CHICKEN CULTURE

John Kate Proclaims the Worth of the Hen.

THINKS SHE IS NEGLECTED

Would be Doubly as Profitable as Now if Given Proper Care.— Pays More Today Than Corn and Wheat.

During the next few weeks millions of young chickens will make their appearance in this country. The hen is the most profitable animal on earth. No other animal that costs like amount will pay as well as the hen. The poultry business in America pays a larger sum than the wheat and corn crop combined. It seems surprising that no other animal is abused and neglected like the hen. The farmer will give the best care to his hogs, horses and cows and refuse to do anything for the hen. He expects his wife to care for them and seldom has any arrangements made so she can give them the care they deserve.

In spite of all this neglect and abuse the hen gets, she attends to business and continues to fill the egg basket and steals away to some selected place to hide her nest so she can at least once a year raise a family. No one would care to live on a farm without her. Every one enjoys her presence, but seems to think because she is so good she needs no care and attention. It is a shame that so good a friend has to sleep in a place not fit for hogs. God made the feather tribe for our enjoyment. He feeds the ravens and all the birds of the fields, but we have captured the hen and made her serve us, and we should give her the best care we can for her faithful services. Any one that will make a hen sleep in a filthy place and where the wind can reach her through the cracks should be made to sleep in a room with the windows open and a blanket with holes in it, so he could feel the cold winds circulating around his body. The hen would be doubly as profitable as she now is if she did receive the care and attention she deserves. Let us be honest in the poultry business. We all like it. We all enjoy it, and yet men and women will sell eggs that are rotten. When I was a boy I used to carry a basket of eggs to town and sell them for four cents a dozen and buy sugar at ten cents a pound and we all thought then the chicken business would be overdone. Last Saturday one store in Wayne bought fifteen hundred dozen of eggs at fifteen cents and sugar is now about seven cents a pound, and some people still say the chicken business is likely to be overdone. Just think of the number of places we have in Wayne county that take in eggs and you can form some idea of the number of eggs that are produced in Wayne county. I believe I shall live long enough to see eggs sold not less than twenty cents a dozen in the spring and from thirty to forty cents in fall and winter making an average not less than twenty-five cents a dozen the year around and not in trade either, but for cash. When only good fresh eggs are sold and every egg can be warranted to be good by the merchant selling them, then eggs will sell for not less than five cents more than they sell now. If there were a law compelling people to stamp a their name on egg cents they sell, eggs would sell at two to six cents more a dozen than they do now. When the consumer knows that all eggs are good he is willing to pay more than he now does. Ireland two years ago commenced to stamp all eggs and warranted them and it has increased the receipts of Ireland over five million dollars for eggs last year. We are far behind other countries on the egg question. In all Europe eggs are stamped and warranted to be pure and sell for more than they do here.

Now let us be honest about the scrub hen. Farmers that never had a flock of pure bred hens, tell their neighbors that scrub hens lay more than pure breeds. They say all kinds are the best, never having a flock of any one pure breed on their farms. A scrub hen will lay about four or five dutches of eggs a year, (50 to 75 eggs) and lay them nearly all in spring when eggs are the cheapest. When she is full grown and sold she will weigh about one half as much as a pure bred. A farmer sold last week at a store in Wayne eight pure bred Plymouth Rock hens for eight cents a pound and they weighed eight pounds or sixty-four cents a hen. A scrub Plymouth hen will weigh about four to four and one-half pounds and lay about one half as many eggs a year. It don't pay to raise any scrub stock and no one ever has been able to prove that it does when outpelled to do so.

The question is asked every day which is the best kind of chicken. The best kind of chicken is the kind you like best. There is not so much difference in different kinds of pure bred chickens as many suppose, but if you have a kind that you like you will naturally take better care of them than you would of a kind you do not admire, and therefore you will get better results. If you admire a big woman don't marry a small one. You will take good care of anything you like, and the better care you take of anything the better the result.

If you will make arrangements to have eggs to sell next winter when they sell at twenty-five to thirty cents you will make your poultry pay better. The Leghorn eggs for setting, call on John S. Lewis Jr.

enough space to tell you how to have eggs in winter in this issue but if you will subscribe for a reliable poultry Journal which will cost you fifty cents a year you will know how. If you will call on the writer he will gladly tell you how. It is simple and don't cost much to winter eggs. If I ever an elected president of the United States I will take down the American eagle as an emblem and substitute the American hen and instead of the arrow and olive branches I will have her hold in her useful claw a statement of the annual egg money and a certificate of character from the house wives. Refuse the boastful, impractical eagle and substitute the feathered queen of the republic. JOHN KATZ.

EXPERIENCES IN THE JAPANESE RUSSIAN WAR

A Great Story of a Great War and a Vast Gallery of 200 War Pictures Free.

This interesting book is by Marshall Everett, the greatest descriptive writer the world has ever known. It is the story of Japan and her war spirit; the story of Russia and her advance; the story of China and her strange customs; the story of Korea and her hermit kingdom; the story of the cause of the war. It tells why England supports Japan; why France supports Russia.

It contains the most thrilling war stories ever told. Startling stories of the war by the heroes themselves. Thrilling personal experiences. Scintillating stories of bravery.

This work contains upwards of 500 pages, and is profusely and graphically illustrated with a vast gallery of battle scenes on sea and land, war incidents, war leaders, war maps, war cartoons and beautiful colored plates. It is the best illustrated war book ever made.

With the ghastly traces of a monstrous war still fresh upon the land and sea, and the shock of battle yet echoing throughout the world, from the theaters of strife where Jap and Russ meet to determine which shall advance and which retreat, this history of the long predicted struggle for the mastery in the east has been prepared. Viewed day by day, as the dual tragedy unfolded itself, its ever changing prime features have been indelibly traced in word picture by one familiar not only with the subject, but with the unusual and unexpected. The book is 7x9 inches and is superbly bound in red silk cloth and gilt-embossed side. It is a valuable, interesting and timely work, and you can obtain it practically free.

This book is given to each yearly subscriber to the Lincoln Daily Star, who sends $3 for one year's subscription and 25 cents additional to pay postage on the book.

It is the greatest premium ever offered with a daily newspaper. The book is more interesting than any fiction, and is timely as the great war is still in progress.

The Lincoln Daily Star is easily Nebraska's greatest evening daily. Six editions are printed daily, reaching all parts of the state on day of publication. It contains the full leased wire service of the Associated Press; state correspondence for all important points in Nebraska. Its market reports are the latest and are unrivalled for scope and accuracy. Its local and state capital news is always complete and reliable. There is no other daily newspaper in Nebraska that can compare with the service the Daily Star gives its subscribers and readers.

THE HOLDOBLERS

They Face a Series of Charges.

BOTH ARRESTED AND FINED

The Husband Found Guilty of Trespass and Bound Over to Keep the Peace.—Wife Fined for Assault.

The Holdoblers have been in trouble again. A warrant was sworn out a few days ago by Henry Stumpf charging Holdobler with trespass and the trial was set for Friday when defendant and wife put in an appearance in Judge Hunter's court. Sheriff Means had reason to be somewhat suspicious of the Holdoblers carrying concealed weapons and made a search of Holdobler and found nothing in the shape of firearms on his person and then the sheriff proceeded to investigate Mrs. Holdobler who created a scene in court by some remarks not exactly intended for polite ears, but no weapons were discovered. It seems the sheriff's suspicion of the woman having firearms on her person was founded on the fact that when he went out to arrest the husband the woman threw a cloak or shawl over her shoulders and followed the sheriff to where the husband was and back again to where the sheriff had left his team in charge of Robt. Hefti, and just when the gentlemen were about to leave, the woman turned her back when Mr. Hefti called the attention of the sheriff to a gun that was sticking out from under the woman's cloak and consequently when the husband and wife came in to court he didn't propose to take any chances on their being armed, because he had reason to believe they might make things pretty warm if everything didn't go about to suit them. Holdobler was found guilty of the charge against him and was fined $5 and costs and the sheriff was ordered to take him to jail until the fine was paid. When the sheriff attempted to execute the order of the court the Holdoblers, both husband and wife, became somewhat belligerent and after the husband was removed the wife in her rage jumped at Mrs. Stumpf and before the officers of the court could interfere succeeded in scratching the latter's face and otherwise seriously injuring her. County Attorney Siman got busy and pulled away the infuriated woman, and as once filed a complaint charging her with an assault and she was brought before the court and found guilty as charged and a fine of $10 and costs taxed against her. On payment of costs the fine was suspended during good behavior. After this matter was settled Holdobler was again placed under arrest on complaint of Stumpf asking that he be placed under bonds to keep the peace. The court took Holdobler's own recognizance to appear and answer on Monday at which time he appeared and after the evidence was presented the court placed him under bonds of $300 to keep the peace and refrain from carrying out his threat to wipe Mr. and Mrs. Stumpf off the earth and he was ordered to appear before the district court to answer the charges made against him. During the mixup of the sheriff, Holdobler and wife the former indicated a desire for aid in taking care of the husband and wife when Emil Hansen who was a spectator got very busy for a time and this called into the play W. H. Gildersleeve and from reports things were very lively around the court house for awhile and since then Jack Cherry has been hiding his eyes with a pair of dark glasses, in fact it seems that about everybody around the court house except Miss Rayburn and Charley Reynolds were in the mix-up during some stage of the game. The Holdoblers certainly can create about as much hell on earth as any pair of human beings that have been in Wayne for some time and we don't believe many tears would be shed if they should get it into their heads to take up a residence elsewhere.

STOP! WOMEN, AND CONSIDER THE

ALL-IMPORTANT
FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private life to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's ills covers a great many years. You can talk freely to a woman when it is revealing to her how to face troubles that a man's "business" does not understand simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have in their assistance, but a natural modesty impedes them from exposing themselves to the eyes and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money to prefer you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can talk of her private life to a woman, this has been established by the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from it is made no more possible than she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this standing offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham, Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month with my periods. The pains excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have ovarian and womb trouble, and I have tried all the operations I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do for my case. You relieve me. Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Sts., Denver, P.O., Washington, D.C. Second letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—After following carefully your advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you a testimonial that shows you are doing what you have done for me."

Spelling a Good Story.

Newspapers all over the country have freely reprinted a story published originally in Philadelphia and relating how Admiral Dewey, while at Manila, bought up a lot of seals without consulting the Bureau of Equipment at Washington; consequently these calligrams are said to have passed between the admiral in command at Manila and the admiral at the head of the Equipment Bureau:

Navy Department, Washington, D. C. to Dewey, Manila.
Why did you buy so much seal?
H. BRADFORD.

Manila, Philippines, Manila.
To Bradford, Chief Bureau Equipment, Washington.
To burn.
D. HEWLEY.

And now Admiral Dewey comes along with a statement ruthlessly denying this little tale, which really ought to be established in the annals of literature of the century, side by side with those of other great men less certain and quite as mythical. Will the details of the admiral's disclaimer, and with the corroboration of his chief officers, we believe to say, only be willingly by Admiral Bradford, we have nothing to do. The story was recognized from the first as being too good to be true, and being so recognized what was the use of producing documentary evidence in rebuttal? In spite of the two admirals we venture to say that the real yarn will live as long as the story of the May day fight in the harbor of Manila. Brooklyn Eagle.

THE SUPREME TEST.

There are friends who come in when black arrows your grudge,
To weep with you over your dead;
Friends who see in the midst of your heartache's unrest,
To know just what ought to be said.
But the Prince of them all, when grim Trouble stalks by,
And your heart can do nothing but bleed,
Is the fellow who comes when there's no one else left
And whispers: "How much do you need?"
Father, tenderly bless all the friends I have known
Who came in the depths of my woe.
Just to stand by my side when I felt so alone,
That I might their sympathy know;
Oh, I love you one for each handclasp and tear,
And aye shall I wish them goodspeed;
But a crown for the one who, when none else was near,
Said softly: "How much do you need?"

THE CRY ON THE TRAIL.

IN the light, bare sitting-room of a lonely ranch-house, with brown, unpainted walls, and doors and windows open to the pine-clad mountain side, a man sat at a small desk table reading over a pile of cherished letters. They were written by a woman dated from a house on Heaven street, Boston, and they dealt with books, with music and with art. The reader, who was hand-pressed in the battle of life, seemed to let him into a great treasure-house, while he looked for the more restricted walls of a home; the simpler beatitudes of a fre-side. All they were so intellectual, these letters, and try as he would, he could read nothing between their lines! As he turned over the pages, a large child of three years old, with a large rent in her pinafore, ran in from time to time from the open air. At sight of her, the cry in the heart of the man for the woman was stronger than ever. Both of them needed the man and child, they needed her so much.

At length he took his pen and began to write to her. All his letters addressed him as "Dear Mr. Geraldson," but letters to his date he had never variably superintended to "Dear Miss Vining." But how he broke through the veils of reserve. He wrote to her as the dearest woman on earth, calling her his love. He threw aside all the topics with which he had dallied so long, and wrote simply of himself—of his own hopes and fears. He told her how for years he had been wanting to ask her to come out to him; how his poverty had forbidden his doing so; and how, in spite of all his efforts, he had remained poor and struggling, without anything to give her. He told her that he had believed that at last his name had come. He had gone up into the Trinity mountains to take up an offer of partnership in a promising "prospect," he had received from a friend. But on the long stage journey from Redding through the heat and dust, he had fallen in with an unfortunate Englishman, very sick with typhoid, who had implored him to stand by him and see him on his legs again. Circumstances had been such that it had been impossible in common humanity not to stay with the man and his little child of a motherless girl. So he had nursed and tended him, and had experienced the satisfaction of pulling him through the worst danger. But the poor fellow, who was terribly impatient, had attempted to get out of bed in spite of every warning, and had died suddenly one day from the passage of a clot of blood to the heart, when his nurse and little daughter had left him for a breath of fresh air.

"And so," went on the letter, "I found myself with the child on my hands. I haven't the heart to do anything but keep her. For though apparently she has no relatives or friends, she is a splendid little piece of stuff, and I don't like to send her to any institution. And the sequel of this, my dear friend, and the venture which was to bring the fortune, to give me the right to ask you for yourself, has come to naught. By the time I had fixed everything up, my friend, unable to wait for me, had taken in another partner on the deal. I went prospecting near Weaverville, but luck was against me. Then both the little girl and myself fell sick with malaria, and so I came home to my pine trees again."

Here Geraldson's pen fell from his hand, for the fever had risen in its grip, and he was shaking miserably. Later on he managed to put the letter into an envelope, addressed to his wife's name, but he never sent it, and he thought he should never send it, and he left it on his table, thinking that when he had strength again he would go on writing, just for the sake of the consolation it was merely to pretend that he could tell her everything. But the letter was never finished. He grew rapidly weaker, till one morning he found himself so sick that he could scarcely drag himself to the couch on the veranda to scan the landscape for the help that he was waiting for. For long a Pine Ranch was isolated as only mountain ranches can be, and no one might set foot on it for weeks together. Now as he lay helpless, unable to move, lost sometimes in suffocating blackness, the child brought him water in the tiny cup—drops that tantalized rather than quenched his thirst—and he wondered what would become of her, and in his last coherent moments told her to run out along the trail and get help, and he would be there. That was the last thing he could do. Soon after he ceased to move, and did not hear the desolate wail that resounded through the empty house.

But Geraldson was not to lose himself forever in the dark water of unconsciousness. Once more he felt himself alive, and on the verge of sleep, lay with lidded eyelids, unwilling to awake, till a memory of little Margery, whom he had last seen weeping in a corner of the room, forced him to open his eyes. To his surprise his eyes were covered him very neatly. The sheet was folded under his chin in a strange, comforting, new way, so that a sense of security was felt on him, and he lay easy and looked at the little girl from a short way off. "I suppose there is a likelihood," she said to herself, "but I can't see it." It was strange, she thought that she should never have heard of Geraldson's marriage. How blind she had been not to suspect some affair of the heart, which would account for his sudden departure for the West. Of course, he had loved another woman. She wondered if the child were very like her. At that moment Margery came running up, and, forcing down the primal instinct that had prompted her to turn away, she held out her arms, drew the "other woman's" child to her breast, and kissed her.

"The little creature looked up at her with her fearless eyes. 'You're the lady, aren't you?' she said.
'The lady—what lady?'
'The lady that talks about that's coming to live my mother.'
Outwardly, quiet, she kissed her again, but it was as though a door, not quite closed, had violently shut, never to open again. She went back into the house, into Geraldson's room; but when she saw him look toward her, pathetic in his helplessness, her heart beat so quickly she could not bring herself to say good-by at once, and sat down in the shadow, angry at her own weakness.
'Nurse,' said Geraldson, 'won't you draw up the blind?' Mayn't I see your face?'
'The light would hurt your eyes,' she murmured. 'I put on my bonnet because I was going away.'
'Going away?' Dismay was in his voice.
'Yes, I am obliged to go. There's another nurse here to look after you.'
'But I don't want another nurse,' he cried. 'And you've done so much for me. I can't even thank you. I don't know what your name is. I've never seen you before.'
She said nothing, but slowly measured something into a glass. He could not see that she was trembling.
'May I have a drink?' he asked, as she put down the tumbler.
She had intended to go now immediately. She felt she had lingered too long, but she could not refuse his request. She held the cup to his lips, and he drank slowly, looking at her hands, which would flutter away so soon, like white birds of passage. He was very weak, and the tears came into his eyes. 'The hands were so beautiful—so like her hands.'
She took the cup and rinsed it carefully and slowly. At the same moment little feet pattered along the passage and baby hands bent upon the door. She opened it and carried little Margery to the bedside, telling her to be very quiet. But Geraldson had turned his face to the wall, and took no notice. Having looked at him gravely, the child seated herself upon the floor, and began to examine a heap of treasures in her hand. Suddenly she held out a chubby hand with an eagerness.
'A letter!' she said, emphatically, to the strange lady. 'A letter!'
'Is it for me, dear?'
'Yes, for you!' She ran across the room and held it out, triumphantly. 'The eyes under the sunbonnet glanced at it with indifference. Then at the name on it—a name with no address—the beautiful hands clutched it eagerly. A moment after a touch on Geraldson's shoulder forced him to turn.
'Here is a letter,' said the quiet voice, 'to a Miss Vining. The address is not finished. Do you wish it mailed?'
At the thought of her so far away, so inaccessible, Geraldson's eyes filled again.
'No, no,' he muttered, turning to the wall again. 'It isn't to be posted. I haven't any right!' The next minute he begged her, half-querulously, to give it to him, that he might put it under his pillow. But the room was empty. She had gone.
Outside, on the veranda, she paced up and down with the unspoken anguish in her hand. He had wanted it back. She had known that even as she had closed the door, but it didn't belong to him. With her name upon it, it certainly belonged to her. But ought she to read it? Ought she? Well, she didn't care—she must! It was hers, after all. Tearing it open, she saw the tender inscription, and all her scruples vanished like the wind. Then she read it to the end and kissed it many times, and looking up and down, longed, yet hesitated, to go back into the darkened chamber.
Geraldson lay awake without any desire to take up the thread of life again. All his difficulties pressed upon him, and he felt listless and dispirited in his gloomy room. But a soft sound, the drawing of the blind, the flooding of the room with sunshine, caused him to turn with a faint revival of interest. The light was the light of sunset, just bright enough to make everything clear, and some one with shining hair was standing near the window. Surely he knew that noise of the head. Only one woman carried her head thus like that. And yet he must be dreaming.

"Who are you?" he cried, eagerly.
A clear voice rang through the stillness. "I've brought an answer to your letter."
'My letter to her? But it wasn't addressed. It wasn't.'
'There wasn't any need to send it. You see, Elsie Vining isn't in Boston just now.'
'Not in Boston? Then where is she? Where is she?'
She came forward him. He saw her in the level sunlight as men see visions.
'Don't you understand, Gerald? Don't you understand?'
It was her voice. He raised himself on the pillows.
'Elsie! Elsie!' he cried.
She dropped on her knees beside him. She gave him her hands and her face.—San Francisco Argonaut.

and looked at the little girl from a short way off. "I suppose there is a likelihood," she said to herself, "but I can't see it." It was strange, she thought that she should never have heard of Geraldson's marriage. How blind she had been not to suspect some affair of the heart, which would account for his sudden departure for the West. Of course, he had loved another woman. She wondered if the child were very like her. At that moment Margery came running up, and, forcing down the primal instinct that had prompted her to turn away, she held out her arms, drew the "other woman's" child to her breast, and kissed her.

"The little creature looked up at her with her fearless eyes. 'You're the lady, aren't you?' she said.
'The lady—what lady?'
'The lady that talks about that's coming to live my mother.'
Outwardly, quiet, she kissed her again, but it was as though a door, not quite closed, had violently shut, never to open again. She went back into the house, into Geraldson's room; but when she saw him look toward her, pathetic in his helplessness, her heart beat so quickly she could not bring herself to say good-by at once, and sat down in the shadow, angry at her own weakness.
'Nurse,' said Geraldson, 'won't you draw up the blind?' Mayn't I see your face?'
'The light would hurt your eyes,' she murmured. 'I put on my bonnet because I was going away.'
'Going away?' Dismay was in his voice.
'Yes, I am obliged to go. There's another nurse here to look after you.'
'But I don't want another nurse,' he cried. 'And you've done so much for me. I can't even thank you. I don't know what your name is. I've never seen you before.'
She said nothing, but slowly measured something into a glass. He could not see that she was trembling.
'May I have a drink?' he asked, as she put down the tumbler.
She had intended to go now immediately. She felt she had lingered too long, but she could not refuse his request. She held the cup to his lips, and he drank slowly, looking at her hands, which would flutter away so soon, like white birds of passage. He was very weak, and the tears came into his eyes. 'The hands were so beautiful—so like her hands.'
She took the cup and rinsed it carefully and slowly. At the same moment little feet pattered along the passage and baby hands bent upon the door. She opened it and carried little Margery to the bedside, telling her to be very quiet. But Geraldson had turned his face to the wall, and took no notice. Having looked at him gravely, the child seated herself upon the floor, and began to examine a heap of treasures in her hand. Suddenly she held out a chubby hand with an eagerness.
'A letter!' she said, emphatically, to the strange lady. 'A letter!'
'Is it for me, dear?'
'Yes, for you!' She ran across the room and held it out, triumphantly. 'The eyes under the sunbonnet glanced at it with indifference. Then at the name on it—a name with no address—the beautiful hands clutched it eagerly. A moment after a touch on Geraldson's shoulder forced him to turn.
'Here is a letter,' said the quiet voice, 'to a Miss Vining. The address is not finished. Do you wish it mailed?'
At the thought of her so far away, so inaccessible, Geraldson's eyes filled again.
'No, no,' he muttered, turning to the wall again. 'It isn't to be posted. I haven't any right!' The next minute he begged her, half-querulously, to give it to him, that he might put it under his pillow. But the room was empty. She had gone.
Outside, on the veranda, she paced up and down with the unspoken anguish in her hand. He had wanted it back. She had known that even as she had closed the door, but it didn't belong to him. With her name upon it, it certainly belonged to her. But ought she to read it? Ought she? Well, she didn't care—she must! It was hers, after all. Tearing it open, she saw the tender inscription, and all her scruples vanished like the wind. Then she read it to the end and kissed it many times, and looking up and down, longed, yet hesitated, to go back into the darkened chamber.
Geraldson lay awake without any desire to take up the thread of life again. All his difficulties pressed upon him, and he felt listless and dispirited in his gloomy room. But a soft sound, the drawing of the blind, the flooding of the room with sunshine, caused him to turn with a faint revival of interest. The light was the light of sunset, just bright enough to make everything clear, and some one with shining hair was standing near the window. Surely he knew that noise of the head. Only one woman carried her head thus like that. And yet he must be dreaming.

"Who are you?" he cried, eagerly.
A clear voice rang through the stillness. "I've brought an answer to your letter."
'My letter to her? But it wasn't addressed. It wasn't.'
'There wasn't any need to send it. You see, Elsie Vining isn't in Boston just now.'
'Not in Boston? Then where is she? Where is she?'
She came forward him. He saw her in the level sunlight as men see visions.
'Don't you understand, Gerald? Don't you understand?'
It was her voice. He raised himself on the pillows.
'Elsie! Elsie!' he cried.
She dropped on her knees beside him. She gave him her hands and her face.—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Not Surprising.
'Miss Fluff has a very soft voice, hasn't she?'
'Naturally; it comes from a very soft head.'—Detroit Free Press.

BETTER BE DEAD THAN LIVE WITHOUT HOPE

Expectation is the motive power of life. The thing we hope for is the mansprings of energy. If you have no hope, you had better have some kind friend bury you. The season of hope is now here. Easter brings a promise of immortal life and God has made the earth green and sends us sunshine to warm up the soil ready for cultivation. Any one that will make the necessary effort can hope to reap an abundant harvest. There is no hope in sowing seeds in the public road. You must plant your seed where the conditions are made favorable to receive them if you hope to receive a reward for your labor. It is the same in planting your dollars. You can't hope to receive a full return if you plant your dollars where the merchant has not made the necessary effort to give you a good investment. No other merchant in Wayne county has made the same effort to please his customers this year that we have. If you invest your money here you can hope to receive better returns than you would receive of any other merchant in Wayne. We have the largest stock of clothing and we have prepared prices that will please you. You have everything to hope for if you trade at this store. Easter is now nearly here and it is customary to dress up. Everything is putting on a new suit, and if you will commence the season with a new outfit from this store, you will feel like a new man and you can hope to have good health and meet all the trials of life successfully. Don't start out with an outfit out of date; old-style clothing makes a man feel discouraged when he meets his friends that have traded at this store. It costs no more to buy our clothing up to date than you will have to pay for old-fashioned, shop-worn, back-number suits. Let us have the pleasure of showing our spring stock even if you should decide to buy elsewhere. We hope to see you in this store before Easter. If you have reason to feel discouraged with other stores, try us. It is inspiring to do business here. Try it and you will be happy.

The announcement is made that Commissioner Garfield and assistants are in the Kansas oil fields ready to begin the investigations of the Standard Oil Company's methods of doing business in that lively commonwealth. It is to be hoped the commissioner will not conclude after he has sifted the complaints to a finality that the Standard is the greatest benefactor in the world, because up-to-date the best trust companies that unique distinction and most of us can only worship one god at a time.

According to the Breeder's Gazette horses have become so high priced that many New England farmers are buying good big steers and breaking them for oxen because they cannot afford the luxury of horses. Formerly the west looked to the east for the money necessary to the development and improvement of their farms and in many instances this money was largely procured from savings banks whose depositors were these same New England farmers who today are too poor to buy horses for their farming operations. The wheel of fortune brings some queer developments in its turnings. Today the western farmer has become the big depositor in the banks and his money is being sent to the east and loaned to the very people who in earlier days were his creditors and the western farmer has gone from the use of oxen to the horse and the traction engine while his less fortunate eastern brother is obliged to go back to the slow going ox.

Although trusts may dictate the prices of the meat products and fix the margins on which grains are to be handled and railroads charge freight rates in excess of what is just and right, in order to pay dividends on over capitalization, yet the farmers' son of prosperity refuses to be obscured, but shines brighter today than ever before. His fields have yielded splendid crops that meet with a ready sale in the markets of the world at prices that are profitable. Any surplus horses he has to sell are quickly bought at prices that a few years ago he would never dreamed of obtaining. Cattle and hogs are being marketed at good paying figures, butter and eggs, two items of great volume, are returning a revenue never thought of by the earlier generations and every bushel of grain he has to sell finds a profitable outlet. He is buying more acres, building elegant homes and great barns and his family is surrounded with social blessings and comforts, while improved machinery is reducing the hard knocks to a minimum. He is not asking the sympathy of anyone, but is able to stand up like a man and demand that his rights shall be respected.

The Lincoln Star takes issue with the HERALD as to the deceased legislature, censuring the press of the state and makes the assertion that such was not the case. The Star evidently is not well informed as to the subject matter of several of the speeches made by members of the legislature just prior to adjournment or of the roast Senator Mocket and fling of others of the august senate, or else it believes it can beguile the eyes of others when it makes a denial of the charge. It is doubtless true that in some instances the press of the state was unjust in its criticisms, but as a whole the criticisms were just and much deserved. The legislature was almost solidly republican and the party and press had a right to expect legislation that would show a desire to meet the wishes of the masses of the party and that would reflect credit instead of casting a stigma on the party and that it was a disappointment to the party and the masses there can be no denial. The press at no time asked anything of the legislature that would have been unjust to any interest. It simply insisted on that body being just to all and showing favors to none, and it was because of its failure to respond to this demand that criticisms of it were so universal.

Candidates for governor of Nebraska to succeed J. H. Miley are beginning to put up their lightning rods. Several members of the late legislature are applicants for the place and have begun to get their fences shaped up for corraling the nomination. It is pretty early but doubtless they are believers in the old saw of the early bird getting the worm. It is likely that the records of the applicants will be pretty closely scanned and some sore disappointments are in store for the fellows whose votes were cast on the wrong side on many of the questions before the legislature. One thing seems pretty certain at this time and that is the masses of the republican party are going to insist on the next governor of the state being one who will be entirely free from some of the obnoxious influences that for several years have held too prominent a place as counsellors. It is possible that the people will be fooled again as they have been many times in the past, but most certainly an effort will be made to avoid it and never before was public opinion so fully aroused as it is now and we do not look as though this influence was to be so easily cooled as in the past.

ence between Russia and Japan but the belligerents show no indications of coming to an understanding. It looks as though old Russia was going to stay in the fight until her armies are driven out of Manchuria over into Siberia and even then her pride may urge her to show her teeth and stand galling on the border until the armies of Japan may be compelled to go over the line and whip her on Russian territory. When the war broke out between the two powers many well informed persons believed that while Japan might succeed for a time, eventually the great armies of the Czar would crush out the armies of the Mikado and that probably Japan herself would fall under Russian control. The Japanese have dispelled all such ideas as success after success has crowned the little yellow fellows until today Russia stands before the world stripped of her great prestige with her greatness departed and her armies in constant retreat. With defeat in all battles at the front and revolution threatening at home, Russia is indeed in bad straits, while Japan has by the successes she has won against one of the world's acknowledged great powers risen to a prominence in the world's problems that makes her a factor that must in the future be taken into consideration at all times.

The opposition papers are asking these Republicans who have criticized the actions of the legislature this winter, whether they will continue to support the Republican ticket. They assume that because those selected by the party have failed to rightly represent the rank and file of the party, then the party itself is all wrong. Not so. This paper is just as firmly wedded to the principles of the Republican party as it ever was. No one or two men can drive us away from the party, even though they may have been chosen as the representatives of the party. The actions of men are temporary, but principles are eternal. If the party makes mistakes in selecting leaders, it is in no way effects the principles of the party. Most of the best and most stalwart Republican papers of the state have criticized the actions of the legislature, but they will be none the less zealous in working for the Republican party in the future than they have in the past. He serves his party best who strives to make it acceptable to the largest number of good citizens. What inducements have the opposition to hold out to the good citizen to change his party connections? They were in supreme control of the state a few years ago. Were they any less subservient to the railroad influences than the Republicans have been? Did they exhibit any more inclination to curb the power of the corporations than the Republicans? The troubles lie not in either of the parties, the rank and file of which are equally desirous of good and honest government, but in the method of administration. Under the convention method the machine politicians are in control of all the parties. These machine politicians are all in politics for personal and selfish ends. So long as they are allowed to control the parties, so long will public interests be subservient to personal and selfish interests. The remedy is to place the control of the parties directly in the hands of the electors. If nominations were made directly by the people at the primaries, there would be no chance for the bosses to control nominations. Many good men are nominated by the present method, but they are placed under obligations in order to secure their nominations which many times control their official acts, or at least influence them. If every nominee felt that he was under no obligation to anyone but the people direct, we would have more consideration given to the people as a whole than to corporations and individual interests. The direct primary is the only salvation for the people.—Albion News.

NARROW ESCAPE

Henry Clausen in a Lively Runaway.

HAS DANGEROUS EXPERIENCE
Escape Seems Almost Miraculous.—Team Captured Two Miles From Town.—Horses and Wagon Unhurt.

Henry Clausen was the victim of a lively runaway shortly after noon Tuesday and had a narrow escape from serious results. While a spool of wire was being loaded into his wagon in front of Phillips & Son's lumber office, he stood at the head of his team to keep them quiet. The moment the spool struck the bed of the wagon, the horses jumped and tore down the street at terrific speed, Mr. Clausen clinging to the animals' bits for a considerable distance and then, unable to maintain his hold longer, dropped by the roadside and fortunately landed out of the path of the dangerous hoofs and wagon. Mr. White, the drayman, followed as quickly as possible and took Mr. Clausen into his wagon to purge the fleeing team. Two miles out they were captured and both horses and wagon were found unhurt. The escape of Mr. Clausen from death or at least serious injury seems almost miraculous. It was one of the most threatening runaways with the least damage on record.

AHERN VS. ROSENBERG.

Friday Judge Hunter heard the case of Ahern vs. Rosenberg, being a case in which Ahern was trying to compel Rosenberg to give possession of the residence now occupied by the latter. It seems that when M. P. Ahern sold his dry goods business on Main street he also rented his dwelling to Rosenberg for a year and, as he supposed, had a clause inserted in the lease whereby the latter was to vacate when given thirty days' notice of the sale of the house. A few months ago Ahern sold the residence property to Ed. Renneck and gave notice to Rosenberg to vacate March 10, but the latter being unable to procure a house refused to vacate, hence the suit. At the trial the lease was offered as evidence and, the supposed clause for vacating was found to be so improperly drawn as to give no foundation for the court to render a verdict for plaintiff and defendant, went out with ease and will retain possession for a while longer.

DENNIS KELLIHER IMPROVING.

Dennis Kelliher who has been suffering with an enlargement on his face and who had an operation performed at Sioux City some time ago for the removal of the enlargement was over to the city Friday to see the surgeon who performed the operation and was assured that he was improving nicely. Dr. Leisinger who has been attending Mr. Kelliher of late assures us that the Sioux City surgeon told the truth and says there is nothing at present in sight to justify the stories afloat about Mr. Kelliher gradually growing worse and that these stories are entirely without foundation, all of which will be good news to the friends of the sufferer.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions adopted by the order of G. D. H. S. at a regular meeting held on the evening of April 5, 1905:
Whereas, it has pleased Him who rules over all, to take from our midst our beloved brother, Henry Dueders; Therefore be it resolved, by this lodge that in the death of our beloved brother we have lost a faithful and honored member, that in our humble and weak way we extend to his bereaved relatives our heartfelt sympathy.
Be it further resolved, that these resolutions be spread upon the records of the lodge, that copies thereof be published in the Nebraska Heraldman, the WAYNE HERALD and Nebraska Democrat.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Hymenei Cures this Common and Disagreeable Disease.
Hymenei cures catarrh by the simple method of breathing it into the ear passages and lungs. It kills the germs of the catarrhal poison, heals and soothes the irritated mucous membrane, enters the blood with the oxygen and kills the germs present there, effectually driving this disease from the system.

If you have any of the following symptoms, catarrhal germs are at work somewhere in the mucous membrane of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes or tissues of the lungs. Offensive breath, dryness of the nose, pain across the eyes, pain in back of the head, pain front of the head, tendency to take cold, burning pain in the throat, hawking to clear the throat, pain the chest, a cough, spitting in side, losing of flesh, variable appetite, low spirited at times, raising of frothy mucus expectorating yellow matter, difficulty in breathing, frequent sneezing, hoarseness of voice, discharge from the nose, stoppage of the nose at night, aching of the body, droppings in the throat, mouth open while sleeping, sickling back of the palate, formation of crusts in the nose, dryness of the throat in the morning, loss of strength, spasms of coughing, coughs short and hacking, rough wretched nights and mornings, loss in vital force, a feeling of tightness across the upper part of the chest.

Hymenei will cure the disease, destroy activity of all germ life in the respiratory organs, enrich and purify the blood with additional ozone, and after a few days use of this treatment the majority of these symptoms will have disappeared. In a few weeks the cure will be complete.

Catarrh or catarrhal colds cannot exist when Hymenei is used. This is a strong statement, but E. J. Raymond emphasizes it by agreeing to refund your money if Hymenei does not cure.

FOR THE NEXT TEN DAYS

Those of you who had the pleasure of being at our auction know what it means when we tell you we are going to sell any one line of goods. It means that we do as we say, sell them regardless of cost or consequences. Our auction was a success in every sense of the word, but we still find ourselves in possession of a large line of clothing that we are still quoting killing prices on. In addition to the clothing we are going to clean out our stock of hats and shirts. What does that mean? It means that you can buy hats or shirts for less money at our store than elsewhere and the quality is unsurpassed. A word about overalls: We have a large line of "Sweet Orr" overalls, good liberal sizes, that will be sold below cost and when we say "below cost" you know what it means. Bargains are what you want. And don't overlook our flour. It gives satisfaction, every sack guaranteed of money refunded and the price is so low it is out of sight. A visit to our store before you sell your produce will convince you that our prices are equal to others and when you ask the prices on other things you will readily see they more than equal others. Don't forget the place. Especially on the 17th and 18th we will have free coffee and warm biscuits on tap, with a lady to serve them in a manner that will be pleasing to all. The biscuits will demonstrate to you the superior quality of Rabbit's-Foot baking powder for sale at this store. Goods delivered free. Phone 27.

COLLEGE NOTES.

In consequence of the address to be given by Miss Padock next Friday night, the literary program will be rendered on Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

President Pile is receiving many calls these days for teachers for next year. There will be no lack of opportunity in the teachers' profession next year for the competent.

Seven new students enrolled this week among whom are Miss Foster, of Antelope county, who was with us last summer, and Miss Stormont, an experienced teacher from Brown county.

Mrs. Pile is still confined to her rooms with muscular rheumatism, though slowly improving. Dr. Blair is the attendant physician. Miss Stark of Sioux City is the nurse in charge.

Wayne's talented city attorney, Hon. A. R. Davis, will address a joint meeting of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to the general public.

The college library has received this week some excellent teachers' professional books, the gift of Mrs. Fred French, once a student of the N. N. C. Such remembrances are greatly appreciated.

We used to be told that it is a sign of a poor farmer when a man habitually throws his land out—turns "haw" in this region of right-handed plows. If this be a true sign we fear there are some poor plowmen in and about Wayne.

The military boys were made glad this week by the arrival of an outfit of Springfield rifles. Quite a few of the boys have received uniforms and the military department, under the direction of Captain Brown, is assuming commanding dignity and proportions.

Athletics is coming in for its due attention this fine weather. A tennis club has been organized with Prof. Wolf as president, a basket ball team is practicing faithfully, and baseball has many devotees. In a contest game of baseball last Saturday, the Phios beat the Crescents in a spirited and "well-rooted" game.

On next Friday evening in college chapel there will be given an address by Miss Padock, traveling secretary for the Students' Volunteer movement. This address will interest the general public which is not only invited, but urged to come. Following the address there will be a reception in honor of the guest of the evening, Miss Padock, who will be at the college Friday and Saturday.

ADVANCE IN FAT CATTLE.

The Sioux City Tribune thinks fat cattle have advanced two dollars per hundred pounds from the low point of last fall or winter, but our stock men are of the opinion that it is about fifty cents too high on its figures. The stock men do figure however that the advance is fully one dollar per hundred pounds above the price of the same kind of stuff a month ago. The men who have fed and are now ready to market certainly have things about as nut and will clear them up a nice profit.

Pretty nearly a dollar per hundred pounds advance has been made in the price of fat cattle within the last month. If present prices are maintained for the next two months most of our cattle feeders will be enabled to get their stuff on the market and instead of figuring a loss, as has too often been the case during the past two years, they will have something to enter up on the credit side of the cattle feeding account.

The Congregationalists have finally accepted Rockefeller's gift of $100,000 and the troubled waters are again peaceful. We knew they would accept; in fact we never knew a church organization to refuse money and seldom ever heard of one inquiring how the donor obtained it. If every tainted dollar were to be excluded from the collection plates very few churches or other charitable institutions would be long in business.

An ordinance of the city is now in effect whereby the sidewalks in the greater portion of the city when condemned and ordered rebuilt will have to be of cement, stone or brick. This will eventually do away with the miserable, unsightly, unsafe old board walks and not only increase the value of the properties along which they are built, but will add greatly to the beautifying of the city and reduce danger to life and limb to the minimum.

It is on again, its occurrence is semi-annual and once in a while it happens often. More than half the houses in town look as though the occupants were either moving out or had gone daffy. The curtains are down from the windows, the carpets are off the floors, the beds and bedding strewn on the lawn and the lot of the man of the house is well nigh unbearable. Lawns are being literally torn up by the roots and the smell of old grass, manure, rubber shoes, dead cats and many other noisome things fill the air from the various open air crematories and the sense of smell is made an abomination.

It seems that the members of the Norfolk company of Nebraska national guards are up against a pretty serious condition. Interest waned in military affairs by the members of the company and instead of taking the proper care of the equipments entrusted to the company by Uncle Sam, carelessness reigned supreme and much of the property became scattered and now that the day of reckoning has come cannot be accounted for and the result is the officers and members of the company are facing a pretty serious dilemma and will be called into the federal court to account for the stewardship of the property entrusted to them. It is said the company at West Point is in the same serious predicament.

Dispatches from President Lincoln at City Point announced that the Union army, after three days' fighting, succeeded in breaking the Confederate center at Petersburg and flanking Lee on the left.

The course and symptoms vary remarkably in different types. In the malignant form the disease is fatal in a few hours. Remittent and intermittent forms are recognized, in which the fever is lower, or entirely absent for two or three days, and there is a form that much resembles typhoid fever.

Local and General

Eph Anderson of Logan, was in town Saturday.

R. Giddle returned from his Sioux City visit Friday evening.

George Fross, of Wakefield, was in town Saturday paying taxes on his Leslie product farm.

Jacob Fross, of Illinois, was in this county last week visiting and looking after interests here.

The Fender schools were closed last week because of the prevalence of scarlet fever and diphtheria.

N. D. Jackson, of Neligh, has been appointed as one of the six supreme court commissioners of the state.

The Democrat has treated its Main street office building to a coat of paint that improves its appearance materially.

The Bloomfield Journal is now owned exclusively by Wm. Hooley, M. C. O'Hara having disposed of his interest in that paper.

Chas. Bertrand, of Wayne, has entered the employ of A. E. Aegerter as bookkeeper and is getting up a special set of labor saving books.—Randolph Times.

Wm. Benshoof is building a splendid new residence on his farm southwest of town and Charley Pfeil, southwest of town, is another farmer that will have, before the snows of another winter come, as comfortable a new house as any in the county.

Builders and lumbermen inform us that the present season promises to be one of the greatest in building operations ever experienced in this section of country. Last year's big crop and the excellent prices now prevailing for the products of the farm is having a splendid effect.

Miss Lulu Cronk, who is attending the Wayne college, came home last Thursday for a few days' visit with her parents and friends, returning Wednesday morning. The young lady is very enthusiastic over her college work and has many kind words for Professor Pile and that institution.—Norfolk Times Tribune.

Farmers tell us that it has been many years since the ground was in as good condition for the planting of crops as it is this spring and as the proper planting of a crop has much to do towards a bountiful harvest, we can under ordinary conditions look forward with confidence to the harvest time in the expectation of reaping bountifully.

Dr. Cosner has added to his dental rooms an improvement in the way of a revolving cuspidor attached to his operating chair. A spray of water insures constant cleanliness. The doctor is quick to take advantage of every improvement that will increase the comfort and satisfaction of his patients. And it may be said with truth that his dental skill and efforts to please are being rewarded by steadily growing patronage.

The Methodist congregation have the arrangements about all completed for the building of a new parsonage on their lots south of the church where the old parsonage now is. The committee having in charge the raising of funds are succeeding admirably and before the snow flies in the fall it is expected that a new modern, up-to-date home for the pastor will be completed. It will have all the modern conveniences and be a building costing when complete about $5,500.00.

"Give the boys a chance" is an expression that has become very common. It is all right and proper, too, but if the boy is made of the right sort of stuff, he will not ask to be given a chance which means the bestowing of special favors and opportunities superior to those presented to older men. He simply will go to work and create a chance for himself. In other words, he will so conduct himself that his services will be in demand and for such there are always openings. The chance is at hand for any young man who shows that he possesses the ability and requirements of character to do things successfully.—Stanton Pickett.

The Columbus Telegram doesn't say that it's true. But that doesn't spoil a good story. A man had a pimple on his nose. He scratched the pimple. The pimple began bleeding. The man went to the bath room, got a bottle of witch hazel and bathed the pimple. Next morning when he went down to breakfast he had a nose as large as a goose egg. His good wife was horrified at his appearance. She asked him what had happened. He told her the circumstances. She asked him to show her the bottle from which he took the witch hazel. He produced the bottle. His wife fell in a dead faint. The bottle contained a patent medicine which the good woman had been using as a bust developer.

Wayne will have a race meeting in September that promises to be one of the best in the northwest. Arrangements are being made for building of berms, grand stand and all necessary equipments on the fair grounds and everything put in first class shape for accommodation of man and beast. The funds have been subscribed and men placed in charge who will see that the enterprise is carried to a success. It is expected that the business men and others of the city will lend proper encouragement and the necessary aid to make a big success of the meet. Let everybody wake up and demonstrate that ours is one of the live, wide awake towns that does things right when it undertakes anything.

Said an extensive Iowa feeder of steers recently: Fed cattle we paying out now, but when I make that assertion I refer to the stuff that went into the feed yards last fall. This cattle brought on the present market will not show the feeder's profit. In fact, the fat stock market advanced considerably between now and the time they are marketed. In other words, feeders have made an unreasonable and illogical advance, and there does not exist at this time a reasonable margin between thin and fat stuff. Those who are paying present prices are doing so on the assumption that the fat cattle market is going higher; probably it will. I believe the market will strengthen gradually, but there does not seem to be any reason for a sharp advance. The gratifying feature of the market at present is that those who bought thin cattle last fall on a reasonable basis and carried them through the midwinter period of liquidation are now able to cash in at a satisfactory margin of profit, and the same cannot be said of feeding operations for several years past. This feeder considers the number of cattle on hand for summer feeding less than the usual amount and that hogs will be plenty. Iowa is thoroughly worked up over the subject of live stock rates; shippers are determined to agitate until relief is secured. Packers have such an advantage over us that the thing is too raw to be tolerated.—Farmer and Breeder.
