IN THE VICINITY.

Edward & Bradford have sold their lumber yard in Emerson to the Holmquist Grain and Lumber company.

This week will about see the end of corn husking about Randolph. Corn has begun to move now and the shellers are going.—Randolph Times.

On the 30th inst., Father Haley will deliver his interesting lecture, "The Life of Christ," at Emerson, illustrating it with seventy beautiful views from the Bible.

Prof. Durin of Wayne, father of Mrs. Jap Dennis, of this place came up on Saturday to spend a few days with his daughter. He favored this office with a call before he left.—Osmond Republican.

Officials of the Chicago-Northwestern railroad have lately been going over their lines for the purpose of urging their employes to exercise greater economy in the use of fuel and other supplies.

Ed. A. Fry, publisher of the Niobrara Pioneer, and for thirty years associated with newspaper work in Nebraska, has gone to Roanoke, Va., to consider a proposition to join the staff of the Daily Press of that place.

Some half baked individual amused himself by shooting the insulators off from a telephone pole west of town last Saturday and thus put several farmers' phones out of business for a day or two.—Allen News.

Norfolk is entertaining a proposition made by the Catholic Sisters for a first-class hospital. They propose to build an institution that will cost $50,000 if the city will furnish half the money. The hospital would be self-sustaining, though for the free use of those who could not afford to pay.

T. J. Shelby obtained little satisfaction from his 10th suits in the district court at Popoa last week. In his action against F. D. Fales for $6,000 damages, the defendant's attorney raised the point that the jury had been illegally impaneled and accordingly the panel was discharged and the case goes over for another term. Mr. Fales was Congressman McCarthy's political manager, and goes to Washington as his private secretary. In A. W. Shelby's case against J. M. Hurley, clerk of the courts in Dixon county, Judge Graves directed a verdict for the defendant.

A number of little orphans will arrive at Laurel today from New York on their way to O'Neill and other points west. The distribution is being made through a Catholic society, and Father Loecker succeeded in disposing of four of the little orphans in this county. A little girl will be taken into the Ohas, Weiss home in Hartington. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beste will also take a little girl. B. Wubben, of near St. Helena, will provide food, shelter and raiment for one little girl, while a baby boy will be taken in the Daniel Felber home near Coleridge.—Hartington Herald.

An individual, saturated with liquid inspiration, created a panic among the bankers at West Point Friday night at midnight. He saw a couple of strangers in a saloon and in accordance with his fired imagination, he concluded that they were burglars and that an attack on the banks of the town was imminent. Therefore, he took possession of the telephone system and didn't quit until he had notified the presidents and cashiers of the three banks of the town. The officials hurried from their comfortable beds and started posthaste for their respective banks with the expectation of a bloody conflict with robbers. They found their banks undisturbed, and that the two strangers, alluded to by the wary drunk, were inoffensive musicians.

A NEW HISTORICAL NOVEL.

THE HERALD has received from Rev. Geo. Bray of Ponca, a copy of his, recently issued historical novel, "By the King's Command," which, grounded on facts, is presented in a very interesting style. The popularity of the book may be appreciated from the fact that the first edition has been exhausted and a second one being published. Rev. Bray has chosen "Reginald Drew" as his pen name, and a perusal of his work amply justifies his aspiration to authorship. Northeast Nebraska being the home of the author, this section should be especially interested in his book. The Sioux City Journal, in a recent issue, reviews the novel and refers to Rev. Bray's experience in England as follows:

The heart history of the beautiful, unfortunate Anne Boleyn—who, royally wooed for seven years, gave her hand where her heart was not, shared the throne of England, and went to the block when the gusty passion of her fickle lord found in Lady Jane Seymour a new object for his lustful adoration—ought to furnish good material for a love romance.

So Reginald Drew found it in his tale. By the King's Command, just issued by the Broadway Publishing company, New York. The author employs as the mouthpiece of his story Master Thomas Wyatt, a gentleman of the privy council of Henry VIII. Master Thomas himself is smitten with the charms of the fair Anne, who has only a sisterly affection for him, they being childhood playmates. He tells the pitiful story with many quaint turns of speech and many fond terms of endearment for the lovely girl. The reader who follows him learns to amend the judgment of the cold historians as to her character. He finds that she was not a scheming, ambitious, woman to wear a crown even if to do so she must trample upon the heart of good Queen Catherine and the decalogue. She is rather the victim of the social ambition of her family and of the imperious will of a selfish monarch. It was only a sisterly command that her lover, Lord Henry Percy was married to Lady Mary Talbot; by the king's command that she was joined to the sovereign himself after his miserable divorce from the wife of his youth; an affair which started no end of intrigues and that odest Cardinal Wolsey his place as chancellor. True, as a favorite of the king, she may have been dazzled by the prospect of wearing a crown. And at last when compromised by the king's attentions she may have preferred to be called the king's wife to bearing the appellation of the king's mistress unjustly given her by the populace and insinuated by many accounts. The reader will have only pity and sympathy for the young woman after a perusal of the book; and the one claim which the author strongly insists upon for his work is that its historical foundation is accurate.

By the King's Command introduces the reader to some of the noted personages of England in the early half of the sixteenth century. Besides the great cardinal whose pliant was that he served his God, and was regarded in the characteristic manner of the Black King, Hal, Sir Thomas More, Thomas Cromwell and others are brought up in such an intimate way that they cease to be reader to be the dim, misty shadows of history. There are also in the book glimpses of the pomp and glitter of the boy's reign when the king practically paid for two royal courts—that of the chancellor as well as that of the king.

Mr. Bray was reared at the court of England, his father being a retainer at the queen's palace, and his family since the coming of William the Conqueror being near the sovereign. He is a fervent admirer of the English part, where much of the action of the book takes place, as the average boy is with his playground. He has had exceptional access to historical relics and has had the chance to become familiar with the traditions of the past, and has combined with his literary training, to qualify him in a special way for the production of a historical work. Mr. Bray has written a number of short stories and sketches prior to undertaking "By the King's Command," but nothing so ambitious as this. It is a work of great merit, and is a course of instruction which he proposes publishing in the time.

THE SPELLING CONTESTS

Arthur Neely, of this place, won the high school spelling contest Thursday evening and Edgar Warner, also of Wayne, carried off the honor at the county school or eighth grade contest Friday evening, and, therefore, will represent Wayne county in the state contest at Lincoln on New Year's day. Harry Jett, of Wayne, won second place Thursday night and Lolo Harter, of Carroll, came out second in the county contest. Thus, they are chosen as alternates and would participate in the state contest in case anything should prevent the winners from doing so.

The spelling Thursday evening was oral and about twenty students took part. E. A. Lundburg pronounced the words and presented 350 from the spelling book used in the school. The judges were: Supt. Bright, P. of Wolf and E. A. Lundburg. There was a good-sized attendance of spectators, who enjoyed the contest and the literary program that was rendered.

The words were written by the contestants Friday evening. One hundred words were given from a list of 2,000 contained in the book which the schools are studying, and in addition twenty-five words, outside of that book, were presented. Young Warner spelled every word correctly, while Miss Harter missed only six out of the list. The words were pronounced by Prof. Gregg, and the following judges acted: A. A. Hines, Prof. Snodgrass, Burret Wright, Edna Britton and Josie Carter. A literary program was given while the judges reached a decision, and though a written contest could not be so interesting as an oral one, those present felt amply repaid for attending.

THE DANCE ON THE FRONTIER.

Dancing is a pastime moderately indulged in here compared to its fascination for people in many of the far western, frontier towns. In some localities, all occasions, except funerals and religious congregations, wind up with dances. There are people who cannot tolerate a gathering that does not close with a dance. The HERALD is reminded of an incident: A big cattleman and social leader drifted into a large revival meeting in one of the mountain towns of Oregon. The evangelist was comparing the temperatures of two distinct localities and exhorting his hearers to get into the straight and narrow path. Before the end of the services, the cattleman had wilted and burst into a convulsion of tears. Solicitous for his spiritual welfare, the evangelist went to him with words of cheer. "Parson," responded the cattleman, as he recovered strength to speak, "I can't stand it to see such a fine gathering, knowing that it must be dismissed and scattered without a dance," and then he lapsed into another paroxysm of grief.

ALONE IN THE WORLD; OR REAPING THE HARVEST

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

"I did not mean—," he began, when Rachel broke in again, all the while she was speaking, and she fairly shivered under its scathing contemptuous sting.

Valentine Harrington got up and came to meet the old man, who had been father, mother, everything to him since he could remember.

"Am I hard?" Rachel cried. "I think not. At least, I strike fair for your face—I do not hit so severely as to strike my blows for me. Have I not the right to be hard? Now, I dare say, you will be willing to own me."

"You are not my dear lad," said Val. "You're still hankering after that girl, eh?"

"I will try to forget it," she said, and she took her own proper position in society as my grandchild. He went on, slipping back into his old habit of conversation.

"Did you see the lady who painted it?" the general inquired, as if he had no real interest in asking the question, and none of any kind in hearing the answer.

"I promise Mrs. Damas that I'll look in some time or other, but I never did," Valentine went on, not meaning to convey a false impression or to evade the truth, but only explaining the position of affairs after the manner of fashionable people.

"You must not be deceived," said Time, "we must not bid, but the way is long and the world is wide, and we must be ready to meet the tide."

CHAPTER XII. When the old general got into his carriage at Mrs. Damas' door he did not turn the horses' heads in the direction of home—on the contrary, he drove away down the Fulham road at a tidy pace, for he wanted to think it all over. He was too clever a man to try to blind himself to the truth, and the truth told him that every word the girl had spoken was true.

"I should like you to see Miss Dudley. She's one of the prettiest girls I've met for a long time. When you've given me your opinion about her I'll tell you her history."

CHAPTER XIII. Gen. Vandeleur had, or thought he had, a very good reason for not telling Valentine Harrington at once that the young painter, Ray Dudley, who had set such a mark on his heart, had just seen a mark on other than his own forehead. And his idea was this: Having recognized Rachel and acknowledged the relationship between them, his mind had naturally placed her at once in the position of his heiress.

"I never set eyes on her until this afternoon," answered the general, promptly, "but I know her family—well."

CHAPTER XIV. It was a very uncomfortable remembrance of the merciless way in which he had used his power to what he called extreme Valentine out of his difficulty, and he had a sort of instinct that if he were to tell Val that the girl was his granddaughter, that attitude of cold cruelty would be at once what was in his mind and would start an acquaintance under a disadvantage, the disadvantage of a determination to be neither led nor driven into that particular arrangement.

"I have a very uncomfortable remembrance of the merciless way in which he had used his power to what he called extreme Valentine out of his difficulty, and he had a sort of instinct that if he were to tell Val that the girl was his granddaughter, that attitude of cold cruelty would be at once what was in his mind and would start an acquaintance under a disadvantage, the disadvantage of a determination to be neither led nor driven into that particular arrangement."

"I am sorry to hear that," said the old man, who had been father, mother, everything to him since he could remember.

"I suppose there is—I haven't felt it," Gen. Vandeleur answered. "You're feeling the effects of India yet—eh? I'm better used to it—ha! ha! I'm—give minutes to eight. I won't dress to-night. Val! I'll just go and wash my hands, but I won't dress."

"I am sorry to hear that," said the old man, who had been father, mother, everything to him since he could remember.

HANGING OF THE HOLLY.

With Polly I danced to be laughing, the old general said, gallantly, "and—ah! I have brought my godson to see you. May I present him to you?"

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

We must not allow ourselves to forget the true meaning of the Christmas spirit. It will bring happiness to us just in proportion as we bring happiness to others.

FIARNS TO GET $7,250,000.

Agreement Reached with Gov. Taft for Lands in Philippines. Gov. Taft has reached an agreement with the friars by which the United States is to pay $7,250,000 for the property in the Philippines held by the order and finally settling the much vexed question which has troubled the authorities ever since the occupation of the islands.

REACHED A GREEN OLD AGE.

Ancients Accomplished Much After Passing the Allotted Years of Man. It is generally supposed that the men and women of this age live longer than those of ancient times, but certain classical scholars of Europe are of a different opinion, and they point to the reign of Emperor Vespasian as proof that they have good ground for disagreeing with seculists on this point.

WHAT CHRISTMAS BROUGHT.

BY GENEVIEVE ULMAR. "I do know as we can make much Christmas for the children this year," said Mrs. Shaw to her husband a few days before the holiday.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

"No more than I do," she answered. "An' it seems to me that I just couldn't bear to see it go away. But we must have a little money for Christmas, an' the 's' that 's' balance to the doctor."

ALARM-CLOCK BRAIN.

This Man Can Wake up at Any Time He Chooses. To be able to waken one's self at a pre-determined and usually unreasonably hour without external prompting is an accomplishment of which one may well boast.

MINCE PIC HISTORY.

Christmas mince pie was originally a compound of the choicest spices and edible productions of the Orient. It was eaten in commemoration of the offerings of the three wise men who carried rare spices from the east and brought them near to the infant Christ born in a manger.

WHAT TO GIVE YOUR BEST GIRL.

Buy young man, if you don't know what to get your best girl for Christmas, the list may help you: Cuddly, lined slippers, gold handle, book stamp albums, jewelry, folding scissors, manometer sets, work boxes, music rolls, umbrellas, gloves, leather portfolios, furnished slippers, muffs, music boxes, bags, watch, selections of music, opera glasses, crocheting chair, water color outfit, locket and chain, lace handkerchiefs, book bag, handsome fan, nice hat pin, hair-receiver, and almost any article of wearing apparel that is better than the ordinary.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

"ANN'S AGE" CAUSES ROW.

Teacher and Director Clash Over Solution of Problem. R. M. Oliver, a district school teacher in Kansas, has appealed to the county superintendent to save him from dismissal, with which he is threatened.

RAILROADS.

It is thought within six weeks express trains between Albany and New York, 150 miles, will be in operation. The Government will soon open the Rosebud Indian reservation in (Montana) South Dakota, amounting to 160,000 acres.

The inter-bangable mileage bureau, established a few months ago by a number of members of the Truck Line Association, has met with success.

The Texas Railroad Commission has decided to adopt a general classification of freight rates for the State of Texas to succeed the western classification.

After a year's trial the Southwestern lines have abandoned their joint equipment, and will continue their efforts to secure immigration individually.

The 33 1/3 per cent reduction in rates on steel products, decided upon by the traffic officers of the trunk and central freight lines, has been extended to cover steel rails.

Orders for between 600,000 and 700,000 tons of steel rails for delivery in 1904 have already been placed with the rail manufacturers of the United States.

Railroad earnings show a most gratifying tendency, and this is the best possible evidence that the depression in Wall street is not shared by legitimate business outside of the circles of "bant finance."

Recent developments in the Republic of Mexico and the dominion of Honduras very clearly mark the tendency toward a closer relation between the government and the railroads of those political and geographical sections.

The troubles of the western roads over the division of the immigrant business have been settled, and in consequence the Rock Island will return to the Western Passenger Association and resign the Western Freight Bureau.

General Manager Harrington, of the Illinois Central, says the building of an isthmian canal will immensely increase the export business of his road, and that it would begin a new era of industrial activity in the Gulf States.

It is probably an exaggeration to say that the gross income of the roads for the year 1903 will be $1,500,000,000, that of 1902, $1,300,000,000, and that of 1901, $1,100,000,000, which means an extra 1 per cent on the outstanding capital.

The Union Pacific is making plans for the colonization of more than 4,000,000 acres of land in western Kansas and Nebraska, in eastern Colorado and in the West.

The company's plan is to be similar to the one adopted by James J. Hill so successfully in the far Northwest.

The Union Pacific's total land grant originally amounted to 33,000,000 acres. The company began the sale of these lands in 1882, and has since sold about 17,000,000 acres of the 33,000,000 acres. The sales have amounted this year to 1,200,000 acres, which have fetched the company $225,000,000.

EVENTS OF THE YEAR.

1903 LEAVES DARK RECORD IN MANY RESPECTS.

Deeds of Rapine and Violence and Reaching Natural Disasters Over-shadow Its Showing of the Fruits of Industry and Peace.

The year 1903 has been marked by massacre, murder, disaster and violence that are in sharp contrast with the underlying spirit of progress that is steadily making for friendliness and better mutual understanding between individuals and nations.

In May occurred the great massacre of Jews in Kishinev, Rumania. A month later King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia were murdered in their palace in Belgrade by their own bodyguards and officers.

In the world of politics earthquake events have been the African war, the revolutions in Panama and the election in Hawaii.

The year's full of misdeeds includes the execution of the anarchist, Giuseppe Sacco, and the execution of the anarchist, Giuseppe Sacco.

"Old Jack"

So Great was the modesty of "Stone-wall" Jackson that he often found his greatness embarrassing, and he shrank from public notice and applause.

Whenever his soldiers caught sight of him they rent the air with their cheers, which he always acknowledged by lifting his hat, and then putting spurs to his horse and galloping away at the top of his speed.

"Little Spot," his favorite horse, writes his biography, seemed to know the signal for his stampede, and perhaps it was from these "marvelous" flights that the "foot cavalry" drew some of their inspiration.

"What's Old Jack, or a rabbit?" In the movements of the troops about Richmond, on one occasion Jackson and his staff were compelled to ride through a field of uncut oats.

The man that got his hat with the profoundest respect, and in a rare case, now all kindness and reverence, was General Jackson, who was the only man that ever got his hat with the profoundest respect, and in a rare case, now all kindness and reverence.

Long Hair

About a year ago, my hair was coming out very fast, so I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It stopped the falling and made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 4 1/2 inches in length.

There's another hunger than that of the stomach. Hair hunger, for instance. Hungry hair needs food, needs hair vigor—Ayer's. This is why we say that Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color, and makes the hair grow long and heavy.

Zu den Deutschen Kirche findet am Weihnachtsfest Morgens um halb elf Uhr der Weihnachts-Gottesdienst statt. Der Abend wird wie gewöhnlich der Jugend gewidmet.

Wieder ist das fröhliche, seltsame Weihnachtsfest vor der Thür. Wenn diese Zeit in die Hände der Feinde gelangt, da ist wohl meistens die Zeit des Enttäuschens, des Sinns und des Kopfschüttelns vorüber und die Stunden des Gedens und Einlaufens des Jodels und Dantens sind angebrochen.

Die Forderung ist die gleiche, die wir Deutschen haben uns zu Weihnachten mit allerlei Gaben der Liebe zu erfreuen. Und diese Idee bleibt sich auch bei andern Nationalitäten dieses Landes immer mehr Bahn.
