Raymond's Drug Store

The year, 1907, that has just been brought to a close has been one of marked improvement and progress for the Nebraska Normal College of this city. Improvements have been made in the way of buildings, equipment and facilities. Best of all, however, has been the marked increase in the attendance. It has been the best ever enjoyed and students have come from a wider field than in previous years, which is assurance of the growing popularity of the college and the best possible endorsement for its able management.

The year in every sense has been important, not only to the college, but as well to every citizen of Wayne. The completed improvements include the splendid new recitation building, 70 x 90 feet, three stories high, the cost of which when furnished amounted to about $28,000.00. The heating plant which was completed last year cost $13,800.00, while the cement sidewalks amounted to $800.00. In addition to the above many other supplies have been put in, including gymnasium, museum and library.

STATE SYNOD TO BE HERE

Presbyterian Ministers of State to Hold Annual Meeting Here in October

The State Synod the annual gathering of the ministers and elders of the Presbyterian church of the state will be held here in October next. The usual attendance at these yearly meetings is from 150 to 200 delegates and they will be here five days including one Sunday. This will afford an opportunity to hear some of the best ministers in the state and will be of benefit in many ways to Wayne, and the fact of getting the convention here is creditable to the activity of the local Presbyterian church.

"Joshua Simpkins," a rural comedy which has been presented continuously for several seasons on the road, will play an engagement in this city January 10, 1908. "Joshua Simpkins" is a comedy drama, well acted by a company said to possess more than ordinary merit, in addition to which several pleasing specialties are introduced. A complete orchestra composed of professional musicians discourse incidental music which assists to make the play the success it is. This feature is claimed by the management to be guilt edged and it is said, far exceeds the usual orchestra by theatrical companies. Their fine band will give a burlesque parade about noon on the day of the engagement.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Wife of Superintendent of Pilger Schools

NO APPARENT CAUSE FOR ACT

Mrs. W. F. Richardson took Carbolic acid it is said with Intent to End Life

Wayne was shocked Tuesday to learn that Mrs. W. F. Richardson wife of the superintendent of the Pilger schools had attempted suicide by taking carbolic acid. It is said here that the young lady has been in poor health for some time and to this is attributed the cause of the act while despondent. Mr. Richardson is a highly respected Wayne young man, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Richardson. He was married Christmas to Miss Grace Killian daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Killian of Leslie precinct one of the prominent families of that locality.

A Pilger correspondent to the Norfolk News of Tuesday has this account of the sad affair:

Mrs. W. F. Richardson, wife of the principal of the Pilger schools, took carbolic acid with suicidal intent at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A physician arrived in time to save her life and it is now believed she will recover. Mrs. Richardson is a bride of less than two weeks, having been married only Christmas. She left a note saying that she was and bought two ounces of carbolic acid, some bay rum and glycerine. She said she wanted to make a hand-wash. She insisted that she be given each in a separate bottle.

A little later she went to her room—the couple board here—and took the acid. Then she called for help.

She was formerly Miss Grace Killian. Her parents live twelve miles north of Wisner.

The two sisters recently took a South Dakota homestead near Chamberlain.

"Joshua Simpkins," a four act New England play, will be presented at Wayne Opera House Friday January 10th, 1908. The climax of stage realism, is asserted, has been reached in the presentation of the stirring saw-mill scene in "Joshua Simpkins," and will be presented in this city by a peculiar mechanical device which has never been introduced here before. This sawmill scene is claimed to be a vast improvement over any attempts in a similar line. The company also boasts of a splendid orchestra, which is carried complete by the organization, to aid in the proper presentation of the play, which is said to abound with musical and dancing specialties of a high order. To assist "Joshua Simpkins" in popularity, a band of music is also carried and a concert is given which is said to be far above anything usually heard with a traveling musical organization. The parade will leave the theater at the usual time and take the usual route making a burlesque parade.

unhappy and wanted to die. No apparent cause for the attempt to take her life exists excepting the fact that she was very much devoted to her sister, from whom she was separated by her marriage a little over a week ago.

The two sisters were both married Christmas, it being a double wedding.

Mrs. Richardson yesterday afternoon went to the Abbott drug store

From Index.

G. W. Kingston was in Wayne Tuesday.

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Phillips were in Wayne Thursday.

Wilbur Van Vossen attended to some business at Wayne last Saturday.

A bright little boy came to the Maurine Jorgenson home Thursday.

Miss Myrtle Robinson was a passenger for Wayne Saturday afternoon.

D. M. Davis and Phil Burress were business visitors at Wayne Monday.

Mr. Balsar who teaches the Flagg school was a visitor at Wayne last Saturday.

Postmaster Baker and wife are both ill with the grip. W. L. Robinson is acting as P. M.

A young son came to the Sam Jenkins home last Saturday. Pa Jenkins is more than elated.

Chas Robbins and wife will move into the J. W. Johnson residence, just vacated by the Chas Beebe family.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Morris was made happy by the arrival of a little daughter last Friday.

Miss Mary Owen of Red Oak, Ia. was an arrival on the train last evening. She is visiting at the D. M. Davis home.

Dan Burress was a passenger to Wayne on the noon train Monday. He went to take up his studies at the Normal.

James Stevens shipped a car of cattle and one of hogs to Chicago Saturday. He was lucky enough to strike a nice little raise in the market.

Miss Charlotte White formerly County Superintendent of this county visited with Mr. Geo Yaryan and other friends here the past week, leaving on the Tuesday evening train for her home at Norfolk.

George Roe is going to build a large modern barn at his place east of town. The main structure will be 24x48 with 16 foot sheds on two sides. This is certainly an evidence that it is not hard times in this community.

George Yaryan and W. E. Bellows recently bought the quarter section a mile north of town known as the old Merrill place. They have divided the quarter Yaryan getting the eighty with the improvements on. Bellows is figuring on building improvements on the other eighty.

Mrs. Brutenschoen died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Otte, on New Year's day. The immediate cause of her death was lung fever. The deceased was born in Holeslein, Germany in 1841. She came to this country 16 years ago. Two daughters survive her and deeply mourn her death.

Certainly that was a remarkable cow that died at Sholes on the day before Christmas. Her experiences were about as numerous as her years. Cherry, for that was her name, was born in the lumber woods on the state line between New York and Pennsylvania, February 17, 1884. At birth she became the property of grandma and grandpa Marsh, Mrs. Wm. Root's folks who live in Sholes. When the Marsh's located near Randolph twelve years ago Cherry was shipped out from the east in a car of mixed freight. This old family cow has lived in peace and comfort at the Marsh home ever since until the day of her death. Her age at death was twenty-four years. She had during her life been a source of profit to her owner as she has constantly given milk from the time she was 18 months old, with the exception of a few weeks each year.

Winside

Raymond McCabe of Randolph is in Winside visiting relatives and old friends.

Miss Emma Schwerin of Belden has been visiting her brother Sam and wife this week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Siman and the boys spent new year's day with Mr. Siman's brother and family in Sioux City.

The first thing we saw new year's morning as we came to the office was a man leading a drunken man home. Starting out pretty early on the first day of the year 'pears to us. Resolutions were no good in this case.

The masquerade ball was a great success in the way of attendance and financially. The five young misses who had costumes all alike, red skirts, white shirt waists and red caps, got the prize of two dollars. They looked very pretty indeed.

The elements most generally seem to be against Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fish when they make an attempt to entertain, but Saturday evening seemed to be quite propitious and the card club was delightfully entertained at this pleasant home. Mrs. Lew Jones and H. E. Siman were the lucky contestants.

Some of the boys gave a demonstration with the hose and cart Thursday afternoon. The fire bell rang, which gave everybody a scare, and the boys came up main street attached the hose to a hydrant in front of Carter's store and proceeded to throw water all over the blacksmith shop and elevator.

Last Friday evening George Snowden came to town to meet relatives from Iowa at the train, when his team became frightened at the cars and breaking loose from where they were tied, they ran down Main street, turned the corner by Weibles store and ran into Mr. Toal's orchard on the hill where they were stopped. With the exception of the tongue to the carriage being broken, no other damage was done.

A short change man was in town Monday and got in his work at several places. At the postoffice he short-changed Miss Jones to the amount of five dollars but Mr. Tracy made him return the money. He tried other places and the marshal kindly advised him to leave town on the first train, which advice followed and proceeded on his way to greener fields.

Hoskins

The mother of Mrs. Geo. Otte died New Years day at the age of sixty-six years. She was born in Germany. The funeral was held Friday at Carroll.

Miss Etta Marsh who taught in district No. 80, was compelled to give up her school on account of sickness. Her place is being filled by Miss Cross of Wayne.

Eastern Hunter

Mr. Brumer came up from Pender Tuesday to spend a few days with Mr. Geo. Elfein.

Harry Robinson went to Iowa to visit with relatives during the holidays.

Geo. Worth was home for the holiday vacation, resuming his school work at York last week.

Ed Samuelson made another one of his regular trips up the line last week, returning Monday.

H. J. Worth and son Carl spent a pleasant evening with Link Wellbaum and folks Monday. Lute Wellbaum is home now.

Miss Madsen began teaching again in district 47, last Thursday morning after a weeks vacation during the holidays.

Miss Elsie Robertson returned from her vacation at Joy on New Years day and started to teach again in Dist. No. 6.

Miss Hilda Fleetwood spent the holidays with her parents, returning to her duty as a trained nurse in the Swedish Mission hospital in Omaha on Tuesday.

You could hear sleighbells all around in this neighborhood last week, but the nice weather we have had lately has spoiled that part of winter sports for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Worth entertained a merry party of their neighbors on New Years day. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sederstrom, Mr. Ed. Sandahl and family, H. Ruebeck and family and Mr. and Mrs. L. Haberman.

A great number of the young people from this vicinity began the new year in a good way this year. That is starting to college. Among the number are Ed Sandahl and his sister Nettie, Florence Ruebeck, Fred Soderberg and Arthur Munson.

From Sholes

Jud Garwood the Haller medicine man is canvassing in this vicinity.

Chas Sellen had business at the county seat Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Lillian Fox of Sioux City is spending two weeks visiting friends here.

Tom Schutt and son Francis left for Omaha Tuesday afternoon enroute to Kansas City.

Mr. John Irresen and children from Calhoun are visiting this week with Mr. and Mrs. Julius Herman.

Marvin Root and wife, J. L. Beaton and Ben F. Robinson were Sholes people who spent Saturday afternoon in Wayne.

Miss Jessie Howarth of Randolph visited the high school Friday and remained over Sunday with her friend Hazel Moats.

James Porter accompanied his sister Miss Kittie to Sioux City Tuesday and returned home Saturday. Miss Porter will finish her work in the nurse's training school this year.

Among those who attended the dance at Randolph Tuesday were, Chas Horn, Chas Carroll, Elmer Noakes and wife and Geo Noakes.

Sholes is certainly getting its share of sickness this week, Warren Clossen, Mrs E. H. Kuhleman and Joe and Marie Kenny are all enduring an attack of the "grip."

Owing to the dedication exercises to be held in the church Friday night, the Sholes literary society will hold its regular meeting this week.

Miss Florence Cross of Wayne is the new teacher at Four Corners, Miss Marsh being forced to resign on account of sickness. We are pleased to welcome Miss Cross to our vicinity.

Witness my hand and seal of said court, this 31st day of December A. D. 1907.

E. HUNTER,
County Judge.

Mining and Civilization

When one reads of the remarkable position which America holds in the world of mineral production, one can discover a profound reason why the continent has sprung so suddenly into the front rank of modern civilizations. Mining alone is not a guarantee of civilization, but it is probably the most distinctive aid to it that can be mentioned. The relative standards by which civilized communities are judged must be taken as a factor in any estimate, and from this point of view it may be said that the mines of Mexico had civilized that country long before the modern European entered into dominance over the western hemisphere.

Besides, the mediaval European knew little about mining as we know it now. How little of America did the Spaniard actually conquer. They subdued a few people by means of their superior arms and knowledge, but they failed to dominate Nature, as she has since bowed to the science of mining and metallurgy. Pizarro returned vast quantities of gold to his sovereign in Europe, but Pizarro did not mine a nickel's worth. It is related that on one occasion, he permitted the Peruvian Inca to buy an equivocal ransom by means of a roomful of gold and a good sized room at that. Had Pizarro landed upon the site of Cripple Creek, what would he have done with it?

It has often been pointed out that

LAND! LAND! LAND!

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit, berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one-third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

RENTERS, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

COME TO THE NEW LAND and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

DON'T WAIT! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte Valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

FARM OWNERS, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here for from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte Valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country--towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

INVESTORS: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always goes with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

WRITE TO-DAY FOR FURTHER INFORMATION. Local real estate dealers correspond. We can make some money for you.

civilization, and so it is. But handicraft, or manufacturing, cannot thrive, or even exist, without the products of the rocks. Until the useful metals are produced, invention is restricted to fine theories. The use of a fire was a wonderful discovery, but until it was applied to the smelting of the metals, however crude the process, it was little more than a toy.

The United States has now arrived at an annual record of two billion dollars in its mineral output. This enormous amount is four times the annual production of the country fifteen years ago. What wonder is it that there have been swift changes in our material conditions?

living--so swift, in fact, that readjustment has not been able to keep pace with them. Some economists profess to see in the rapidly increasing gold output a menace to our happiness. How much broader is the view that the mineral wealth of the United States is today the chief cause of our political unrest, due in large measure as it is to the tardiness of social adaptation to the new conditions of civilization. Let us not think evil of our newly gotten wealth, any more than we should cast a spell of imagined danger over the growing gold production. The problem is to grow as rapidly in civic sense as we do in our material

NORMAL COLLEGE

John F. Power, principal of the schools at Stuart, stopped over Sunday and visited with his many friends on the Hill.

Pres. Pile was at Norfolk New Year's night where he spoke at a meeting held in the Christain church of that city.

Mr. Simon Huber who was a student here a few years ago, spent some time on the Hill with friends last week. Mr. Huber is a senior in the Creighton Medical College.

Rev. Sharpe spoke at the joint meeting of the Christain Associations last Sunday. A good crowd was out and all thoroughly enjoyed the talk.

Henry Reuback was another former student who was visiting with friends last week. Henry, as he is called by all, is now principal at Creston and good reports are received of his work there.

Miss Mead, former county superintendent of Platte county, S. D., visited with the College for few days last week. She was accompanied by her cousin, Mr. Riley, who came down to enter school.

Archie Burnham, principal at Waterbury, was another visitor last week. Mr. Burnham is meeting with success in his work at Waterbury and expects to continue his work here as soon as his school year closes.

Supt. Bodwell of Norfolk and Miss O'Connell of Ashland, two members of the state examining board, spent Friday looking over the work of the school. They both gave us very pleasing talks at the Chapel exercises.

Miss Fanny Lookabill, who graduated from here in 1900, spent Friday renewing old acquaintances at the College. Miss Lookabill is meeting with great success at Falls City where she has charge of the eighth grade.

Rev. Ringer visited the College Saturday morning and gave a most excellent talk at the chapel exercise. These visits are very much appreciated by both teachers and students, and it is to be hoped we will have many of them this year.

The girls' Athletic Club gave an interesting entertainment in the gymnasium Saturday evening after the literary program. The young ladies showed careful training, and all taking part acquitted themselves with great credit. A small admission was charged, the proceeds to go toward buying new apparatus for the gymnasium.

Among other visitors during the past week were the following: W. R. Snyder, of Bellwood; Ada Anderson, of Newman Grove; J. W. Ferguson, of Long Pine; Miss De Groot, of Emerson; Miss Firned, of Emerson; and Walter Power of Magnet. All of these are now engaged in teaching with the exception of Mr. Ferguson who is a land surveyor in the western part of the state.

Perry Thepbald, William Mellor and Frank Wilson returned to Lexington, Mo., Sunday, where they are attending the Wentworth Military Academy.

Dr. Cadwell returned Sunday from Haskell Indian Territory where he has been the past year. His family will move here later on. He brought back some samples of cotton and other products of the south.

Freeman Bros.' Electric show, which played at the opera house all last week, ended their engagement here Saturday evening. The show consisted of moving pictures and illustrated songs, which was good. Saturday evening prizes were awarded to the following: Schorer's little boy, a picture; Chas. Martin, toilet set; Rollie Ley's little boy, $5.

F. L. A. members of Wayne circle No. 7, will hold installation of officers for the ensuing year at the Woodman hall, January 10th, 1908. A program will be given consisting of music, recitations and a fish pond

Members are requested to be present and to bring a friend.

Burrus Bros. of Carroll, Nebr., are announcing through a catalogue, which is being printed at the Herald print shop this week, that they will hold their second annual sale of registered Percheron and Belgian stallions at the sale pavillion at the Union stock yards at Sioux City, Ia., January 23rd, 1908. Judging from the list of high-class thoroughbred horses they are offering this sale ought to prove unusually good.

One man in Wayne refuses to eat a meal away from home, and this is the reason why. "He refuses to eat with anyone outside of his immediate family. Several young girls heard of his peculiarity and told a story that he had been disappointed and that he had had a romance. This is the truth: Years ago he went to a dinner party. There was a big bowl of salad sitting in front of him and he ate it all. Pretty soon the hostess began asking, "Where is that big bowl of salad?" and he got

Indorses Taft

The action of the republican state central committee at Lincoln yesterday in expressing its preference for Taft for president does not bind the republicans of Nebraska to the Ohio man but is a straw which indicates something, as the committeemen no doubt as a whole pretty well represented the sentiment of their localities. The vote on the primary plan to allow the republican voters to express preference for presidential candidate was very close—in fact only by a majority of one did the plan carry and then in a modified form. The committee fixed it up in the "local option" principal of allowing each county to do as it thinks best as to holding a primary for voting on a preference for a presidential candidate.

By the way, what has become of all those direful weather predictions the St. Louis prophet had scheduled to swoop down on us commencing January 3rd.

Put your shoulder to the wheel and push for Wayne to the extent that every person who visits Wayne in 1908 will become a walking advertisement of its progress.

At Norfolk they evidently regard the Northwestern railroad as a sort of a South African diamond mine. Damage suits aggregating $80,000 have been brought by railroad employees or by the their families. The suits are based on claims for injuries received.

There is no reason why 1908 should not be a good building year for Wayne both in the way of business buildings and residences. The thing for all citizens to do is to boost for a Greater Wayne. Don't be a knocker. If you really can't be optimistic be a clam.

The first issue of the Wayne County Teacher by County Superintendent Littell appeared this week and is well filled with matter pertaining to school work. By this means the Superintendent will be better able to keep the teachers of the county posted on new rulings of state and county office and entuse a greater interest in the public school work.

Among a number of school men over Nebraska that J. L. McBrien suggested as his probable successors appears the name of our county superintendent, A. V. Teed. This certainly means much as to Mr. McBrien's estimation of Superintendent Teed as a school man for the most amicable relations have not existed between the two men in times past. However Mr. Teed is known as one of the best superintendents in the state and has a large circle of friends among the school folks over the state who will push his candidacy if he will only say that he will run. The compliment paid him by Mr. McBrien is justly deserved.—Ponca Journal.

We believe there is a general feeling throughout this locality that Mr. Teed is of state superintendent size and that it only requires the united effort of the republicans of North Nebraska to make a formidable showing for the Dixon county superintendent. The time is opportune for a candidate from this locality so let us all get busy and hustle for A. V. Teed for State Superintendent.

The HERALD believes that of the four delegates at large to the republican national convention and in fact of the district delegates as well there should not be an office holder on the delegation. It has been the custom of the head officers in the state, either senators or congressmen, to carry off these honors but it is all wrong. They have been highly honored by the state in being selected for the positions both in an honorary and financial way and now when the chance comes to select men for a purely honorary place it should go to some of the other faithful ones who can just as intelligently represent the party in the national convention as one who is holding office. We hope there will be a movement to select some North Nebraska republican for one of the delegates at large and there is plenty of good material among those who have been fighting the party's battles for years. Give some of them a chance.

The Rebekahs had charge of the meeting and after the installation ceremonies refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was spent. Both lodges have had a good growth the past year and are in a flourishing condition.

Ker-Choo—That's it, the grippe. If you have had it and recovered you know how to sympathize with those who are going to have it. Doctors report it prevalent to a great extent some cases quite severe and if you feel yourself coming down with it better take some dope or it is likely to lay you up a week or so. Its the same old symptoms and everybody having had it at some time will know that it is the grippe microbes getting in their work again. The only thing that will check its spread will be some of the old fashioned January weather with a stiff northwestern breeze and the thermometer hanging around zero.

One of the leading social events of the New Year was the reception given last Friday evening at the home of Dr. Wightman by Mrs. Wightman assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Dan Harrington and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Chace in honor of Miss Marie Snyder who is visiting here. There were about fifteen couples present. Progressive whist was played and contrary to the usual custom the losers instead of the winners progressed. Delicious refreshments were served and after a time of playing cards dancing was the order of the evening. A Sioux City harpist furnished music for the occasion and altogether it was a most pleasant social affair and greatly enjoyed by all present.

The joint installation of officers of the Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbors Monday night was one of the most pleasant affairs in lodge circles in some time. The installation was under the auspices of the Royal Neighbors. The new officers of the Royal Neighbors were installed by members of the Winside lodge, eighteen ladies from that lodge coming here to take part in the ceremonies and the splendid manner in which they went through with the ceremonies evoked great applause from the two hoked Woodmen and Royal Neighbors present. Refreshments were served and the Wayne band boys who were holding a practice meeting that evening went up and favored the gathering with several selections. It was a great time for these two lodges and the attendance attests to the interest taken in lodge work.

Attacks Hog Ordinance

Winside Cor., Sioux City Tribune: Into the courts goes Winside's famous "hog" ordinance which prohibits the keeping of swine within the town limits.

Curtis Menshoof, a business man, arrested and fined for violation thereof, has appealed with the best of legal talent to back him up.

"This ordinance was passed under a 'suspension of the rules,' the right given the board if an 'emergency' exists. Taking advantage of the 'emergency' clause an ordinance can be passed in one night while by the regular method it would take three meetings.

In this particular case the courts will be asked to decide what an "emergency" is. Upon its decision rests the legality of the "hog" ordinance and hundreds of others passed in Nebraska towns under like circumstances.

Nebraska Echoes

Cashiers' checks are getting as scarce as hen's teeth.

Proposals will be received for the next thirty days. State qualifications.

A Randolph young lady "playfully" threw carbolic acid in a young man's face. This in what you would call "hot fun."

County Judge Malone, of Holt county, recently walked from O'Neill to Inman in such good time that his friends are wavering that if he can keep up the same pace from San Francisco to New York, Weston's time would be beaten. As yet the judge has not consented to make the "try."

Humorist Julius Hulff, of Norfolk thinks it only natural to assume that the Prune club, of Pierce, usually has a "swell" time.

According to the Punkin corner correspondent of the Lyons Sun, "Joe Pieper lost a plug of tobacco Friday and his cow, Brindle, ate it."

Walhill spent $1,650 on their ball club last season and what they did to the neighboring towns is recent history.

It is reported upon what is considered the best of authority, that in Thurston county they laid politics aside long enough to celebrate Christmas.

A Nebraskan has been sentenced to prison for selling a farm lying in the bottom of the Missouri river. The punishment is unjust. Next year the river may be three miles from this particular farm.

Charles Graff of Bancroft, had a Red Poll bull on exhibition at the recent international stock show in Chicago which captured the prize for being the largest animal on exhibition there.

"Brite an earle New Years day sez I tu Sara no more chewin fer Si. That nite I set by the kitchun fire with a cud in my mouf big as a nest of an spitin awl over the cole pale jest as I'm ust to doin. I reckun if a feller wants to quit tubaccer heed better do it rite soon after he takes his furst chew."

State Superintendent Francis G. Baker, of Illinois, writes that the Illinois plan of teaching the science of courtship in the public schools has been greatly misconstrued and Professor Greenlea, of Kankakee, that "while I always had known that Nebraska had numerous political freaks, it never occurred to me before that, of course, it would only be natural that many of them would be elected to the office of county superintendent." Comment on the last statement is withheld because a state insane asylum is located at Kankakee and perhaps—anyhow, there are many people there whose beliefs are out of fix.

It is charged by the enemies of the "cause" in Nebraska that competent instructors could not be found. O, fudge!

I'd give up my present job if courtship's taught in schools, I'll take a primary class and teach it all the rules.

So would Colonel Marsh Fennell, of Pender, "Judge" Mitcheltree, of Conchrd, Gilbert E. French, of Winside, and Bill Cramer, of Belden.

Asked to take a chair, a Norfolk girl replied, "no, thank you; I have been skating all day and am tired of sitting down."

This limerick sent from the new town may not win any prize but the heroine is a prize herself.

A pretty schoolma'am at Wynot told the superintendent she'd try not

To dance and every chance She turned down saying "I lie not."

Christmas day is a three-fold celebration time for Mrs. J. G. Metcalf, of Winside. It is her birthday and wedding day.

Two parties in Nebraska are vigorously claiming authorship to the following, even going so far as to air their contentions in the newspapers:

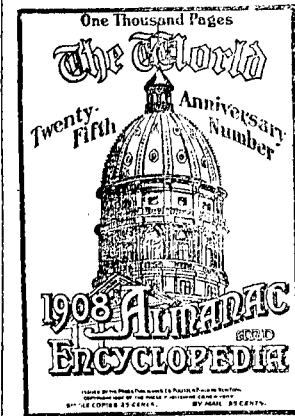

"I gif to you dis violet
In token dot ve efer met;
I hope dot ve alreatty yet
Sometime again togedder get."

In order that all amiable relations be maintained, that we have no factional strife on the eve of a presidential campaign and that no family or friendship ties be broken, we hereby give, grant and convey to one of them, the poem hereby attached and set forth, all our interest, right, title and advantage of and in said poem together with its rhyme, words, capital letters, punctuation marks and all other parts not heretofore mentioned and all right and advantage therein with full power to hold, claim, sell or give away with or without its rhyme, words, capital letters, punctuation marks or any other part or parts not heretofore mentioned, anything in conflict thereof notwithstanding. Good farming, based on sound principles of science and practice, was never more important or profitable than now. The Homestead, an agricultural and live stock paper published every Thursday at Des Moines, Iowa, is the best exponent of good farming. The Homestead is edited by farmers who live upon and operate their own farms right here in the middle West, so that their teachings are thoroughly practical. It has departments devoted to horticultural, poultry, sheep, dairy, veterinary, laws affecting farmers, current events, house and home Sunday school lessons, editorial comment, live farm gossip, etc; and its contributors include able and successful farmers and experiment station experts throughout the West. Many farmers in this vicinity are already subscribers for the Homestead and all should be; as whatever adds to the practical knowledge of the farmer increases the value of land and enhances the prosperity of the community. We take subscriptions for this splendid farm paper at this office; and, by special arrangement with the publisher, can give you a low subscription rate for it in connection with the Wayne Herald.

Notice

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received at the office of the county clerk of Wayne county, Nebraska, for County Physician from January 1908 to January 1909, bids to be filed on or before noon of the 10th day of January 1908.

County Physician to render all necessary attendance and furnish all medicine necessary for all persons who are or who may become a county charge upon said Wayne county, and all those whose circumstances are such as to require the county to provide for them such attendance and medicine, whether inmates of the county poor house or not, and all prisoners that may be in the county jail during the year. Said physician to furnish at his own expense all necessary medicines for persons dependent on the county for same, and also perform all surgical work for such persons, including the prisoners aforesaid.

Bids to be made for so much for the year.

The Board of Commissioners reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Bids to be opened at 12 o'clock noon of the 10th day of January 1908.

Dated at Wayne, Nebraska, this 3rd day of December 1907.

Good Cough Medicine for Children

The season for coughs and colds is now at hand and too much care cannot be used to protect the children. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when he has a cold. The quicker you cure his cold the less the risk. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the sole reliance of many mothers, and a few of those who have tried it are willing to use any other. Mrs.

F. F. Starcher, of Ripley, W. Va., says, "I have never used anything other than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for my children and it has always given good satisfaction." This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given as confidently to a child as to an adult. For sale by Raymonds Drug Store.

Special Excursion

To Summerfield Texas, January 21, 1908

Round Trip From Wayne, Nebraska to Summerfield in the Pan-Handle of Texas and Return $26.15.

The fare for the round trip without this excursion is about $48.00. We furnish you with a free sleeping car from the time you leave Omaha till you get back to Kansas City.

Have 15,000 acres of fine farm lands for sale around Summerfield in the shallow well district, ranging in price from $15.00 to $25.00 per acre.

Soil of the Pan-Handle

The soil around Summerfield is a chocolate brown from two to four feet deep, underlaid with a yellow clay subsoil. There is absolutely no trace of alkali or gypsum. This is covered in its natural state with a dense growth of buffalo and granna grasses which cure in sun when ripe, and afford as good pasturage in winter as in summer. The land is slightly rolling, wells are from 40 to 100 feet deep with good water and plenty of it.

Crops Raised in the Pan-Handle

Wheat twenty to forty bushels per acre. Kaffir corn, milo maize, forty to sixty bushels; oats, thirty to sixty-five bushels; Indian corn, twenty to forty bushels, and in some cases seventy bushels have been made to the acre. Vegetables and melons of all kinds, when properly planted and cared for do well. Fruit also of all kinds do well. In some sections of the Pan-Handle cotton is grown and makes from one-half to one bale per acre. This section has never been visited by the boll weevil. In fact the amount raised per acre appears to be limited only by the energy and ability of the farmer. Flax, Kaffir corn and milo maize are generally used as a sod crop and almost invariably net the owner on an average of fifteen dollars per acre according to James J. Hill (who is probably the most competent man and in the best position to judge of such matters.) In 1950 there will be three people in the United States for every one here now. Just think what this means! It means that we shall have to either have three times the average under cultivation or else import our food stuffs from foreign countries. With these facts and statistics staring you in the face, is it any wonder that the prices of farm lands have lately been increasing in value at a surprising rate, not only in one locality, but extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf, and immigration is even now knocking at the door of Old Mexico. The march of progress will continue.

Do Not Hesitate

How often have you heard people say: "Why, I remember when I could have bought land at $10.00 an acre which is now worth $100.00 an acre, but I didn't have sense enough to invest then." That same opportunity we are offering you today in Texas for there is no question that land which will produce crops that will net from fifteen to thirty dollars an acre will, within a short time, be worth from fifty to seventy-five dollars an acre. Remember the old saying: "He who hesitates is lost," and make up your mind to go with us on our special excursion Jan. 7th, 1908. You will never regret it. For further information inquire of

The Mistaken Identity of Tommy

By ADDIE F. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.

Mrs. Vaughn put down the letter she had been reading, with a troubled little sigh. Her daughter Madge looked up from the step.

"What's the matter, mother? You look as if you had been reading your death warrant."

"I have—the death warrant of our summer's peace. Aunt Mary North writes to ask if we won't keep her Tom while she and Mr. North go abroad for the summer."

"Who's her Tom?" asked Madge succinctly.

"Her stepson. I've not seen Aunt Mary since she married Mr. North, and I know next to nothing of the North family. But Mrs. Wilson knew Mr. North when they were living in Chicago, (that was in the time of the first Mrs. North), and she said there were two girls and a boy. The boy was in kilts then, and that was five years ago, so he must be about eight or nine years old. Aunt Mary says he has been ill with typhoid and that she remembers with hope for his health that the air at Pinecroft is healing."

"But we can't have him, mother. Think of having an eight-year-old boy on our hands the whole summer! We can never get enough cooked for him to eat, and he'll be drowned regularly once a week and break all his arms and legs on the other days. And I wanted a quiet, heavenly rest this summer before I have to go back to that awful office. And it will be—well, the other kind of a time with a Tommy around, that is certain."

"But, Madge, I can't refuse Aunt Mary. She was your father's favorite aunt and always so good to him. No, Tommy will have to come, whether we want him or not."

"Well, then, when?"

"The letter says next Tuesday unless they hear from us that it is not convenient."

"Tell Aunt Mary I have the smallpox or that I died suddenly at the news—anything. Please, mother!"

"I was wondering," said her mother, "whether an eight-year-old boy would be afraid to sleep in a room by himself. Shall we put a bed in the alcove off my room or fix up the south chamber?"

"All the boys I've ever seen," answered Madge, "were afraid neither of the things under the earth nor of those upon it. Give him a room to himself, and then you'll be saved the everlasting clutter of fishing tackle and knives and tongs and things in your room."

Still grumbling, Madge helped her mother get ready the south chamber. As she worked she grew interested and even took from the walls of her own room some interesting prints which she thought would be suitable for a boy's room.

"I can't see, though, why Aunt Mary didn't take the little wretch abroad with her—the sea air would do him good. Take out all the fancy things, mother, as you value them."

"If you only understood big boys as well as you seem to understand the small ones you would not be twenty-four and still single," teased her mother.

"I do, mother," said Madge vehemently. "I understand them altogether too well, and that's the very reason I am still single."

There was no immediate reply to this, and Mrs. Vaughn turned her attention to the room.

"Get all your old picture books and put them in that shelf, Madge, and I think I'll bring Jim's old hobbyhorse down from the attic. He may despise it, but you never can tell."

"I suppose I could make him some kites," said Madge. "There's all that red and blue paper and miles of yellow string. Perhaps if I make a big one he'll get fastened to it and fly off to Mrs. And while I'm up in the attic I'm going to bring down some of Jim's old overalls."

Arrangements were finally completed, and Madge rather looked forward to the coming of the little boy, so that when Tuesday came she willingly drove to the station for him, though she protested that St. Lawrence and his griddle were as nothing to the torment she was undergoing. She took along a bag of cookies, "just to stop up his mouth so he can't ask questions," she explained.

The train was late, and Madge got a little cross as she waited in the open trap with the hot sun beating down upon her. The pony was restless, and she dared not leave him to go inside of the station. When the train finally steamed in, however, she gave the reins to a porter and went to find her young charge. She watched the few who came out of the coaches nervously, with one eye on the dancing pony, but as far as she could see no small boy was on the train. Fearing that he had not heard the name of the station called, she spoke to the conductor, who told her that no such person was on the train.

"Well," she thought, "I suppose I should be glad of it," and was going back to the trap when it occurred to her that he might some way have got past her into the station and might be waiting for her there. She looked in. No one was there but a very tall young man, who was leaning back rather limply against the seat, pale as from a recent illness. Madge gave him more than a passing glance because she wondered who he might be. Young men at Pinecroft at this season were the daffy." She was getting into the cart when a quiet "I beg your pardon" caused her to wheel around. The strange young man, hat in hand, was certainly speaking to her. She merely looked her surprise.

"Are you not Miss Vaughn, and weren't you expecting me?" Her blue eyes widened into a positive stare of amazement.

"I—I am Madge Vaughn, but you—you must be mistaken," she said.

"I am Dr. North—Tom North, my mother wrote." He was blushing a little at the queerness of her reception.

"You—you are little Tommy?"

"Why"—She began to laugh merrily, and the young man laughed, too, a bit stiffly, for he did not understand the joke. "You have the advantage of me," he said.

Madge sobered at his tone and realized that she was not displaying any marked hospitality. She held out a repentant hand, which the young man took eagerly. "We're sort of cousins, I guess," she said. "Anyway, if you are Tommy North we've been looking for you, so get in, and we'll start."

"I can go away if it is not convenient," protested the man.

"Convenient! After I've worked for three days getting picture books and kites and little blue overalls ready for you? No, sir, you will have to use all those things."

"You see," she explained as she drove along, "we got the impression from some one that you were about eight years old. Your mother never mentioned your age or height, and so we got ready for a small boy, and—ah, here are some cookies I brought along so that you would not ask questions on the way home." She thrust a paper bag into his hands.

They were both laughing like children as they drove in at the gate, and by the time explanations were made to Mrs. Vaughn the young man was thankful that the surprise had happened. He felt that it had been a good thing to take Madge by surprise, for when two people have laughed together they have rapidly progressed in their acquaintance.

On the very first day Mrs. Vaughn had looked at the two with comprehension in her eyes, and as the weeks grew into months she felt reasonably sure that Madge would never go back to the office.

"Why should she," whispered the older woman to herself, "when a prosperous young physician is not only willing, but obviously anxious, to monopolize her?"

The day before he was scheduled to go back to the city a new man by reason of Pinecroft air and agreeable companionship they took the big red and blue kite to the top of a nearby hill to fly it. It soared clear above the trees as the man slowly unwound the long yellow string. The girl watched it rather sadly, for as yet there had been no word of love between them and she realized that she had grown to care so much that it was hard not to let him see it. She felt glad, though, that she had not let him see it, because there might be another girl in the city to whom he was bound, and she—well, she had her work at the office. The tears had come into her eyes, and now they splashed over.

The young man looked up just in time to catch sight of them, and, letting the string go, he turned and caught her in his arms.

"Dear," he whispered, "what is it?" She did not speak, but she did not try to get away either, and after a moment he said:

"Is it because I am going away—is it, Madge?" She shook her head.

"Why, then," he urged, "tell me." Suddenly she began to laugh—a soft little laugh that made the man hold her closer.

"I was only wondering," she said, "whether or not there was a girl."

"You bet there is," he interrupted, "and I've got her right where I want her." Which sentence, slangy as it was, seemed to be wholly satisfactory to Madge.

"Trees and Fools. Any fool can destroy trees. They cannot run away, and if they could they would still be destroyed—chased and hunted down as long as fun or a dollar could be got out of their bark hides, branching horns or magnificent hole backbones. Few that fell trees plant them. Nor would planting avail much toward getting back anything like the noble primeval forests. During a man's life only saplings can be grown in the place of the old trees, tens of centuries old, that have been destroyed. It took more than 3,000 years to make some of the trees in these western woods—trees that are still standing in perfect strength and beauty, waving and singing in the mighty forests of the Sierra. God has cared for these trees, saved them from drought, disease, avalanches and a thousand straining, leveling tempests and floods, but he cannot save them from fools. Only Uncle Sam can do that.—John Muir of California."

Out of the Schoolroom. A schoolboy was asked to give some information in regard to the Cary sisters, the once famous New England poets, and he said of them:

"The Cary sisters were two poets who lived in Massachusetts most of the time. They went to New York, where they made many fast friends. Their fastest friend was John G. Whittier."

At the time of the Longfellow centennial, when the school children were writing so much about him, one boy wrote:

"Longfellow's poems were mostly of his own composure, but he wrote 'Tells of a Wayside Inn,' where others did the talking. He was the poet lorryjack of our country and was a crackerjack when it came to real poetry."—Lippincott's.

Minna Reed almost ran down the steps from the house bearing the sign "Mme. Volrat, Clairvoyant." The lady's communications had upset all her preconceived plans and ideas. Her mother had always opposed her trying anything of the kind, but when she saw the sign an overwhelming desire to inquire into things unknown had beset her. The rest of the party had gone down to the beach, and after staying in her room at the summer hotel for an hour with a headache she had slipped out to buy a fascinating kimono she had seen in a Japanese store the day before. The clairvoyant's sign had caught her eye, and for a whole hour she had sat in the darkened, stuffy little room with her nerves all at strained attention.

She went back to her room and, walking straight to the dresser, looked regretfully at the picture of a frank boyish face surrounded by a little plain gold frame.

"I never would have thought it," she whispered. "I thought you were the truest, noblest thing on earth. And she said the man with black eyes, now one of my circle of acquaintances, was deceitful to the core and that if I did not separate his path from mine he would prove the blighting sorrow of my life. Jimmy, dear, it seems impossible to believe you could bring sorrow into any one's life, but it must have been you she meant, for you are the only man of my acquaintance who has black eyes." And being only nineteen and believing she had come face to face with the big sorrow of her life, she threw herself across the bed and sobbed because she felt that she must immediately take steps to separate Jimmy Kent's path from hers—Jimmy, who had lent her his red ball to play with the very first day—she went to kindergarten.

James Kent, unconscious of the heavy cloud of suspicion hovering over him, came from his ocean swim and lay idly on the sand, hoping Minna would get over her headache and walk down to the beach. Finally, sunburned and glowing, he went back to the hotel and found her on the veranda, gazing listlessly at the sea.

"Is it as bad as all that, little girl? You are the most forlorn looking specimen I ever saw," he said as he sat on the porch railing and eyed her commiseratingly.

Minna, seeing the sympathy in his eyes, wished fervently that they were any other color than black.

"What on earth made you have black eyes, Jimmy? I dislike them so," she said petulantly.

Jimmy opened the offending orbs very wide in his surprise.

"By Jove, you are a queer one, Minna! You told me yesterday down on the beach that I had the most beautiful eyes you ever saw. Positively made me blush to know I was so beautiful. 'Fraid to sleep in them last night lest I should spoil 'em. And now—Minna, you haven't met any fellow with gray eyes, have you?' he asked suspiciously.

"No, I haven't," indignantly, "but black eyes are treacherous—and I never could trust them."

Whether they were treacherous or not was left an open question, but they certainly proved persuasive, and finally Jimmy was in possession of the whole story.

"Minna Reed, you ought to be ashamed of yourself! Do I look like a blighting sorrow?" mimicking her forlorn tone. "I might be mistaken for a prize fighter," exhibiting his muscular arm with pride, "but I'm blamed if I'd know how to start out in the blighting sorrow business."

Minna, anxious to believe, still looked dubious.

"If your eyes only weren't black," she sighed.

"Now, look here, my child, I'd get a special act of congress to change them to suit you if I could. You know I've done everything to please you all my life. Why will you believe that utter rot? Did she tell you anything tangible that you absolutely know was true?" Jimmy was in training for a lawyer and wanted to contest all evidence in the case.

"She told me my name and age," triumphantly.

"Didn't you have to write it on a piece of paper first?" suspiciously.

"Yes, but she didn't see it—honestly she didn't. I folded it tightly and put it on the table, and she sat and toyed with it while she talked."

"The mischief she didn't see it!" growled Jimmy. "Anything else?"

"She said I had an Aunt Mary in the spirit land that was trying to guide me," hesitatingly.

"See there! You never had an Aunt Mary in your life! It's all plain humbug," Jimmy spoke with the satisfaction of one willing to leave his case in the hands of an intelligent jury.

"No, I never had, but mamma had, and the clairvoyant said aunts and great-aunts were all the same in the spirit world."

Jimmy positively growled with disgust.

"She might safely hit on an Aunt Mary. Nearly everybody living has an aunt or great-aunt or great-great-great-aunt Mary. But she had no business fooling with my eyes."

He sat sulkily silent, then grinned with a thought that made him wonder if he would not some day bear to the realms of the metaphysical the same relation that Edison bears to things physical.

"Young woman, I would not take a hopeless verdict upon my eyes from any one oculist. Neither will I have them condemned by any one clairvoyant. I demand a consultation. If I get the party together, will you go to another clairvoyant this evening?" he demanded.

"I would be so glad to find that the first one was mistaken," she said fervently.

It was a very busy evening for Mr. Kent. Finally he found a seersufficiently good natured and pliable to all his requirements.

"Remember, you are to entirely free her mind from the idea. I'll send her in third. You couldn't fail to know her anyway. She's the prettiest one in the bunch. It's cheap at $10, and if she gets over her fear of black eyes, by Jove, I'll send you another tenner tomorrow." And Mme. Ardetta, enthusiastic under the powerful stimulus, promised to do her best.

That night when the moon cast a long path of light over the waves a couple sat far down the beach in a spot removed from the crowd.

"She told me my name without my writing it!" Minna said in awed tones. "She is simply wonderful! Said for me never to have any confidence in fakes that made me write questions and fold them on a table, that they had blank papers folded just like them, and when they were toyed with the ones I wrote that they would substitute the blank one and leave it on the table and take mine in their hand under the edge of the table and read it. That's exactly what that first woman must have done. I've lost faith in her entirely, and, Jimmy, boy, she said that the only person I need avoid and be suspicious of was a blond man with a Vandyke beard."

Young Mr. Kent stroked his beardless chin. "Thank heaven I haven't a blond Vandyke," he said proudly. "Did she tell you anything about—er—me?" he asked cautiously.

"Not exactly, but she said that my real affinity was—a man I had known since childhood."

"Now, that," said Mr. Kent, with great gratification, "suits me exactly. I'd rather be called an affinity any day than a blighting sorrow." He joyfully possessed himself of the girl's hands, and she had evidently lost all fear of treachery.

Afterward, with her head resting comfortably against his broad shoulder, she spoke musingly. "She said that the greatest trial of her life was that there were so many fakes that brought discredit upon her glorious profession."

"Never you mind, little girl; I'm not so easily imposed upon, and you'll have me with you all through life to help pick out the real article," and the treacherous Mr. Kent lifted her face until he could look adoringly into it.

The moon, as if by special contract, came from under a cloud at just the right moment, and she saw his expression.

"Jimmy, I don't believe any one else ever had such wonderfully honest eyes," she said happily.

THE NIGHTINGALE.

Coleridge's Defense of the Songster as Not a Melancholy Bird.

The traditional view of the nightingale's song is supremely given in the familiar lyric by Richard Barnefield. Here the poet finds the forlorn bird, with "her breast up-till a thorn," earnestly pouring forth her melodious sorrow. Milton in his juvenile sonnet apostrophizes the ineffable singer as giving forth notes that portend success in love, and when he comes to describe sober pleasures in "Il Penseroso" he appropriately finds the same strains "most musical, most melancholy." Against this Coleridge enters a vigorous protest in "The Nightingale; a Conversation Poem," characteristically advancing in the following passage a general truth and a specific criticism:

A melancholy bird? Oh, idle thought! In nature there is nothing melancholy. But some night wandering man whose heart was pierced

With the remembrance of a grievous wrong Or slow distemper or neglected love (And so, poor wretch, filled all things with his grief)

And made all gentle sounds tell back the tale Of his own sorrow, he, and such as he, First named these notes a melancholy strain.

Annotating this, the poet further illustrates his philosophic acuteness and takes the opportunity of expressing his loyalty to his eminent poetical predecessor. "This passage in Milton, the note runs, 'possesses an excellence far superior to that of mere description. It is spoken in the character of the melancholy man and has therefore a dramatic propriety. The author makes this remark to rescue himself from the charge of having alluded with levity to a line in Milton, a charge that which none could be more painful to him except perhaps that of having ridiculed his Bible.'"

In a letter to Christopher North, Wordsworth refers to the "false notions" regarding the nightingale's song and expresses his belief that Coleridge's poem, with its theory that "in nature there is nothing melancholy," will in all likelihood "contribute greatly to rectify these." In his own poem "Enterprise" he touches on the same point and alludes to the nightingale as "the sweet bird, misnamed the melancholy." It is hardly necessary to add, that Keats in his great ode "To a Nightingale" rises to exquisite rapture over the happiness manifested in the singing of the "light winged dryad of the trees."—London Notes and Queries.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

Copyright, 1907, by N. E. Daley.

Felicia packed into a little trunk her one white party dress, a pretty gray dinner gown, a half dozen shirt waists and an extra hat, and away she went to town to visit her cousin, Mary Barnes.

Mary's brother Roger met her at the station.

"Mary is planning no end of things for you," he told Felicia when he had settled her in the carriage. "She is going to give a luncheon and a tea and a heater party and a dance, and half of her friends are enlisted to make you a good time. It will be a lively excitement for you, little girl."

"Oh," Felicia leaned forward, "I shall be glad. My greatest excitement for years has been a boat ride or a high ride, and I am longing for so many things."

"Mary spoils society with a big 'S,' Roger told her. "She is a slave to it, and she needs a rest. She is as thin as a reed and as pale as paper."

"What think what a lovely time she will have!" Felicia said, all pink and white with enthusiasm.

"Oh, oh!" Roger said, "You don't know when you are well off, little Felicia."

"I wish I were as fat as Mary's neck when she had the great stroke!"

"I can stay two weeks," she said, "and I'll be glad to have the time of my life."

"I don't you are," Mary said and cut in, "I'm going to a party at the lake and I'll be home in a week."

"I'll be home in a week," she said, "and I'll be glad to have the time of my life."

"I'll be home in a week," she said, "and I'll be glad to have the time of my life."

were on a treadmill and go one would let me stop."

Felicia looked at her with startled eyes.

"Why, I thought you liked it," she gasped.

Mary straightened up at that. "Oh, when I get into it," she said, "trying to speak lightly, it's not so bad, but I have felt the strain this winter awfully."

Between rushes that night Roger caught Felicia for a moment alone in the library. "Mary is dreadfully blue," he told her. "She broke her engagement with Bob Carruth in the summer, and she hasn't seen him since, and she misses him."

"What did she break it for?" Felicia asked.

"He wanted her to go south with him and settle in a little town where he could practice medicine, and she wouldn't give up society, and now I think she regrets it."

"Oh," said little Felicia, "if I loved a man I would go to the end of the world with him."

"Would you?" Roger asked.

"Yes."

"Well, I am leaving for Japan next week," he said.

Felicia gazed at him with intense indignation for a moment, then she turned her back on him. "Silly!" she said.

When Felicia went to bed that night she was so tired that she could not sleep. The next morning she was as pale as Mary. For a week the two girls dragged their engagements, finishing up on Saturday night with another cotillon.

"Felicia wore her white dress. It was mused, and she knew that she was not looking her best, but she was so tired that she did not care. Roger had sent her a bunch of violets, and her dance card was filled with names, but the fact gave her no satisfaction.

"The fourth dance was Roger's. 'Enjoying it?' he asked briefly as he swung her out into the floor.

"Oh, I am so tired I shall drop," she said. "Can't I go home, Roger?"

She looked so like a little weary child that Roger laughed.

"Baby," he teased and then tenderly, "I'll hunt Mary up, and we will cut the rest of it."

In the carriage Mary collapsed. "I didn't dream I was so tired," she sobbed, with her head on Felicia's shoulder, and Roger, surveying the pair with twinkling eyes, said, "Let me prescribe."

"Well?" came back in muffled agreement.

"You pack your trunk, Mary," he planned, "and go home with Felicia. It's lovely in the country now, and I'll come up and bring Bob Carruth with me."

Mary sat up, with her face ablaze.

"Bob Carruth?"

"Yes. I had a letter from him yesterday. He's coming up for a visit."

Felicia pink tinged Mary's cheeks.

"Do you think he will want to see me, Roger?" she asked wistfully, and Roger said gently, "I know he will, Mary."

So Felicia packed her little trunk, and Mary packed a larger one, and away they went to the country, where the trees were crimson and gold and brown and where the air was like wine. And there Bob Carruth and Roger followed them.

"So she is really going to marry him and live in a country town," Roger commented, and he and Felicia followed Mary and her lover along a path that seemed to end in a golden sunset.

"Yes," Felicia said.

"And you are going to marry me and come and live in the city," Roger ventured.

"I haven't promised yet," said little Felicia. "I am afraid that some day I should be saying, 'Give me again my hollow tree, my crust of bread and liberty.'"

"You aren't afraid of anything of the kind," Roger told her. "You know we would live happy ever after."

"Oh, well, if you are so sure," said Felicia as she tucked a confiding hand through his arm and looked up at him with happy eyes, "I guess I shall have to say yes, Roger."

The most remarkable thing in connection with the bellbird is its powerful voice. It utters a clear metallic note that can be heard at a distance of three miles. Its noise is like that produced by a blacksmith striking his anvil. Sometimes it repeats its notes in quick succession, sometimes at fairly long intervals. There is no mistake about the voice of this bird; it is loud and piercing and would be heard above the din produced by every inmate of the zoo raising its voice at once.

Except for a space of naked skin on the throat and around the eyes, which during the breeding season is of green color, this bird is pure white. The contrast between the sexes in the bellbirds is extreme, for, while the male is pure white, the female is brownish green. Darwin refers to the bellbird when he points out that "white is a very rare color in terrestrial species of moderate size and inoffensive habits."

In a Bad Way. There is a Pennsylvania divine who is not averse to telling a good story at his own expense.

Once in addressing a mission meeting in Philadelphia which was attended mainly by sailors the good man had sought to adapt his remarks to his hearers by using nautical similes, and in so doing he ventured somewhat beyond his depth.

"And now what shall we do—what shall we do?"

"Nothing," said one of the sailors, "but we'll sing out one or two hymns."
