County, N. Y., the last survivor of the war of 1812.

Hiram Cronk is 103 years old and is the last surviving member of the war of 1812. There are now on the pension rolls 1,527 widows of soldiers of that war, but most of these widows married long since and are now well advanced in life, and their heirs have long since passed away.

This aged veteran of fighting ancestry which extends back to the French and Indian wars of the early colonial days. Hiram Cronk was born in Frankfort, Berlier County, N. Y., April 29, 1800. His father, James Cronk, and two brothers also served in the war of 1812. James Cronk's father was Kasper Cronk, who served under Washington in the Revolutionary War, and Kasper's father was James Cronk, a captain in the Continental Army.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Within ten years there will be a reduction of 50 per cent in the expenditures of the government for pensions, according to the predictions of an official of the pension bureau. Taking as a basis the figures for last year, when the expenditures for pensions amounted to $188,000,000, this would mean a saving of $94,000,000 for the government, not including the reduction in the cost of clerk hire in the pension office as a result of the lack of work. During the next year there will be a decrease in pension payments of $2,000,000, as the pension appropriation bill passed by the House carried only $175,000,000 as against $180,000,000 last year. There are now approximately 1,000,000 pensioners on the rolls, and about 200,000 claims pending. Many of these claims are fraudulent and will not be allowed. Almost half the claimants have died in the interim, one under each law, so that the number of pensioners is decreasing. About 10,000 pensioners die each year, and from this time on the rate of deaths will be much higher, as many of the veterans and their widows have long since passed the average length of human life. At the rate of 10,000 deaths a year, the number of pensioners would be reduced to 500,000 in ten years, and the number of pensioners to 200,000 if no more pensions are granted. It is estimated, however, that enough claims will be allowed during the decade to keep the number at the 500,000 point.

Speaker Henderson will at the end of his career as Speaker be able to establish a museum with the gifts that have been made to him, and he has already begun the latest addition to his collection, a present from his loyal and admiring constituency, in a case of curious workmanship. His handle is formed from a deer's foot killed near Buena Vista, in the Speaker's district, long before he was elected to Congress. The stick was cut from a log, and the handle is carved by hand with three scrolls. The first bears the inscription: "I defend the flag with the sword and justice with the gavel." Under this appear four Masonic emblems and a miniature of the capitol. The second scroll contains the name of the donor, Edward C. C. provisional grand master of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania in the middle of the eighteenth century. The last scroll is inscribed: "Col. D. B. Henderson was wounded in the battles of Fort Mifflin and Coriath, was elected to the XLVth Congress, made Speaker of the LVth and LVth Congresses."

President Roosevelt will have no intention of making a special message to Congress on the Cuban reciprocity question. He has made his recommendations and will leave the question with Congress. This was the President's reply to the report that he had ready a message. Speaker Henderson said, Congressman Cannon, chairman of the committee on Cuba, called upon the President and made a lengthy conference, at which the President told him the report about a special message was false. The President expressed the most anxious solicitude that a satisfactory adjustment be reached by Congress, saying that this was an "inherited problem," which he had inherited from the administration of McKinley. Furthermore, the President, it is asserted, indicated no positive determination in favor of any particular idea, but rather a desire that Congress should deal with the subject according to its best lights.

All indications point to a large increase in the navy at this session of Congress. The naval committee is considering the appropriation bill, which provides for an increase of the naval force both in ships and men. There is scarcely any doubt that the committee will authorize the increase recommended by the Secretary of the Navy. If this is done there will be three new battleships of the first class, three armored cruisers and a long list of three submarines of 1,000 tons displacement, three submarines of 200 tons displacement, three steel sailing training ships of 2,000 tons displacement, one collier of 10,000 tons displacement and four tugboats. It is also highly important that the number of seamen and marines be increased. The navy department is likely to provide for an increase of 3,000 seamen, 750 marines, as well as additions to the corps of constructors and civil engineers.

Gov. Taft told the House committee on insular affairs that slavery in the Philippine Islands was so thoroughly ingrained that it would require much time and care to eradicate it. A majority of the committee are of the opinion that the only way to break the habit of slavery is to break the inheritance to generation. The greatest difficulty in the way of a solution of the problem was the attitude of the slaves, who do not appear to desire freedom. Efforts to free them by force, he said, would be likely to result in a civil war against the United States. Gov. Taft estimates the number of slaves at 800,000, all of them to be found in the southern Moro Islands. The authorities were very anxious to assist in any way to eradicate the system in compliance with the desires of the United States.

Messrs. Vessels and Wolmarans, the labor representatives, called upon President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay for a rate ceiling. Their principal object was to induce the United States to do something to end the struggle in South Africa. The interview with President Roosevelt lasted about fifteen minutes. The President indicated a tendency to intervention direct to Spain, and that the United States cannot and will not interfere in the struggle. In the interview with Secretary Hay, Wolmarans and Vessels were not very specific as to what they wanted, and apparently would be satisfied with almost anything from the United States. The Secretary indicated the good offices on the part of the United States.

Within a short time the Attorney General will file a bill in some court, either in New York or in the District of Columbia, for the purpose of determining whether certain railroads, which persistently violate the interstate commerce law cannot be restrained by process of injunction. The determination to be made is whether the railroads, as operated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, have for a long time been principally violators of the fact that the law is frequently being violated by some of the railroads. The offenses particularly complained of are rate-raising and rate-cutting. The bill is being introduced by Attorney General Vessels, who has attempted to break the freight and passenger rate pooling, and, in fact, enforce strictly the entire interstate commerce law in all its bearings.

Eczema, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, Tetter and Acne

Belong to that class of inflammatory and disfiguring skin eruptions that cause more genuine bodily discomfort and worry than all other known diseases. The impurities of the blood, and other organs of elimination are taken up by the blood, saturating the system with acid poisons and fluids that ooze out through the glands and pores of the skin, producing an insupportable itching and burning, and the yellow, watery discharge forms into crusts and sores or little brown and white scabs that drop off, leaving the skin tender and raw. The effect of the poison may cause the skin to crack and bleed, or give it a scaly, fishy appearance; again the eruptions may consist of innumerable blackheads and pimples or hard red bumps upon the face. Purification of the blood is the only remedy for these vicious skin diseases. Washes and powders can only hide for a time the glaring blemishes. S. S. S. eradicates all poisonous accumulations, antiseptics the Uric and other acids, and restores the blood to its wonted purity, and stimulates and revitalizes the sluggish organs, and the impurities pass off through the natural channels and relieve the skin. S. S. S. is the only guaranteed purely vegetable blood purifier. It contains no arsenic, Potash or other harmful mineral. Write us about your case and our physicians will advise without charge. We have a handsomely illustrated book on skin diseases, which will be sent free to all who wish it.

Most appropriate and artistic is the cover of the Designer for April, wherein is pictured a graceful feminine figure with Easter doves and lilies. The contents are so typical of the season, and among them may be mentioned a short story—"Au Easter Miracle"; "Pretty Prizes for Easter Gifts"; and "Easter Egg Football," the latter being a jolly game for young folks. Two other stories are given in this issue—"Bloomfield's First New Woman" and "How Prairie Children Went to Church," also a parlor comedietta, "A Bachelor's Dilemma" and "Novelty in Crocheting," supply tasteful hints to the fancy worker, while "Some Original Cottage Furnishings" will undoubtedly be of service to those contemplating a sojourn at the mountains or seaside.

"Toll-Table Chat." "In Motherland," "The Kitchen Kingdom" and "All Around the House" are departments of value, as too are "Points on Dressmaking" and "Easter Millinery," the latter describing fully the making of a stylish spring hat. "The Floral Department" is a new and welcome addition to the pages of the Designer. In the fashion province Easter costumes for ladies and juveniles are attractively set forth, over 100 illustrations of up-to-date modes being presented. "Etiquette Hint" and "Fashions and Fashion" continue to prove their worth to their many readers.

is all right, if you are too fat, and all wrong, if too thin already. Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion. Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Asthma

"One of my daughters had a terrible case of asthma. We tried almost everything, but without relief. We then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and three and one-half bottles cured her."—Emma Jane Entsminger, Langsville, O.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral certainly cures many cases of asthma. And it cures bronchitis, hoarseness, weak lungs, whooping-cough, croup, winter coughs, night coughs, and hard colds.

Three doses enough for an ordinary cold, but eight or ten for a severe one, hard colds, etc. Most economical for chronic cases. Sold everywhere. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.
