CALL AT DAVIES' STORE

And see the large stock of New Fall Cloth Bound books at 15 cents and up. Our varieties of novelties far exceed in design and quality any we have heretofore shown, and at low prices. We are well stocked with School Books, Tablets, and School Supplies. A full line of up-to-date stationery.

In our music line we have just received a beautiful Chickering Bros. Piano in a dark oak case, finely finished, and with hand carved panels. The action is fine, and the singing tone of the instrument is excellent. Another new piano just received is a Mahogany Case Hamilton Piano, made by the well known D. H. Baldwin Co. at their Chicago factory. This instrument was granted high honors at the last Paris Exposition and is the piano at a moderate cost. We also have a large size Beutler Piano, walnut case. This is a strong and durable instrument.

In organs we have Estey, Western Cottage and the ideal.

The young Ladies' Society of the Catholic church gave a very pleasant entertainment at the opera house last Thursday evening after which a pretty luncheon was served. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in listening to excellent music furnished by Otto Vogel.

Mrs. Opal Olmsted delightfully entertained the young ladies basket ball team Friday evening last. The evening was spent in playing games at the conclusion of which pretty refreshments were served. The young people were jubilant over the delightful manner in which they were entertained.

John Sherbahn has manufactured and sold nearly 1,400,000 brick thus; for this season all of which have been sold and delivered. He expects to make the number manufactured this season reach the two million mark. It requires about 60 tons of coal to burn a kiln of 350,000 brick all of which has been handled by W. H. Hoganwood, the skilled burner at the kiln.

The Iowa Homestead says, "When talking about the frosted corn it is well to understand the situation thoroughly. Was the frost too early or was the corn too late? There is not much danger of frost when corn has been properly husbanded. There is a general invitation extended to early frosts when planting is done late. I know of a few good farmers who are complaining but very little about the early frost."

A large and appreciative audience attended the entertainment at the Methodist church Friday evening, given by A. L. Bixby and the Plymouth Quartette. Doc Bixby the Post Laureate and bale good fellow of the Lincoln Journal, with his original poetry wit and humor is decidedly entertaining and the singing of the quartette was excellent. Their voices harmonized almost perfectly and they were recalled a number of times. Mr. Bixby informed us before the entertainment that if the people were not satisfied with it he would refund their money the next time he came back.

REPUBLICAN—LEADING AND OFFICIAL PAPER OF WAYNE AND WAYNE COUNTY—REPUBLICAN.

HON. J. J. McCARTHY.

Republican Nominee for Congress, Third District.

in state Sherman's conventions. The evening was spent together and then for the first time the editor learned that his friend was a populist and a member of that legislature. During that evening while speaking of the strong, brash, able men of the House—of those capable of really shaping the legislation necessary for the state, the populist friend said: "Your man McCarthy strikes me as being the most fearless and forceful fellow in the House. I'll tell you frankly that there is a feeling among populists that when he stands for a measure, we can, generally, stand for it without fear or investigation. We consider him safe."

Coming wholly unsolicited and unexpected from one, who was in the front rank of the fusion forces, that was a high compliment, indeed. And that is the strong characteristic of the Republican nominee for Congress—the ability to compel recognition, even from political foes, by sheer force of character and intellect, keen of perception, quick of conception, of broad constructive capacity, he stands before the people of this district worthy in every way of the honor to which he aspires. Knowing him as we do, would not be just to send Congress, not hinder nor annoy, but to uphold and strengthen the hands of that fearlessly able man, President Roosevelt? Would not the interests of the district be conserves by being represented by one in harmony with the administration? As stated before in these columns John J. McCarthy is an admirable candidate, ideal in many respects. As his great qualifications become known, more and more will he grow in strength with the people, until his triumphant election will result in November.—West Point Republican.

McCarthy will win. This is our prediction made without hesitancy. There are ample grounds for making such assertion. In 1896 the district gave nearly 1300 majority fusion. In 1898 John Robinson defeated Judge Norris by a plurality of 72. In 1900 his majority over John R. Hayes was only 175. Last year the vote on regents gave republicans almost 1300 plurality. Hence we have a change of practically 2000 in five years. There is no reason to think that any opposite change has occurred since last election. Rather is there grounds for the opposite view. These are republican times. The Third is an agricultural district. Farmers are exceptionally and unusually prosperous. Farmers are not chumps. They know from whence came this prosperity. They realize that President Roosevelt must be supported by congress in order that the greatest possible good to the country shall result. They know that J. J. McCarthy is in harmony with the administration. They know that his election by a good safe majority, and when he is elected the people of this district will have a congressman to be proud of. He fills all the requirements for a good congressman—is a ready and brilliant debater, a careful and conservative reasoner and a tireless worker for his constituents and for everything he considers for the public welfare. This has been proven by his legislative career."

In John J. McCarthy the republicans of this congressional district feel that they have a leader, brave, self reliant, incorruptible and reliable. He comes into the conflict with a reputation free from blemish, and a personality in which youthful enthusiasm is blended with intellectual power and forethought.

To elect a congressman in whom they have confidence and of whom they are proud will give such zeal to the campaign that there will be no question as to the result, but only as to the amount of the majority.

In a year of great abundance and when the people are satisfied with conditions as they are, the lines are not apt to be so tightly drawn, for the urgency of measures in an unsettled condition affords may cause the personal qualifications of candidates to be in a measure overlooked, but in prosperous times the idea of an honest and capable administrator is uppermost.

Men will count this year the young standard bearer of the republican party in this congressional district will lead a triumphal procession.—Central City Republican.

As election time draws near Hon. J. J. McCarthy's chances of being elected congressman from the big third grow brighter every day. Mr. McCarthy deserves to be elected and there is no question but what he will be.—Wakefield Republican.

FETTERED BY FATE

BY ALEXANDER ROBERTSON

"Jofette's Fete," "Little Sweethearts," "Little, the Sewing Girl," "Goldmaker of Boston," "Waddled to Win," "Diana Thornd," "Nora's Legacy," Etc., Etc.

On that morning she had received her first terrible punishment, that of allowing cold water to fall upon her head for a certain length of time, and she shuddered even then at the recollection of that torture.

She knew that the edict must have gone forth, that the doctor must have received orders from the Captain to complete the terrible work, and there were times when a nameless chill crept over her frame at the bare thought of being made mad.

Up to this time, in the midst of these horrors she had maintained her reason simply because of her strong will, but now knew better than Nora Warner that evening weeks passed, if this wretched torture were continued, she would be as stark, staring mad as any inmate of the place.

Captain Grant had realized that he had made a false step in wedding her—for she was really and truly his wife—and his only remedy for it, seeing that he had other plans in view, was to shut her up in this mad-house and leave the rest to the doctor, who knew his business well.

Escape was the only thing that occupied her mind besides those ideas of revenge upon the man through whose villainy she had been incarcerated in this frightful abode. Plans filled her brain, and, as she comprehended what a terrible stakeholder affairs were in, she can be pardoned for weeping bitter, scalding tears.

Examination showed to her that there was no hope of escape, so far as forcing a way out of the asylum was concerned; whatever she did would have to be accomplished by subtlety and cunning.

The doctor had been careful enough to have the bars at the windows secure enough to resist the efforts of the wildest maniac, and her play strength would have availed nothing. True, she had a small bottle of aqua-fortis secreted on her person, which she had secured when she so as to be ready in case of capture, and incarceration, but her cell was quite a distance from the ground, and she could conceive no way of lowering herself, even should she be so fortunate as to break the stout iron bars with the use of the acid.

Thus it was she saw no reasonable plan open before her by means of which she could hope to escape from the demons who held her—escape from the terrible fate that, like a great abyss, seemed awaiting to engulf her.

She saw the sun sinking toward the west with mingled feelings, such as can only be experienced and appreciated by one who stands behind prison walls, looking out between iron bars, and surrounded by all the horrors of a private mad-house.

Her meditations were interrupted. The rattling of a key in the lock brought back to her the immediate situation, and she turned just in time to see the door snap and the figure of a man enter.

He was a new hand—at least she had never seen him before during the long period of her stay at the asylum, though he might have been engaged during her absence.

In stature he was rather tall, and his dress and looks proclaimed him a surgeon, though there was something about his language that spoke of a previous acquaintance with the Green Isle.

His face was dark and red, the latter probably the result of drunkenness, in one of his fits. But he would have made some people laugh and others shudder, according to their disposition.

Nora could not understand the trembling that seized upon her as she gazed upon this terrible-looking creature. What did it mean? Was intention telling her that she was to meet her death at the hands of this villain? He advanced toward her, and she shrank back appalled, as what new system of torture was about to be applied to her?

She watched him with startled eyes, as he held up his hand, pressed his fingers to his lips, uttered the word "silence!" and then, gliding to the door, beat his head in a lashing attitude.

The night fell. Gaudily the noises of the house died away, for the doctor was severe in his rules, and it his most inviolate patients persisted in making night hideous with their wild shrieks, he quickly discovered where their particular fear lay, and treated them to a dose of it until they learned to obey.

Jack entered the cell just after the hour of midnight, fully prepared for the torture. He found Nora Warner ready.

She had been in a fever of impatience and anxiety, fearing lest some little thing which they had not counted on would occur to thwart their well-laid plans.

Jack had observed the way well, and had even gained a couple of keys, which would aid him in reaching the yard at least, though the great gate would still bar their way, unless they could discover where the key was kept.

Sorry they glided from the cell and along the corridor. Suddenly the death-like silence was broken by a terrible shriek as some madman awoke from his swoon, and so horribly strung were his nerves that Nora could not but utter a cry.

Out of the mad-house they passed, and across the yard. The moon was shining, and the trees cast giant shadows upon the white ground. They came to the gate, but a hurried search failed to close the key. What was to be done?

Even while they stood there, irresolute, a low, mocking laugh smote on their ears, and, turning like a mask, they saw the mad-house doctor standing within a few yards of them, an evil smile on his face.

At almost the same instant the great bell in the tower clanged out its wild peal of alarm.

All was lost!

CHAPTER XVII.

When that one word fell from the lips of the keeper, Nora Warner uttered a low cry, in which was blotted amazement and joy. She had expected something terrible to happen, but in the place of it something wonderful had occurred.

Never would she have penetrated the disguise assumed by the other; but when he spoke a light dawned upon her soul, for only one man in the world could speak her name like that.

Again he turned and advanced. Was that a grin of triumph on his face, or did his hair-stricken eyes deceive her? She tried to cry out, but her tongue clave to the roof of her mouth, and her limbs seemed paralyzed. He stood before her now; his arms moved. What was the secret was he about to pronounce upon her?

Nora!

When that one word fell from the lips of the keeper, Nora Warner uttered a low cry, in which was blotted amazement and joy. She had expected something terrible to happen, but in the place of it something wonderful had occurred.

Never would she have penetrated the disguise assumed by the other; but when he spoke a light dawned upon her soul, for only one man in the world could speak her name like that.

When she left the widow and Carol, the man had immediately turned his steps toward the mad houses on the Potomac. When he gazed upon those grim walls, and saw how low almost impossible it would be for an inmate to escape from them without outside influence, he began to despair, but, remembering what he was working for, he began his labor at once.

In the end he succeeded in being hired by the doctor in the place of a man who had been recently discharged. Evidently it was the ferocious look of the new keeper that had been his best recommendation in the eyes of the mad-house doctor, and, knowing this, the disguised Jack gave him to understand that he was to make quite a bloody-minded recompense, ready to obey all orders without question.

He had already been in the institution two days, and his soul was taken by him as he had seen. The doctor had hired him for a special pitchfork, and as yet he had been required to addle the mad-work, though he accompanied the other keepers as he familiarized himself with the ins and outs of the asylum.

One of the men complained of feeling sick on this evening—the result of a powder which Jack had cunningly mixed with his supper—the latter had volunteered to visit the patients in his stead, and leave them the final repast that was intended to be their supper. Thus was he entered the cell in which was confined the young girl.

When Nora realized who it was that was thus before her in disguise, and that love for her had been the object to lead him on, she felt her heart fill with rapture.

"Oh, Jack, you have come to save me, to take me away from this terrible place!" she cried.

They could not say much, for the time was limited, and there might be danger of some one overhearing them, but Jack told her to be ready and expecting him at any minute, leaving he stood back the one encouraging word:

"Remember!"

He did not see the dark form that had come to a sudden halt down the passage and stepped into it above. It was Dr. Grim.

"Remember what?" that worthy merrily called to himself as he watched the new keeper go down the corridor: "He came out of her cell, too. Besides, it seemed to me I missed his usual accent that word. Yes, I shall remember to keep a watch on your movements, Lighty O'Shares, and if you trip up, so much the worse for you."

Thus Jack was shadowed. The doctor was too sure of a man to let the other keepers know that he suspected the new master, for his influence over them would be gone. Already they feared the bugle Lady O'Shares, who could tell such terrible stories about himself, and seemed ready to back up the argument at any time, that they instinctively acknowledged him in a leader, and were ready to give him the allegiance inspired by fear.

His keen eyes seemed to search the face of the woman, but she was so utterly changed from the one he had loved, yet lost from him, that not the faintest gleam of the truth penetrated his brain. "You talk boldly, master. Perhaps you forgot the difference in our station. You are poor and friendless. I the rich and powerful Lawrence Richmond, of Richmond Terrace. Which do you think would have the most influence in court?" The question was cruel, but the widow only smiled, as though ready to meet it.

"Think not your secrets are unknown to me, Lawrence Richmond. The Trustee has sworn over his cell, too, that he was very circumspect in his actions. Perhaps he had caught the anguish of the doctor fastened upon him. At any rate, as time passed on the master of the mad-house found nothing to complain about in his actions, though he did not try to wake up the master entirely."

Nora Warner now lived in an agony of suspense. She feared for the safety of her lover much more than she had done for herself.

There were times when a fierce Jay would sweep over her as she realized how near he was to her, this noble man who had lost so well that he had taken sides with her against the one to whom she owed such a debt of hatred.

She watched for him continually, and yet guarded well her feelings for unless she was careful his betrayal might come through her, and should such be the case, she would die of remorse.

Whatever plans Jack had formed he had to be so careful in their carrying out that time passed by; but Nora, conscious of his strong presence, and the fact that he was risking all for her sake, felt her spirits lifted up.

Twice again had she suffered the terrible torture of the falling water upon her head. Heaven alone knows what the result might have been, but for that one thought ever before her—the fact of Jack's presence under the same roof.

On the second occasion she had faintly dead away, and when Jack came to visit her in the evening—he managed to have the keeper remain sick—he saw from her pale face that something was wrong.

When he finally managed to force the story from her, he was filled with the greatest horror and indignation, and vowed that not another night should pass without his making an attempt to save her from this place of horrors.

Fortunately for them they spoke low, for just outside crouched the mad-house doctor, and his keen ear was bent to the key-hole. He could only hear the murmur of voices, but the very fact of his new keeper, the blood-thirsty fellow whom he had hired especially for his work of an extra severe nature, being engaged in a conversation with Nora Warner, was enough to excite his suspicions.

These were partially allayed upon hearing the curses honest Jack gave vent to when he learned what torture the woman he loved had already submitted to, though, of course, the doctor was not supposed to understand what it was brought them from the lips unmissed to swearing.

Although Jack was not fully conscious of being watched, except on general principles, he was very careful in his actions, fearing lest all might be discovered by the last minute.

The night fell. Gaudily the noises of the house died away, for the doctor was severe in his rules, and it his most inviolate patients persisted in making night hideous with their wild shrieks, he quickly discovered where their particular fear lay, and treated them to a dose of it until they learned to obey.

Sorry they glided from the cell and along the corridor. Suddenly the death-like silence was broken by a terrible shriek as some madman awoke from his swoon, and so horribly strung were his nerves that Nora could not but utter a cry.

Out of the mad-house they passed, and across the yard. The moon was shining, and the trees cast giant shadows upon the white ground. They came to the gate, but a hurried search failed to close the key. What was to be done?

Even while they stood there, irresolute, a low, mocking laugh smote on their ears, and, turning like a mask, they saw the mad-house doctor standing within a few yards of them, an evil smile on his face.

At almost the same instant the great bell in the tower clanged out its wild peal of alarm.

All was lost!

CHAPTER XVIII.

When that one word fell from the lips of the keeper, Nora Warner uttered a low cry, in which was blotted amazement and joy. She had expected something terrible to happen, but in the place of it something wonderful had occurred.

Never would she have penetrated the disguise assumed by the other; but when he spoke a light dawned upon her soul, for only one man in the world could speak her name like that.

When she left the widow and Carol, the man had immediately turned his steps toward the mad houses on the Potomac. When he gazed upon those grim walls, and saw how low almost impossible it would be for an inmate to escape from them without outside influence, he began to despair, but, remembering what he was working for, he began his labor at once.

In the end he succeeded in being hired by the doctor in the place of a man who had been recently discharged. Evidently it was the ferocious look of the new keeper that had been his best recommendation in the eyes of the mad-house doctor, and, knowing this, the disguised Jack gave him to understand that he was to make quite a bloody-minded recompense, ready to obey all orders without question.

He had already been in the institution two days, and his soul was taken by him as he had seen. The doctor had hired him for a special pitchfork, and as yet he had been required to addle the mad-work, though he accompanied the other keepers as he familiarized himself with the ins and outs of the asylum.

One of the men complained of feeling sick on this evening—the result of a powder which Jack had cunningly mixed with his supper—the latter had volunteered to visit the patients in his stead, and leave them the final repast that was intended to be their supper. Thus was he entered the cell in which was confined the young girl.

When Nora realized who it was that was thus before her in disguise, and that love for her had been the object to lead him on, she felt her heart fill with rapture.

"Oh, Jack, you have come to save me, to take me away from this terrible place!" she cried.

They could not say much, for the time was limited, and there might be danger lured Roger Durrel in the direction of the banned mill, he knew just where his child had been hidden away, and had hurried on as fast as possible.

In common with others, Lawrence Richmond had heard of the widow who occupied the old mill, but he had never paid any attention to the gossip that was circulated concerning her, and the fact that she never joined in the general talk for anything so long as money would buy it.

He was enraged at the idea of his child being carried off in the ridiculous manner she had been, and then kept so close to home. In his anger, he forgot that Carol was of age, and that the law could not and would not help him in the matter.

When he found himself face to face with the mysterious widow, he saw with some satisfaction that she evidently seemed disdained by his presence, and the fact gave him pleasure.

Yes, it was Lawrence Richmond, mad. At last I have found you out. By tracking young Darrel I have struck the tower to which you carried her. Do not attempt to deny it, madam; my child is here!" he thundered.

At first she had suspected that he had recognized her, but was immediately reassured on this point by his words.

"I shall not attempt to deceive you. Carol has been here. She is out for a walk now, but will be back soon, when you can see her if you wish. We have nothing to fear from you. Lawrence Richmond, you who could such a girl as Nora Warner that evening weeks passed, if this wretched torture were continued, she would be as stark, staring mad as any inmate of the place.

Captain Grant had realized that he had made a false step in wedding her—for she was really and truly his wife—and his only remedy for it, seeing that he had other plans in view, was to shut her up in this mad-house and leave the rest to the doctor, who knew his business well.

Escape was the only thing that occupied her mind besides those ideas of revenge upon the man through whose villainy she had been incarcerated in this frightful abode. Plans filled her brain, and, as she comprehended what a terrible stakeholder affairs were in, she can be pardoned for weeping bitter, scalding tears.

Examination showed to her that there was no hope of escape, so far as forcing a way out of the asylum was concerned; whatever she did would have to be accomplished by subtlety and cunning.

The doctor had been careful enough to have the bars at the windows secure enough to resist the efforts of the wildest maniac, and her play strength would have availed nothing. True, she had a small bottle of aqua-fortis secreted on her person, which she had secured when she so as to be ready in case of capture, and incarceration, but her cell was quite a distance from the ground, and she could conceive no way of lowering herself, even should she be so fortunate as to break the stout iron bars with the use of the acid.

Thus it was she saw no reasonable plan open before her by means of which she could hope to escape from the demons who held her—escape from the terrible fate that, like a great abyss, seemed awaiting to engulf her.

She saw the sun sinking toward the west with mingled feelings, such as can only be experienced and appreciated by one who stands behind prison walls, looking out between iron bars, and surrounded by all the horrors of a private mad-house.

Her meditations were interrupted. The rattling of a key in the lock brought back to her the immediate situation, and she turned just in time to see the door snap and the figure of a man enter.

He was a new hand—at least she had never seen him before during the long period of her stay at the asylum, though he might have been engaged during her absence.

In stature he was rather tall, and his dress and looks proclaimed him a surgeon, though there was something about his language that spoke of a previous acquaintance with the Green Isle.

His face was dark and red, the latter probably the result of drunkenness, in one of his fits. But he would have made some people laugh and others shudder, according to their disposition.

Nora could not understand the trembling that seized upon her as she gazed upon this terrible-looking creature. What did it mean? Was intention telling her that she was to meet her death at the hands of this villain? He advanced toward her, and she shrank back appalled, as what new system of torture was about to be applied to her?

She watched him with startled eyes, as he held up his hand, pressed his fingers to his lips, uttered the word "silence!" and then, gliding to the door, beat his head in a lashing attitude.

The night fell. Gaudily the noises of the house died away, for the doctor was severe in his rules, and it his most inviolate patients persisted in making night hideous with their wild shrieks, he quickly discovered where their particular fear lay, and treated them to a dose of it until they learned to obey.

Jack entered the cell just after the hour of midnight, fully prepared for the torture. He found Nora Warner ready.

She had been in a fever of impatience and anxiety, fearing lest some little thing which they had not counted on would occur to thwart their well-laid plans.

Jack had observed the way well, and had even gained a couple of keys, which would aid him in reaching the yard at least, though the great gate would still bar their way, unless they could discover where the key was kept.

Sorry they glided from the cell and along the corridor. Suddenly the death-like silence was broken by a terrible shriek as some madman awoke from his swoon, and so horribly strung were his nerves that Nora could not but utter a cry.

Out of the mad-house they passed, and across the yard. The moon was shining, and the trees cast giant shadows upon the white ground. They came to the gate, but a hurried search failed to close the key. What was to be done?

Even while they stood there, irresolute, a low, mocking laugh smote on their ears, and, turning like a mask, they saw the mad-house doctor standing within a few yards of them, an evil smile on his face.

At almost the same instant the great bell in the tower clanged out its wild peal of alarm.

All

Greatest Works of Century.
Many of the most eminent Germans were recently asked to express their opinion as to which was the greatest work of the last century, and their answers, when classified, showed that the majority attached most importance to the following achievements:

1. The establishment of the German Empire.
2. The proclamation of the rights of man.
3. The discovery of steam as a motive power.
4. Applied electricity.
5. The discovery of narcotics and of antisodics.
6. The promulgation of the law of conservation of energy.
7. The work of Darwin.
8. The discovery of the modern scientific method of judging things, which is based on exact observation.
9. The discovery of the spectral analysis.
10. The discovery of the X-rays.
11. Beethoven's ninth symphony.
12. The second part of "Faust."
13. The convention at Geneva.
14. The primary school and compulsory education.
15. The movement in favor of women's rights.
16. The exploration of Africa by Emin Pasha.

No one would ever be bothered with classification if everyone knew how naturally and quickly Burdock Blood Purifies regulates the stomach and bowels.

Hon. J. J. McCarthy addressed a fair sized and attentive audience at Atlona last night. His discussion of the political issues was clear and convincing and the manner in which he showed up the false prophesies of Bryan did the republican cause much good. The number present was not large when he began to speak but in less than half an hour 75 to 100 were there who listened throughout. He was given generous applause and cordially greeted at the close of his address.

Mrs. Jane R. Jones Deceased.

Mrs. Julie R. Jones was born at Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 10th, 1851. She married to William R. Jones in 1870 and moved to Nebraska in 1883 and to Wayne in 1902. Her husband and nine children, five boys and four girls, also her youngest brother survive her to follow her example of Christian life and fortitude.

Mrs. Jones grew up in the Welsh Calvinistic church and made a public profession of her faith in Christ in 1865. She united with the Presbyterian church of Wayne by letter, June 1, 1902, and continued a consistent member until she was transferred from the church militant to the church triumphant Oct. 21, 1902. A faithful wife, a devoted mother and a loyal Christian she had gone to her Master's home and His reward.

Her sufferings ended with the morn, yet lived she at its dawn, and breathed the long, long night away.

In slumber like repose.

But when the sun in all his state Illumed the eastern skies,

She passed through Glory's morning gate.

And walked in paradise.

Services were held at the home

south of Wayne at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, from whence the remains were taken to the Presbyterian church in this city where the funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Birrell.

A long procession of friends and neigh-

BANK IS BLOWN UP

INSTITUTION AT SUMMITT, S. D., LOOTED BY ROBBERS.

Secured Large Sum of Money—Burglars Made Their Escape—Bold Act Was Committed at an Early Hour Sunday Morning.

A Minneapolis, Minn., special says: George W. Smith, general agent for an insurance company, received information from Summitt, S. D., Monday night that the Bank of Summitt had been blown up by robbers and the vault looted of its contents.

The details were meager, as in spite of all Mr. Smith's efforts, he was unable to communicate with the bank officials.

The loss is estimated at from $10,000 to $20,000, but it is claimed the bank proprietors were insured against robbery.

From what can be learned it appears that the robbers entered the building early Monday morning and used a quantity of explosives, which wrecked the structure and gained admittance to the vault. The robbers escaped.

It is said that none of the townsmen knew of the attack on the bank until the robbers had left.

Summitt is a little town of about 350 people in Roberts County, some fifteen miles from Wilmot, the county seat. The proprietor of the bank is C. H. Lien.

$50,000 FOR NURSE.

Find Gift for Eva Martin from Unknown Benefactor.

A Springfield, O., special says: Miss Eva Martin, a pretty blonde-eyed nurse formerly matron of the Women's and Babies' Home, Sioux City, Ia., now of Ashland, O., has fallen heir to $50,000, the gift of a grateful but unknown friend.

Miss Martin has been a nurse of Dr. A. L. Shirk's hospital since last June. She was born in Sunbury, Pa., and lived there until she was 8 years of age, when her parents moved to Ashland, Ashland County, O. Later they moved to Oradell, Ill., where they lived several years. While there Miss Martin taught school and clerked in a store. Later the family moved to Chicago.

Miss Martin naturally feels highly elated, although she stated that she did not have the faintest idea who her benefactor was.

"CALIFORNIA VENUS" KILLED.

Once Famous Beauty is Shot by a Lover Who Suicides.

A San Francisco dispatch says: Marian Nolan, who became famous on the Pacific coast in 1882 as the "California Venus," was shot and killed Monday night by Edward Marschutz, who then shot himself through the brain.

The man accompanied the woman to her home, and when they reached the steps they were quarreling. She ordered him to leave, but he insisted on her listening to what he had to say. Thereupon Miss Nolan struck him with her umbrella and Marschutz drew a revolver and killed her, afterward shooting himself. The journal is said to have known between the outcome of a love affair of long standing.

"JIM" YOUNGER DEAD.

Famous Ex-Bandit Commits Suicide in St. Paul.

A St. Paul, Minn., special says: Jas. Younger, one of the famous Younger brothers, former associates of Jesse James, committed suicide Sunday by shooting. Younger was recently paroled from the Stillwater penitentiary, where he and his brother, Coleman, were serving life sentences for participation in the Northfield, Minn., bank raid in 1876.

Younger left a letter to the press in which he gives as a reason for his act dependency over continued ill health and separation from his friends.

The suicide is supposed to have occurred about 8 o'clock in the morning, Younger occupied a room in a downtown block, and when he did not make his appearance as usual search was made for him.

About 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon the door of his room was broken in, and his dead body was found stretched on the floor beside the bed, a revolver clutched in his right hand. He had shot himself through the head, and evidently had been dead for several hours.

Younger since his parole from the state penitentiary in July last year had led an exemplary life. His first employment was a traveling agent for a tombstone dealer, and on one of the trips he made about the state he was seriously hurt by a fall from a wagon. Old wounds had received earlier in life also gave him much trouble, and although he soon obtained lighter employment, his health was extremely precarious, and this caused him much torment. He was 54 years of age.

The body was viewed by the coroner, who decided that an inquest was not necessary.

WORKMEN KILLED BY STEAM.

Accident at Wheeling Will Result in Severe Deaths.

A Wheeling, W. Va., special says: By the parting of a steam pipe at the Riverside plant of the National Tube Works in Benwood Sunday afternoon, eight men were scalded. Three or four of them will die.

Four of the men were carpenters and four laborers. They were placing a partition in the boiler room of the new blast furnace, and were working on a scaffolding. A 12-inch copper pipe supplying the blast engines with steam from the boilers broke without warning, and the escaping steam filled the room.

A valve was blown through two board partitions and both were destroyed. The scaffold fell to the floor. When steam was shut off the remaining men were carried out and taken to hospitals. All of them were horribly burned.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Baltimore and Ohio Engineer Accused of Killing Fireman.

A Zanesville, O., dispatch says: P. J. Glancy, an engineer on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was arrested at Bedford, Sunday night charged with the murder of John Schutty, his fireman.

The body of the fireman was found today morning hanging across a girder of the Baltimore and Ohio bridge which spans the Licking River, a mile west of the city. Glancy did not report the loss of his fireman when he arrived here, but he sent Conductor Andrews back to look for him when he reached the tower one mile east of the station. At the post mortem it was found that Schutty had evidently been struck on the right temple by some blunt instrument.

It is known that Schutty existed between the two men.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Many Persons Impaired in Fire at Albany.

An Albany, N. Y., special says: The most destructive fire that has visited Albany in a number of years broke out shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday night in the Tower & Brooks Company's Boston store, one of the largest dry goods stores in the heart of the business district. The loss will reach $500,000.

There were many thrilling escapes from death, and one fireman was killed and a number injured. The watchman also believed to have been killed.

At the time the fire broke out a dance was in progress in a hall on the top floor of the burning building.

FAST TRAIN WRECKED.

Two Shocks Felt, One of Them Quite Distinct.

A Columbus, O., special says: Two earthquake shocks were felt Saturday, the first a very light one, about 1 p. m., and the second, which was more severe, about 5 p. m. The latter shock was very distinctly felt. The duration was but a few seconds, the waves appearing to pass from south to north, rattling windows and shaking things in general.

No damage has been reported.

Reports from Mont Eagle and Tracy City say that both shocks were felt at those places.

Wisconsin Banker Killed by Gas.

A St. Louis dispatch says: The October grand jury just satiated down an indictment charging Col. Edward Butler, a prominent local politician and millionaire, with bribery in connection with a city lighting deal in which $47,000 is said to have been disbursed among the members of the house of delegates by a combine.

BIG FIRE NEAR PITTSBURG.

A Pittsburgh, Pa., special says: The plant of the American Gage Company, located sixteen miles east of here, was destroyed by fire Monday night, with a loss of $120,000. Two hundred men are thrown out of employment.

Molineux Jury Sees.

A New York dispatch says: The jury in the case of Roland B. Molineux, for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams, in December, 1898, was completed Monday.

Switchmen Make Threat.

A St. Paul special says: The railroads of the Twin Cities have been given for eight hours in which to consider the demands of the switchmen for additional pay and shorter hours, and it is promised that unless the concessions are made a strike will be ordered.

Eye Badly Injured.

Martin Brennan, living south of Lake Preston, Minn., while chopping wood, was hit in the eye by a sharp splinter. He has entered a hospital, and the surgeons hope to save his eye by an operation.

Gonavites is Quiet.

A Port au Prince, Hayti, dispatch says: The town Gonavites is quiet. Gen. St. Fort, colonel commander of the government forces there, is maintaining order.

ENDS THREE LIVES.

Fearful Tragedy Occurs in a New York Law Office.

A New York special says: William C. Turner Friday shot and killed Albert Hamilton of Pittsburgh and W. J. McFarland in the office of the law firm of Carter, Adams & McElroy, in Broad Street, and then committed suicide.

Turner was at one time treasurer of the Clinix Bottling Company, in which the other two were interested. The three met Friday to effect a settlement growing out of an alleged defalcation of $5,000 in the part of Turner. During the conference a heated discussion arose. Turner drew a revolver, and the tragedy resulted.

The suicide is supposed to have occurred about 8 o'clock in the morning, Younger occupied a room in a downtown block, and when he did not make his appearance as usual search was made for him.

Younger left a letter to the press in which he gives as a reason for his act dependency over continued ill health and separation from his friends.

Four of the men were carpenters and four laborers. They were placing a partition in the boiler room of the new blast furnace, and were working on a scaffolding. A 12-inch copper pipe supplying the blast engines with steam from the boilers broke without warning, and the escaping steam filled the room.

A valve was blown through two board partitions and both were destroyed. The scaffold fell to the floor. When steam was shut off the remaining men were carried out and taken to hospitals. All of them were horribly burned.

Result of Long Night Conferences at White House.

PEACE IN COAL WAR.

Six Men Named for Board of Arbitration by President Roosevelt.

Differences as to Personnel of Commission Are Adjusted and President Asks Operators Yield to Demand of Miners; Bishop Spalding of Illinois Is Chosen as Representative of Labor Agreement Comes in a Dramatic Manner.

The coal strike came to a sudden, unexpected, and dramatic end in the White House in Washington at 2:20 o'clock Tuesday morning.

An agreement to submit the entire question to arbitration was reached at a moment when hope had almost been abandoned, and was brought about in a long conference between President Roosevelt, Secretary Root, Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, Immigration Commissioner Sedgwick and George W. Perkins and Robert S. Bacon, members of the firm of J. H. Morgan & Co., proprietors of J. H. Morgan & Co., the representers of miners.

The basis of the settlement was the concession on the part of the mine-owners of granting to the miners the right to be represented in the arbitration commission and the President at once named Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Ill., as the representative of the miners.

This concession was made only after President Roosevelt had insistently pointed out to the representatives of the operators the absolute necessity of according the miners a representative on the commission.

Agree When Hope Is Gone.

The end came dramatically. Even the strike-traitor miners, who had walked out in protest for over a week to secure an agreement to arbitrate, had almost lost hope.

Wednesday President Roosevelt and Gen. Mitchell were in conference at the White House twice. President Mitchell, exposing himself as anxious to end the strike insisted that the miners should have some representation on the arbitration commission if the operators were directly represented. On this point he was won and President Roosevelt agreed to present his demand to the operators. The result was the conference which commenced at 10 o'clock Wednesday night and ended early Thursday morning.

Official Statement Issued.

The following official statement, announcing the close of the strike was issued at the White House at 2:20 a.m.:

"After a conference with Mr. Mitchell, and some further conference with representatives of the coal operators, the President has informed the members of the commission of labor, that, after discussion of all the facts, it is agreed between the operators and miners in the arbitration commission.

Head of the Commission.

Brigadier General John M. Wilson, U.S. Army, retired, chief of Engineers U.S.A., Washington, D.C., as well as the engineering corps of the military signal service of the United States.

Mr. E. W. Parker, Washington, D.C., as expert mining engineer. Mr. Parker is chief statistician of the division of the United States geological survey and the editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal of New York.

The Hon. George Gray, Wilmington, Del., as a judge of a United States court.

Mr. E. E. Clark, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, grand chief of the Order of Elks, C. P. Gould, as a sociologist. The President assuming that for the purposes of such a commission the term "sociologist" means a man who has thought and studied deeply upon social questions, and has practically applied his knowledge.

Mr. Thomas H. Watkins, Scranton, Pa., as a man particularly qualified with the mining and leading of coal.

Bishop John L. Spalding of Peoria, Ill., the President has added. Bishop Spalding names to the commission.

The Hon. Carroll D. Wright has been appointed counsel of the commission.

PORTO RICAN SCHOOLS.

There Are 1,200 of Them on the Island.

Twelve hundred public schools were opened throughout the entire island of Porto Rico on the morning of Sept. 22. The news is surprisingly important because it means that 50,000 Porto Rican children have been started on the road toward worthy American citizenship. The news means that the youth of Porto Rico are being given a chance in life that they never could have had under the Spanish rule. We have carried to them the opportunity that European have to come to us to realize.

The fifty thousand boys and girls who assembled in the 1,200 public schools of Porto Rico on that Monday will be the fathers and mothers, the educated fathers and mothers, of the next generation. And the next generation of Porto Ricans will be the citizens of an American State, a sovereign member of the American Union. Without the education imparted in her public schools Porto Rico would never be fit for statehood.

Feel cold shivers, aching in the bones, lack of energy, headache, and great depression? These symptoms may be followed by violent headache, high fever, extreme nervousness, a condition known as malaria. Herbine cures it. Take it before the disease gets a fair hold, though it will work a cure in any stage. J. A. Hopkins, Manchester, Kan., writes: "I have used your great medicine, Herbine, for several years. "I took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, four of Pavacon, five of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, as a liniment. Indigestion, obstructions, and swelling and tendering of the liver was my trouble. I am at this time able to do almost any kind of house work. Your medicine saved me from my grave. Thanks to you for the benefit. My wife is hopeless when I began taking your medicine."

Don't be fooled into trading a substance for a shadow. Any substitute offered as "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery," is a shadow of that medicine. There are cures behind every claim made for the "Discovery," which is "just as good" medicine" can show.

Biliousness is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

The Worst Form.

Multitudes are singing the praises of Kodol, the new discovery which is making so many sick people well and strong people strong by digesting what they eat, by cleansing and sweetening the stomach and by transforming their food into the kind of pure, rich, red blood that makes you feel good all over. Mrs. Cranfill, of Troy, I. T., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia which grew into the worst form. Finally I was induced to use Kodol and after using four bottles I am entirely cured. I heartily recommend Kodol to all sufferers from indigestion and dyspepsia. Take a dose after meals. It digests what you eat." L. P. Orth.

We don't know what it means, but the women say that there is a girl visiting in town who has seventeen pores in her dress skirt.

Out Of Death's Jaws.

"When death seemed very near from a severe stomach and liver trouble, I had suffered with for years," writes P. Muse, Durham, N. C., "Dr. Ring's New Life Pills saved my life and gave perfect health." Best pills on earth and only 25c at L. P. Orth's drug store.

A very common complaint of the women is that their girls are "always in the dishes, and then they don't get them clean."

"It Goes Right To The Spot."

When pain or irritation exists on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Liniment will give prompt relief. "It goes right to the spot," said an old man who was rubbing it in, to cure his rheumatism. C. R. Smith, Proprietary House, Tenaha, Texas, writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Liniment in my family for several years, and have found it to be a fine remedy, for all sores and pains, and I recommend it for pains in the throat and chest." 25c, 50c and $1.00 at E. J. Raymond.

There is something the matter with a man who doesn't hate a woman's suffragist; he'd chuckle, if he had a chance.
