HOME TALENT PLAY.

The presentation of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" by Arthur Savidge and local talent, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid society, Thursday night, surpassed highest expectations. The opera house was packed, and from the moment the curtain went up on the first act until it went down on the last, the details of the thrilling story, skillfully and impressively portrayed, were closely followed. The orchestra under the direction of Otto Voget, discoursed some excellent selections and contributed much to the success of the entertainment.

The story of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde is apt to give sensitive people a "creepy" sensation. Dr. Jekyll is a friend of everybody and is beloved by all, while Mr. Hyde is a foe to society, an intense hater of everybody and everything, a malignant, abhorrent, murderous wretch. They are the same person. In the one the good displaces the bad and in the other the bad the good. In that dual role, requiring lightning transformation on the stage, Arthur Savidge showed the talent and training of an accomplished actor. As Dr. Jekyll, he was adored for his kindly, genial manner, and his anxious solicitude for the welfare of others. With equal facility and success did he bring out the other extreme in the loathsome character of Mr. Hyde. The supporting parts, represented by home talent, were well taken, each by good voice and easy manner, contributing his or her share to the strength of the whole. All did so well their individualities were lost in the characters they represented and the story they were unravelling.

Dr. Jekyll, Mr. Uterson, (Geo. Wilbur), and Dr. Lanyon, (A. E. Davis), had been college companions and were close friends. However, Dr. Lanyon had detected something wrong in Dr. Jekyll, but could not understand it. He even warned Sybil, (Mrs. Jas. Miller), who had accepted the attentions of Dr. Jekyll with a view of marriage. Mr. Uterson who was the legal adviser of Dr. Jekyll and to whom had been entrusted the making of the latter's will, also felt that a mystery attached to the life of Dr. Jekyll, made doubly perplexing by the insistent request of the latter for provision for Mr. Hyde. Rev. Danvers Carew, (Dr. F. E. Gamble), the father of Sybil, was suddenly attacked and killed by Mr. Hyde, and when Dr. Jekyll, by the use of a certain drug, threw off the villainous Hyde, he was filled with compunction over the murder which his baser self had committed. The crime was made more distressing to him as he listened to its details from the lips of his betrothed who proposed to help pursue Hyde, known to be the guilty one, and see that her father's unprovoked murder was avenged. Dr. Jekyll's strange actions and relations with Hyde increased the suspicions of his friends and servants. On one occasion for eight days he was cloistered in his room because he could not secure the drug to restore the personality of Dr. Jekyll. Pool, (O. H. Sweet), coachman for Dr. Jekyll, was aroused to apprehension and explained the strange noises that had issued from his master's room and the dwarfed, fiendish looking individual he had seen there. Newcomb, (Thos. Holtz), performed well the part of a detective in running down the murderer. Sarah, (Mrs. E. A. Leisenring), was a servant in the house of Dr. Jekyll and added her testimony in unravelling the mysterious connection between her employer and Mr. Hyde. McCarty, (E. B. Philleo), officiated as a policeman, and with Sarah, furnished a vein of humor. Essie, (Miss Kate Gamble), another servant girl, was struck down on one occasion by the ferocious Hyde. Departing of the effort to avoid complicity in the heinous operations of Hyde, Dr. Jekyll betrayed the secret of his double life to his former friend, Dr. Lanyon, whom he had sworn to secrecy. The last act found Dr. Jekyll in his private apartment, within which he had concealed as far as possible the fiend in his nature. Here, at last, with no hope of replenishing the supply of the necessary drug, he nervously anticipated the permanent ascendency of Hyde. It was an exciting climax when the latter fulfilled the wish of Dr. Jekyll by taking poison and ending the dual life.

As choir boys, Paul Miner, Francis Jones, Tracy Kohl, Hiram Northrop, John Bressler, Dwight Sigworth, Jamie Britton and Albert Brown made a splendid appearance.

The entertainment throughout was a pronounced success and reflected credit on all who took part. The net proceeds are to be used by the ladies in swelling their fund for building a new parsonage for the church.

DIXON COUNTY PRINTING.

Dixon county papers still reward the way public printing is advanced over there. As a matter of fact, county boards in some counties, and notably in Dixon, either drive papers to combine or force them to stand prices until there is no profit in the work. In Dixon before the papers got together, they fought the annual battle regularly and prices were whittled down as low as possible, the winner figuring by a stretch of imagination that failure to profit from the county's business would be made up in other ways. During those years of more or less bitter competition, members of the county board exonerated themselves from any hand in the annual massacre of printing prices and cheerfully laid the fault to the rival papers. But after the combine had worked along harmoniously for a brief series of years, and the publishers were fast becoming millionaires by a division of one legal rate among three or four papers, the board, perhaps dissatisfied with the dull monotony with which the contract had been let and anxious for the enlivening spirit of competitive strife, kicked out of the traces, boosted aside the newspaper coalition and precipitated a war of bids and a butchery of prices. For this result, the members of the board cannot complacently careen their hirens facial appendages and attribute all the blame to the publishers. This writer does not need to be told how generously the public printing has been handled in Dixon county nor how rich the newspapers have become in doing it. We have been there.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

The Union Pacific has been running a seed corn special over its lines in Nebraska.

"The Runaway Tramp" drew a fair-sized audience to the opera house Saturday evening.

Randolph Presbyterians have in sight half the amount necessary to build a new church to cost $5,000.

Fremont has installed a street sweeper, and the paved section of the town will be kept clean hereafter.

Mr. Swanson of Wayne commenced work at the Great Northern Mills Monday as book keeper.—Hartington News.

The measles are so common at Randolph that any who don't have the disease are considered altogether out of fashion.

A printer at Lincoln has gone insane a second time over excessive study of the bible. That is not a common cause of insanity among the printing fraternity.

An evangelist broke the cheering information to Sioux City in a sermon there Sunday that it was a more wicked town than Butte, Mont., which is notoriously bad.

Emerson has recently dedicated a new school house, built at a cost of $20,000. It may be appropriate to remark in this connection that Wayne is aching for a new, modern school building.

Henry Thieman, a young business man of Sholes, died at his home there of typhoid fever on Wednesday of last week. His remains were taken on the following day to his former home, Arcadia, Ia., for burial.

Old settlers say that seventeen years ago this country had an "open winter" like the present one has been and that farmers began sowing wheat March 5. However, the balance of this winter may vary some from that of seventeen years ago.

The Tribune reports that Wm. Shultz who lives some miles southwest of Winside, sustained a fractured jaw in a runaway accident recently. He was returning home when his team began running and on turning a corner tipped the wagon over.

John A. McCall, until recently president of the New York Life Insurance company, died at his home in Lakewood, N. J., Sunday afternoon. His physical breakdown, resulting in death, was hastened by the investigations and disclosures of the company of which he was the head.

The following incident was related at a ministerial conference: "A drummer met an oligymian whom he felt sure he knew but whose name he couldn't recall and finally blurted out: "Where in hell did I meet you?" The oligymian stammered a moment and replied: "I'm sure I don't know. What part of hell are you from?"

George Porter, son of Howard Porter of Carroll, died Sunday in St. Louis where he was stricken with sickness while taking a course in a medical college. He bears a high reputation as a young man of industry, integrity, good habits and high purposes, and news of his untimely death will be received by his friends with keenest regret.

While no representative of the Herald was present at the Duroc Jersey sale of bred sows by M. S. Moats & Son last week, yet we are informed the prices received for the offering were highly satisfactory, the average price per head being over $86. The weather was very stormy and consequently the attendance was not nearly up to expectations. The top price paid for a sow was $120.

A. T. Clark attended the convention of district managers of the Bell Telephone company in Omaha last week. Mr. Clark has been appointed assistant to the special agent of the company with headquarters in Omaha and expects to move there the last of this or the first of next week. The company recognizes Mr. Clark's ability and efficient service as a telephone man, and the promotion follows accordingly.

There are two bitter rival factions in one of the rural precincts of Stanton county and when they meet they offer greetings in the shape of physical violence. The Picket reports two recent occasions when they came together in a fight with fists and clubs, resulting in many cuts, bumps and bruises. It is suggested that the trouble is likely to continue until "some one is killed."

Last Friday T. E. Evans implemented business of Phil Carroll and has taken possession. Evans is one of the old set part of the county, is very well known, and Tom as he is called is liked by everybody, and it is safe to predict will do a good business, and we trust a profitable one. We understand Geo. Philleo will engage in the lumber business at some point not yet determined.

While helping to butcher a cow last Friday, "Collie" McKorkindale had an artery cut in his left wrist with a butcher knife he was using to bleed the animal. The cow swung its head around some way and struck "Collie" so that the knife was plunged into his wrist. The wound was quite bad and "Collie" lost considerable blood before he could get to town and have it attended to, but it is getting along all right now.—Wakefield Republican.

John T. Bressler has received from Washington a lot of books and maps devoted to forestry conditions in the United States. The forests of each state are treated separately, the acreage and number of feet given, together with the per cent of different kinds of timber grown. It is an interesting and valuable collection of information, and any one desiring knowledge along that line can satisfy himself by calling at Mr. Bressler's office.

Quite a serious runaway occurred Monday on the road east of Bill Mick's place. Bert Emc and Mr. Bonham of Wayne were driving in a single rig. The team became unmanageable and Bonham in the excitement leaped from the buggy, sustaining a severe shakeup, but suffered no broken bones. It was at first thought he was injured internally, but an examination proved otherwise. The team was finally stopped without much damage.—Carroll Index.

A Coleridge man suggests an organization of farmers and local dealers for mutual benefit. Such an organization might help materially in choking off the flood of business that goes to catalogue houses and regulating grain and stock markets so that sellers could always realize top prices. It would certainly be a good move for farmers and merchants to get together and gain a better understanding of each other's interests.

Some of the papers of northeast Nebraska occasionally speak of John D. Haskell of Wakefield as a fit candidate for governor, which cannot be consistently denied by anybody having an acquaintance with Mr. Haskell. But it does not require much political acumen to see that with Mr. McCarthy as a candidate for congress from the same county, Mr. Haskell would not be likely to make much headway. Geographical distribution is a potential political consideration.—Fremont Tribune.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Franks and children departed Tuesday morning for their new home at Basin, Wyo. It was no easy task for them to give up their home and friends in Wayne where they had lived for many years, and it will require time to become accustomed to new surroundings and new associates. It is hoped, however, that they will find the future home as pleasant as expected and that happy contentment will fall to their lot. In their going they are accompanied by the best wishes of all.

The leading democratic newspapers of Nebraska are doing great work these days in denouncing the crimes of the beef, steel, copper, and what they are pleased to call the tariff trust, but when it comes to the whiskey trust, the most gigantic, titanic and satanic of all devices for brutalizing the people and getting their money in the bargain, well, that's different. They stand by that poverty-breeding combination with a fortitude that makes the boy upon the burning deck a cowardly poltroon by comparison.—Nebraska State Journal.

The cattle sale of Alex Laurie at Carroll was a demonstration of the profitableness of breeding and rearing good animals. While these animals were not pure bred, not eligible to registration, yet they are the produce of pure bred sires and dams that if bred in England or Scotland would find recognition in the herd books. Of the animals sold seven had were matured cows the highest priced of these selling for $70 and the other fourteen were spring calves, bulls and heifers. The highest priced bull calf sold for $51 and the highest priced heifer calf $37. The twenty-one head sold for $366, about twice what the same number of ordinary bred animals of the same ages would bring. Such sales as this are object lessons that are not easily ignored by cattle breeders and the cattle sold are much cheaper for the purchasers than the common bred animals at any bargain counter prices. Mr. Laurie has left a very nice bunch of high bred sows and some spring stuff that he will continue to breed from.

CHAPTER X.

The heart of Allan Norwood was not weak and irresolute, but strong in its resolve, and firm and persevering in the execution of its purpose. The events at Boonesborough, in which Providence had made him an actor, called on the latent powers of his mind, and stimulated him to prompt and decisive efforts in regard to Rosalita. Immediately after the departure of Logston, Captain Boone summoned some of the men experienced in his little garriçon around him, to learn their respective views in relation to the course most proper to pursue under existing circumstances. It was finally decided that two or three persons of experience should steal quietly from the fort, to find the gentle maiden. Kenton, Ballard and Allan immediately offered their services.

Ballard affected to regard only the money with considerable contempt, for he prided himself on a little on his skill in woodcraft, and did not wish to be considered on a level with those less expert who had perchance never followed a trail or slain an Indian.

"This Ohio fellow goes with us, we can expect anything good will be likely to happen," he said to Kenton, in a voice sufficiently loud for Allan to hear.

"Why not?" asked Kenton.

"He's got no knowledge of these kind of things. He wouldn't know an Indian trail from a rabbit path. And as for his woodcraft, I don't suppose he could find the traces of the man at fifty yards, in going as many times as I have."

"Perhaps you underestimate his abilities," answered Kenton.

"That isn't by no means probable," returned Ballard. "I'm called the shrewdest leader of human character in Kentucky. I didn't often make mistakes in these kind of matters. The chap is too good for anything. He'll get his compass and follow the man's trail through a forest, and he'll break it."

"Quiet your apprehensions, sir," said Allan, approaching the scout. "Do your own duty, and if I fail to discharge mine, the blame will not be attributed to you."

"You're all very well," replied Ballard, who had been in the line of danger. "I've heard people say they can't go on, and then be off in the line of danger."

Ballard made a sudden sweep to the left and was much wiser, when a man appeared on the opposite bank and beckoned them in an impassioned manner to come to his assistance.

"Simon Kenton paid no attention to his entreaties, which astonished Allan very much, whose ears were ever open to the cries of those in distress.

"What do you want?" asked our hero, frowning with anger, for the frantic cries of the unknown, and, apparently, greatly terrified individual.

"I've escaped from the Wyandots, they are after me, and I cannot cross the river, come and take me off, if you are Christians," returned the man, who continued to run along the shore, waving his hands as the boat passed on.

"Let us take him into the boat," said Kenton, smiling, and took his hand.

Kenton smiled, and took his hand, and the man repeated his cries, protesting that the Indians would soon reach him if he did not succeed in getting across the river.

"Poor fellow!" exclaimed Norwood, "Come, my friend, this is a terrible case. He is involved in the terrible fears and miserable condition of the wretched man?"

"Not I," said Kenton. "This distress is not real; it is an infamous plot to allure us to the other side. The white scoundrel is backed by a score of Redskins, up doab."

"You're really in earnest?" asked Norwood.

When the terrified African made a great splash in the water, while those on the bank gazed with rage. The two young men grasped the paddles and used them with such effect that in half an hour not an enemy was seen or heard.

Having landed, they filled the boat with large stones and sank it. The sun had come down and darkness pervaded the nighty forest.

"Come," said Allan, "let us go."

"Where?" asked his companion.

"Anywhere," replied Norwood, hesitatingly, "to find Rosalita, Alston."

Kenton, who had started himself on the bank, arose and attempted to follow Allan, but staggered a few steps and fell.

"My dear Kenton, you are wounded!" exclaimed his companion, running to the heroic woodsman and raising his head from the ground. But the gallant fellow made no reply; he had fainted from the loss of blood.

"It's confirmed!"

WASHINGTON AND I.

A little street Arab was Johnnie McGee, ragged and friendless, and homeless was he. But Johnnie, though ragged, was clever and bright.

And he knew the difference between wrong and right.

Now it happened one morning that Johnnie felt the experience in battle, when his company was ordered to attack some of Gen. Washington's troops.

And ready for all kinds of mischief and mischief.

"First, young Waldemar was very busy observing and thinking.

"We saw that the colonists meant to win independence, no matter how much blood it might cost them, and when he had learned enough English to trouble between the colonies and the mother country, he found himself becoming deeply interested in the cause of the colonists and wondering if they had not the right on their side.

"Not long after this he was sent across New Jersey with other troops on an expedition that was meant to worry Gen. Washington.

"But one dark night when it was bitter, oh, so cold, down swooped Gen. Washington upon them, giving them such a surprise as the British and every one of his companions were made prisoners.

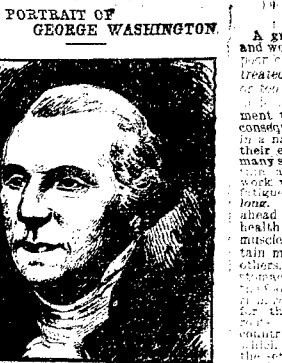

"M'm," thought Waldemar. "I suppose I'll have my beauty spoiled, for he had heard stories about the Americans' cruelty to German soldiers—how they cut off their prisoners' ears and hit their noses. So you can imagine how pleased he was to find that the colonials were anything but cruel. In fact, the sergeant who marched the prisoners up to Philadelphia soon became a warm friend to Waldemar, and many long talks they had together.

"I wish you could see our commander-in-chief," Waldemar, said the sergeant.

"I wish I might," replied Waldemar. But not till long afterward did he get his first sight of George Washington.

"Well, before long Waldemar, with other prisoners, was exchanged for some American prisoners whom the British had captured, and so our student-soldier had to turn his sword against the colonists again.

"Pretty soon he was ordered down South, and so it happened that he was present when the British captured Charleston. He did a brave thing there—jumped in front of an officer and received in his own shoulder the sword thrust that would have killed the officer—and was promoted right away to be a captain in spite of his being so young.

RARE PORTRAIT OF GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Charles Wilson Peale's portrait of Washington, which has been put upon exhibition in New York, is said to be the last portrait for which the great general sat. Peale painted it from sittings given him by Washington in the Middleton mansion, on Pooles Island, in Maryland. It was given by the father of his country to Sarah Middleton at the time of her wedding to Dr. Murray in 1787. Miss Middleton was given away by George Washington, and the Middleton family have long guarded the picture religiously until very recently, when permission was given to publicly exhibit it. The reproduction herewith presented is from a photograph taken by Rockwood, in whose gallery the treasure hangs. The Middletons were one of the great families of the South. They were cavaliers of Twickenham, who came to America in 1670. In colonial times they were prominent in governmental matters, but in modern times few members of the family have attained to eminence in statesmanship or soldiery.

WASHINGTON AND PRIMUS.

How the Commander-in-Chief Once Slept with a Negro Body Servant.

Throughout the revolutionary war Dr. Primus Hall was the body servant of Col. Pickering of Massachusetts. It was well known that there was no officer in the whole American army whose memory was dearer to Washington, and whose counsel was more esteemed by him, than that of the honest and patriotic Col. Pickering. Whenever he was stationed within such a distance as to admit of it, he passed many hours with the colonel. Washington was therefore, often brought into contact with the servant of Col. Pickering, the departed Primus.

On one occasion the great general was engaged in earnest consultation with Col. Pickering in his tent, and the night had fairly set in. Headquarters were at a considerable distance, and Washington signified his preference to staying with the colonel over night, provided he had a spare blanket and straw.

"All right," said Primus, who was appointed to carry a bundle of straw and blankets.

"Upon this assurance Washington continued his conference with the colonel until it was time to retire to rest. Two humble beds were spread side by side in the tent, and the officers laid themselves down, while Primus seemed to be busy with duties that required his attention before he himself could sleep. It worked, as happened to work until the breaking of the present gentleman's mind, that they were sleeping, and then, sitting himself upon a box or stool, he leaned his head upon his hands to obtain such repose as an inanimate position would allow. In the middle of the night Washington awoke. He looked about and noticed that his blanket was gone. He gazed at the bed with a certain "frown."

"Primus, get up and rubbed his eyes. "What, general?" said he.

Trust to Nature.

A great many Americans, both men and women, are thin, pale and puny, with poor constitutions, because they have ill-treated their stomachs by heavy eating of rich, greasy, and stimulating food.

These are found to be safe and yet corrective of the most common ailments of the stomach, liver and blood. These are: Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stearns' root, Bloodroot, Marshmallon root, Yellow pine bark, Pileus Chrysogonus, The medicinal principles residing in these native roots, when extracted with glycerine and alcohol, make the most reliable and efficient stomachic tonic and a restorative, when combined in just the right proportions, as in Dr. Pease's Golden Medical Discovery. Where there is a weak stomach, the system is exhausted, the body gets thin, and the liver and the blood are all vitiated and the vigor of the life is lost.

Although the physicians have been aware of the high medicinal value of the above mentioned plants, yet few have used them in the form of a tonic, and usually the doctors' prescriptions called for the ingredients in varying amounts.

The Golden Medical Discovery is a scientific preparation compounded of the physical extracts of the above mentioned plants, and contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drug.

A Hillville Smoke Incident.

"This is a cigarette law in this town," said the Hillville marshal, "and you're violator of it."

"I beg your pardon," said the drummer, "but—you don't want to deprive a free-born American citizen of his liberty, do you?"

"No," replied the marshal, "only of his cigarettes. You can't smoke tea on this depot platform."

"Well, you just direct me to where I may smoke in peace?"

GEN. WASHINGTON STOOD GODFATHER TO THE BABY.

you will pay me $125 or so per head, I'll gather up 30,000 men from my people and let you have them to do some of your fighting for you just as long as you please.

"Done?" cried the King of England, and immediately ordered his treasurer to send the money over to King William.

"No, no King William had to find his 30,000 men. Not that was no easy thing to do, for his kingdom was very tiny, and there weren't more than 50,000 able-bodied men in the whole kingdom.

"But he sent out recruiting sergeants and told them to get 30,000 together by hook or crook, fair means or foul, and ship them over to the King of England.

And Virginia, and my Virginia lass, Now, if I could only see the great Washington and let you have them to do some of your fighting for you just as long as you please.

"Already there was talk of Cornwallis at Yorktown. Then came a rumor that Washington had slipped away from New York and was making straight for Yorktown.

"Waldemar?" cried Morgan, "our great General is going to get your Cornwallis scolded so neatly 'twixt the Chesapeake and his own soldiers that he'll gobble him up at one bite. And what's more, I'm going to let you see him do it."

"So that's the way Waldemar came to witness the surrender of Cornwallis. And there at Yorktown he first saw George Washington, who was very kind to him and suggested a very clever way for him to become an American.

CHAPTER XI.

The little vessel was dragged from its anchorage, and the two young men were soon riding down the river. The wood had not forgotten to inform his comrades about the circumstances of finding the spot where a canoe had evidently been drawn up, and of the strange conduct of Venasius. For several hours they slowly piled the paddles, always keeping close to shore.

Both took steady aim, and the Indians, anticipating their intentions, endeavored to screen themselves by dodging their heads down into the canoe.

Italy devoted the art of music printing, musical notes having first been impressed with movable metal types in 1502 by Ottavio Petrucci.

In Cuba sixteen tons of cane yielded one ton of sugar; in Porto Rico only 12 1/2.

THE WAYNE HERALD

Official paper of Wayne and Wayne county, Nebraska, published every Thursday.
E. CUNNINGHAM, Publisher
Subscription, $1.00 a Year in Advance.

If Pat Crowe keeps out of the political arena, as now appears likely, it may be expected that the theatrical managers will be on deck with high-priced offers for his services.

The political spot is entirely boiling in Iowa, where the greatest interest is centered on the governorship, for which place Geo. D. Perkins of the Sioux City Journal and present Gov. Cummins are strong rival candidates.

The most brilliant wedding and the one most largely attended by distinguished guests in the White House took place there last Saturday when the president's oldest daughter, Miss Alice, was married to Nicholas Longworth, congressman from Ohio.

It is barely possible that the railroads may be able to club enough United States senators into line to defeat any railway legislation that will be beneficial. If they do, just watch the constituents of some of the recreant senators beat out their official brains.

The verdict of the jury acquitting Pat Crowe of complicity in the Cradley kidnaping and robbery is denounced by the Omaha commercial club and by all people generally who are familiar with the facts and who wish to check the operations of the criminal element, whether they be directed to the injury of the rich, or the poor, or the middle class. What the great masses want is equal justice for all, and it looks as though Crowe had not up to this time received what he deserved.

The bill for control of railway rates by the Inter State Commerce Commission, is traveling over a mighty rocky road in the United States Senate, and if not defeated is likely to come out of the shakeup so terribly disgraced as to be almost beyond recognition by its closest friends. Probabilities are that so many barriers will be placed in the way, that a final vote on the bill will not be reached, and adjournment will prevent a lot of old stiffs from going on record on the matter and allow them to go back home and lie to their constituents as to how they would have voted had they been given the opportunity.

Rous of Hall county, speaker of the last House of Representatives of Nebraska, would not object to being the republican nominee for governor. Valley county has three candidates for the nomination and they are Peter Mortenson, the present state treasurer, State Senator Fries and John Wall; then there is Robertson of Norfolk, who has been on the books for several years and doubtless feels pretty certain it will be his turn this time, and someone suggests that John D. Haskell, the Wakefield banker, would not be averse to having the nomination thrust on him. These are only a few that we can call to mind off hand; the woods are full of candidates.

Some of the newspapers tell us that Peter Mortenson, the present state treasurer and who aspires to be the successor of John H. Mickey as governor of Nebraska, is absolutely owned and controlled by the railroads and other allied interests. We had always looked upon Peter as a pretty good, honest, square old chap and are hardly prepared to believe that he is owned or controlled by any person or number of persons, but before making any break along this line it would be well to look the old fellow up and find out just how he does stand. There are so many strings to most of the fellows who seek office that it is mighty difficult to tell just which one to support at anytime and under existing conditions more than ordinary care should be exercised in this important matter.

A movement is on foot to have the legislatures of the various states request congress to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of amending the constitution of the United States so as to permit the election of United States senators by popular vote. With the present temper of the people toward the senate it seems that very little difficulty ought to be experienced in getting state legislatures to not along the lines suggested. The United States Senate is fast becoming, if it is not already, the representative of special interests instead of the entire country, and it is time to move in the direction of a remedy. The senate will itself always stand as block in getting an amendment to the constitution by the passage of such amendment and its submission to the states for ratification and the only way to reach the desired end is by the method above proposed. By this means the states can compel congress to act and then the success or failure of the amendment will be up to the voters themselves.

You had better think twice, young lady, before passing up the plodder for the swell fellow, says an exchange. The plodder may be a little off in the out of his clothes, and he may not shine as a party like your swell man. But he is saving his wind and come down the home stretch so fast that he will throw dust all over the other fellow. Poke fun at him now if you choose, but some day you will have to get a spy-glass to see him, he will stand so far above you. The swell fellow treats you lovely now; tells you that you are pretty, dance lovely; buys you ice cream and takes you buggy riding. Then he has shot his bolt. He is all in; the buggy rides are a thing of the past. He will be lying around living off of your folks or his own, while the plodder will be building a new house, buying another farm or two and planning to take his wife on a big trip back east to the place where her father and mother did their sparring. The plodder in youth is a pretty good sort of a fellow to tie to. True, some of them remain plodders all their lives, but a majority of them eventually acquire speed. The swell fellow goes so fast when he is young that he has no wind for the latter part of life's race.—The Boomer Times.

Under the rule that has been in force in this representative district for a long time it will be up to the republicans of Wayne county to select the man to represent Stanton and Wayne counties in the next legislature. The HERALD has up to the present not heard anyone suggested for the place and while it believes that its county can furnish good material to choose from it is doubtful of the advisability of keeping the rule that has been followed in force. Because it is our belief, backed up by close observation, that the most effective men in any legislative body are not first termers, but men who have served before. The new man is unacquainted with his fellow members and inexperienced in the art of legislation and has to learn both men and ways, and this takes time. Then again there is a sort of fraternity feeling among the fellows who are returned from their districts term after term that naturally draws them closer together and as a result they get to pulling together for what they desire and the outcome is that as a rule the new man doesn't get much but cold stares when he asks for something he desires to see enacted into law. For this and for the further reason that we believe in our present representative, Charles McLeod, of Stanton, the district has one on whom it can depend in all things that pertain to the welfare of the district and the state, and because during the last session he was faithful and honest, and because of his ability as a legislator we believe that it would be well for Wayne to waive her right in this matter and renominate McLeod as his own successor.

The towns along the line of M. & O., between Emerson and Norfolk have been getting a demonstration for several months past of one of the ways that a railroad can help or harm communities that are at its mercy. The towns along the Elkhorn to the south of us and along the Great Northern to the north, have been paying more for grain than dealers on the Omaha in the territory named, and as a result, grain that ought to be marketed at the Omaha towns, goes to the towns on the other two lines, because of a difference in freight charges for hauling the grain to the markets, and this being true it follows that the Omaha is not taking care of the country tributary to its line as it should do, and the retail trade of its towns is made to suffer as a result. The methods pursued by the railroad practically forces the towns along this line to ship all their grain to Minneapolis, whereas a rate that would allow us to ship our corn to the south or west, would enable us to get better prices and would put us on equal footing with our neighbors. We are not asking to be given any advantages over others, but we have a right to demand that we be given an equal chance for the trade and that we can pay prices that will bring to us the trade that naturally belongs to us. The probabilities are that we will not be placed on a freight basis that will enable our buyers to compete with others until some other railroad company makes up its mind that the Northwestern has entirely too rich pickings in this country and builds a competing line. There is a demand in the mountain country west of us for every bushel of corn and oats that we can spare and at prices that would make it much more profitable to ship in that direction, but local freight rates between here and Norfolk knock out all business of that kind. A few years ago Union Pacific ran its trains over the M. & O. tracks between Sioux City and Norfolk and had in effect a western rate that sent our corn and oats to the markets of the west, but the M. & O., or rather its boss, the Northwestern, wouldn't stand for the loss of the long haul it was losing on this trade and annulled the contract of the Union Pacific, and if our readers will remember, the price of corn and oats dropped about four cents per bushel the day the Union Pacific was obliged to take its trains off. We need competing lines in order to get a decent freight rate.

Operation of the law, enacted by the last legislature, making provision for the forcible reformation of chronic inebriates, has been a success in Wayne county. It has been the means of effecting numerous cures and lead others to check their appetites for liquid hilarity. It is a good law.

In referring to the Standard Oil company and other foreign corporations doing business in Nebraska, Secretary of State Galusha declares that his department proposes to collect from them several hundred thousand dollars of fees rightfully due the state or drive them out of the state.

Advantages of Using Incubators.

It is becoming plain to every practical poultry raiser that March, April and early May is the season of profitable chicken hatching for general farm use. The pullets to supply next winter's eggs must be gotten out in March and April if of the larger breeds, and not later than May if of the smaller types. The cockerels intended for market, if hatched in March, will bring from 30 to 40 cents apiece when they weigh 1 1/2 to 2 pounds, and at a fraction of the cost for feed it would take to bring a June hatched chick up to that price. Again, if one wishes to get out 100 to 150 early winter layers, he will find depending on setting hens very disappointing business. It would require the services of no less than forty hens for nine weeks to hatch and rear to weaning age sufficient chicks to supply the required number of pullets, even if one doubled up the flocks and set some hens twice. In nine weeks' time, right in the most profitable laying season, you can readily figure for yourself that the hens could easily lay enough eggs to pay for a good incubator and brooder large enough to hatch and raise as many chicks and at less trouble. Then, too, not one in a hundred are so fortunate as to get enough trusty hens to get this early in the season. Your incubator is always ready, always in the dry, and will hatch your chicks in uniform flocks of the same age and size. It keeps from older fowls, chicks will be free from lice mites and all contagious diseases which in itself is quite an item. With a good machine of sufficient capacity your hatching operations are over and out of the way before hot weather comes instead of dawdling along the whole season, then waiting on the caprices of a bunch of contrary setting hens.—By Jennie E. Stewart, Allou, Neb.

The question now to decide is what kind of an incubator to buy. There are several hundred kinds made, but all experienced poultry raisers use the Oypfers. Nearly all incubators hatch chickens under favorable conditions, but it is now a well established fact that hot water machines do not hatch as healthy chicks as the hot air machines. The Oypfers incubator is the recognized hot air machine, and is the only one used by large poultry plants and government experiment stations. Get a Oypfers Incubator because it needs no attention and will hatch more and healthier chickens than any other incubator made, and you can have 90 days to prove it. Your money returned if not satisfactory. If you intend to buy an incubator now is the time to place your order.

Bad Boys in Wayne County

I believe Wayne county has fewer bad boys than any county in the United States. We come in contact with boys every day and see them at all hours on the streets and it is our opinion that no town in the state has better boys than Wayne. But we find that boys are bad to wear out shoes and we have a shoe called "Good for Bad Boys" which we have sold for more than twenty years. No boy can wear out these shoes unless he gets them too large to commence with, as they wear so long that he will outgrow them. These shoes are made without linings; are all double, making them free of ripping and no linings to wear out. Then the leather is made especially for these shoes, being soft and pliable and will resist wear better than any other shoe manufactured. If you have had trouble in getting shoes to wear, try a pair of Bad Boys' Shoes and you will settle that question to your satisfaction. We have the exclusive sale in Wayne for Bad Boys' Shoes. Try a pair and see if your boy can wear them out.

who will sincerely mourn his untimely taking on. The immediate cause of death was spinal meningitis. He leaves to mourn his death a heart broken wife, father, mother, two brothers and two sisters.

It seems indeed too bad that one who had worked so hard to acquire an education and fit himself for his chosen profession, should thus be stricken down just on the eve of accomplishing the desire of his heart, but man may plan and labor to accomplish, yet the destiny of all is in the hands of Him who doeth all things well. The remains of the deceased, accompanied by his father, heart broken wife and his sister Nellie, who was with him during the last two weeks of his illness and who did all that could be done by careful nursing to save the precious life, arrived at Carroll Wednesday evening and today will be laid to rest in the cemetery of that place, the funeral taking place from the Methodist church at 2 p. m. The brothers and sisters were all present at the funeral except Joseph, who is in Washington and could not get here. The afflicted family have the heartfelt sympathy of all in this hour of their terrible bereavement, but few empty are all words when one seeks to console, when the very heartstrings are torn asunder and the clouds of the valley are between us and our loved ones, and were it not for the hope of the hereafter life would indeed be an awful valley of desolation.

These waters are becoming more and more of a beverage wherever they are known, and we are glad to see the above named parties become interested.—Bain Republican.

The serious illness of Ed. Cullen's mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Hays, and a birth in the family of Ed. Owen, both gentlemen being county commissioners, lead to the advisability of an adjournment of the board's regular meeting, set for this week, until next Monday. Messrs. Russell and Owen met Tuesday afternoon and after opening bids for bridges, adjourned until Monday, when contracts for new bridges will be awarded and other necessary business attended to.

With the gentle zephyrs, in-trous sunshine and tropical temperature with which Nebraska has been favored of late, the people of Wayne do not envy Col. Ferguson and others who sought southern California when the calendar indicated the presence of winter. If the colonel could only realize what is really going on here in the way of climate, he would persuade some of the old-timers of that section to hasten back with him to spend the balance of the winter in Wayne county.

John A. Beebe of Kearney, Neb., arrived in Wayne Saturday to look over this place with a view of establishing cement works here. He left Monday evening, fully determined to return as soon as possible and launch the enterprise. It will be an institution for the manufacture of building blocks, posts and other useful things from cement, and will also handle the construction of cement walks. In his search of north Nebraska for an opening for his business, he found Wayne the most attractive. Mr. Beebe bears a high reputation as a citizen and business man.

O. N. Friefeld and Frank Mauritzius, of Omaha, the former representing one insurance company and the latter four companies, in which I. Reiffel's mercantile stock was insured, were in Wayne Tuesday in the interest of a settlement of the loss. Settlement was delayed until duplicate copies of invoices, originals of which were burned, could be secured from the wholesale houses.

A regular session of district court opens in Wayne March 12. The docket is small and shows few important legal actions. Not only has Wayne county so far advanced in civilization that criminal business has dwindled to almost nothing, but civil cases, involving disputes, are becoming few—painfully few from the standpoint of the legal fraternity. Each recurring year finds less litigation, shorter terms of court and consequently a higher state of society. Constant diminution in legal warfare shows the substantial, prosperous and even temperd class of people inhabiting Wayne county.

There promises to be a big building on College Hill this coming summer. As our readers are aware, the capacity of the college is entirely too small for the requirements of the school. Students have been herded in like sheep and even then it has been impossible to accommodate all who have applied for admission and the management have determined to remedy the difficulty. Arrangements are under way for building a structure larger than the present college building and also for the construction of additional dormitories. The plans are so laid as to make these extensions practically assured, and we know that when the ways and means by which this work is to be accomplished is made public, the plan will be heartily received by our people. Wayne is proud of her college and has demonstrated in the past her appreciation of the success that has been attained by its management and is ready to keep the good work going.

A reliable source informs the HERALD that any reports creating the impression that Bruce Spears left Wayne county to shift the responsibility of indebtedness or other obligations are false and do him an unwarranted injury. We are assured that his departure was not prompted by any act or motive that would reflect discredit on his honesty or integrity. This statement is made to place him right before the people among whom he grew up, and who would be loath to see him the victim of an injustice.

The man who hates is a miserable creature. It doesn't injure the object of it but it does react upon the hater with denigrating effect. The hater is surly and bitter. He never can see anything good in the object of his con-jured wrath. His ill temper is displayed when radiance and sunshine should glow. Thus the good cheer of life, the hearty cooperation with others, the contented cordials of friendships are marred. The hater should rise above it. He should put it aside, for it is an unworthy thing and feeds upon itself. It produces a gruff and ugly old age. The hater cannot walk down the shady slope with joy or comfort either to himself or those about him. He is a pariah. He sours the milk of human kindness. He can rise above his besetting sin by resolute and repeated action. It will pay him to do it. It will lift the ban upon others and all his own heart with going.—Fremont Tribune.

Judge Hunter had to "turn down" an application for a marriage license Monday morning. Mr. Emil Mathies of Stanton appeared before him with a request for authority to wed Miss Florence Gaylord of Norfolk, who accompanied him. While the Judge was dishing up the papers, he was called to the phone and told by E. P. Olmsted of Norfolk, who was at the hotel where the young couple had stopped, that Miss Gaylord had not attained the age required by law to wed without the consent of parents. Whereupon Judge Hunter telephoned to the girl's father at Norfolk, to learn whether the necessary consent would be given, and he replied that he had not been consulted and would not grant the request. The young man was advised not to swear that the young lady was 18 years of age, and finally concluded that the advice was good. The disappointed pair started east on the afternoon train, but passed through Wayne in the evening on their return to Norfolk.

LAST RITES FOR KING

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES FOR CHRISTIAN AT ROSKILDE.

Noble Royal Assembly—Emperor William, of Germany, the Most Prominent of the Monarchs Attending the Funeral of the Late King.

In the magnificent old Gothic church at Roskilde, Denmark, Sunday afternoon Christian IX., amid thunder of guns, the sonorous tones of the organ and the blare of trumpets was laid to rest with the long line of his predecessors on the Danish throne whose remains remain in the chapel in the Roskilde red stone fame.

The coffin lay in the chancel beneath a black and gold baldachin, supported by high officers in full dress uniforms. The only decoration of it was a gold-encrusted, a tribute from the children of Denmark. Leaning against the altar rails were floral tributes from the Danish royal family. The choir was filled with members of the clergy, whose quaint black gowns and white surts formed a striking background to the blaze of gold faced uniforms of the diplomatic party occupying the corners of the church. Hermon O'Brien, the American minister, in simple evening dress, was a remarkable exception.

The left of the church was reserved for the ministers of the court and state officials, whilst on the right were the members of the press. The galleries and side aisles were filled with ladies. The scene was brilliant in its extent, the only sign of mourning being the black floor cloth which stretched to throw relief on the bright floor and the flashing gold and silver lace of the uniforms of the military detachments and foreign suites which awaited the arrival of the royal mourners near the entrance of the church.

Members of the ritidage and folk-tongue having placed wreaths on the coffin just before 2 o'clock, Queen Alexandra, the dowager empress of Russia, the queen of Denmark, the duchess of Cumberland and the other royal ladies emerged from theapse and seated themselves in the front row of chairs to the left of the coffin. Then a dirge at the door of the cathedral heralded the arrival of the king and while the organ played Beethoven's majestic funeral march the royal procession swept up the center aisle. King Frederick was attired as a Danish general.

Emperor William, in the uniform of a Danish admiral, walked at his left and the king of Greece at his right, both keeping a trifle behind him. King Haakon and the other royal personages and the representatives of foreign sovereigns followed.

PAT CROWE NOT GUILTY.

Jury at Omaha Renders Verdict in Famous Kidnaping Case. At Omaha, Neb., Pat Crowe was found not guilty at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. The crowd cheered so loudly that the judge ordered the court room cleared.

Crowe was accused of kidnaping the son of E. A. Cudahy, the millionaire banker. Eddie Cudahy was kidnaped on the night of Dec. 18, 1900, and a day or two later his father in response to a letter left in his front yard placed $25,000 in gold at a point near the Tremont road west of the city and the boy was returned to his home unharmed.

The boy identified a picture of Crowe as that of one of the two men who kidnaped him and to stimulate the search for him Mr. Cudahy, Sr., offered a reward of $50,000 for Crowe's arrest. Some time later James Callahan was arrested and identified by Young Cudahy as one of his captors. He was tried, but as there was at that time no law making the kidnaping of a person over 10 years of age a crime, and as it could not be shown that Callahan received any of the money, he was acquitted.

Last October Crowe was arrested at Butte, Mont., on Feb. 7, he was placed on trial charged with robbery. There was introduced as evidence for the prosecution a letter purporting to have been written by Crowe to Father Murphy, of Yall, Ia., in which the kidnaping is admitted, and the writer says he has offered to return $21,000 to Mr. Cudahy if he would be merciful to him. The letter expresses the writer's desire to plead guilty and have sentence suspended to permit him to make a new start in life.

As soon as the verdict of acquittal was announced the authorities from Council Bluffs, with a regulation imposed by Gov. Mickey, rearrested the prisoner, and he was taken across the river to stand trial on a charge of street car robbery.

STEAMER GOES ASHORE.

Tugs Sent to the Assistance of Disabled Ship.

A Seltate, Mass., special says, The Leyland line steamer Devonian, having four passengers and a cargo of freight on board, grounded early Thursday on Third cliff during a thick snow storm, high wind and heavy sea. It is believed the vessel is in no immediate danger. Tugs have been sent to her assistance.

As the tide receded it left her about 500 feet from shore almost high and dry in a nest of rocks. The indications were that it would be necessary to renounce part of her cargo in order to float her.

The Devonian is valued at about $1,600,000 and it is estimated the cargo is valued at $250,000.

Mueller protested his innocence, claiming the murder was committed by burglars.

PICK UP MILLIONS.

Sensational Charges Against Cincinnati Promoters.

Sensational charges were made in a suit filed in the federal court at Cincinnati by attorneys for Rudolph Kleyboldt, a Cincinnati banker, seeking an investigation of the Miami and Erie Co. "Electric Mile."

The charge is that financiers of Cleveland, whose names are mentioned as defendants, floated $2,000,000 in bonds and $3,000,000 in stock on the sole strength of $10,000 paid up capital stock in that company, that the stock and bonds being placed on the market were taken in good faith by hundreds of innocent investors in Cincinnati and elsewhere.

A BANK IS WRECKED.

Receiver Named for New Chicago Concern.

The Bank of America at Chicago, incorporated last December with a capital of $25,000, was wrecked in the hands of a receiver at 1 o'clock Thursday night by Judge Chytrus of the superior court, on complaint of John F. Kavanaugh, one of the stockholders. The bill asking for the receivership holds former Judge Abner Smith, president, and three other officials of the bank responsible for the insolvency of the institution.

In the few weeks since the opening of the bank President Smith is charged with having manipulated securities, mortgages and notes and the stock of the bank that he has obtained amounts aggregating $146,000. The other three officials, who in connection with President Smith, are held responsible for the alleged insolvency of the bank, are G. F. Sorrow, vice president; Jerome V. Pierce, cashier, and F. E. Creelman, a stockholder and director.

It is charged against these officials that together with President Smith they had absolute control of the bank and its funds. The operations of President Smith and the other officials mentioned in the bill are said to have begun as soon as the bank opened for business. Smith is said to then have borrowed money and placed it in the treasury to receive the state interest believing that the stock had been paid up. President Smith was one of the prime movers in the formation of the bank, having subscribed for $70,000 of the stock. In order to prevent, if possible, a panic and a possible run on the bank it was decided to file the bill for the appointment of a receiver late Thursday night.

Judge Chytrus and the clerk of the superior court had been asked to be in their office, and agreed to do so. Shortly before 10 o'clock attorneys representing Mr. Kavanaugh appeared with the petition for a receiver. Notice had been served previously on President Smith, but he did not appear either in person or by attorney. After reading the bill the court entered an order appointing Daniel J. Healy, a stockholder, receiver. Bonds of $150,000 were furnished and Mr. Healy took charge of the bank.

STATE OF NEBRASKA

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Will be an inquiry—Fire to be Turned on Nebraska Insurance—Attorney General to Conduct Investigation Under Junkin Act.

A Lincoln special says: The alleged combination of Nebraska insurance companies will be investigated by Attorney General Brown, one of the five insurance commissioners to look into the methods of insurance companies, stated that the report of the investigators would recommend radical changes in the methods of bookkeeping of the New York Life and suggest a different policy for the foreign business. He declared the companies knew what was in the report and would hasten to make some of the changes before it was made public.

Secretary of State Galusha has announced that he would proceed against the big corporations that have not incorporated in Nebraska. He will first attack the Brewster Creamery Company, incorporated at Des Moines, and the Standard Oil Company.

The attorney general will start suit to make them pay incorporation fees on the entire capital stock or they will be ejected from the state if possible.

BEEF GROWERS ORGANIZING.

Have Many Grievances Against the Standard Company.

A North Platte dispatch says: The spirit manifest elsewhere for beef growers to organize has become rife in Lincoln County and is being carried into careful plans of organization for the benefit of those who grow the vegetable. A meeting has been called at the court house of Lincoln County, in North Platte, for the purpose of organizing a county association of beef growers. In the evening the agitation began at North Platte, and the delegates are ripe for a successful organization of all the beef growers in the county.

The causes which have brought about this state of affairs are many grievances which the growers have had with the Standard Beef Sugar Company.

BOY PREVENTS A WRECK.

Stops Passenger Train Just Before Reaching Broken Hill.

A dispatch from Grand Island says the 12-year-old son of Milton Hudson, residing near Elba, prevented a costly wreck on the Ord branch of the Union Pacific. He discovered that one of the rails near his home had been broken the night previous by a freight train, leaving a gap in the track of about 18 inches.

In the blinding storm which was raging at the time, he succeeded in attracting the attention of Engineer Anglin of the morning passenger train. The train was stopped just before reaching Broken Hill. The train was stopped by a gully sack. The train was stopped by a short distance in front of the broken rail.

Ice Workers Strike.

Clearwater, a village of 500, had a full bodged strike the other day. The ice men were on strike and they took advantage of the shortness of the season and the ice famine that stares the town in the face for next summer to issue a demand for a raise in their wages. The raise was not granted and the workmen struck. Recruits who were secured by the employers were allowed down by the strikers, their wives and their children with cries of "scab," and then, too, dropped their tools and quit. So there is nothing doing on the ice.

Settlers Are Coming In.

Last August found North Platte well filled with strangers who took Rinkland homesteads. The men were a goodly number to their lands and others hunting for more lands. Most of them are in wagons with a supply of provisions and some stock and are making preparations to build homes.

CONGRESS

Some state officers are mourning the expenditure of $25 each which a smooth press agent separated them from. The man told the officers that he was representing a press association and wanted to write each a biography to be used in a volume to be issued together with the picture of the subject. It was also explained to the pained men that whenever any newspaper wanted to know anything of them the newspaper would be furnished with pictures and facts. Those of the state officers who did not take a share in the business were the Secretary of State Galusha, Auditor Searle and Superintendent McBrien. The others did and now they are mourning. One of those who invested said he had $40 in the bank all the money he had in the world. When he wrote his check that left $15. Soon after making the investment one of his daughters telephoned and wanted to go to the state auditor father had to turn her down because of a lack of funds, but he was too much hurt to tell her why he did not have the money.

Auditor Searle has not yet decided whether he will register the $50,000 bonds issued by the school district of Grand Island, after a most exciting election held in that city. The bonds were issued to open the school district and the history of the issuance is not correct and will refuse to take them unless they are voted again at a special election. The notice for the election did not contain the location of the polling places and the company holds that this invalidates the bonds. The committee from Grand Island, which appeared before the auditor to show him the history of the bonds was correct and legal, but the matter is still under advisement. The committee asserts inasmuch as the bond election was held the same day as the general election and the county clerk has designated the polling places for that election it was necessary for the school board to do so. Those who favored the issuance of the bonds fear they would not carry at another election.

Warden Beemer received a bill from the warden of the Montana penitentiary for $50, claiming the amount is owed by the state of Nebraska. Because the warden out there claims that the release of Pearson upon the Nebraska release from the Montana institution. Pearson had escaped from the Nebraska prison in 1901. The state offers a reward of $50 for every escaped convict who is returned to the institution, but this is the first time a warden of another prison has claimed the reward.

State Treasurer Mortenson last week cut his earnings to the amount of $100,000 and thus reduced the debt against the state by that amount. These warrants have been drawing interest since Sept. 1, 1904. Thus at this time the state treasurer is behind in meeting the warrants about seventeen months, while some time ago warrants were running at 200 percent. The warrant cancellation last week is due to the enormous amount of money being paid into the treasury during the last month.

Secretary of State Galusha and Deputy Auditor Cook will visit the state institutions of Hayes and Grand Island during the next few days. While Mr. Galusha visits the state institutions at frequent intervals, the deputy auditor tries to make a trip of inspection to each institution at least once a year. During these trips Mr. Cook checks up the books of the institutions.

Prof. E. H. Barbour, of the state university, has received notice of the meeting of curators of museums at New York City May 15, and has signified his intention of attending. This is the first meeting and the organization will be perfected. There are now about 500 public museums in the United States at the present time and most of them will be represented at the meeting.

The damage suit filed by Van B. Ledy, agent of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company, of New York, against Auditor Searle for $5,000 and the suit filed by the company in the federal court to restrain the auditor from interfering with the company's business regarding the company have both been dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff.

ALARM OVER CHINA.

ARMY OFFICIALS FEAR CRISIS IN FAR EAST.

Preparations for Outbreak Being Made by General Staff—Missionaries Advised to Keep in Touch with Treaty Ports.

Reports have come to members of the general staff of the army from China that are more alarming than any that the reports which have become the property of the Washington public property, writes a Washington correspondent.

Notwithstanding the disinclination shown thus far by Congress to provide for the proper quartering of more troops in the Philippines, it is almost unquestionably the intention of the general staff to re-enforce the island garrison with regiments in addition to those now on the high seas on the way to Manila.

IT'S ONLY NATURAL.

CHINA—"Eh! Big gal smiles 'long Jap. Say he all I! Make big gal smilee too. Say John all I!," do!"—Chicago News.

China is a vast organism which no foreigner can even pretend wholly to understand. However, something like a real patriotic movement is growing up there, the leaders being students and merchants in treaty ports, who believe that it is necessary to overthrow the old regime, and, while asserting the dignity of the ancient race to which they belong, drawing all its elements together by making common cause against the encroachments of foreigners.

Military spirit in China has had a great growth since the beginning of the war between Russia and Japan. "Young China," as represented by the student class, is mad with desire to prove its prowess in battle. Meanwhile, official China has gone to work methodically to overcome its historic impotence.

States would be commanded by General Leonard Wood, the commander of the army in the Philippines. General Wood is not a West Point graduate. His military training was secured through fighting Indians on western plains and in the American invasion of Cuba.

Senators John T. Morgan and Edmund W. Pettus, the veteran representatives of Alabama in Congress, notified the State Democratic executive committee that they were candidates for renomination by the Democratic primary next August.

ANTICIPATING THE CENSUS.

Forecast of the Population of Leading American Cities in 1910.

An expert statistician who has done work for the census bureau at Washington has figured out the population of American cities in 1910, basing his estimates upon past growth, building statistics, city directories and local censuses. The result with gains in ten years for the seven cities at the head of his list is here presented:

Table with 3 columns: City, Population, Gain. Rows include New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore, and Cleveland.

Of these seven cities New York, Chicago and Cleveland were the only ones that showed an increase of more than 30 per cent in the decade between 1890 and 1900. St. Louis had 27.3 per cent; Boston, 25.1; Philadelphia, 23.6; and Baltimore, 17.3.

Precedents are hardly overthrown also in the case of Philadelphia. Starting with a population some 400,000 less than that of Chicago, that city is given an absolute increase nearly equal to Chicago's and a considerably larger relative increase also to the confusion of precedents.

With the following to the washhouses by the local farmers of their crops to be harvested just in time, hundreds of persons in Lancaster, Pa., have been given employment. There are more than 100 washhouses in that city alone. During the remainder of the winter they will give steady employment to 1,000 persons.

The Union Label League in Chicago is planning an object lesson campaign for the benefit of the union label. Fair and "label shows" are to be given in halls all the way from the northern limits of the city to the southern. St. Louis is also showing existing conditions in non-union and union shops will be a feature of the displays, which will embrace all classes of goods bearing the union label.

Notes of Current Events. Joseph Massi and Michael Augustine of Spring Hill, Pa., were struck by a lightning bolt and killed.

More New York Life Restitution. The self-investigating committee of New York Life Insurance Company, headed by Thomas P. Fowler, made a dramatic report, which was adopted by the board of trustees Thursday.

Japanese Invasion Discouraged. Japanese laborers employed in the construction work of the Western Pacific railroad and the refusal to hire more after a thorough trial is being exploited in some quarters. It is charged that the railroad labor that the introduction of Japanese would injure American laboring interests.

MAY BE COMPROMISE.

MIDDLE GROUND LIKELY IN MOROCCAN CONFERENCE.

France and Germany May Not Agree on Vital Questions—High Over Police for the Sultan—Greek Situation Has Confronted Delegates.

The Algerias conference on Moroccan affairs has now been freed of most of the minor questions before it, and finds itself fast approaching the graver situation which heretofore caused the serious strain in the relations between France and Germany.

Industrial Notes. The Lackawanna railroad from here has been granted 77 per cent of their demands. The agreement for the ensuing year has been approved by the board of the Firemen's Board and of the railroad company.

Estimates prepared for the national convention of United Mine Workers at Indianapolis show that 800,000 persons in the anthracite coal region are directly dependent upon the mines for support, being the wives and children of the mine workers and the mine workers themselves.

Some Compromise Plans. The ambassadors strongly oppose the disclosure of the various tentative plans for a compromise, saying that publicity tends to excite the opposition of one side or the other and wreck the best efforts of diplomacy.

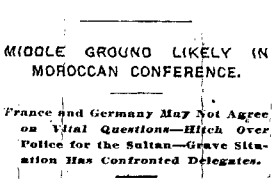

Another compromise vaguely put forward is to give Spain or some other of the powers a share with France in the organization of the police. This compromise is distasteful to France, but the neutral delegates are seeking to reconcile French opposition to it, by pointing out that the Sultan would have to rely upon France to officer, instruct, and discipline the police.

These and other plans will have to undergo constant revision owing to the opposition of the various elements. Nothing as yet has been reduced to writing, as neither Germany nor France is prepared to definitely disclose just how far they are willing to go in the way of concessions.

It is now possible to travel completely around the world upon the Canadian Pacific Railway and its allied steamship lines. The Transcontinental Passenger Association is considering the advisability of cutting off many of the places to which summer tourist rates have hitherto been sold.

The Norfolk and Western has closed a contract for seventy-five locomotives to be built by the American Locomotive Works. They are both for passenger and freight use.

MAXIM GORKY'S PREDICTION.

Maxim Gorky, the great Russian author, has submitted recently to some interviews.

The brilliant author was asked to give some reasons for his above prediction. With the fire of an inspired soul gleaming from his eyes Gorky said:

"I regard the situation at present in Europe as being a most dangerous one. The greatest danger at present to be feared is that the people exhausted as they are, may relax their efforts. Last October it seemed that the popular cause was irresistible.

"They forced the autocracy to abdicate and to issue a manifesto limiting its own power. They gained undue confidence and imagined that they could at any moment exact further concessions. But since that time, though there have been two general strikes and numberless armed outbreaks, we have obtained no further privileges. Lately the bureaucracy has gained confidence, and we have had a revival of arrests, newspaper suppression and acts of terrorism.

"The fight is therefore not half over. The czar's advisers are undoubtedly under the delusion that they can continue to resist the demand for government absolutely based upon the will of the people. The revolutionary movement must continue until they surrender that delusion.

"Our effort hitherto has been to force further concessions before the Duma, which satisfies no body, can meet. The government is attempting by means of a mixture of force and cajolery to keep itself alive until the meeting of the Duma. But we do not want to have German conditions reproduced here. We want an absolutely free government. That can only be achieved if the people frame the government themselves. For that reason I reject the Duma and every other concession granted by the Czarism, and demand a constituent assembly which will make its own constitution for the whole empire.

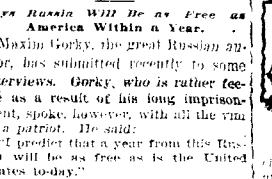

"The real question before Russia today is whether she herself or the frightened remnant of the old government is to frame the political and social conditions of the future. As things at present stand, the old regime is to conduct its own funeral; that is to say, we are to have a Duma (or Parliament) granted from above, with powers limited by the Emperor. The franchise is limited; the Duma's powers are limited; it is a grant to misery."

"A useful Duma is therefore an impossibility?" "Absolutely. I am convinced that until the convoking of a constituent assembly has set the seal upon the people's triumph there will be no peace. You must admit that Russia, falsifying all the predictions of reactionists here and abroad, has qualified for it. In action the extremists or revolutionists have shown restraint. There has been no class war."

White House Weddings. Nine brides have pledged their troth in the White House, as follows: 1811—Miss Todd of Philadelphia and John G. Jackson of Virginia.

Chinese Revolutionists in Arms. Despatches from Amoy, China, Thursday told of the boring and destruction of the Christian mission building near that city at a point called Changpu. The missionaries took refuge in the palace of the local governor and the revolutionists marched toward the important seaport of Amoy. The Presbyterian church of Changpu has the principal mission at Changpu. Amoy is in Fukien province, the governor of which is vicerey of Tzuang, one of the Chinese commissioners now in this country.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Andas.—Andas belonged to commercial life. He would have been a bright and shining light in Wall Street. He sold Christ for 30 pieces of silver—the price of a slave.—Rev. F. W. Gaussman, Independent, Chicago.

Reform.—The voice of reform, which is the voice of God, speaks only to the one who has ears to hear, and often when the men of a nation are too engrossed in money-making, it speaks to a woman.—Rev. Robert Hopkins, Congregationalist, Cleveland.

The Gospel of Jesus.—The gospel is the loftiest position on earth. It does not even yield to the throne. No minister can contemplate the responsibility which is entrusted to him without making an appeal to the people for their earnest co-operation.—Rev. Richard Turner, Methodist, Philadelphia.

Love for all.—God loves all His children and does not have one less because He has many millions of children. He loves them all and has love enough for them all, and He wants His children to love each other.—Rev. L. M. Zimmerman, Lutheran, Baltimore.

Preparation.—Revelation is explicit in respect to the necessity of preparing for immortality. The natural heart is not in the required state of preparation any more than a child has a matured mind. We must prepare for eternity by taking a course in the school of the Great Teacher.—Rev. C. B. Palmer, Episcopalian, Kingston, N. Y.

The Book of Books.—Let men praise about the books of human genius but let them remember that there is one book in the world that is indeed so much so, genius as to God. All other books are of the earth, earthy; this is the book from heaven, and over its luminous pages walks the supernatural power of its author.—Rev. F. T. Shannon, Methodist, Harrisburg.

The Great Critic.—God is the great critic of all. It is He who by His providence makes both the heavens and the earth in order that the things which cannot be shaken may remain. Each new generation sees God shake off from religion some elements of ideas which were not vital to it, and everything that can be shaken must surely fall away.—Rev. L. M. Clarke, Presbyterian, Brisklyn.

The Holy Life.—One can easily see the power of a holy life, for it is effective everywhere. The shams and dissimulations of society become vicious and disgusting in time, the mockeries and hypocrites of the agonies fall infinitely below the real, trifling renders work vain and unworthy, finally destroys religious power and peace and so through to the end.—Rev. J. P. Marlett, Methodist, Tacoma.

is today by all odds the one affording the greatest opportunity. The elevation is only about 3,000 feet above sea level and the climatic conditions are ideal for farming. The great Crow Indian reservation to be opened to settlement sometime during the present year lies within a few miles of the city of Billings and provision has been made for the reclamation of these lands by the national government. This district offers market opportunities not afforded by many of the cheap land districts to which people are flocking in almost countless thousands. The lands already under ditch can be bought on terms that gives the settler advantages not offered elsewhere. Drop a line to the

SENSATIONAL SUIT.

A lawsuit involving a claim for $5,000 has been instituted by John Greenwood, administrator of the estate of Maud Greenwood, against Dr. J. W. King, of Hartington, charging malpractice causing death. The case is attracting much attention. Some time last summer Dr. King was called to attend Maud Greenwood, and after a short illness, an operation was performed for appendicitis but the operation was too late to save the patient's life. At the time of her death, the tardiness of the operation was a subject of general comment and discussion at Hartington, the physician in charge being much censured by the community. The case will probably be tried in the March term of court. Heavy legal talent has been employed by both parties to the controversy. W. F. Bryant of Lincoln being the counsel for Dr. King and Attorneys R. J. Millard and J. C. Robinson of Hartington are counsel for Mr. Greenwood.—Olmstead blade.

The HERALD hasn't heard anything lately about the grain market in Wayne being lower than that of other towns, and concludes that cause of complaints, made some time ago, has been remedied, probably through the revived energy of the commercial club.

The notorious Pat Crowe was last week acquitted in an Omaha court of the charge of robbing Edward A. Oudaby of $25,000 in connection with the kidnaping of the latter's son. This is the second acquittal of Crowe in a series of prosecutions against him. His first trial was on a charge of shooting an Omaha policeman. At the close of the second trial he was rearrested by Council Bluffs authorities and taken there on requisition from Governor Mickey to face a charge of street car robbery.

Henry Goll of Waterville, Wash., encloses a dollar to pay for the HERALD another year because he says he wants to know what is going on in Wayne. Henry thinks he is in about the right part of the world and says more Wayne people would do well to come to that country of cheap land and big crops. He grew last year almost 14,000 bushels of grain and says the winter is an ideal one and thinks Ted Perry's chicken story is not in, it for a minute because he says his hens are laying two eggs per day and they are selling at 35 cents per dozen.

The question of authority to take the city fire fighting apparatus outside the city limits has been raised by a number of the firemen since Wayne sent its call to help some nights ago. At that time arrangements were made to take the apparatus to Wayne with all of the apparatus. But there was no head, who had the authority to send them. If a hose cart had been damaged or if there had been any loss or damage because of the trip, the firemen are wondering who would have stood the loss. From a legal standpoint probably the city could have forced the firemen who went, to pay the damage. One other time a similar situation arose and it was not decided then so they are anxious that it be decided before any other call is made on the department to take the city to assist at a fire.—Norfolk News.

The wrong way to select harness is the way it is usually done. Price is generally the first consideration. If that is very low the goods seem attractive, regardless of quality. Judge our goods the other way about. Examine into the quality of the harness first. Then it will be seen that it is worth almost any price. But our prices are not high. Value considered they are remarkably low.
