AN EARLY SETTLER GONE

Gideon Powell died at his home eight miles north of Winside at about six o'clock last Monday morning. His death was sudden and wholly unexpected, his body being found soon after death lying on the floor of his bed room. He frequently rose from his bed at night when unable to sleep and his son William upon looking into his room at three o'clock last Monday morning found him sitting in a chair. He made no complaint of any discomfort, but within a few hours had passed away.

The funeral was held from the Winside Methodist church on Wednesday, at two o'clock, under the auspices of Pinnicton Post, G. A. R., of which the deceased was a long-time member. A sermon was preached by Rev. G. L. Goodell of Beemer. A large concourse of friends attended to pay a token of respect to the memory of an old neighbor and esteemed citizen. The body was interred in the Winside cemetery.

Gideon Powell was born in Belmont county Ohio, Aug. 11, 1831, and was married June 11, 1851, in Washington county, Ohio, to Miss Madore Hume, whose death occurred May 21, 1899. They emigrated from their native state to Brown county, Indiana, in 1858 and from there to Pottawattamie county, Iowa, in 1878. In 1888 the family removed to the farm in Wayne county, this state, where the lives of the mother and father were closed.

Four children survive them: Charles A. Powell of Meadow, Idaho; Miss Agnes V. William T. and E. C. Powell, all of this community, the first two having never left the parental roof. The deceased enlisted in the 7th Indiana Volunteer Infantry, Co. G, in October, 1861. He served three years and was honorably discharged from his country's service.

Mr. Powell was a wide and intelligent reader and especially conversant at all times with current events. His retentive memory kept him thoroughly familiar with the history of his eventful lifetime. He was a genial and social man, and made many friends and no enemies. His sorrowing children have the sympathy of the entire community in the hour of their bereavement. Winside Chronicle.

THE HANDLING OF MEDICINES

Carefully read directions on bottles, etc., before the remedy is used. Glance at the label each time the remedy is given. Keep all external applications and poisons remedies apart from other medicines. Shake the bottle whether it bears a shade label or not, even though the medicine is without sediment. Turn the bottles upside down to shake them, keeping a finger pressed tightly on the cork. Be sure and give medicine exactly at intervals ordered. If any doubt as to the intervals exists, ask the physician. Measure dose carefully in measuring glass or spoon, never permit a dose to be taken direct from the bottle. Pour away from the label so that the medicine will not run down and render the dirctions illegible. Wash medicine glass or spoon after each dose is given. Keep medicines, especially ointments, sleeping draughts, etc., out of patients reach.

Clinical Thermometers

One of these is most valuable in the sick room as it enables the attendant to watch the patient's temperature and report to the physician. We carry the reliable kinds.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Neithardt visited over Sunday with friends in Wakefield.

Miss May Cunningham was a visitor at the school, Friday afternoon.

James Pile, Jr., left Sunday for Lincoln to take up his work at the University.

Rev. Dr. Horn visited the college, Friday morning and gave a very interesting talk to the students at chapel.

The musical given in the chapel, Saturday evening, was well attended and the program was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Misses Wright and Robinson of Winslow spent Friday in visiting classes at the college and renewing old acquaintances.

The men engaged in installing the heating plant completed work on the college building Monday. All the buildings are now heated by the new plant.

Many of the students are enrolled in the Music Department this term. In addition to the instrumental and vocal music, a number are taking lessons on the violin.

All the class rooms are occupied the greater part of the time, all day, this term as it has been necessary to organize a number of new classes to accommodate the large number of students.

A number of students enrolled this week. The work on the new college building is being rushed, so that the crowded condition of the present building may be relieved as soon as possible.

On account of the time consumed in going to and from chapel, it has been found necessary to begin chapel ten minutes earlier than formerly. In order to do this, the school work begins in the morning at 7:10 instead of 7:30. The announcement of the marriage of Mr. O. G. Hutchinson and Miss Nettie Glassburn was received at the college this week. Both of these young people graduated from this school last summer and are very successful teachers. They have the congratulations of their many friends.

Miss Henry Raubach, Principal of the Decatur schools, John Power, Principal at Magnat, and John Rohr, Principal at Allentown, spent several days at the school last week visiting classes and meeting old friends. All these young men are graduates of the N. N. C. and are very successful school men.

Some people think the sale at the 2 John's will last all summer, but they are mistaken, all the suits left when spring goods come in will go into the store.

A WAYNE BOY'S CLIMB

The editor met F. H. Alexander last week at Wakefield, where he had been called by the death of his grandmother who had lived to the ripe old age of 78 years. Fred said he had just sold some 600 acres near Summitt, S. D., on which he cleaned up close to $10,000.

He and Mrs. Alexander have since moved to Shesby, Iowa, where Fred is interested in the grain business. In company with W. D. Sloan and other men of means at Summitt, Fred is buying a line of elevators in Iowa.

Eden Clark will be remembered by Wayne residents of ten or fifteen years ago, when he attended the Wayne High school of which he is a graduate.

ADVERTISED LETTERS: Letters, D. C. Eldridge, J. E. Hedges, Bob Henley, James Hoey, James J. Hoey, James and Jerry Hoey, John Frey, Wilhelm Funken, Carl Walter Kahn.

W. H. McNeal, P. M. The Herald for good job work.

Important Business Change

A surprise was sprung in business circles Monday, when it was announced that J. J. Ahern had sold his interests in the Miller & Ahern store to J. Woodward Jones. The new man is well and favorably known about Wayne, and has the experience of an active business life previous to locating in this vicinity.

During the past few years he has resided on a farm adjoining Wayne on the west, while he has had in hand the local management of the Morrison farms over the country. Recognized as a man of means, good judgment and industry his entrance into the city's business life will be welcome. Our best wish is that the popularity and success of the old firm will be augmented by its successor.

The retirement of Mr. Ahern from the business does not mean that he is to leave us. He tells the Herald that Wayne is his home and here he intends to remain and enter business again; that several opportunities have opened to him and in a short time he will make a definite announcement. This is good news to Mr. Ahern's friends, for they have recognized him for his brains and ability, and know that wherever he applies his talents he will win success.

Some think women are peculiar, but when considering that a boy's suit can be bought for one dollar at the 2 John's you can't blame them for rushing there.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Battay entertained at an elaborate dinner on Tuesday of last week. The invited guests were: Messrs and Mrs. E. J. Evans, C. E. Jones, M. Jones, Fred Robinson and Drs. A. Texley and Thos. Lovig.

John K. Davis came in on the Tuesday morning train for a visit, with friends and relatives in the settlement.

He is now engaged in railroading at Ordin, Utah, and is highly pleased with his work. As January is a vacation month, he will likely remain in Carroll for a week or two.

Arthur Parry was in Carroll, from Wayne, Monday to arrange a time for moving to his farm, purchased some time ago from Robert Jones. Mr. Parry traded his Wayne residence property in the deal and we understand Mr. Jones will move to Wayne and himself, thus enabling him to give all his time to his duties as county surveyor.

Ed. Moore returned from a Dakota trip last evening. He was investigating the outlook for a claim in Lyman county with view of locating. He reports the homesteads about all gone but that chances to secure relinquishments were numerous. The later often selling from $1000 to $1200. Ed. will likely move to Dakota in the spring with his brother W. A. Moore.

The "devil" with an assistant got out on the Carroll Index during editor Closson's absence, for the holidays. The issue for the week proved a hummer in the way of news. The people hardly realized that so many things were transpiring in Carroll as were chronicled by the imp.

But it only goes to prove, that Carroll is still a lusty youngster, full of business life and enterprise, and bound with each succeeding year to cover a larger spot on the map of the country. Let's all get into the game and hustle for Carroll.

It is surprising to see how fast the men "get there." The ton leather suits at five is the attraction at the 2 John's.

Ernest Busch, Jr. left for Scribner, Neb., Saturday morning for a short visit with a brother, from there he went to Fremont on business, returning Tuesday.

"UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY"

"Uncle Josh Spruceby," the first of the many rural plays now being presented in the different cities will be seen at the Wayne opera house, January 11, 1907. This production is said to be different from all others as it contains much comedy as well as pathos, and the realistic saw-mill scene is said to be the most exciting and intense effect ever produced.

The scenes in the saw-mill are laid in Vermont and New York, which gives ample opportunity for portraying the simple rustic characters in country as well as the many incidents that befall the simple country folks that visit the metropolis.

Dyson, who was hand-in-glove with one of the senior boys, returned Cyrus' jacket and cap to him and went away with his friends; and the two Baumgartens were left alone. Charles was crying and shaking. Charles' nose was bleeding and down sat Cyrus in a corner of the now deserted cloisters, and held the child in his tenderly as any mother could have done.

"Don't cry, Charley, dear," quoth he, kissing him fondly. "I know that biggest bellow that set upon you, and I'll pay him off as sure as he's a snub. I'd have paid them off if they had waited the world over, and I don't care if they had called me for it. Where did they hit you, Charley?"

"They hit me everywhere, Cyrus," sobbed the child, who, though barely two years younger than his brother, was as a baby compared with him in build and in knowledge of the world. "Oh, now my nose bleeds!"

Cyrus with his own white handkerchief wiped the sniffling nose, kissing Charley between whines.

"Now, Cyrus," began the dean, "we must have an explanation, and if you deserve punishment you shall not escape it. I did not think my boy was a coward, still less that he would ill treat his young brother."

The color flashed into the cheeks of Cyrus, and a light into his eyes. But he would not speak.

"Come hither, Charles. Do you see his face, sir?" added the dean, taking the child's hand. "Are you not ashamed to look at it, and to reflect that you have caused him all this grief and pain?"

"No, that I don't. I'll fight for you, Charley; I'll never let a man of your head touch you again. I'll stand by you, Charley, till I die."

"I hope I shall get brave like you, Charley, I shall, when I am a big boy; but, just as you say, you were not much better than me when you were as little."

"Oh, I'm blessed, though," returned Cyrus, now pleased with the remark.

"Jaquet."

Jaquet had better say that to me she's a nice one! I never was a molly Charley; I never had the chance to be known that, and she must have said just to her mother. Why, how can we tell what the girls make of you? They keep you in those dandy velvet dresses with a white frill, and the dog lets them off outside the door, thinks there's a woman at your tail to see you don't fall, or don't get lost, or come back now."

"A little while longer they sit there, saying nothing, the still sobbing child hocking his hate, wiping his eyes, whilst being endeared to James, and then they get up, and he led him affectionately into the deacon's room, and then he died, through the covered passage.

A couple of pretty objects the boys looked when they entered the well-lighted cloisters. Cyrus smacked Charles into the mouth.

"Oh, my patience!" uttered the nurse, who was sitting there with her charge, a lovely little lady between five and six years old, Gertrude Baumgartner. "You wicked boy! what have you been up to? This is your work, I know, Master Cyrus."

"Is it? Who gave you leave to know?" retorted Cyrus. He was no more friendly to Jaquet than he used to be, or she to him.

Gertude backed in fear, naming the wall, her eyes bright and blue as were her mother's, wide open with astonishment. She did not like the appearance of things, and began to cry.

"Now, don't be such a stupid, Gerty, exclaimed Cyrus; "there's nothing to cry for. Charley's nose bled, and it got on to our clothes."

"Yes, it's me that's hurt, Jaquet," put in Charley, remembering his grievances and giving way again. "It isn't Cyrus."

Lady Grace lifted her eyes to his husband. She knew him to be an honorable man, and that he would not accept a thing except in perfect good faith.

"Do you mean that Cyrus did not beat Charley? Why did he not say so, then?"

"It's spirit in fault again, I suppose too proud to defend himself against an unjust imputation," replied the dean. "You should have heard Charles, Grace, telling how Cyrus sat down and nursed him afterward in the cloisters, kissing him and wiping the blood from his face, and whispering to him how he loved him better than anything else in the world. Grace, those two will be affectionate, loving brothers if we do not part it."

The dean left the boys together, and went in search of his wife. He found her in her chamber.

"Grace," said he, going up to her, "there has been a misapprehension, and I have come to set you right. Charley got into an affray with some strange boys in the cloisters, and Cyrus defended him against them—going into them without doubt like a young lion, for his possesses uncommon spirit; too much of it. We have been casting blame on Cyrus unnecessarily."

Lady Grace lifted her eyes to his husband.

"That's what you have been doing, Master Cyrus. You've been thumping him on the nose to make it bleed."

"It's nothing to you if I have," returned Cyrus, in choler. "You just say again, though, and I'll strike you." He glared to say it was not so, or to defend himself; he was by far too indignant a temperament.

"Oh, nurse—look! look!" screamed out the little girl.

It was supplemented by a sharp scream from Charley; his nose had begun to bleed again; and at that moment there was another interruption. The room door opened, and the dean and his wife entered. The nurse, whose temper was not a remarkably calm one and who disliked the daring Cyrus, was busy getting hot water and a basin.

"Look at him, my lady, look at him, cried she, "and it's Master Cyrus doing it."

"What does all this mean?" demanded the dean, his eyes wandering from one boy to the other, from their faces to their clothes, his hands taking in the sunburn and the crying. "What is it, I ask?" he sternly concluded, and then he had replied:

"How dared you hit him?" exclaimed Lady Grace, turning to Cyrus.

The boy looked at her, but did not answer. She took it off bravely. Her passion rose. "You are growing a perverted little savage!" And raising her delicate gloved hand in the heat of the moment, she struck Master Cyrus, sending a ringing blow upon his cheek.

Dyson, catching the other boy, said, "Come in, Cyrus; I want you," she said, drawing him gently to her. "Your papa has been telling me that it was not you who hit Charles and made his nose bleed."

"Of course it was not me—as if I would!" said Cyrus.

"But why did you not tell me so? I caused you to punish you, for I thought you deserved it. I am sorry to have done so, Cyrus, but the fault was yours. You should have told me the truth."

"Sometimes when you are angry with me, mamma, and I tell you Jaquet, you don't believe me. You believe Jaquet instead of me. I don't get fair play in this house with anybody, except papaw. Jaquet hates me, mamma; you know she always did hate me."

"As Jaquet chose to interpret it," said the dean, "I inquired into that." Cyrus gave the child a tap on the arm. Of course, he ought not to have done even that, and I punished him for it."

"You cannot see his failings, Dyson; you supply him with an unlimited command of money."

"Unlimited!" again interrupted the dean. "You speak without thought, Grace."

"I think too much," she replied. "I have abstained hitherto from serious remonstrance, for ever I have interfered by a word, you have attributed it to me, and I feel sure, to a jealous feeling, because he is not my own child. But I now tell you that something must be done; if that boy is to stop in the house and rule it I won't. I will not allow him to ill-treat Charles. I will not, I say."

"Hush, Grace; you are excited. Remember the grace."

CHAPTER XIII.

In the handsome drawing room of their town residence in Berkeley Square, sat the dame and her lady Grace Baumgartner. It was a fine evening in April; the dinner hour was approaching, and they were awaiting a guest, an old friend whom the dean had met in the street unexpectedly that day, and invited.

Years have elapsed, and the dean, approaching fifty now, is more portly than he was wont to be; but Lady Grace carries her age well, and looks not a day older than the period a woman never confesses to have passed five-and-thirty. But in the dean's face there is a look of anxiety.

Gifted with an aristocratic wife, and with aristocratic tastes and habits, the dean had fallen long and long ago into a more expensive rate of living than his means permitted. Embarrassment followed, trifling enough at first, and easily put off—not done away with, but deferred. But the plan does not answer; it is something like the nails in the horseshoe, which doubled as they went on; and Dr. Baumgartner had now attained to a height of perplexity in his pecuniary affairs not frequently reached by a dignitary of the church.

Half the labor of his later life had been to hide it from Lady Grace. She could not avoid knowing that they were in debt, but she had no conception to what extent and debt is rather a fashionable complaint. She also found that the dean invariably ran short of ready money; but that is not uncommon either. In one sense of the word, the debt which had gathered about them might be put down to the score of Lady Grace. At the death of her mother, Lady Avon, she had come into all the property that would be hers—two thousand a year. With that and the dean's income they might have lived sufficiently well. But Lady Grace had had little idea of the value of money. Living in Berkeley Square was her doing, and was quite wrong and ridiculous with their narrowed means.

To years before the present chapter opens Lady Grace had come to London on a visit to her brother, Lord Avon, who had not yet got the estate to look after, and to reflect that you have caused him all this grief and pain."

"Papa," interrupted Charles, "it was not Cyrus who hurt me. It was the snake."

"It was—what?" slowly uttered the dean, his dignity taken a little aback.

"Those charity boys," Frank Dylevor calls them sauds, do good. Cyrus was with the college boys in the cloisters and they set upon us; there were five or six upon us all at once, papa, they hit me on the nose, and I dare say they would have killed me, only Cyrus came running up, and fought with them, and I was not strong enough to stand up to them. And then I sat down in the cloisters, and then I was as long as I was frightened, and that's how the blood got upon his clothes."

The dean looked from one to the other. "Was it not Cyrus who hurt you then? I scarcely understand."

"Cyrus loves me too much to hurt me," cried Charley, lifting his beautiful, deep and brown eyes just like Cyrus'; just like the dean's to his father's eyes. "He was bleeding me all the time in the cloisters; he was so sorry I was hurt; and he loves me better than anybody else in the world, and he'll pay off that biggest lob for the first time he sees him. Don't you, Cyrus?"

The boy turned caressingly to Cyrus, Cyrus looking red and foolish, not caring to have his private affections betrayed for the public benefit, and he shook off Charley. Dr. Baumgartner drew Cyrus to him, and fondly kissed his forehead.

"Tell me about it, my boy."

"Oh, you know that big parish school papa; well, they are always setting on the college boys, and they came up to the cloister this evening, and Charley, being with the boys, got in for his share of punnelling, and I beat the fellows off him. That's all."

The dean left the boys together, and went in search of his wife. He found her in her chamber.

"Grace," said he, going up to her, "there has been a misapprehension, and I have come to set you right. Charley got into an affray with some strange boys in the cloisters, and Cyrus defended him against them—he was so sorry I was hurt; and he loves me better than anybody else in the world, and he'll pay off that biggest lob for the first time he sees him. Don't you, Cyrus?"

The boy turned caressingly to Cyrus, Cyrus looking red and foolish, not caring to have his private affections betrayed for the public benefit, and he shook off Charley. Dr. Baumgartner drew Cyrus to him, and fondly kissed his forehead.

"Tell me about it, my boy."

"It shall not be able to do without it, now that I have tasted its sweets again," said she to her brother one day. "I think I must look out for some furnished house to let cheaply, Harry, and take it."

"All right," said his lordship, who had given in to Grace from the time she was a baby.

What meant that she was about to get married? But when the name of the intended bridegroom was disclosed it provoked laughter from the dean's household, especially from his eldest son. For the name was—

"Bones."

It was a fine evening in April; the dinner hour was approaching, and they were awaiting a guest, an old friend whom the dean had met in the street unexpectedly that day, and invited.

"I do not forget it. Your son did, probably, when he struck Charley."

"I cannot think he struck him—in that fierce manner."

"Why, you saw the proofs," she retorted. "Don't you mean to inquire into it and punish him?"

"I certainly do—if you will only allow me time. Grace. Much has not been lost yet."

Lady Grace left the room, and the dean rang the bell, dispatching the servant who answered it for Master Baumgartner.

Cyrus had not yet gone the length of disobeying his father's mandates, and intended as soon as he had been, what the nurse called, "put to rights," meaning his unrighteousness changed for a clean one.

Charles' nose was bleeding and down sat Cyrus in a corner of the now deserted cloisters, and held the child in his tenderly as any mother could have done.

"I do not forget it. Your son did,

The great artist returned suddenly and discovered that his neighbor's little boy had covered his masterpiece with black paint.

"Great Scott, lad!" gasped the artist, "what have you done? Don't you know that was my wonderful canvas entitled 'The Sunset'? You have ruined it."

The boy seemed repentant for a moment, then a brilliant thought passed him.

"And it isn't ruined," he hastened to say, "you can sell it. Just tell them the sun has gone down." —Minneapolis Tribune.

BLOATED WITH DROPSY.

The Heart Was Badly Affected When the Patient Began Using Donn's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maxwell of 416 West Fourth St., Olympia, Wash., says: "For over three years I suffered with a dropsy condition without being aware that it was due to kidney trouble. The early stages were principally backache and bearing down pain, but I went along without worrying much until droops set in. My feet and ankles swelled up, my hands puffed and became so tense I could hardly close them. I had great difficulty in breathing, and my heart would flutter with the least exertion. I could not walk far without stopping again and again to rest. Since using four boxes of Donn's Kidney Pills the bloating has gone down and the feelings of distress have disappeared."

ALMOST A SOLID SORE.

Skin Disease from Birth—Forteine Spent on Her Without Benefit Doctor Cured Her with Cutler's.

I have a cousin in Rockingham County, who once had a skin disease from her birth until she was six years of age. Her father had spent a fortune on her to get her cured and none of the treatments did her any good. Old Dr. G. suggested that he try the Cutler's Remedies, which he did. When he came to me to let the child was almost a solid scab. He had used it about two months and the child was well. I was there when they commenced to use your Cutler's Remedies. I stayed that week and then returned home and stayed two weeks and then went back and stayed with them two weeks longer, and when I went home I could hardly believe she was the same child. Her skin was as soft as a baby's without a scar on it. I have not seen her in seventeen years, but I have heard from her and the last time I heard from her she was well. —Mrs. W. P. The Knock-out Blow.

This blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in the way and won't the fighter, but if a scoundrel man, like Corbett, threw the fight that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach. He had laughed at him for no temperance. Dr. Pierce, bringing home to the public a parallel fact, that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ of the prize ring as well as in life. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—cures "weak stomach," indigestion, dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The Golden Medical Discovery has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to click the fingers with Dr. Pierce's Catarrh Remedy and then apply the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the Golden Medical Discovery cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicine and shows that it does not contain not a drop of alcohol, quinine, sugar or glycerine being used.

In a recent report of the bureau of navigation it is shown that 93 per cent of the enlisted men in the navy are native-born Americans, and that during the year forty-three per cent of the men qualified for re-enlistment did enlist. WASHINGTON Gossip

FADED BY BIG ISSUES.

STATE LEGISLATURES ALL HAVE LONG CALENDARS.

Railroad, Insurance, Primary Election and Other Things—Lower Fares Take Lead While Car Shortage and Pass Abuses Come Next.

A mighty din from legislative forces is about to begin to echo throughout the West as the general assemblies convene and lawmakers take up the sledges to hammer out our reform enactments. Few States are without five issues on which the great bronze doors were closed throughout the country four hours were July 4, the funeral day of John Hay, July 5 and Christmas.

Almost a double force is required for the building, which is open virtually day and evening the year around. The largest number of visitors in any one day was 5,284, in April, and the smallest 444, on one of the hottest days in July. An idea of the size of this library may be obtained from the statistics for last year, which showed a gain in the number of volumes of 34,626, bringing the number of books on the racks up to 1,371,244. This total of books, pamphlets, maps and charts and pieces of music added last year was $1,285.

Some of the postal improvements advocated in Cortelyou's annual report are the parcels post, postal savings bank, postal telegraph and telephone, abolition of railway speed subsidies, additional subsidies to South American and Australian steamers, low-rate postal rates, and for new taxing schemes that will provide for greater revenues from public utility concerns.

Changes in the political system also are up for action in several Commonwealths, four of which are pledged to follow the lead of Illinois and Wisconsin in the enactment of a law that will give direct primaries, and that will give the electors a chance to scalp party bosses and still ring true by taking off their own hands the matter of picking party candidates.

The liquor traffic, too, will be an important part of the year's reforms. In five States local option laws are to be presented. Their fate is problematical, but the fact that they will form part of the legislative grid has led to a listing up of the liquor elements and the temperance forces in preparation for fierce battles.

The question of taxation will be another bone of contention in at least eight States, and measures are being prepared that provide for changes in the revenue systems. In Illinois a fight will be made to make the railroads and other public service corporations pay all State taxes instead of imposing them on holders of general property, while in Wisconsin there will be an attempt to pass an act for a graduated income tax.

The great live issue of general interest throughout the general assemblies of the West, however, is that dealing with the railroad companies. There are five phases to the question, the most drastic and important relating to lower passenger fares. In eight States 2-cent fares will be fought for. Accompanying the reduction in fares is a general movement to abolish the pass system, and seven States are preparing to toll the knoll of the annuals with which the railroads have kept on the good side of lawmakers and politicians. The passing of the pass, it is expected, will be attended by bitter contests.

The live issues which will engage the attention of lawmakers of the various States may be summarized as follows:

Car Shortage—North Dakota, Colorado, Michigan, Nevada, Oregon, Nebraska, Washington, Idaho, Wyoming, Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri. Several assemblies virtually pledged.

Railroad Regulation—North Dakota, Colorado, South Dakota, Nebraska, Washington, Kansas. Four States pledged. Governors in either favor. Others will oppose strongly.

Hard Mouthed Horses.

There is something of practical value to anyone driving a horse that pulls on the bit.

Fasten a small ring to each side of the bridle and as near the brow band as possible.

Pass the lines through the bit rings and snap them into the rings at the brow band.

This will hold the mouth wide open.

With a common jointed bit, W.H. will enable a child to hold a puller or hard mouthed horse with ease under almost all circumstances.

It can be used on a horse in double team or on both, as desired.

It is cheap and easily applied, and it won't make the mouth sore.

It is better than any patent bit.

Vitality of Alfalfa Seed.

Tests made at the Colorado station indicate that "good, plump, mature, clean alfalfa seed does not lose its vitality rapidly when kept with ordinary precautions to prevent injury from moisture."

The oldest sample had a germinating power of 93 per cent when six years old, and of 72 when ten years old.

Professor W. P. Hadden believes that the limit for the vitality of good, mature alfalfa seed exceeds sixteen years.

New Meat Law Working Well.

In addressing the convention of the New York State Breeders Association upon the new meat inspection law and its bearing upon the production and handling of meats, George P. McCabe, solicitor of the department of agriculture at Washington, said the law appeared to be working well and was serving as a guarantee of the healthfulness, purity and wholesomeness of our live stock and meats in the markets of the world. He declared that to secure the best results, breeders of every state should take up vigorously the question of the extension of markets and should back the department of agriculture in an insistent demand that they are not kept too warm.

It is said on authority of a member of the family that Chauncey M. Depew will be seen in the Senate when that body convenes in December.

Senator Beveridge several years ago, after a visit to Arizona and New Mexico, was sent $10,000 worth of stock in cattle in that section. He retained the stock, which is said to-day to be worth $1,500,000.

FARMS AND FARMERS

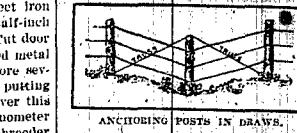

How to Bud Peaches.

For a budding knife take a common case knife—a broken one will do—cut blade of square about one inch from shaft; sharpen this end not very thick, but sharp. Keep the normal edge as keen as possible. Now, to use it, set the end edge squarely across the branch, or seedling, where you wish to set your bud and with gentle pressure cut through the bark to the wood. Next, set the same edge vertically just below where you have made the cross incision and penetrate through the bark as before, and before withdrawing the knife give it a slight twist, which will throw the bark open for the reception of the bud.

The bud is cut from the stem of the variety desired by starting the knife in the soil about one-fourth of an inch below the bud, and cutting upward to the same distance above, taking off the bud with a shield-shaped piece of bark and a small shaving of the wood of the scion. Insert the bud in the incision already made in the stock and tie the bark to the stock down over it firmly, but not too tightly. For tying, anything nearly will do. I have used corn husks when other material was not handy.

Making Brooder at Home.
Here are the plans for a brooder that can easily be made by anyone. Make a box 4 feet 4 inches by 3 feet 8 inches and 2 feet high, using 2x2-inch pieces for corner posts, and matched boards for siding. Inside nail strips around 11 inches from bottom to support the floor, which should be made of matched lumber and left so it could be taken out and cleaned. Make door in end level with floor, also glass in upper half of each side for light. Top made to slant both ways and about half of each side hinged so as to make feeding and cleaning easy. Place large piece of sheet iron on underside of floor with half-inch strips between door and iron. Cut door in lower part of end; place good metal bowl lamp under sheet iron; bore several holes in floor over lamp, putting tin can punched full of holes over this to keep out dirt. Place thermometer on inside and you will have a brooder which will give the best of satisfaction.

Anchoring Fence Posts.
Here is a handy way of anchoring fence posts in draws or low places. Instead of hanging a stone to the post, take a double wire and use it in the form of a truss, as indicated in cut. The plan is so simple that little description is necessary. If the cut is very deep, one can use a longer post, or spike a 2x4 onto the post, and so put the truss wire yet higher, and hence that much more effective.

Why Young Trees Are Best.

These living things where you can successfully grow the copper should utilize this valuable crop as a cheap ration for pigs. The pea is rich in protein and furnishes the needed growth, and does away with the necessity of millet.

Drill three or four pecks of seed per acre the latter part of May or the first part of June and give the needed cultivation till the vines cover the ground enough to check weed growth. Turn the pigs into the field when the pods begin to ripen, and they will do the harvesting. If the old boys are unused to pigs, they need corn or some other carbohydrate to give proper balance, for they cannot utilize protein as pigs. Try a patch of cowpea pasture this year, and get your hogs in fine shape for the corn when it comes.

Why Young Trees Are Best.
These are the advantages of planting young trees; they can be trained to the desired form better than older trees, says Farming. A 2 or 3-year-old tree is branched and has had its head already formed by the nurseryman; a yearling tree of the apple, peach and sweet cherry is usually unbranched. Sometimes the nurseryman has headed the tree too high or has not been careful enough starting out the scaffold limbs, and it is difficult to correct the form of the head after it has been started. There is an unmistakable preference for low-headed trees, due chiefly to the need of economy and efficiency in spraying and harvesting. The single disadvantage of low-heading is greater inconvenience in tillage. This is much more offset by the advantages, in the judgment of most growers. Within ten years the height recommended for heading apple trees in the East has been reduced at least two feet. The bearing of this on the matter of yearling trees is that the grower can head a yearling tree where he pleases.

AN IMPORTANT CASE.
Patient Cured of Ataxia Gives the Entire Credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. S. C. Wellcock, of 114 Cleveland Avenue, Everett, Mass., the wife of an employee in the government works at Chelsea, says:

"I had been troubled with nervousness for ten years and the disease kept growing on me. Then I learned that I was suffering from ataxia. I had terrible tremblings in my right leg which would get rigid and when this happened in the street I had to stand still until it passed away to keep from falling. My right arm felt as if a thousand needles were pricking it. The sheet touching my knee in bed would nearly cause me to scream out with pain and both knees were so weak I could hardly stand."

"I had to use a cane and be helped about by my son. Then the pain began to settle in the calves of my legs and the muscles became numb and quivered constantly. The cords under my knee seemed to be drawn up tight and the terrible shooting pains in my legs would nearly drive me insane. My then doctor could not find any cause for this and I was told it would prick like needles were thrust into them. My heart became dull and black spots floated before them. My heart was very weak."

"My attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I bought several boxes right away and soon felt relief. I was so pleased that I kept on taking them until they cured me entirely, and I have had no symptoms of the trouble for over a year."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.
