A BAD RUNAWAY.

A very sad accident and one that might have proven much worse than it did, occurred near the depot Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock. S. E. Ankner, wife and mother drove in from the farm to get the trunk of the latter who arrived the day before to visit with her son. Mr. Ankner has been quite ill for some time and his wife was driving the team, and in trying to drive close to the depot just north of it so that it would be easier to load the baggage into the wagon, she attempted to cross the track. The wheels caught and sliding, frightened the horses so that they started to run, upsetting the wagon and throwing the three occupants out. Mr. Ankner struck the rails with his head and shoulders, rendering him unconscious. He was carried to the depot where he soon regained consciousness. His mother in falling out of the wagon fell in such a manner that the wheels passed over one of her hands, badly crushing it and making it necessary to amputate one of the fingers, the operation being performed by Dr. Leisenring who was at once summoned. Fortunately Mr. Ankner's wife was not very badly injured. The team ran up Pearl street and then east on Second in front of Mrs. W. L. Jones' boarding house, where it came in contact with other teams, damaging the shafts in a buggy belonging to F. M. Griffith, but otherwise doing no further damage, all but the front running gears of the wagon having been left behind.

It is suggested by many citizens that it would be wise proceeding for the city to collect poll tax of all and then employ men to do the work necessary to be done. The method in vogue now does not meet with very general approval as work supposed to have been done is often of a very light kind. It is a matter the city officials should consider at any rate.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Williams, on Tuesday morning, at which time their daughter Ethel was united in marriage with John Lutz of Trenton, Mo. Only the immediate relatives of the young people were present. The happy couple left in the afternoon for the groom's home, the best wishes of the bride's numerous friends here accompanying them in preparation for the fall trade.

All dark deeds should be sprayed with daylight. The man who goes to the lumber to haul wood at night, because he claims he has no time during the day should be watched. The man who is getting up a stock company or is giving something for nothing should also be watched. Some people say they do not like to be told always to be on the lookout for sharpers.

They feel safe, because they think their games are too thin. Anybody with sense can see through them. I guess not. Some of the shadiest men we have got caught occasionally. The men who float schemes are shrewd.

The trains for Wakefield and Norfolk were crowded on the morning of the Fourth and to all appearances Wayne was nearly deserted after the noon hour.

The Nebrascans who have returned from Washington since the adjournment of congress say that there is every reason to believe that President Roosevelt will visit the state during the fall. He won't stump for the republican ticket, perhaps, but he will have to say a few things about national affairs, and his very presence will stimulate the republicans to go into a whirlwind campaign for the support of the president.

If that won't elect six congressmen from Nebraska, nothing can do it. The president is immensely popular, and the voters will have a chance to show what they think of him when they cast their ballots on congressmen.—State Journal.

GREAT STRIKE IS ON

NINE THOUSAND FREIGHT HANDLERS IN CHICAGO QUIT

Twenty-four Railroads Are Affected by the Strike—Quick Settlement of the Difficulty Is Hoped for—Teamsters May Also Walk Out:

A Chicago special says: Between 8,000 and 9,000 freight handlers struck Monday morning for higher wages and recognition of their union.

The strike of the freight handlers caused every freight house of the twenty-four railroads concerned to be practically tied up. The business men fear the strike will be the most serious which has affected their interests in years.

Hopes of a speedy settlement of the strike of the freight handlers union were entertained Monday night by officials of the union and members of the state board of arbitration.

The officials of the union, at a conference told Chairman Job, of the board of arbitration, that they were willing to permit employees of the different companies to meet officials of the same to discuss the wage scale, providing a joint conference should be held at which officials of the union should be permitted to act as advisers to the men.

The arbitration board is now working on the matter in an effort to bring about a conference between the railway managers and committees representing the men. As the railroad officials have favored this step from the beginning of the controversy, there is little doubt that the strike can be settled satisfactorily to both sides if the conference shall be arranged.

Lack of unanimity already permeates the strike. The Chicago Federation of Labor was ignored when the order was issued for the men to quit work, and its executive officials are somewhat offended and are inclined to let the freight handlers fight out their battle in their own way. There are 12,000 freight handlers in and about the various freight houses of the twenty-four railroads centering in Chicago.

To add to the present difficulties of the railroads the teamsters' and truck drivers' union threatens to join in a sympathetic strike. If this shall occur it will affect all incoming and outgoing freight of every kind.

TO BE CROWNED IN AUGUST.

King Edward's Recovery is Rapid and Satisfactory.

A London special says: King Edward will be crowned between August 11 and 15. His recovery is so rapid and satisfactory that the above decision was arrived at Monday.

No official announcement of the fact has been made. The pageant through the streets and the ceremony at Westminster abbey will be much curtailed from the original plan.

For a time the fire threatened wide-spread destruction, as it was out by the most efforts of the firemen. The flames were prevented from spreading to the department store of Siegel, Cooper & Co., fronting on State Street, and separated from the burning buildings by only a narrow alley.

Much excitement was caused among guests at the Auditorium Hotel directly across Wabash Avenue from the burning buildings, and at the Auditorium annex. The guests were aroused from their slumbers at 5 o'clock in the morning, and the fire had gained such headway that it threatened other buildings in all directions.

On the Wabash Avenue side the flames belched out into the avenue so fiercely that it was considered unsafe for trains on the elevated loop to pass.

The boys clung to the bottom as she went over. A naphtha launch started to their rescue, but its engine broke down before the boys were reached, and the launch drifted helplessly about.

Wreckers on the Savoy Hotel dock could not make the only rowboat at the dock, and the boys slipped off and sank. Miss Henkel, Tony's mother, saw them peris.

Eight cars containing trunks were telecopied, and sheets of pain came from men buried in the wreckage. Many of them were not severely injured, and as soon as they gained their liberty they ran away.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT MAKES IMPORTANT PROCLAMATION.

Archipelago Is Proclaimed Pacified and War is Extended to Political Members—Civil Rule Is Established—
Constitutional for U. S. Soldiers.

President Roosevelt on Thursday formally declared the restoration of peace in the Philippine archipelago, placed the islands under civil control and extended the war to political members of the rebellion who have been in rebellion.

These three things, marking an important chapter in United States history and probably the most important in the history of the Philippines, were accomplished through the issue of three separate orders or proclamations—one by the President under his own signature extending amnesty, one through Secretary Root, by the President's order releasing Gen. Chaffee from his duties as military governor, and a third which takes the shape of a general order addressed to the entire army of the United States in which Secretary Root expresses the President's high appreciation of the work it has accomplished both in Cuba and in the Philippines.

Peace Is Established.

The amnesty proclamation is as follows:

"By the President of the United States—A Proclamation:

"Whereas, Many of the inhabitants of the Philippine archipelago were in insurrection against the authority and sovereignty of the kingdom of Spain at various times from August, 1896, until the cessation of the archipelago by the United States, and such cessation many of the persons so inhabiting interdicted have held the authority and sovereignty of the United States, and—

"Whereas, The insurrection against the authority and sovereignty of the United States is now at an end and peace has been established in all parts of the archipelago except in the country inhabited by the Moro tribes, to whom this proclamation does not apply; and—

Amnesty of Lawlessness.

Whereas, During the course of the insurrection against the kingdom of Spain the government of the United States never engaged therein or aided in any way, but in retaliation for its own acts of civilized warfare; but it believed that such acts were generally committed in ignorance of those laws and principles established by the civil or military authorities of the United States;

Whereas, It is deemed to be wise and expedient that the government of the United States, toward the Filipino people and toward their friends and supporters, should not already suffered Spanish punishment shall not be inflicted from punishment for participation in these insurrections and for individual acts committed during the course thereof by, if, general amnesty and pardons;

"Now, therefore, be it known that I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, by virtue of the power and authority vested in me by the constitution, do hereby proclaim and declare without reservation or condition except as hereinbefore provided a full and complete pardon and amnesty to all persons in the Philippine archipelago who have participated in this insurrection aforementioned or who have given aid and comfort to persons participating in said insurrection, for the offenses of treason or sedition and for all offenses political in their character committed in the course of such insurrections pursuant to orders issued by the civil or military insurrectionary authorities, as shall grow out of internal political feuds of dissensions between Filipinos and Spaniards or the Spanish authorities or which resulted from internal political feuds or dissensions among the Filipinos themselves during either of said insurrections.

"Provided, however, that pardon and amnesty hereby granted shall not include such persons committing crimes since May 1, 1902, in the province of the archipelago in which the then civil government was established, nor shall it in whole such persons as have been heretofore convicted of the crimes of murder, arson, rape, robbery, by any article of civilization or by any other means than the law of the land.

"Provided further, that the amnesty and pardon shall not affect the title or right of the government of the United States or of the Philippine Islands to any property or property rights heretofore used or appropriated by the military or civil authorities of the government of the United States or of the Philippine Islands organized under authority of the United States by way of conquest or otherwise; and—

"Provided further, that every person shall seek to live himself of this archipelago shall take and subscribe the following oath, by any authority in the Philippine archipelago authorized to administer oaths, namely:

"I solemnly swear to affirm that I recognize and accept the supreme authority of the United States of America in the Philippine Islands and will maintain true faith and allegiance thereto; that I impose upon myself this obligation voluntarily, without mental reservation or purpose of evasion, so help me God."

"Given under my hand at the city of Washington this 4th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1902, and in the one hundred and twenty-seventh year of the independence of the United States."

The MARKETS

Commercial and Financial

New York—Foreign markets were badly disarranged by the sudden illness of the King, and there was much liquidation prior to the closing of British exchanges from Wednesday afternoon to Monday morning. Domestic financial conditions are exceptionally satisfactory and trade is well maintained, although low temperatures interfered with the distribution of milkman supplies. Manufacturing operations have increased in activity, especially in the iron and steel industry and textile production, while the constructive work on new buildings and bridges is very heavy. Labor difficulties have not improved in the anthracite coal region, but numerous settlements have been effected elsewhere. Railway earnings thus far reported for June exhibit an average increase of 4.6 per cent over last year and 17.7 per cent over 1900.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade thus sums up the industrial situation. Continuing, the Review says:

"Most of the blast furnaces that were stopped by the scarcity of anthracite coal have resumed with coke, of which the oven have established new records of output, and shipments have been still larger owing to the stocks accumulated during the car shortage. Despite the vigorous pig iron production, numerous contracts have been placed abroad, and still the machine shops, manufacturers of stoves and implements, and consumers generally are seeking deliveries. Structural shapes of steel and all forms of railway equipment continue to lead the market, orders in these lines running far into next year. Bars and sheets are the least active division of the market, but even in these there is no tendency to weakness. Hauled freights have not materially checked imports, and it is reported that a large structural mill, in Germany has sold its output for the year to American consumers.

Failure for the week number 200 in the United States against 204 last year and 20 in Canada, against 23 a year ago.

Broadstreet's report says:

"Wheat, including flour, exports for the week aggregate 3,482,761 bushels, against 3,691,431 last week and 4,364,147 in the week last year. Wheat exports, July, 1901, to date aggregate 248,668,583 bushels, against 214,561,550 last season. Corn exports aggregate 130,501,550 last season. Corn exports aggregate 136,192 bushels against 110,979 last week and 2,443,469 last year. July 1, 1901, to date corn exports are 26,323,177 bushels against 17,379,684 last year.

The first half of the year has passed. This marks the close of six months of prosperity as great as the country has ever known. It has been a time for the exploitation of new fields, new enterprises undertaken while in the old established lines there has been a general expansion. It has been a period of commercial aggressiveness, of easy money affording opportunity for the development of new countries, the enlarging of industrial plants, for betterments by the railroads, railroads earnings, during this time, have shown an increase, very surprising, and especially so to the many who in their most sanguine view had not hoped that the roads would do much more than maintain the high figures of the preceding year. The first four months were strikingly free from anything of an adverse nature, present or prospective, nor was there any change until the growing feeling of dissatisfaction on the part of the labor element began to cloud the industrial sky.

Community prices have been more irregular than in the preceding week. This is ordinarily a dull time, yet the volume of trade in general merchandise holds up well. Lumber prices are firm. Woolens and raw wool prices hold steady, textiles in general a little lower, cotton steady by a trifle. Iron and steel are firm as ever with demand pressing and business still being booked into next year. Cold and continued rainy weather has been a drawback to retail trade at country points.

With other grains advancing, the wheat professional assumes that should the weather continue unfavorable wheat is likely to go up; as wheat and corn are selling only 3c apart, and wheat should be worth more money, based on the present price of coarse grains.

The 70c price for corn, which the entire West has looked for for a year, was realized Saturday. If the bull leaders in the market are correct this price may look comparatively high with future valuations some are predicting 90c.

Cattle and hogs sold at the highest prices of the last week, and cattle brought more than at any time in twenty years. It was natural with live hogs selling close to 88 that judgment should sympathize. The highest prices of the season were made, and the close record grain of 35c on port, 5c on land, but a loss of 15c on rails. Local speculative interests are inclined to leave profits and go into grain, as port (at 10c) is 81 and so attractive as September wheat around 72c.

Practically unaffected, however, is the timber and lumber market, but the effect of the war in the Philippines is reflected in the prices of lumber and other materials.

Provided further, that every person shall seek to live himself of this archipelago shall take and subscribe the following oath, by any authority in the Philippine archipelago authorized to administer oaths, namely:

"I solemnly swear to affirm that I recognize and accept the supreme authority of the United States of America in the Philippine Islands and will maintain true faith and allegiance thereto; that I impose upon myself this obligation voluntarily, without mental reservation or purpose of evasion, so help me God."

If it wants to rain let it rain. Water is a good thing when you take it. Then why kick about a good thing.

When one thinks of the price of hogs and cattle it seems strange to think of being any such a thing in this glorious commonwealth as a fusionist.

Judge F. D. Fales, of Ponca, who is chairman of the republican congressional committee of this district, will fight the campaign from headquarters established at Norfolk.

Corn sold for 84 cents per bushel on the Chicago market Monday and who is there denying that corn is king. Nebraska comes pretty near being the home of King Corn and fat hogs.

The fusion forces have divided the nominations in Nebraska and by some hook or crook, managed to nominate two or three pretty good men. But what's the use, the republican majority in the state this fall will be simply immense.

The fusionists will assemble at Columbus on the 16th inst., at which time Congressman Robinson will be renominated for congress with a whoop, but when McCarthy gets after his scalp it will be dangling at the latter's belt next November.

The Republican victory in Oregon except on governor, surpasses anything in the history of the state. Official figures make the majority on the two congressmen 15,171, against 12,468 in 1900, which was a presidential year. Oregon expressed in that vote its opinion of the scuttle poll.

The bill opening to settlement the Rosebud Indian reservation in Gregory county, S. D., failed to pass before Congress adjourned. It was a bitter pill for many people who had gone to that country expecting to take up a claim and for many other reasons, but the land hunter must take it as it comes with the rest of the people. The people who went there from Wayne county are returning and will wait until the next session of congress, when it is hoped the bill will pass.

There is a general impression abroad that Judge Jenal is to be appointed agent at the Winnebago agency to succeed J. P. Mathewson. As to the facts in the matter we know not, but one thing is certain, the Herald personally would be pleased to see Jale get something he might wish, for we are "dead certain"—to use a slang phrase, that he has the ability and integrity to fill any position he might desire, but we don't understand why he wishes to mix with the Indians. Jale has a great graft on Swede or German stories and it may be that he has a hankering to acquire the Indian dialect.

Cleveland has most of the Democrats to bosses and politicians with him, but the Democratic masses, at least in the South and West, stand behind Bryan. This is a fact which the Democratic enemies of the Nebraskan ought to bear in mind. The Bryanites will be able to prevent Bryan from getting the nomination in 1904. Bryan, in fact, says he does not want the nomination, and is not seeking it. But he has enough adherents to enable him to pass the sentence of death upon any anti-Bryan candidate who may be put up by the Democracy. It is the intention of the Eastern section of that party, backed by few of its Southern leaders to dominate somebody who was never on the silver side, if they do that they count on the hostility of Bryan and hundreds of thousands of his supporters. Bryan is still a force with whom the Democratic bosses will have to reckon.

In Favor of the Trusts. As a matter of fact, no measure which could pass congress would be more directly in the interests of Beef Trust, and more directly against the interests of the farmers and stock raisers of the United States than to remove the duty on live stock. It would give the Beef Trust a cheaper source of supply for raw material and thus enable it to beat down the price of American live stock, for which the trust affords the principal market; while it would not operate in the slightest degree to break the monopoly which the Beef Trust is alleged to have of the dressed beef market.

The Democrats simply seek to direct every popular outcry in the channel of an attack upon the Protective Tariff without the slightest regard to truth or logic. The proposed elimination of the Tariff on live stock, in response to the outcry against the Beef Trust, is one illustration, as the proposal to remove the duty on raw sugar, in response to the outcry against the Sugar Trust, was another. Both measures, if enacted, would be entirely in favor of the trusts.—Seattle "Post-In

Roosevelt And The "Trusts."

Probably nothing connected with the Roosevelt administration has attracted more attention and provoked more discussion than the president's attitude towards trusts and combinations and his directions to Attorney General Knox to investigate alleged violations of the Sherman act by the railroad mergers and meat packers. His first utterance concerning this policy was contained in his speech on Friday at Pittsburgh. He said:

"We need what Mr. Knox has shown—the character that will refuse to be hurried into any unwise or precipitate movement by any clamor, whether hysterical or demagogic, and on the other hand the character that will refuse to be frightened out of the movement which he thinks is right to undertake, by any pressure, still less by any threat, expressed or implied (cries of "Hear!" "Hear!") and applause.)

Gentlemen, we have great problems we can only solve them by degrees. We can only solve them by doing well each particular bit of work that comes up for solution. Much can be done along the lines of supervision and regulation of the great industrial combinations which have become so marked a factor in our civilization, but, if we recklessly try without proper thought, without proper caution, to do much we shall do nothing, or else we shall work a ruin that will be felt among those of our citizens who are most helpless. It is no easy task to deal with industrial tendencies. To deal with them in a spirit of presumption and rash folly, and above all, to deal with them in a spirit of hatred and malice, would be to invite disaster, a disaster which would be so widespread that this country would rock to its foundations. The Mississippi sometimes causes immense damage by flood. If you cannot dam it and stop the floods you can regulate them and control them by levees. You can regulate and control the current; you can eliminate its destructive features but you can do it only by studying what a current is and what your own powers are." (Applause.)

It is just, exactly so in dealing with the great tendencies of our industrial civilization. We cannot turn back the wheel of progress. If we could it would mean absolute destruction of just such industrial centers as this. We will only do damage if we strive ignorantly to achieve the impossible. But that fact does not excuse us for failure to strive to do what is possible. Special legislation is needed, some of that legislation must come through municipalities, some through national government, but above and beyond all legislation, we need honest and fearless administration of the laws as they are on the statute books. (Applause.) Honest and fearless administration of those laws in the interest neither of the rich man as such, nor of the poor man as such, but in the interest of exact and equal justice to all alike, and such administration you will surely have while Mr. Knox remains as attorney general in the cabinet at Washington." (Applause.)

The bill opening to settle the Rosebud Indian reservation in Gregory county, S. D., failed to pass before Congress adjourned. It was a bitter pill for many people who had gone to that country expecting to take up a claim and for many other reasons, but the land hunter must take it as it comes with the rest of the people. The people who went there from Wayne county are returning and will wait until the next session of congress, when it is hoped the bill will pass.

MARRIED BUT NOT MATED

BY "RITA."

"May I ask the purpose of all this?" asked John Marsden impatiently.

"The purpose," said Savoye, sinking his voice to deeper earnestness, "is that I want you to save her, not drive her to desperation." She is of the stuff that makes martyrs. Honor and duty and all that are more to her than her personal peace and happiness. Her children have been the light of her life as yet. You are their father, and, though she doesn't care yet, that claim is the strongest of any we could put forward. You must put it forward or you will lose her. She loves him better than anything in earth—better even than the man who would have died before her an hour's happiness. Some women are so. We can't make them stand it, but it is well for us that they are. He is their way, and the one help and safeguard that keeps them pure and true, next to what is vile and base. You look surprised. You would not have thought me capable of sentiment? Ah, you forget the first man whom I have buried! I am telling you what your wife is in order that you may wish her back and make her happier. It will be an easy matter, but you must promise me that."

"And—why I ask?"

"The sadness, the sentiment, all vanished from Savoye's face like a cloud at sunrise. The old, hard, mocking smile was in his eyes and in his voice as he spoke to his companion.

"Marsden!—would it if you are a man? What if it lies in your power to deal with her in a worse than that? That's what I mean! Why—because to claim your wife under your authority is the surest vengeance you can take on your husband for what he is who is the holder of all his last possessions, and the master of your children's Court?"

CHAPTER XVII.

"Some time to see out?" said Beryl Marsden, in a bewildered way, as she looked up from her work.

"What name?"

The knight-marshal would not give his name.

Gradually her heart grew a quiet thrill. She made wild game to get into life with its sparkle, beating and showing her what a little thing might still make her glad.

She did not last a second. She started to remember how vain and valueless she was, and to push it aside and rise from her table just like ordinary calm, bright smile. But her hand was trembling.

"I'm sorry," she said, and it seemed to her that her voice sounded faint and far away, almost as if some one else were talking and she listening.

She never knew how she entered the library. Only in some strange, inexplicable fashion she was there, looking at her husband's face, and wondering why he seemed so shamed and uncomfortable in her presence.

"You—you did not expect me?" he stammered. "Of course not. I did not tell you know—"

He stopped abruptly. Before that came, proud gaze his heart sank beneath his brows, and wild, pale eyes seemed to shrink into life with its sparkle, beating and showing her what a little thing might still make her glad.

He held out his hand, but involuntarily she shrunk away. He saw the gesture, and his eyes grew evil and cruel.

"You must come," he said in a low, repressed voice. If I write to the world of which you form a part, nothing."

"You are drunk," he growled savagely.

"The world might always be to something to a woman, unless she's too bad for the opinion of her own sex, or the contempt of men."

"The contempt of yours—would he very hard to bear?" she said with a quiet smile; "but it is quite possible to avoid it. I have seen it trouble me much these past three years."

"All, of course you think you're very clever and independent and all that," he scoffed, with an ever-deepening sense of irritation. "But book-writing is no great masterpiece; everyone does it nowadays, and she don't live by it."

"I think I can," she answered in the same quiet, level tone. "I have had to do it for some time past; you appear to forget that."

"Come, come, don't let me begin to quarrel again. I've not behaved well, but you must make allowances. Say you'll be friends and we'll try and make a better thing of our lives in the future than we've done in the past."

He held out his hand, but involuntarily she shrunk away. He saw the gesture, and his eyes grew evil and cruel.

"Perhaps you killed them—perhaps it's in your children's grave," she said with a faint sob. "This seems such a girl between what my life was then and what is now."

"The sooner you get over all that sentiment and noise—the better," he said grimly. "It don't do you any good, and it can't alter facts. I only want to live under my roof. You shall have liberty enough. I promise you, in every sense, it's only better than younging in the charity of other people."

What was the charge that came over the white face and swaying figure? He could not tell. He could not even be sure that there had been a change, so quickly it passed, so impossible it was to define.

"You—are sure that is all?" she said. "No pretense of affection—or—interest; only duty—bare duty that will tell you?"

"Most certainly it will. I'm not a sentimental fool like you."

"Then, if she said, laying her hand on his heart, as if to some sin that had been laid there, "I will do what you wish."

"Good-by, then," he said, in a strained, bewilderment sort of way. "I'm glad you've turned sensible at last. I'll write and let you know my arrangements."

The door closed. She was alone. Her eyes wandered over the room, noting familiar objects with a strange sense of unfamiliarity. The suffocating pressure at her breast seemed to throb like fire, and rose to weigh like lead. She half rose, massed her hands to her heart, as if to sink down again. It was at her throat now, strangling with her breath, strangling with her heart.

"Don't think it's me," she moaned. "you hurt me, but it gives you—why—I don't give you—I must bear it just as I have borne it."

She struggled to her feet now. Along the polished hall came the sound of voices, the echo of voices. Children's voices, such as had once made the music of her own life.

The look of agony in her eyes was terrible to see. Involuntarily she threw her arms and sank down on her knees, by the side of the bed.

"Don't come here," she whispered, shuddering from head to foot. "And, oh, don't laugh—don't laugh; it will drive me mad!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

"In effect," said Count Savoye, "you cannot afford her."

"In effect, my good friend, I cannot."

Sister is indignant, she is passionate, she is impetuous; but, above all, she is obstinate.

"And the lawyers cannot move any further without her."

"I know that, too," muttered the Count, with a dark frown. "Counts it, he said from her?" he added aloud. "What's your authority as a husband?"

"Nowhere, just at present. I confess it. She's very ill, you know, and I can't be violent."

"Violent, with a woman like that, what a mistake!" exclaimed Savoye.

"That is your worst policy, my friend."

"You are always talking of policy. I should like to see some of yours exercised."

"Just try your hand at persuading Beryl to do a thing she doesn't want to do. I doubt if you'd succeed any better than myself."

"I probably not," said the Count, coolly.

"I know you're a sensible woman, and if I am willing to overlook the past, why shouldn't you meet me half way? Why, he went on, warming to the subject, and feeling a glow of conscious rectitude that showed him the full magnificence of his conduct in the present instance. "Why, the best evidence of merit is the cordial recognition of it whenever and wherever it may be found—Boree."

Endings of not being her husband?

"Beryl, Fiddlesticks! After the way I've behaved to Beryl, that plea doesn't serve me for much. She just looks at me with those calm, grand eyes, as though to say, 'What of these three years? and well, upon my honor, Count, I can't help feeling small and mean!'

"That's almighty, you should have contrived to make her feel she's in the wrong. A man, especially, can indulge in any little escapade short of actual desertion, and even then your beautiful English law steps in, I believe. There's some clause, isn't there, about six years and three hundred and sixty-four days eleven hours? Turn up before the twelve hours, and you're all right. I have a great admiration for your English law. It's a grand institution."

"I wish English law would know this sentimental foolery out of Beryl's head," muttered John Marsden sulkily. "And to get it all now, of all times! It's enough to try a saint!"

"You see your return was rather a surprise," said the Count with a smile, "and her sudden accession to the Count awakes old sentiments. I suppose she thinks it's all due to accept what her lover has lost."

"And you are going to forgive me my irritation? You have traveled all the miles to tell me so? How can I thank you?"

"Her blue eyes looked at her amazed by his sudden change. He could not comprehend her. The woman who had been the light of his life was now the shadow depth of his nature, and she had gone from him for what he was—the weak tool of a stronger and more designing mind."

"'Foolish,' she went on presently, smiling and more designating mind."

CATARRH

The treatment of Catarrh with antiseptic and astringent washes, lotions, salves, medicated tobacco and cigarettes or any external or local application, is just as senseless as would be kindling a fire on top of the pot to make it boil. True, these give temporary relief, but the cavities and passages of the head and the bronchial tubes soon fill up again with mucus.

Taking cold is the first step towards Catarrh, for it checks perspiration, and the poisonous acids and vapors which should pass off through the skin, are thrown back upon the mucous membrane or inner skin, producing inflammation and excessive flow of mucus, much of which is absorbed into the blood, and through the circulation reaches every part of the system, involving the Stomach, Kidneys and other parts of the body. When the disease assumes the dry form, the breath becomes exceedingly foul, blinding headaches are frequent, the eyes red, hearing affected and a constant ringing in the ears. No remedy that does not reach the polluted blood can cure Catarrh. S. S. S. expels from the circulation all offensive matter, and when rich, pure blood is again coursing through the body the mucous membranes become healthy and the skin active; all the disagreeable, painful symptoms disappear, and a permanent, thorough cure is effected.

S. S. S. being a strictly vegetable medicine, but the appetite and health rapidly improve under its tonic effects. Write us about your case and get the best medical advice free. Book on blood and skin diseases sent on application.

The Surplus

A surplus is such a natural attendant of republicanism in this country that no particular surprise will be felt when our people hear that notwithstanding the war and the profuse expenditures that the democratic politicians are complaining of, the amount of the balance on hand in the treasury amounts on the first of this month, to upward of $366,000,000. It was in 1889 that the high water mark of the past was reached but that was by the accident of Cleveland's first four years incumbency, when he was elected president with a republican Senate by the device of counting under Tammany was nine, old Ben Butler's votes for Grover in New York city which carried the state for him by eleven hundred and fifty-four votes.

President Harris succeeded in dissipating the big surplus by taking up debts with it, and stopping interest. It was confessedly the policy of Cleveland, in his first term, to "make the surplus odious" by putting it up in this way but did not immediately succeed. At the close of Harrison's term, however, the country went democratic again under the excitement of the Carnegie strikes, and gave Grover another chance, with a democratic congress. The surplus did not last a minute after Grover's inauguration. When he left he left a bonded debt of $262,000,000 accumulated to run the government while there was a deficiency. That experience cured the country for the time being of egg sucking, and it has preferred a surplus of three hundred millions or more to a deficiency of the same size.

The surplus reported on the first day of this month is, however, a gift of the gods rather than the result of republican foresight for it was not intended to provide so large a one in the Dingley act. It is the wonderful prosperity that makes it so large in spite of the reduction of taxation provided last year. The congress that had just adjourned has repealed all the remaining war taxes so that the Dingley act is the revenue law now just as it stood when it was enacted in '97, on a peace basis. When Grover contracted his share of the national debt he took pains to make it as perpetual as possible by the omission of the usual clause permitting the government to call in the bonds from time to time, before they were necessarily due. So we cannot take up our bonded debt with the surplus, except by going in to the open market and buying in it. But the bonds are thought so much of by the holders that the price was advanced to an extent that discouraged the new secretary of the treasury and he has discontinued his advertisements for bonds and is attempting to buy none at present. The large river and harbor and public building appropriations this year will reduce the surplus, and an other reduction of fifty millions will be made in case the president buys the Panama canal for forty millions, and expends the ten millions provided for beginning the construction work to complete the same.

The surplus is large but it is not apparently incommoding the business of the people. The taxes were never so easily borne, and there is so much gold and paper money in circulation that whatever part of the treasury funds is from time to time taken from active circulation for a while, seems not to be missed at all. People are not hoarding and hiding their gold any more.—State Journal.

A WOMAN'S RISK

As a trapeze performer is greater than a man's. She must have a man's courage and a man's muscle to succeed. But she must also work under conditions of which a man knows nothing. Many an accident to women acrobats must be attributed to the sudden weakness to which all women are subject at certain times.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription heals the womanly diseases which cause weakness. It establishes regularity, dries inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes women strong and sick women well.

"With pleasure I write to-day in praise of Dr. Pierce and his medicines," says Mrs. Mary Connelly, of Appleton, Wisconsin. "I am not able to tell you how much Dr. Pierce's medicine has helped me so I could not lie in bed and I would have to sit up and then I would have such pain from my waist down that I could not move. My feet and hands would feel almost like ice. Since taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I can sleep well all night. Could hardly drag around before taking it, but now I can do my housework and help my husband in the field. Words cannot express the thanks I owe to Dr. Pierce."

Weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser containing more than a thousand pages is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Need More Help. Often the over taxed organs of digestion cry out for help by dyspepsia's pains, nausea, dizziness, headaches, liver complaints, bowel disorders. Such troubles call for the prompt use of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They are gentle, thorough, and guaranteed to cure 250 at Orth's drug store.

A Wayne county farmer decided to surprise his wife by coming home in a new suit of clothes. He bought a suit and on his way home stepped at a bridge, pulled off the old one and threw them in the creek. When he reached for the new one he found that the bundle had jarr'd out of the wagon. Luckily it was night and he drove on. The surprise was a success.—Plainview News.

Druggist Takes Customers Advice.

Mound City, Kans., Oct. 22, 1900.

Dear Sir: I wish to add my endorsement and recommendation as to the merits of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsi. I have sold it as a druggist and it always gives satisfaction, and my customers are loud in its praise. I myself had been troubled with my stomach, and hearing so many of my customers speaking of Syrup Pepsi, I tried it, with the result that it cured my trouble. I unhesitatingly recommend Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsi as a laxative and stomach remedy.

Yours truly, S. M. HAWKINS.

The front page cover and the numerous color plates presented in The Designer for August are of remarkable beauty and should be seen to be appreciated. The fashion and millinery features are daintily appropriate for summer. Worthy of special mention are the articles on "Ribbon Decorations," "How to make a Picturesque Summer Hat" and "Bathing Suits." "Open Air for Women" is contributed by the well known writer Waldon Fawcett, and is handsomely illustrated, and M. Buzzelle what is sorely needed at this season viz: "Entertainments for Summer Evenings," "Interesting Hall Furnishing," by Mary Kilby, "The Latest in Embroidery," and "What Women Are Doing" are of unusual interest. The two short stories of the number are "An Aunt in the Way," by Edwin L. Sabine, and "Little Stefano," by Anna Olsulich; both will hold reader's attention to the end. "The Girl and the Miner," by L. O. Lennart, is a short, scappy drama for production by amateurs, and "Selections for Recitations" supplies choice verse culled from the best poets. "The Apology Affair," a love story of marked merit by Mrs. Ellen Onley Kirk, is now running in The Designer, and the chapters presented in this issue are brimful of vitality. "Toilet Table Chat" discourses on "Keeping Cool," "Sensitive Feet," "The Price of Beauty," "Acquiring Plumpness," and "Teeth versus Dyspepsia." The best in our current literature is discussed in "Book Notes," and "Etiquette Hints," "All Around the House," "In Motherland," and "The Kitchen Kingdom" cater to the fancies of all the members of the family.
