The city of Wayne presented one of the liveliest scenes Saturday that it has for many a day. The streets were thronged with people while every side street was lined with teams reaching into the hundreds in numbers. The business men all speak of a spanking fine trade and everybody seemed to thoroughly enjoy the fine weather. Many citizens of Winside and Carroll were also in the city.

RAN FRAZIER'S DEATH.

The citizens of Wayne and Wayne county were pained to hear of the Tragie death, last Friday of one of her former prominent citizens, and one of the best known stock men in the state. When the news reached Wayne that Ran Frazier had taken his own life at their home in South Omaha, using two ounces of carbolic acid, it was hard to believe, but adversity sometimes over powers the will of man and the end then comes.

The remains of deceased were forwarded to Wayne Sunday morning, so accompanied by Mrs. Frazier and three brothers of deceased and William.

The funeral was under the auspices of the Modern Woodman of America, of which he was a member and a large delegation of the Lodge and many citizens were at the train upon its arrival. The procession formed and proceeded to the Methodist church where Rev. Dawson presided in the pulpit. After the funeral sermon the procession again formed and a large caucus of people followed the remains to the cemetery, where they were interred.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Henry Ley, P. M. Corbit, C. C. Fisher, R. J. Warnock, H. F. Wilson and S. B. Somce.

Randall Frazier was, in the early days of Wayne, one of its foremost business men, engaged in stock business, but adverse circumstances met him, and like many other citizens of the country, lost a large amount of property and finally succumbed to the inevitable, in spite of the efforts of friends to prevent it. It is said, and truthfully, too, that deceased was the best man for the farmers of Wayne county, ever engaged in the business of handling stock, and his friends were many, as he was one of the pioneer settlers of Wayne county.

The Herald desires to join the best of friends in extending to the stricken relatives the deepest sympathy.

Many people from Winside and Carroll and the surrounding country were here to attend the funeral.

E. K. Williams and C. B. Thompson were in Carroll on business Saturday.

All this week cooking exhibit at Terwilliger Bros., Great Majestic Range. You are invited.

Phillco & Son sold on Tuesday, their fine four year old gray horse to Mash-er, the horse buyer, for $200. This tops the market and is simply remarkable, when one thinks of it.

Reese Bros. and Williams of Randolph, real estate dealers, sold the Fred Denke farm in the west part of Wayne county to Donald Halse of Platte county last week for a considerable amount of $50 per acre.

Carl Matters of Milwaukee, was the guest of County Treasurer Fred Volpp, the first of the week. The two gentlemen were school mates in Germany, but separated at the age of 14, and had not seen each other for 21 years. The meeting was a most pleasant one for both.

The writer was in Carroll Saturday between trains and it has so improved in appearance through the efforts of hustling business men, E. W. Olosson, W. J. Porter, Wetbie & Schmidt, Geo. Rowber, The Merrills, and others that it is no more recognized as the little borg of a year or so ago but is playing a close second to Winside.

Several new brick buildings are contemplated for the spring and summer months. The principal business street since being placed on grade adds greatly to the appearance of the town which no doubt has a successful future before it.

ASPHYXIATED.

John L. Mayer of Stanton, Neb., a committee clerk at the legislature for Representative F. M. Gregg of the Seventeenth-district, died of asphyxiation in room no 28 at the Merchants hotel yesterday morning shortly after six o'clock, apparently as a result of carelessness handling the gas cook, which was found wide open. At 3 in the afternoon his body was taken to Stanton, at the telephoned request of his father, C. C. Mayer, in care of his friend Chris Toppenson, in business at Tenth and Hickory streets, Omaha. No inquest was deemed necessary.

Proprietor A. B. Peters of the hotel said: "Mr. Mayer arrived here Saturday evening and registered as from Lincoln. At 10 o'clock he was shown to his room, leaving a 5:30 call. At 5:30 J. Jones, a porter, was sent to call him, but received no response to his knockings and so reported to Steve Miller, the night clerk. Miller then tried the fire alarm 'buzzer' in Mayer's room and when that failed to arouse the latter, went to the room door and burst it in. A great volume of gas gushed from the room. Miller went in as soon as he dared, turned off the cook, which he found wide open, and turned on the electric light.

"He found Mayer in bed with his under clothing, shirt and hose on, which may have been because he had lost his right arm and found undressing difficult. Dr. S. N. Hoyt was sent for and arrived in a very few minutes, but Mr. Mayer was too far gone to be revived by even a vigorous pumping of the arm, and died in a very few minutes.

"When Coroner Bralley came he found in the dead man's coat pocket a memorandum book which contained his name and address. We telephoned the operator at Stanton, who said that he knew Mr. Mayer well and that his father is a retired and well-to-do farmer there. The operator notified the father, who telephoned Mr. Toppenson to get the body and bring to Stanton at once.

"Mr. Toppenson told me that on previous visits to Omaha Mr. Mayer usually visited him, and that he (Mr. Mayer) had a habit of always trying the gas cook upon entering a room or upon retiring. As this gas cook was fully eighteen inches from the electric light handle and as the latter was in perfect working order I think Mr. Mayer must have tried the gas and accidentally left the cook open. I see no evidence of suicidal intent and as strong evidence against such theory there is the fact that the trauism was open two inches. Oddly however, no one had detected the odor of gas, even when the porter went to make the call. Mr. Mayer's position in bed seemed to indicate that he fell unconsciously of the conditions, and was overcome without ever waking. Apparently he was 35 years old and prosperous. I understand he was not married. He told someone here at the hotel he was on his way to Audubon, Ia, for a business trip. He seemed in excellent spirits, but perfectly self-possessed."
