The wrong way

to select harness is the way it is usually done. Price is generally the first consideration. If that is very low the goods seem attractive, regardless of quality. Judge our goods the other way about. Examine into the quality of this harness first. Then it will be seen that it is worth almost any price.
But our prices are not high. Value considered they are remarkably low.

sires to announce that a full line of these desirable remedies can be had at his home two doors west of Presbyterian church, Wayne.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

Friday afternoon Dr. and Mrs. Leis-earing handsomely entertained friends
at a dinner party.

Ed. A. Johnson has been training a class of twelve boys to furnish singing
Sunday evening at the M. E. church.

Harvey Garwood and wife of Carroll,
are feeling pretty proud over the arrival of a fine boy baby at their home last Friday.

Mr. Hans Henriksen and Miss Emma Damme, both of this county, were united in marriage at this place last Thursday by Judge Hauser. The bride is a daughter of Wm. Damme.

Russell Williams who has been editing the Hoken Headlight, was in Wayne Saturday and while here reported he had bought of W. H. Gibson the Magnet Mail, trading the Headlight
to Gibson in the bargain.

W. B. Grant, of Carroll, was in town
Saturday and says the corn crop of himself and several of his neighbors along the west line of the county didn't amount to much on account of the big hail storm that passed through there in the summer.

Jud Garwood has moved from Carroll to Wayne and resides in the old Dr.
Love house west of the Presbyterian church. Jud is selling agent for the Haller remedies and says those desiring any of these can be supplied from his house at any time.

Harry Roland and wife and Bert
Brown were at Carroll Sunday attending the funeral of O. M. Harburt and informed us that it was a very largely attended funeral. Mr. Harburt was one of Wayne county's old settlers and a very much respected citizen.

Vaughn Williams, formerly an employe of the First National bank of this city, but now employed in the First National of Moline, Iowa, was in the county last week visiting his parents and friends at Carroll and also friends in this city. Vaughn likes his new position and looks as though the work agreed with him.

Miss Blanche Goss, trained nurse,
who has been taking care of a sick girl in the family of E. K. Hutcheson, north of Emerson, has been visiting her parents near Wayne. Mr. Hutcheson's little girl underwent an operation for appendicitis, and in performing the operation
a pin was found lodged in the appendix. She has been sick eleven weeks, but is now recovering satisfactorily.

L. R. Tharp and wife celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of their marriage Friday, December 29. That is a goodly number of years to the one looking forward, but how fleeting to the one reckoning back for that length of time. The friends of the worthy couple hope that they may be able to celebrate in each other's companionship the seventy-fifth anniversary of the same event.

The $6,000 house of A. J. Ferguson on the lots west of D. L. Strickland is not likely to be one of the improvements of the city in the near future as Mr. Ferguson did not close the deal for the lots although the bargain was made,
and on the strength of it Mr. Strickland bought a lot adjoining him on the north and now he has more town property than he expected at the time of his purchase.

Allie Hart-Blackhawk, who was said to have abandoned her Indian husband some weeks ago, indignantly denies the report, claiming that he is well educated and altogether better than most white men. It is now reported that the aggrieved husband has sued the Sioux City Journal for $6,000 to cover alleged damage caused by the circulation of the false report. Aside from his lacerated feelings it will be difficult to conceive of any damages.

Last Sunday's dinner at the Boyd
was all right as with dozens of others
the writer was afforded an opportunity to know from real experience. Under the care of mine host Sherwood the Boyd is getting to be pretty well and favorably known by the traveling public who are glad to make Wayne now instead of skimming the town because of its hotels. A good, well conducted hostelry can do as much for a town as any business enterprise and indeed in the estimation of the traveling public it is really a creator of opinion.

Here is a new chicken story vouchered for by our presiding elder: A preacher was passing over a bridge and stopping to look over the railing accidentally dropped his false teeth in the water below. He tried in vain for awhile to recover them. Finally seeing a lad near he offered him $2 to recover the teeth.
The boy jumped at the offer and running home soon appeared with a chicken on which he tied to a string and dropped into the water. In a moment he drew up the string and there were the teeth firmly fastened on the chicken. The boy got his two dollars.—Plaukinton Herald.

The way subscribers of the HERALD
have been paying up subscriptions within the past week is very gratifying to the management and is a demonstration of the estimation in which the paper is held that speaks louder than words.
Prompt paying subscribers are a joy to the country newspaper man and in fact they are the main spokes in the wheel that carries it to success. The fellow who allows his subscription to run, year after year and gives no thought to its payment until he is pushed to pay is not much of an aid or really very pleasant to deal with, but we are thankful that class is growing less every year and probably before many years will have ceased to exist or will be on the books of someone else's than ours.

Things were doing at the Presbyterian church last Thursday evening. It was given out that on the evening in question a reception would be held at the church and the members and congregation given to understand they would not only be welcome, but were urged to be in attendance. A good crowd responded and when things got in just about the right shape Henry Beckenbauer, who has for so long been the sexton and who is about to leave for the west, was called forward and presented with a handsome gold watch and chain by the members of the church.
After things had gotten into normal condition again and everything was moving along smoothly, a representative of the Ladies' Aid Society stepped to the front and in the name of the society presented the church with a communion service of individual chalices which it is needless to say was very thankfully received.

Monday was New Year's day and it is safe to presume that you "resolved" to drop all your bad habits, to be in the future a model man or woman and we sincerely hope your good resolutions may not be broken. But as long as man exists resolutions will be made and resolutions be broken. At best man is a weak sinner, but the very fact that with the coming of a New Year, resolutions to do better are made, is a good indication. Some of those who have resolved to turn over a new leaf and to do differently in the future will live up to the resolutions and others doubtless are this have turned the leaf back again
and are busy at work on the same old dirty pages they have worked over for a long time, and others will forget and get back again within a few weeks or months and the devil's account book will have daily entrances of sins of omission and commission. In spite of the broken resolutions, of the heartaches caused by man's waywardness, the world is growing better with the dawning of each day and while the millenium is not at hand or even in sight, man's condition as a whole is wonderfully improved in comparison with the past and the spirit of uplift to a better life,
is growing stronger and stronger.

An old man, 80 years of age, was cast adrift from the home of his daughter near Petersburg, Nebraska, last week.
The old man had previously decided $7,000 worth of land to his son-in-law, together with horses, cattle and other chattels, with the understanding that he should have a home with the family
as long as he lived. To show how filial consideration works in some creatures,
his daughter refused to give him money enough to take him to Omaha where he hoped to secure a home with his brother-in-law, but he finally reached there on a freight train. It is difficult to account for such despicable ingrates, cre-
tures of such coarse, brutal sensibilities,
unless they are mental malfo-mations and have no higher instincts than the hog which apparently thinks of nothing above grunting and eating. Still we do not wish to cast undue reflection all hogs, for a respectable member of the hog family would scorn such a violation of filial ties as was displayed by the Petersburg couple, who are enjoying the fruits of prosperity secured wrongfully and through villainous deception from a feeble, tottering old father. But will their enjoyment last?
Will it be long before deserved retribution makes them wish they could recall their base ingratitude?

Henry Bay started to Pennsylvania last Tuesday on a sad mission. He got word that his mother was not expected to live and listened to her bedside. He expects to be gone about thirty days.
Whether by accident or design, Tom Lound's peer, Maggie Ross, was shot in the hip a few days ago, while in the pasture. The bullet went in several inches and has not been removed yet.
Everybody regrets that the pretty little pacer has been hurt. Mrs. F. S. Tracy stepped through a bridge on the railroad track Sunday afternoon and injured her ankle quite badly so that it was with much difficulty that she got around for two or three days. Just even thirty of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Boorem's neighbors and friends ate Christmas dinner with them. They reported a very enjoyable time and when asked if they had all they could eat, said, "Well I guess yes." Ernest Mubs, the fellow who was taken to the Norfolk insane asylum week before last, returned home Monday and seems to be all right. Ernest will have to change his brand of whiskey or he may be taken to Lincoln next time. R. R.
Smith received the sad news Tuesday that his aged mother had passed from earth, at her home at Denton, Texas.
A letter a few days before apprised him of her sickness and he went to Wayne with the intention of going to see her, when he received the news of her death. The old lady was nearly 80 years old. She leaves a husband, six sons and three daughters to mourn her death. None of the sons were able to be present at the funeral. Frank Tracy went fishing Christmas and reported having had a fine bite just when he had to quit and this excited Messrs.

Carter, Brown, Trenn, Prescott and one other not at all necessary to mention, and they begged some bait at the butcher shop and list up the creek,
prepared to slaughter the fluky tribe.
But alas! none of those mentioned got a bite and they sneaked back to town swearing vengeance on Tracy for lying about that bite he claimed to have had.

LECTURES AT RANDOLPH.

Rev. Father T. P. Haley of Wayne, gave a lecture on the evils of intemperance at the opera house last Friday night. The house was crowded with people from the platform to the doors, eager to hear his discourse. J. C. Kelly introduced the speaker and Father Haley then launched out on his subject.
He made the statement that intemperance caused more suffering and death than war, and that it was the cause of ruined homes, and that statistics proved it caused more divorces than all other causes combined. Father Haley told of the action of alcoholic poison on the nervous system, on the blood, the tissue and water in the body and proved by eminent testimony that the excessive use of strong drink shortened men's lives. He made a manly plea to the young, and gave a timely warning to others. Father Haley took the position that not the seller of liquor, but the buyers, were responsible for intemperance, or in other words, that as long as the people demanded these things they would be sold, but that the minute the demand for intoxicants ceased because the people refuse to buy, just that soon will saloons go out of business. Father Haley gave only portions of his lecture on temperance, his regular lecture being illustrated by fifty-six stereopticon views showing among other things, the effect of alcohol in the destruction of the body.

He expressed his willingness to give his complete lecture in Randolph at any time.—Randolph Times.

DEATH OF MR. HURLBERT.

O. M. Hurlbert, one of the early settlers of Wayne county, died at his residence in Carroll on Thursday afternoon of last week, aged 73 years and 10 days.
For eight months Mr. Hurlbert had been suffering from a cancerous growth in his throat which gradually grew worse and finally resulted in his death.
Funeral services were held at the M. E.
church at Carroll Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. C. H. Moore officiating.

Mr. Hurlbert has been a resident of Wayne county for twenty years and was highly respected by all who knew him. The Carroll Index treats of Mr.
Hurlbert's history briefly as follows:

Orlando M. Hurlbert was born at Brookfield, Orange county, Vermont, February 29, 1832. Was married August 13, 1855, at Manchester, N. H., to Charlotte M. Bliss. To this union were born eight children, seven of whom,
with their mother, are left to mourn his demise. The names of the surviving children are: Mrs. Ella Beach, of Carroll; Mrs. Amy Collins, Elliott, Iowa; Asher and Walter Hurlbert, of Wayne county; Sam, Frank and Carlos Hur-bert of Rosebud, S. D. All the children except Mrs. Collins and Carlos Hur-bert were present at the death bed.

A COMMUNICATION.

SOUTH OMAHA, Dec. 28, 1905.

E. Cunningham:
Dear Friend and Sir: Will you please give the following space in your paper:

Mrs. Hilmer and myself were glad-dened by receiving a registered letter
this morning through the mail, the same containing $48 25 in cash, as a Christmas present from some of my friends in the city of Wayne. Yes, I may truly say friends, as a friend in need is a friend indeed. This shows that there are yet some kind people who have a kind heart for me, and who realize that I really need help in my affliction.
May the kind gifts receive the heartfelt thanks from both Mrs. Hilmer and myself. May the good Lord, our God, repay every one of them for their kindness, and may they prosper and do well in all their undertakings, and receive ten-fold for what they did for me, and may each one be blessed with health and success in the coming year and ever afterward is the sincere wish of
MR. AND MRS. HILMER.

Shakespeare's sublime tragedy, Julius Caesar, one of the best classic productions ever brought to this city. It will be given with the entire scenic production, together with many effects that go to secure a perfect presentation of the grandest drama ever written.

SUPERINTENDENT'S NOTICE.
Teachers' examinations will be given the third Friday and Saturday of each month.
Robt. I. Elliott,
County Superintendent.

Among the best attractions booked to appear here this season is that of Mr.
Sanford Dodge, supported by Miss Rose Garry and an excellent company in Shakespeare's sublime tragedy, Julius Caesar. The engagement is for January 8, and no doubt the attraction will be greeted by a large audience. This is the first presentation here of this greatest of all written tragedies, and Mr.
Dodge's production of the play is said to be noteworthy in every respect.

Case Wagoned at Once.

One of America's greatest physicians was called to the bedside of a grand dame of distinguished name and many millions, who is a leader of American society. But now the grande dame groaned and grunted in her sick-bed like any washerwoman.

The physician examined her carefully. Then he said:

"You must get up every morning at 6 o'clock. Take for breakfast a cup of weak tea and two pieces of dry toast. From 9 to 11 exercise, either walking or sweeping or dusting. At noon lunch on a slice of cold meat, steamed water and stale bread. Don't sleep in the afternoon; exercise again. For dinner take nothing but a little meat, a vegetable and toast. No sweets, no wines, no social dissipation of any kind."

The eyes of the grande dame flashed fire as she said:

"That doctor, do you comprehend my position? Do you know who I am?"

"Perfectly, madam," answered the physician. "You are an old woman with a sour stomach."

Just Wonderful.

Verily, Miss. Ann. I had Specialized in the case of Mrs. Pearson, who resides here in a particularly interesting place. Here is the story told by Mr. Pearson, her husband, in his own words. He says:

"My wife's health was bad for a long time. Last July she was taken with a severe attack of dizziness. I sent for the doctor, and after making a thorough examination of her, he said she had a severe case of dizziness, a disordered state of the kidneys. This medicine didn't seem to be doing her much good, so I heard about Dodd's Kidney Pills. I got her a box just to give them a trial. Well, the effect was just wonderful. I saw that they were the right medicine and I got two more boxes. When she had taken these pills so much better she had recovered her health and was able to do her usual work. She is now quite well and we owe it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

A Discouraged Chauffeur.

"Are you the applicant for the position of chauffeur?" asked the gentleman looking at the dirty rascal.

"Yes, sir," replied the man who had just entered the room.

"Are you a union man?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, after you have worked on a machine for eight hours and the thing breaks down, what do you do?"

"Oh, well, sir, if you've got one of that kind of machine, I don't want the job," said the Statesman.

Cleveland's One-Cent Warrant.

Exp. President Grover Cleveland holds the only warrant for one cent ever issued by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the United States Treasurer.

It is in payment of the balance of the salary due the Democratic chief clerk at the close of his term in 1897.

The instance was made necessary by one of those mistakes that are rare on the part of the expert bookkeepers engaged in running the accounts of the government.

Every quarter the President of the United States is entitled to three checks—one for $1,166.66 and two for $1,166.67.

The table of methods of paying government salaries shows that if the $50,000 a year for the President is divided into twelve equal installments, one for each month, the amount will be $4,166.66-2/3, but the two-thirds of a cent cannot be paid at the end of a month, and so the practice is to send the President a check for $4,166.66 one month and the other two-thirds of the quarter the amount is $4,166.67.

In some manner President Cleveland failed to get a check one month for the extra cent that was due him, and when the books were balanced at the close of his term it was detected. With all due solemnity the officers of the Treasury drew the famous warrant for one cent, and Mr. Cleveland received it with the same amount of seriousness. He has never cashed the warrant.

MALARIA???

Generally This Is Not the Trouble. Persons with a susceptibility to malarial influences should beware of coffee, which has a tendency to load up the liver with bile.

A lady writes from Denver that she suffered for years from chills and fever which at last she learned were mainly produced by the coffee she drank.

"I was also grievously afflicted with headaches and indigestion," she says, "which I became satisfied were likewise largely due to the coffee I drank. Six months ago I quit its use altogether and began to drink Postum Food Coffee, with the gratifying result that my headaches have disappeared, my digestion has been restored and I have not had a recurrence of chills and fever for more than three months. I have no doubt that it was Postum that brought me this relief, for I have used no medicine while this improvement has been going on."

"I was really relieved from congestion of the liver caused by coffee."

"My daughter has been so great a coffee drinker as I, and for years was afflicted with terrible sick headaches, which often lasted for a week at a time. She is a brain worker and excessive application, together with the headaches, began to affect her memory most seriously. She found no help in medicine and the doctor frankly advised her to quit coffee and Postum."

"For more than four months she has had no headaches—her mental faculties have grown more active and vigorous and her memory has been restored."

The Wife's Secret, OR A BITTER RECKONING. By CHARLOTTE M. BRAEME.

CHAPTER XXV.

It was Sir Geoffrey's first dinner party, and Ethel felt just a little nervous as she received the guests. Captain Pellingson was waiting for her in the doorway, and he caught her eye presently and smiled at her reassuringly, for she had confided to him her dread of the awful occasion.

"You are an old friend of mine, and you're not," Bertha was saying to the captain. "I all think Miss Mallory is charming, but you should have been at her party. I dare say, but do you know, she is all right to get on with. Of course she is all right to get on with as a hostess; but it is impossible to gush with her. She has a way of sifting all one says and showing up anything that is absurd without certainly the least intending to give offense. You would hardly believe it, I dare say, but I have adopted the habit of trying to talk seriously when she is listening. I think that is the greatest compliment you could pay her. Will you adopt the same practice with me?"

"I should not dare," she replied, with a nervous smile. "I was to get a reputation for being a chatterbox. I should like to do an old maid. Men always prefer frivolous talkers for their wives. There is the dinner bell. Are you to take me down?"

Later in the evening Miss Collins dropped into a quiet corner and discussed the things with the utmost freedom with an intimate friend whom she had not seen since the fall of the season. She was describing the breaking up of the party when Pauline's intended marriage had been discovered.

"Now tell me—could there be anything more ridiculous than her running away from her own home and marrying, or trying to marry, a man secretly, when there was no one to prevent her doing so openly?"

"Yes, sir," replied the man who had just entered the room.

"Are you a union man?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, after you have worked on a machine for eight hours and the thing breaks down, what do you do?"

"Oh, well, sir, if you've got one of that kind of machine, I don't want the job," said the Statesman.

Cleveland's One-Cent Warrant.

Exp. President Grover Cleveland holds the only warrant for one cent ever issued by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the United States Treasurer.

It is in payment of the balance of the salary due the Democratic chief clerk at the close of his term in 1897.

would go back and try to dissuade Pauline from this mad freak, but that he knew it would be useless; and any show of authority on his part just now might prove fatal to the good he believed he had accomplished.

He drove straight back to the hotel, and sat with his chin resting on his hands at the table in the window of his room. He was in a strange state of mingled hope and dread. He did not know what he would do, but he knew that he must do what he conceived to be his duty; the rest he must leave to higher hands.

While thus musing over the past, he was brought back to the present by the sight of his wife entering by in company with several others; and, following them, he noticed a figure that he knew well, with white curls on his head, which was being led by a groom. Pauline looked up and bowed gravely; he returned the greeting. How handsome she looked! How well she sat her horse! How proud he might have been of her if she had never allowed the love of riches to crowd the womanliness out of her heart! He leaned forward and watched her as far as he could see from the window.

At half past five Pauline was sleeping over at her father's dressing room in one of the little cottages in the Bois de Boulogne. She had been thrown and trampled on, and was lying of internal hemorrhage. Her color was very low, and her hands came slowly, with many pauses.

"It is heaven's justice! After you had done this morning I made up my mind to do what you wished. I thought I would try to love you—you were a good girl—and we should be happy together, and so right to be happy—after my wickedness, and heaven has settled it!"

"Yes, that is true. I've been mistaken all my life. No one ever tried to make me good. I was always left to servants—when I was a child. Heaven is just, and the great Judge will remember my great temptations. Will you let me see your letter? Say you forgive me—it will make my mind easier."

It took him a long time to get up the stairs, and he was very tired when he reached his room. He looked at his watch and found it was half past five. He had been thinking of the letter he had written to her, and he was very tired when he reached his room.

"I tell you your presence here is an unwarranted intrusion. If you do not leave my apartment of your own free will, I shall be compelled to have you ejected."

It was the third day since Pellingson left Ethel, and this was his wife's greeting. He had had a long battle with himself; but duty had been triumphant, and his mind once made up he was not to be dissuaded from his course.

"That is not necessary. Of course I will leave you; but you will not refuse to answer me one or two questions first?"

"Ask your questions then, and, if I choose to answer them, I will. If I don't choose, I will not. But, for heaven's sake, get over them quickly!"

"Will you tell me something of our child, Pauline?" he asked.

"She springs up with a look of desperate fright on her face."

"How dare you come here to browbeat me like this?" she exclaimed, vehemently; and then she sank back on the couch again. But, after a pause, she said quietly enough: "You have touched my one weak point. Of course you have to leave that there is to tell. My baby was born a weakly little thing, and I had hard work to keep body and soul together in those first days after my father's death. I knew from the first she could not live long. She died when she was three months old."

"Why do you wish such a mad thing as that?"

"Because, if it had not been for seeing her grave, I should have gone on searching for you until I found you."

"Ah! And if you had found me then, if you had come to Malloryford quietly and said, 'Pauline, you are my wife; come with me to Italy. My baby was born a weakly little thing, and I had hard work to keep body and soul together in those first days after my father's death. I knew from the first she could not live long. NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

Let the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his muscles would soon fail. Physical strength is derived from food. If a man has insufficient food he loses strength. If he has no food he dies. Food is converted into nutrition through the stomach and bowels. It depends on the strength of the stomach to what extent food eaten is digested and assimilated. People can do no more than their duty. This stomach is really the vital organ of the body. If the stomach is weak the body will be weak also, because it is upon the stomach the body relies for its strength. And as the body, considered as a whole, is made up of its several members and organs, so the weakness of the body as a consequence of weak stomach will be distributed among the organs which compose the body. If the body is weak because it is ill-nourished that physical weakness will be found in all the organs—heart, liver, kidneys, etc. The liver will be torpid and inactive, giving rise to biliousness, indigestion, weak nerves, feeble or irregular action of heart, palpitation, dizziness, headache, backache and kindred disturbances and weakness.

Mr. Louis Pare, of Quebec, writes: "For years after my health began to fail, my head ached, my stomach was weak, and I was unable to eat. I was told to take your medicine. I bought a bottle and used it as directed. In a few days I felt better. I kept on the treatment. I took on flesh, my stomach became normal, the digestive organs were purified, and I was able to eat. I am now as well as ever. I can never cease to be grateful for what your medicine has done for me and I can only advise my friends to get it. Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for your medicine. It is the best I have ever used."

"Madam," began the peddler as he opened his red satchel, "can I sell you something this morning?" "No," snapped the elderly matron, raising her brows ominously, "and you better move on."

"Just as you say, madam. I was going to offer you the greatest which I removed on earth, but I see you don't need it."

"And this wonderful remedy for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but you have no use for that, either?" "Why, how kind of you to think so!"

"And this little volume entitled 'How to Remain Beautiful Forever.' But it would be superfluous to offer it to you, Good-day, madam!"

"Come back here! Come back here this instant. I do not need them, as you say, but I will buy them and give them to some friend. I always encourage truthfulness."

DON'T DESPAIR.

Head the Experience of a Minnesota Woman and Take Heart. If your back aches, and you feel sick, languid, weak and miserable day after day, don't worry. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women in the same condition. Mrs. A. Helman, of Stillwater, Minn., says: "But for Doan's Kidney Pills I would not be living now. They cured me in 1899. I have been well since."

I used to have such pain in my back that once I faltered. The kidney secretions were much disordered, and I was so fit gone that I was thought to be at death's door. Since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me I feel as if I had been pulled back from the tomb."

"Any craft, sir, that is good enough to work and get paid enough to be found out and kept out of jail."

"I'm not going to let you go to jail," cried the merchant, "and you, my boy, he cried in trembling tones.—Baltimore American."

Diagnosis. "I regret to say," remarked the young physician, "that you have peristaltic neuritis. The symptoms are unmistakable."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the astonished patient. "What in the world is peristaltic neuritis, doctor?"

"It is, sir, the disease from which you are suffering," answered the young M. D., haughtily.

GOOD Short Stories

A fine specimen of the Taurus herbivores made its appearance in the Bow Street Police Court recently. "You ducked your head," said the magistrate to Patrick Lane, who charged Joseph Kavanagh with shooting at him in the Strand. "Falls and I did, your worship. It's better to be a coward for five minutes than to be dead all your lifetime."

When the last Cleveland baby was born, Mr. Cleveland was asked about the weight, which he gave as twelve pounds. Dr. Bryant, who was present, interrupted the ex-President to say that the nurse had reported the young hopeful to be an eight-pounder. "Well," said Mr. Cleveland, "I know, for I weighed him with the same scales that I use when I go fishing."

A so-called "happy family" P. T. Barnum used to exhibit consisted of a lion, a tiger, a bear, a wolf, and a lamb, all peened together in one cage. "Remarkable," a visitor said to Mr. Barnum; "remarkable, impressive, instructive! And how long have these animals dwelt together in this way?" "Seven months," Barnum answered, "but the lamb has occasionally to be renewed."

A man went into a drug store and bought a bottle of some patent stuff, which was advertised thus: "No More Coughs. No More Colds. 25 Cents a Bottle." Three days later he went to the druggist complaining that his throat was stopped up, and that he could scarcely breathe. "I've drunk all that patent cough mixture," he said. "Drunk it?" yelled the man; "why, that's an India rubber solution to put on the soles of your boots!"

"Who ever saw a perfect man?" asked the revivalist. "There is no such thing. Every man has his faults, plenty of them." The revivalist continued: "Who ever saw a perfect woman?" At this juncture a tall, thin woman arose. "Do you mean to say, madam, the evangelist asked, 'that you have seen a perfect woman?'" "Well, I can't just say that I have seen her," the woman replied, "but I have heard a powerful lot about her; she was my husband's first wife."

One day while in Vienna, Paganini hired a cab to take him from the concert hall to his lodgings. When he awoke the next morning he found the cabman waiting for an interview. "What is it?" said Paganini. "Excellent. I come to solicit a favor of you, I am father of four children, and have the honor to be your fellow-countryman. If you please, you can make my fortune."

"What do you mean?" "Authorize me to write in large letters at the back of my vehicle these two words: 'Paganini's Cab.' The musician consented, and six months afterward the cabman was enjoying a comfortable income.

A traveler in a sparsely settled district in Missouri came at midnight to a miserable little cottage. He knocked on the door to inquire for a place to put up for the night. "Is that you, Tad?" came a gruff voice from within. "No," said the traveler, "open the door a minute, I want to ask you something. The bolt was drawn, and a man looked out sleepily into the darkness. "I thought you was my boy, Tad," he explained, "and, snip my ears; here he is now!" A barefoot youth came panting out of the shadow, with his arms full of shoes of various sizes and colors. "Get any?" asked the man. "Yes, sir. Seven of 'em to-night, and two of 'em is a pair."

"Good!" the man said. "You see," he added, turning to the traveler, "Tad can make a noise that sounds more natural like a toment than any cat in this country. He just goes into the village and yells under the windows about this time in the fall."

"And you get shoes enough for winter," the traveler finished. "Stranger," said the man, solemnly, "I can see you ain't no fool."

PERSONAL RIGHTS IN STREETS. Case of Much Contention Between Drivers and Pedestrians. A reader of the Chicago Chronicle has written a letter asking a reply to the following:

"A friend and I disagree about the rights of pedestrians and the drivers of vehicles in the streets. He maintains that the driver has an exclusive right of way on the sidewalks, a superior right on established street crossings, and no right at all on the driveways between those crossings. I maintain that he is right as to the sidewalks and crossings, but wrong as regards between crossings, where drivers of vehicles have a superior, but not exclusive, right. Which of us is right?"

In the understanding of the Chronicle as to the various decisions of the courts a short reply to this is that each disputant is both right and wrong.

Many cases touching these questions have been decided in the several States and they seem to be a degree of uniformity among them not often found in matters wherein there is opportunity for differences of opinion.

It is true that on the established sidewalks of towns and cities the driver of vehicles has no rights except perhaps that of crossing them with due care for the purpose of necessary entrance to private property, and no right to obstruct them in so doing beyond the time reasonably necessary.

The majority of questions do not arise about the use of sidewalks but of the street spaces between them, and as to these it is difficult to arrive at the conclusion that there is either exclusive or superior right in either pedestrians or the drivers of vehicles of any description or the riders of horses either on the established street crossings or in any other part of the street.

The established crossings at street corners or elsewhere are purely matters of convenience. The pedestrian has a perfect right to pass along or over the crossings in any direction and the riders and drivers have an equal right with him and both have precisely the same equality of right to pass along or across the streets between the places where crossings are established or habitual. If the pedestrian chooses to ignore the convenience of an established crossing he may do so, crossing the street at any point and preserving his equality of right wherever he may elect to cross.

Along with this equality of legal right there is imposed upon pedestrian, rider and driver alike the obligation to exercise due and reasonable care and diligence as not unreasonably to interfere with or obstruct the exercise of an equal right by any other.

What is reasonable care and diligence is always to be determined by the circumstances and surroundings of each case. Both the pedestrian and the driver of any vehicle would be held to a higher degree of diligence in a crowded street than in one where passers of either kind are few.

There is a very common impression that pedestrians have a superior right on crossings and riders and drivers on established crossings, but this appears to be entirely erroneous. Each has as much right as the other anywhere in the street spaces between sidewalks and each is bound alike to reasonable care.

It is true that the pedestrian usually exercises greater care than the driver, but this is purely physical, arising from the bald physical fact that while a horse and wagon may easily run over a pedestrian the latter cannot by any means run over a horse and wagon.

Drivers of vehicles habitually take advantage of this physical fact, but the law would not uphold them in so doing and there would probably be less of it if proprietors of vehicles would instruct the drivers they employ in the strict equality of right in all alike in the use of the streets.—Chicago Chronicle.

CAUGHT WOLF WITH HANDS

President Tells How a Hunter Accomplished the feat. In a couple of miles I was close enough to see what was going on. But one greyhound was left with Abernethy. The coyote was obviously tired, and Abernethy, with the aid of his perfectly trained horse, was helped by the greyhound catch it.

Twice he leaped it, and this enabled me to gain rapidly. They had reached a small unwooded creek by the time I was within fifty yards; the little wolf tried to break back to the left; Abernethy headed it and rode almost over it; and it gave a wicked snip at his foot, cutting the boot. Then he wheeled and came toward it; again it galloped back, and just as it crossed the creek the greyhound made a rush, plunged it by the hind leg and threw it.

There was a scuffle, and I yell from the greyhound as the wolf bit it. At the bite the hound let go and jumped back a few feet, and at the same moment, Abernethy, who had ridden his horse right on them as they struggled, leaped off and sprang on top of the wolf. He held the reins of the horse with one hand and thrust the other with a rapidity and precision even greater than the rapidity of the wolf's snip, into the wolf's mouth, jamming his hand down crossways between the jaws, seizing the lower jaw and bending it down so that the wolf could not bite him.

He had a stout glove in his hand, but this would have been of no avail whatever had he not seized the wolf just as he did, that is behind the canines, while his hand pressed the lips against the teeth; with his knees he kept the wolf from using his forepaws to break the hold, until it gave up struggling. When I thus leaped on and captured the coyote it was entirely free the dog having let go of it, and he was obliged to keep hold of the reins of his horse with one hand. I was not very far distant at the time, and as I leaped off the horse he was sitting placidly on the fire wolf, his hand between its jaws, the greyhound standing beside him and his horse standing by as placid as he was. In a couple of minutes Fortescue and Lambert came up. It was as remarkable a feat of the kind as I have ever seen.—Mr. Roosevelt in Scribner's Magazine.

THE OLD PLACES.

Say, how would you like to go with me away from the green and spilling, To a place I know where the fields stretch green. And there's a wisp of straw and a toiling bug would you like to forget the noise And those haunted city faces, And bury them deep in the dreams we have In the good old boytime places?

Say, how would you like to go with me To the willow's friendly cover, Down to the river where, long ago, The pickered used to hover? And how would you like to wander again As we did with sunburned faces, And bare, brown feet, and ragged clothes In the good old boytime places?

Say, how would you like to go with me And forget your tribulations, In the romp and rive and heedless life We knew in our school vacations? And how would you like to find the pond, The one where the old millrace is, And dive in its waters cool and deep— One of those boytime places?—Milwaukee Sentinel.

REMININGTON tossed his cigar stub into the grate and lighted a cigarette. "I don't know why I am telling you all this," he observed—"I was always one to contend against confidences."

"He looked over at me in a half-quizzical, half-tentative way, as though unconsciously pleading for encouragement. I waited a second before I spoke. "And I am at a loss to understand why you haven't told me before, considering what good friends we've always been."

"There are some things that friendship doesn't touch at all," he responded, gravely. "True enough. And on the other hand, there are many things—most things, I may say—that demand—"

"The solace of friendship," he interrupted, a little satirically. "The necessity of it." "I fail to make any application in my particular case."

"At any rate now that you've told me, you are bound to admit that you feel better."

Remington shook his head ambiguously. "I couldn't swear to that," he returned, with a faint smile. "As long as the thing was a secret, it was mine to guard, to cherish as—"

"Yes; to big to your breast like a victim, eating the very vitals out of you."

"And do you think it is any the less so—now?" he asked, somewhat cynically. "We shall see."

I regarded him almost hopelessly. I had never seen a fellow change so. Up to the time of his marriage, five or six years before, he was the jolliest, most open-hearted, ingenious boy I had ever known. The wedding took place in Ireland, and to an Irish girl. She was reputed to be beautiful, and as good as she was beautiful. They lived together just three months. After the separation Remington was never the same.

No one ever knew the real cause of the rupture. Neither vouchsafed any explanation, and the public was too wise, for once, to invent one. When he came back home everything he said to me was: "Don't ask me any questions, Tom. I loved her—and I'm a broken-hearted man."

To-day, for the first time, he had given me his confidence. "If I think I can sympathize with you better than any one else," I told him, "I appreciate your confidence thoroughly, and then—I am married myself. I know what it means to love a woman as you did that one."

"And it is your opinion that I was entirely blameless in the matter?" "Absolutely!" "Mightn't there have been extenuating—"

"I don't admit anything of the sort." "It was the one transgression." "I can't take much notice of arguments of that kind. In all probability the action was merely a text to her whole character."

Remington whitened at this, but said nothing. "Then, after a pause—" "She was young—very young. I didn't give her a chance—not even half a chance. I don't believe she was guilty after all!" he broke out suddenly. "But—perhaps you are right," he added presently, in a dull tone.

I looked at him closely. The expression on his face showed me that he had suffered, and would continue to suffer as few men do. "I can almost believe that you are still in love with the woman," I remarked, after a silence.

Remington, too, was silent for a time. "At least," he remarked finally, "I shall never care for any other!" "Yet you divorced her," I observed curiously.

"My entire course was marked out by impulse—fierce, passionate. Had I loved her less, things might have been different."

"With your quixotic notions, you ought to have lived several centuries ago."

Remington made no reply, but sat there, looking at me, as though he were waiting for me to say something.

for a long time, gazing with strange eyes into the bed of pink and purple coals.

"Have you a picture of your—of her?" I asked, presently. "Not one; I burned them all—then." As he spoke, he pulled out his watch, and started to his feet with a little gesture of surprise.

"You mustn't think of leaving without seeing my wife," I objected, laying a protesting hand on his arm. "I want you to meet her; I want you to see what admirable taste I have in selecting a companion. We've been married just one year, and I think I can truthfully say that she has proven my ideal of a perfect woman."

Remington smiled and passed a reflective hand across his forehead. "It's easy enough to see how the wind is blowing in your household," he laughed.

We smoked away in silence for several minutes, and presently the door opened and my wife softly entered the room.

She wore a dinner gown of pretty, pale yellow stuff that fell about her in graceful scallops and made a faint, musical swish as she moved. In the semi-dark her bare shoulders gleamed like snow, and the pendant of her neckpiece rose and fell almost imperceptibly on her white bosom with each gently taken breath.

As she came further into the light toward us, Remington stood up and acknowledged my introduction with a low bow. When he lifted his face it was the color of ashes, and the man seemed to have aged ten years, in the ghostly glare of the fire.

My wife led the room to give some order about the dinner, and Remington turned to me with an abrupt excuse for leaving.

"You will make by apologies to your wife, old man? I'm positively ill—too ill to keep up much longer. Fact is, I've been feeling knocked out all day, and wouldn't give in. When I feel better, I shall be glad to drop in on you both some time again."

But we did not see him again. Two days later he wrote me, stating that his regiment had been ordered away. Several months after leaving London, Remington wrote the following letter:

"Dear Old Tom—I've been intending to drop you a line ever since my departure, but first one thing and then another coming up, I've kept putting it off."

"I do not need to remind you of the conversation we had on that last night at your house. Do you remember all I told you about her? You will recall that I was more than half inclined to condemn my own action all the way through. Well, since then certain facts have come to my knowledge establishing her complete innocence beyond the question of a doubt."

"God! how I've suffered! But it is too late now for me to make any reparation. She is married again—married to one of the finest fellows I know."

"If you ever should chance to run across her, I want you to remember that she is innocent. My only atonement must consist in proving her stainless before the world. Sincerely yours, 'REMININGTON.'"

And my wife, with her pretty Irish brogue, says she pities my friend, Remington.—Illustrated Bits.

AS A BOY IN GERMANY. Incidents of Youthful Roosevelt's Stay in the Island Years Ago. When in the summer of 1873 the Roosevelt children were introduced to the Minkwitz family they had never spoken German and conditions in Germany were altogether new to them. Nevertheless, they soon adapted themselves to their new environment, especially Theodore, who showed remarkable ability. A few days after his arrival Miss Minkwitz's brother, carne home from the University of Leipzig, and told the company a German student's joke. Everybody knows how deep these are. This joke must have been particularly good, for every one laughed, most of all Teddy. Fraulein Minkwitz was greatly surprised at this and asked him how he could understand it at all. Thereupon Teddy proceeded to repeat the whole story to her in English in a way which proved beyond doubt that he saw the point.

"He seemed to pick up things—no one didn't know how," she said. "At that time Frau Tiedt had in her service a good old servant girl named Emily, who had an admirer by the name of Charles, a fact which had escaped the Minkwitz family's attention altogether, although the girl had stayed with them for some years. Theodore had been in the house but a few days when one morning he created a sensation by saying: 'Emilie, ich bin Karl; ich liebe dich.' (Emily, I am Karl; I love thee.)"

He was passionately fond of books on natural science, especially of Brohm's "Thierleben," which he studied eagerly. One day he got it into his head that he must have a rat, a mole or a hamster. When he asked Miss Minkwitz where he could get one she told him that she didn't know. The lad then began to investigate for himself and finally came back from the city swinging in triumph, like a trooper, a dead mole and a dead German parrot. He had discovered a man who had white mice for sale and from him he procured what he wanted. He next went to work to strip the animals of their skins in the kitchen and preserved them in one of Frau Minkwitz's saucers. But here the good old Frau had interfered. He therefore went to the back yard, built himself a little oven from bricks, killed the animals, and after having boiled them, prepared them carefully, putting together skillfully all the parts of the skeleton.

Some one has said that kissing is promoted by the same instinct that prompts one calf to lick another calf's ear. It is reported that the Northwestern is the only railroad in Nebraska that has paid its taxes promptly and without causing annoyance to the state. Railroads should have proper credit when it is due, and the Northwestern certainly deserves commendation for doing the right thing with respect to its taxes, regardless of the contrary procedure of other companies.

The old gang in politics that gave Nebraska Hill, Bartley, Detrich and Savage as state officials and that were responsible for the federal appointments of Dundy, Brad Slaughter, Tom Cook, Tucker, Baxter, etc., are determined to hold the reins in the next republican state convention, and will most certainly do so unless there is an awakening to the seriousness of the occasion.

Nebraska federal officials are not by recent events made to appear in a very favorable light, in fact they appear to be about as unavailing a bunch as Ugoilo Sam has in the service—but it should be remembered that Tom Cooke and Brad Slaughter are two stars whose lustre up to present writing has not been dimmed.

The railroad managers of the roads west of Chicago have lately been in consultation with the federal state commission and claim that they want the anti-trust law enforced to its full extent and present to add the commission in every possible way to see that it is done. A remedy to this situation they have not yet fixing the rates but have been ordered to accept whatever the chief clerks and other large shippers would pay and they claim they have been hauling the freights at less than cost to them and they want to be protected from these big fellows. If the roads are really in earnest in this matter they can be of great advantage in getting their rates righted.

Man is surely a queer being. In youth and early into middle life and probably into the years of decline his energies are directed toward the accumulation of sufficient wealth to provide for his last days. He seeks a home that will protect him from the summer's heat and the winter's blast, looking ahead to the time when he and his loved ones will be provided with such a home and the comforts it will bring with pleasurable anticipation. At last he reaches the point where the home so long in anticipation becomes a reality and he is established in it until the devil of discontent enters his heart and from beyond the mountains in the west or the sunny southland in wadded stories of a wonderful climate, where all of winter never comes, and he is beckoned there. The fires in the furnace of his comfortable home are drawn, the water pipes drained, the house plants and cats entrusted to a less fortunate but more contented neighbor, the curtains pulled down, the key turned in the lock and the owner takes the painted cars for the Eden that is always just beyond, and in most instances disappointment again looms up to afflict him by day and haunt him by night. After all a contented spirit is much to be preferred above material wealth.

MORE TROUBLE AT COLORADO

Special from Colorado to yesterday's Sioux City Journal:

Sheriff Rosenberger came here from Hartington and placed under arrest W. F. Hintz as one of the crowd that mobbed a man named Haack, an alleged wife beater, at Hartington, some two weeks ago. Several witnesses were also taken to Hartington. W. F. Hintz pleaded guilty as charged before county Judge Whitney and was fined $45 and costs. Then he was placed on the witness stand by his attorney and permitted to tell what he could of the assault on Haack. The county attorney asked a number of questions, eliciting information from Hintz, and as a result warrants were issued for a number of other persons living in Colorado. Eight persons up to date have been summoned to Hartington and more arrests are expected. The hearing of the others has been postponed by their desire until Thursday when they will carry preliminary examination and carry the case to the district court. M. F. Harrington, of O'Neill, has been retained as their attorney.

Beatha Lims, the woman whom Haack is alleged to have abused, made complaint that Haack had made threats against her life, and asked that he be placed under bonds to keep the peace. Constable West went to Hartington to serve the warrant and brought Haack to Colorado, where he was arraigned before Judge Hanham. He pleaded not guilty and was bound over to the district court in the sum of $800 in default of which he was taken to the county jail.

A HISTORIC JOURNEY

CAESAR RODNEY'S GREAT HORSEBACK RIDE IN 1776.

How the Declaration of Independence Was Saved by a Vote in the Session of the Provisional Congress in Philadelphia.

It happened on that famous Fourth of July, 1776, the day on which the American colonies were declared free and independent states. If Caesar Rodney had not made his historic ride there might not have been any free America today.

The provisional congress was in session at Philadelphia, each of the thirteen colonies having representatives there. It was a great congress, and a momentous question was before the distinguished body. The great charter of our freedom had been written by Jefferson, and Benjamin Harrison, father and great-grandfather of presidents, had presented it to congress on Monday, July 1. What would the Continental congress do?

In order that our country should be free and independent the declaration must be adopted. This could be done if only the colonies were divided, and there were some good men who did not believe it best to take this step at this time. Four of the seven delegates of Pennsylvania were opposed to it, and the two Delaware delegates present, Thomas McKean was in favor of independence, but George Read was opposed to the measure. Caesar Rodney, the other member, was in the southern part of his state in the capacity of a lieutenant general, organizing and drilling troops for the coming struggle.

Two of the opposing Pennsylvania delegates were persuaded to absent themselves, and thus the Keystone State would favor the declaration, but the vote of Caesar Rodney was necessary to carry the state of Delaware. A messenger was dispatched in hot haste to summon him to Philadelphia, and then for four days the "patriots of '76" talked and maneuvered to delay the final vote. On Thursday, July 2, congress was to vote on the momentous question.

On the afternoon of the 3d the messenger found Caesar Rodney in an ex-courty, more than eighty miles from Philadelphia. General Rodney was at that time forty-six years old, with a tall, lean, worn figure, his face scarred by a cancer that was finally to cause his death. The brave patriot did not hesitate. "Saddle the black!" he commanded, and in ten minutes he had mounted his faithful steed and was galloping as if for life to the northward.

Eighty miles away from congress, which was waiting for him to declare the independence of the colonies. The thought caused him to drive his spurs deep into his horse's flanks and sent him flying along the road, dusty highway that stretched away toward the Quaker City. It was one of the great days of history. That black steed bore the destinies of America, and his rider knew it, and there was neither halt nor delay.

The sun went down, and the stars came out one by one in the blue vault of heaven, and that solitary rider rushed on his way. All through the cool summer night Caesar Rodney kept up his reckless pace.

The stars faded out of the morning sky, and the sun came up red and fiery, the herald of a sultry day. And still Caesar Rodney kept on his way. He was yet many miles from Philadelphia. His horse was jaded, and he was travel worn and covered with dust, but the patriot did not slacken his rein. He must be there to vote for the independence of America. And he was there. All that hot, sweltering July day the delegates of the colonial congress were talking and voting in Independence Hall. The session had begun. The president, John Hancock, was in the chair, and the clerk, John Dickinson, was calling the colonies one by one. Virginia had voted and Massachusetts and the great state of New York and the little state of Rhode Island and now New Jersey was voting, and Caesar Rodney had not come.

Anxious and worried, Thomas McKean went out to the door of Independence Hall. Would his friend and compatriot be too late? His face brightened as he heard the sound of hurrying hoof beats coming up Chestnut street. A foaming, panting steed dashed into the yard. The dusty rider leaped to the ground. Booted and spurred and red and dusty his long ride thick on his long lapped coat and iron gray hair, Caesar Rodney entered the hall of congress leaning on his friend McKean's arm.

He was just in time. The vote of Delaware was being called. George Read voted "Nay." "Aye!" called the clear voice of Thomas McKean. It was a tie. All eyes turned to Caesar Rodney. The famous rider cleared his throat, and many a patriot heart beat with pride as he declared in firm tone: "The voice of my constituents and of all sensible and honest men, I believe, is in favor of independence, and my own judgment concurs with them; therefore I vote for the Declaration."

And so Caesar Rodney by his famous ride and by his noble vote helped to settle the question of independence and insured the future celebrations of the Fourth of July.

THE CODE OF HONOR.

Dwelling as it Was in France in the Time of Richelieu.

The passion for dueling, which had cost France, it was said, between 7,000 and 8,000 lives during the twenty years of Henry IV's reign, was at its height when his son came to the throne. The council of Trent in 1545 had solemnly condemned the practice of single combat, impartially including principals, seconds and spectators in its penalty of excommunication. In 1602 an edict of Henry pronounced the "damnable custom of dueling" interdicted by the "corruption of the century" to be the cause of so many pitiful accidents, to the extreme regret and displeasure of the king and to the irreparable damage of the state. "That we should count ourselves unworthy to hold the scepter if we delayed to repress the enormity of this crime."

A whole series of edicts followed to the same effect, but it was easier to make edicts than to enforce them. Degradation, imprisonment, confiscation of property, loss of civil rights and death were the penalties attached to the infringement of the laws against dueling, and still the practice prevailed. In 1623 Richelieu published a milder form of prohibition. The first offense was no longer capital, a third only of the offender's property was to be confiscated, and the judges were permitted to recognize extenuating circumstances.

A few months later the Comte de Bouville thought it to test the minister's patience in this direction. The Place Royale had long been a favorite dueling ground, and De Bouville traveled from Brussels to fight his twenty-second duel here, in the heart of Paris, in deliberate defiance of the king's authority. The result was not encouraging. Montmorency thought he was the culprit went with his second to the scaffold, and the marked decrease from that time in the number of duels may be attributed either to the moderation used in framing the law or to the inexorable resolution with which it was enforced.—Macmillan's Magazine.

RUSSIAN PROVERBS.

Dr. Holmes' Revenge.

When "The Last Leaf" was published by Oliver Wendell Holmes a critic attacked it savagely and cruelly. Dr. Holmes, though imperturbed by friends, did nothing in revenge. He waited for time to avenge him, which time did liberally. The critic fell upon evil days and ended his existence with suicide. The only morsel of personal revenge which the good doctor allowed himself was to cut out the paragraph about his enemy's career and paste it in his scrapbook on the same page which contained the original criticism and the announcements of the successive editions of the poem. This was a mild revenge, but even this was unworthy of Dr. Holmes.

Seemed to Have Him Cornered.

The teacher was discoursing to the class on the wonders of nature. "Take the familiar illustration of the sting of a wasp," he said, "as compared with the finest needle. When examined through a microscope the sting is still sharp, smooth and polished, while the needle appears blunt and rough. "It is so with everything. The works of nature are infinitely superior to those of art. Try how we may, we cannot improve on nature."

ST. SWITHIN AND RAIN.

The Legend of the Chapel Over the Bishop's Grave.

The superstitions referring to particular days are very numerous. The legend of St. Swithin is an example that will occur to every one.

St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain. For forty days will rain be vain. St. Swithin's day, if thou be fair, For forty days 'twill rain be fair.

St. Swithin, bishop of Winchester, according to the author of "The Popular Antiquities," was a man equally noted for uprighteness and humility. So far did he carry the latter virtue that on his deathbed he requested to be buried not within the church, but outside the churchyard on the north of the sacred building, where his corpse might receive the eavesdroppings from the feet of passersby. His lowly request was complied with, and in this neglected spot his remains repose till about 100 years afterward, when a fit of pious indignation seized the clergy as the fact that the body of so holy a clergyman should be so exposed was considered such a position, and on an appointed day they all assembled to convey it with great pomp to the adjoining cathedral of Winchester. When they were about to commence the journey a heavy rain burst forth and continued without intermission for the forty succeeding days. The monks interpreted this tempest as a warning from heaven of the blasphemous nature of their attempt to contravene the direction of St. Swithin, and instead of disturbing his remains they erected a chapel over his grave. "St. Swithin is christening the apples" is the more potent way of describing St. Swithin's rain.

CHINESE ART IN STONE.

Its Best Examples and Some of its Important Defects.

The spirit of purely Chinese art in stone is shown in work such as the great colossal figures of animals and warriors which flank the approach to the tombs of the Ming dynasty and in the perfectly plain structures designed for the tombs of the present dynasty.

These are composed of enormous blocks of stone brought with infinite labor from distant quarries over roads and bridges which are hardly capable of sustaining ordinary cart traffic and have always to be specially prepared to prevent the great weights causing their collapse.

The same admiration for the employment of huge blocks of stone is seen in the case of the bridges over the rivers along the coast of South Fukien, where the stone slabs used in the construction occasionally measure sixty feet in length and are estimated to weigh nearly 120 tons, and the bridges themselves have a length of 1,000 to 2,000 yards.

In almost all cases where the buildings are not of solid construction the weight of the blocks employed has placed a strain upon the supports which the architect's skill was not competent to provide against, and with the lapse of time the melancholy spectacle is seen of slabs fallen from their places and of noble and costly structures approaching ruin. In some cases the interdependence of the arches leads to the same result. One notable instance of this occurred during Colonel Gordon's campaign against the Taipings, when the fall of the passage of his small steamers it was necessary to make a gap in a bridge of over twenty arches, and arch after arch collapsed immediately after the passage of his small flotilla.—London Saturday Review.

AVERAGE HUMANITY.

Most People Are Not Very Good Nor Yet Very Bad.

What do we mean by a good man or a bad one, a good woman or a bad one? Most people, like the young man in the song, are "not very good, nor yet very bad." We move about the pastures of life in huge herds, and all do the same things at the same times and for the same reasons. "Forty feeding like one." Are we mean? Well, we have done some mean things in our time. Are we generous? Occasionally we are. Were we good sons or dutiful daughters? We have both honored and dishonored our parents, who in their turn had done the same by theirs. Do we melt at the sight of misery? Indeed we do. Do we forget all about it when we have turned the corner? Frequently that is so. Do we expect to be put to open shame at the great day of judgment? We should be terribly frightened for the first time made public our little affairs may fall to attract much notice. Judged by the standards of humanity, few people are either good or bad. "I have not been a great sinner," said the dying Nelson; nor had he—be had only been made a great fool by a woman. Mankind is all tarred with the same brush, though some who chance to be corrected have got more than their share of the tar. The biography of a celebrated man usually reminds me of the outside of a coast guardman's cottage—all tar and whitewash.—Essays of Augustine Birrell.

Budapest.

"Americans know absolutely nothing of one of the greatest cities of all Europe," said a returned traveler. "I refer to Budapest. Do you believe it has over three-quarters of a million inhabitants and is foremost in many of the arts and sciences? Take my word for it. Why, it has a university with nearly 5,000 students and 230 professors. The trolley was developed in Budapest. Most of the population is Magyar. Budapest has the finest Jewish synagogue in the empire. The Danube, dividing Buda from Pest, is a beautiful stream spanned by magnificent bridges. The largest electrical works in Europe are in this wonderful city."—New York Press.

The Crab as a Fisherman.

The crab sometimes catches a fish, and it catches it without hook and line. It lies in wait, perhaps in some creek, with its jaws extended in front and open. Perhaps a school of killies comes along, and it may be that a killie on the outskirts of the school may swim unsuspectingly along through the clear water between the upper and lower parts of one of the motionless open claws of the crab. When it is well within them the claw suddenly snaps together and that particular little killie goes no farther.

Literary Genius.

"Why is genius so often misunderstood?" asked the literary person. "Probably," answered the man who doesn't care for poetry, "it's because genius so frequently fails to talk plainly."—Exchange.

ROBERT WARNOCK DEAD.

The death of Robert Warnock does not come as a surprise to our people, but nevertheless it came as a shock to the entire community, because first, he was one who has resided here many years and because he was a man that to know was to like. Great big hearted, upright, honest, good natured, cheerful, manly man, one who despite a decided allergy had a kind word and she-ral-antle for every man, woman or child of his acquaintance, a friend of children or the aged, ever ready to go out of his way and never too busy to stop and cheer the heart or soothe the pain of one of these, and it didn't matter to him whether they were rich or poor, all were alike to him. In his death his wife and daughter lose a loving husband and devoted father and the community one of its best citizens, one whose worth is not measured by words or wealth, but by deeds of kindness and acts of love that will cause his memory to live and be revered when many others of greater pretensions will have been forgotten.

Robert Q. Warnock was born in Warren, Ohio, April 21, 1855, and died at his home in Wayne, Nebraska, Wednesday morning, January 3, 1906, aged 52 years, 8 months and 10 days. He moved with his parents to Iowa in 1869 and was married May 24, 1882, came to Nebraska in 1886 and to Wayne county in 1887 and has resided here ever since. For several years he had been a sufferer with bowel trouble but even by himself the seriousness of the disease was not suspected until a few weeks ago when he went to a hospital at Sioux City and had an operation performed, when it was found to be tuberculosis of the bowels and this disease it was that finally caused his death. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife and daughter, Elsie and two brothers and two sisters and a circle of friends that can only be numbered by his acquaintanceship and it was large. The funeral will take place at the Baptist church tomorrow (Friday, January 5,) at 11 o'clock, a. m., Rev. Duley conducting the services.

John Liveringhouse has been doing some real estate business within the past few days. He sold his half section in Plum Creek to three parties: Philip Greenwald, Henry Bierman and Nick Deink'iz, the two first getting an eighty each and the latter the quarter section, the price paid being $35 per acre. After John had concluded the sale he turned around and bought the Jones half section two miles south of town for $63.50 per acre.

Olaf and Chris Hansen and Wilhelm Larson left Carroll Wednesday for Denmark. There don't seem to be much in an item of that kind, but there is more to it than appears at first glance. In the first place these three young men left Denmark less than three years ago and arrived in this country with no capital save a few musoles and a desire to labor honestly for the men who hired them, and for the past year they rented land and farmed for themselves and have prospered so well as to enable them to take their journey, and they don't have to take steerage either, and it is said that when they return to America three young ladies will accompany them as their wives.

Waco Herrall, a young man about twenty-three years of age, was the victim on Monday of the rather careless handling of a revolver by a companion and at present it is difficult to tell what the final outcome will be. Mr. Herrall had enrolled at the college for the winter term and was in his room at Mrs. Roy Olmsted's, unpacking his trunk and among other things he took out of the trunk was a self-acting loading revolver which he laid down and proceeded with his unpacking when a companion who was in the room picked up the gun and was cautioned by Herrall to be careful as the gun was loaded, but the warning seems to have been in vain for in some manner the gun was discharged and Herrall, who was stooping over the trunk with his back to the man with the gun, received the ball in the right hip, causing him an extremely ugly wound. Surgeon's attempted to locate the ball, but were unable and Tuesday forenoon the unfortunate young man was brought to Dr. Leisinger's office and the x-ray machine brought into play to locate the ball, but failed to do so. Yesterday morning Dr. Williams and Leisinger made an incision into young Herrall's hip in search of the bullet, but did not locate it, and decided not to probe farther unless it became necessary to do so. It is thought the bullet penetrated the hip and lodged in the muscle. The boy passed a restless night at night, but feels better this morning and there seems to be no occasion for alarm over his condition.

Glen, the 12-year old son of O. E. Gildersleeve of Plum Creek, met with an accident last Wednesday that might easily have resulted seriously. Among the speakers is Henry Wallace, editor of Wallace's Farmer, one of the leading farm publications of the country, and to hear Wallace alone will be a rare treat. D. P. Ashburn, of Gibbon, Nebraska, the specialist on corn breeding and selection, is another of the speakers and T. G. Ferguson, the authority on potato raising, is another. Miss Bouton, director of domestic science in the university of Nebraska, is also to be present. Besides these there will be an array of other good talent and you are cordially invited to so arrange your affairs as to be present.

Miss Carter, district secretary of the Nebraska Children's Home Society, met with the local board on Sunday afternoon at the Presbyterian church, at which meeting E. P. Wilson was elected president and Mrs. J. M. Pile, vice president to fill vacancies. The members of the present board are: E. P. Wilson, Mrs. Ringer, J. W. Barlett, O. A. King, Mrs. J. M. Pile, Mrs. E. B. Young, F. H. Patisco and A. R. Davis.

Farmers looking for good grade stock will do well to attend the sale of F. M. Hooper on January 30. For years Mr. Hooper has been breeding high grade cattle from some of the very best Short-horn families and today has staid with some of the finest of blue blood in their veins. At this sale Mr. Hooper will sell twenty seven head of cattle, seven of which are registered, the other twenty being high grade. The seven head consist of six pure bred cows and one pure bred bull, all carrying from two to three Scotch tops. The bull to be offered is Lillian's Lad got by Merry Lad by Merry Hampton and on the dam's side out of Lillian by Frederick Hanged. This bull it will be seen, carries three Scotch tops. Lillian's Lad is a 1450 pound 2-year-old bull, straight in his lines, of good depth and admirable width in front, a bit high set but wide throughout and with a deep red color and a mellow, mazy coat and side, a bull that is a bull all through and should make a good herd leader for some farmer. Two of the cows to be sold are Merry's Maid and Spruce Hill Rose 2nd. The former cow is carrying three Scotch tops while the latter is a large, red cow carrying two Scotch tops, both good individuals. These three animals named are but examples of the registered stock and it may be readily surmised that the grades carrying these blood and individuality would be high also.

GILHOOLY AND SIX OTHERS CONVICTED IN CHICAGO.

Five officials of the Carriage and Wagon Workers' Union of Chicago and two of their alleged hired slugs, who have been on trial in the criminal court for conspiracy, were found guilty Friday night and sentenced to terms in the penitentiary. The severest penalty was inflicted on Charles Gilhooley, leader of the alleged gang of slugs. Besides receiving a sentence to the penitentiary he was also fined $2,000.

The other union men who were found guilty were Henry Newman, financial secretary of the Carriage Wagon Workers' Union; Charles Casey, secretary of the union; Edward Shields, recording secretary; Charles H. Deutsch, member of the executive board; John Heiden, member of the executive board; and Margus Lohney, one of the alleged hired slugs.

Frank Novak, another member of the executive board, was found not guilty. The specific case on which the men were tried is only one of many similar instances that have occurred in Chicago within the last few years. Last April, while Christopher J. Carlstrom, a non-union carriage worker, was returning home from work in factory where a strike was in progress, he was attacked by two men and severely injured. He died two weeks later from pneumonia.

The trial was held in the city hall, and was one of the most sensational in the history of the city. It attracted a large crowd of spectators, and the trial was held in the city hall, and was one of the most sensational in the history of the city.

IN TOW FOR MANILA.

Gigantic Dock "Dewey" Starts on a Perilous Trip.

The gigantic dry dock "Dewey" made an auspicious start from Annapolis, Md., Thursday afternoon on its 14,000-mile trip to the Philippine Islands under the direction of Commander H. H. Hoxley, U. S. N. The start was made at 2:45 and at 9 o'clock the lights on the dock could be seen at a distance of eight or nine miles below Solomons Island, the starting point. Three vessels in tandem are towing the Dewey. Next to the dock is the collier Brutus, then the collier Casper and in front is the tug Potomac.

Commander Hoxley will have his quarters on the Casper, but his headquarters will be on the dock and his attendants. The huge tow line was dropped over from the Dewey at 11:30 Thursday morning, taken aboard the Brutus and made fast just as noon. Chief Boatwain Philip Mullin, U. S. N., had direct control of securing all the towing apparatus, the whole affair being under the control of the signal of Commander Hoxley from the Casper.

The Dewey will be the subject of deep concern to the navy department and to every American sailor until she safely drops anchor in the quiet waters of Subic Bay, for many naval officers say they are really very doubtful whether the trip can be made in safety. The Havana floating dock was towed down to that part from Scotland, but that voyage was short in comparison with that lying before the Dewey, and the perils of the way were much fewer, with many more chances to make safe harbors in case of bad weather and to enable the boats to take on coal.

The tow that most nearly approximated the Dewey in American history was that of the big double turreted monitor Miantonomah in 1897. She was then the very latest type of naval architecture and was sent across the Atlantic and into the Mediterranean as an "show ship" to give the Europeans an idea of how far ahead of them the Americans had gotten as a result of the sea lighting of the civil war.

MOSCOW LINES CUT.

Is Fear that Situation Has Turned for the Worse.

The Associated Press correspondent at Moscow succeeded in getting the St. Petersburg bureau by telephone Wednesday evening, but he had only uttered the words, "I am going to tell you a horrible story," when he was cut off.

Since then nothing has been heard from the correspondent. The Semenovskiy regiment of guards was dispatched to Moscow by train Wednesday night. This is considered rather ominous.

According to information received by the revolutionary papers at St. Petersburg an armed rebellion on a large scale has been planned in Poland. The socialist and revolutionary, encouraged by the success of the insurgents in the Baltic provinces and of the situation in Moscow and in Russia generally, have decided that the moment has come to try to cast off the yoke of the autocracy.

The tactics to be followed are the same as those adopted at Moscow, the rising to be preceded by a general strike, which already has practically come into operation, bringing about half the railroads in Poland to a standstill.

An open rebellion in Poland would immensely complicate the situation for the government, for if it would gain sufficient headway to warrant reasonable hope of success it would probably draw in the entire population, and the government would have to reconquer the country.

The Associated Press learns that Mr. Meyer, the American ambassador, made representations to the Russian government regarding the danger to life and property of the protection of the property and employees of the New Air Bank Company at Lubetzki, an industrial town near Moscow, and that he was promised that the protection desired would be given immediately in case of emergency.

This perhaps accounts for the prompt action of Gen. Douhassoff, governor general at Moscow, in dispatching a squadron of dragoons to Lubetzki Tuesday.

It also is learned that there is fear that the insurgents would attempt to seize the works of the company, which contain a large stock of explosives, the company having been engaged in the manufacture of shrapnel for the Russian government during the war.

SEEKS A DIVORCE.

Bob Fitzsimmons' Wife Joins the Sioux Falls Colony. A decided sensation was created at Sioux Falls, S. D., Wednesday when it became known that Mrs. Robert Fitzsimmons, who was generally supposed to be in Europe studying vocal music, had become a member of the Sioux Falls colony.

The belief that she was abroad appeared to be confirmed by an interview a day or two ago with Maj. Charles Joseph Slay Miller, of the Pennsylvania National Guard, who may be made the defendant in an action for $100,000 for alienating the affections of Mrs. Fitzsimmons, and who stated that he had not seen Mrs. Fitzsimmons since last June, when she alleged he escorted her to the steamer at New York and saw her safely off for Paris.

But notwithstanding this claim, there is not the slightest doubt that Mrs. Fitzsimmons is now in Sioux Falls, and that her object is to secure a divorce from her prize-fighter husband.

LOWER BRANCH TIRED OF SENATE DOMINATION.

Will Imbibe the Spirit of Speaker Cannon, Tawney and Hepburn. Leaders Who Are Old in Membership but New in Influence.

Washington correspondent: THE HOUSE is to be a fighting Congress, according to those who are watching conditions closely in Washington.

The strong men of both Senate and House will have their hands full. In the House of Representatives the new men of the Cannon regime are pushing forward more aggressively than ever and will have an important part in the fighting. They will divide honors with the older leaders, who, because of their long tenure in high places, are sometimes disrespectfully called the "dinosaur" of the House.

Col. Peter Hepburn. Most prominent of the men whom Speaker Cannon brings forward is Col. Peter Hepburn, of Iowa, usually called "Col. Pete." He has had an interesting career, for he is not a young man nor even a new man in Congress, being now only in his thirtieth year.

On two subjects Hepburn is the strongest ally in the House. He is against civil service and against river and harbor appropriations. Perhaps his views on the former are based on observation made during his service as solicitor of the treasury in the Harrison administration. His con-

democratic river and harbor appropriations does not hurt him in the estimation of his constituents, because there is no navigation in his district. Hepburn was born at Westfield, Ohio, in 1853, and was taken to Iowa, then a territory, in 1841. He was educated in the public schools of the territory and in a private office. Then he studied law. He was admitted to the bar in 1874. He served as captain in the Iowa Cavalry during the Civil War. He is 72 years old, and this is the tenth Congress of which he has been a member. For two or three years he did not speak in Congress, and it is perhaps true that there is still no love lost between them. In spite of this, each respects the ability and position of the other. There is another such fighter in either house of the Congress as Colonel Pete. He has a command of irony and sarcasm and can use it so bitterly and effectively joined with ridicule that many a brave floor fighter quails before him. Mr. Cannon deliberated when he became speaker of the House. For months he and Colonel Hepburn had not been friends. He made up his mind that it was better to have such a man with him than against him, and so he consented to a reconciliation, which was eagerly arranged by mutual friends. Hepburn is chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and in that position will have charge of the administration railroad rate regulation legislation. He will mix up in every other fight of importance. This is inevitable, partly because he is naturally a fighter and partly because he has had so wide and broad legislative experience, and has such backing of good judgment and common sense that he will be drafted whenever there is to be anything of importance doing.

BACKED BY MILLIONS.

The Lobby Against Arizona Statehood is Very Powerful.

Lobbies are thick in the corridors of the big, white, marble-clad halls of the United States Capitol. But the most strenuous and dangerous, as well as the most picturesque lobby of all, is the mine owners' lobby from Arizona, fighting statehood for that territory. It is picturesque because of the bold methods its employers employ, because it has at least two United States Senators among its backers, and because it is not a lobby of big game but of big game. They are lords of the estate. Naturally they do not want to run any risks by a change to statehood. These mining corporations have had things their own way all along the line, but in no particular so emphatically as in the assessed valuation of their property upon which they are called to pay taxes.

A BLACKSMITH STATESMAN.

The holder of which is generally called the watchdog of the treasury. He is acquainted with all the members of the House, for he has been in the party "whirl" and has had charge of the speakers in professional campaigns. He is a Quaker by birth, 50 years old, and served a long apprenticeship in his father's blacksmith shop. Later he followed the machinist's trade for many years, going to Winona, Minn., when he was 22 and following his occupation there of blacksmith and machines. Seeding in the new country opportunities for lawyers he studied Blackstone after founding all day on iron and steel and at the age of 27 was admitted to the bar. He took a course later in the law school of Wisconsin University. In 1880 he was elected State Senator in Minnesota, two years later was sent to Congress and has been there ever since.

DEAN OF THE SENATE.

Senator Allison Has Entered on Forty-third Year of His Service. Mr. Allison entered the House of Representatives in 1855, and served there for two years in the Senate from 1857 to 1859. He died in January of that year. He had lived and served in the Senate for a total of 43 years.

LABOR OPPOSED YEARS AGO.

All the writers on the early labor movement agree that the working people in the early history of the nation had a hard row to hoe. Here is what one writer says: "The length of a working day in 1825 varied from twelve to fifteen hours. The New England mills generally ran thirteen hours a day the year round. The regulations of the factories were cruel and oppressive to a degree. Operatives were taxed by the company for the support of religion. Habitual absence from church was punished by the Lowell Manufacturing Company with dismissal from employment and in other respects the life of the employees outside the factories was regulated as well as their life within them. Windows were nailed down and the operatives deprived of fresh air. A case of rebellion on the part of 1,000 women on account of tyrannical and oppressive treatment is recorded.

A DISASTROUS SEASON.

Navigation for the year on the Great Lakes has been one of unexampled hardship and disaster to all concerned. The total value of vessels lost is placed at $3,425,000, and of cargoes at $750,000, which is greater than ever before recorded.

PRES. MORALES.

When news reached Washington that a revolution had broken out in Santo Domingo, that President Morales had fled his capital; that two factions were fighting and that no one had any idea that any sort of government existed on the island, there was a manifest disposition of the administration here to wash its hands of the whole matter. It is admitted that if Morales is driven out and if the island is to be disturbed by a long revolution, the schemes of President Roosevelt to continue the modern vivand and collect the customs must fail.

This government apparently has abandoned Morales to his fate. The intention of the President seems to be only to take such steps as will protect the lives of the American receivers, clerks, collectors and others who have been loaned to Morales and commissioned by him.

President Carlos F. Morales, of Santo Domingo, who fled from his capital and is a fugitive from the wrath of the revolutionists, is a product of one of the many revolutions peculiar to Latin America. He is not yet 40, was born at Porto Plata, in the island, was educated for a priest, and for eight years followed that calling. He then turned his attention to the politics of his district, little country, served under Jimenez and Wos y Gil, and on two occasions was exiled for plotting against the government. He had participated in six unsuccessful revolutions, when, in October, 1903, he led an attack on the then President Wos y Gil, and being successful, declared himself dictator and later president. He claims to be friendly to the United States, but has always resented the interference of this country in the affairs of the islands.

LABOR OPPOSED YEARS AGO.

All the writers on the early labor movement agree that the working people in the early history of the nation had a hard row to hoe. Here is what one writer says: "The length of a working day in 1825 varied from twelve to fifteen hours. The New England mills generally ran thirteen hours a day the year round. The regulations of the factories were cruel and oppressive to a degree. Operatives were taxed by the company for the support of religion. Habitual absence from church was punished by the Lowell Manufacturing Company with dismissal from employment and in other respects the life of the employees outside the factories was regulated as well as their life within them. Windows were nailed down and the operatives deprived of fresh air. A case of rebellion on the part of 1,000 women on account of tyrannical and oppressive treatment is recorded.

The play of Julius Caesar is more or less familiar to everyone but more especially is this true of every high school student in the country. It is doubtful whether Shakespeare ever penned anything more beautiful. The forthcoming presentation of this famous tragedy at the opera house January 8, 1906, by Sanford Dodge and his company will no doubt arouse unusual interest here as it has done elsewhere. The version used is the same as that played by the late Edwin Booth, and the original text is strictly adhered to. The play is divided into six acts and eleven scenes. New and incidental music has been composed for the production, and nothing has been omitted to make this a complete and perfect production in every detail. Do not miss the opportunity of seeing the theatrical event of the season.

Flour Flour Flour

On December 2 we made a special flour sale and gave flour away at $1.20 per sack and it was a grand success. We were so well pleased with the result that on January 6, 1906 we are going to make another sale. Our reason for making these flour sales is to introduce the RIGHT KIND of flour.

- 1 It is made at Westbrook, Minnesota, in the Right Kind of a territory to get good milling wheat.
- 2 It is made at the Right Kind of a mill.
- 3 It is made by the Right Kind of a miller who knows how to make the RIGHT KIND OF FLOUR.

These are a few reasons why we want to place our flour with the Right Kind of people. Watch for our ad. for it will be one day only and it will be the Right Kind of a price. Remember our motto, Honesty, Liberality and Justice.

Thanking you for the past favors, we remain as ever.
