LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

Preparations are being made for a dance at Altona New Year's night.

The Bloomfield Journal is preparing a history of the resources and development of Knox county.

Robt. Jones, Sam Horlburt and Mr. Hughes and wife of Carroll, were in the city Tuesday afternoon.

Prof. Durbin has taken orders for more than $1,300.00 worth of granite monuments within the last week.

The consideration in the sale of the Wayne telephone exchange by D. E. Miller to R. and E. B. Philleo was $8,000.

J. H. Nieman and wife of Petersburg, Nebraska, have been visiting in our city at the home of their father, Dr. Nieman.

The stores report a largely increased holiday trade this year over what it was a year ago. Their highest expectations were more than realized.

Prof. Durbin was a Wakefield visitor Thursday and while there he sold a large, three-ton Barre granite family monument to Levi Kimball of that place.

The past four weeks have been ideal for cattle feeders. The weather has been all that could be desired, the yards dry and the stock have gained very rapidly in flesh.

It is hardly necessary to say that the fact that diamonds have jumped high in value lately does not interest this department as much as the increased price of edible commodities.

The engine pulling the west-bound passenger train became stalled in Wayne Sunday evening on account of blowing out a fuse, and an extra was required to convey the train to Norfolk.

If the old adage about a green Christmas being prophetic of a fat graveyard proves true, there will be plenty of business for the undertaker next year. However, we don't believe it.

John S. Lewis Jr. has commenced suit in Judge Hunter's court against Mrs. H. N. Phillips to recover rent of $60.00 for the building which she occupied as a restaurant and which she vacated last week.

Wayne has a man who is indeed lodge poor—belonging to so many secret societies that there are not nights enough for him to attend, and some of them only meet once a month at that. Wonder when he meets his family?—Laural Advocate.

The Magnet Mail says W. H. Gibson, the former publisher of that paper, is working at the carpenter trade, as office work does not agree with him; that he has not gone to Canada, as had been announced by some of that paper's exchanges.—Laural Advocate.

Congressman McCarthy made a speech on the floor of the national house before adjournment for the holidays, treating of the enormous system of graft which has been carried on by life insurance companies and urging legislation regulating the affairs and restricting the liberties of such companies.

The cotton fixtures forming a part of the Christmas display in one of the show windows of Ralph Rundell's grocery caught fire from a burning taper Saturday night and started a blaze that threatened serious loss. As it was, the damage amounted to $25. Greater loss was prevented by quick action with buckets of water.

J. W. Mason is by far the best gardener in the city, as he proved to us beyond a doubt last Saturday evening by presenting the writer with three big, fresh cucumbers just fresh from the vines. Mr. Mason evidently knew our inordinate liking for the prodour of pain in the solar plexus region and he has the thanks of the whole family for the delicacy.

The authorities of Randolph have a collection of eight chronic drunks under surveillance with the intention of applying the new law, by which they may be sent to Lincoln for treatment, if they don't straighten up of their own volition. Two were arrested under that law, but one was dismissed and the case against the other was set for hearing January 3.

Sheriff Meares was elected vice president of the Nebraska Sheriff's association which held its annual meeting in Seward last week. The sheriffs were given a banquet by the county and city officials of Seward. On his return home Sheriff Meares stopped in Omaha and while there saw and talked with the notorious Pat Orowe. He says Orowe is not a bad looking man.

Yelting Gehr and Joseph Laecht went up to Wayne Sunday night. Mr. Gehr went up to help John and Joe Frei close up a deal for the purchase of a butcher shop, and according to the views of the editor of this paper the Frei brothers have located in one of the best towns in the state of Nebraska, and if this good town does the right thing by two good men they will give the Frei Bros. a liberal patronage.—Humphrey Democrat.

The Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and English and German Lutheran churches celebrated Christmas with appropriate programs and the distribution of gifts among the children. At each place the typical evergreen, illuminated with burning tapers and laden with presents, was the chief attraction and each church was thronged with old and young. It was a joyful occasion for all.

Don't be surprised if about the first of the year you should receive a gentle reminder from this office that your subscription is in arrears and that it is time to pay up. A newspaper is not a charitable institution and must collect what is due it or suspend publication, but quite a good many subscribers do not seem to realize that such is the condition and consequently oblige us to remind them of their delinquency. If you do not like to receive "duns", the best way to avoid it is to pay in advance and that makes everybody connected with the business happy—just try it once for luck.

Hard work, a fixed purpose, much self denial and a determination to win are required of the man who desires to succeed. There is no royal road to success, and he who is not prepared to plod in his youth is very likely to find that in after years his ideas and methods must undergo a change or he will be written down as one who failed to reach the goal of his ambition. The ladder has to be climbed a round at a time or you may lose your footing at any time and be obliged to step aside for the patient plodder whose step is firm and whose hold is tenacious as the grip of a bull dog's jaws.

The weather on Christmas day was not of the sort usually dished out on that occasion. It was warm and sunny. Little fire was needed and few wraps were used for comfort. Many enjoyed drives and the population generally sought recreation in the mild outer elements. There were many family reunions and most people either entertained or were entertained. Everybody took aboard a larger and more miscellaneous assortment of viands than good health demanded, but all survived the experience, so far as this department has been able to learn. Business was suspended and the day given up to rest, feasting and pleasuring pastimes. The great festival event was a happy one for all.

Wayne county will send several families to North and South Dakota between now and April first. Some have purchased the cheap lands offered in those states, others have taken homesteads and all will go there expecting to better their condition financially and we sincerely hope that their fondest expectations may be fully realized. But we are certain some will be disappointed and that many hardships must be endured and numerous disappointments will occur. It requires fixedness of purpose, a determination to prevail over all obstacles to bring success in these new fields, and those, we know, many of our neighbors possess in a marked degree and we candidly believe they will win out in the long run, but there will be many dark days before the sun of accomplishment finally shines on their endeavors.

Talking of schools and teachers a few days ago with one who has had considerable experience as a teacher and afterwards as a school officer, he remarked there were several things necessary to make a school successful and the first was a school board that would exercise judgment in the selection of the teaching corps, a board that would not be influenced in its selection of teachers by personal friendships or pulls and then after the teachers were chosen, to have backbone to uphold the teacher regardless of the frowns and wishes of prominent citizens, and who would not interfere in any manner with the discipline of the school, except it be to see that the orders of the teacher were carried out without fear or favor. Then he said the superintendent in any city school ought to have stamina enough to enforce discipline in the various departments of the schools and never under any circumstances encourage any pupil to hope for clemency from the head of the school, and if the teachers failed in any way to correct their shortcomings elsewhere than in the presence of pupils. Furthermore he thought the parents could be of great benefit to both pupil and school by refusing encouragement in any breach of good behavior and by giving the child to understand that public schools were not intended as reformatories, and if necessary, to use repressive measures even to the extent of connecting the back of the child with a good switch well wielded by a good, stout arm.

COMMUNICATION.

Editor WAYNE HERALD:
Desiring to write to all my old friends, and some new ones, at Wayne, I can do it once for all by getting space in one of your columns. Leaving Wayne in the heavy rain of November 23 and facing nine degrees below zero at Milford, Iowa, the 80th, I left Omaha December 6 for southern California by the R. I. & El Paso route. I had traveled various other routes and was not anxious to see mountain scenery, but curious to go by a new way. This El Paso Shortline runs through western Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Texas, Arizona and enters California on the extreme south, hence the scenery is boundless prairie and as boundless desert, with no elevation of more than about 4,000 feet. We crossed the Colton

Sea, a large body of water, about seven miles by twenty-four miles in extent, formed last summer by the overflow of the Colorado river into the desert. It is rising several inches a day despite all that has been done to check it. It will be overcome ere long for to modern ingenuity nothing seems impossible.

Between Colton and Los Angeles we encountered a sand storm which covered the track and brought the train to a standstill until a construction car with its shovelers came to our relief. I have seen a dust storm in Iowa as wild and much dirtier.

Of all the places I have seen in California in my several visits Long Beach is my choice as a place to live. It is located on a long beach twenty-two miles south of Los Angeles, is nearly level and has wide streets lying parallel to each other. A pleasure pier extends fully one-third of a mile over the ocean. The city has grown in ten years to a population of 15,000 and is likely to add 10,000 more in the next two years. Electric motors run to and from Los Angeles every fifteen minutes from early morning to midnight. Seven miles southwest is the great San Pedro harbor, the terminus of the Salt Lake & San Pedro railway. This beautiful city on the sea will grow as does Los Angeles, and no human power can stop its growth so long as there is room for it to spread. As to the climate and other attractions here, I will only say: "Come and see." The days are now as warm and beautiful as the most perfect summer days in the prairie states. The nights are cool, but scarcely as cool as a frosty night in Nebraska or Iowa.

I have decided to make a home here for my daughter and hence wish to sell my west farm with its superb building site in front of grove and orchard. If any of my friends in or around Wayne want that farm they may deal with me by correspondence. Otherwise I shall soon put it in the hands of agent. I should like to see it in the hands of someone who would appreciate it as much as I have and will be as loath to part with it as I am.

To young men and men in the prime of life, who have a business, and are well, and doing well enough, I would say: Stay on the magnificent farms of Nebraska and stick to your business until age or disease may render you unfit to contend with the changeable weather and rigorous weather of the Central West, then come here if there yet be room.

BE CONSISTENT.

Not long ago the Rev. Mr. Glor said that "people smile when a Christian scientist gets sick." To this Rev. Mr. Glor of the Stuart Ledger responds:

"They do every time. They did the same with Christ when He healed the sick and forgave the sinful. They did worse. They spit at him, scorched him, nailed him to a tree and with hyssop and sour, taunted him, saying, 'He saved others, himself he cannot save.' Why would a professed Christian laugh at the living faith which turns defeat to victory, grief to joy, hatred to love, enemies to friends, sin to purity, sickness to health and accepts Christ literally as the healer of all the disorders and troubles of earth? A Christian scientist is taught to fight sickness as heroically as he fights sin. Sometimes the struggle is overwhelming. Even Christ did not do many mighty works, because of the unbelief of the people. What is there ridiculous, to a Christian, in the beautiful belief that God still heals all our diseases, as well as our iniquities."

The Wife's Secret, OR A BITTER RECKONING

By CHARLOTTE M. BRAEME

"So you have been the woman Pauline," he said, turning to her kindly. He did not know yet how far this estrangement had been intentional on her part, and he would give her the benefit of the doubt. "I too, have fallen on prosperous times. Now, what are you going to do? Shall I see you home? Or shall I call on you to-morrow, when you will be quiet and calmer? Or will you come and look at my little place now?"

Then, for the first time, Pauline raised her head, and again Jack saw the expression of the curved brows, the lips that he had never seen before. "I will not accompany you anywhere," she said, "until you tell me—until I have a chance to speak to you—until I have a chance to speak to you."

The shocked clergyman would have spoken, but Pelling stopped him. "You must pardon me; but this is my duty, as you must acknowledge, and I will not be silent until I have a chance to speak to you."

"After wishing the clergyman 'Good evening,' the two men jumped into the car which brought Pelling from the station and drove to a hotel. They talked in a private room, and the clergyman finally left after receiving orders for luncheon in half an hour. Then Pelling turned to Jack and began:

"It seems to me that you and I are fast to cross each other's paths, Mr. Pelling. I have heard you spoken of often lately by Mr. Mallott, a particular friend of mine."

"Indeed?" said Jack, uncomfortably, "but I don't know Mr. Mallott's name; for, since his conversion with Lord Summers, Jack felt less proud than ever of his own share in the rupture with Ethel. He thought, too, that Mr. Pelling would not have heard much of his child from that source."

"What you are thinking," Pelling observed, "but you are wrong. Mr. Mallott has spoken of you to me only as the man in your profession. I took the liberty of finding out for myself. Now, I have a proposition to make to you."

CHAPTER XXII. Pelling paused and looked intently at the young man. He knew there was not much generosity in giving Ethel up, but he would not marry her himself during the lifetime of his wife, and, having no other means of support, he did not mean to make any show of his misfortune. But he felt he should like to know what sort of man this was whose path he intended to smooth for him as far as lay in his power; and, while he thought of this, the memory of Ethel's face, pained and sorrowful as he saw it when she had turned her back on him, came before him, and he knew that the greatest kindness he could do her would be to restore her lover. Presently he said, abruptly:

"You have nearly broken Ethel's heart," Jack flushed furiously, and half rose from his chair. Pelling motioned to him to keep calm.

put on her and her love. I shall be on hand in the character of a benevolent patriarch, and the moment I see signs favorable to our plot I will bring about a meeting. The rest will be with yourself."

"How can I thank you?" "You owe me no thanks. Release your mind on that point. What I am doing is not for my sake, which Mr. Mallott's happiness is for me. I think you owe me nothing but a kindness to your wife after you are married. Here is luncheon. We will talk by and by of your immediate plans."

When they had finished luncheon, and Jack had left, Pelling laid down on the hard horsehair sofa, with his hands under his head, gazing steadily at the ceiling; and it was not until the evening, when the waiter came to light the gas, that he was roused from his sleep. He started himself together, called for his bill, and having settled it, went into the lady's room.

CHAPTER XXIII. Notwithstanding all Pelling's efforts, the story soon got into the newspapers, and, it being the dull season, was seized upon with avidity by the gossip purveyors. It was "dished" and "redidled" day after day, with numberless distortions, exaggerations and additions. One society journal had it that the beneficient Miss M. of M.—Park, in Edinburg-shire, had attempted to poison her husband, to whom she had been secretly married only a month or two, in order to become the wife of a celebrated R. A., with whom she had fallen deeply in love; while another declared that the husband presented himself at the altar with pistols, and, during the sacred ceremony, set upon a duel there and then, and wounded him dangerously in the shoulder, and that the unfortunate man now lay in a most critical condition, while the husband had carried off his reluctant bride, a veritable prisoner, on board his yacht, for a twelve-month's cruise in the Pacific.

At last Pelling, annoyed beyond measure by these absurd stories, decided to lay bare the truth. With the assistance of her lawyer, he drew up a concise statement of her real facts, giving his own and Pauline's name in full, but suppressing Jack's. He carefully conveyed the idea that Pauline believed him to be dead, and gave the circumstance to her change of name as sufficient to account for his not having discovered her existence since his return from Africa. This he sent to two of the daily newspapers, and, thus directed of all mystery, the story lost its charm, and no longer afforded any interest.

Pelling sent one of these newspapers, with his own letter specially distinguished, to Ethel by post, and the next morning he called in Buckingham street to make matters clear.

Ethel's frank candor once more overcame the difficulties of the situation; she sat down at the top of the stairs with her hands outstretched and her face bright with friendly interest.

"I have been longing to see you," she began, warmly, as they entered the room. "We have both so much that is wonderful to tell each other."

She looked at him steadfastly as he stood in the light from the window, and what she saw in his face quickened her pulse with a sudden thrill, but she would not give way to impulse that urged her to console him. She went on, a little hurriedly at first:

have anything to do with me, and that she is now in Paris."

"If I were you I should go to Paris, too."

"I suppose I ought—in fact, I know I ought—and I have tried to make up my mind to go; but I cannot."

"For an instant he dropped his head upon his hand, and a great crash of city set Ethel's heart beating wildly. He pulled himself together with an impatient exclamation."

"What a bore you must think me!" he said, quickly. "Let us drop the subject. If I ever find you can help me in any way, I will come so far as once. As things are now, I will see the better. And so you are to possess the wealth which Pauline has forfeited? I am very glad—very, very glad—all accounts, but one."

"And that is?" "It will make Dornton's task harder."

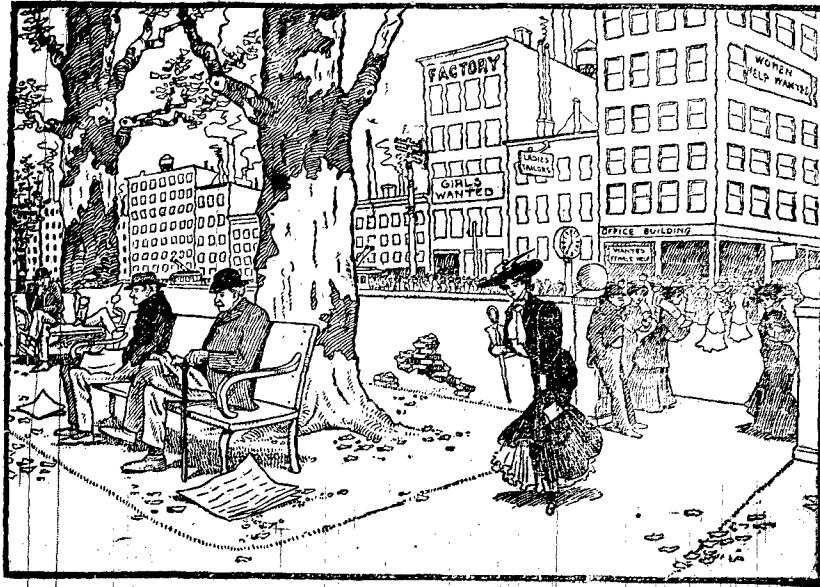

"The blood rushed over Ethel's face in a quick flush, and it left again as quickly."

"I don't know what you mean," she said.

"I mean that Dornton was beguiled by my unhappy wife into doing as he did, that he was not master of his own actions, and that he would give a very great deal to be assured of your entire forgiveness. He has loved you all through his mad folly. He told me so himself on the very day of the wedding, before his coat, I was woefully afflicted, so when you think of him in the future, you must not believe he was governed by mercenary considerations."

"Thank you for your kind defense of him," she responded, rising as her father entered the room. "I will remember to do as you say," and she turned gayly to the door. "And now let me introduce you to Sir Geoffrey Mallott of Mallingford Park."

THE WOMAN WORKER AND THE SUPERFLUOUS MALE.

Even the most constant readers of newspapers scarcely realize the revolution being brought about by the increasing employment of women in all industries. Within a short time, the Young Women's Christian Association of New York City found places for 4,000 girls and young women in offices, about one-third of whom replaced male clerks.

The New York Life Insurance Company, which a few years ago employed only men in its New York office, has replaced one-half of the men with women.

Managers claim that women are stronger and more trustworthy than men. It also appears that women employees are content with considerable less wages than men employees.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, of New York, employs 1,700 women in its offices and 800 men. The same thing is largely true in business offices all over the United States.

In factories, a similar change has been brought about. In many industries, men are only employed as foremen. Women work for lower wages and they are better adapted for light industry.

As this process of substitution a good or bad thing for the workers themselves and for the country? If men, who generally require higher pay, because, as a rule, they have to bring up a family, are crowded out of work by women, who take lower wages, because so long as they work they remain unmarried, and because in many instances they receive free from their parents some part of their cost of living, the result would be anything but good.

It may be wondered if this is not a leading cause of so-called race suicide. The male portion of the population is less able to marry, because not earning enough to maintain a family, while women with comfortable and adequate earnings of their own have less desire to accept marriage.

In the city of Dundee, Scotland, the substitution of female for male labor has reached a climax. Dundee makes cheap goods for export, in competition with Chinese and Japanese labor. Only the lowest wages are paid, and practically only women are employed. As a result, the men of Dundee are being reduced to the position of parasites. A great many cases are found in which men who should be workers subsist upon the wages of their wives.

It may be that there is compensation for the apparent evil of this change in the greater independence given women by their wider employment, and that they, by reason of this independence, exercise more careful choice when they do marry and are able to exact a higher standard of morals and behavior in men.

Whatever we may think about it, it is certain that the employment of women increases at a tremendous rate. In this, as in other tendencies of our civilization, no reversal is to be looked for. The revolution must be accepted and mankind must find some way to benefit by the change.

But look at the number of advertisements in the papers by men who want situations and ask yourself what can be done with the superfluous male.—Indianapolis Sun.

ONE FIFTEENTH.

LOOK here, Grace, when am I to see that famous chum of yours?" "Famous? O, she isn't that. Fred! She's just sweet and lovely and dear and—"

GRACE GAZED UP.

The walls were adorned with kaleck-knacks of all sorts, including both Harvard and Yale banners.

"I don't see what you want that blue thing up there for," continued Liddon (Harvard), sauntering liddo into the room and pausing before a silk flag with a large Y on a blue ground. "I know, it's for Arthur Stapleton—a Yale man!"

Grace laughed. "Celia put that up. I didn't. He was rather attentive to her at their last senior prom."

that hangs down on her forehead that—confound that Yale man!"

"Fred had recently begun the practice of law, and he had a hard day to study up that 'next Wednesday evening' but he was on hand at the college reception, notwithstanding. As he left the dressing room and stood for a moment in the hall, immaculate in his evening suit, he heard a merry peal of girlish laughter from an adjoining room. Immediately afterward a door opened and his cousin peeped out.

"Oh, Fred, I'm so glad you've come!" said she, closing the door behind her quickly. "I was afraid some horrid law case would keep you."

"Fred looked her over approvingly. 'You're stunning, dear, in that white dress,' said he. 'Yes, I ought to have stayed at home—I may lose my first case by coming out here. But you see I wanted to meet you—that is, of course—'

"How very 'polite' laughed Grace, teasingly. 'You never thought of your stunning cousin, sir—confess it! But you wanted to make the acquaintance of Miss Cella Colburn, the 'darling'!"

"Oh, say, Grace, you didn't repeat that to her, did you?" "Of course I didn't! Poor fellow, don't blush so! I don't mind your wanting to see her—you can see me any time, you know."

"Well," said Fred, fidgeting at his collar and cuffs, "is she here?" "She is right in that room. Just let me run in and prepare her for the honor, and then I'll take you in."

"Oh, say—" began Fred again; but his busy cousin had already whisked into the room, and from behind the closed door he caught a sound which was suspiciously like stifled laughter. He began to feel awkward and wish himself well out of it. Then he grew vexed, and that did him good. When Grace came for him a moment later he was his cool, imperturbable self once more.

"Allow me," said his cousin, throwing open the door, as she stepped forward, "to present you to—the original of the photograph!"

Fred halted on the threshold in something very like dismay. There stood, in a semi-circle, no less than fourteen girls, in various stages of merriament, but each apparently striving to attain the conventional amount of demureness on the occasion of a formal presentation.

"What—what do you mean?" he stammered, gazing hopelessly at Grace. "It is a composite," she shrieked, in a perfect gale of laughter. "It's a photograph of our Phi Delta society. Girls, attention! Once more, Mr. Liddon, let me present you—"

Fred with a mighty effort recovered himself and made a sweeping bow. "Happy to meet you," he exclaimed, "I was glad to see the best of the joke. The fifteen courted as one girl. It was plain that they had practiced. Fred knew he would be the hero of a good college story through many classes to come.

"This illness was an excellent one," he declared with a laugh. "I recognize the dreamy eye, the artistically careless hair, the—Grace, may I beg the honor of a special and individual introduction to—the fifteenth of your society, who stands on your extreme right, and who, unless I am mistaken, was the final fraction to be photographed in the composite picture?"

Grace clasped her hands. "You know her?" she exclaimed, as she performed the ceremony willingly enough. "You must have seen Cella before to-day."

"No," laughed Fred, contentedly, he hid his blushing partner into the corridor. "It is a scientific fact that the last impression is the strongest, and the picture is far more like you, Miss Colburn, than any of your classmates. Besides, I recognize the stray lock of hair!"—Housekeeper.

Looking After the Present. "Do you think you will live in history?" asked the somewhat sardonic friend.

"I don't know about that," answered Senator Sorghum, "but I'll live in the best hotels while I'm here!"—Washington Star.

There are plenty of good friends for those who deserve them.

THE FARMER AS VIEWED BY SECRETARY WILSON.

—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SOCIETY BELLE A SQUAW.

Daughter of one of New York's wealthiest and most widely known hotel men, wearing diamonds on her feet and a pearl-encrusted shirt on her shoulders and carrying a pousse-pousse attached to her back—this is one of the curious spectacles that will be pointed out to the thousands of land-seekers from all parts of the country who will go to Lander, Wyo., when the government opens the Shoshone Indian reservation to settlement next spring.

It doubtless is perfectly safe to say that there are few white women in the world who are more loved of men than this one. She is the daughter of one of the wealthiest and most widely known New York hotel men, and her real name is Belle A. Squaw.

Grace Wetherbee's father was and still is one of the proprietors of the Metropolitan Hotel in New York City.

which, until the Waldorf-Astoria was built, was the finest hotel in the metropolis.

Six years ago Miss Wetherbee came from New York out to Fort Washington, eighteen miles east of Lander, to visit the family of J. K. Moore, who was at that time post trader there.

At the home of Mr. Moore, Miss Wetherbee met Sherman Coolidge, a full-blooded Arapahoe Indian, who was then and still is conducting a little Episcopal mission at the Shoshone reservation, a few miles from the fort.

It was a case of love at first sight, of that sort of love that laughs at locks and keys and defies the whole world.

Coolidge called frequently at the modest home of the post trader to see Miss Wetherbee and openly and boldly paid court to her. Nor did she discourage his suit, as most daughters of wealthy New York hotel men doubtless would have done. Contrarywise, she encouraged it, and when, not long after the couple first met, he asked her to become his wife, she promptly and unhesitatingly consented.

The engagement was a brief one. Arrangements were promptly made for the nuptials. The young Indian missionary and the daughter of the wealthy New Yorker presented themselves before Rev. Mr. Roberts, who was conducting a little mission at the Shoshone reservation, and requested him to make them husband and wife.

He declined to perform the marriage ceremony. Nothing daunted, the lovers thereupon set out by stage for Casper, nearly 200 miles distant from the fort, resolved to have the knot tied there. When Mr. Roberts saw, however, that they were determined to carry out their purpose to become husband and wife he relented, called them back and performed the ceremony at his home.

Since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge have lived happily together and a child has been born of their union—the pousse which the mother carries strapped to her back as squaws carry their infants.

Despite the fact that she is the daughter of a wealthy and illustrious New York man, despite the fact that she was reared amid the refinements of civilization and the luxuries of wealth, despite the fact that she was given all the education and social advantages that money and the thoughtfulness of fond parents could supply, Mrs. Coolidge has fallen into many of the customs and become addicted to many of the habits of the red people among whom she has lived the last six years.—Chicago Chronicle.

A Natural Query. A Boston citizen, while passing down Tremont street not long ago, was hit on the head by a brick which fell from a building in process of construction. One of the first things he did, after being taken home and put to bed was to send for a lawyer.

A few days later he received word to call, as his lawyer had settled the case. He called and received five crisp, new $100 bills.

"How much did you get?" he asked. "Two thousand dollars," answered the lawyer. "Two thousand, and you give me $500? Say, who got hit by that brick, you or me?"

Dear to His Heart. "Will you have another helping?" asked the neighbor. "You seem very fond of our chicken."

"And why shouldn't I be," responded Suburban, who had been invited to dinner, "when I can detect the flavor of our foreign in every morsel!"—Detroit Tribune.

Nebraska's next United States senator will be one whose position on questions of great interest will not be a doubtful quantity.

Well here's for "A Happy New Year" to everyone of our readers, hoping that no cloud of sorrow will darken your sky for the next twelvemonth.

When D. E. Thompson gets bounced from the diplomatic service of the country it will look as though the housecleaning of Nebraska grafters in federal service is becoming pretty thorough.

Poor old Fitzsimmons, the big fighter, lost his fight with O'Brien and about the same time his wife went away with another man. Verily the down hill slide is a rapid one when a fellow gets the toboggan properly greased.

Seeing that W. P. Warner is safely fixed in the office of United States Marshal, the friends of Congressman McCarthy can breathe easier. Now if Garney and Boyd and Young could be shelled some way, his renomation would be assured beyond a doubt.

In regard to a suitable populist candidate for governor next year, Moses Warner is still willing. If there is anything in a name and, better still, if there is any relationship between him and the Moses who lead the Israelites, he ought to become an ideal leader for the pop forces.

I. F. Baxter, district attorney for Nebraska, was requested to hand in his resignation because of his conduct in conducting the trial of Richards and Comstock for illegal fencing. Baxter got away and didn't comply with the request and then President Teddy swung his hatchet and Baxter's official head dropped into the basket with a dull and sickening thud.

President Roosevelt has mapped out a policy of rate legislation that seems to be pretty generally endorsed by the people of the country and from present appearances many of the railroad managers are beginning to think it would be a good thing to have a law that would protect them against themselves and with these conditions so plainly in evidence it seems congress ought to be ready to act promptly in passing the desired legislation.

There are many evidences of graft in the building of the Panama canal and congress is justified in asking questions about the expenditures. The canal is a great necessity and will be a boon to this and future generations, but that does not justify a reckless expenditure of the people's money without obtaining results in accordance with the funds used. In governmental work there seems to be a tendency to greater cost than in private enterprises, because too many persons look on jobs of this kind as private snags.

Senator Millard asked to be taken off the inter-state commerce committee of the senate and placed at the head of the isthmian canal committee and his wishes have been complied with. Was this more on account of the senator not wanting to be put on record on the bill to be presented by the inter-state commerce committee for the regulation of railway rates, or was it because he thought the work of the other committee would be more congenial to him? Nebraskaans will hope it was not to shift responsibility that their senator asked this transfer, but would much rather believe he thought he could be of greater use on the other committee.

The daily papers continue to bring awful news from Russia. Revolution is rampant in all parts of the domain of the czar and in cities like Moscow terrible scenes are daily enacted. The people are fighting the armed forces of the empire and awful slaughters are of frequent occurrence. Among the thousands of slain and maimed, countless innocent persons are indiscriminately murdered by Cossacks. The helpless Jew is the victim of horrible outrages from both soldiers and populace as though he were to blame for the terrible conditions in existence. Starvation and pestilence are everywhere in evidence and we in a country like ours can not be made to fully realize the awfulness of the situation.

Ross Hammond's recent tribute to the old fashioned gumdrop, reminds us that Ross, in his early days was a farmer's boy, not accustomed to or provided with the luxuries of the city boy of today and to him as to many others of us, the old fashioned gumdrop was the sort of perfection in the confectioner's art. At Christmas time a few sticks of striped candy, an orange or one of the old-fashioned doughnuts "such as mother used to make" was about all that was expected and they filled the bill as fully if not better than the multiplicity of gifts bestowed on the youngsters of today and we believe, brought just as great satisfaction to the recipients. But that was in a different day, with environments altogether different than prevail at present, and as old fellows must adjust ourselves to the changed conditions or get out of the way.

The spirit of giving was never carried to the extent that it has been this year. A universal outburst of good feeling, all striving for the happiness of one another and especially for the joy of the young who are to perpetuate the continuation of Christ's nativity and to bring the splendid customs associated with it. Such generous promptings of the heart, pronounced evidence of which is made possible by a condition of unexampled prosperity, impress one with the thought that friendly fellowship is taking long forward strides and that human selfishness is not so powerful or all pervading as one is often led to believe by viewing the struggle in the business world. We are encouraged to believe that people are becoming less selfish and more noble-minded, good proof of which is shown in the observance of the customs accompanying the great Christmas holiday.

Every public sale of farm stock throughout the country affords a practical demonstration of the value being put upon the improved breeds of domestic animals. Wherever stock is offered for sale that carries a large percentage of the blood of the improved animals, bids come fast and furious and prices obtained are always satisfactory and generally highly remunerative, while for the ordinary scrub bidders are few and the prices always low. The high priced lands of North Nebraska cannot be made profitable growing the scrub, but where the high grade or pure blood is bred, grown and properly cared for there is always prosperity for the grower. The writer knows whereof he speaks, because his business brings him in close contact with the conditions and we hope to see the day when there will be no room in this section of the country for the scrub cow, horse, hog or man and there ain't much right now. The man who grows improved stock is a better citizen than his neighbor who grows the scrub, because it inoculates in him a love for the beautiful, fills him with a spirit of enterprise, brings prosperity and gives him the inclination and the means to contribute to the uplifting of his own family and the community of which he is a citizen.

It has been intimated to us recently that newspapers discuss many subject which it would be better for them to refrain from, among other things being theology. We are free to confess that at times we dip into things about which we are not as well informed as we ought to be and among the rest are matters theological, architectural, electrical, astronomical and various others, but it is our misfortune to have been born with a disposition to inquire into things we did not happen to know much about and in following up this bent frequently find it is necessary to think, and then it is that we arrive at certain broad conclusions and among others is that teachers on these various subjects are not all ways infallible. In days of old the man of the cloth was looked upon as one just a little above the ordinary and whose word and teachings were accepted as the law to govern the laity, but during those times many things were done in the name of religion that today, with our advanced civilization, would not be permitted. It is a queer coincidence that the world's greatest advance has been made since the advent of the printing press and that man's condition has been wonderfully bettered during its life, and where freedom is given it to discuss all matters, progress is much more rapid than where it is curbed and censured by the church or state. So under all the circumstances we are inclined to think our friend's ideas have a little of the flavor of antiquity and that an up-to-date infusion of ideas would be quite beneficial.

OPERA HOUSE

January 1st, 1906

25c, 35c and 50c

A GUARANTEED ATTRACTION

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS. J. O. Mines visited Norfolk last night. A. R. Davis visited Sioux City today. Dr. Hammond visited Norfolk yesterday.

Miss Edith Bush was a Sioux City visitor today. Mrs. Thos. Moran is visiting relatives at Neweastle. There was a club dance in the opera house last evening. M. S. Merrill went to Carroll for a brief visit yesterday. T. H. Wright was doing business in Omaha the first of the week. A. H. Carter and C. W. Reed were Winslow people in the city yesterday. A daughter was born today to Mr and Mrs. Carl Baker who live south of town.

Grif Davis and David James and wives, of Winslow, are Wayne visitors today. Rev. E. H. Duley went to Lincoln today to attend a board meeting of the Baptist church. Mrs. R. E. K. Moller, whose health was reported rather worse, is said to be now improving. Miss Ethel Brown arrived home Thursday night from her college studies at Grinnell, Iowa. Ed. Sherwood and wife returned Tuesday from a visit in the western part of the state. Charley Kate leaves tomorrow for Chicago to enter as a student in the Armour Institute. Prof. J. M. Hilt left for Lincoln yesterday morning to attend the annual teachers' meeting. Robt A. Hopkins, of the secretary of state's office force at Lincoln, is visiting in Wayne. D. N. Harrington received a letter from Judge Moses a few days ago in which the gentleman does not seem to think California coast weather is always balmy. He had gone over to the Catalina islands and a great storm came up and it was impossible for him to get back to the coast for some time and it seemed to rather put the Judge on edge.

A. J. Ferguson didn't leave yesterday for southern California, as previously announced, because he couldn't get a satisfactory section in a sleeper, his going not having been anticipated and provided for by the transportation company. It is believed his usual section, No. 6, will be available next Monday, when he will start out, accompanied by Mrs. Ferguson.

Several students of the state university have just been advertised for falling below their grades. It is noticeable that they are largely those who think more of athletics than is good for their studies, more of Greek letter fraternities than they do of Latin and chemistry. The moral is plain. A little effort between meals to study would serve as an alleviation and intellectual uplift.—Fremont Tribune.

It looks as though Wayne was about to get the long desired federal building. Senator Millard has introduced a bill for public buildings at West Point, Columbus, Wayne and several other places and of course bills of this kind are always passed. The introduction of bills of this kind have at least one effect, and that is to make the various cities or towns feel that they are not forgotten by the representatives in congress, but as a rule an introduction is about as far as they generally get.

Following the Christmas rush, there is not the usual activity in business circles this week. Some of the merchants are invoicing and others are getting ready to do so. There is a suspension of energy so far as possible, and many people have gone visiting or are entertaining visitors. Next Monday will usher in another year when the accustomed grind will be resumed and business of all kinds will start off with renewed efforts and the promise of substantial returns, not surpassed by those of the prosperous year just drawing to a close.

Among the best attractions booked to appear here this season is that of Mr. Sanford Dodge, supported by Miss Rose Curry and an excellent company in Shakespeare's sublime tragedy, Julius Caesar. The engagement is for January 8, and no doubt the attraction will be greeted by a large audience. This is the first presentation here of this greatest of all written tragedies, and Mr. Dodge's production of the play is said to be noteworthy in every respect.

NOTICE. Tuesday after New Year's the School of Ladies' Tailoring and Dressmaking, will open for a two months' term which will be the last term of school in the Diamond Outfitting System. All those desiring to learn the only system that keeps up with the times, must come in not later than the second week in January. CORA B. MILLER, Prop.

See the Roman Forum scene in Sanford Dodge's production of Julius Caesar at the opera house January 8, 1906.

Home made mince meat, like your mother used to make, at Roe & Fortner's.

Dr. Cosner, dentist, over First National Bank. See W. L. Robinson, of Carroll, for real estate, farm loans or insurance.

FOR SALE. Six Plymouth Rock roosters and three White Wyandotte roosters. Inquire of Mrs. L. L. LUSH, Dr. Cosner, dentist, over First National Bank.

SUPERINTENDENT'S NOTICE. Teachers' examinations will be given the third Friday and Saturday of each month. Robt. I. Elliott, County Superintendent.

WINTER IN COLORADO. Your own physician will tell you that the dry mountain air of Colorado is an elixir of life stands pre-eminent. Always healthful and invigorating. The crisp atmosphere of Colorado is at its best in winter. To accommodate winter tourists to the Rockies, the Union Pacific has put in great very low rates, from Council Bluffs and Kansas City, with proportional reductions from all points east. Tickets on sale every day until May 31, 1906. Be sure your ticket reads over the Union Pacific, the popular route to Colorado. For full information inquire of A. K. CURTIS, T. P. A., Omaha, Neb.

The play of Julius Caesar is more or less familiar to everyone but more especially is this true of every high school student in the country. It is doubtful whether Shakespeare ever penned anything more beautiful. The forthcoming presentation of this famous tragedy at the opera house January 8, 1906, by Sanford Dodge and his company will no doubt arouse unusual interest here as it has done elsewhere. The version used is the same as that played by the late Edwin Booth, and the original text is strictly adhered to. The play is divided into six acts and eleven scenes. New and incidental music has been composed for the production, and nothing has been omitted to make this a complete and perfect production in every detail. Do not miss the opportunity of seeing the theatrical event of the season. Wanted, a girl for general housework. Inquire of Mrs. Henry Herrell, half block west of the postoffice.

Flour Flour Flour

On December 2 we made a special flour sale and gave flour away at $1.20 per sack and it was a grand success. We were so well pleased with the result that on January 6, 1906 we are going to make another sale. Our reason for making these flour sales is to introduce the RIGHT KIND of flour.

- 1 It is made at Westbrook, Minnesota, in the Right Kind of a territory to get good milling wheat.
- 2 It is made at the Right Kind of a mill.
- 3 It is made by the Right Kind of a miller who knows how to make the RIGHT KIND OF FLOUR.

These are a few reasons why we want to place our flour with the Right Kind of people. Watch for our ad. for it will be one day only and it will be the Right Kind of a price. Remember our motto, Honesty, Liberality and Justice.

Thanking you for the past favors, we remain as ever.

To the Friends and Patrons of This Store

I extend sincere thanks for the generous business you have accorded me the past year. It is my earnest desire to make this store a RELIABLE store; where none but reliable goods are sold, where everybody receives the same treatment, and the price is the same to all. I feel that I can make this a desirable store to purchase from and at all times aim to give the most and the best for the money. If you have not as yet traded here, I would urge you to call and investigate this store. You will save money by it. Wishing you a prosperous New Year.

V. A. Senter and wife who spent Christmas with relatives at Bancroft, returned yesterday.

Miss Caroline Smith came up from Sioux City yesterday morning to visit Miss Mamie Feather.

Christ Kohlfhof and son of Norfolk, visited Mr. and Mrs. Len in Wayne the fore part of the week.

Miss Catherine Lewis returned Friday from Lincoln where she has been attending the university.

Next Sunday Rev. J. H. Karpenstein will preach in Winside in the forenoon and Wayne in the afternoon.

Yesterday Judge Hunter authorized the marriage of Mr. Marvin A. Root and Miss Gertrude I. Martin, both of Carroll.

A pleasant party gathered at the home of Henry Giesse, north of town, Tuesday evening and passed a very enjoyable hour.

A. B. Allen, present secretary of the state central committee, is likely to succeed W. P. Warner as chairman of that committee.

Mrs. Robt. Hefti departed yesterday morning for Elk Creek, Nebraska, where she will spend a couple of weeks with her parents.

J. D. King and L. U. McKee and families expect to leave next Saturday afternoon for their winter sojourn in Pensacola, Florida.

The young people will enjoy a social party at the residence of David Cunningham this evening in honor of Miss Margaret McLarty.

Ernest Muhs, who was taken to the Norfolk asylum a few weeks ago, has been released as cured and returned to his home near Winside.

Mr. Plin C. Graves Jr. of Wakefield, and Miss Elizabeth Hynes of Pomeroy, Iowa, were united in marriage at this place yesterday by Judge Hunter.

Transfer of ownership and management of the local telephone exchange from D. E. Miller to Messrs. R. and E. B. Philleo takes place next Monday.

I. N. Stockwell, formerly telegraph operator at this place, but now station agent at Waua, was in town Wednesday shaking hands with his old friends.

The Christmas night festivities in the German Lutheran church at Winside were attended by a large crowd and passed off to the joy of both young and old.

F. A. Huston who bought the general store of Mr. Tortat at this place, is planning to move the stock to Grays, Nebraska, the last of January, so the HERALD is informed.

A reception for members and friends of the Presbyterian church will be given in the church tomorrow evening. A social time will be followed by the serving of refreshments.

The Modern Woodmen of America made only nine assessments on their members for the year 1905, and believe they can get through with the same number for the ensuing year.

Miss May Gillersleben entertained a party of young lady friends at her home out-of-town yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Margaret McLarty. All had a delightful time.

Dr. Warren, of Sioux City, was summoned to the residence of Geo. Porter, north of Wayne, yesterday, to perform a surgical operation for Mr. Porter's son who is suffering from appendicitis.

The item elsewhere in this issue in regard to Charles Miller, should read "Omaha." Most of our readers know that he has lived in Winside for, 10, these many years.

A Methodist preacher has been appointed register of the Valentine land office, from which his predecessor was ousted on account of alleged irregularities. He is a good Methodist and will make a good official. We wonder how he feels on a salary of $3,000 a year.

Otto Vogel Sr. and Jr. are making arrangements to open a hardware and music store in the building recently vacated by Peterson & Berry and which belongs to Mr. Vogel Sr. They left yesterday for the east to buy a new stock, and expect to be ready for business about the middle of January.

R. Q. Warnock was brought home from the hospital at Sioux City Tuesday evening and at the time of going to press he is reported to be very low with very little hope of recovery. This is not pleasant news to his host of friends who have all along hoped that he would pull through and be a well man again.

The electric light plant was off duty Tuesday night on account of some packing blowing out from the new engine, and candles and oil lamps were brought into use in residences and business houses. The accident forced a reminder of days before electricity was installed and when people stumbled along in the darkness.

E. J. Raymond's Emancipation Act That Will Free Thousands.

No one appreciates better than the victim of indigestion that he is an abject slave to his stomach, and Mr. Raymond in guaranteeing that Mi-o-na will strengthen the stomach so that you can eat what you want and when you want it, removes all fear of further bondage. The stomach is to the body what the foundation is to the house, and when it is weakened or diseased, one organ after another is affected until the heart, lungs, kidneys and liver will all be involved. Indigestion causes nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, distress after eating, furred tongue and general debility. Mi-o-na is not a mere temporary relief for indigestion, but a positive remedy for all stomach troubles, promoting good digestion, stimulating the secretions and restoring health. Ask Mr. Raymond to show you the guarantee under which he sells Mi-o-na. A large box of tablets sells for 50 cents, but costs nothing unless it cures.

J. P. GAERTNER Furniture Store

J. P. Gaertner, furniture dealer, is entering the twenty-fourth year of his business career in Wayne and has the distinction of being the oldest dealer here under one management. In the early, struggling days of Wayne when Mr. Gaertner cast his lot here, his store was small compared with what it is today. With an increase of business from year to year, keeping step with the development of his territory, and by gaining and keeping the confidence of the public through handling the best goods on the market and according to all fair treatment, his store grew to be one of the largest and best in northeast Nebraska. He appreciates the liberal patronage which he has received during nearly a quarter of a century and hopes to merit the same consideration in years to follow.

GORED HIM TO DEATH

AGED IOWA FARMER IS KILLED BY A BULL.

Carried a Pitchfork with Which to Defend Himself, but Was No Match for the Infuriated Beast—Dead When Found.

A special dispatch from Mapleton, Ia., says: The death of Killion Kuey, residing north of town in the edge of Woodbury County, was reported Friday morning by neighbors who were in town.

The old gentleman, who was over 72 years of age, left his bed at an early hour Wednesday morning and went to the stalk field to drive in a cow that had not reported for milking the previous evening.

Mr. Kuey carried a pitchfork with which to defend himself, but proved no match for the infuriated beast.

Mr. Kuey had been a resident of Woodbury County for about twenty years and was quite a large property owner.

Workmen in the Big St. Petersburg Iron Works Join the Strikers.

A St. Petersburg special says: The strike promises to be on a far more extensive scale than any previous movement of the kind.

Almost all the papers suspended by the censorship are appearing under new names and are meeting with huge sales.

The railway union at Moscow has resolved to run troop trains from Manchuria and to convey grain to the famine-stricken districts.

On account of some confusion a general strike was proclaimed at Moscow at noon Wednesday, instead of Thursday, with a complete suspension of street railroad service.

The helplessness of the government in this crisis is demonstrated by the inability of Interior Minister Durnovo Wednesday night to get through instructions to arrest the members of the workmen's council of Moscow.

The situation in the Baltic provinces is growing steadily worse, and in the Caucasus a renewal of the outbreak of Tartars and Armenians has produced another reign of terror.

The main interest in the strike of the railroad men centered in the Warsaw station, where the government was to make a test of its ability by moving a train for Berlin.

Mr. Kuey had been a resident of Woodbury County for about twenty years and was quite a large property owner.
