Speaking of cattle, he says there are more and a better grade of stock than were ever before in the country. There is a growing custom to let cattle run and grow during winter and fatten them for market in the spring.

Hog cholera is nearly eradicated. Mr. Cunningham never knew a time when the disease was so completely stamped out. During all his travels this fall he found only one lot of hogs troubled with cholera.

Mr. Cunningham, who has traveled over the country a great deal of late, is well fitted to speak intelligently regarding crops and other things pertaining to the farm. He says the maturing corn crop of the county will average fully thirty-five bushels of solid, marketable corn to the acre. The yield will be greater than that, but he thinks the poor quality of some will cut the average down to thirty-five bushels. The corn crop is thus yielding far in excess of that of a year ago. He says that all other crops have turned out better than was expected.

Mr. Cunningham states that the acreage of tame grass has nearly doubled in the county in the last year and that he never saw such pastures looking so well as they do now.

Speaking of cattle, he says there are more and a better grade of stock than were ever before in the country. There is a growing custom to let cattle run and grow during winter and fatten them for market in the spring.

ESCAPED LYNCHING

YOUNG MAN NEAR CHICAGO SAVED BY POLICE.

Accused of an Assult—His Alleged Victim is an 8-Year-Old Girl, and the Resentment of the Mob Was Thoroughly Aroused.

Chicago, Arthur Warren, a young man living in the suburb of Berwyn, twelve miles from this city, had a narrow escape from lynching Monday night, and but for the efforts of two police officers it is possible that he would have been mangled to a telegraph pole.

Warren was accused of assaulting a 8-year-old girl. Acts of this kind have occurred several times in Berwyn within the last fortnight, and the crowd that pursued Warren was highly exasperated. He left them a chase of about a mile before he was caught, and during the run the excitement of the crowd had increased. When Warren was captured he was handled very roughly, and a propensity to lynch him met with approval. Two police officers however managed to get him away from the crowd and drag him into a grocery store, where they barred the door until assistance arrived from the police station.

Warren was badly used up, and required surgical attendance. He was finally placed in a cell, although the crowd followed him all the way to the station trying to get at him.

Wilkesboro, Pa.: Susquehanna continues to rise; residents prepare for the worst.

Paterson, N. J.: With the waters of the Passaic River flowing at the rate of an inch in hour above the falls, and a double rate below them, apprehension of further great disaster to the city from the flood has almost disappeared, the main question being whether Spruce street bridge, the narrow embankment which holds the waters above the falls, can withstand the strain until the water recedes to its normal elevation. At the height of the flood the fall, standing but twelve inches higher above the falls and the low-water mark, was rapidly carrying away into the gulf below the falls.

Reports of extensive floods and serious damage to property and interruptions of traffic came from almost all sections of New Jersey and Long Island. In Newark, Passaic and other large manufacturing centers factories were closed down owing to the flooding of engine rooms. In many places light and power plants were shut down for the same reason. Postmaster General Walter Q. Gresham was sued for $100,000 damages by the New Orleans (La.) National Bank because of his order forbidding postmasters to issue money orders payable to slanders of the Louisiana lottery.

Foreign residents of Canton, China, were cut off from the remainder of the city and hourly threatened with massacre by the natives.

President Chester A. Arthur paid taxes aggregating $8,542 in New York City with $10,000 to Wadsworth Astor, aggregating $40,000, and W. H. Vanderbilt, $50,000.

Those Europe Indian hurricanes must be predicted in their methods, for they always do damage to the extent of $1,000,000 no more or less.

If a large enough hall can be secured perhaps there will be a reunion in about ten years of the girls who were reported to Hobson.

Drossmackers in convention never discussed how the dollar may be cut bias and be made to reach further around by a heavy skull piecing.

With a heavy snowstorm to his credit and a drop in the temperature of 50 degrees the Butte weather man must be regarded as a wonder.

The comparatively little interest manifested over politics on the eve of an election is a certain indication that people are well satisfied with republican policies and opposed to any change.

Miss Corwin, State Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. spent Sunday and Monday with the college organization. Among other helpful changes accomplished was the organization of a Bible study class with a membership of thirty.

A good many students and a majority of the faculty were in attendance at the Emerson "Teachers' Association Saturday. Nearly three hundred teachers, a large proportion of whom were old N. N. C. students, were in attendance, coming from five counties. Prof. Pile presided over the meeting and among the addresses was one by Prof. Greggson, "The Why, the What, and the How," in teaching Elementary Agriculture.

For one month, beginning November 1, quails may be killed legally. However, there is doubtless enough other game for sportsmen without shooting quails, which are of great value to the farm in the way of destroying insects. It should not be considered a hardship to forfeit the pleasure of eating quail—on toast or quail without toast when knowing that preservation of the birds is a genuine benefit to the country's resources.

A committee of Norfolk citizens appeared before the State Board of Public Lands and Buildings in Lincoln Tuesday to urge action looking to the reconstruction of the insane asylum at Norfolk. The delegation was informed that an architect was working on the plans of the proposed buildings and would have them ready by November. The asylum was destroyed by fire several years ago and there has been delay in having the institution rebuilt. The last legislature, however, made an appropriation for that purpose and it looks as though there had been ample time since then to prepare plans and start the work. Not only Norfolk, but all northeast Nebraska is interested in seeing the asylum rebuilt on the old site.

Jenkin and David Davis of Garfield precinct, and Ellis Kemick, Andrew Stam and Billy Anderson, of Hoskins, were doing business at the country seat Saturday. Messrs. Davis have lately completed a large, new barn on their farm.

Dr. J. J. Williams has let the contract for a new residence, to cost about $3,000 and to be completed by March 1. Sam Barley will do the carpenter work and Alex Holtz the brick work. The house will be located on Dr. Williams' lots west of the Presbyterian church.

The Wayne cemetery association met Monday evening and discussed business pertaining to the purchase of the ten acres to be added to the cemetery. No resolutions were passed, and the session adjourned to the 27th inst. when definite action will probably be taken to complete the deal for the new grounds.

E. C. Brooks had an auction sale at his farm in Garfield precinct last Thursday and everything offered was disposed of at good prices. Mr. Brooks was taken sick the day before the sale and was unable to be out at that time. His health was improving at last accounts, however. He expects to sell, or rent his farm and remove to California. Twenty years ago Mr. Brooks was conductor on the railroad running through here and is well known in this part of the state. He is highly respected by a large circle of acquaintances in Wayne county.

BARN AND HORSES BURNED.

D. A. Jones suffered a heavy loss by fire on his farm three miles west of town, last night. His large, new barn, eight head of horses, several buggies and a quantity of hay and grain were burned. The origin of the fire is unknown. The family retired about 8:30 o'clock, and near midnight Mr. and Mrs. Jones were aroused by crackling timbers and the illumination, and discovered flames issuing from the barn. Mr. Jones was unable to reach the building in time to save the horses or remove any of the other contents.

The barn was built last spring, completed in May and was one of the largest and best in the county. Painting it was finished only last week. The barn cost about $1500 and was insured for $1000. The horses and other contents were worth over $1000, with very light insurance.

TEACHERS' MEETING.

The Joint Teachers' Association of Cedar, Dakota, Dixon, Thurston and Wayne counties had a largely attended meeting in Emerson last Saturday, each county being well represented. Great interest was manifested in the proceedings and the meeting was one of pleasure and profit for all. Prof. J. M. Price presided and added much to the spirit and interest of the program. The papers and addresses were interspersed with appropriate singing. The subject of "Hand Training" was treated in an interesting manner by E. H. McMillan of Emerson. In the discussion that followed, several teachers explained the character of the work being done in this line in their own schools.

The paper on "Natural Study" was a good one and gave many suggestions for work suitable for each month. A lively discussion followed. Some believed such work unprofitable because of the lack of system in presenting it and because it is supplanted work in the essentials, while others held that it is as practical as any other instruction now given in our schools.

MASTER OF THE MINE

By Robert Buchanan.

CHAPTER XXII.
Thus it was that poor Annie returned to her home and was received once again as a member of the little circle at St. Gildot's. But things were sadly changed for her, poor child, and sometimes I watched her patient endurance; my heart rose in revolt and I blamed myself for having been the means of bringing her home again.

But when people have poverty before them they cannot afford to慷慨地 give up their possessions, and I soon came to the conclusion that the best way to help Annie was to help myself—to obtain employment in St. Gildot's instead of at the question I turned my attention to other quarters. After many hopeless disappointments and endless correspondence, I obtained a situation as overseer of a copper mine in Devonshire, in the middle of my preparations had happy in the thought of being able to help a part of the globe where my fortunes could not find me out, when one day heard a piece of news which told at one blow all my hopes of the future, and made my life mere Dead Sea fruit.

A report spread over the village that George Redruth was about to be married with to Madeline Graham.

When Annie heard the news, she cried bitterly; and I, blind as usual, believed she died out of sympathy for me.

"It is a shame, Hugh," she said, "after having made you love her, that she would fly away another man."

"Don't say a word against Mrs. Redruth," I returned, "for she is an angel."

"Yes, hold your peace," cried my wife.

"The news to us, and why should you be surprised? And, after all, the better it is, she could never have loved you, Hugh."

There was sound sense in my wife's words, though at the time with the deepest jealousy and hatred raging in my heart against the woman who had planted the seed and did not listen to them.

A few days' reflection, however, brought me to a better state of mind—showed me that I was a fool, and that the news which had wrought such an astounding effect upon me was only what I might have expected.

It was a fine bright night, clear and still, though the shifting clouds in the sky predicted storm. I had strolled out, and found the sea as calm as a millpond, fringed with white where the edge lashed the stones upon the shore. The moon was shining radiantly upon it; when upon the boat house, which I looked at leisurely, remembering how I had carried Madeline there. With a heavy drawn sigh I was about to move away, when a hand was laid upon my shoulder, and turning, I found myself face to face with Madeline herself!

Here she stood, looking more like a spirit than a thing of flesh and blood; her face was so white, her eyes so sad. She was wrapped from head to foot in costly furs, while a black hood was drawn tightly over her head and the winter ice chain.

"Madeline!" I said. "Miss Graham, you are here at this hour?"

"Yes," she answered calmly, smiling a little; "it is a strange place to find not is it not? But then you know Mr. Trelawney, I am a strange creature."

"I may as well confess the truth. I followed you here to-night."

After our dinner, this evening, I called on Miss Anita, intending to pay you a visit at the cottage. When we came within sight of the gate, I saw that she had stopped to speak to you, and you moved away, striking her hat and向着 the sea toward the sun. I sent Anita back, and followed you here."

I was not altogether glad that she had done so. It was torture to be near her, looked at her, and to know that she had come straight from the caressing arms of another man. However, I commanded myself sufficiently to say:

"It is not right for you to be here, Miss Graham. Will you let me take you home?"

"You shall do so presently," she answered, not looking at me, but keeping her eyes fixed upon the sea. "Now I wish to talk to you. Is it true you are away?"

"Yes, it is quite true."

"You will be glad to go," she continued, "to leave your home?"

"I replied: "I shall be glad to return to my home—why, I have no home now, all is so sorely changed, I shall never be happiness for me again!"

"I shall talk very bitterly," continued she. "What do you mean, Mr. Trelawney?"

"I answered, utterly losing control, "that through all those years of darkness and trouble, I have been sustained by one thought, one hope."

"Graham, we are alone together to-night; there is no one but you to hear me. I may never see you again in this world; therefore I will say it. I have loved you all my life!"

She put up her hand and said, hurriedly: "Mr. Trelawney, please say no more!"

"But it was too late; I took her hand and kissed it."

"I loved you," I continued, "in those far-off days when we were boy and girl together. Then years afterward when we met again, I saw you back to my arms. Once again I had looked into your face, my darling, but one hope, one thought, I knew. I was a madman. I knew there was a gulf between us broader than the sea from which I snatched you; and yet, fool that I was, I lived in my paradise, and refused to see the pitfalls which were looming ahead. It was enough to know that I loved you, and that sometimes I was gladdened by a sight of your face."

I paused, and dropped her hand; she was crying.

"Miss Graham," I cried, "don't cry, for heaven's sake! You have a right to hate me for what I have said."

She quickly brushed away her tears, and said: "I don't, please, Mr. Trelawney."

"Don't say so, please, I honor and love you more than I can say—more than I can confess, even to myself."

"I shall pray always for your welfare and happiness, and I shall never forget you as long as I live!"

"Suddenly I said, "Miss Graham, when are you to be married?" She started hesitated for a moment, and then replied:

"I don't quite know. I am going up to London shortly. We are to be married there."

Every word she uttered seemed to stab me to the heart. Up to this, and along with it, wild thoughts that the reports I had heard of her marriage were not founded—now that hope was gone.

"Oh, shaw," she said, and trembled slightly.

"Why do people generally marry one another?" she answered. "Still, there is a very grave reason why this should be, and began shaking hands. Then Mike rose, saying slowly, held out his hands flat:

"Shake hands, Master," he said. "If you can't like me, you can't like any two of us. You may shake me to-night and willing, but I'll go back you'll be the right sort to be master here."

So we shook hands, and from that moment my physical supremacy was indisputable. Instead of dismissing my captive, I kept him in his place, and he afterwards became my right-hand man. After that day I had very little trouble in retaining my due authority as overseer of the Gwenivore mine.

TRAFFIC OF THE PACIFIC.

SOME ADVANTAGES OF PUGET SOUND AS THE GATEWAY TO THE ORIENT.

Puget Sound, according to a writer in the Review of Reviews, is the logical gateway of the United States to the Pacific Orient, by reason of the fact of its geographical position. The short cut from the United States to the Orient, as one will see when he consults his globe, is probably by way of the Sandwich Islands, but the globe in fact makes the Asiatic shore line almost a continuation or projection of the American shore line to the other side of the globe. Thus, the most direct route from either San Francisco or San Diego, Cal., to Japan or China, instead of being westerly by way of the Sandwich Islands, is northerly past Puget sound and the Bering sea. It is 1,250 miles farther from San Francisco westerly via Hawaii to Yokohama, Shanghai or Hongkong than from Puget sound, northerly to the same destinations. In other words, the San Francisco round trip to the Orient via Hawaii is 2,500 miles longer than the Puget sound round trip via Bering sea, which is equivalent to a week's voyage for a fifteen-knot vessel, and nearly nine days for a twelve-knot vessel. This advantage of a week to ten days in the length of the voyage is the logical basis for the traffic in Puget sound as the gateway of oriental commerce.

In the second place, the Puget sound route for American commerce with the Orient is about one-half the length of the New York route via the Suez canal; the haul is 13,750 miles as compared with 5,830 miles from Seattle to Hongkong. From New York via the Suez equal to Yokohama the distance is over 13,000 miles as compared with 4,240 miles from Puget sound to Yokohama. Why should the United States circumnavigate the globe to reach the Orient by way of Europe when it has a short cut of its own with one-half the length of haul?

The agent during our first interview, hinted that the miners needed an iron hand to rule them. That very afternoon I inspected the place, and found myself inducted in turn by an villainous set of faces as I had ever encountered. There was much muttering and murmuring, for the fellows wanted to be under the direction of one of their own number, one Michael Looe, a red-haired giant.

The next day, the first after my installation, I found out the sort of opposition which I had to reckon. As I stood by the open mine, giving some directions, Looe came up against me with a pick-axe on his shoulder, and almost struck me. A harsh laugh greeted this performance.

"Can't 'ea look where you'm gain, Master," cried the fellow, grinning slyly.

Another definite and convincing advantage which American commerce will enjoy in taking the direct trade channel from Puget sound to the Orient is the avoidance of $2 a ton charge levied upon it by the Suez canal.

I was the place where the worst of names, and few men would have accepted the situation at any price.

Nothing So Wonderful in the Days of Specialism.

DR. CALDWELL.

The success of Dr. Caldwell is attributed to his skill and knowledge. Dr. Caldwell, a well-known physician and specialist of wide reputation, having given her entire time and practice to a line of specialism, has won a large number of patients, and is handling those troubles to certainly come forward as a master specialist. Her faculty for mastering disease, her ability to diagnose and treat every disease known by few physicians. Dr. Caldwell, although a young woman in life, a plain woman and one who has given up the up-to-date fads, has however, one of the most brilliant reputations. She does not profess or pretend to practice the old plan of fashion, which is to look wise and say nothing. She has the ability to examine and to ascertain the symptoms of disease, and the spot where located, and most of all she knows from experience, from what she has done, what the patient can expect from the others in the future. It is said by Dr. Caldwell's friends that she can diagnose a disease of any patient without asking them a single question. She is a good physician and a good doctor than for the wrong treatment, she will take an incurable disease and lead the patient to believe that she can cure them.

Her business is large and she has plenty to do, even at times, more than she can do. Without taking incurable diseases and deceiving her patients, she has a great reputation. One of the best schools in America. She has practiced her profession in some of the principal hospitals in this country. Her practice is limited to those cases which the ordinary house doctor fails to cure, such as female diseases, heart diseases, diseases of children, etc. Her practice is limited to the plain, hard-practice is mostly among the plain, hard-working people, who are unable to pay for the cost of their treatment. She is responsible for her charges and treatment with those who are not able to pay. She is charitable and it is said has never been known to refuse to treat a patient who is worthy and in need. A number of important cases that we hereby take the liberty to publish, which might be of interest to some who do not know more of Dr. Caldwell's great work:
