SHORTHORN SALE

Blooded Stock Sells at Fairly Good Prices.

LARGE CROWD IN ATTENDANCE

Spirited Bidding at Times, Though Prices Did Not Reach Very High Point—Sale Demonstrated That Farmers of Northeast Nebraska are Interested in Well Bred Cattle and Will Profit Thereby.

A fairly good sized audience, probably 350 persons, faced Colonel Woods when he arose Tuesday afternoon to open the Short-horn cattle sale at Brown's livery barn. After the usual preliminaries the sale was opened and while at times the bidding was quite spirited yet at no time did prices reach any very high point, the highest price obtained being for the splendid bull calf, Lord Banff 20th, which was purchased by A. B. Clark for $160. The highest priced cow sold for $137.50, becoming the property of Owen Kane of Wisner. The offering was all that it was advertised to be and was an honor to the contributors, Messrs. Hart, Clark and Lesman. The greater part of the offering was disposed of to farmers of Wayne county and from the purchases made at this and former sales it is evident they appreciate this grand breed of cattle and the future has promise of many good herds in the county.

The purchasers and prices paid were as follows: Cows—Maid of Linden, $77.50, B. P. Peterson, Carroll, Neb.; Florimel 2nd, $57.50, C. H. Merritt, Wakefield, Neb.; Haida, $60, S. E. Auker, Wayne; Mary Byron, $60, Anton Jorgenson, Carroll; Esther, $72.50, J. L. Granthor, Hartington; Flower Girl, $80, Simon Lessman, Wayne; Graceful, $60, L. Brownrig, Pender; Mina, $80, S. E. Auker, Wayne; Delight 11th, $75, Ezra Beckenhauer, Wayne; Miss Caroline Craggs, $110, C. A. Saunders, Manilla, Ia.; Cora, $115, J. L. Granthor; Fred-erica Omega, $137.50, Owen Kane, Wisner; Evaline, $97.50, G. F. Scoville, Hartington; Fennel Duchess 15th, $125, W. E. Paul, Concord; Princess 2nd and calf at foot, $130, Mrs. Mac Johnson, Concord; 85th Lady Barmington G, $110, J. L. Granthor; Maggie May, $85, O. S. Barr & Son, Clearwater, Neb.; Frona Girl, $95, W. E. Paul; Roan Rose, $102.50, H. U. Roland, Wayne; Lady D'Arc 2nd, $102.50, Amos Beckenhauer, Wayne; Flora G, $92.50, O. S. Barr & Son. Bulls—Living Ribbon, $72.50, H. Wester, Wayne; Wayne Henry, $90, C. J. Nairn, Carroll; Wayne's Champion, $70, O. Kesterson, Wakefield; Lord Banff 20th, $160, A. B. Clark, Wayne; Wayne Mysie, $60, Chas. Helkes, Wakefield; Senlac, $85, Robt. Gimmell, Carroll; Victor Crickshank, $55, C. Weissenbier, Wayne; Victor, $32.50, G. F. Scoville; Prince Maplewood, $42.50, John Krie, Wayne; Baron's Boy, $50, A. J. Hony, Carroll; Vermont Wayne, $80, John Burman, Wakefield; Cameo, $35, Wm. Larson, Wayne; Ames, $70, G. W. Sweigart, Winnside; Hooker, $150, Ezra Beckenhauer; Jennings Vermont, $100, David Milne, Oreginton, Neb.; Agga's Lad, $50, Mrs. Johnson; Merry Wayne $50, J. M. Lloyd, Wayne; Roan Winsom, $50, J. Molatosh, Wayne; Victor Lad, $60, E. Beckman, Laurel; Magnolia, $60, John Baker, Wakefield; Coronados Balfour, $77.50, Ed Sundahl, Wayne; Ponca Victor, $57.40, Ben Bohliken, Laurel; Mina's Abbottsburn, $75, John Paul. Total number of animals sold 44 and average price $92.10

While these prices are not high they effectually demonstrate that the farmers and breeders of this part of Nebraska are agreed that the days of the scrub animal are about numbered and that in this as all other things they are rapidly progressing and keeping fully abreast of the times.

FOG.

There is an old saying, that as a country becomes richer and more prosperous, it becomes more foggy. If a country grows foggy as it gets rich, it is a curious phenomenon. The facts actually look a little like it. Thus England, rich and prosperous, is afflicted with terrible fogs so that in London gas lights are usual at midday. Along the eastern coast, as at New York City and Boston where fortunes are counted by the million, the same foggy condition prevails. In early times in those localities, when settlers were few and poor, they were not thus troubled. Clear skies and bright sunshine were the rule in the days of Peter Stayvessant.

Along the western coast in rich, California fog is a daily occurrence. At San Francisco, for instance, and even at Los Angeles, the cold, damp fogs which come up from the ocean every evening render overcoats desirable every day in the year. Here in Nebraska, its first settlers rarely ever saw a fog. Nature kindly avoided to oppress the struggling pioneers during their years of poverty.

Now, however, the case is different. Industry has brought wealth. Cities take the place of dug-outs and log cabins. Decolite practices have given birth to splendid farms. Thus it was and is in Wayne county, and elsewhere. But we have more fog every week than we had in three months twenty years ago.

It is likely that the curious habit of fogs following the footsteps of prosperity is merely an accidental coincidence and not a law of nature. But the facts remain: Wayne is rich and its fogs are many. As a sample we had tough fogs last night and the night before. In commemoration thereof we have written the foregoing reflections, which no one is asked to believe. Bees are said to follow civilization, but that fogs make special efforts to tag after riches is a hard thing to swallow. We don't.

HIGH FIVE PARTY.

Mrs. L. F. Neely and Mrs. E. J. Raymond entertained a party of lady friends in a very pleasant manner at the home of the former Tuesday evening. The reception rooms were made attractive by beautiful floral decorations, China vases, geraniums and asparagus having been used. A punch bowl, also decorated, was presided over by Miss Edna Neely. The guests assembled at 7:30 o'clock and participated in progressive high five until 10 when light refreshments were served. In the high five contest Mrs. Frank Strahn won first prize a Haviland China cup and saucer, and Mrs. A. C. Parker second prize, also a cup and saucer. Guests: Mrs. Robt. Armstrong, Mrs. P. L. Miller, Mrs. H. S. Ringland, Mrs. Harry Craven, Mrs. W. D. Hammond, Mrs. A. T. Witter, Mrs. J. W. Jones, Mrs. O. D. Franks, Mrs. Wm. Larson, Mrs. Frank Strahn, Mrs. R. Ley, Mrs. C. Farcher, Mrs. A. O. Parker, Mrs. W. H. McNeal, Mrs. H. Kellogg, Mrs. Fred Brown, Mrs. James Britton, Mrs. Chas. Sobulthorn, Mrs. A. B. Clark, Mrs. John Kate, Mrs. E. Crawford, Mrs. James Miller, Mrs. B. F. Swan, Mrs. Frank Gaertner, Mrs. Ted Perry and Mrs. Jacobs.

FELL INTO THE WELL.

At Beemer, Neb., on Monday a young man named Arthur Nellor, the son of George Nellor who has a store at that place, while engaged with a team and scraper filling up an old well, made a misstep and fell in, and the horses and scraper were pulled in after him. The accident and young Nellor's precarious situation were not discovered until he had been in the well several hours. The horses were taken out dead, but Nellor escaped with no broken bones and with slight injuries. Although beneath the horses and scraper, he had only a few bruises on his head and leg. His escape from death is deemed almost miraculous. The well is thirty feet deep.

REPLEVIN CASE.

A case wherein Martha Kay sought to recover the worth of a horse from Albert Krueger was tried before a jury in Judge Hunter's court last Saturday, Welch & Davis appearing for the plaintiff and Wilbur & Berry for the defendant. The action grew out of a horse trade, the plaintiff maintaining that the animal belonged to her and should not have been traded off by her husband. The jury found a judgment for the plaintiff for $100, an amount believed to equal the value of the horse.

A CONSOLIDATION

Herald Changes Ownership In The Deal.

THE REPUBLICAN SUSPENDS

E. Cunningham Becomes Proprietor, But Present Management Will Be Continued. United Subscriptions Will Give the Combination a List of 1,500. Transfer of Ownership Takes Place October 1.

W. Huse & Son made an unexpected sale of the WAYNE HERALD to E. Cunningham late Saturday afternoon, transfer of ownership to take place Saturday, October 1. Mr. Cunningham has arranged to continue the present management. The hitherto business and political policy of the paper will remain and by extending and improving its service and by fair and impartial treatment for all, the HERALD will endeavor to merit general confidence and support. The sale developed suddenly from negotiations looking to a merging of the Republican's subscription list with that of the HERALD and the removal of the former's plant from this county, thus reducing the number of papers in Wayne to two. All agreed that this desirable end should be attained, but how it should be accomplished aroused some differences of opinion, resulting in the sale of the HERALD.

This paper absorbs the Republican's subscription list and gives due credit to those paid in advance, supplying the unexpired, time. Arrearages to the Republican, excepting sufficient to equal those paid ahead, are to be collected by W. H. Gibson. The HERALD's list, consolidated with that of the Republican, will give this paper, after eliminating duplicates, more than 1,600 bona fide subscribers—an advantage that will be readily appreciated by advertisers.

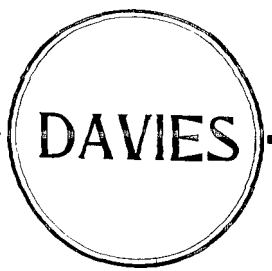

W. H. Gibson agrees to refuse local business during October and quit absolutely November 4, moving his plant out of the county within eight months. The HERALD and Democrat will retain their present quarters. The latter trades news presses with Mr. Gibson, paying a difference.

GROWTH OF CORN.

"Corn," says the philosopher of the Randolph Times, "is truly a wonderful plant. It will grow a stalk 10 to 15 feet tall and form and mature the ears in 125 days from time of planting the seed. Some early varieties will mature in 90 and 100 days. This year planting was in full spring May 20, some earlier and some later, and now after 4 months is the harvest, with good prices in sight." To the above may be added the fact that great crops of corn have resulted and with no frost to hurt.

POLITICAL SPEECH.

Hon. W. E. Andrews, auditor of the treasury department, will give an address in Wayne Friday evening, October 5, discussing political issues from a republican standpoint. He has the reputation of being a logical and fluent speaker, and the public should remember the date and hear him.

SCHOOL GIRLS DEAD.
Nine Drowned in an Outhouse Vault in Ohio.

Cincinnati, O.: At least nine school girls were suffocated in a vault Friday during the afternoon recess at Pleasant Ridge public school house, and a score of others narrowly escaped the same horrible death by being on the board.

On opposite sides of the spacious ground in the rear of the suburban school building are two outhouses. One of these outhouses was in the outhouse assigned to them when the floor gave way, precipitating them into a stone walled cesspool twelve feet deep and containing four feet of sewage.

The teachers were soon reinforced by the entire population of the school. The police and fire department rendered effective aid.

Principal Simmerman finally fainted. Then others lifted out dead bodies until the death pool was cleared. Those rescued alive presented such an appearance as to make many in the crowd of spectators faint.

James Smith, aged 14, a pupil, climbed to the roof of the schoolhouse and got the flag, which was made into a rope that rescued several.

John Steinkamp, when his daughter was not among those brought up alive, and who the doctors said were several bodies, among them that of his daughter. Then he fainted.

It is said that the timbers were found to be rotten and that one of them was split. The girls will be taken to Cincinnati for examination at the request.

The passenger list of the Prinz Oskar on the trip just ended contained the name of Romulo M. Alivier, but the steamship officials were unable to give any information concerning him. He became suddenly insane, and it was he who fired the shots.

PROGRESS OF THE RAILWAY WAR

During the past week Oyama gave up his pursuit of Kuropatkin and withdrew his forces, which had nearly reached Mukden, back to the Yentai coal mines, twelve miles north of Liaoyang. Since that time there has been no fighting between the armies and little skirmishing. Both sides are worn out. Furthermore, the Japanese, who are particularly sensitive about their transport arrangements, must now continue their lines to Bentaspitze, twenty-eight miles southeast of Mukden.

Kuroki came to Liaoyang from Fengwangcheng, about seventy miles southeast. Nodzu came along the railroad, and Oku pushed up from Takushan, a point on the coast about midway the railroad and Fengwangcheng. The three armies met and united. Before this convergence was effected, Kuroki brought supplies over the high road from Fengwangcheng, Oku over the byroads from Takushan, while Nodzu pushed his carts up both sides of the railway embankment, and had the easiest time of the three.

Now that the three armies have united, it is doubtful whether they will continue to maintain all three lines of communication. Lines of communication require guards, and guards subtract so much from the fighting force. The most exposed line was General Kuroki's. It is reported that General Linvichin, with 50,000 men, has cut this line. Fifty thousand is an absurd figure. The Russians haven't that many men to spare in raids, but 5,000 or 2,500, cavalry may have crossed the high road and stopped direct communication between Kuroki and his old fortified depot at Fengwangcheng. In that event Kuroki has an alternative. He can get his supplies up the railway, or from Newchwang by the Liao and Taitze Rivers. It may be that hereafter Oyama's whole army will maintain itself by the broader line of communication along the railway and up the two rivers from Newchwang.

The Russians have again begun to observe those cautious movements and counter-movements of small Japanese detachments which so well conceal what is going on behind. Kuroki used

The approximate location of Da Pass, where a special movement has taken place, is indicated in the map. Fushun, where it was reported that Kuroki's troops had crossed the Han river, also is indicated. It is about thirty miles northeast of Mukden. The Yentai coal mines likewise are mapped. As control of these mines is necessary for the working of the railway the Russians are expected to make a stubborn stand there.

This morning's report for six weeks before Fengwangcheng, while Nodzu employed it for over a month before Takushan and Shiyen. We shall not learn what is really going on until something happens, for the constant shifting of advance posts hides perfectly the soldier movements behind from the Russians, while the Japanese censorship will permit no news to leak out from their side. It is natural for the war correspondents to be annoyed at being so muzzled, but the event has proved that the Japanese staff was wise in its precaution. Japan feels that it is fighting for its existence and not for glory.

At Port Arthur, time is fighting against the Russian. Every day entails up more of many rounds of their insufficient supply of ammunition. Smokeless powder has given out, or, at least, there remains only a small stock of it, which is being hoarded against general assaults.

At last accounts the Japs seemed to be planning to attack Rihlung and Kikwang hills. They are strengthening their positions at Pailchwang, less than a half mile from Rihlung, and are steadily extending their parallel trenches in the direction of the forts from the north and northeast. These two forts are examples of defective engineering. Large shoulders of earth and rock ridge the northern slopes of the two hills. Immediately behind these shoulders are "dead" space which cannot be reached by guns on the top. The Japs have crawled up by night to the "dead" spaces and in this shelter have dug trenches. The detachments occupying these positions

MUST RETAKE LIAOYANG.

Czar Orders Kuropatkin to Retake the City at All Costs. The Czar has ordered Kuropatkin to retake Liaoyang at all costs. The news comes authoritatively from several sources and has completely upset the theories of the war experts. It indicates that Russia has tired of its defensive plan of action and will henceforth assume the aggressive and attempt to drive the Japs into the sea, as it threatened some time ago.

WAR NEWS IN BRIEF.

The main Russian army is believed to be at Tie Pass. Several Russian corps, in addition to two already mobilizing, are to be called out. Preparations for the attack on Port Arthur have been pushed for nineteen days. Upon the advice of his military adviser Emperor Nicholas decides to organize the second Manchurian army. The Russian cruiser Lena has been dismantled at Mare Island, where she will remain until the end of the war. Kuropatkin reports that the Japanese made an attack on Da Pass, south of Mukden, on Tuesday and were repulsed. Dispatches from Shanghai state that the Japanese have captured two more of Port Arthur's forts and are assisted by the fleet. Kuropatkin reports that important reconnaissance reports and sightings of Mukden have resulted in many changes. He disclosed the fact that the Japanese are increasing at Yentai and Bentaspitze. The Japanese are advancing eight or nine divisions' troops on the Russian front on the Han river. A report reaches St. Petersburg that Kuroki has crossed the Han river to the east and is moving on Mukden without opposition.

THE FIELD OF BATTLE

INCIDENTS AND ANECDOTES OF THE WAR.

The Veterans of the Rebellion Tell of Whistling Bullets, Bright Bayonets, Bursting Bombs, Bloody Battles, Camp Fire, Festive Bugs, Etc., Etc.

Officers with any experience outside of West Point never seemed vexed at any misnomers applied to them by soldiers in the ranks.

It is not an unusual thing, though, for a dashing young officer, whose military life had been spent among the cadets, to fume and fret over some name applied to him by some one from among the vast numbers of men, but whom he could not detect, and then to be taunted and jested from every side till he was almost frantic with rage.

But the right of soldiers to greet the officers with misapplied epithets whenever they made their appearance was a privilege never attempted to be abridged by judicious commanders. General Benning, as brave a man as any fought beneath the stars and bars, belonged to this class.

Why he was called "Old Rock" we never learned, but had one judged from what he heard when the general appeared upon the ground, he would have thought a vast crowd were rabbit hunting with only one dog; as the greeting he almost invariably received would be: "Whoo-pee! Sick him, Rock. Put him up, old fellow." But the general never gave any of these demonstrations any heed, but would pass on with seemingly other thoughts on his mind.

The general was an unassuming man, not disdaining to put his hands to the work required of his men. To illustrate this and to show how good-humoredly he took the name of Rock applied to himself, the following has been related:

The army had struck camp, and General Benning had laid off his coat and had undertaken the repair of an old wagon, when a teamster, recognizing no mark of rank in a man in his shirt-sleeves, and with an air of "get out of my way or I will run over you," backed one of the wheels of his own wagon against one of the old wagon and completely demolished it. This enraged the general considerably, which gave him the occasion to express himself.

But when he was cheered by his men with "Hurrah for Rock! Hurrah for Rock!" he pretended to have mis-understood their meaning, regained his good humor, and called out:

"Boys, don't rock him, but let the scamp go."

When General Benning found a soldier off duty and on the sick list, it was his custom not to ask to be shown a doctor's certificate, but to have the man then and there "lick out his tongue."

On one occasion, while on a forced march, just before reaching a ford on a small river or large creek, he gave orders for no man to strip before taking to the water. To see that his order was carefully carried out, he stationed himself on the opposite side of the stream, where he could see every man as he crossed.

Finally a man appeared holding his clothing above his head.

"Go right on back and wet those clothes."

"But I'm not one of your men."

"No difference. Go and wet them, I say."

"But I am one of General Anderson's men."

The poor fellow went back and dipped his clothing, though he really belonged to Anderson's brigade, which was then crossing the river.

At another place he gave the order for only those who were sick to cross the water; and when he found they were about all passing off as sick, he placed himself at the end of the crossing, and, as a man would cross, he would call out:

"Lick out your tongue, sir! Lick out your tongue, sir!" when the only light he had was that given by a lantern moon.

He was so accustomed to have men lick out their tongues, it is reported, that once, noticing a very sickly old wagon, he rode up to it, and, after noticing it very closely, he called out:

"Lick out your tongue."

Maybe the reason General Benning was called Rock was because he was first given the name of a soldier who owned a dog by that name, that was quick to catch and slow to turn loose.

The Army Tell.

Private C. A. Brasher, of Clifton, Ky., who served in Company C, Seventeenth Kentucky Infantry, contributes the following to the American Tribune:

It is hardly necessary to explain, and I could not do it if I wanted to, how the simple matter of yelling or hallooing grew to be of such gigantic proportions, and with what wonderful rapidity these simple things spread. Start a rabbit, and one yell meant a yell from every one in the regiment, and that meant a brigade yell, and so on until the whole army rapidly took up the contagion. Soldiers never stopped to inquire what it meant; they didn't care; they heard the yell far away; faint at first, gradually swelling toward them, until, like a huge wave, a terrific cyclone, it swept past to tide away in the far-away flanks of the army.

er, and instinctively it seemed that the soldiers knew something of unusual importance had occurred, and they yelled louder and with great spirit. It was probably an hour thereafter that the news from Sherman's headquarters reached us of Sheridan's splendid victories in the Shenandoah.

Toward nightfall, or even when very dark, while weary and footsore from tedious marching, a yell coming along the road from toward the front meant going into camp ahead, but how far ahead depended whether you were very far in the rear of the army or not. If you were, you were probably a considerable distance from camp.

While the picket lines were within less than a hundred yards of each other before Atlanta, in July, 1864, our pickets, by way of demonstration, were required to make almost daily charges upon the rifle pits of the enemy. Sometimes we captured several prisoners, and usually held the rifle pits until the reserves drove us out again. During these charges, of course, the usual yell accompanied. One day the spontaneous and unaccountable army yell was passing around, and, of course, was taken up by the pickets. The rebel pickets, thinking it meant the daily charge, pulled out and ran for the work behind. Seeing that they had been the victims of a huge joke, one by one you could see them slipping back into their holes and resuming hostile relations. This picket yelling was reduced to a considerable system by the pickets themselves.

I remember that the day of the Peach Tree Creek battle our division was away around to the left, and just before sundown our pickets became hotly engaged, and after seeing they were in for it for awhile, they began firing with seeming preconcerted action from the left, by file and with a regularity that seemed even then remarkable. The pop, pop, pop slowly moved from left to right, and as the last one fired to the right you could hear a simultaneous yell, then the firing by the file again, and so on until dark. Hundreds of incidents of the army yell might be given, but they are too familiar to be of interest.

Brave Girls of Civil War.

As shown by military records, many brave girls of the early '60s aspired to more venturesome work in war than that of nursing sick and wounded soldiers.

Mrs. L. H. Seelye, who recently died at Laporte, Tex., had a remarkable career as a private soldier in the ranks during the civil war. In fact, in the threefold capacity of common soldier, field nurse and spy she proved herself over and over again "one of the best and bravest men in the regiment."

She enlisted as "Frank Thompson." In the battles of Bull Run, Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, the seven days before Richmond, Antietam and Fredericksburg, she frequently fought all day and nursed the wounded at night, with a strength and devotion almost superhuman. While in the secret service she penetrated the enemy's lines no less than a dozen times in various disguises, always with complete success, though more than once she escaped only "by the skin of her teeth."

One of the few women officers of the civil war was commissioned by Richard Yates when he was Governor of Illinois. The document may still be seen in the state house at Springfield. It is dated April 16, 1862, and says that Mrs. Belle Keybold was appointed "to the honorary position of daughter of the regiment for meritorious conduct in camp and in the field of Pittsburg Landing, with the rank of major."

In two places in the "Official Record of the Army of Illinois" Gen. Sherman mentions Maj. Reynolds in a complimentary way. When she went to war in her husband's regiment, the Seventeenth Illinois Infantry, she was 19, tall, handsome and vivacious. At last accounts she was still living in Santa Barbara, Cal. Her war experiences would make an interesting book.

Physical examinations during the civil war did not amount to much more than the recruiting officer's eye measurement of the applicant's inches, hence the wonder is not great that many women actually soldered as unformed men in the "late unpleasantness." The records gave accounts of many who entered in order that they might follow their sweethearts. It was not at all unusual that a girl masquerading in soldier clothes would become a member of the same regiment as her lover, and with her would know nothing of her action, she would see him every day, in some cases be assigned to the same mess tent with him, and even nurse him when he was sick without revealing her identity.

"Like Tother Regiment."

When the first Western soldiers penetrated into the hilly section of Eastern Tennessee they were not a little disappointed, for the East Tennessee unionist had been glorified in the Northwest until he seemed in fancy like a superior being.

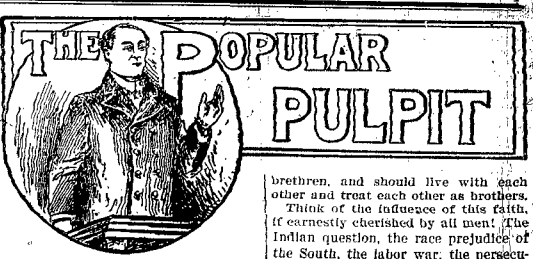

The boys pronounced the region east of Knoxville a "land of rocks, fist fights and ignorance," but their amazement reached its height when the first Union troops from the North Carolina side met them. These troops had made up a lot of doggerel poetry with which they answered questions, but as they were more hungry than poetic when they reached the main body, they usually cut off their answers to any question as to their command in some such fashion as this:

"Second North O'liny regiment, 'A-fightin' for the Government," "S-A-Y, got any backker?"

If it was tobacco, it was generally coffee, they wanted. As to solid proffer, they could live two or three days on a cold corn pone, or even a few sars of corn, splendid qualities for soldiers at that time and place. Their colonel endeavored to instruct his men by having them follow the motions of the Northern regiments, and one of his first orders, when the model regiment "grounded arms," ran thus:

"Second North O'liny regiment! Put yer guns on the ground, like tother regiment does."

They were brave fellows, all the same, and when drilled made splendid soldiers.—Memphis Trainee.

THREE FORMS OF PRIDE.

By Rev. Otto Scott Roche. God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble.—1 Peter, v. 5.

There are three distinct forms under which "pride" commonly displays itself—pride of birth, pride of intellect, pride of riches.

We naturally would suppose that "pride of birth" would be confined to such countries and places as are under the dominion of kings and emperors, where nobility of birth carries with it the added dignity of place and power. But such is not the case, for we may find it as clearly defined and as strongly developed in democratic America as in the effete monarchies of the old world.

We frequently meet with people of meager attainments, brusque manners and vulgar bearings, who yet are filled with haughty assurance, professing to be descended from illustrious ancestors. And how sad, often, is the contrast between the profession and the insignificant individual who makes it. Unless such claims have the support of unusual grace, goodness and virtue, they are more foolish and absurd than those of the fallen old woman of whom Hawthorne writes, whose sole title to gentility consisted in a few rusty silk dresses and her recollection of having formerly thrummed a bairn's collar, danced a minuet and worked an antique tapestry stitch on her sampler.

If the knowledge of gentle birth impels men to imitate noble deeds of honorable ancestors—to uphold virtue and triumph over vice, then, assuredly, its cover need not be ignored. But not this is the case; it is a sorry matter to be honest, upright and Christian, without any certain knowledge of one's parentage, than, while having the bluest of blood, to be boastful, indolent and careless of the rights of our fellow men.

Next there is "pride of intellect." An active and vigorous brain is a splendid endowment. Whoever adds to the world's treasury of wisdom is worthy of honor, but to look down upon our associates because of such mental endowment is a proof of weakness and must be obnoxious to the Almighty.

Let the wisest man compare his knowledge he has attained with that which still lies beyond his grasp or even his comprehension and he will be forced to confess himself ignorant and ill informed. Complete knowledge is unattainable by any human being. Why, then, should anyone be proud?

The temple of the great goddess, with its altars, in lower Egypt, was on the center of wisdom for Greece, whose foremost men in the early days went thither for their training, and upon her veiled image was this significant inscription:

"I am all that was, that is and that is to be, and my veil has been lifted by no man."

Another form of pride arises from the possession of riches. This is one of the most glaring, offensive and contemptible of all the exhibitions which pride makes of itself. It shows itself most frequently in the desire to assume great state and dignity. It is even happy if it can arouse jealousy. To have many houses, to ride out in grandeur, to wear fine clothes, to fare sumptuously, to own a yacht, a private car, to command an army of servants, to outdo one's neighbors—surely this does not seem like a very high ambition, yet it invariably fosters pride.

There undoubtedly are rich persons who are an honor and an ornament to society, who are liberal, conscientious, thoughtful and beneficent; but there are others who are proud only for their own pleasure and prominence—avaricious to the last degree, utterly inconsiderate of their fellow men, their joys, sorrows or sufferings.

You recall the incident narrated to illustrate the condition of society in France before the awful revolution, and which produced that catastrophe. An aristocrat, whose carriage had crushed the life out of a child, stopped his horses for a moment, tossed a gold coin to the father of the dead child and drove on. But the coin was hung after his carriage, and rang upon its floor. "Hold the horses," cried the aristocrat. "Who threw that?" There being no answer, he shouted: "You dogs, I would ride over any of you very willingly and exterminate you from the earth."

Possibly this incident will recall some of the accidents that occur in our city. Certain it is that some among our rich are becoming avaricious and overbearing. They should take heed.

"Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall."

MEANING OF UNIVERSALISM.

By Rev. Joseph K. Mason. To say that God is our father and to try to affirm that he will even cease to love his children or that he will doom them to hopeless evil or sweep them out of existence is to use words in an unwarrantable sense. As human parenthood stands for sympathy, forgiveness, loving, it sometimes never ceases to discipline and to care that never changes, so divine fatherhood means the same thing. This is confirmed by the character of Christ. "He that hath seen me hath seen the father," said Jesus, and what do we see in him? A sympathy that brought him to the baptism and festive scenes of human life, and a love so disinterested and selfless, even for the unworthy, that it led him to pray in his dying moments, "Father, forgive them!"

This is our standard and interpretation of divine fatherhood. Moreover, this relation is universal and impartial.

Now, what are the implications of this great affirmation of the divine fatherhood? One only I can mention here, and that is that we are all brethren, the white, the black, the bond and the free, the capitalist and the laborer; all brethren, and should live with each other and treat each other as brothers.

Think of the futility of this faith, if earnestly cherished by all men. The Indian question, the race prejudice of the South, the labor war, the persecutions of the Jews in "Christian" Russia—these and a thousand other relations of the human family would all be happily solved if we only really believed that God is the universal, unchanging father of humanity, and had the courage of our convictions.

PEARL OF GREAT PRICE.

By Rev. Guy Hooper. "The Kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman seeking goodly pearls; who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it."

It ought to come with force to this practical age that the kingdom of heaven is, by Christ's own testimony, like unto a merchantman. It is not like the dreamer or the poet only, but like the man of business—the prudent, sagacious, practical man, the man of energy and of action, the man who keeps his books and carefully lays his plans.

This parable is as true to the life of our time as to that of 1900 years ago. Our age has been variously characterized as the age of silver, gold, steam and electricity. There is one word in this parable which, I believe, describes the present age more clearly than any other word in the English language; it is the word "seeking." There never was a time when men were seeking so intensely, so widely and variedly as now. And like the merchantman of the parable it is "greatly needed" for which they seek. We are all seekers. In preaching, in business, in thinking, in literature, music and art—everywhere—we are seeking for pearls of the greatest worth.

From the Christian's viewpoint there is but one star, the "star of Bethlehem," and Jesus would have us guided by that. He declared the kingdom of God to be the pearl of great price. "Seek first the kingdom of God." The kingdom of God for you and me is Christliness here, now, yonder and forever.

A PROPHET OF VENGEANCE.

By Rev. Orin H. Hildreth. Of late years the majority of critics have denied the book of Jonah a place among the historical books of the Bible. But it must be remembered that Jesus, the highest critic, explicitly asserted the personal existence, miraculous fate and prophetic office of Jonah. And with a great body of Christians this is sufficient to settle the matter.

But the vital question is dealing with this fragment of early literature is to discover what was the purpose of its author in writing such a book. It should be noted that Jonah lived at a time when his nation was taking vengeance upon one of her great enemies. Jonah is, therefore, a prophet of vengeance.

To an alien nation Jonah was sent. He preached vengeance and destruction. The people listened, and were pardoned and spared. The plain purpose is this: God was teaching Jonah and his people that the gentiles also was granted repentance unto life. The book teaches the infinite love of God in contrast to the narrow selfishness of man.

SERMONETTES.

Public Opinion.—Public opinion in the main is not intellectually nor ethically sound. It is enforced by the honesty common to Christian communities, and its record shows it to be a slow but a sure remedy for these evils of grasping monopoly and the selfishness hidden behind legal prohibitions. S. F. Cadman, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Gospel of Joy.—The gospel of Christ is one of joy. There are some straight-laced, pious people who make one uncomfortable. We don't want to put into our life anything like that. Life is full of sacrifice. There is no selfishness, no to emulgence. Cut yourself off from anything that would hamper your growth in the Christian life.—Rev. William Ross, Congregationalist, Boston, Mass.

Consecration.—A man is a Christian in nothing unless he is a Christian in everything. Consecration is our name for some bowing of the head or moment of silent prayer. Consecration! Cease to pray for it! There is no such thing! It is a mere word; and a word is a breath. Make it concrete. Consecrate a hand; a voice; a pocket; a day—that is the Christian program.—Rev. N. H. Waters, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Living Power.—Christ is a living power in the world to-day; just because the spiritually blind are made to see; the lepers are cleansed, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. More and more magnificent is it becoming to be a Christian. It is joining the great army that is enriching knowledge, abolishing slavery, ameliorating war, unshackling fetters and elevating humanity. It is standing in with the major—if it is being of the winning side.—Rev. J. E. Adams, Presbyterian, Brooklyn, N. Y.

God's Purpose.—There can be no doubt as to the final history of the world. All events move toward the fulfillment of a sublime and divine prophecy. Not judgment, but injustice, is now set in the earth. Every species of vice and crime prevails among men under all forms of government and every type of civilization, and our boast of republicanism furnishes no exception to the sad indictment. "The whole world groans and travaileth in pain" under the fearful load of guilt, and "the seed of the serpent" is being sown in the hearts of men. The kingdom of God is being established, and the white, the black and the bond and the free, the capitalist and the laborer; all

THE WAYNE HERALD.

Official paper of Wayne and Wayne county
Published every Thursday.

W. HUSE & SON, Editors.

as second class mail matter.

Subscription, $2.00 a Year in Advance.

Ex-Senator W. V. Allen occupied a seat on the platform, among prominent republicans, at the Cannon political meeting in Norfolk Tuesday evening.

Mount Vesuvius, is now in a worse eruption than it has been for the past thirty years. Fire, lava, smoke and fury equal the Russian and Japanese tussel at Port Arthur.

Judge Parker acted as pallbearer some days ago, gaining experience that will be beneficial to him in the prominent part he will take in the obsequies of the democratic party in November.

A. Galusha, republican candidate for secretary of state, has been prominently identified with the A. O. U. W. of Nebraska for many years, and members of that order, generally knowing his ability and high character, heartily endorse and support his candidacy.

We have held proprietorship of the HERALD exactly one year. We bought it suddenly and sold it unexpectedly. We have been satisfied with the progress of the paper's business during that time and have endeavored to merit the increasing confidence and patronage of the public. We have tried to make friends and avoid enemies, and we fully appreciate the good feeling which has been manifested toward the HERALD and its management.

At the recent Lutheran synod in Ponca, a resolution was adopted instructing ministers of that denomination, there assembled, not to marry divorced people. Their action is in line with growing sentiment against the facility with which people cast off marriage vows and re-enter the nuptial state. Such steps will tend to make marriage more sacred and binding, sought with greater forethought and reason, and resulting in less business for the divorce courts.

People who listened to the excellent address of Hon. E. J. Burkett at the old settlers' picnic in this county appreciate the merits of the man and are anxious to see him succeed Senator Dierbach as a member of the upper branch of congress. They realize that he has brains, good judgment and sterling character and would reflect credit on the great commonwealth. The way to help elect him is to elect republican members of the Nebraska legislature-- the senate, and Chas. McLeod for the house.

Readers of the Columbus Telegram were made glad last week by receipt of a supplement in the form of a lithograph picture of Patrick E. McKillip, fusion candidate for congress in and for the Third district. Mr. McKillip has a bulging brow, a piercing eye, and a head of fluffy hair parted in the middle, that gives him the appearance of a gifted and intellectual football player. He is said to be cutting quite a swath in the campaign, but nobody expects him to win the election.--Birby in the Lincoln Journal.

Only a few years ago it was considered almost impossible to raise fruit in northern Nebraska. It is now found, however, that this country is well adapted to the raising of many excellent kinds of fruit. Apples, plums, cherries and peaches will do well here, as well as various kinds of berries. The southern part of the state produces very fine peaches, and even here in northern Nebraska an occasional peach tree is seen. When the possibilities of this part of the state are fully found out, it will be seen that this is a good fruit country, as well as first class in the matter of crops of all kinds. Wayne is said to be the best county in the state. It probably is.

The Blair Pilot speaks of the special strength of three members of the republican state ticket as follows: "In the whole state no better men can be found than E. M. Searle, the candidate for auditor, H. M. Eaton, candidate for land commissioner, and A. Galusha, the candidate for secretary of state. The special qualifications of these three candidates alone are such as to appeal with impressive and convincing force for support to every voter irrespective of party. Each has hard and efficient schooling in his particular line, so that the election of these three candidates will call to the public service three as capable, honest and trustworthy men as can be found in the whole state."

Judge Parker's letter of acceptance, supplementing his speech of acceptance, made some time ago, was handed to the public the first of the week. In that letter he re-iterates his positive declaration in favor of the gold standard and then touches imperialism, tariff, trusts and a number of other things which he appears to think the democratic party can handle better than the present administration. He doubtless figures that his Wall street wing of the party can manage affairs as well as Cleveland did and better than the element represented by Bryan could. Judge Parker finds himself oscillating between two fires in his own party, with the assurance of defeat and the triumph of Roosevelt confronting him.

Some days after the McCarthy-Mc-

Killip debate at Emerson, the democrats there were nettled by the assertion that McKillip was not equal to his opponent in the forensic arena and defended him on the ground that McCarthy had had more experience and ought to excel. That is one substantial reason why McCarthy will be elected to succeed himself.

On Wednesday of next week Hon. W. J. Bryan will deliver an address in Wayne. As he is a man of great eloquence and personal magnetism, he will doubtless be listened to by a large and enthusiastic audience. But great as may be the eloquence and enthusiasm, and much as he may laud democracy, the audience cannot forget that he denounced their platform and candidates previous to and during the democratic nominating convention at St. Louis. Here is one brief sample: "The New York platform is ambiguous, uncertain, evasive and dishonest. It would disgrace the democracy of the nation to adopt such a platform, and it ought to defeat as an aspirant for a democratic nomination any man who would be willing to have it go forth as a declaration of his views on public questions."

SPEAKER CANNON AT NORFOLK

A large crowd, many from neighboring towns, gathered in Norfolk Tuesday evening to hear Uncle Joe Cannon, speaker of the national house of representatives, and Congressman Watson of Indiana. Congressman McCarthy presided at the meeting and prefaced his introduction of the speaker with some appropriate remarks. The speeches were forceful and logical and held close attention. Referring to local politics, the Norfolk News reports Speaker Cannon as saying: "Speaker Cannon, in closing, paid a flattering tribute to Nebraska's delegation in congress, stating that it was one of the strongest in the house and said that every district should this year be represented by a republican. He found Burkett a good man for the committee on appropriations, and in McCarthy he found a level-headed man who had struggled upward from a teacher and a lawyer, and gave him a place on that important committee, public lands. He desired that it should be returned this year. The district should be just to itself and support the president."

THE HERALD'S INFLUENCE.

The HERALD is glad to note that its old-time friend, the profound and eloquent statesman of Dixon county is being strengthened by its appeal in his behalf as indicated by the following from the Pender Republic: "THE WAYNE HERALD has made a lot of votes for Warner Starr, fusion candidate for state senator for this district, by stating that it elected him could advance and defend legislation that would make it easier to live without doing anything.

The HERALD should be a little more guarded in its utterance."

The Wayne Independent Telephone company has established a plant in this city that is recognized by all telephone men as the model plant of the west and this company is giving better service than the citizens of Wayne have heretofore enjoyed. New rural lines are rapidly being organized and expect to cover the entire territory in the next ninety days. Two thousand poles were ordered for rural lines in Wayne county last week. The first car load was delivered Saturday. At the present time through this board the subscribers can talk to over 200 farmers in Wayne county, and we expect to have as many more in the near future. In addition to the farm lines above mentioned the home company has connection with the following towns: Allen, Altona, Belden, Boomer, Coleridge, Concord, Carroll, Dixon, Emerson, Goodwin, Harrington, Jackson, Laurel, Lime Grove, Newcastle, Ponca, Randolph, Sholes, Sioux City, South Sioux City, St. James, St. Helena, Wakefield, Wisner and Waterbury.

We wish it understood that we are here to stay and we propose to give better service and more connections in Wayne county than was ever heretofore offered. We solicit your business and influence.

"THE SADDLE-BAG SANHEDRIN."

Under the above head, Ward Morse who was one of the members of the late M. E. conference, contributes the following to his paper, the Central City Democrat, among other references:

The witty Dr. McIntyre so dubbed the last General Conference of Methodism, and it is an apt characterization for this gathering also, for here in the beautiful little city of Wayne is now congregated the spiritual descendants of the mighty sons of Epworth, the deliberative and legislative body of Wesleyanism, in the North Nebraska conference. There is a difference, however, between this Sanhedrin and that of the Master's time which was policed and bulldozed by Roman soldiers; our only interlopers being the good people of Wayne, striving to entertain us, and royally succeeding.

"La Belle Napoli," as its citizens call their beautiful city, is worthy of its name. Lying as it does in a graceful curve on the shores of a lovely bay, the blue water of which rivals the blue Italian sky above, it presents a picture for the artist. In the background Mt. Vesuvius rears its frowning height aloft. Few, comparatively speaking, can afford to visit this charming spot but a graphic idea of its beauties can be formed from the elaborate scenery which graces the production of "Rabio Roman" which comes to the opera house on September 30th. The company brings with it from New York all the paraphernalia and accessories which make the great melodrama such a hit on its revival there. The cast is one of uniform excellence, the costumes new and beautiful and the mise-en-scene unequalled by any production now on the road.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Penner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and spitting so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by Raymond's Pharmacy.

A weak stomach weakens the man because it cannot transform the food he eats into nourishment. ### A POWER FOR GOOD.

The pills that are a potent in their action and pleasant in effect are DeWitt's Little Early Biscuits. W. S. Phillips of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did more good than calomel, blue mass or any other pill I ever took and at the same time the effect was pleasant. Little Early Biscuits are sold by Raymond's Pharmacy."

PURE BRED AGAINST THE GRADE

We attended the cattle sale in Wayne a few days ago and saw how the farmers were anxious to pay one hundred to one hundred and fifty dollars for a bull calf. Fifty head were sold in about three hours at an average of about one hundred dollars per head and yet the crowd wanted more calves. We noticed how quick the prices fell when a poor one was brought in, which convinced us that the good pure bred is what is wanted. Right here let us remind you that the 2 Johns are pure bred and were registered in Bradstreet twenty-seven years ago as clothing merchants. Our record was good then and we have kept it up to the standard of the best thoroughbred ever since. Merchants are like bulls, some are thoroughbred, some are grades and some are scrubs. If you want good clothing do business with a thoroughbred clothing man. If you trade with us you get a written pedigree with every suit and we guarantee it to please you and give satisfaction or you get another suit. Isn't that fair? Why trade with a grade or scrub merchant when you can trade here and get goods that we have sold for more than twenty years? Buy a Kuppenheimer suit and get a pure bred. Buy Selz shoes and you get something with a pedigree as long as your arm. Buy Staley underwear and get something off of a pure bred sheep's back and a pedigree from over five hundred men in Wayne county that it is the best on earth. Buy your clothing for men and boys of us and we will save you money. No scrub stock here.

CHAPTER V.

I did not meet my revered master until the next morning at prayers. After prayers, he went through the process of examining the boys. What a vile mass of hypocrisy! All this seemed to me the wrong lights that had broken upon me. Judith was not present. I felt that my manner was embarrassed, and I could not endure to meet his eye. He remarked upon my pallid looks; I had no sleep that night. He asked rather sharply, "What ailed me?"

"I have a headache; I had a bad night's rest last night," I stammered.

"Oh! we will soon set that all right; you shall breakfast with me this morning. A cup of strong green tea will soon kill the headache."

As the tea was treated more like a guest than even a member of the family. He himself handed to me the good things, pressing me to eat and drink of all. Martha, who was waiting, could scarcely contain her wonderment.

"You have taken my place well during my absence," he said in a fawning tone. "I am only just beginning to discover the treasure I have in you. Oh, what a blessing it is to know that the seed I have sown will yield so goodly a harvest! Well, I am getting old, and shall soon want a supporter and comforter. Ah, if I had such a son! But I must not rejoice for I am blessed with the best of daughters? You two must be brought more together than you have been, for you are a goodly pair."

He was in a drowsy state of hypocrisy. He drew his chair close to mine and took my hand. We were alone now; he had desired to be alone with me.

"Have you ever noticed Judith, Silas? A fine girl, though I say it, and gifted with that beauty which to young blood is more attractive even than the beauty of the spirit. If she were to go forth into the sinful world she would have scores of lovers, and the children of her house would flock to ask her hand in marriage. But such is neither my wish nor hers; I would see her bound in the holy bands of wedlock to some sober, pious youth. I would not ask of him the goods of Mammon, nor covet for my child either gold, or jewels, or fine linen, or silver mirrors; but what is all that compared to that peace of the soul which passeth all understanding?"

"I know not what answer I made, or even whether I made any, to these enigmatical speeches, and others that followed in the same strain. At last, with many blessings, that sounded in my ears like those of the departed, he dismissed me to the school room. To get away from his hideous hypocrisy was like emerging from the fetid atmosphere of a sick room into the pure air of heaven. Business which had accumulated during his absence kept him from home all day, and until late in the evening.

As soon as my school duties were finished, I went into the grounds—and I could not bear to be in the house—and sat there until Martha came out to call me in to tea.

"Why, whatever is the matter with you, Master Silas?" she asked. "You look as white as a ghost! Are you ill?"

"Oh, no, Martha! I have a headache—nothing more."

"Master Silas," said Martha, "there's something wrong with you—something's preying on your mind. Why was master so awful civil to you this morning? Don't think I'm asking these questions out of curiosity. Master Silas, you're as innocent as a lamb! That matter of the body case, for the matter of that, could get you to do anything—get you into godliness knows what trouble. And mark my words, he's a regular bad 'un! Don't let him lead you by the nose! You're no good to you or anybody else!"

"Don't talk like that to me, Martha. I feel, bursting in my ears, as if I must not let me ask questions—indeed, you must not."

"Poor boy! what have they done to you?" she said, half to herself. "Well, I don't want to pry into your secrets," she went on; "but if I can help you with advice, or in any other way, don't be afraid to ask me."

"How can I thank you, Martha, I want!" I cried, throwing my arms round her neck, and kissing her. "It is not my secret, or I would tell you all!"

How contemptible all this will read to men of the world—a youth of nearly sixteen, in dependent upon a woman's advice rather than upon his own courage. From that cowardly thought, as such men will phrase it, I began to derive a little secret comfort.

The next day Judith appeared at dinner, for the first time during several weeks. She looked exactly like Mrs. Porter's manner to me was marked by the ingratiating demerit that shudderingly suggested the idea of a cunning hyena luring me into his den for the sake of making a meal of my body. When the cloth was removed Judith rose to leave the room. Her looks, her persuasions, winks or signs, from her father could induce her to remain.

"Ah, Silas, what a treasure she is!" he said, with a hypocritical sigh, as the door closed behind her. "Her tender mother, who is no longer with us, left her to me as a precious token of 'holy love.'"

He passed his handkerchief across his eyes. He little thought what I had overheard.

"With such a treasure and a saintless conscience, what should a pious young man do but to marry her?" he said, as he tried, in an enthusiasm of self-patadication.

"What, indeed?" I murmured, perceiving that he expected some answer from me.

"True!—what, indeed?" he echoed. "Yes, one thing he wants ere he departs for the regions of the elect—to see the earthly happiness of that treasure secured. Have you noticed how ill Judith has been looking lately?"

"I have noticed that I observed she looked very pale."

"Something on the mind—something on the mind, and I think I've found out what it is. Girls will be girls, you know. There's many a fine fellow would give his eyes out for his head, if he had his shoes. Well, I am quite content; she's quite content; and I'm sure you must be quite content; so there's nothing more to be said in the matter, and the sooner the affair is settled the better." He turned, and I saw that he was not very repulsive. For a time I could not understand his meaning; at last, it began to dawn upon me—he actually meant to infer that Judith was in love with me. What an idiot he must have thought me! And yet, without the least conversation with his daughter had given me might I not, in my simple trust of his truth, have believed? I shamed to say that I fear I might. But knowing what I did, I felt positively sick at the nauseous hypocrisy and insincerity of the man.

He nuzzled, rubbed his hands, then brushed back his hair, chuckled and waited for me to speak. What could I

APPLE PIE.

Let others praise the red, red rose,
Whose haunting scent nose may long get.
But almost anybody knows
The apple pie is sweeter yet.
Let others sing the daisies fair
Who thralls them with bewitching air—
But apple pie drives off my care
And trips the highway to my heart.
And if it's cold—
Say one day old—
I want all of it I can hold!

When apple pie has held the shelf
Until it's cool and crisp and firm,
I'll eat a whole big one myself
And never murmur—not a murmur!
Why, when it's sliced it fairly smites,
And chuckles when its honeyed juice
In tantalizing drips beguiles
The craving that it has set loose.
O, if it's cold—
Say one day old—
I want all of it I can hold!

I think I'd give away my crown,
Were I a man of royal birth,
To eat, while holding upside down,
The last bit of it on this earth!
Why, ever summer's smile and song
Is held within an apple pie—
And that's the place where they belong.
All peace and dulcetness! O my!
When it is cold—
Say one day old—
I want all of it I can hold!
—W. D. Nesbit, in Ainslie's.

can't tell what to do. That once known, I shan't want much consideration."
"Where is he now? (Have you seen him lately?)"
"I heard him leave the boys' room at 5 o'clock. I have not seen or heard him since then."
"Go and see where he is at once; he would have left the house while we are standing here!"
In an instant I heard them hurrying towards the house. I sprang to my feet, ran across the porch into the kitchen garden, rushed into the summer house, laid my back upon the table, and resting my head upon my hands, assumed an attitude of attentive study. My breath came short and thick, and my breast was heaving when I heard my master's hasty footsteps upon the path.
He began in a bullying tone; then he thought him that he was betraying himself, stopped short. The expression of my face evidently disconcerted him.
"What are you doing here?" he asked, evidently not knowing what to say to cover his blunder.
"I usually come here on an evening to read," I said quietly. "I never heard you object to it before."
"Oh, it is all right; but get the boys in at once," he said.
"Very well, sir." I closed my book, and went to find the boys; my master advancing in the same direction, that he should not lose sight of me. I felt that from that moment a constant watch would be set upon me.
I felt the boys enter the house, and went into the school room. But the prayer that was in my heart and on my lips were not in unison with that which sounded on my ears. I was praying to escape from that dreadful house. I had taken the desperate resolution that I would not pass another night beneath the roof.

The boys were dismissed to bed half an hour earlier than usual. I was going down to the kitchen when Mr. Porter stopped me.
"I've some work for you, Silas. Fold and put these tracts into envelopes, and direct them; I'll give you the list of names. You can carry pen and ink, and your desk, into your own room, and do them there."

He gave me a pile of papers, which I carried to my bed room, and then fetched the pen and writing materials. He watched me all the time. I went in, and shut the door; then I heard him walk away. I did not touch my work, but sat down upon the side of the bed, and tried to think how I could get away. I had no money—I knew nothing of the roads; but I was determined, to do what I could to remain in that man's power. If I could only read five minutes' talk with Martha, she would help me—would perhaps direct me where to go.

THE BOUNDARY LINE.

FARMERS Taylor and Billings, who had lived neighbors to each other for fifteen long years, had always known that the line fence separating their farms was about a foot or two out of the way, but they had been too sensible to care who was favored.

It was a poor rail fence at best, zig-zagging across the pastures like a tipsy man going along, and the few inches of soil in dispute were overgrown with thistles and blackberry bushes.

Things changed, however, when Ryder, the broker, and Sanders, the contractor, bought the two farms and overlooking the bay for summer cottages.

The services of a surveyor were called in and each man stood on his rights.

When the surveyor found that the true line took in eleven inches more of the contractor's land, the broker said that settled it.

It didn't, however. The contractor sent a lawyer to the county seat to delve among the archives and fish up rusty documents, determining to continue the fight any number of years to prove that the surveyor was wrong.

While the contractor was planning, as contractors will, the broker was acting, as brokers do. In the terms of the Street, he sold Mr. Saunders out and had closed his account.

In plain English, he had that fence moved over to give him the eleven inches due. Two days later the contractor had it moved back.

It was moving time thereafter for two weeks. Five times in all was that fence moved exactly eleven inches to the west, and five times did it go back eleven inches to the east.

Then the movers rested, but only to get a better hold.

While they were drawing their belts a notch tighter, two new actors appeared on the scene. One of these was a good-looking girl named Sallie Saunders, only daughter of the contractor, Brown, and the other was a well-set-up young man named Harold Ryder, only son of the broker.

Young Ryder was home for his vacation, and Sallie Saunders had come home because Vassar had a vacation, too. Of course each one heard of that line fence before they had been home an hour, and of course each one was loyal and indignant.

"As dad is busy in Wall street, I'll just take this quarrel on my own shoulders," observed Harold, who was a member of a football team and enjoyed in kicking down fences of every sort and kind. "When that scoundrel finds that he has got me to deal with instead of poor old dad, who is for peace at any price, there will be no more moving, unless he moves towards the hospital."

"It is the most outrageous thing I ever heard of!" exclaimed the girl from Vassar when she had heard the story. "I have always thought papa was a fighter, but it seems that he has bowed his head and been walked on without shedding a drop of blood. Well, things will be different, now I am home, thank goodness!"

Next day the newcomers went out to view the scene of slaughter. As they didn't happen to go at the same hour no one was killed or wounded. The fence still rested on disputed ground.

"That fellow Saunders has made his bluff and quit," observed young Ryder as he stroked back home.

Fate waited three days longer. Then Harold was told that the Saunders forces were skulking around, and he worked up his muscle and cut across lots for the fence.

At almost the same moment Miss Sallie heard a rumor that "old Ryder's men" were going to give the fence a new boost and she clapped on her filled subonnet and made tracks.

She was not even armed with a bodkin when she arrived at the scene of hostilities, and came face to face with a young man sitting on the fence in dispute, and puffing away at a meerschaum.

"She halted. The young man stared, raised his hat, and stammered:
"Good—good-morning. Are you looking for some one?"
"Yes, sir," responded the negro, saluting.
"And fought all day?"
"Yes, sir."
"You have, besides, been marching since 10 o'clock to-night?"
"Yes, sir."
"Then, said Layton, 'why on earth are you carrying that dog?'
"Well, General," replied the negro, showing his white teeth in a broad grin, "the dog's tired."—Woman's Home Companion.

Why toast is indigestible. Chemical Changes Make It Palatable and Increase Salivary Secretions. It is the opinion of physicians generally and they seem to have imbibed the general public with a like notion, that toasted bread is much more easily digested than that cut fresh from the loaf. Some are inclined to be skeptical in the matter, however. The doctor, if asked, will probably state that the increased digestibility is due both to a physical and chemical change produced by the toasting process, which results in a transformation of the carbohydrates into more readily soluble forms.

A writer in a government report on the subject gives the results of a series of analyses showing the changes that he found in bread produced by toasting at different temperatures. For instance, bread heated for one hour at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, lost about 31 per cent in weight and contained 12 per cent of material soluble in water. Light-colored, yellow toast, made at about 270 degrees Fahrenheit, was practically of the same composition. Brown toast, made at 28 degrees Fahrenheit, had 1 per cent less carbohydrate, but the soluble content increased to 2 per cent, while dark-brown toast, made at a slightly higher temperature, had a slightly less soluble content, and brown toast, made by the usual household method—that is, at about 320 degrees Fahrenheit—contained only 22 per cent of soluble material.

The doctor's contention is, therefore, confirmed to a certain extent by the results of these experiments, but it is probable, according to the conclusions of the author, that the increased digestibility of toast is to be accounted for rather on the supposition that its agreeable flavor stimulates the digestive secretions and possibly its physical condition imparts better mastication. The increase in the solubility of the carbohydrates is not relatively great when made by the ordinary household method, since this only affects the outside—that is, penetrating to a very small fraction of an inch.

Thoughtful. General "Joe" Wheeler relates the following amusing incident that took place during the night of the El Caney affair:
"General Lawton's division was marching back to El Paso, there to take up a new position in the morning. The General, in company with Major Creighton, inspector general of his staff, was standing at the edge of the road, watching his troops file past. Just as the dawn was breaking the colored troops came in sight. They gave evidence of being dazed, tired, but were nevertheless full of ginger."
"General Lawton's attention was attracted to a certain corporal of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, a great six-foot negro, who, in addition to a couple of guns and two loaded belts loaded with cartridges, was carrying a dog. The soldier to whom the chief gun belonged was limping alongside his comrade."
"The General halted the men. Here, corporal," said he to the six-foot man, "didn't you march all last night?"
"Yes, sir," responded the negro, saluting.
"And fought all day?"
"Yes, sir."
"You have, besides, been marching since 10 o'clock to-night?"
"Yes, sir."
"Then, said Lawton, 'why on earth are you carrying that dog?'
"Well, General," replied the negro, showing his white teeth in a broad grin, "the dog's tired."—Woman's Home Companion.

TOWER IN LIAOYANG, WHERE THE MOST DESPERATE FIGHTING OCCURRED

The tower of Liaoyang was the center of the most desperate fighting ever recorded in the history of the world. Here for eight days the battle raged with 200,000 Russians determined to hold the Chinese stronghold. The tower is outside the walls of the city and is used for religious purposes.

replied Harold, as he slowly dropped off the fence.
"Mr. Saunders is my father?"
"And Mr. Ryder is mine?"
They stood staring at each other for a moment, and then began to talk. The smile had become a good-natured laugh when Harold again lifted his hat and said:
"Beg pardon, Miss Saunders, but I'm sure I also apologize, Mr. Ryder."
"I did not know—know—"
"Nor I, either."
"And now that both of us do know, let us both sit down and talk things over. There is a dispute about eleven inches of ground, I believe."
"So I have heard, your father contends that it is his land."
"While your father naturally contends that it is his. Very foolish, Miss Saunders—very foolish. The land isn't worth the cost of moving the fence over once. It seems as if I had seen you at one of our 'proms'—"
"Yes."
"Wonder why I wasn't introduced? Some fellows are so stingy, don't you know?"
And then they began to talk about college life and the theater and new books, and the line fence zig-zagged its way forgotten.

They had been talking for an hour when the girl suddenly rose up with a laugh:
"Dear me, but what will mother say? She will think I have been murdered on account of the fence!"
"Oh, yes, the fence," replied Harold, as he scowled at it. "Miss Saunders, I think we should hire the fence question out of the hands of our respective fathers."
"But why?"
"Because I think we can settle it to our mutual satisfaction. You see, a fence is neither a 'put' nor call, nor yet a building in course of construction. It wants to be dealt with from an entirely different standpoint. I shall ask my governor to turn the matter over to me, and you ask your governor to do the same, and—"

Beyond Apatow.

A small town in Colorado, that thousand two hundred feet above sea level, boasts a justice of the peace. Recently a suit was filed between two parties that stirred the community to its center. From the fact that one of the parties imported a lawyer from a distant city. The Philadelphia Ledger, in the story of the case:

That case dragged itself to an unprecedented length, and the popular had never dreamed that law was so full of obstructions and exceptions, questions, protests, expostulations and, like, as that lawyer proved it to be not prolong, and that was the prompt, decisive. "Judgment for plaintiff" as soon as the trial was fairly over.

"Well, sir," said the lawyer, "you are superior, 'we shall have to take this case to a higher court. You can't do that, mister,' said the magistrate.

"And why not, pray?"

"There isn't any higher court. The court is thirteen thousand two hundred feet above the level of the sea and it's several hundred feet the highest court in the country."

Lesson for Women.

Jersey Shore, Pa., Sept. 21.—(Special.)—Dodd's Kidney Pills have done worlds of good for me. That's what Mrs. C. B. Earnest of this place has to say of the Great American Kidney Remedy.

"I was laid up sick," Mrs. Earnest continues, "and had not been out for five weeks. Then I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and now I can walk and go to town without suffering any. I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have good reason to praise them everywhere."

Women who suffer should learn a lesson from this, and that lesson is: "Care the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and your suffering will cease. Women who have ailments almost entirely on her kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills have never yet failed to make healthy kidneys."

Wanted Something Less Hackneyed.

Mrs. Reader—Stop at a book store and get a book on Dodd's Kidney Pills. What sort?

Mrs. Deaver—Try to get an old-fashioned one, which the hero and heroine are separated by cruel parents. I am a little tired of the young woman with a mission.

The World's Fair Contest Company, Delmar and Adelaide avenues, St. Louis, Mo., are offering these prizes and there is no doubt of the cash being in hand to pay the lucky winners. The contest closes October 15th."

Why Ned Rescued the Boy.

"That was a brave act!" ejaculated a Boston man, as he stood on the wharf in a little southern town and saw an old negro plunge unhesitatingly into the deepest water to save a very small boy who had stumbled and fallen from some planks. "A brave act and he is a hero, no matter how black the skin he wears!"

The Bostonian was foremost in the group that gathered about Uncle Ned when he climbed back on the deck with the rescued lad.

"Your son is it, old man?" he queried. "Or perhaps only your grandson?"

There was very fervent admiration in the down easter's tones as he put the question.

"No, sah, no, sah," gurgled Uncle Ned. "Dat 'll rescut ain't no kluvery er mine."

"Then it was all the braver," exclaimed the interrogator, positively baring his head out of respect for the old man's high-born courage.

"Huh," spluttered the hero, "you should think Ise dretful 'nough to let dat little dretful when he's got every speck of my 'sht butt in his pocket"—Washington Post.

THE STRAIN OF WORK.

Best of Backs Give Out Under the Burden of Daily Toil.

Lieutenant George G. Warren, of No. 3 Chemical, Washington, D. C., says: "It's an honest fact that Doan's Kidney Pills did me a great lot of good, and if it wasn't for them I wouldn't be here today. I was the strain of lifting that brought on a kidney trouble and weakened my back, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills I have lifted twenty-five pounds and felt no bad effects. I hadn't felt the trouble come back since, although I had suffered for five or six years, and other remedies had not helped me at all."

Rural Ideas.

Old Inhabitant (loafing at Cross Roads grocery)—Talkin' about crop failures, I remember the time when people had to get up all the farm stock and then live on the fodder wot they had saved for the cattle.

Old Inhabitant—Huh! That's no provision, go so scarce that the 'stray' farmers had to go out an' shoot an emporator sportman for dinner an' then cook him with the wodd from the 'No Traps' sign."

DREAD OF PLAGUE IS PAST

The advance the medical profession has made in the past century and is still making, is little short of the supernatural. Macbeth said: "Time was that when brains were out the man would die, and there an end." Nowadays the doctors scoop them up and replace them, patch up the patient's head and turn him out, if not as good as new, at least a very good substitute or a possible second hand article. The day of epidemics is passing away and the world will no more shrink with horror and dread from thoughts of the fearful plague which ravaged all Europe from the latter part of the 15th to nearly the end of the 16th century. An episode of the plague is worked out in Marie Corelli's great tragic melodrama, "Fabi Roman," which will be presented at the opera house on September 30th. The original New York company with all the elaborate scenery, costumes and accessories that contributed to the long run of the play in the metropolis, will be seen here. Nothing finer in the line of scenic display has ever been booked at the opera house. The excellence of the cast and the many stirring episodes of this sterling melodrama, make it one of the grandest productions of the season.
