This week will complete the greater part of the corn husking in this county. Judge Hunter issued a marriage license Friday, to Mr. Fred H. Krie and Miss Bertha Eckert, both of Hoskins.

One day last week F. M. Skeen sold Mrs. Bannister's, 40 acres, west of town to C. W. Vennersburg, for $71 25 per acre.

F. M. Skeen, a few days ago, traded Mrs. Vaughn a quarter block on College Hill for her stock of confectioneries on the east side of Main street.

In conversation with one of our real estate men a few days ago the gentleman made the prediction that the next four years would see an appreciation of real estate values fully equal, if not in excess, of the past four years.

Harrington is after a Farmers' Elevator, and has excellent prospects of getting one. Wayne farmers had an experience along that line about a dozen years ago and if our memory serves aright the experience was not satisfactory.

This week will about finish corn picking and the crop is one of the best ever cribbed in this part of the state. Quantity and quality are all that can be desired and present indications are that the price is going to make the crop a very remunerative one.

If you are going to have a farm auction during the winter you will find it profitable to use the plans of your local newspaper in advertising it. A public sale, announced by well advertised and no method is so effective as the local paper in reaching the people you desire to have any article.

When the Emerson Crescent clips anything from the columns of the HERALD that is not credited to any other publication it will be safe to give our credit for the article—we are no newspaper thieves—and believe if anything found in our columns is worthy of reproduction we should receive the credit due us.

Armour's big new Sioux City packing house opened for business Saturday. While this adds to Sioux City's facilities as a marketing point for live stock, it does not necessarily mean any better prices because the buyers for Armour, Swift and Cudahy all get the prices they are to pay each day from one source.

James Hurst is going to have a public sale of Durco Jersey cows in January. Every cow sold will be safe in milk and they are among the best bred animals in the state. This will be a rare opportunity for our hog raisers to secure some of the best improved hog blood ever brought into the state—and we trust they will improve the opportunity.

After January first 1905, all subscriptions to the HERALD not paid in advance will be charged at the rate of $1.60 per year. The rate of $1 per year will only be good to those paying for the paper in advance. We cannot publish a paper for $1 per year and be at the expense of making collections or else being obliged to wait for our pay for an indefinite length of time.

It is reported the Union Pacific has purchased the Chicago & Great Western. This road has been a thorn in the side of the other roads operating between Chicago and Omaha and St. Paul and Kansas City. Its management has been independent and fearless and many times within the past few years it has compelled less rates than the other roads desired. It now goes into the great railroad trust.

If you are living outside of Wayne county and the HERALD is not paid for in advance, your name will be stricken from the list January 1, 1905, and your account will be placed in the hands of a collector. There will be no variation from this rule, so if you desire the paper to come to you after the date named, see that your subscription is paid in advance.

Miss Ella Grier met with a very painful accident early last Friday. She rode a pony from home up to her brother John's on the Goose farm, for the purpose of assisting him in corn husking and when nearing her destination the pony shied at a buggy and threw the young lady and dislocated one of her ankles. Dr. Williams was called and rendered the necessary surgical assistance, but it will be some time before she can walk as of old.

In a letter from Rev. G. M. Lodge, a former pastor of the Presbyterian church, he encloses a clipping from an Iowa city paper giving an account of the accidental drowning of his son-in-law, Rev. R. B. Taylor at San Diego, Cal., by falling overboard from a pleasure yacht in the bay of San Diego. He and his wife were along with him and quite a company of others on the yacht and although the owner of the yacht got into the water and reached Mr. Taylor before he sank he was unable to hold the body and he sank out of sight and at last accounts the body had not been recovered. The wife of Rev. Taylor is well known to many persons in this city who will deeply sympathize with her in her great bereavement.

A letter from Mrs. J. W. Jones from Pasadena, California to Mr. P. L. Miller, says she is fast recovering from the effects of a pretty severe accident. She was in Los Angeles visiting the family of Will Witter and in stepping from the sidewalk to take a street car back to Pasadena, was struck by an automobile, knocked down and quite severely injured and was confined to her room as a result of the accident, but at time of writing was getting over the effects of the hurt. She says in the same letter that the Witters are getting along splendidly and that the E. Smith family do not anticipate a return to Wayne in the very near future and that Ed is at present in charge of a lumber yard at San Pedro.

Telephones are a modern convenience and an every day nuisance at times. A few days ago we undertook to talk with a subscriber out in the country and it seemed to us, every man, woman and child within a radius of fifty miles was "on the line" and everyone putting in their best looks; among the rest was a couple of ladies in town talking up home and society matters and the conversation of course, was highly edifying to a person having business to transact. The outcome of the matter was the Aid Society people got in their work and we had to hang up the receiver in fact it has been our misfortune to never have had any great satisfaction in trying to hold conversation over the country lines—how is it with you?

The story is told on Mrs. George Porter and Mrs. Joe Atkins, that they recently drove to Winfield to visit friends and when they arrived at their destination the man of the house was not at home and the ladies and their hostess put the horse in the barn and when they got ready to come home they did the "hitching up" and started for home with Mrs. Porter as driver. All went well, but the driver noticed that when she had occasion to turn out to pass teams or to turn a corner it took an awful pull on the lines to get the horse where she wished him to go. Finally the ladies got out and inspected the "hitchup" and found everything O. K. and they came on to the Atkins home and when the men folks there went to unhitch the horse they discovered the ladies had driven the entire distance without having the bit in the mouth of the horse; then it is said both of the ladies pretty nearly fainted thinking of what might have occurred.

White Buffalo.
Old people of the western prairie used to tell of having seen white buffaloes. There were white buffaloes, such as were found at intervals in all the animals of the animal kingdom, but no number of those which existed in fact and of those which existed purely in the imagination, says the Kansas City Journal, were in wonderful proportion.
In 1873 old Ben Canfield, who rounded the plains with his tall, gaunt wife for a companion, followed a herd of buffalo from the northern edge of what is now Oklahoma to the sand hills of Nebraska, thinking to kill a big white bull which he had seen in the herd. After three weeks of patient stalking Canfield did kill the bull, only to find that the whiteness of its appearance was due to a coat of white-wash.

An explanation of this phenomenon would not be needed by people familiar with the natural lime beds of western Kansas. The habit of the buffalo is to roll or wallow in every pool of water or mud hole to which he comes. Canfield's buffalo had simply been rolling in a bed of native lime, which, when dried in the sun, coated his hide with a kind of plaster.
No doubt these lime holes account for many of the "white buffalo" so often reported by hunters.

WHICH ARE YOU?

There are two kinds of people on earth to-day. Just two kinds of people; no more, I say. Not the sterner and saint, for 'tis well understood That the good are half bad, and the bad are half good. Not the rich and the poor, for to count a man's wealth You must first know the state of his conscience and soul. Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span Who puts on vain airs is not counted a man. Not the happy and sad, for the swift flying years Bring each man his laughter and each man his tears. No; the two kinds of people on earth that I mean Are the people who lift and the people who lean. Wherever you go, you will find the world's masses Are always divided in just these two classes. And, oddly enough, you will find, too, I wean, There is only one tier to twenty who lean, In which class are you? Are you chasing the lead Of overpaid officers who toil down the road? Or are you a leader who lets others bear Your portion of labor and worry and care?

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Precious Old Home.

HESTER and Jacob Cross had a letter from their only son, which caused them both a great deal of anxious thought. "You see, father," so ran a portion of the letter, "I can seldom leave my business to go out to see you. It is such a long, expensive journey, and I must think of saving the dollars and cents, now that I have a wife and child to provide for, so I agree with my wife that it would be a good idea for you and mother to come out here—just close up the old place and come out here and live with us for good. No use trying to sell anything, for one would care to buy such a little tumble-down house; and, if I remember right, there isn't a piece of furniture in it which is worth a dollar. Just pack your clothes and a few of the things you value most, and come right along and live with us."

"Don't you think Henry speaks a little too slightly of the old home, Hester?" asked Jacob of his wife. "It was good enough for me and my father before me, and he had a good, comfortable bringing up in it."

"I suppose he's got so forewarned that he can live in a way that makes the old things seem dreadful old, and he can't help it, Jacob," replied Hester, ready now, as in the time of her son's boyhood, to make excuses for his shortcomings. Yet there were plainly written upon her face lines of pain caused by some of the words in her boy's letter, which not even the seemingly sincere and hearty invitation to come and live with them could smooth out.

Yet her heart swelled with pride at the thought of leaving the old home of comparative poverty for her son's home, filled, as she judged by his letters, with all the comforts and conveniences which money could buy, and she endeavored to bring her husband around to her own state of mind, which was becoming each moment more and more favorable toward the prospect of breaking up their own homekeeping and going to Glenfield to live with their son.

So it came about that the time for their departure was near at hand, and they were making ready to go. "Might as well take all the things down and pack them into boxes, so if we should ever happen to want any of them we can send for them and have 'em brought back to us."

Jacob raised his thoughtful eyes to his wife's flushed face in careful consideration. "I wouldn't, Hester; they'll keep better just where they are, I think. Whoever comes for them can pack them. You need your strength for the journey; let everything stay just as it is, I say."

So they merely closed the blinds, curtains and doors, as if retiring for the night or going out to call on a neighbor for an evening, and started on their hithering journey, their long overland journey to Glenfield.

All the way Hester Cross dreamed longingly of the meeting so soon to be. She had never seen the dear baby nor indeed his mother, her son's wife, but her great heart was fully prepared to take them both in and embrace them beside Jacob and Henry, and the nearer she drew to her journey's end the more eagerly she anticipated the pleasure of meeting them.

At length, dusty and travel-worn, Hester and Jacob Cross stood upon the steps of their son's rather pretentious house, waiting for admission.

By some unfortunate mistake or omission, no one had met them at the station, and they had found their way to their son's house as best they could. And no one met them cordially at the hall door, as would have been the case in their own home if anyone they loved had come to visit them. Instead, a servant came to length, and, with eyebrows raised suspiciously, showed them with a doubtful air into a richly furnished parlor.

It seemed a long time to their weary senses before their son's wife, a vision of beauty, smiling, and with condensing air, came to meet them. She tried to make them feel at ease and simply apologized for the over-charge of falling to meet them at the station, but in spite of all her efforts, something was lacking, and the father and mother from the "little old tumble-down house" away back in the country hoped faintly that the meeting with Henry and the baby would be of a character to warm up their chilled spirits, and drive out that specter which already wore the garb and appearance of homesickness and persistently sat in their inmost souls.

Shown to their room, which was a model of comfort and convenience, they rested and refreshed themselves and waited, as they had been requested, for the summons to dinner, which they did not get for three days. They had no reason to complain of any lack of warmth in their son's greeting, and he was genuinely glad to see them. The mercury of their spirits ran rapidly up, but still they had not seen baby.

to arrange for shipping their boxes back home, all but one.
"This is filled with country things which your mother and I thought you might like—apples from the old trees you used to like best, and a few extra size vegetables."
The old man sighed as he thought that, having sold all their fruit and vegetables, they would be obliged to buy more to keep them through the winter months.
Henry's wife was delighted with the contents of the box, but her husband could never bring himself to relish the vegetables when they were prepared for the table; they seemed to choke him, and the sight of the well-remembered fruit brought tears to his eyes.
The information of the change in the plans of the old people was received by Henry's wife with feigned disappointment.
Not until the old couple were well on their way home did the reason of their sudden return dawn on the mind of their son. Then he said:
"Helena, do you care to know why your father and mother-in-law did not make a home with us, as they first intended?"
She noted the bitterness in his tone, and said nothing, but waited with questioning eyes for what he had to say.
"They overheard your learned disquisition on the subject of grandmothers—the danger of allowing them to nurse or caress their grandchildren."
Helena Cross blushed a fiery red. She knew her husband was right, and she would have given much to recall the words which had worked so much mischief.
She was not so cruel or hard-hearted as she had not realized what she had done and to regret it from the bottom of her heart. She was young, and felt the importance of wife and motherhood, and had listened to too many well-meant but false and foolish teachings, and heretofore lies excuse enough for Henry's wife, whose punishment was quite adequate to her fault, or so her husband decided, when a few hours later saw her eyes swollen and red with weeping.
As for the father and mother who had so suddenly changed their mind, no tongue can tell how blest and sweet and altogether lovely the "little old tumble-down house," which had been so calmly deserted by them four days before, appeared now, as in the golden light of an October sunset, they stepped before it.
"Oh, I'm so glad I didn't tear up or down anything," sighed Hester, softly, wearily, yet delightfully, as she stepped inside the dear old kitchen door. "Jacob, are you too tired to run over to Bennett's and get the cat? They'll give her up—it don't seem quite like home without her—why, there she is. I might have known she'd see us coming. And now we'll unpack the things Henry made us bring, and have supper." Do get out from under foot, pass, till I get a fire built!"
And Jacob, splitting pine kindlings, kept his face turned aside from Hester, that she might not see the happy tears in his eyes.
No one to welcome them, only the old cat that had deserted, yet for Hester and Jacob Cross it was a blessed homecoming.

Letters came at regular intervals from Henry during the winter, and each one was filled with news of the little child—all his little ways and wiles—bitter-sweet news to Grandmother Hester. But through all ran an interlude of sadness—baby was not strong. She had illness after illness, and only partially recovered from each one.
"By-and-by there came a mischievous that filled the two old hearts with mixed emotions. Baby was coming, baby and baby's mother. The letter, sweetly written, was written by Helena.
"Will you kindly let us see, father and mother," it said, "and help me to nurse the baby back to health? I am sure that if the sweet, pure old home that Henry is always telling me about she will grow strong, especially with a grandmamma to love and pet her."

Hester was struck dumb with joy and amazement. She was in the midst of her spring housecleaning, and in order to be ready to receive them on the date mentioned some extra effort and haste would be necessary. This was a small difficulty, however, as in addition to the strong woman already in the house, there were others to be had, and the "little old tumble-down house," in reality a low and old-fashioned, but roomy and pretty cottage—pretty because of its setting of vines and flowers and thrifty fruit trees—was soon as thoroughly purified as could be, and shifting from top to bottom.

And it came to pass that one day Helena Cross, weary, but pleased and hopeful, delighted from the old stage and at the gate of her husband's old home met his mother and gladly surrendered into his willing arms the pale, precious baby, which grandmamma had never expected to see again (it had grown into a bold, stately woman like Helena as she had been before the deadly fear of losing her child had changed and softened her).
Grandmamma's constant care and the country air soon accomplished the desired result, or well begun it, so that when the autumn frosts began to ripen the nuts the fat came forth from the busy husband and father in the distant Western city that baby and her mamma must come home, and with them the mother and father.

But, after much thought and careful consideration, the old folks decided that they were better off in their own home, and that if they could have their beloved daughter-in-law and her child with them during each summer, the winters would pass by swiftly, mere seasons of joyful anticipation.—Sunday Republican.

High Enough.
Governor Hayward, of South Carolina, tells a joke about a young Bostonian who was visiting New York City and had occasion to get into the City-View Building. On climbing the twenty-sixth story, which is the highest everybody except the Bostonian left the car.
"Is this as high as you go?" asked the young man.
"Yes, sir, unless the elevator falls—answered the faithful elevator man."

Painful Periods
"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at it until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful!"—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Details of Another Case.
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and carelessness is the cause of most of the sufferings of women. I believe that if we properly understood the laws of health we would all be well, but if the sick women only knew the truth about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they would be saved much suffering and would soon be cured.
"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality."
"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me completely, and I am now enjoying the best of health, and am most grateful, and only too pleased to endorse such a great remedy."—Miss JENNIE L. EDWARDS, 604 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Unique Heredity of Talent.
The District of Columbia is an example, perhaps unique in the world, of the heredity of talent. Let it be borne in mind that, in this case as in that of every State, the elements of the calculation are not the men and women who reside in the district, but those who were born in it, and who are disseminated all over the United States. That such a percentage of the people born in the District of Columbia should become famous is of course the result of the artificial selection which has gathered temporarily or permanently into a city, not among the largest in the country, so many eminent men.—Century.

I have for sale a few choice male pigs of this famous breed, out of the two best families in Iowa and Nebraska. I purchased the dam at Iowa State Fair after winning first prize as sow and litter. Tom Majors' bids up as a candidate for congress to succeed E. J. Barker in the First congressional district. Now see Rosewater of the Omaha Bee get busy.

The man who votes "or 'straights'" is slowly but surely giving away to the man who votes "or intelligently and independently."—Pender Times.

That's true Mark, and we are a little surprised you haven't fallen into line.

If the legislature that is to convene in January allows itself to be controlled in any manner by the railroad and corruption elements of the state, the next legislature elected is liable to be of quite a different political complexion than the present one.

It is said that the inauguration of Gov. Miley in January is to be the greatest of its kind in the state's history. There is to be a big inauguration ball and the Gov. and his amiable better half are to lead the grand march. The old man must be loosening up his boxes a little.

The Third Congressional district has three candidates for the position of Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction: M. E. Snodgrass, of Wayne; A. E. Ward, of Cedar county, and Eugene Brookings, of Burt county. Too many candidates from the same territory to enable any of them to land the desired prize, is the HERALD's prediction.

Rosewater of the Omaha Bee makes some pretty damaging statements against the Republican State Central Committee regarding its expense accounts during the recent campaign. He charges extravagance and gives facts and figures that appear to substantiate his charge. The rank and file of the party throughout the state have come to look with a degree of suspicion on the machine that has been running things of late in the party and such developments do not tend to lessen their suspicion.

State legislatures are in the habit of creating an almost innumerable number of committees for all kinds of purposes and in many instances these committees serve but one purpose, and that is to give places to a lot of hungry fellows seeking clerkships. These clerkships are good for $3 per day and in most instances the only labor performed is to sign the pay rolls. As the sessions of the legislature usually last from eighty to 100 days the amount of money drawn from the state treasury for each of these clerks is from $340 to $300. It does seem as though a lot of this expense could be saved to the state, because the clerical work of most of these committees could easily be done by some member of the committee and his usefulness as a member of the legislative body not be impaired in the least. Give us economy gentlemen wherever it can be practiced.

The grafters living in and about the Winnebago agency may be able to make those in authority believe that Father Schell is a crank and that his charges of corruption are baseless, but to people living in proximity to the reservations and who know something of the methods there prevalent his charges are not doubted. There is and has been for years about as complete a lot of scamp operations among these Indians as can be found anywhere on the face of the earth as can be proven by dozens of men who have attempted to do business with the aborigines on a business basis, and who found the wheels blocked at every turn. This gang of fellows look upon the Indian as their legitimate prey and when others attempt to do business with them, without paying tribute to these white buzzards they have found these fellows in between them and the parties they were attempting to do business with.

A deal was closed Tuesday whereby the Bell telephone system in Stanton was purchased by a stock company composed of H. D. Miller, A. W. Forbes and others. The purchase price was between $2,500 and $3,000. The transfer included all the phones in this county—lines and switchboards. It is the intention of the new telephone company to build rural lines in all directions from town. It is expected that within a year the system will reach practically every part of the county. The transfer gives us home ownership with the same communication with outside points that we have had in the past.—Stanton Register.

Edgar Howard of the Columbus Telegram is busy nowadays trying to make his ante election charges of the railroads being responsible for the new revenue law jibe with the threat they now make of contesting the collection of taxes levied against them under the law, and smooth as Elgar he finds the fog of events against him.

The failure of the E. K. Horn Valley Bank at O'Neill a few days ago in which the depositors will lose every dollar they had in the bank demonstrates the unsoundness of our state banking laws or also the lack of the men interested with the law administration. To the ordinary business man the failure of this bank and the showing since its failure of the rottenness of the institution is certainly a reflection on the bank examiner or examiner who have been receiving fees regularly for the examination of the bank. The state banking board ought to call for the resignation of the examiner and should demand that it be forthcoming at once. The condition of this bank from its very inception was rotten. The capital stock was borrowed and high interest paid, notes were given to the bank in some cases for stock and these notes have been allowed to run past due so long that the statute of limitations acts as a bar to their collection. This rottenness together with the manner of conducting the business surely was known to the examiner, and if it was not discovered by him he certainly was unfit for the work he was supposed to be doing and for which he was taking pay. Bank examiners should be held responsible for the failure of institutions that come under their jurisdiction, otherwise the depositors are absolutely at the mercy of bank wreckers who are allowed to fill places of trust through the ignorance or in-fidelity of the state's officials. Such a failure as the one in question is an awful calamity, not only to the people whose hard earned cash is gone forever, but to the entire state. It shakes the confidence of the people in the stability of all the banks, and confidence gone, the wheels of business are blocked, and for this reason it becomes an absolute necessity that the unsound institutions be not allowed to do business and that protection to depositors be as perfect as it is possible to make it. There are plenty of banks in the state of Nebraska as sound as it is possible for institutions to be; they are conducted by capable, honest men, and in justice to this kind of banks, our banking laws ought to be such as to make all banks absolutely safe and thus inspire unbounded confidence among the people as to the safety of their earnings when given over to the care of any bank.

The Breeders Gazette of last week contained quite a lengthy article from S. R. Flynn, President of the National Live Stock Bank of Chicago, in which he strongly urges cattle feeding for the coming season and thinks he sees a profit from $5 to $10 per head on each steer fed. It is evident from the tone of the article the gentleman is somewhat disappointed in the amount of cattle paper being floated and as cattle loans are the greater part of his business it naturally follows that he is desirous of promoting the feeding business. But is there a certainty of profit to the cattle feeder, or is he likely to do this season as he has in most instances for the past three years, feed up his corn crop and when he goes to the market and sells his cattle find the receipts scarcely enough to pay original cost of cattle and interest on the money invested and his corn and labor thrown away, or at best not nearly the market price of either received as a result of the season's feeding operations. It is easy for commission men or the heads of great city banking interests to sit in their offices and figure out sure profits for the feeders of cattle; their calculations do not take into account the risks of loss by disease, or accident, or severe winter weather, or the unscrupulousness of the packers when the cattle are ready for the shambles. They simply figure the margin existing between the low priced "feeder" and the top priced fat steer, reckoned on the basis of so many pounds of beef to the bushel of corn and by this method it is a sure enough thing for the man feeding. This line of argument has been used long and has proven to be the financial rock on which the bark of thousands of cattle men have been wrecked. The high price of corn in the feeding districts this year will doubtless deter many men from feeding, who under other circumstances would fill their lots; but the treatment they have received for several years past is the greatest factor in the present situation and until there is substantial grounds for belief on the part of cattle feeders that they will be treated fairly, this spirit of hesitation will exist. It is possible that the determination of many feeders to keep out of the feeding business this season will result next summer in a scarcity of finished beef and as a result this class of cattle go to very high figures and the few who venture will thereby reap good profits, but is it safe to bank on that being the case?

ECONOMY AND EFFICIENCY.
The disposition exhibited by the republican press in Nebraska to insist on rigid economy and the limitation of public expenditures to the necessary minimum in every way is to be commended. Eternal vigilance is a large part of the price of such a system. It is, however, not less important to remember that there should be reason in all things and that the state should not be misled into the wastefulness of insufficient provision for the public needs, by mere striving to make a flimsy showing of "economy." The people of Nebraska want their wards, the blind, the insane and other subjects of their solicitude, properly cared for. They do not want these unfortunate to be made the victims of any political party's "grand stand play" on the pretense of economy. That would be a disgraceful prostitution of government to partisan ends—as disgraceful as extravagance and dissipation of public funds.
We have some thousands of dependents upon state aid and guardianship. We have to provide in the various state institutions for their care, for shelter, clothing, medical treatment, and for maintenance in general. Never before in the history of the state has the administration of these institutions been at so high a degree of efficiency as it is today, nor relatively to the services has the administration been so economical as it is today. The people are to be congratulated upon this fact and emphasis ought to be put upon it at this time when the legislature is so anxious to meet and settle provisions for the state institutions for the next two years.
By no means should the efficiency of these institutions be sacrificed. It might be possible to make a temporary, but false showing of economy by cutting down appropriations. Buildings and plants might be thus forced out of repair and the officia's might by one makeshift or another postpone for a while some part of the expenditures. But it would all have to be provided for some time, and that at no distant day, with largely added cost for the folly, not to speak of the wrong done to those for whom the state is in honor bound to care decently, efficiently and even liberally.

Moreover, we have not been paying the current expenses of our government, but for a long series of years have been running in debt. This great and rich state ought to put a stop to this now. The new revenue law provides a base for our common sense business. The people of Nebraska want the legislature to look the situation squarely in the face, to appropriate what is necessary for the creditable and efficient support of our state institutions, but not a cent more, and then to see to it that hereafter every dollar of current expense shall be paid when due.

This ought not to be a partisan question; but any party that hews to the line of sound business administration, whatever the sum necessary for the proper maintenance of the public institutions may be, may safely rely upon the intelligence and good sense of the people of Nebraska for vindication in spite of any partisan effort to misrepresent.

Things to Think About

Nearly everybody at this season of the year is thinking of Christmas and what to buy for presents. It has become the practice of many to make practical presents and we think it is a wise way of remembering your friends with something they can wear. Nothing will please a man or boy more than a present that he can put on and show that he has been remembered by some kind friend. No matter how much of how little you pay for a present it will be appreciated if it is in style and up to date. Don't make a mistake by buying a man or a boy something on a bargain counter in a general store to wear. If you come here to look you will find more and better things for men and boys to wear than you will find in any store in the county. Everything here is right up to date and no matter if you don't know what is proper to wear you can't make a mistake if you trade here. Then it is a great satisfaction to buyers to know that anything bought here is bought at the right price. Our space will not permit us to mention everything we have suitable for presents. Suits, overcoats, fur coats, hats, caps, shoes, slippers, hosiery, Staley underwear, neckties, handkerchiefs, mufflers, gloves, smoking jackets, suit cases, umbrellas and many other things that men and boys wear are suitable presents and we have them in variety. Don't think about it for weeks, but call and your friends. Don't and have us lay a prepared than ever for Christmas presents

He lambasted the multi-millionaire rich who have hogged their huge possessions by unfair means, to the injury of the masses. He gave special attention to Rockefeller and Carnegie and ridiculed their pretenses of philanthropy. He also paid his respects in a lively fashion to professional politicians.

Things to Think About

Nearly everybody at this season of the year is thinking of Christmas and what to buy for presents. It has become the practice of many to make practical presents and we think it is a wise way of remembering your friends with something they can wear. Nothing will please a man or boy more than a present that he can put on and show that he has been remembered by some kind friend. No matter how much of how little you pay for a present it will be appreciated if it is in style and up to date. Don't make a mistake by buying a man or a boy something on a bargain counter in a general store to wear. If you come here to look you will find more and better things for men and boys to wear than you will find in any store in the county. Everything here is right up to date and no matter if you don't know what is proper to wear you can't make a mistake if you trade here. Then it is a great satisfaction to buyers to know that anything bought here is bought at the right price. Our space will not permit us to mention everything we have suitable for presents. Suits, overcoats, fur coats, hats, caps, shoes, slippers, hosiery, Staley underwear, neckties, handkerchiefs, mufflers, gloves, smoking jackets, suit cases, umbrellas and many other things that men and boys wear are suitable presents and we have them in variety. Don't think about it for weeks, but call and see us; we will show you how to please your friends. Don't wait until the last few days, come now and have us lay away the things you want. We are better prepared than ever before to please you with suitable things for Christmas presents.

Marshal Miner put a "drunk" in the cooler Friday, who didn't get out until Sunday, but by the aid of some one from outside got out and immediately took his flight to more congenial haunts.

Women who love their husbands should insist on them wearing Staley underwear. It is not pleasant to be a widow.

Men who buy Staley's and nothing else will find no suit will please them as well as Staley. Try the 2 Johns on suits.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Chas. Robbins was over from Laurel Tuesday.

Jim Coyle, of Ponca, was in the city Tuesday.

A boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. James Lucky Monday morning.

Frank Mettlen, of Winside, was in town Monday afternoon.

A boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. August Jacobson on Nov. 23.

The mother of Mrs. Magnus Paulson is visiting the latter in our city.

Frank Strahan and wife, and H. F. Wilson were in Sioux City yesterday.

Geo. Philo and family, of Carroll, spent Thanksgiving with the former's parents in the city.

Elder Bichel was in town Tuesday morning on his way from Bloomfield to his home in Norfolk.

Byron Holle, of Laurel, attended a family reunion at the Emil Weber home on Thanksgiving day.

Otis King and F. M. Skoon left Tuesday on a land hunting trip through Nance, Wheeler and Greeley counties.

Mrs. Mudge entertained a social gathering in a pleasant manner Friday evening, finish being the chief feature of amusement.

The infant child of S. E. Miller died on Nov. 23, and was buried on the 25th. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. North, father and mother of Mrs. Mudge, returned to their home at Minneapolis the first of the week after visiting their daughter here for several days.

Rev. C. N. Dawson, formerly pastor of the Methodist church of this place, is now presiding elder of the Iowa district in which he is located and we un-derstand very highly thought of.

Dr. Williams desires us to say to his patrons that he will not leave Wayne to take up his legislative duties until January 1, instead of Dec. 1, as many appear to think. The legislature convenes Tuesday, January 8, 1905.

W. A. K. Neely returned Saturday from his Thanksgiving trip to Ames, Iowa, where he reports a splendid visit with their son John, who is a student in the Civil engineering class at the Iowa State College.

W. N. Huse, publisher of the Nebraska Workman and Norfolk Daily News, underwent a successful operation for gall stones in an Omaha hospital, Saturday morning. There is every prospect of rapid and complete recovery.

The Wilbur school, taught by Miss Mary Richardson, had a box supper Friday night. Goods were sold, ladies being dressed as such, and a box of edibles went with each guest. In that manner the sum of $21 was realized.

With the excellent crops and strong market, there is good reason why the holiday trade this year will be far in excess of what it has been in many years past, and merchants should feel fully justified in having largely increased stocks.

Mr. W. D. Worth of Red Oak, was in town Tuesday night on his way to the ranch in the west end of the county. He says business is pretty dull in Red Oak, many store buildings being without occupants and everything in a business way at a standstill.

"It pays to keep good cows, and it pays to milk them." That is what P. M. Corbit remarked to a Herald representative the other day and then he gave the reason for his statement. "We have milked seven cows this season and since March 1st we have sold from them $200 worth of cream besides having all the cream, milk and butter necessary for the use of the family, had this money has been practically all gain, because our chickens have produced one egg to purchase all the groceries, in fact the hens have paid our living expenses!"

In the above is an object lesson for the shiftless or careless. It is a practical demonstration of the little things on the farm that it pays to look after.

Roll Snyder, representing Kiefer Bros. of Keota, Iowa, importers of heavy draft and coach horses arrived here this week with a fine imported four year old Norman stallion. The horse is a pretty dapple grey, weighing something over 1800 pounds, and is a horse of fine style and good action—just what the farmers of Wayne county are looking for.

An effort is being made to form a breeding association, so that our farmers can have one of the best horses in Nebraska to breed to. We think this a move in the right way and hope for its success.

The horse is at Fred Brown's livery barn where it can be seen at any time. Mr. Snyder would be pleased to show the horse to any interested in good horses. We say so, and see him, it is well worth your time.

Prof. Durkin and his old sorrel horse, and Dr. Leisner's automobile, occasioned quite an excitement on Main street, Monday afternoon. The Prof. was driving on the street in company with Leo Danahy, when they met the doctor and his auto going in an opposite direction and the old horse got a move on himself and turned around a little and the automobile in doing so broke a shaft, and the Professor and young

Danahy and lit out in an opposite direction with the buggy. When the horse man got done tumbling and rolling around in the street he looked as though he had been run through a prize ring and a flouring mill combined—his face was scratched and bruised, his flowing locks filled with dust and ashes and his clothing pretty badly disarranged, but not seriously injured.

Another of the series in the local lecture course took place Tuesday evening when John G. Scorer, of Pennsylvania, treated a good-sized audience to something that was both entertaining and full of thoughts that won the earnest reflection of his hearers. He presented different phases of American life in a most forceful manner, illustrating and emphasizing his points by frequent flights of humor. He lambasted the multi-millionaire rich who have hogged their huge possessions by unfair means, to the injury of the masses. He gave special attention to Rockefeller and Carnegie and ridiculed their pretense of philanthropy. He also paid his respects in a lively fashion to professional politicians. While he commended America as the best country on earth and continually improving, he expressed the belief that there were still many bad spots in its character that need the spirit of betterment.

The old soldiers and their families had a great time up in the G. A. R. hall Tuesday evening. About sixty persons assembled and listened to a talk by the Department Commander and were otherwise entertained until supper time arrived and then instead of "sow belly and hard tack" as in the days when they were much more youthful, down in the valleys of Virginia or in the swamps of Mississippi and the south west, they gathered around a board laden with the best the land can afford.

Whalen, the Wayne bakery man, and the wives of the old soldiers furnished the grub and they do say it was immense and that the old chaps had their appetites with them. It was an evening of reminiscence and good cheer, the old days long gone were lived over again, tales of camp and battlefield related and all went to their homes at a late hour feeling that it was one of the pleasant spots in a life of tempest and sunshine.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Jones were over Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Jones' parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Lewis, living south of Wayne. Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Garwood and daughter Lela, of Randolph, and Bert Garwood of M. Lean attended the reunion of the Garwood families held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Garwood on Thanksgiving day.

Rohwer & Sodeman moved into their new building Wednesday and now occupy one of the finest furnished saloons in the state. The bar and fixtures are of the most modern design and constructed of dark oak and mahogany highly polished. The room is lighted by gas. The establishment would be a credit to a city of any size. Mr. Ralph Taylor and Miss Emma O'Connell quietly hid themselves to Wayne Wednesday where they were married by County Judge Hunter. Ralph is one of Carroll's enterprising young men and a carpenter by trade, while his bride is a Wayne young lady, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Connell. The young couple have a wide circle of friends who join the Index in congratulations.—Carroll Index.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Nellie Ross, of Winside, called on college friends Saturday.

Clara Beasobain stopped in Wayne Saturday en route to her school near Newman's Grove.

Twenty-five more students are now enrolled than at a corresponding time last year.

Frank Driscoll, of Plainview, re-entered school this week and brought three friends with him.

Prof. Gregg and family spent Thanksgiving day with Randolph friends and Sunday with friends at Carroll.

Miss Biggell, of North Bond, and Miss Munner, of Pulger, are among the new students enrolling this week.

Miss Katherine Lewis returned to her student duties last Tuesday after an enjoyable visit to the St. Louis fair.

Miss Nina Longren, of the class of 1900, we notice has recently been elected to a position in the Bloomfield schools.

W. E. Miller, of Hartington, came down to spend Thanksgiving with Wayne friends. W. E. is meeting with splendid success as principal of the Magnet schools.

Miss McCormick came up from Norfolk Friday and was a two-days guest at the college. She was a member of the teachers' class last year and now teaches in the seventh grade of the Norfolk schools.

The graduating classes for the year have been organized and the number entering the various classes is 157, with others to come later on. Bert Wright is president for this term. A. F. Duggan is vice president and Eva Reed is secretary.

As the corn-shucking season is now closing and the young men are finding the opportunity to exercise the mind as well as the body, the school are growing proportionately. Thirteen names have been added to our rolls since the first of the week.

EXCHANGE NOTES.

Miss Edith Snodgrass and her brother, little Dewey, were guests of the family of J. R. Mansfield over Thanksgiving—Wisner Chronicle.

The local Modern Woodmen drill team visited Wayne Tuesday night and assisted in the initiation of sixty odd new members. The Wayne Woodmen have been having a revival and this is the latest. Those of the team attending were Tom Alfson, Anton Haming, Harry Pryman, W. E. Kisko, George Clausen, Dick Pylman, Wm. Preston, E. W. Magill.—Wisner Free Press.

A local western fitter received a fine chicken, presumably in payment of a subscription. He took it home for dinner. The following day he received a letter from a rural subscriber. "Dear Sir: Yesterday I sent you in a chicken by my man, Hank. He says you wuz out. What I wanted to know wuz what kind of a disease the chicken had. It died last week. Please let me know to settle a bet."

Dr. F. E. Gamble has sold out his practice here to Dr. M. S. Elliot, of Rapid City, S. D., who is a practitioner of both medicine and osteopathy. Dr. Elliot will occupy the rooms at present occupied by Dr. Gamble, but will later, on the arrival of his wife, move the office and have living quarters in the rooms up stairs in the Dart building. Dr. Gamble goes to Wayne, his old home town, where he will enter into practice.—Bloomfield Monitor.

Prof. Gregg, of Wayne, visited the Picket office last Friday. He was over to assist in the institute work. Mr. Gregg is representative for this district, the position Chas. McLeod will occupy after January 1st. N. D. Jackson, of Neligh, will be all right for speaker of the house and the Picket will be highly pleased to see him in the high-back chair, but can see no possible sorrow in his getting there. The election was less than a week past when Brother Picket had elected W. W. Young as successor to Congressman McCarthy two years hence, and a week later he announced himself as a democrat hereafter and slated Resweaver and Schneider for a big scrap over the United States senatorship two years hence. There is after conversation activity for you. On the senatorship at least he has another guess coming.—Stanley Picket.

JAPANESE LOSS IS ENORMOUS AT PORT ARTHUR.

Desperate Assault Kept Up—Think Fortress Must Fall in Three Weeks—Big Guns Sweep the Forts—Japs Lost 4,000 Men in One Hour.

According to a Tokyo dispatch to the London Standard, there is an unofficial rumor that the Japanese have hauled large caliber guns to the top of 203 Meter hill, from whence their fire has a sweep of the whole of Port Arthur.

Bennett Burleigh wires to the London Daily Telegraph from Che Foo that in the last assault the Japanese lost 4,000 men in one hour's fighting. They claim to have captured two more of the north-eastern forts and a third, which is part of the west Kekwan fort.

The imperial headquarters at Tokio Tuesday night summarized the Port Arthur situation as follows:

"With regard to the enemy's forts at Sungshu Mountain and eastward, we have firmly captured the crests, glacis and counterescarpments and their vicinities, but the time to charge has not yet come.

"At Fort 203, Meter hill, by several charges we have succeeded in capturing the enemy's shelter trenches near the summit. At present our force is holding its position and endeavoring to capture the whole fort."

It is estimated in Tokio that 90 per cent of the work of the complete occupation of Port Arthur will be finished with this height in the possession of the Japanese. No part of the harbor of Port Arthur will then be concealed.

STEALS GREAT SUM.

Employee of the Rothschilds Embezzles Millions.

A London special states: Discovery has been made of an embezzlement of $5,000,000 by a trusted employee of the London house of Rothschild. This is at once the most stupendous embezzlement in criminal annals, and the first time in their history that the Rothschilds have suffered through the wrongdoing of an employee.

Moses Blumenthal, head of the billion department of the famous family of money lenders, is the man charged with the embezzlement. He had carte blanche to use the firm's name, and quite by accident it has been learned that for a period, the full length of which has not yet been learned, he has been disposing of billion entrusted to his care and sinking the proceeds in speculation.

The extent of the man's dealings may be imagined from the fact that he has made away with 21,380 troy pounds of gold. From this the Scotland Yard officials argue that Blumenthal's peculations must have covered a period of five and perhaps ten years. Characteristically, the Rothschilds have quietly assumed the loss of $1,250,000 suffered by them directly, while the disposition of the balance, which had been deposited by clients, is not yet settled.

Blumenthal, it is said, has fled to New York, but it being against the policy of the house to speculate, no effort will be made to apprehend him. To protect its great name, the house has even settled Blumenthal's brokerage accounts, though not legally responsible for them. So quietly has the whole affair been closed up that London knows only of the enormous crime through talk in the city, the London papers having studiously avoided all reference to it.

A curious feature of the affair is that the Rothschilds hold the monetary loss light as compared with the breach of faith of a trusted employee. Blumenthal was a protégé of the Rothschilds, having been taken into the family of the house as a poor boy. He had been advanced to his commanding position.

Blumenthal covered up his peculations by adulterating the gold melted in the firm's refineries. This means that an extra amount of alloy to cover the amount of his stealings has been put in the gold melted at the Rothschild's establishment. To accomplish this successfully, he must have had accomplices.

BOOY BADLY BRUISED.

Brutal Murder of a Woman at Leicester, Mass.

Bruised and battered by force blows, her face pounded into a recognizable mass, skull fractured and six ribs broken, the body of Mrs. Emma Richards Brigham, reported missing Saturday night, was found Sunday in the alder swamp in the rear of her home at Leicester, Mass.

A fierce struggle between the woman and her antagonist, if the mute story of trampled leaves and scattered household branches are evidence, took place.

A tramp who stopped at the Brigham houses two nights in September is suspected of being the murderer. His description, as given by the aged mother of the murdered woman, tallies with that of the tramp seen in Leicester Saturday and Sunday. He left Leicester in September with a blue shirt and a gold neck-stolen from Mrs. Brigham's house.

Three tramps are held at Spencer as suspects. When the state police arrived in Leicester Sunday they immediately notified the surrounding towns to hold all suspicious persons, and Deputy Sheriff Draper, of Spencer, arrested Patrick J. Stanton, of New York, Thomas Courtney, of Springfield, and George Rivett, of Burlington, Vt., and they will be held for investigation.

No motive for the crime is known. The first theory that she had been robbed is not borne out by investigation, for a close examination of her clothing does not show any sign of robbery. Her mother, Mrs. Jane Richards, told the officers that she supposed her daughter had $30 with her when she left the house.

The weapon with which the crime was committed has not been found. The woman's face was cut and bruised, her right ear torn off and six ribs were broken. The body was apparently dragged fifty yards from the place of murder and hidden under branches of trees and crists of snow.

The selection of Leicester have offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer.

STATE OF NEBRASKA

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN CONDENSED FORM.

No Assets Are to Be Found—O'Neill Bank Was Left Clean of Cash—Officers Accuse Each Other—Cashier's Statement Finally Made.

State Bank Examiner Whittemore, of Lincoln, has been looking into the records of the Elkhorn Valley Bank at O'Neill, which failed a few days ago, and has reported to the state banking board that he has found all the cash and $30,000 in notes missing and that nothing is left with which to pay depositors except the bank building. There are deposits of $584,000.

The statement left by Cashier Hagerty with his wife was given to the examiner Monday. It contains nothing that throws any light on the missing assets. Mr. Hagerty charges his partner, Bernard McGreevy, with sending the bank, and says the latter did not have the funds to back up his claims. McGreevy, who had implicitly trusted him, in view of the failure, Mr. Hagerty is over 70 years of age.

Mr. McGreevy's statement, which was made public last week, charges Hagerty with a systematic appropriation of the funds of the bank for his own use. Warrants have been issued at O'Neill for the arrest of both officers, Hagerty being charged with receiving deposits when he knew the bank to be in an insolvent condition, and McGreevy with embezzlement of city funds.

It is stated that McGreevy started with $10,000 of approved capital, and that the interest payments on this and the high interest paid depositors had gradually absorbed the depositors' principal. An Omaha special says: The depositors of the defunct Elkhorn Valley Bank of O'Neill, include few business men, they are mostly widows or aged persons, and there are many pitiful scenes.

PAPERS BY THE PEOPLE

PLEA FOR THE SIMPLE LIFE.

By Rev. R. A. White, D. D., Chicago.

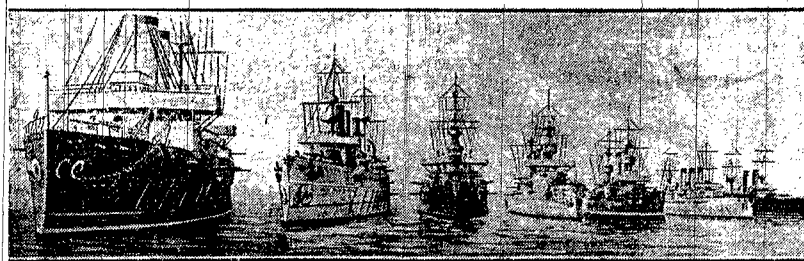

Cultivate simplicity. Live within your means, follow your own tastes, and act like a sane human being instead of the crazy, jaded, overworked, overplayed, over-dressed set we are. The modern tendency is to become enmeshed in a complication of wants, necessities and confusions, like a fly in a web. The mere struggle for existence has become woefully complicated. Business has taken on such complexities as to rob it of pleasure and threaten it with constant uncertainty. Our pleasures are complex. Simple entertainment no longer satisfies. The stage, the press, art, fiction, and music are all in a mad rush to create or find new sensations for restless, dissatisfied patrons, burdened with many cares and oppressed by an insupportable ennui.

Simple, tasteful dress scarcely exists; we are an over-dressed people, ruled by the latest convention of clothes-makers. We are mad over superfluous wants. The people worry most over nonessential things. No one is any happier under these conditions. Everyone has a look of care. Our women are not rosy and contented looking. Our young men breed wrinkles early. Men and women who dress to suit themselves and be comfortable are freaks. To keep up appearances, people wear clothes which they have not paid for and cannot afford. To march with the procession, people eat food for which they have not paid the grocer, live in houses with rent in arrears, affect a style of life they have no visible means of supporting. Living at our present pace is responsible for most of our modern crime. From the snare of small debts, brought on by expensive living, many a man seeks to escape by certain speculations and finally by certain poisonings.

POWER OF CIRCUMSTANCE IN LOVE AFFAIRS.

By Helen Oldick.

There is nothing in the conduct of life to which the true old saying that "circumstances alter cases" applies more forcibly than to love affairs. No one is altogether sure of one's self, still less of another, and none can gauge or predict the depths of another's heart. They who ask advice concerning the course to be pursued in the dilemmas of love are usually ill advised. Such problems are of those with which no one should intermeddle. The man who wishes to be told whether or he will be safe in marrying a woman who is reasonably sure loved him but with whom he is not in love; a woman whom he likes thoroughly and of whom he cordially approves; must in all kindness and justice to himself and to her decide the question for them both. He only can judge whether his temperament is such that cordial liking for

ORIGIN OF WORD PICNIC.

"Where the word 'picnic' asked a man who is fond of the study of the meaning and origin of words, in the New Orleans Times-Democrat. I do not know and have not been able to trace. My attention was directed to the matter by a recent article, in which it was stated that the derivation of the word picnic is uncertain. In London Notes and Queries of 1883 attempts were made to trace its origin. One correspondent says: 'Under a French form the word appears in a speech of Beaupierre, 'C'est le petit d'oit maicenser, et puis dans les pique-niques.' An earlier instance occurs in one of Lord Chesterfield's letters, dated October, 1784.' Another writer of the same date tries to trace the word through France into Italy. Starting with the assumption that pique-nique in French implies a party at which each guest provides some special duty, he finds the Italian expression piccino (duty) and piccola (a trifling service), and from these he coins piccino piccino (picnic). A French encyclopedia, 1843, has it that the word is compounded of the simple English pic (to choose) and nick (in the nick of time, or the spur of the moment). In France the term is also used for indoor picnics. In America the word picnic is confined to out-of-door affairs, and in the old-time meaning of the word it was a basket dinner in the woods. The word is given a broader meaning now and is frequently used to describe the annual celebration of certain organizations."

Although Bret-Harte made large profits from his writings and won a success which seldom comes to a writer as early as it did to him, he left his family in very straitened circumstances, and if it were not for the many staunch friends in the American colony in London Mrs. Bret-Harte would often find it difficult to make both ends meet. With her children she has made her home in Bayswater ever since Bret-Harte's death. actress' rescue and narrowly escaped losing his own life. As he was returning with the unconscious form of Miss Rush another large wave struck the two and flung them apparently lifeless on the sand. Heriot was restored to consciousness after a time, but Miss Rush was beyond medical aid. She was hurried to a hospital but died while the physicians were working over her without regaining consciousness. Death is believed to have been caused by heart disease produced by the shock of being hit by the first wave, as there was not enough water in the lungs to cause drowning.

Isadore Rush was one of the most highly-esteemed women on the stage, and her versatility made her a favorite with theater-goers. She made her debut as an actress about a dozen years ago. She was married to Roland Reed, the famous comedian, and for several years was his leading lady on the road, sharing his successes in several of his notable productions. One of her last parts with him was in "The Politician." Miss Rush had also played with the Rogers' Brothers and in "Florodora" and other musical successes. She had a beautiful home near Morningside Park, in New York, and was popular socially as well as on the stage. Her loving care of her husband during the many months he suffered from cancer endeared her to many and resulted in her health breaking down temporarily.

France's Money Troubles.

The French are having a hard time with their nickels. The old ones were so much like the silver franc piece that the people protested; they kept giving a piece worth 20 cents for one worth 5. At last they have changed the shape. The new nickel will be rounded with acute corners so that by the simple touch the difference will be perceptible. About twenty millions in a few days, will be thrown into circulation.—Brooklyn Eagle.

CHICAGO'S HUGE SUBWAY PLANS.

Bores Are Intended for Wire Are to Become Arteries of Traffic.

A complete revolution of the methods of handling the freight business of practically all of the railroads having terminals in Chicago is promised by the Chicago Tunnel Company, which has been incorporated in New Jersey, with a capitalization of $50,000,000 and immediately came into possession of the Chicago Tunnel Company. Behind this definite announcement of purpose is said to lie a strong possibility of securing the street railway systems of the city will be provided with subways in the heart of the city, and thus further relieve the congestion which has been complained of for years.

It is strongly hinted that the construction of a subway directly across the tunnels is contemplated at some time, and that a controlling interest in the Illinois Tunnel Company was achieved in order to avoid litigation and embarrassment during the construction period.

There are some of the things promised which are of full scope of the scheme is in operation.

Freight traffic will be diverted from the streets to the tunnels, and the streets thus relieved of the dirt incidentally to loading.

Railroad freight yards will be removed from 65 miles from the central part of the city, thus leaving valuable real estate available for other business uses.

All freight will be handled more expeditiously, the cars to which freight has been transferred at the outer yards coming into the city by the tunnels and electric motors.

With the passing of freight locomotives the city will be relieved of 80 per cent of the smoke nuisance.

The necessity for tearing up pavements will be practically overcome when telegraph and telephone wires, gas pipes, water pipes and other public utilities are placed within the tunnels.

Mail will be handled more quickly when letters and parcels can be dropped directly into the tunnels through mail boxes, and thence conveyed directly to the postoffice.

INDIAN DOCTORS OF OLD.

Their Remedies Were Simple, White Diseases Were Few.

Undoubtedly the American Indian in his primitive state was a fine specimen of physical manhood, says the Kansas City Star. Dr. E. J. Kemp, who has made a careful investigation into the history, has found that before the Indians were contaminated by the white race they were never afflicted with smallpox, measles, tuberculosis, gonorrhea, insanity, nervous diseases or any other of the ills and blood affections, which have in late years made such terrible inroads upon the numbers and vitality of the red men of this country.

The only bodily afflictions which Dr. Kemp reports to the Medical Record that he found among the aborigines were fevers and diseases produced by cold, such as pleurisy, pneumonia, rheumatism, dysentery and wounds from accidents or battle. Naturally the remedies of the Indians were simple and few in number. When sick an Indian refused all kinds of stimulants, but drank freely of cold water. In addition to this, in proper cases the Indian resorted to sweating, purging, vomiting and bleeding, and finally, when all remedies seemed to be ineffectual, the medicine man was called in to try his amulets and incantations on the patient.

These methods of cure are still resorted to among Chinook Indians who are removed from the influences of civilization. But before we smile or consider our own history, it was only a few generations ago that our fathers of medicine were almost as good as those of the Indians. The more intelligent of the white people then, of course, did not resort to magic and incantations, but the concoctions which they manufactured to cure disease almost pass belief. Oliver Wendell Holmes, in his "Medical History of Massachusetts," has made a permanent record of some of the practices then prevailing among the colonists. Governor Winthrop was a firm believer in the efficacy of sorbages, while the Rev. Cotton Mather used upon his sick friends such absurd and foul pellets and medicaments as no Indian ever dreamed of.

RISE OF THE CASTELLANES.

First of the Family Figures in a Chilian Episode.

A friend of the Gould family related the other day the story of the origin of the Castellanes of France.

"I know that this story is true," he began, "for I got it from Count Boni himself."

"It seems that centuries ago the Castellanes were only poor folk—tilers of the soil, wardens, armors, and so on. Finally a youth appeared among them of a different caliber from his simple, timid, frugal relatives. He was a bold fellow, tall, strong, gay, with blue eyes and yellow curls, ready to laugh always, and equally ready to fight."

"He became, as was natural, a soldier. He bore arms under one of the warrior kings of France. But he was only a dragoon, and though he served his country well, promotion did not come to him."

"One day it happened that the king, reviewing the troops, rode at the head of the column to which Castellane belonged. The young man's horse was restless. It stood near to the right and now to the left. Finally, with a quivering movement it lunged against the mount of the king himself. The shoulders of the monarch and of the soldier hurled together, and the king was nearly thrown."

"He turned pale with rage, and struck Castellane across the cheek with his riding whip. The blow was seen by the whole army."

"The young man, a red vein across his face, bowed low over his horse's neck, and, drawing his pistol, extended it, butt forward, to the king, and said, 'Sire, he said, you have taken away my honor—take my life.'"

"This picturesque gallantry impressed the king. He took the young man into his favor, ennobling him in due course. From this youth the Castellanes descend."

CHURCHES JOIN TO SAVE BOYS.

Reign of Crime in Brooklyn Starts Under the Central Gateway.

The hundreds of hundreds of young men connected with well-known families in the Bedford section of Brooklyn, N. Y., which began several years ago by the formation of the "Bedford gang" and finally led to many of them and their families being sent to the penitentiary in that quarter, has caused the inauguration of a remarkable religious campaign for the purification of the youths who passed their time about the street corners.

The first night of the "campaign of evangelization" as it is called, began with a street parade in which trimmed 2,000 men with banners, with the band of the Twenty-third regiment playing hymns at the fore. The mile of frock-coated paraders moved through Bedford avenue to Hancock street, where hung a great banner. There they had an open-air meeting.

Ministers from fifty churches of all Protestant denominations were in attendance and many of them made short addresses. Every church in the district is joining in the movement.

The street corner "bedding" ended, the British band again headed the procession, and it marched to the Central Presbyterian church, where a meeting for men had been called. The church has a capacity of 1,500. Every seat was taken and hundreds were turned away.

Sixty streets corner addresses, following the purposes of the movement, which, it was announced, will continue throughout the winter.

Typewritten Music.

The latest thing in typewriting is a machine which will substitute all the tedious labor of preparing music for publication, and will eventually reduce the cost of copies of music of limited circulation. The new machine is much like other typewriters, except that it forms the scale as the operator presses the keys, registers the characters, it not only registers the notes, bars and rests, but also marks the lines at the same time, a single machine sells for $300 at present, and a complete with $200,000 capital will soon begin work. Probably the next improvement will be the method of attaching the typewriter to the piano so that, as the great musician improvises the music will be typewritten simultaneously, and without intruding on the inspired moment.

Reign of Crime in Brooklyn Starts Under the Central Gateway.

The hundreds of hundreds of young men connected with well-known families in the Bedford section of Brooklyn, N. Y., which began several years ago by the formation of the "Bedford gang" and finally led to many of them and their families being sent to the penitentiary in that quarter, has caused the inauguration of a remarkable religious campaign for the purification of the youths who passed their time about the street corners.

The first night of the "campaign of evangelization" as it is called, began with a street parade in which trimmed 2,000 men with banners, with the band of the Twenty-third regiment playing hymns at the fore. The mile of frock-coated paraders moved through Bedford avenue to Hancock street, where hung a great banner. There they had an open-air meeting.

Ministers from fifty churches of all Protestant denominations were in attendance and many of them made short addresses. Every church in the district is joining in the movement.

The street corner "bedding" ended, the British band again headed the procession, and it marched to the Central Presbyterian church, where a meeting for men had been called. The church has a capacity of 1,500. Every seat was taken and hundreds were turned away.

Sixty streets corner addresses, following the purposes of the movement, which, it was announced, will continue throughout the winter.

BETTER STOCK NEEDED.

It is the usual thing at this time of the year to have the market flooded with common butcher stock and short fed steers, but this year there seems to be more of it available than usual. The low prices paid for this trashy stuff would seem to militate against its production, but such does not appear to be the case. There are hundreds of farmers who as yet have not awakened to the fact that good stock does not consume more than poor stock, and that it is decidedly more profitable to raise the former kind. Last week, with 90,000 cattle received, comparatively few were in a well finished condition.—Live Stock World.

The above is worthy of consideration of every stock raiser and feeder and points out the faculty of men attempting to make money out of the scrub animal. There is only one sure source of profit in the live stock business and that lies in the production of better animals—something that when ready for the butcher block will command the best instead of the poorest price. It costs less to raise a good grade or a pure blood than it does a scrub, and the man that today on the high priced lands of eastern Nebraska is raising anything but the best is losing an opportunity.

HURRAH FOR PIERRE

Pierre, Hughes County, S. D. retains the capital by an overwhelming majority at the recent election. Now that the capital location is settled for all time we will see more people coming here from the east to invest than ever before and prices of lands will advance much more rapidly than ever before. Now is the time to invest, while they can still be had very cheap. Our crops were good and our stock is in excellent condition for shipment this fall and as a consequence the country is in a very prosperous condition. I have a very fine list of excellent unimproved farm lands situated in this county and the adjoining county of Sully, and will be very glad to write you descriptions and give you prices on same. My prices are bedrock. These lands are all situated very near R. R. towns and Pierre.
