I. O. O. F. ELECTS OFFICERS

Rebekahs Plan a Pleasant Surprise on the Boys.

Wayne Lodge No. 118 I. O. O. F. elected new officers Monday night, as follows: A. A. Chance, noble grand; H. E. Greggs, vice grand; Herman Lundberg, secretary; Henry Ley, treasurer; A. E. Jeffrie, trustee. At the close of the business session the Rebekah lodge appeared on the scene, the members having provided a splendid supper for the Odd Fellows. After supper was served the drill team of the lodge gave a practice drill for the benefit of the visitors, and altogether it was a most pleasant evening for the members of the two lodges.

Blind Girl's Parents Thankful

Governor Sheldon has received the following letter from grateful parents:

Carroll, Nebr., Nov. 18. Hon. Geo. L. Sheldon, Governor of Nebraska, Dear Sir: As Thanksgiving draws nigh we all stop to think what we have to be thankful for. Our little girl, our only child, 8 years old, is blind. By kind friends advice we sent her to the State School for the Blind at Nebraska City. After visiting that wonderful institution and seeing the great headway our child makes in learning, we stop to marvel at our inconstancy to our great Maker. We feel that we have a great deal to be thankful for. The people of this state cannot appreciate the wonderful good such an institution is doing for them until they are brought face to face with a terrible affliction.

Then another thing to be thankful for is that our child is under the care of such good, Christian people as Mr. and Mrs. Morey. I visit there frequently and know they have the students interest at heart. They treat them all as if they were there own. The children are well provided for in the way of food and beds. I shall certainly recommend it to people who have blind children and are afraid to send them away from home among strangers. Accept this note as a thanks offering from two grateful parents. Respectfully, Mr. & Mrs. I. Walden.

"KILLED MY DUCKS."

Farmer Wants $5,000 Damages for Above Alleged Statement.

A $5,000 damage suit that has been filed for the next term of the Wayne County district court and one that by reason of being somewhat out of the ordinary will no doubt attract considerable attention is the suit of Johannus Hansen vs Lars Larson. The petition is very brief and alleges that on August 8, 1907 said defendant with intent to injure the plaintiff, made a statement in the presence of others, in effect, stating that defendant had "killed my ducks." The petition states that plaintiff had been greatly injured in his good name and asks damages in the sum of $5,000.

Both parties reside about seven miles northwest of Wayne and are well-to-do farmers.

Boyd Drafts Banking Bill.

Congressman J. F. Boyd left Tuesday, Nov. 26, for Washington to begin his first term as representative in the national legislature. With him, the Norfolk News says, he took to Washington a bill that he has already framed providing for a government guarantee to depositors in national banks, insuring all national bank depositors that, no matter what happens, their deposits will be safe.

The bill as drafted contemplates that when a national bank fails the government shall appoint a receiver as now and the depositors will immediately thereafter, or within ninety days, file claims with the treasury department as to the amount of deposit. This claim, approved by the receiver, will be paid in full by the government so that the depositor in a very short time will realize 100 per cent on his deposits. The treasury department to reimburse itself for this loss, would then under the provisions of the bill, levy an assessment against the depositors of all national banks. Under the business transacted during the year preceding Sept. 30, the levy upon solvent national banks would have amounted to one-fortieth of one per cent of deposits. In this way, each bank would practically be protected by mutual bank insurance, with the government handling the matter. Congressman Boyd thinks such a plan would increase bank deposits 25 per cent. Judge Boyd will make his headquarters at the Dewey hotel in Washington.

Return Jack Screws

Parties having jack screws belonging to me will please return them at once.—J. H. Wright.

A New Jersey Judge has decided that it is the duty of the husband to wash dishes and make himself generally useful about the house. The decision came in a case where a man went home and finding piled on the table the dishes from the morning and noon meals, proceeded to make a rough house. The editor of this paper takes to himself considerable comfort from the above decision. Having just put in a summer "batching" on a western homestead he was disposed to envy the benedicts but this decision puts them in a worse plight than the bachelor because the average woman will insist on hubby washing the dishes at least once a day while the writer never thought of doing the dish-washing act oftener than once a week.

Mrs. Frank Owen was hostess to the Minerva club last Tuesday afternoon. A very interesting program was given, Mrs. Owen served tempting refreshments. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. L. Owen on December 10.

B. J. Wright of Neligh was accidentally shot yesterday while out hunting with a party of hunters south of here. He and a fellow hunter had started out together and then separated, the other man coming behind where Mr. Wright was, when a bird flew up and in shooting at it hit Mr. Wright in the arm and face. It is thought no serious complications will result.

Miss Mabel Sears of Wayne and Mr. Rightmire of Graff, Nebr. were married at home of Mrs. Sears on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. Smith of the Baptist Church. Miss Sears is well known to Wayne people being the accomodating clerk at Jones Bookstore till of late. She is a very highly esteemed young lady and has a host of admirers who wish her well. Mr. Rightmire is a former student of the Wayne Normal and is highly spoken of by those who know him. The bride and groom will visit relatives in Council Bluffs and then they go to Graff, where the groom has a good position with Edwards & Bradfords Lumber Co.

About fifty of the young people of Mrs. Smith's class in the Sunday School were royally entertained at the Baptist parsonage last Friday evening. The rooms in which the guests assembled were beautifully decorated in pink and blue, these being the class colors. Games were introduced immediately in which all took part, thus becoming acquainted and affording much amusement. The games were followed by excellent program rendered by members of the class, each number of which was heartily applauded. Following the program came an elegant three course supper served by waiters in blue and pink caps and aprons. About half-past eleven the guests departed for their respective homes, one and all feeling that they had spent an evening long to be remembered.

On the Wrong Man.

Bret Harte was so frequently complimented on being the author of "Little Breeches" that he was almost sorry it was ever written, as was Secretary John Hay, who would prefer his fame to rest on more ambitious work. A gushing lady who prided herself upon her literary tastes said to him once: "Mr. Harte, I am so delighted to meet you. I have read everything you ever wrote, but of all your dialect verse there is none that compares with your 'Little Breeches.'" "I quite agree with you, madam," said Mr. Harte, "but you have put the little breeches on the wrong man."—Harrisburg Telegraph.

To Easyman's Discomfiture.

Mrs. Scraphard (after a tilt in which Mr. was not without honors)—Mrs. Easyman, across the way, has got a bargain of a husband. Mr. Scraphard—So? Well, then, Mrs. Easyman is proving to the world that there is at least one woman who can drive a bargain.—Norristown Times.

A Winter Wish.

I've read of folk who calmly glide
Adown life's river, slide by side.
With Cupid at the helm to steer
Their bark from rocks and breakers clear,
Or walk sedately in the way
Of matrimony, day by day.
Somehow I feel inclined to sneeze.
At such slow, poky ways as these,
If I might choose, I'd ask, with Kate,
Forever down life's stream to skate!

EYE WINKS.

They Occur on an Average Twenty Times a Minute.

The average person winks his eyes every three seconds—that is to say, twenty times a minute, or 1,200 times in an hour. This means that an ordinary day's work for a pair of eyelids is from 13,000 to 20,000 winks.

A wink is accomplished in about one-fiftieth of a second, so quickly that, as anybody may observe for himself, it does not in the slightest degree interrupt continuous vision. But the notion that winking is intended by nature to give repose to the eyes is a mistake, the object of it being merely to keep the surface of the sensitive little organs constantly moist. The moisture, which is necessary for the health of the eyes, is supplied, of course, by the tears.

For this purpose—that is to say, to keep the eyes continually bathed—considerable quantities of salty water are secreted. The water is flowing all the time and would pour out over the edges of the eyelids were it not for an oil which is furnished to prevent this. This oil is secreted and supplied by little glands along the rims of the lids. There is also a tear duct, which carries off the superfluous water and gets rid of it.

The mouth of the tear duct is plainly visible on the edge of the lower eyelid near the inner corner of the eye. It is a small pipe, which leads down into the throat, so that when one puts into the eyes anything with a pronounced taste, like cocaine, the flavor of it is presently distinguishable in the mouth.

The eyelids, if closed, are absolutely water tight. They do not exclude light, however, nearly so well as most people suppose.—Saturday Evening Post.

Safe and Swift.

The pupils in No. 3 school in Bushby knew that whenever Mr. Lamson paid them a visit there was one question he was sure to ask, and their answer was always ready. The other selectmen might propound geographical or arithmetical puzzles, but not Mr. Lamson, chief of Bushby's fire brigade.

It was the closing day of school, and the children, having listened to three addresses with drowsy patience, were glad when Mr. Lamson rose to conclude the exercises.

"Now, children," he said cheerfully, "you have listened most attentively to the words of Mr. Howe, Mr. Gray and Mr. Ranlett. I wonder what you would do if I made you a little speech?"

The shift from the usual question was so unexpected that the children answered before they had time to catch themselves.

"Form in line and march quietly out of the building!" they cried in prompt and joyful chorus.

Bitter Wit.

Samuel Rogers, the banker poet, was noted for his bitter wit, for which, however, he had an excuse. "They tell me I say ill natured things," he once observed in his slow, quiet, deliberate way. "I have a very weak voice. If I did not say ill natured things no one would hear what I said."

It was owing to this weakness of voice that no candles were put on his dinner table, for glare and noise go together, and dimness subdues the voices in conversation as a handkerchief thrown over the cage of a canary subdues its song. The light was thrown upon the walls and pictures and shaded from the room. This did not suit Sydney Smith, who said that a dinner in St. James' place was "a flood of light on all above, and below nothing but darkness and gnashing of teeth."

His Opportunity.

A Buffalo physician tells of two young friends in that city who entered simultaneously upon their respective careers of physician and lawyer. Late one afternoon the newly made medico dashed into the room of his legal friend, exclaiming: "Great luck, old man! Congratulate me! Got a patient at last! On my way to see him now!" Whereupon the legal light to be slapped his friend on the back, saying, "Delighted, old chap!" Then, after a slight pause, he added, with a sly grin: "Say, let me go with you! Perhaps he hasn't made his will!"

Too Generous.

A lady traveling as a first class passenger was much distressed by the plight of her valuable young collic, which at Preston station fell between the footboard of the train and the platform. She appealed to a porter to save it, and the man crawled underneath the carriage and dragged the animal out, although the dog bit his hand several times. Having got her pet safely in her compartment, the lady rewarded the man who had rescued it from almost certain death with a threepenny bit.—St. J. Gazette.

LAND! LAND! LAND!

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit, berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one-third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

RENTERS, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

COME TO THE NEW LAND and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

DON'T WAIT! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte Valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

FARM OWNERS, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here for from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte Valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

INVESTORS: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

WRITE TO-DAY FOR FURTHER INFORMATION. Local real estate dealers correspond. We can make some money for you.

Primary Filing Bill

Is the Nebraska primary law unconstitutional? According to the supreme court of Minnesota it is not. According to the supreme court of North Dakota it is. It would be interesting to hear from the supreme court of Nebraska as to a point on which the supreme courts of Minnesota and North Dakota disagree.

The Minnesota, North Dakota and Nebraska primary laws require filing fees on the part of primary candidates. That is to say, candidates are required to pay a small fee for the privilege of having their names placed on the primary ballot. The Minnesota court says this is all right that such a restriction is as reasonable as the one limiting voting at a primary to bona fide members of a party. The North Dakota supreme court says it is all wrong—that under the constitution every voter has a right to be a candidate for any office, and that the state has no right to erect a monetary bar, however small, between the voter and the office to which he may aspire. The North Dakota idea is that it is as much out of place to ask a man to pay for the privilege of being a candidate as it would to ask a voter to pay for the privilege of voting. Arguments can be made in favor of both contentions, and it is not surprising to find courts disagreeing as to their weight.

The Nebraska supreme court has already taken a step that indicates it may lean to the North Dakota view. According to the attorney general's interpretation the Nebraska primary law restricted the voter to a choice among the candidates whose names are printed on the ballot. The Nebraska supreme court rejected this view and held that a voter may write in the name of any candidate for whom he wishes to vote. Under this ruling some candidates can be voted for without paying any filing fee while other candidates pay for the privilege. It would seem to be well for Nebraska to see what its supreme court thinks about the filing fee.—Sioux City Journal.

MACADAM ROAD WORK

Method of Construction in Carroll Township, O.

GRADE THOROUGHLY DRAINED

Earth Excavated to One-half the Thickness of Stone Put In—First Layer of Stone Four or Five Inches Thick. Road Roller Useful Implement.

The laws of the state of Ohio give township trustees the power to levy a tax of six mills per dollar on all taxable property, which money must be used exclusively for stone roads, writes J. L. Peters, a township trustee, in the Good Roads Magazine. We have been carrying this levy for several years to raise funds for stone roads, but as the valuation of our township is rather small and the law further provides that trustees may accept by donation either money or labor we recently gave our people an opportunity to donate—that is, we would give them two or three weeks, on some of our main roads, to raise money by donation, with the privilege of working out the amount subscribed or to pay in cash by hand or by team work—hand labor at the rate of $1.50 per day and team work at $3 per day. The rule has been that the community raising the largest donation should receive its road first. Last spring there was a contest, one raising a donation of $1,680 and the other $11,055. Some farmers on the direct line of the road subscribed as much as $300 each.

Road building with us is just in its infancy. Up to the present time we have built only three miles, but our people all want more. Although we have had clay soil to contend with, our roads give pretty good satisfaction.

In the construction of our roads we first prepare our grade or earth bed by thoroughly draining it. This we recognize as being one of the most important features for building a successful road. We next excavate the earth to one-half the thickness of the stone to be put in. Before putting in the stone, however, our subgrade is thoroughly rolled down by our ten ton roller. The first layer of stone is put in four or five inches thick, consisting of stone running from three to four inches screened to size and well rolled. This is followed by another layer of same size in like manner, also well rolled, and then just enough screenings put on to fill up all voids and bond the stone and again rolled.

The third or last layer consists of stone running in size from one to two inches put on two or three inches thick, well rolled, with only enough screenings to bond the stone and leaving the road with a smooth finish. Care is necessary where a narrow track of stone road is built to keep same above the earth road and with enough crown to allow all water to run readily to the sides or gutters. We start our grade with a crown of three or four inches, which we hold till the road is finished.

The first two miles of bond built were constructed under favorable circumstances, as we had to haul the stone but one and one-half miles, and teams made seven and eight trips a piece per day. It required about 2,500 tons of stone to the mile. We have been using limestone and last year we had to pay 67 cents per ton freight on board cars at Oak Harbor. This year we were compelled to pay 80 cents per ton. The average cost of a road ten feet wide and ten inches thick would, I estimate, be about $3,200 per mile.

This year we built one of our main roads sixteen feet wide, ten inches thick in the center and five inches on the sides. This cost us $5,300 per mile, the cost, of course, depending upon the cost of material and the distance at which it has to be hauled. In this estimate labor, fuel for road roller and other expenses—the donated labor being counted the same as hired labor—are figured complete.

We own our own steam road roller, and we find this one of the most necessary implements for road building and for repairing the old roads. The work of construction is placed in charge of the township trustee. We do not employ an engineer or contractor. Bids are asked at the proper time for the crushed stone and then the contract for this is awarded to the lowest bidder. So far limestone being the most available material we have used it, and the figures I have given are based on the same.

"People of the present generation don't really know what cheap hogs are," said an old time stockman. "In the fall and winter of 1878, I bought lots of hogs in Kansas around $1.75 @2.25 and that is not all, I lost money then when I shipped. Farmers had genuine ground for complaint then and the hog raising proposition looked pretty blue. Along in the spring of 1879 the market firmed up rapidly, however, and I never expect to see hogs get down anywhere near those figures again."—Drovers Journal Stockman.

Barrington Hall
The Steel-Cut Coffee

FILLS A LONG FELT WANT.

Every coffee drinker in this town and every one who would like to drink coffee, but who can not drink ordinary brands, should try this widely advertised and justly celebrated Steel-Cut Coffee.

We have added it to our stock of high grade pure food groceries, because it will become immensely popular when once introduced.

When you buy a pound of Barrington Hall, you get a pound of the best part of the coffee only. It is cut, not ground, into fine, even particles and the bitter chaff containing the injurious element is removed.

Barrington Hall sells at 35 cents per pound tin. Buy a pound—try it in your home, and if you do not agree that it is the most delicious, healthful and economical coffee you have ever used, return what is left and get your money back.

Salutatory

It is in accordance with an old custom that something should be said by way of greeting by a new management of a paper to its readers. For some time it has been our hopes that conditions might so shape themselves that we could get into the newspaper field of Wayne county for a permanent home, and when that opportunity came there was no hesitation in making that hope a reality. We believe the Herald a good property, located in one of the best towns in one of the best counties in this part of the west, and we hope to become identified with and, to the extent of our ability, will assist in furthering the general welfare of Wayne and Wayne county; doing what lies in our power for the upbuilding of any and all industries and institutions that will accrue to the public good.

Politically the Herald will be continued a republican newspaper advocating progressive republican principles and policies. Locally the paper will not give aid to any faction, but believing the good of the party of the whole county paramount to the interests of any individual or set of individuals will use its efforts to keep a united organization.

The primary purpose of a country newspaper is gathering and printing the news of the county. However there are always questions of a public nature coming up for discussion, and on these it shall be the purpose of the paper to throw its influence on the side of higher standards, always bearing in mind that NEITHER THIS PAPER OR ANY OTHER PAPER CAN MAKE MUCH HEADWAY IN ANY UNDERTAKING WITHOUT A GOOD CAUSE.

The writer is not unmindful that a newspaper gains confidence and influence according to the reliability of its news service and the honesty and sincerity of its editorial utterances; in fact, like an individual in a community, it has a reputation for being reliable or otherwise, and what it says is given credence accordingly.

The Herald we believe has averaged a high standard, covering as it does a period of over thirty years in the history of Wayne county. It shall be our aim to continue that reputation for the paper—to widen and extend its influence according to the ability of the management to measure up to its opportunities.

J. A. LISTER.

But after all the real holiday of the year is Christmas.

Judge Reese's official plurality for judge of the supreme court is 24,406

All the Thanksgiving indications point to a restoration of prosperity.

The "financial panic" now looks about the size of what was left over from the Thanksgiving turkey.

If in doubt what to buy her for a Christmas present why not get one of those crisp new Panama bonds.

Just about everybody has some good reason to be thankful today. If you don't believe it just look around among your acquaintances and you will find someone more unfortunate than yourself.

As numberless as autumn leaves will be the bills to relieve the financial situation that will be dropped into the congressional hopper next week, and most of them will be just about of as much value.

The calling out of the Militia to stop a prize fight at Davenport and the agitation for law enforcement against the saloons of the state is furnishing plenty of material for Iowa newspapers to talk about.

During the past week the upward turn in financial matters have been more marked than during any previous week of the recent flurry, and there is every indication that confidence is practically restored through out the business world. The slump in the prices of live stock is slowly advancing, and there is no reason to believe but that normal conditions have again been practically reached and that the holiday business in all lines of trade will be unusually large,

Roosevelt and Re-election

The Nebraskans who are organizing a Roosevelt club to push for the re-election of the president for another term cannot be charged with a sinister purpose. Almost to a man they are sincerely of the opinion that the welfare of the country as well as the success of the republican party demands the renomination of the president. They only need to be warned that if this movement is carried to far and against the wishes of the president, it may result in embarrassment. It is time to face squarely the necessity for finding another candidate, to begin to build sentiment around some man whose word has not gone out that under no circumstances would he accept the nomination. Nebraska people enjoy seeing a demonstration of confidence in the president, but it will not do to keep up the movement for a third term until it is too late to accept another candidate with the enthusiasm that is essential to a successful campaign.—Lincoln Journal.

A very large number of the rank and file of the republicans of this section of the state are for Roosevelt not alone for party good and party success, but because they really feel that under the circumstances he is the only man who can most successfully carry on to completion the policies he inaugurated—the policies that have made him so strong with all the people. That Taft indorsement was a half hearted affair and did not originate from the republican sentiment of the state. All of the others most prominently mentioned are out of the running so far as republican sentiment in this end of the state is concerned. It is true that embarrassment will result should it turn out that Roosevelt will not accept, but it is equally true that it is going to be a hard task to build sentiment around any other candidate than President Roosevelt.

Oklahoma Acts

With the impetuosity of youth Oklahoma is forcing to an issue a problem over which Nebraska and other states dwaddled for months. Although Kansas to the north and Arkansas to the east of Oklahoma have in effect the two cent fare, the railroads still charge three cents a mile for tickets from one state into another. The people of other states have borne the charge, which is of unquestionable legality, being an interstate rate, evading it when opportunity offers, by buying tickets as far as possible within state lines. The Oklahoma railroad commission will order every railroad to construct a station at every point where it crosses the state line, providing there facilities for buying tickets and re-checking baggage. No less than thirty-four of these stations will stand like custom houses on the Oklahoma frontier if the order is enforced. The effect intended is that no interstate rate needs be more than the sum of the interstate rates which virtually places the making of interstate passenger rates, a power of Congress, in the hands of the states. Congress may deal with the question in one of several ways. Some would make the interstate rate conform with the state rate, which would settle the point but not the principle. Others hope by constitutional construction to increase the power of congress over rates sufficiently to prevent the creation of such a situation by a state.—Lincoln Journal.

Shumway Murder Trial

The Shumway murder trial at Beatrice is nearing an end, Shumway in a cool and deliberate manner told in detail his side of the story. He stated that on September 3, soon after 1 o'clock, he broke a bolt on the plow while at work in the field. He went to the shed near the Martin home thinking he would find another bolt, but failing in this he went to the house. Stepping upon the porch he noticed the kitchen door ajar, and looking into the room he noticed blood stains on the floor. He stepped inside and seeing a bloody butcher knife lying on the floor in the dining room he quickly realized that a murder had been committed and fearing he would be charged with the crime, he changed his working clothes, went to the barn, hitched one of Mr. Martin's horses to the buggy and drove to Beatrice, finally landing in Missouri. He accounted for the money he had spent in Missouri, supposed to have been taken from the Martin home by him, by saying that he had won part of it in a poker game in Idaho and the balance by working on a farm. Shumway is on trial for the murder of Mrs Sarah Martin near Firth, one of the most brutal murders that have occurred in recent years.

School Notes

All rooms at the ward building had a quarter holiday Friday, there having been no tardy marks for the month. The children are much interested in punctuality and are striving to have no tardy marks.

All rooms at the ward building gave interesting Thanksgiving programs Wednesday afternoon. Miss Stocking's pupils dramatized "The Childhood of Hiawatha" and the other rooms had recitations, dialogues and songs.

The pupils of Miss Graves' room who were neither absent or tardy last month are: Raymond Fox, Fritz Lerner, Amos Munson, Edna Bruner Luella Bush, Ima Elming, Leta Fisher, Minnie Peterson, Lotus Relyea, Hazel Sears, Clifford Benschopf, Curtis Foster, Everett Hoguewood, Joe McGinty, Roscoe Owen, Frank Thielman, George Wiedenfel, Ensign Young, Frank Roe, Paul Juhlin, Lucille Carpenter, Hattie Crockett, Grace House, Henrietta Moler, Bertha Petereon.

Misses Stocking and Beaucheman have returned again to their school rooms after spending several days inspecting the work in the Minneapolis schools. They are very enthusiastic over plans for the betterment of their rooms and obtained much useful information and many suggestions for the teachers of other grades. They are very grateful to our school board for making it possible to carry out lines of work, especially in normal training, much as it is conducted in the Minneapolis schools.

How the Other Half Gives

"That sentiments of tender charity are innate among the poor can be seen from a case which presented itself among a group of little children at a school where we visited," writes Mrs. John Van Vorst in her Christmas article in Woman's Home Companion. "They were of the most destitute, this little class, but as regular as soldiers in attendance. After an unusual absence of two days, one of the small pupils, Mary by name, was closely questioned by the teacher on her return. Very reluctantly she responded that they had been without food at home and that she was ashamed to come hungry to school.

"No comment was made before the other children. Nothing further was said.

"The following morning a small procession filed before the teacher's desk—a procession of little people, tiny, poor, ignorant. One brought an apple, one a piece of cheese, one a roll, one a slice of meat. And each, as she put her meager offering down, whispering to the teacher: 'It's for Mary.'"

The Omaha Indians have appointed T. L. Sloan as a delegate to Washington to look after their interests.

Farmers have been very busy improving the fine weather by getting their corn in the cribs. The yield varies greatly, being all the way from twenty-five to fifty and sixty bushels to the acre. Some farmers have already got through husking but there is still a great deal of corn in the fields.

If the HERALD is shy on local items or if some news is badly twisted as to the facts of the case we hope our readers will appreciate the difficulties attending gathering news until a reporter gets somewhat acquainted with the people and with the conditions. This is the time in a newspaper man's work when you can make an everlasting friend of him by giving him or handing in at the office any item of news you may know of.

Ed. Peterson the new forman of the HERALD is not new to this management as he has worked with them heretofore for over a year and we feel that we have been very fortunate in getting him to come and take charge of the mechanical end of the HERALD. Mr. Peterson is one of the best job printers in this part of the state and in saying that we make no exceptions; we are confident his work will please the patrons of the HERALD job printing department.

S. Hughes, living about five miles southwest of town, met with a serious accident one day last week in a runaway. While driving down a hill the neckyoke broke, letting the buggy tongue down. Last Saturday evening a number of students of the public high school drove out to the home of August Samuelson to give a surprise party on their classmate, Miss Alice. The young people had a pleasant trip and a most enjoyable time.

Ask Eb Rice or Emory Beckenhauer about that coon they saw run up a tree near W. H. Shearer's recently. The men were returning to town in the dusk of the evening when they saw an animal run across the road and up a tree. They thought it looked and acted like a coon, so stopped and gave chase, with the intention of knocking it out of the tree and killing it. They got it out of the tree all right, but found it was one of those stripped animals that it's best to remain a safe distance from. They want no more coons.—Laurel Advocate.

The Nebraska cow is famous the county over, says M. K. Pollock of Norfolk, one of the David Cole creamery men, who came back to Norfolk Saturday evening after a business trip to Oregon and Washington. "Nebraska is the great dairy country and one appreciates it most when you are on the Pacific coast and see Nebraska butter on every hand," said Mr. Pollock, commenting on his trip. "The names of the big Omaha and Lincoln creameries are familiar names on the coast states that cannot be denied." Mr. Pollock saw the battleship "Nebraska" ready for her first trip. Many people visited the ship and by an old custom they all took some little thing to the ship. Pollock thought about it for a while, and then took some good Nebraska butter out to the ship to remind the lads on the "Nebraska" of the big cow states away in the interior.—Norfolk News.

Death of C. O. Fisher.

C. O. Fisher, one of the pioneer residents of Wayne, died at his home in this city Sunday evening, November 24th, and was buried from the Methodist church on Wednesday, November 27th.

Mr. Fisher was born in Bradford county, Pennsylvania, December 18, 1841. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Alger, June 18, 1872, and with her came to Wayne in 1884. Two children were born to them. The first born, Harry, living to share with his mother the sorrow of parting and the honor and comfort of a long and honorable life so suddenly and peacefully ended. During the twenty-three years of his residence in Wayne Mr. Fisher has been one of the foremost of its citizens in promoting the interests of the city, and to an unusual degree has won the confidence of his fellow citizens. In his long and active business career he has always been regarded as one of the most dependable of men. Positive in his opinions, unswerving in his adhesion to that which he thought to be right, vigorous in the carrying out of his plans, and fair in his dealings with men he built for himself a monument that time will not destroy.

He had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for several years, often holding official position, and a member of the Masonic lodge long enough to have been placed upon the honorary roll.

To his wife and son and fellow citizens he leaves the heritage of an unsullied name and a character thoroughly tested and found "not wanting." The funeral services were conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. C. F. Sharpe, and the Wayne Masonic lodge.

Thieves at Laurel

Hoile & Ware's store was entered Wednesday night of last week and two fur overcoats taken—that is they missed those; there may have been other things. Entrance was effected through a rear window upstairs into the clothing department. The large glass had been cut or scratched all up before being pushed in, probably so it would break easier and with less noise. There have been a number of idle strangers in town at various times during the past two weeks, and the coats undoubtedly went with some of them.—Advocate.

Obituary

Virginia Cunningham daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Cunningham died at the family home Wednesday morning after an illness of about ten days. The funeral service will be held in the Presbyterian church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The casket will be open at the house Friday afternoon from one o'clock until 1:30.

Miss Cunningham was born in Juniata Co. Penn., in 1879 and came with the family to Nebraska in 1883. She was a member and active worker in the Presbyterian church and will be greatly missed by the Sunday School and the Endeavor Society as well as by a large circle of friends.

The sympathy of the entire community is with the relatives in this their loss.

Carroll.

From Index.

W. E. Liddle sold his butcher outfit and household goods at auction Saturday.

Will Thomas has been suffering this week from an attack of appendicitis. This is not the first time we understand that Will has had an attack of this painful trouble. His condition is much improved.

Those Carroll ladies who are particularly fond of White Wyandotte fry are gaining considerable notoriety of late. It seems that the outside papers are just getting on to it. We have noticed in several papers the mention of the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Porter returned home Saturday evening from Sioux City. They were to be present at the operation on their daughter Kittie. They report that Miss Kittie's condition was very favorable after the operation.

A meeting has been called for next Monday evening, to be held in Dr. Lyvig's office, of all who are interested in the disbursement of the profits that have been earned by the local carnivals. There is in the neighborhood of $600 in the bank to the committees credit.

Chas Nairn met with a painful accident Tuesday evening as he was hauling home a load of shell corn. He was walking along beside the wagon when he slipped, thinking he would fall he threw out his hands to break the fall. In doing this his hand struck a broken weed which by his weight was forced into his hand, causing a painful and ugly wound.

At the quarterly conference of the M. E. church held Monday, among the other business transacted was a resolution of commendation and thanks extended to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Beebe by the church for their faithful and inspiring work while they have been residents of Carroll. No place will these worthy people be missed more than in church circles.

A source of some apprehension is the illness of Mrs. Rev. Carter. She has been sick all this week and the preliminary symptoms are those of smallpox. Mrs. Carter went to Bloomfield a couple of weeks ago with a certain party and it was probably in that town that she was exposed to the pesky disease. It is to be hoped that Carroll does not have to undergo the disease. The Carters asked that they be quarantined yesterday so as to prevent the possible spread of the germs.

Marshall Maher was called to the Philip Horn home in the country Wednesday afternoon to take a drunk man in charge who was making Horn home his domicile without the consent of either Mr. or Mrs. Horn. The authorities at Norfolk were notified of the man's presence here and upon a description being given of the party they said he was a man who had escaped from them. One of the authorities from the asylum came over yesterday morning and took the wanderer back with him.

Hoskins.

From Headlight.

Chas. Brasch a former resident of Hoskins, was married at Norfolk this week.

Phillip Tusz is here from Texas visiting his mother. He will visit here about a month.

Arthur Larson who has been working in the Edwards & Bradfords Lumber yard, went to Wakefield this week.

Our livery barn changed hands Monday. John Weatherholt trading the livery stock to C. A. Bench, he taking possession at once.

Anton Jensen was in town Tuesday, for the first time since the serious runaway on September 2nd when he had his leg broken.

The piano men have been doing some business hereabouts. A. W. Barge, Gust Moratz Sr. and J. H. Weatherholt purchased new ones.

Mrs. R. G. Rohke, of Meadow Grove, was called to Hoskins Thursday, on account of the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. William Zntz.

A farewell party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ziener in honor of Mrs. Fred J. Ziener of St. Anthony, Idaho. She leaves for her home Friday.

John G. Foster assisted by John Thomson is building a commodious cattle barn on his farm four miles south east of Hoskins, occupied by A. W. Schultz.

At the beautiful home of the brides parents, Mr. and Fred Muehlmeier on Friday November 8th occurred the marriage of Emil Bronzinski and Augusta Muehlmeier, Rev. C. Ifert officiating. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding supper was served. The young couple will move onto Emil's farm of 320 acres 9 miles northeast of Hoskins.

Christmas Presents.

Every year Photos are becoming more popular for Christmas presents. But nearly everybody puts off having them taken until about the last week and then we have more than we can do.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

New Parcel Post Bill

Postmaster General Von L. Meyer is an ardent champion of the parcel post system and has a bill he wishes to have enacted that he thinks will overcome the objection that it would be beneficial to the big mail order houses and detrimental to the home merchant. In an address before the national league of postmasters, the Postmaster General said:

"In the past the country retail merchant has been opposed to the extension of the parcels post because he felt that it would work to his disadvantage. In my recommendations to Congress for the establishment of a parcels post on rural routes I have met the objections of the retail merchant and the county storekeeper. The rate which I advocate is 5 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound, or 25 cents for an eleven pound package. This will enable the farmer and the patron of the rural route to order his supplies by telephone or postal card when it is not feasible for him always to drive to the town.

"Thus the big mail order house will have to pay $1.32 to send an eleven pound package which would cost the storekeeper on the rural route only 25 cents to send.

"What does this mean? It means that the ease with which the farmer can procure merchandise will cause increased consumption. This will give increased trade to the country store, to the wholesale dealer, and, finally, increased business to the Postmaster.

MINERAL PRODUCTION

For the Past Year Exceeds the Enormous Sum of

One Billion Nine Hundred Million

Advice From Some of the Great Financiers.

The exact figures for 1906 are $1,902,505,206.00 as compared with $1,622,928,720.00 in 1905—a gain of $278,575,486.00 or 17.15 per cent.

The enormous gain in the production of mineral for one year demonstrates the enormous profits that are made in the mining industry and corroborates the statement made a few years ago by Cecil Rhodes on Mining.

Cecil Rhodes the mining king of South Africa said: "I speak advisedly and say what every man who has investigated knows to be the truth, that less money is lost proportionately in mining and in investments in mining stocks than in any business or investment on earth.

"A good mining stock will pay the investor 20, 30, 40 50 and 100 per cent.

The security of a good mining stock is the raw material of money itself. It is what we call in Africa "the stuff." It is the "stuff" at whose feet governments, cities, banks, railroads, mortgages, land corporations and all forms of business kneel.

I speak of only gold and silver mines, from the metal of which blooms and blossoms the everlasting dollar. The crude metal in our gold and silver mines is the first and best security in all the world. This is what makes banks and banking a possibility.

This is what makes legs to a municipality, spine to a government and creates the business into a living, breathing, active creature of life.

A few years ago when the late Jay Gould was making his millions he used the following plan as a basis for his investments, which have since been known as the Jay Gould Proverbs.

"When you invest in the stocks of a company, don't look for the best for you will never find it. Look for a good one, then invest and do it quickly.

Don't wait to see if it pans out alright, for there is where you lose your opportunity. When you have waited to see if it pans out, you will have to pay a premium on the stock, and you will have lost the biggest advance in its value.

You must make money on your judgment and foresight, and not on demonstrated facts.

NORMAL COLLEGE

Walter Hendrickson, who was a student here last year, entered this week. He will remain in school until he completes the commercial course.

August Nordgren, of Newman Grove, enrolled Monday and will be in school the remainder of the year. He has joined the teachers' professional class.

The following new students enrolled the first of this week: Messrs Nelson and Johnson of Dixon, Elder of Wayne, and Folke of Stanton.

The students of the music department will give a recital in the chapel next Monday evening under the direction of Miss Hewins. The program will begin promptly at 7:30.

Several former students have visited the college during the past week. Among those seen on the hill were: Misses Wolverson and Denny of Pilger; and Effie Brugger, of Wessington, S. D.

A very pleasant social was held in the gymnasium Saturday evening after the literary exercises. The officers of the literary societies had charge of the arrangements and all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The entertainment given in the chapel Monday evening by the members of the girls' athletic club was a success in every way. All the parts were taken by young ladies, and all acquitted themselves creditably.

Several persons who wished to visit the chapel exercises evidently were not aware that the hour for chapel has been changed and thus have been late. Chapel now begins at 8:40 promptly instead of 8:50. Visitors are welcome at all times to these exercises.

A POLAR BEAR HUNT

Adventure in the Frozen Wastes of the Arctic.

RACE TO SAVE A MAN'S LIFE

A Mile Run For a Rifle That at First Refused to Do Its Work—A Shot That Brought the Great Brute to the Camp as Food For Men and Dogs.

The long arctic night was breaking. Like hibernating polar bears, we had lived the winter through under cover of a great drift of snow. This served as a thick blanket for our little hut and helped to keep warm the thirty-nine shipwrecked men who had been marooned on the desert island of Rudolph, in the frozen wastes of the polar sea.

One day, after a flurry of storm, I took a walk to Cape Saulen. On my way back to camp I stopped on the highest rocks of the moraine to look out toward the ice covered sea. Northward and westward great black steaming streaks in the white revealed the open water, and overhead hung dark clouds of vapor, another indication of a "lead," or open water, underneath.

Turning my eyes southward toward Teplitz bay, I beheld the panorama of the camp spread out before me, the hut and stable tent, the two little observatories and the numerous caches of food stores giving the appearance of an arctic village. Down in the tide-crack where the ice of the bay met the fast frozen land sheet I could distinguish the silhouette of one of my men taking a tide observation. Behind him rose a bristling ridge of ice pinacles, which effectively blocked his view toward the sea.

From my greater elevation I made out the form of a great polar bear crossing the rough ice toward the land. As I watched he reached a high cake of ice and, climbing upon it, raised himself up on his hind quarters and looked over toward the spot where Mr. Long, the observer, was at work. Then I realized his object. There was no one else in sight, and Long was unarmed. Could I reach camp, seize a rifle and make my way out on the bay before the bear began his attack?

In the cold, crisp air I ran the mile or so toward the hut, a race that fortunately was down grade. I rushed into the house, secured my rifle and set off as fast as my legs would carry me toward where I had last seen the bear. Usually the dogs at camp thought it great sport to join in such a chase, but this time they crouched around the hut, whining and whimpering and refusing to follow as I ran past them with my rifle. I soon came up to Long and, warning him to look out for the approaching bear, of which he was still all unconscious, proceeded at reduced speed, as the ice was now very rough. In the direction of the advancing bear. As I was crossing the top of the first pressure ridge I saw the bear coming my way. He caught sight of me at the same moment, raised himself on his haunches to get a better view, and then started in a lunge over the ice cakes in my direction.

I raised my carbine, took a quick sight and pulled the trigger. Instead of the usual quick snap and explosion I felt the slow, gummy motion of the bolt that told me that the lock was frozen. In cleaning the gun a few days before I must have left some oil in the lock.

I worked the bolt back and forth, trying to warm up the mechanism by friction, the great bear climbing rapidly and surely over the broken ice cakes toward me all the while. Once more I pulled the trigger. The unexpected happened, and the cartridge exploded, but in my haste, although so close, I made a clear miss.

However, the flash and the report must have frightened the bear, for he made off. I climbed in pursuit, but on account of the heavy ice did not see him again until he had placed about 200 yards between us and was still going with great leaps in the direction of the open sea.

I aimed and fired just as he leaped between two great ridges. This time he fell in a heap. With the bear's fall the dogs set up such a howling, barking and yelping as I had seldom heard, even from that noisy pack. Every dog in camp now started for the fallen king.

The bullet had gone through his back, paralyzing his hind quarters, but he was able to swing around on the flat ice and deal fearful blows with his great fore paws. But the combat was too unequal. One more bullet and the great bear was beyond all further pain.

The men from camp had now arrived, and the dogs were caught and harnessed to a sledge. Upon it we lashed the carcass of the bear and then, cutting a trail back to land, hauled our load to the hut, a welcome addition to the larder for men and dogs.—Anthony Fraai in Youth's Companion.

THE THERMOMETER.

It Was Invented by a Poor Man Who Had Failed as a Merchant.

There is one little instrument in which the interest of all classes of people in this country never diminishes through all the changing seasons of the year, from the first day of January to the last day of December. It regulates the business pulse of the nation and is the shrine to which men of all occupations turn. And this little instrument is the thermometer, which bears the name of Fahrenheit.

Before the seventeenth century men could only judge of the amount of heat prevailing at any place by their personal sensations and could only speak of the weather in a very indefinite way as hot or very hot, cold or very cold. In that century several attempts were made by scientific experimenters by means of tubes containing oil, spirits of wine and other substances to establish a satisfactory means of measuring heat, but none of them proved successful. Even Sir Isaac Newton, who applied his great mind to this work, and also the noted astronomer, Halley, failed in their attempts to produce a heat measure.

It was reserved to Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit, an obscure and poor man, a native of Danzig, to give to the world the instrument which has proved to be so serviceable to mankind. He had fallen in business as a merchant and, having a taste for mechanics and accuracy, began a series of experiments for the production of thermometers. At first he made these instruments with alcohol, but soon became convinced that the sensibler mercury was a more suitable article to use in the glass tube.

He had removed from Danzig to Amsterdam, and there about the year 1720 he made the mercury thermometer which has ever since been considered much like the original.

The basis of his plan was to mark on the tube the two points respectively at which water is condensed and boiled and to graduate the space between. He began with an arbitrary marking, beginning with 32 degrees, because he found that the mercury descended 32 degrees more before coming to what he thought the extreme cold resulting from a mixture of ice, water and salt ammonia. In 1724 he published a distinct treatise on the subject of his experiments and the conclusions that had resulted therefrom.

Centus of Stockholm soon after suggested the more rational graduation of a hundred degrees between freezing and boiling point. This was the centigrade thermometer. Reaumur proposed another graduation which has been accepted by the French, but by far the largest part of the civilized world Fahrenheit's scale has been accepted and used, with 32 degrees as freezing, 55 degrees as temperate, 96 degrees as blood heat and 212 degrees as boiling point.

It is true that the zero of Fahrenheit's scale is a solecism, since it does not mark the extreme to which heat can be abstracted. This little blunder, however, does not seem to have been of any practical consequence.

Arctic explorers have persisted in describing temperatures below the zero of Fahrenheit, and scientists have produced artificially temperatures far below any ever dreamed of by the thermometer maker of Amsterdam. There is doubt as to the year of the death of Fahrenheit, but it is generally placed in 1740.—Los Angeles Times.

Sun Power.

There is one source to which all minds revert when this question is mentioned, a source most promising and yet one which has so far eluded the investigator. The sun on a clear day delivers upon each square yard of the earth's surface the equivalent of approximately two horsepower of mechanical energy working continuously. If even a fraction of this power could be transformed into mechanical or electrical energy and stored it would do the world's work. Here is power delivered at our very doors without cost. How to store the energy so generously furnished and keep it on tap for future use is the problem. That the next half century will see some solution thereof, either chemical or otherwise, seems likely.—H. S. Pritchett in Atlantic.

Victoria and Lady Millicent.

It is related that when Sir John Millicent fell ill Queen Victoria sent the Princess Louise to the dying man to inquire what favor she could accord him that could alleviate his sorrow if not his pain. Sir John thereupon called for his writing tablet and inscribed upon it the words, "I should like the queen to see my wife." Then the queen broke through her iron rule not to receive any woman whose marriage had been once dissolved, whether there be blame or not, graciously acceded to the request and accorded the sorely tried lady a tender and sympathetic interview.—St. James' Gazette.

Ambitions.

The toller in the city had been given an advance in salary. "Now," he said jubilantly, "I can begin saving to buy a farm."

The agriculturist looked at the check received for his season's wheat. "Another such crop or two and I can move into the city," he mused.—Philadelphia Ledger.

KEPT HER PROMISE.

She Wasn't Much of a Politician, but She Was Truthful.

Mrs. Elliot sighed so deeply as she took out her hatpins that her husband looked up from the evening paper. "I don't believe I've any bent for politics," she said in response to his inquiring glance. "Every time there's an election of officers of the club I get into some kind of mess, try as I may to avoid it."

"You see, Harry," she continued confidently, "I don't really care a fig who is in office so long as I'm not. I like all the members very well, and I'd as lief have one as another president or secretary or on committees."

"I have no favorites, I'm truly impartial. But that won't work. If you belong to a woman's club you are forced to sweat and agonize over candidates. You must be partisan or be out with both sides."

"You know Mrs. George has been president for four years, and every year Mrs. Tufts has tried to get Mrs. George out and herself in. About a week ago she came to me and said she was sure of the nomination if I would vote for her. Would I? I thought it over and said I would, for I admire Mrs. Tufts immensely, she is so lovely and charitable."

"Today, just before balloting, Edith Reynolds came to me and said I must vote for Mrs. George. Edith said I owed it to her—you know she helped me make over my blue foulard and canned all those peaches for me when cook burned her hand."

"Everybody wanted Mrs. George, Edith said, and if I voted for her she would get the nomination. I thought it over and said I would vote for her. I admire and respect her very much. She is so witty and forcible when she presides, and she speaks French beautifully, and I thought if everybody wanted her it was only proper that—"

"Do you mean that you promised to vote for both?" interrupted Mr. Elliot.

"Yes, I promised Mrs. Tufts, as I have just said, and I promised Edith because—"

"But you didn't actually vote for both."

"Why, of course I did, Harry. I may not be much of a politician, but I was brought up to keep my word," said Mrs. Elliot, with dignity.—Youth's Companion.

QUEER BEQUESTS.

Odd Notions That Are Aired In Last Wills and Testaments.

Duchess Dudley, dying in 1655, left $500 per annum for the redemption of poor English Christian slaves from the hands of "the barbarous Turk," and in the year 1725 Thomas Belton of Hoxton proved his enmity toward his own kith and kin by cutting off his three sons and his brother Timothy with a shilling apiece, while he showed his sympathy for his distressed countrymen by leaving the bulk of his property, about $125,000, in trust to the Ironmongers' company. One-half of the interest of this large amount he directed should be expended in ransoming British subjects from slavery in Turkey or Barbary.

An old lady of Barton, Lincolnshire, being once benighted on the Lincolnshire wolds, was able to direct her step by the sound of the curfew bell from St. Peter's church. In grateful remembrance she conveyed a piece of land of thirteen acres to the parish clerk and his successors on condition that they at night ring the bell from 7 to 8 p.m. daily, Sunday excepted, from the carrying of the first load of barley until Shrove Tuesday. The curfew bell is still rung in England in some places in accordance with old bequests.

Some persons had a curious predilection for their own names—a predilection which found vent occasionally in a peculiar manner. Thus one Henry Green left his estates to his sister, with the proviso that she should give four green vests lined with green galloon to four poor men every Christmas, and his fellow townsman Gray directed that six "nobles" should be spent annually in providing six old women with vests of gray cloth and 40 shillings in providing three old men with coats of the same material.—London Globe.

Something More Interesting.

The old darky was having his eyes tested for glasses. After the oculist had put up several cards of Roman letters, which the negro vainly endeavored to call off correctly, he looked over at the oculist and asked, with some disgust:

"What's de use in lookin' at dem fings?"

"With them I'm trying to find out how far you can see distinctly," returned the eye specialist.

"Waal," declared the old darky, unsatisfied, "dey ain't wuth tryin' t' make out. Put up er' watermillin'!"—Bohemian.

The Origin of the Holy Stone.

At the reformation, when the Church of St. Nicholas at Yarmouth was despoiled, the carved stones of many of the monuments, both in the church and outside in the graveyard, were shipped off, some to Newcastle to be turned into grindstones and some on board the ships of the royal navy of the day to be used in scouring the decks, whence, it is interesting to know, the seamen's term "holystoning the deck" takes its origin.—London Standard.

Moles as Measurers.

Like the squirrel and some other animals, the mole lays up a store of food during the autumn months. A curious and interesting feature in relation to this storage is that the mole does not kill the worms it collects, but straddles them in such a manner that they do not attempt to escape.—Country Life.

GOLD COINS.

Why Bankers Don't Like Them and Prefer to Handle Paper.

"Of the different kinds of American money now in circulation the gold coins of all denominations are the most disliked in my business," said a prominent New York banker.

"Take a greenback, a silver or a gold certificate or a national bank note to your bank and it is received and placed to your credit without a moment's delay. Not so with gold. A few days ago a gentleman brought to our bank upward of $3,000 in gold of different denominations and was much provoked because we would not receive it and give him credit with the amount the face of the coin represented. This we could not do because the law requires that gold shall be redeemed only at its actual value. Coins carried in the pocket for any length of time naturally lose something by abrasion—probably but a fractional part of a cent on a ten dollar piece, but it is a loss nevertheless—and therefore bankers cannot give credit for gold deposits until the coin shall have been weighed." In the case mentioned my friend took his gold to the subtreasury and was compelled to wait there nearly an hour before he could get notes for it.

"Every coin had to be passed through the scales, and after the weighing process had been completed three of the coins—two five dollar pieces and a ten dollar piece—were returned to him as short in weight. Before returning short weight coins the department stamps on the face of each coin a cross. The owner is either left to send the coins to the United States mint for redemption or again put them into circulation. Eventually the coins with crosses on their faces will go to the mint and be redeemed at their actual value. In many instances there may not be more than several cents' shortage on $50 worth of coins. Business men, however, naturally object to the inconvenience and get rid of their gold as fast as possible."—New York Press.

KEATS ON MARRIAGE.

Barrier Against Matrimony In Which the Poet Rejoiced.

Notwithstanding your happiness and your recommendation, I hope I shall never marry. Though the most beautiful creature were waiting for me at the end of a journey or a walk, though the carpet were of silk, the curtains of the morning clouds, the chairs and sofa stuffed with erugnets' down, the food marvellous, the wine beyond claret, the window opening on Windsor mere, I should not feel, or, rather, my happiness would not be so fine, as my solitude is sublime. Then, instead of what I have described, there is a sublimity to welcome me home. The roaring of the wind is my wife, and the stars through the window pane are my children. The mighty abstract idea I have of beauty in all things stifles the more divided and minute domestic happiness—an amiable wife and sweet children I contemplate as a part of that beauty, but I must have a thousand of those beautiful particles to fill up my heart.

I feel more and more every day as my imagination strengthens that I do not live in this world alone, but in a thousand worlds. No sooner am I alone than shapes of epic greatness are stationed around me and serve my spirit the office which is equivalent to a king's bodyguard—then "tragedy with scapeterd pall comes sweeping by." According to my state of mind I am with Achilles shouting in the trenches or with Theocritus in the vales of Sicily, or I throw my whole being into Trollope, and, repeating those lines, "I wander like a lost soul upon the Stygian banks, staying for waftage," I melt into the air with voluptuousness so delicate that I am content to be alone. These things, combined with the opinion I have of the generality of women, who appear to me as children to whom I would rather give a sugar plum than my time, form a barrier against matrimony which I rejoice in.—"Poems of John Keats," by Walter Raleigh.

Troubles of an Amateur.

"I thought you had gone to raising bees," said the man from the city. "I don't see any sign of them; around here."

"I had half a dozen colonies of the finest bees I could get," answered the suburbanite, "and a whole library of literature on bee raising, but they swarmed one day, and while I was looking through my books to find out what was the proper thing to do when bees swarmed the blamed things flew away, and I've never seen 'em since."—Chicago Tribune.

In Nameless Graves.

Not far from Hamburg, on the island of Westerland, is a small graveyard to which pathetic interest attaches. Here the bodies of those washed up by the sea—bodies unrecognized and unclaimed—are buried. The cemetery was dedicated to this use in 1855, and from then up to now over sixty nameless ones have found their rest. In 1883 a stone was raised bearing the dedication "The Home of the Homeless," and each little mound is further marked by a simple black cross.

Like the Parrot.

"Thumper occasionally says things that are wonderfully apropos," said one statesman.

"Yes," answered the other; "he's like our parrot at home. It doesn't know much, but what it does know it keeps repeating until some circumstance arises that makes the remark seem marvelously apt."

A good way to get on in the world is to make people think you are doing it.—New York Press.

STEEL PLANT PERILS.

Recklessness a Psychological Factor That Must Be Considered.

Recklessness is certainly a psychological characteristic of men in steel plants. All tradition teaches them to be reckless. The very example of their superiors teaches them to be reckless. The assistant superintendent of the plant that the Illinois Steel company maintains at Joliet stepped on an unprotected gear and lost his leg just after he had warned his men not to be guilty of any such culpable negligence of their own safety. I am willing to admit the existence of culpable negligence altogether apart from the negligence of the company. And not only that, but I am also willing to give a specific illustration.

I was standing one day on the platform of a blast furnace. All at once, unexpectedly, I heard the four whistles that indicate danger. There was a "hang" in the furnace. The whirling, eddying mass of ore, coke and limestone in the high interior of that furnace had got caught somewhere, somehow, and was refusing to come down. When it did come down there would be a crash and perhaps an explosion.

I ran and got behind a brick pillar. On coming into the plant that morning I had signed a piece of paper, just the same kind of a piece of paper that every visitor signs, saying that I would not hold the Illinois Steel company responsible for anything that might happen to me. I reflected that nobody would profit by my demise. But observe what the other men around that blast furnace did!

I could see them as I peered out from behind my brick pillar. Those of them who were already in front of the furnace looked up at it with an expression of profound curiosity on their faces. Two other men who had been standing at the back of the furnace ran all the way round it and came out in front. There they all stood hurling their mute interrogatories at the crafty, reticent volcano that might nevertheless the next moment hurl forth an indignant answer at their heads!—Everybody's Magazine.

BLOOD PRESSURE.

The Determination of Its Relation to Mental States.

In addition to those bodily movements which are called "voluntary" various bodily phenomena which are clearly involuntary accompany violent mental excitement. The blush of shame, the distinctive flushes of joy and of anger, the pallor and sweat of fear, the tears of grief and the "creeping" of the flesh provoked by horror are familiar examples. The respiration is quickened by joy and retarded by anxiety, and the feeling of relief finds expression in a deep sigh. Violent emotions often disturb the digestion. "The heart bounds with joy," is paralyzed by horror, "leaps to the throat" in terror. The connection between the heart and the emotions is so intimate that the heart was long regarded as the seat of the soul.

Most of these involuntary physical concomitants of mental excitement are brought about by a special part of the nervous system, the sympathetic nerve and its branches, which ramify to every part of the body. The best known branches are those that govern the dilatation of the blood vessels, which are profoundly affected by mental states. These phenomena are susceptible of exact quantitative determination by means of a method devised by the Italian physiologist Mosso. The result is fairly accurate measurement of the variation of blood supply to the brain. The subject is laid on a board which is balanced on a fulcrum at the center of gravity. When the subject is quiet and undisturbed the board lies horizontal. Now, if an unpleasant sensation or emotion is induced in the subject his head is involuntarily elevated, indicating diminution in the quantity of blood in the brain. An agreeable sensation of emotion produces the opposite effect.—Scientific American.

Tennyson's Queer Ways.

It was with great difficulty that Professor Hubert Herkomer, the portrait painter, obtained Tennyson's consent for a sitting, but at last he was successful and called at the poet's house. After some little delay the door of the room where the artist was waiting slowly opened, and Tennyson entered with drooping head. He looked most dejected and murmured: "I hate your coming. I can't abide sitting." However, Mr. Herkomer was allowed to remain. Soon after he had retired to his room for the night there came a knock at the door. A head was thrust in and the voice of the poet remarked: "I believe you are honest. Good night!"

Swede—You bane spake de language putty goot already. Ven you bane in dese country two years you vil spake as well as de people here. Englishman (annihilatingly)—Man alive, I am from the country where this language is manufactured. What you are learning to speak is secondhand English.—Judge.

The Modern Youth.

"When I was your age," said the severe parent, "I was compelled to earn my own living."

"Sir," answered the complacent youth, "I know too little of the circumstances to attempt to defend my grandfather."—Washington Star.

DECAY OF STONE.

Even the Densest Siliceous Rocks Succumb to Time.

Whoever expects to find a stone that will stand from century to century, defying alike the frigid rains and scorching solar rays, without need of reparation will indeed search for "the philosopher's stone." There is scarcely a substance which after having been exposed to the action of the atmosphere for a considerable time does not exhibit proofs of weathering. It may even be observed on the most densely compacted siliceous rocks. The fullest extent of this inquiry can only be to elucidate relative duration and comparative labor of appropriation to useful or ornamental purposes.

By examining the various productions of nature we find evident proofs of her industry in all ages. Changes have been going on from the remotest antiquity to the present time on every substance that comes within our observation. All the actual combinations of matter have had a former existence in some other state. Nothing exists in nature but what is likely to change its condition and manner of being. No material is so durable as always to retain its present appearance, for the most solid and compact bodies have not such a degree of impenetrability and so close a union of the parts which compose them as to be exempted from ultimate dissolution.

Even in the great globe which we inhabit nothing is more evident to geologists than a perpetual series of alterations. There can be discovered no vestige of a beginning, no prospect of an end. In some bodies these changes are not so frequent and remarkable as in others, though equally certain at a more distant period. The venerable remains of Egyptian splendor, many of them executed in the hardest granite between 3,000 and 4,000 years since, exhibit large portions of exfoliation and gradual decay, thereby following the primitive, immutable and universal order of causes and effects—namely, that all objects possess the materials of which they are composed only for a limited time, during which some powerful agent effects their decomposition and sets the elementary particles at liberty again to form other equally perfect combinations. Thus by divine and unerring laws order is restored amid apparent confusion.—Exchange.

EAST INDIAN SERVANTS.

An Amusing Complication Over a Dose of Medicine.

The experiences of an English householder in India are often amusing. An instance of one of the amusing experiences is given.

The old gray bearded butler announced at luncheon one day that the dishwasher was ill with fever, but that if I would give him some medicine he would soon be able to resume his work. I happened to have none by me, but the matter was urgent, clean dishes being important.

"Can he go to the chemist's, do you think, for some physic if I give him a letter?" I asked. "I don't know what to write for."

"Oh, yes," he said; "he is quite able to go that short distance."

I thought that was much the best way, and then the chemist could give him what was proper. So I wrote: "Please give the bearer a dose of medicine. He says he has fever."

I forgot to inquire about him till two days after.

"How is the dishwasher?" I said.

"He is much better, your honor."

"Ah, then he took the physic?"

"No, your highness. The bazaar cooly took the physic."

"The bazaar cooly?" I exclaimed.

"What for?"

"The dishwasher said: 'Cooly goes errands. He may fetch me the physic.' So the cooly took the letter. Shop master prepared physic, then told bazaar cooly to drink it. Cooly said: 'Not for me is the medicine, but for another man. I take it to him.' 'Not so,' said the shop master. 'The mistress has written, 'Give to bearer,' and she means you must drink it here.' Many times the cooly said he was not the man, but they would not listen, and they made him 'drink it.'—Exchange.

True.

"It isn't true, is it," asked Rollo as he finished reading "The Pied Piper of Hamelin"—"It isn't true that he could play on his pipe so that the rats would go off and drown themselves?"

"Well," replied Rollo's father, "I don't know about that. I think it may be true. Your Uncle George can play the fute so that it will scare a cow into a river and drive all the dogs in the neighborhood crazy. Yes, I should say the poem is true."—London Answers.

The Obscure Honeymoon.

Honeymoons are going out of fashion and will probably eventually disappear. At present they are often shortened to four or five days or even a paltry week end. Marriage is getting to be looked upon in a more matter of fact way, and it is no doubt well that the romantic girl should not expect absolutely unreachably things of wedded bliss.—London Bystander.

A Good Excuse.

"Now, then," demanded Luschman's wife the next morning, "what's your excuse for coming home in that condition last night?"

"Well, to tell you the truth, m' dear," he replied, "none of the hotels would take me in."—Philadelphia Press.

NORTHEASTERN NEBRASKA NEWS

Big preparations are being made for a farmers institute to be held at Broken Bow December 19-20-21.

On a wager a Randolph boy ate nineteen cookies and a pie at a local restaurant. It is said he resembled a Christmas plum pudding when he got through.

The county commissioners of Cum-ling county have appropriated $100 to be applied to the expenses of the farmers institutes to be held in that county the coming winter.

A Ponca man, it is said, has invented an arrangement whereby he runs a washing machine from the power in his automobile. There's nothing like the ingenuity of those Ponca fellows.

A. E. Robert's grocery store at Allen was destroyed by fire one night last week. The building containing the postoffice and the News office was saved only by hard work on the part of the local fire department.

It is reported from Pender that M. A. Fennell will hold over as county superintendent because E. W. Tarrant has not a first grade certificate. The courts have held that if a newly elected superintendent was qualified at the time of taking the oath of office he could serve.

The supreme court has reversed the decision of a Cedar county jury in one of the Randolph liquor cases and has granted a new trial. This is one of the several liquor suits brought against Randolph saloon men about a year ago at the time of the temperance agitation in that place.

Chas. Hinrich, who for the past twenty-one years has been running a meat market in Wakefield, sold out on Tuesday to L. A. Munson, of near the new town of Maskell. The Republican says in the deal Mr. Hinrich gets a 320 acre farm near Maskell and Mr. Munson gets the meat market building, lot and tools and the old Dr. Rowse residence property. Charley expects to remain on his farm and will not leave Wakefield for the present at least. The new proprietor will take charge shortly after the first of January.

A man who chews 20 cents worth of tobacco a week concluded to try a tobacco cure. In two weeks he ate $1.50 worth of the cure and for the next two weeks he used 5 cents worth of candy, 5 cents worth of peanuts and 5 cents worth of gum drops a day. During the two weeks he also consumed two large rubber erasers, ate the rubber tips from fourteen lead pencils, chewed up a dozen pen-holders and browsed off his mustache as high as he could reach. He is now chewing tobacco in the interest of economy.—Wood River Interests.

A correspondent to the Sioux City Tribune says: Kissed not by a rosy cheeked, honey-lipped sweetheart, wife, mother or sister, but by a stranger under the impression that he was her son-in-law, was the "horrible" fate of Charles Strivens, a drayman, here this week. Standing on the depot platform taking in the sights at train time, he was accosted by a young woman. "Would you help me up to mamma?" she asked sweetly, speaking "mamma's" name gallantly he "hitched" himself to several valises and grips, part of a woman's usual travelling paraphernalia and went along. "Mamma" was evidently expecting her daughter and son-in-law, for when the front gate opened, she came running out of the house in the darkness, grabbed her daughter and warmly carried her, then embracing Charlie and gave him a good kiss and hug. "Why, mamma, that is not John; that is Mr. Strivens, the new drayman," exclaimed the daughter. "Mamma" then apologized sweetly and as Charlie backed off, he said: "Never mind, I don't keer."

The case of Miss Anna Sheibley of Ponca against Chas. Ashton, formerly of the Ponca Journal, was tried a second time in Sioux City last week. Miss Sheibley was awarded six cents damages which would throw the costs of suit on defendant and the case may be appealed. This is a damage suit case that grew out of the congressional campaign in the third district five years ago when ex-Congressman McCarthy was first elected. Similar suits were started against Huse of the Norfolk News and Nelson of the Hartington Herald. The Norfolk case was settled out of court and last winter when the Hartington case was tried the Jury returned verdict for defendant. In speaking of the case the Sioux City Tribune says: Miss Sheibley sued for $10,000. Ashton, who was formerly editor of Northern Nebraska Journal and is now the publisher of the Madison, S. D., Outlook, was greatly disappointed for he won the first trial of the case, but was reversed by the supreme court. He has sixty days in which to appeal. The case so far has cost about $600. The verdict makes Ashton responsible for the amount. This includes court costs and lawyers' fees. At the close of the trial, when Judge Graynor directed the verdict in favor of her Miss Sheibley rose and approached Ashton murmuring an apology. She extended her hand, but Mr. Ashton looked past and over her and turned away without a word.

Why Colds are Dangerous

Because you have contracted ordinary colds and recovered from them without treatment of any kind, do not for a moment imagine that colds are not dangerous. Everyone knows that pneumonia and chronic catarrh have their origin in a common cold. Consumption is not caused by a cold but the cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs that would not otherwise have found lodgment. It is the same with all infectious diseases. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough are much more likely to be contracted when the child has a cold. You will see from this that more real danger lurks in a cold than in any other of the common ailments. The easiest and quickest way to cure a cold is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The many remarkable cures effected by this preparation have made it a staple article of trade over a large part of the world. For sale by Raymond's Drug Store.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES.

A Woman Finds Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Wayne women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hid pain, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doans Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Wayne woman's words, Mrs. Henry Hansen, living east of Catholic Church, Wayne, Neb., says: "I have been subject to spells of backache for a good many years. I would not suffer from the trouble for several months, then an attack would come on very suddenly. I think cold weather or an over-exertion always brought on the trouble when the pain across my back was so severe that I was in perfect misery all the time. I had been in this condition for about three weeks when Doans Kidney Pills were brought to my attention. I used them carefully as directed and they made a new woman of me. It is with pleasure that I can endorse Doans Kidney Pills to my neighbors."
