WAYNE IN BIG CIRCUIT

Dates of Fair Fixed for August 13 to 18.

BEST OF CLASSES DESIGNATED

Purses to be $400.00 Each, so Says Nebraska Circuit of Which Wayne is Now a Member.

The annual meeting of the Nebraska Speed association was held at Omaha Saturday, January 20, and from Sunday's Omaha Bee we take the following account of the meeting:

"The affairs of the association are most prosperous, all the towns being winners last year with possibly one exception. Friend and York have dropped out and the new towns are Wayne, Randolph and Hastings.

"Tekamah, Fremont, Lincoln, Auburn, Beatrice and Wymore were represented at the meeting as were also the new towns of Hastings, Wayne and Randolph. N. J. Rouin, of Fremont; F. E. Kimball, of Beatrice, and C. M. Buck, of Auburn, were appointed a committee on credentials and later reported that Tekamah, Fremont, Lincoln, Auburn, Beatrice and Wymore were represented, had filed credentials and were entitled to membership, which was accepted.

"C. M. Buck, of Auburn was chosen president and C. B. Swan, of the same town, secretary by a unanimous vote. Rouin, of Fremont; Latta, of Tekamah, and Kimball, of Beatrice, were made a committee to fix dates for the circuit and to recommend classes and purses. Their report was adopted by a unanimous vote and fixes the following meetings: Auburn, July 10 to 13; Wymore, July 17 to 20; Beatrice, July 24 to 27; Fremont, July 31 to August 3; Tekamah, August 7 to 10; Wayne, August 14 to 17; Randolph, August 21 to 24; Hastings, August 29 to 31; Lincoln, September 3 to 7.

"Wayne, Randolph and Hastings, which had accepted their dates, were made members of the circuit.

"Classes and purses were adopted as follows: Trotting, 2:17, 2:22, 2:27; 2:35; pacing, 2:10, 2:15, 2:22, 2:30; running, three-quarters, five-eighths and one-half mile, purses $50. Each member has the option of putting on the running races or not. Minimum purses for harness races are $100, but at Lincoln there will be several $1,000 and some $2,000 purses. All harness races to be at three in five.

"N. J. Rouin introduced the following, which was adopted: Resolved, That the association extend a unanimous vote of thanks to the retiring president, B. R. Latta, and to Secretary J. R. Sutherland for efficient services rendered in past years, and that this resolution be placed on the records of this association."

"President Buck, C. H. Rudge and W. R. Mellor, secretary of the state fair, were made a committee to arrange with the railroads of Nebraska for fair treatment and liberal rates for the shipment of horses through the circuit.

"The secretaries for the ensuing year are as follows: Auburn, C. B. Swan; Wymore, G. Hulshizer; Beatrice, H. V. Biesen; Fremont, N. J. Rouin; Tekamah, J. R. Sutherland; Wayne, C. M. Craven; Randolph, L. F. Holt; Hastings, J. D. Mines; Lincoln, W. R. Mellor.

"It was agreed that entries should close in blocks of three ten days before the first meeting in the respective sections. Assessment for advertising and incidental expenses was fixed at $50 per member and must be paid on or before March 1. It was agreed that no change in dates can be made without the consent of the majority of present members.

"O. H. Rudge, W. P. McCreary and N. J. Rouin were made the executive committee to adjust any difficulties that may arise. All side attractions were left with the local secretaries.

"The Interstate fair at Sioux City will be invited to work in conjunction with the Nebraska circuit. Their meeting follows the close of the state fair.

"Budd Latta, the retiring president, said: 'Last year was most successful and I think that we could possibly have raised the purses to $500 with safety, as the state was never as prosperous as now. We all hope Omaha will take a date, as it would pay out here and help the circuit besides.'"

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

A Fullerton newspaper man has sold his business and joined the Salvation army. We feel sorry for him.

Art Campbell who has been visiting here for sometime, returned to his home in Holt county Saturday.

M. B. Myers, of Stanton, and Gerald Porter, of Carroll, were over Sunday visitors with friends in Wayne.

Ed. McManiga, now a settler in the Rosebud country, was an arrival Saturday to visit his parents for a few days.

Judge Hunter issued a marriage license Friday to Mr. Wm. Stark and Miss Grace Schultz, both of Stanton county.

Mrs. E. B. Young was called to Osakis, Minn., Friday by the news of the death of her sister, whose death occurred at Seattle and whose funeral was to take place in Osakis Sunday.

O. M. Craven, was at Omaha Saturday attending a meeting of the Nebraska Speed association and succeeded in getting Wayne into the big circuit.

What was doubtless expected to be a fierce fistic encounter fizzled in embryo on Main street Friday noon, neither combatant seeming very anxious to run the chance of getting hurt.

C. A. Chase and J. R. Manning returned Saturday morning from a trip to Hartington. Mr. Chase is convinced that the proposed extension of the railroad beyond Hartington will materialize this year.

Wm. Flisenstock has lately installed a new sewing machine in his harness shop. It is of the highest order of mechanism, being far superior to machines hitherto in use. It is one of the inventions that cannot be bought, but only rented.

The HERALD has been sending out a good many statements to subscribers within the past week and we trust they will be headed, as one of the things necessary in making a good newspaper is to get pay for subscriptions in order to meet bills for material, help, etc.

The friends of H. B. Jones and wife planned a surprise on them Friday evening at their new home in the city that from what we can learn was a success in every sense of the word. An evening of rare pleasure was had by those present and each felt on leaving that it was one of the good places to go when an evening of excellent entertainment was desired.

We hope our readers will not overlook or forget the date of the sow sale of Wm. Bartlett and R. A. Tawney, at the brick livery barn Thursday, February 1. These are Chester White and Duroc-Jersey bred sows, all said to be good ones in prime condition and all safely in pig. It is going to be an opportunity to get the right kind of bogs at your own price. The hogs will be at the barn two days before sale so that all who desire to can examine them.

S. E. Auker has brought into service barb wire fences for telephone lines and was talking over the one from his place to Wayne for the first time Monday. The voice could be heard with perfect distinctness—clearer than usual over telephone lines. Mr. Auker says he uses three and one-quarter miles of barb wire fence and that some of it has been standing for fifteen years. The use of fences very materially reduces the expense of constructing rural lines.

The sale of the Wolf Implement company on Saturday of their big stock of implements proved to be quite an attraction. People who here by the score from the country adjacent to other towns and the bidding was quite spirited, and satisfactory prices realized. This sale was quite widely advertised and the people had reason to believe the firm would do just what they advertised and as a result they came, saw and bought the goods. It was an object lesson on the value of printer's ink when honestly followed up and the spirit of the advertisement properly carried out.

C. A. Chase and J. R. Manning were up in Cedar county last week looking over the country in the neighborhood of Crofton, the town that is to be the terminus of the Omaha's extension from Hartington northwest. Cheney says land prices have gone skyward in anticipation of the building of this road a few miles nearer the Missouri river than its present terminus. He is not sure what effect this action of the railroad people will have on the future of Hartington from a business point of view, but is rather inclined to the belief that it will work some injury in the way of diverting trade, and believes Crofton is likely to have quite a boom.

The report that John Sherbahu had ordered machinery for the manufacture of pressed brick is not true. The only basis for such report was derived from the fact that John had gone to Sioux City one day last week and had taken along some of the clay from his brick yards at this place and had it tested in the machinery for the making of pressed brick and so far the test has been very satisfactory, but it has not been carried far enough yet to justify him in purchasing the manufacturing machinery. The clay has been pressed into brick and appears to be all right, but it has yet to undergo the test of burning, which will be done as soon as Mr. Sherbahu gets out to burn the kiln of brick he now has ready. The pressed brick will be placed in the kiln with the other brick and if they undergo the test of burning in good form, then in all probability the machinery will be purchased and installed. It is hoped the test will be entirely satisfactory as the installation of this machinery would mean much to the labor problem in the city as it would mean steady employment for quite a force of men and that is one of the things necessary in building up a town and making it permanent.

PAIN IN THE JOINTS

Rheumatic Tortures Cease When Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Make New Blood.

The first sign of rheumatism is frequently a pain and swelling in one of the joints. It is not combated in the blood, which is the seat of the disease. The poison spreads, affecting other joints and tissues. Sometimes rheumatism attacks the heart and is quickly fatal.

The one remedy that has cured rheumatism is that it stays cured in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills expel the poison from the blood and restore the system, so that the poisonous matter is passed off as nature intended.

Mrs. I. T. Pitcher, of No. 180 Monmouth street, Newark, N. J., suffered about three years from rheumatism. She began with a queer feeling in my fingers. In a little time it seemed as though the finger joints had lumps on them and I could not get my gloves on. When I tried to get my gloves on, I could not stand up and I did not sleep nights. My suffering was more than I can describe. I took a great deal of medicine, but nothing ever gave me relief until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Read an account of a cure in a case that was exactly like mine and my husband's. Get the name of the pills. I took them for three weeks before I really felt better than they finally cured me.

Mr. Pitcher, who is a veteran and a member of E. D. Stewart Post, No. 207 No. 10 York street, Newark, N. J., writes: "I was afflicted with rheumatism and was compelled to push her about in a wheel chair. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pitcher are enthusiastic in their praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills address the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Preserving Eggs. So many inquiries are being received concerning methods of preserving eggs that more space is given to this subject.

It is probably the best plan known for this purpose. Water-glass is obtained by mixing a solution of good quality soda ash with a solution of soft water, and when it has cooled to such a point as to add one part of the water.

Then have a clean enameled jar and put in it the selected eggs, which should be over a day or two old.

Which should be free from cracks. Dip the water-glass mixture over the eggs, the mixture being about the consistency of thin mud, and set the jars containing them in a cool place.

Add more eggs as desired and also the mixture. The plan being to keep the jars covered. This is the best egg preservative known which is entirely safe.

Tablet to Brave Soldier. There is a tablet in the sulfox home at Melbourne, Australia, to James Barr.

He was a sailor before the war on the ship. On July 15, 1873, the ship was caught in a squall. Marr was astride of the gaff when a great wave broke over the boat and brought down the mainmast.

There was only one chance to save the ship. That was to cut away the mainmast. But Marr clung to the broken mast, and to cut away meant to send him overboard to death. So, looking at the mast in his hands, Marr hesitated. He saw that his death would be the boat's salvation. And he hesitated.

"Cut away, mates! Good-by!" Then he let himself fall into the sea.

The Little Widow. A mighty good sort of Neighbor to have.

A little widow, a neighbor of mine, surrounded me to try Grape-Nuts when my stomach was so weak that it would not retain food of any other kind.

Write a grateful woman, from San Bernardino, Cal.

"I had been ill and confined to my bed with fever and nervous prostration for three long months after the death of my second boy. We were in despair until the little widow's advice brought relief."

"I then Grape-Nuts food from the little widow, and in an incredibly short time I gave me such strength that I could leave my bed and enjoy my life as weight increased from 95 to 115 pounds. I never had attended to my health and I felt ready for anything. My neighbors were still so weak when they heard that Grape-Nuts alone had brought the change."

"My 4-year-old boy had eczema, very bad, last spring and lost his appetite entirely, which made him cross and nervous. I put him on a diet of Grape-Nuts, which he relished at once. He improved from the beginning, the eczema disappeared and now he is fat and healthy with a delightfully clear skin."

"I will willingly answer all inquiries. Write to: Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich."

THE RED STORM Or the Days of Daniel Boone

By JOEL ROBINSON

CHAPTER III.

Allan Norwood, with a few hardy adventurers, had floated down the Ohio and Kentucky in boats and reached, after encountering innumerable perils, the vicinity of the new settlements. Leary, Allan and myself, who had been together for about three days of toil and danger, our hero took his rifle and sallied forth to explore the country a little and learn how near they might be to Boonesborough and Harrodsburg, when he accidentally became a party to the scene between Rosalthe Alston and Le Blant. Allan was the son of a wealthy farmer and had received a very liberal education. Naturally bold and adventurous, he felt a strong repugnance to any of the learned professions. He longed for a life of activity. Accounts were daily reaching Ohio, through various channels, of the suffering and romantic adventures of Daniel Boone, Benjamin Logan, John Harro and other pioneers and those remarkable stories made Allan conceive the bold design of penetrating to that wild region, to share in the excitement and danger of a backwoodsman's life.

This resolution being formed and a plan of operation matured, the requisite material, in the shape of enterprising young men, was speedily found to cooperate with him, and the perilous undertaking was achieved.

As Allan walked toward Boonesborough with its spring founder he could not refrain from observing him with deep interest; and he truly appeared to him the most remarkable man of the age; for he had explored alone the mighty fury of the expected savages, who followed his footsteps, and he had the courage to destroy them and prevent him from carrying back to his countrymen the history of the most delightful country under heaven. But thus far he had escaped the deadly hostility of the wild savages, and the man of sleepless nights and weary days, ordained by God to carry civilization into the distant wilderness, now stood before us here with firm foot and lofty brow.

When they reached Boonesborough Norwood paused to examine the manner in which it was constructed. It consisted of a dozen cabins built of heavy logs, ingeniously interlaced at the ends, and separated from each other by partitions of the same material. These cabins were arranged in a circle, the roof being highest on the outside, the roof inclining inward. Strong stockades were raised around these at suitable distance, and in the middle of the cabins block-houses of the most substantial kind were erected. These projected about twenty licks beyond the outer walls of the cabins and stockades, and were amply furnished with food and other provisions, making those observations, remarked: "That the whole must have been the work of considerable labor."

"You are right, young man, but it was not only a work of much labor, but a work often interrupted by sudden attacks of the savages. It reminded me of Nehemiah, building the walls of Jerusalem, when his workmen fought with one hand and held the spear with the other," replied the pioneer; and then led the way to a large gate of logs, upon the built his rifle. Directly footsteps were heard and a voice asked:

"If you are one of our colored fellows," remarked Boone to Allan, and then replied to the negro's reasonable inquiry: "It is me, Andrew."

"I don't know any such white fellow," was the immediate response.

"Come, don't keep us waiting; hurry," rejoined Boone.

"But you, Massa Boone?" asked Andrew, in more respectful tone.

The forester replied that it was; the negro opened the door, and the parties entered the inclosure. Allan glanced at Andrew while he was closing the gate, and perceived that he was considerably advanced in life, his woolly hair being gray with age, though his figure was not bowed by the weight of years.

"A faithful, but rather eccentric fellow is Andrew," observed Captain Boone. He then lifted the rude latch and ushered the young hunter into his cabin. A respectable-looking female met him on the threshold, whom he introduced as Mrs. Boone. A young woman of eighteen or twenty he presented as his daughter Elizabeth. Norwood had entertained a hope that the maiden whom he had seen in the morning might prove to be the daughter of the famous pioneer, but when his gaze rested upon Elizabeth Boone, although his feelings were not so far mastered as he had expected, he could not so far master his feelings as to refuse her no attention at the discovery. A lad of about fifteen years of age was cleaning the top of a rifle, and was the forester's son.

Captain Boone informed his family that his guest, who was from the State of Ohio, had come to examine the country, and hoped he would dwell such length of time as to make it worth his while to visit him. Boone responded in an appropriate and kindly manner, and set about making preparations for dinner.

While the meal was being prepared, Allan proceeded to relate the particulars of the morning's adventure, to which his host listened with earnest attention. Verily, the tale was not the least interesting to the young woman and the Frenchman. He asked: "I am quite certain that I heard the latter refer to some danger of an imminent and pressing kind that menaced this settlement, or the neighboring one."

"And you say, moreover, that he wished to extend a party of some kind from here?" continued Boone.

"It was that which caused me to interfere in her behalf; and the promise of secrecy I doubt not had reference to the danger, which threatens you," rejoined Allan.

"This matter may be of the greatest importance to us, Mr. Norwood. Were there no names mentioned, that you can remember," resumed the forester.

"Yes, a name was mentioned which I now recollect. Du Quene, I think it was."

Daniel Boone sprang from his seat with a sudden and angry impulse.

"Du Quene, did you say, sir?" he exclaimed, "when there is indeed danger, for he is an instrument to do us harm. The Indians will rally around him to crush us. I have heard his name; he acts under the authority of the British posts, and has been active in distributing arms and ammunition among the savage tribes."

"Allow me to inquire who this Le Blant is who came so near sending a bullet through my body?" rejoined Allan.

"That question was not easily answered, young man. I need information on the subject myself. It came among us about four weeks ago. He has managed to make himself peculiarly agreeable to Esquire Alston, and that he loves his handsome daughter Rosalthe is no secret among us. The girl fears him. What the secret of his influence is, I have not been able to discover."

"Does Mr. Alston favor the pretensions of the Frenchman?" asked Allan, earnestly.

"Most decidedly. Esquire Alston was formerly a man of wealth, and could indulge in the luxuries of refined life. He also has indubitable claims to a noble ancestry. He married into a distinguished family, and his daughter received an education far superior to that which usually falls to the lot of young ladies. Having lost most of his wealth by an unfortunate investment, he turned his attention to this new country, and had the courage to dare a pioneer's life, but if Esquire Alston has any weak point, it is that his sweet daughter should marry a gentleman."

The conversation was interrupted at that moment by the entrance of Simon Kenton, a man whose name has been mentioned in the annals of our Kentucky history. His face had a frank and honest expression which served as a passport to the good opinion of Allan. The brief ceremony of introduction had scarcely been finished before another individual made his appearance in the hall of the pioneer. This was Joel Logston, a man of extraordinary muscular power, and of whose wonderful exploits tradition is so eloquent. He was favored by one of the largest and ugliest dogs that ever aspired to the friendship of a human being.

On account of his explosive and fiery nature of his disposition his master had bestowed upon him the name of Vesuvius. He was a man of a snappish and fretful temper, given to sudden and dangerous eruptions of the lava of wrath, when it became imperatively necessary for all within a certain area to withdraw themselves speedily to escape instant torment with tooth and nail. This ungovernable man always walked about six licks behind Joel Logston, except when engaged in his favorite pursuit of hunting for or on these occasions he was invariably in advance of everything in the shape of quadruped or biped.

Joel Logston was quite as celebrated for his marvelous narrations and extravagant style as for his physical strength. No man of the three settlements could boast so many and so complete self-possessions and confidence in his own abilities. With this strong proclivity to exaggeration was combined a rough drollery and good nature that made him at all times a very agreeable companion. If Joel had any malice in his heart it manifested itself in putting Andrew in mortal fear by causing Vesuvius to show his teeth and to make his demonstrations toward him. Nor was Andrew the only subject of these curried persecutions. Mr. Alston's colored man, Esquire Elroy, was another martyr to Joel and his mastiff.

While Allan was partaking of the substantial hospitality of the pioneer in the form of excellent venison and other wholesome and palatable viands, Logston amused all the parties by relating some of his recent adventures, in which he asserted, with much modesty, that he had no doubt slain four or five Indians with his own hand, besides doing to death a litter of bears of six months, with their sire and dam. For the truth of this reasonable statement he appealed to Vesuvius, who answered with a growl and expressive yelp. Andrew, who was sitting by, then drew in such a threatening manner that the latter retreated to the farthest corner of the room, rolling his eyes in great alarm.

Simon Kenton, though a braver man in the hour of danger never held a ride, sat silent and reserved as a young maid in his society. He had a keen eye, and he sought the neat figure of Logston, as she moved lightly about the dwelling.

CHAPTER IV.

Rosalthe returned to her fort much depressed and agitated by the singular conduct of Le Blant. Notwithstanding the high place which he occupied in the estimation of her father, she had never valued him as an acquaintance; on the contrary, she had never felt at ease in his society. The cause of her aversion to the high place which he occupied in the estimation of her father, she had never herself understood fully; but it was not the less genuine for that reason. Encouraged by her father's good opinion, he had made declarations at various times of the nature and tendency of which she could not affect to disapprove. Rosalthe, on all such occasions, had given no word of hope, and with a careful regard to his feelings, endeavoring to make known her sentiments without wounding his pride.

The conversation which had transpired on the bank of the river appeared abundantly contradictory to her fears and suspicions. To the young stranger who had appeared, and who she felt truly grateful for the reflection that she had possibly injured him in a quarrel with a dangerous man, she was on the point of making known the state of her feelings to her father, in respect to Le Blant, when he commenced to speak of his own feelings, dwelling particularly upon his gentle manners and the frankness which characterized him in every act in life.

"I esteem him," added Mr. Alston, "for his numerous good qualities—for the kindness of his heart, for the dignity and refinement of his manners and for the truth and nobility which constitute true manhood."

Rosalthe felt her blood mounting tumultuously to her cheeks, and tears of regret filling her eyes. She was much pained that a man of her father's discrimination should be so egregiously misled in the Frenchman's character. But she was misapprehended; Mr. Alston, observing her countenance, and perceiving her to be another cause and remarked, with a meaning smile, that "she need not be confused about the matter, for he fully appreciated her feelings and should not reproach her for anything that might have passed between Le Blant and her, so long as she remained so true to her own nature and was entirely reasonable."

And to make Rosalthe's position more mortifying, Mrs. Alston observed in relation to the subject of her husband's entanglement, that she was a very pleasant gentleman, and she hoped her daughter could be so fortunate as never to form any acquaintance less respectable; and she should not object to her preferences when they were so judiciously made, as in the present instance."

Mr. Alston thus hinted that he was a man of wealth and was about to make a large purchase of land lying on the opposite bank of the Kentucky river. He stated that the idea was a good one, and would prove exceedingly profitable, as it would double the value in a few years the capital invested. Rosalthe perceived by this that her father's mind was filled with a splendid business, which would burst sooner or later and end in a cruel disappointment. Whether her fears manifested the danger and trial in reserve for her or herself, time only could prove; but it was plainly apparent to her that her father's mind was exercised almost unbearably over her father's movements.

It appeared to her that the time had come to speak boldly and reveal all that her promise did not oblige her to lock within her own bosom. She could assure her father that he had completely mistaken her sentiments in regard to Le Blant, and that she disliked him with more real intensity than she was supposed to love him.

While thoughts of this nature were passing rapidly through her mind, the door was opened by Elroy, the colored servant and the subject of her thoughts entered the cabin. He glanced quickly from one to the other, greeting them with his accustomed salutation. He took a seat near Mr. Alston and conversed with him in that regular, agreeable, easy and confidential manner which had so won upon his esteem.

Rosalthe could overbear but little of what was said, but she often caught such words as "land, loans, investment," which induced her to believe that the land speculation was the one under discussion.

Le Blant finally arose and approached our heroine and said to her in a low voice:

"I don't wish to see you from what appeared a pressing danger made me, I fear, somewhat rude. I am happy to say now that I was not correctly informed in regard to Captain Du Quene and his intentions. You may sleep in safety, for Rosalthe, and she assured that there is one who will shield you from Indian cruelty."

"Then you free me from my position?" returned Rosalthe.

"No, gentle Rosalthe," he answered, in his most engaging tones. "I cannot absolve you from your promise; for speaking of the subject might produce unnecessary alarm. Moreover, I design to make further investigation of the matter and learn the real extent of the danger if any exists, your father shall be duly and properly informed of everything. Take your accustomed walks as though nothing had happened, being careful not to go too far away from the fort, and I promise not to interrupt or speak in relation to any subject not agreeable to you. And with me fairly and honestly, you shall not have an occasion to regret it, I assure you."

THE YANKEE SCHOOLMARM.

Southern Tourist's Tribute to Type of Woman in New England.

"I reckon New England will have its schoolmarm as long as its rock-bound coast lasts," said a Southern tourist. "I traveled miles in the first colonies during the last summer and I met these women in towns, at the crossroads, and in the hamlets. I don't mean the present-day schoolmarm, but the precise, colloquial and trim old lady whose active work is done."

"I recall one, and she was a type of many. The trolley car had stopped at a crossroads right out in the country. An elderly woman, whose cheery face illuminated a Quaker bonnet, had faced the motorman."

"She lifted a telescope case to my eye and I assisted her in boarding the car. She thanked me in such a staccato way that I felt as if I were again in Dixie."

"After she had paid her fare she noticed that I was interested in an old trolley which the car was passing. I had asked a fellow passenger the name of the place. He didn't know, but the old schoolmarm knew, and she told me."

"She also mentioned the names of some of the dead—names with which the whole country is familiar. When I thanked her she asked in the most precise manner if I was a stranger in that part of the country. I told her it was my first visit."

"Then she took the role of guide. Not a crossroads that did not have a bit of history. Every farmhouse was familiar."

"I have spent one or more nights in every farmhouse in this country," she said. "I taught school hereabouts for thirty years. Every house contains a bit of history which is not surpassed."

"Just then another farmhouse was passed. It was about a mile from the road. Pointing it out, she said:

"I attended two funerals and two weddings in that house, and I expect very soon to attend another wedding there. I boarded there when I was a teacher, a boy and girl, were my pupils."

"First their mother died and a year later the father. Both are buried in the old graveyard we just passed. The daughter married in the old home-stand and I was her bridesmaid. She would have it that way."

"Then her brother married and as a matter of sentiment his wedding occurred in the same house. I was at that ceremony. His daughter, representing the third generation, is to wed beneath the roof a few weeks hence."

"A little further on the car stopped in the woods. I noticed that the conductor did not give the motorman the bell. The latter knew where to stop."

"The schoolmarm arose from her seat. I was up in an instant, lifted her telescope from the car and then assisted her down. I wish I had a picture of the stately courtesy she made. And I wish I had a photograph cylinder of her correct speech of thanks."

"As I boarded the car I looked back. A girl with the most radiant face I ever saw, in a gown of summer lawn, and with her hair plaited in rustic fashion and tied with blue ribbon, met the schoolmarm and relieved her of the telescope baggage. Then they disappeared on a winding path."

"With this type of woman in the North I do not wonder that the Yankees were good fighters."

Don't tack a fancy name on a kid. It makes him a target for his companions.

FARMS AND FARMERS

London Gardener's Cyc Pear. In a recent issue illustrates a new pear now being introduced by the distinguished pomologist, M. Charles Ballet, Troyes, France. M. Ballet thinks this pear, for which he proposes the name "Rosevee," is destined to bring about a revolution in fruit gardens and orchards.

The tree is said to be a robust grower, and very productive, either as a standard or as a dwarf, grafted on quince stock. The pears grow very large, sometimes measuring over five inches in diameter. The cut is supposed to be about half the natural size of the best fruits. The flesh is snowy white, melting and of a delicate, sweet and agreeable flavor.

The color of the ripe fruit is light yellow shading to lemon, with bright red spots on the sunny side. The season in Northern France is from September 20 to November, being in good eating condition through the whole month of October. M. Ballet has tested it for years, and does not hesitate warmly to recommend it. His great reputation will go far to encourage trials of this sensational variety.—Farm Progress.

What Our Farmers Produce. The American farmer raised in 1905 2,708,000,000 bushels of corn, 746,000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,000,000,000 bushels of oats, 35,000,000 bushels of rye, 150,000,000 bushels of barley, 20,000,000 bushels of flaxseed, 250,000,000 bushels of potatoes, 28,000,000 barrels of apples, 3,000,000 bushels of onions, 910,000 bushels of cranberries, 650,000,000 pounds of rice, 280,000 tons best sugar, 11,000,000 bales of cotton, 58,000,000 tons of hay, 42,000,000 pounds of broom corn and 154,000,000 pounds of tobacco. In addition milk, butter and cheese from 37,570,000 cows, which products alone will be worth in 1906 more than $935,000,000. He values his cows at $482,000,000, to say nothing of the 43,700,000 other cattle, worth in round numbers $663,000,000.

Just to make the figures even up, add another $1,500,000,000 for horses and mules and 47,400,000 sheep and swine in the barns and fields. Next year he expects to handle 1,800,000,000 dozen of eggs.

Wasting Feed. A large proportion of the hay and fodder produced on farms is stacked, but hay stored in the barn will keep in much better condition than when stored in stacks. It is almost impossible to escape loss when it is exposed in stacks. Damaged hay will be wasted by the animals, and there is an additional loss in quantity by exposure that may not occur in the mow. It is better to sell the hay that cannot be stored in the mow than to accept risk of the weather.

Fodder can be as truly wasted when put in the stomach as when trodden under foot. Unboused cattle have a continuous battle for comfort, and all consumption of food shows no result, for the reason that it is used wholly in keeping life. Moreover, they are stunted by their stay at this unwholesome state, and will never show as good results afterward.

Good Corner Post. There are a good many ways to make corner posts, but they are not all good ones. I send a sketch of one which I think is the best I ever saw. Posts on corners and short beams in a line of fence will lean if not braced. This one does not have to be braced, as it braces itself. This is the way it is made. Cut a small tree (size you wish for post) and fork. Cut fork one foot shorter than body. Put post in ground, turn fork on inside corner and place rock under end of prongs. Corner posts made this way will never pull over. To hold fence on banks or hill sides, cut short posts—say three feet long—and dig holes two feet deep above each post. Put in post, then nail plank between short post and fence.—Roscoe Torbett.

Relative Corn Diet. It has been concluded at the Wisconsin experiment station that it is impracticable to raise young pigs on an exclusive corn ration. The feeding trial made awarded animals out of every pig in lot 1, fed exclusively on corn. While they gained some in corn, they did not develop in bone, and as time went on their vitality degenerated. The hair on their bodies became thin and their skin hard and scaly. Toward the end of the trial they were indifferent about eating and showed considerable meanness.

Why Cows "Lose Their Cud." When a cow "loses the cud," or, more correctly, fails to "chew the cud," it is not because she has lost possessed to be about half the natural size of the best fruits. The flesh is snowy white, melting and of a delicate, sweet and agreeable flavor.

The color of the ripe fruit is light yellow shading to lemon, with bright red spots on the sunny side. The season in Northern France is from September 20 to November, being in good eating condition through the whole month of October. M. Ballet has tested it for years, and does not hesitate warmly to recommend it. His great reputation will go far to encourage trials of this sensational variety.—Farm Progress.

White Aylesbury Ducks. The soft water plumage is one of the chief attractions of the Aylesbury breed, and like most white plumage has a tendency to assume a yellow hue if exposed to the sun. The hen will also lose its delicate pink hue and become yellow if exposed to too much sunlight in summer. The bill of the Pekin should be yellow, but the bill of the Aylesbury should be a delicate pink or flesh-color, and birds intended for exhibition must possess this quality or they will suffer at the hands of the judge. Birds raised for exhibition purposes must be guarded against too much exposure to the sunlight in the summer. Of course, these delicate points are of no consequence to the market poultier other than to show the true type of the breed.

For farm purposes the Aylesbury is to be recommended, second only to the Pekin; it possesses the many good qualities of the Pekin, and can be bred with almost the same success. The advantages claimed for Aylesbury are the ease with which it is acclimated, thriving in every country and climate; its early maturity; its great hardiness; its large size; its great prolificacy, and the real beauty which it possesses. Raisers recommend for raising exhibition birds one drake to two ducks, or two drakes to five ducks, all being allowed to run together. Duck raisers, who raise large numbers for market breed them as they do Pekins, using from four to eight females to one male, according to the season of the year. Fresh blood is introduced every year to keep up the size, and breeding stock is seldom kept longer than the second or third year.—Exchange.

Fortunate Farmer. From the annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture, it appears that farm crops in the United States have never before been harvested at such a high general level of production and value as during the present year. Corn has reached its highest production, over 2,700,000,000 bushels, of a total estimated value of $1,216,000,000. Hay comes second, with a value of $935,000,000; cotton is expected to yield $575,000,000; and as to wheat, the short crop of last year is followed by a crop of 684,000,000 bushels, the value of which, $225,000,000, is larger than was ever before reached. It is interesting to notice that the estimated value of milk and butter, $985,000,000, was larger than the value of any crop except corn, and that the produce of eggs was valued at only $6,000,000 less than the large wheat crop.

Inoculation Improves Hay. The Michigan Experiment Station has been investigating the inoculated nodule method in regard to its effect upon the composition of the crop. Many farmers have reported that the presence of the nodules has not increased the bulk of the crop, but the station reports, after analysis, that the nodules increase the amount of protein present. Two areas of soy beans, one with nodules and the other without, no difference in color, height or earliness was noted, nor greater weight of hay.

When analysis was made of the hay it was found the hay from the nodule-bearing plants contained 18.52 per cent of protein, while the hay from non-inoculated plants contained but 0.65 per cent. With cowpeas the experience was similar.

Great Appeal. "I hear that the land of the matinee hat is carrying a side line."

"Yes, he is getting a big salary from a glove factory."

"When the matinee girls begin to apply him, I suppose he will hold up his hands for silence and say: 'Young ladies, all who split their gloves will please patronize Fittens' Glove Company.'"

SORES ON HANDS. Suffered for a Long Time Without Relief—Doctor Afraid to Touch Them—Cured by Cuticura.

"For a long time I suffered with sores on the hands which were itching, painful, and disagreeable. I had three doctors and derived no benefit from any of them. One doctor said he was afraid to touch my hands, so you must know how bad they were; another said I never could be cured; and the third said the sores were caused by the dirt plug of my hands in water in the dye-house where I work. I saw in the papers about the wonderful cures of the Cuticura Remedies and procured some of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. In three days after the application of the Cuticura Ointment my hands began to peel and were better. The sores disappeared and they are now smooth and clean, and I am still working in the dye-house. Mrs. A. E. Maurer, 2319 State St., Chicago, Ill., July 1, 1905."

"No, sah," chuckled the porter, "you know this is de limited. Ebbything about am limited."

General Norris Brown is being nominated for United States senator in the South Platte country.

Absolute integrity, good judgment and perseverance are the requisites mentioned by the late Marshall Field, to insure business success. He possessed those valuable qualities to a marked degree.

Marshall Field was an exception among multi-millionaires in the estimation of the public. He was looked upon as a man of noble qualities, free from suspicion as to methods employed in accumulating wealth, and will be remembered with esteem.

Hon. Geo D. Perkins, editor of the Sioux City Journal, is growing in popularity as a candidate for the republican gubernatorial nomination in Iowa. He is eminently well qualified for the place, and the press of the country would naturally like to see him win.

The railroads are doing effective work for temperance by refusing to carry anyone who drink alcoholic beverages, who visit saloons, or who visit saloons. One seen in a saloon, they are promptly ejected from the service. By such rules, the great transportation companies have largely reduced the frequency of wrecks, and secured a saving of life and property. In addition, they are preventing many human wrecks and contributing to the popularity of sobriety.

The newspapers of republican faith in the state can do their party great good during the time between now and the meeting of the state convention by finding out the position of the various candidates on the railroad question. When the candidate asks you aid get his pledge in black and white that he is not carrying a pass and if pointed out and ejected will not accept or use one. If he won't make a pledge of that kind give him the marble ball. There are plenty of fellows who will lie to you on the proposition, but get them down in black and white and if the time ever comes when you want to bust out their lying brains you will have a club that will do it.

Russell Sage says no man needs more than two suits of clothes and that 38-cent shirts are good enough. We believe his idea about suits is correct. In fact we think we are in luck to possess one suit to one suit. In the matter of shirts, however, Russell does not seem remarkably good taste. His low estimation on shirts leads on to wonder that he tolerates such garments at all. He could effect quite a saving by discarding them altogether. He probably wears out two 39-cent shirts a year, making an annual aggregate waste of 78 cents. That sum would go a long way toward buying one of his two suits of clothes, or if put at interest would add materially to the immense fortune which the laws of nature will require him to leave behind when he journeys into the great beyond.

Many of the newspapers of the country whose columns are largely devoted to live stock interests are quite optimistic in their views as to the outlook for better prices for live stock in the future than have been realized of late. They point to the fact that the cellars of the great packing concerns at the killing centers have much less meat in them than usual, and pretend to believe that the day has arrived when consumption demand has overtaken production and is about to pass it in the race. It is to be hoped their rosy predictions for the future will be fulfilled, but it may be just as well for the present at least, for the "feeders" of the country not to get unhealthily excited over the bulge that has lately been on in prices of fat stuff and go and fill their yards with high-priced stockers. It must be borne in mind that March 1 a tariff goes into effect in Germany that is likely to cut quite a figure in the amount of American meat consumed by the people of that country, and to also bear in mind that just at present the importers of Germany are placing immense orders for shipment prior to the going into effect of this tariff, and this is just now having the effect of boosting prices here on account of the abnormal demand thus brought about. This extraordinary demand will doubtless cease when the tariff goes into effect and then a slump may come in the prices paid by packers. We hope the views of the optimists may be realized, but we have seen so many "feeders" caught in the packers' traps that we are pretty nearly a Miasacraan.

The members of the county board of Dixon county were seized by a terrific fit of economy when they reached the business of awarding the county publishing for the year. The bid of four papers, published in different parts of the county and agreeing to perform the service for the compensation allowed by the statutes for one, was turned down because a fifth paper offered to do the work for one-half the price proposed by the combined four. Disregarding the fact that the combination would render at least four times the service, but contemplating the stupendous sum to be saved by giving the contract to one paper, the board asked for new and individual proposals, as a result of which the Allen News received the contract, agreeing to publish everything free, excepting the delinquent tax list, and in addition giving the county $50, probably for the privilege and fun of doing the work. The News is not blameable for making a fight to win after the combination had been kicked aside by the board, but the latter should and will meet the censure of taxpayers for its parsimonious action in curtailing publicity which might have been had at small extra cost. In line with its disgusting economy we should expect the board to have its bridges hereafter built of cottonwood poles and compel its officers to use penny tablets instead of glazed stationery and bring into vogue other stationery that will save money, whether satisfactory to the public or not. The most creditable combination the papers could make in dealing with such pitifully small potatoes, when they become imbued with a misconceived idea of economy in rendering public service, would be a combined refusal to do the county's publishing.

NAPOLEON'S ESCAPES.

Rockier of Dangers, the Great Soldier Was Often Wounded. In reply to the question in what engagements he considered himself to have been in the greatest danger of losing his life Napoleon once said, "In the commencement of my campaign."

During the last days of his life, when captivity, disappointment and sickness had well nigh completed their work, it is said that the agony of his fatal disease drew from him on many occasions the piteful cry of, "Why did the cannon balls spare me?"

roughed but dirty. In the early part of his career he was utterly reckless of danger while on the battlefield, and this spirit of fearlessness contributed largely to the love and esteem in which he was held by his armies.

As he wished to impress upon his troops the belief that good fortune never deserted him and that, like Achilles, he was well nigh invulnerable, he at times made a secret of his many dangers. He therefore enjoined once for all upon the part of his immediate staff the most absolute silence regarding all circumstances of this nature, for it is almost impossible to calculate the confusion and disorder which would have resulted from the slightest report or the smallest doubt relative to his existence.

Business Training. "That man is a very witty fellow." "Well, he's a chemist. He ought to be." "What has that to do with his wit?" "Because chemists as a class are always ready with retorts." - Baltimore American.

FOUR SIMPLE RULES Follow Them and Health, Happiness and Prosperity Will be Yours.

If one would be healthy, happy and prosperous, follow these four simple rules: (1) Keep the bowels open every day. (2) Chew your food slowly and thoroughly. (3) Avoid indigestible foods. (4) If there are any symptoms of stomach troubles, take Mi-o-na before each meal until cured.

No matter how many years you may have suffered with stomach troubles or how worried by sleeplessness, nervousness, loss of appetite, furred tongue, specks before the eyes, headaches, back-aches, weakness and debility, indigestion or other ills that are caused by a weak stomach, you can be cured by the faithful use of Mi-o-na.

Mi-o-na is not a fanciful experiment, it is not a patent medicine, it is not a cure all, it is a scientific remedy recommended but for one trouble, weakness of the digestive organs. It is a permanent cure, and is sold by E. J. Raymond under a guarantee that it costs nothing unless it does all that is claimed for it.

Don't wait your time on an incubator that you can't leave without attention all day. See J. H. Kate and he will show you the Cypres.

Man's efforts in life are largely directed for the purpose of providing not only a competency for the time when he cannot expect to be a bread winner but also that in case of his being called to quit this stage of action he may leave something to provide for the necessities of those dependent on him. The production period of his life at best is of short duration, and many times with his best endeavors he is unable to provide sufficient, but under the conditions existing today there is no excuse for his having his loved ones unprotected for. The Bankers Union of the World is offering a form of policies to those desiring to provide for the future that cannot fail to be satisfactory to any one who will take the time to examine it, and W. H. Hillmer, a former citizen of this vicinity, is here representing the company, and anyone having the welfare of his loved ones at heart ought to see Mr. Hillmer and have him explain the plan of his company. You can find him at the Union hotel.

DEATH IN FIRE PANIC

EIGHTEEN NEGROES KILLED IN PHILADELPHIA CHURCH.

Stampede Follows Wild Cry of "Fire!" - Victims Trampled to Death - Pastor Appeals in Vain to the Panic-Stricken People.

A wild panic following a loud shriek of "fire" brought death to eighteen colored persons and injuries to nearly two score of others Sunday night in St. Paul's Baptist church on the west side of Eighth Street, between Poplar Street and Girard Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

At the time the disaster occurred not more than 300 persons were in the second floor of the building, which, with the gallery was capable of accommodating 600 to 700. The fire was a trifling one and was extinguished before the fireman arrived.

At the time the disaster occurred not more than 300 persons were in the second floor of the building, which, with the gallery was capable of accommodating 600 to 700. The fire was a trifling one and was extinguished before the fireman arrived.

Death in nearly every case was due to suffocation or trampling.

Following the collection there was to have been a baptism of a man and wife. Some of the colored people, owing to the lateness of the hour, had left the church and others were about to enter.

After the pastor was arranging the altar preparatory to beginning the baptism, a woman in one of the front rows on the left side of the altar gave a loud shriek of "Fire!"

Immediately all those about her were on their feet looking for the blaze. There were a few flames in sight, but there was a great smoke and the whole congregation became panic-stricken.

The pastor by this time realized the seriousness of the situation and in a loud voice, which only added to the confusion, called to the error-stricken people to be seated. No one listened, and despite his frantic appeals a rush started that meant death to many.

FRANCE ANSWERS CASTRO.

It is in the Form of Threatening Warships.

A Washington, D. C. dispatch says that three French warships are now off the Venezuelan coast prepared to deliver the answer to France to President Castro's treatment of M. Talgy, the French representative to Caracas, by a naval demonstration in Venezuelan waters.

Two additional warships will join them as soon as they can make the trip across the Atlantic. Until the demonstration has been initiated the French government will share with the president and Secretary Root the knowledge of the exact form which this expression of her displeasure at President Castro's action will take.

In the meantime the delivery of the situation at Caracas is greatly increased by news which has recently reached Washington from the Venezuelan capital regarding the attitude President Castro now appears to be assuming toward Mr. Russell, the American minister. Unless this attitude is radically modified it may be necessary to dispatch an American warship even nearer the Venezuelan coast than has already been planned.

President Castro will be given to understand that any treatment of an American representative such as that given to M. Talgy will not be tolerated by the Washington government.

The only cause which can be assigned for President Castro's coolness toward Mr. Russell is that the former insists upon regarding as personal matters those which are official matters. Mr. Russell, acting under instructions from Washington, has made to assist a peaceful settlement of the Franco-Venezuelan troubles.

The request of the French government that its interests in Venezuela be looked after by Mr. Russell was immediately granted, for the reason that such a request is invariably granted by a friendly power no matter how difficult the task.

France has adopted a simple program for her treatment of the Venezuelan situation. It provides for an immediate and comprehensive apology by President Castro for his treatment of M. Talgy, which treatment the Paris officials regard as "insulting" and "intolerable." Until this apology is made discussion of the claims and other grievances which France has against Venezuela will be withheld.

CITY HONORS DEAD.

Chicago's Tribute to Memory of Marshall Field.

Funeral services for Marshall Field were held at Chicago Friday at his late home and in the First Presbyterian church. The services at the home were characterized by simplicity and brevity and none but those immediately connected with the family and the household were in attendance.

The services at the church an hour later were attended by many friends of Field. This service, too, was private, admission to the church being gained only by the presentation of a card. In the afternoon memorial services were held in the auditorium, which was packed to the doors by the employees of Marshall Field & Co. Rev. John A. Morrison, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated at all three of the services.

Never before in the history of Chicago has such respect been paid to the memory of a private citizen as was shown Friday to that of Field.

13 MINERS KILLED.

Explosion Causes Disaster in West Virginia Mine.

A Charleston, W. Va., dispatch says: Eighteen men are believed to have been killed in a terrible explosion Thursday in one of the mines of the Detroit and Kanawha Coal Company at Detroit, on Paint Creek, this county, twenty-five miles from here.

That more men were not in the mine at the time of the accident was due to the fact that almost all of the day men men, consisting of miners, loaders and drivers, were eating their dinners on the outside, and thus escaped the fate of their comrades.

The explosion occurred at 12:30 o'clock. The force of the explosion was so great that tons of wreckage and debris were hurled from the mouth of the mine, blocking the entrance and making the work of rescue difficult.

News of the disaster quickly spread to nearby mines and hundreds of men were soon at these mines eager to join in the effort to rescue the entombed miners, if alive or recover their bodies if dead.

The ventilation fan was blown out of position by the explosion and it was not until 4 o'clock in the afternoon that it had been repaired and put back in place. As soon as it was set in motion a fairly good current of air was sent circulating through the entrance. The first rescue party consisting of fifteen men entered the mine at 5:30 o'clock. The work of replacing the fallen brattices and removing the debris which obstructed their progress was slow work.

The first body reached was that of G. P. Neal, which was discovered 150 yards from the entrance. The other men were working much further back than Neal and he has no hope of reaching them until late. Even though the men survived the explosion it is almost certain that they will succumb to the deadly afterdamp.

Mothers, wives and children of the entombed miners crowd about the mouth of the pit and declare they will not leave until they know the fate of their loved ones.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Union Pacific Ice Houses Burn—Big Structures Destroyed Through Workmen's Carelessness—Will Be Rebuilt at Once—Largest in the World.

A North Platte special says: Workmen on the two new ice houses of the Union Pacific Railroad upset a bucket of tar between the two buildings and this caught fire from the lamp which was being used to heat the tar, and immediately an enormous conflagration began, which destroyed more than one-half of the largest ice house in the world. The fire occurred Saturday.

Immediately upon the starting of the fire the alarm was turned in and the firemen of both the city and the Union Pacific were on the ground in a very few minutes. The plant is in the western portion of the city and because of not being adequate for the enormous business of the road, two new additions were being built and were well along completed when the accident occurred. They were of new lumber and the molten tar catching alight started the fire with terrific force, and it was evident from the start that none of the buildings connected could be saved.

The fire burned all the afternoon and evening until the firemen continued to work all night and until the nine large houses, six 31x112 feet each, were utterly and entirely destroyed. These nine buildings stood side by side along the track of the railroad, making a total length of nearly 300 feet and a width of 112 feet by about 40 feet high, and were well constructed at a cost of from $50,000 to $75,000.

All telegraphic connections to the west of here, except the Postal lines, were destroyed by the fire, but the force got out extra wires and surrounded the burning buildings and made new connections.

The capacity of the houses burned was estimated at 32,000 tons of ice and their destruction is complete, although some of the fire was gained. The molting line and the water ponded on the fire by the firemen caused a small river of water as it coursed down the depression of the earth along the railroad tracks. Fully 2,000 people witnessed the fire.

PANIC NARROWLY AVERTED.

Fire in Basement of Oliver Theater at Lincoln During Play.

Fire broke out in the basement of the Oliver theater at Lincoln Wednesday night during the rendition of "Ben Hur." It required several minutes of hard work on the part of the fire department, which arrived promptly, to control the flames, a greater part of the audience. The fire started under a room occupied by a drug store adjoining the theater lobby.

A man with a seat near the door smallest kind, and he heard the signal on the danger. He left his seat hurriedly and started for the doorway with a cry that the building was on fire, but as instinctively felt he should not, not over a dozen heard him. Before he could repeat the cry a policeman grabbed him by the throat and dragged him into the lobby.

A woman, however, being unaware she reached the door and was carried out. Not over half a dozen others felt the theater, a thrilling scene on the stage, opportunity occupying the attention of the crowded house. The fire was confined to one room and the damage was small.

STATE WINS AT LAST.

Can Collect Railroad Taxes on Basis of State Board's Valuation.

Judge M. J. O'Connell, of the court at Omaha, decided the railroad of Nebraska must pay their taxes. Such is the essence of his decision in the Burlington case, which has been fought for the state by Attorney General Brown. This decision will apply also to the Union Pacific and to the collection of taxes for 1905 as well as 1904, of both roads.

This suit was for an injunction against the collection of taxes for the year 1904 on the basis of valuation fixed by the state board of equalization and assessment. Another suit, identical in character, had been brought with relation to the taxes for 1905, and the Union Pacific, as well as the Burlington, had instituted the same suit.

The total assessment for the Burlington and Union Pacific for the two years amounts to $2,656,432. Together they have incurred $1,448,680. The Union Pacific tendered and paid $256,000 in 1904, when its assessment was $348,000, and $275,000, when its assessment amounted to $385,000.

Court in Northwestern Nebraska.

STARK REALITY

By unanimous vote Friday morning the state board of public lands and buildings advised the board of the conduct of the home for the friends which will take from the visiting or advisory board every particle of its power and leave the management of the home in the hands of the superintendent, Mrs. Johnson. This action on the part of the board came about over the frequent objections caused by a disagreement of superintendents and members of visiting boards over the control of state property.

The board put the finishing touch to the old soldiers' home for the same reason, making such a recommendation to the legislature which resulted in the law creating that board being repealed. The board also allowed the contractor erecting the hospital and new barracks at Grand Island $7,625.50 on his contract.

So far this year the Burlington and Union Pacific Railroads have not tried to force onto the state officers the usual annual contests. The Missouri Pacific and the Great Northern, however, came across on time with the little potters and they were returned. The Great Northern remembered Gov. Mickey, Treasurer Mendenhall and Auditor Kault, while the Missouri Pacific sent past Gov. Mickey and Attorney General Brown, Superintendent McFadden received none at all. All the passes so far received by a state officer have been returned. The heads of departments and deputies have come in all right and in some instances the passes are enclosed in handsome black leather cases. It is said this is the first year the Great Northern has sent passes to the officers.

Nebraska's capital city has enjoyed prosperity in a marked degree during the year just ended. An annual review published by one of the local newspapers shows that $2,440,000 was expended during the year on new buildings and public improvements, while a forecast, based on announcements already made, indicates that a much greater sum is to be spent during the year 1906.

The building permit record for the last year shows that over $900,000 was spent on new buildings, most of them erected, the number of the latter being over 900. From every standpoint 1905 was the most prosperous year in Lincoln's history.

By voting to insure the subordinates at the Hastings asylum the state board of public lands and buildings this morning went back to the old order of things which were in vogue years and years ago. Since the Hastings fire a year ago in which several hundred people were killed and under consideration the advisability of insuring these buildings, but nothing was done until Thursday. The outbuilding will be insured for $18,000 at a premium of about 4 per cent. No contract has yet been entered into, but the board has just decided who will write the policy.

Either abolish the office or amend laws by which it will be performed, the duties which it is supposed to perform and for which it was created. The above is the substance of a recommendation which will be made to the next legislature by the head of the department of industrial statistics, commonly known as the deputy labor commissioner. After three years' efforts to get information of interest and value to the people regarding Nebraska's industrial department, he has concluded that the laws are not adequate and therefore should be amended and broadened or the department abolished.

Secretary of State Gulshuf and Land Commissioner Eaton returned from Grand Island Friday morning, where they, with Treasurer Mendenhall, were to inspect the soldiers' home. Both declared the home was never in better condition than under its present management. A new barn has just been completed and the hospital is almost finished, which makes the institution complete insofar as buildings are concerned.

State Superintendent McBrien has issued his official report under the name of C. S. Copey will be recognized by the state department as the county superintendent of Stanton County, notwithstanding that W. H. Hyland, until Jan. 1, superintendent, and at the recent election a defeated candidate for re-election refused to turn over the office and recognize his successor.

A Nebraska organization of alumni of Oberlin University will be formed this year, with the initial meeting and banquet at Lincoln, Feb. 6. President King will be president. The invitation includes not only graduates, but also former students and parents having children attending at Oberlin.

The delegation of Chinese now touring the United States was scheduled to reach Lincoln Jan. 18 and spend the day inspecting the state university and other state institutions.

Gov. Mickey has issued a requisition for the return of a $200,000 of J. C. Morgan, who is wanted there on a charge of appropriating to his own use some $200 belonging to his employer, Joseph Brown. Morgan is now arrested in Cass County, Iowa.

The state board of health met Wednesday afternoon at the residence of J. C. Morgan and sent out instructions to the secretaries to file a report with the state auditor regarding vital statistics as required by law.

Attorney General Brown has filed in the supreme court a motion for a rehearing in the Bartley bond case, which was recently decided against the state on technicality, the court holding that the record had not been authenticated according to the statutes. Inasmuch as the case has been in the court for nine years and the same evidence has been used each time, the attorney general has decided to file a report with the state auditor regarding vital statistics as required by law.

MR. FIELD IS DEAD.

CHICAGO'S RICHEST MERCHANT PASSES AWAY.

Business Man Known Throughout the World Succumbs to Pneumonia in New York—Work of Physicians Unavailing.

Marshall Field, the merchant prince of Chicago, died at the Holland House in New York, Tuesday, as a result of pneumonia which developed from a cold.

Monday all hope was abandoned and Mr. Field was thought to be dying all through the morning and early afternoon, but he rallied at 3 o'clock.

He was 62 years old by this time and he decided to change his domicile to the West, and Chicago was the point he selected upon for future operations.

He was employed as a clerk in the mercantile business of his father, Louis C. Field, the wealthy Chicago mailster.

He was a partner in the firm, which at that time was Cooley, Farwell & Co. Later the firm's name was changed to Farwell, Field & Co.

LOVER OF HOME.

Despite Great Wealth, Merchant's Life is Simple and Quiet.

While a wizard of the commercial world, Marshall Field never dealt in anything but the most practical and real, and this characteristic reached to the interior of his home.

FORTUNE OF OVER $125,000,000.

Marshall Field's Wealth Invested in All Parts of the World.

Although any valuation placed on the fortune of Marshall Field would necessarily be an estimate, it has been estimated that his estate was worth $125,000,000.

Mr. Field owned great tracts of land in America and a large number of acres and woods. He was a stockholder in the American Woolen Company and had an interest in the Amory Cotton Company.

Mr. Field was rated as the second richest man in the United States, being ranked only by John D. Rockefeller.

Humble Clerk Attains First Place in World's Commerce.

From a clerk in a country store to the merchant prince of modern times, is the life spanned by Marshall Field of Chicago.

The first actual work done by Marshall Field in this world was to drive the cows from a pasture to the barn.

The first appearance of young Field in the mercantile world was not wholly a success, and it was even counted a failure by the hard-shelled dealer.

Marshall Field's Wealth Invested in All Parts of the World.

Although any valuation placed on the fortune of Marshall Field would necessarily be an estimate, it has been estimated that his estate was worth $125,000,000.

Mr. Field owned great tracts of land in America and a large number of acres and woods. He was a stockholder in the American Woolen Company and had an interest in the Amory Cotton Company.

Mr. Field was rated as the second richest man in the United States, being ranked only by John D. Rockefeller.

MURDERS AROUSE CHICAGO.

Brutal Killing of Women Has Stirred Up Whole City.

Chicago citizens are discussing ways and means to check murders and robberies throughout the city.

In a revolting murder, the circumstances of which are unparalleled in the criminal annals of Chicago, Mrs. Franklin C. Hollister, a woman of refinement, choir singer and philanthropic worker, met her death in a dark alley on the North Side Friday night at the hands of Richard G. Lyons, degenerate son of a carpenter.

Following is a list of the very recent wanton and atrocious murders of women in Chicago:

Mrs. E. P. Mize, murdered at Fifty-fifth street and Washington avenue by a man whose identity is not known, Aug. 22, 1905.

Miss Madam Reese, murdered in her flat, 200 Evanston avenue, by a man whose identity is not known, Nov. 21, 1905.

Mrs. Carl O. Amberg, murdered by L. E. Mueller in a doorway of North Clark street and Buckingham place, Jan. 5, 1906.

Mrs. A. W. Gearty, murdered in her apartments, 782 La Salle avenue, by a man known as P. J. Constance, Jan. 5, 1906.

Mrs. Franklin C. Hollister, murdered in the rear of 308 Helden avenue by Richard Lyons, Jan. 12.

From the pulpit the cry of alarm was given Sunday. A mass meeting of citizens was announced. Resolutions were adopted on the subject at the ministers' weekly meetings.

The Rev. J. M. Hall, pastor of her church, referred to the crime and to their loss. He said: "When we think of the atrocious crime which has taken from us one of our members it is evident that only the power of the gospel makes possible our marvelous restraint at this time.

The Daily News says: Where murder is so frequent as it is in Chicago, and where the murderers so often select women as their victims, these crimes cannot be regarded as mere sporadic outbreaks.

FRENCH ELECT FALLIERES.

Chosen President of Republic to Succeed Loubet.

Clement Armand Fallieres has been elected President of France to succeed M. Loubet.

The assembly consists nominally of 507 deputies and 300 senators, but owing to death, illness and the passage of some of the deputies to the senate, leaving their seats vacant, the number present was decreased to 517, making 408 votes necessary to elect a President.

Fallieres had the general support of the advanced socialist and radical groups, constituting the famous party which sustained the Combes ministry.

M. Fallieres, who has been president of the senate, is a scholar, a jurist, a debater of fine talents, a man of easy manners and a stern Republican.

For twenty-five years M. Fallieres has been prominent in French politics.

M. Fallieres is the son of a magistrate's clerk and is the grandson of a blacksmith whose forge and cottage, until a short time ago, stood against one of the walls of the cathedral at Mezin.

80 BOOKS AGAINST SHOOT.

Eighty volumes containing the signatures of American women who desired to see Reed Smoot of Utah ousted from the United States Senate have been sent to Washington.

The eighty volumes are to be distributed among the Senators, and the protest they represent will be presented by Senator Burrows of Michigan.

REBUKES SENATOR TILLMAN.

Senate Votes Down His Resolution Aimed at the President.

The Tillman resolution as to Mrs. Minor Morris was introduced and laid on the table in the Senate Thursday by the following vote: Yes, 51; No, 8.

THE Billings, Montana, District is today by all odds the one affording Investors and Homesteaders the greatest opportunity. The elevation is only about 3,000 feet above sea level and the climatic conditions are ideal for farming. The great Crow Indian reservation to be opened to settlement sometime during the present year lies within a few miles of the city of Billings and provision has been made for the reclamation of these lands by the national government. This district offers market opportunities not afforded by many of the cheap land districts to which people are flocking in almost countless thousands. The lands already under ditch can be bought on terms that gives the settler advantages not offered elsewhere. Drop a line to the Billings Land and Live Stock Commission Co and they will gladly furnish you all the information you desire in regard to the country. Get this information before you go elsewhere to locate.

The wrong way to select harness is the way it is usually done. Price is generally the first consideration. If that is very low the goods seem attractive, regardless of quality. Judge our goods the other way about. Examine into the quality of this harness first. Then it will be seen that it is worth almost any price. But our prices are not high. Value considered they are remarkably low.
