PORTUGAL'S KING AND CROWN PRINCE SHOT

There were many evidences that the plot to kill Portugal's monarch had been planned to the minutest detail. King Carlos had been warned of his danger and an extra strong escort was in attendance. The fact that the assassins easily outwitted this com-gave rise to rumors of treachery and a substitution is obtainable. King Carlos within twelve hours received information that Premier Franco was to be killed by the revolutionists at the same time. The idea was, so the king was told, to overflow the monarch. The people were weary of oppression. They were confident that the king's dynasty was behind Franco in all his oppressive measures, and therefore were ready to create a new power. The king's assassination brings into regular prominence the head of a powerful

King Carlos of Portugal and the crown prince, Luiz Philippe, were shot in the streets of Lisbon Sunday. The king was killed by a bullet fired by a man who threw himself in front of the royal carriage. The crown prince was wounded by a bullet fired from a balcony. The king's assassination brings into regular prominence the head of a powerful

Bullets from several places plied the body of his majesty and of Crown Prince Luiz, and they fell from their seats. Prince Manuel, the younger son, was given a flesh wound, but Queen Amelia escaped without a hurt. The queen seemed to understand the danger of the situation more than her consort or children. As the assassins raised their guns her majesty stood up and endeavored with motherly intuition to shield the crown prince. Queen Amelia was too late.

The royal family was driving in an open carriage. It would appear, from the report, that it would have been a fatal mistake to have the carriage being driven along at a moderate pace when just as the vehicle rounded a bend, the armed murderers sprang up. They leaped with a savage yell toward King Carlos, and when within a few yards flung their rifles. The king and crown prince were shot through the head and were scarcely breathing when the bullets gently lifted them from the carriage and carried them to the marble arched entrance of the family which formerly reigned in Portugal—the house of Braganza. Dom Miguel Braganza is the present head of the family, and the understanding is he will make a strong bid upon popular sentiment to succeed the dead Carlos.

Populace in Terror.

The news of the assassination swept through the city like fire through dry grass and half the populace became panic-stricken, not knowing where the next blow might fall. There is the greatest dread for the future of the country, which it seems on the verge of being plunged into the throes of a revolution, with all the attendant horrors and bloodshed. Throughout the city consternation reigned.

At the first blush it would seem as though the assassination was the work of anarchists and not of republican sympathizers. Nevertheless, the strike events of the last few weeks have been a menace for some startling manifestation. The discovery of plot after plot, as well as the discovery of many secret stores of weapons and ammunition, have demonstrated beyond peradventure the existence of a determination on the part of a large body of the Portuguese to overthrow the present conditions and proclaim a republic.

Queen Maria Pia, the mother of King Carlos; the Duke of Oporto, his brother; a number of ministers and court officials hastened at once to the arsenal when the news reached them of the attack upon the royal family.

The cold-blooded murder sent a thrill of horror throughout the country, even among those who have been working patiently for the establishment eventually of a republic, and sorrow is expressed on every hand at the dreadful end of the king and the crown prince.

In April, 1903, an attempt was made on King Carlos' life as he was being driven through Lisbon, but it met with complete failure. On Jan. 30, 1896, an anarchist made an attempt upon the life while the latter was returning from the palace in an open carriage after a drive.

down in the streets. The king's proclamation, signed by himself as Dom Manuel II., and countersigned by all the ministers, was read from the balcony, but beyond this there was no public ceremony.

Although in his proclamation the king declared he would support Prime Minister Franco and his policy, he was persuaded later to accept the resignation of the entire ministry. This was done in return for the promise of the progressive and regenerationist parties to support the government and bury their differences with Premier Franco if a coalition cabinet were appointed.

Belasco regards Mrs. Fiske as the "greatest dramatic artist now on the American stage." Although her more recent successes have been in these parts, she will not play there under Belasco.

WORK OF CONGRESS

The reading of the President's message concerning the employers' liability act, the granting of injunctions in labor cases and other matters of a general nature concerning corporations was the chief feature of the Senate proceedings Friday. The message received careful attention. The Senate ordered 10,000 copies printed. The remainder of the day was devoted to routine business and a further consideration of the bill to revise the criminal laws of the United States. The first reading of the bill was concluded. The Senate adjourned until Monday. An unusual and almost unprecedented scene was enacted in the House of Representatives as the result of the reading of a special message to Congress by the President, urging additional legislation in the matter of relations of labor and capital and of corporations and the public. The vigorous language of the document brought forth storms of applause, first on the Democratic side of the House, then on the Republican, and culminating in a general demonstration by the entire body. After passing 288 pension bills, the Indian appropriation bill was discussed. Its consideration had not been completed when the House adjourned until Monday.

Senator Piles of Washington Monday delivered an eloquent appeal in favor of an appropriation by Congress of $700,000 for a government exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, to be held in Seattle next year. The day in the Senate was chiefly devoted to a consideration of bills on the calendar, several of which were passed. The House adjourned until Monday. The Indian appropriation bill was under discussion, but legislation was relegated to the background while national politics occupied the stage. Before the political question cropped out the House, with next to the largest attendance of the session present, with but one dissenting vote, passed a general measure of the bill to amend the act of March 3, 1879, which authorized the United States to acquire land for the purpose of the reclamation law and an act of March 3, 1879, which authorized the expenditure of more than $12,000,000 annually. The bill did not pass until the afternoon of Monday. The bill was passed by a vote of 219 yeas and 171 nays. The bill was introduced by Mr. Piles of Washington. The bill was reported by the committee on the part of the House by Mr. Piles of Washington. The bill was reported by the committee on the part of the House by Mr. Piles of Washington. The Senate Tuesday passed the urgent delivery bill, providing an appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act of March 3, 1879, which authorized the expenditure of more than $12,000,000 annually. The bill did not pass until the afternoon of Monday. The bill was passed by a vote of 219 yeas and 171 nays. The bill was introduced by Mr. Piles of Washington. Senator Beveridge of Indiana delivered an appeal to the Senate Wednesday to adopt his bill providing for a nonpartisan tariff commission, a plan which he described as a "modern and business basis on this subject. Several Democratic Senators spoke briefly on the general subject of the tariff. Tariff revision and the President's recent special message to Congress again were the main topics of discussion in the House. As has been the case for nearly a week, the Indian appropriation bill was taken up in the House, but no action was taken. A long speech by Senator Piles of Washington, the majority leader, was considered important because of his assurance that a tariff revision plank would be incorporated in the Republican national platform of this year. He said Mr. Piles was speaking about the tariff revision. President Roosevelt's grand old party program in providing his line of duty was to secure the passage of the bill which was the subject of his message to Congress.

Their Codes of Honor

It was a wild, stormy night in darkest Russia. The snow was falling thick and fast in whirling, swirling gusts, which the cutting north wind blew now this way, now that. Darkness, in all its awful Russian gloom and dreariness, had settled on Siberia, the land of misery and sorrow.

In a lonely hut, far on upon the wild plain, all was stillness save for the soft humming of a young girl, seated by the fire, which glowed in a subdued light. It was a very humble dwelling, but within, extremely neat and homelike. It was constructed of rough-hewn logs and timbers. Furs and skins covered the walls and floor, and cooking utensils hung from the opposite beams of the roof. A huge fireplace glowed in one corner, before which were two chairs.

Vera Stephanovitch was sitting, idly dreaming before the fire. Occasional sparks burst forth into the air, full merrily, and as if in answer, the storm purred more freely without, and a voice in the night seemed indeed to groan, the voice of the howling wind. As the tempest grew more and more violent, the girl arose and, taking a candle, peered anxiously out. She was a beautiful girl, tall and lithe, with a crown of dark hair and large gray eyes. Her face was strong but sweet, with a clear, broad forehead, regular features, and rich, red lips. After standing there awhile, she went back to the fire and began humming again.

But every little while she went anxiously to the window and tried to pierce the darkness. Her anxiety became more and more noticeable as the minutes slowly crept on.

"It is a terrible night," she murmured. "Ah, if Orloff were only here!"

Suddenly there came a dull between the gusts of wind and a sound reached Vera's ears, the sound of painful, struggling feet, dragging weary on in the storm. Then came a sharp rap on the door. She rushed to open it and a man fell into the room. He was covered with snow and his face seemed utterly exhausted. He was haggard and wild-eyed, and stood shivering at every sound.

The girl cried: "Oh, my brother, thank Heaven you are here. Come to the fire and rest." This seemed to rouse him, for he arose and whispered hoarsely: "Vera, I have killed the foreman of the mine!"

She gazed at him in terror, horror, and cried:

"What do you mean, Orloff?"

"Oh, Vera," he cried, "it was an accident. My gun became discharged accidentally and the bullet struck the foreman who stood near me. They are searching for me, they will be here in a moment. I must fly, my sister. I must go. I shall escape to England, or anywhere, anywhere, but I must go now, now, and then, oh God, what will become of you?"

The girl had been horrified, then dazed, and now she sank, sobbing: "Oh, Orloff, Orloff!"

With an agonized cry the man went to her and said: "Hush, Vera, hush. There is no time to lose. I must go now, tonight."

THE BRIDAL PATH

"In this storm?" she asked.

"Yes, sister. I have started already on my track. I must go. But you, oh what will become of my sister?"

At these words she sprang up and said: "Worry not for me. I am young and strong. But you—oh you are right, no time can be lost. Come, take this money, which we have saved and go. They will be here directly."

She forced the gold into his hands, and throwing her arms passionately about his neck, said: "God bless you, Orloff, and may he help you to escape. I shall pray for you night and day. But go, oh go!"

He embraced her tenderly and said: "Vera, you are a brave sister. Some day I shall send for you to come to me and then I will repay you."

"Orloff," she said sobbing, "you will return to me but I can never go to you, Orloff," she stopped, blushing.

"You love him, Vera?"

"Yes," she answered, softly.

"Well, then, I go with a lighter heart, for Sergio is a brave and honorable soldier, but now, farewell. Oh, Vera, one last embrace and he was gone. Vera stood where he had left her, then she cried: "He shall escape. I will save him. I shall trick the officials." Then she broke down softly sobbing.

But she soon arose and resumed her seat at the fire, and silence once more settled on the Siberian hut, while Vera waited—waited.

About midnight the storm ceased. Vera went to the door and looked out. The stars were out now and shone brightly on the Russian snow. She stood, looking out, when suddenly she saw a dark line of figures moving across the plain, coming toward her hut. She knew what it meant. It was a band of soldiers. Suddenly she started. Who was that at their head? It was Sergio Borisoff, her lover and betrothed. And they had placed him at the head of those who sought her brother's life! She hastily went in and as hastily shut the door. A strange tumult of feelings stricken in her breast. Then she broke into a little, joyous laugh.

"I shall save him now," she sang.

A few moments later a knock came at her door. She opened it and Sergio came in, his face set and white. He beckoned for the others to stay behind and went in alone, and shut the door. The two stood looking at each other for a long time. Neither spoke. Then he broke the silence.

"Vera, I cannot help it. I must do my duty. They gave me this charge. I must fulfill it. I have sworn to do so. Where is your brother?" No answer. "Vera, where is your brother?" Suddenly she came close to Sergio and, looking up into his strong face, and dark handsome eyes, so full of tenderness for her, she said:

"Sergio, I am your promised wife. Do you love me?"

"You know, Vera," he said simply, "but why do you ask?"

"Why?" she said passionately, "why? Because you must prove your love for me. You must show that you love me better than all else. You must allow my brother to escape!"

"Vera?" he cried.

"You must allow my brother to escape," she said again.

"But Vera, you cannot ask it of me, my honor, my duty—you know I love you, but I cannot forget my word for any one."

"You must allow my brother to escape!"

"I will not," he answered.

"Then, Sergio, you have lost your wife!"

"You cannot mean that, Vera."

"I mean it. You must choose," she replied.

He gazed at her long and earnestly, as if trying to read her very soul. But her gray eyes were steady and not for one moment did she waver. He held out his arms appealingly, but she did not answer him. He turned slowly and opened the door.

"Come and search," he commanded.

After they had hunted and failed to find Orloff, Sergio ordered them to start on the trail immediately. He lingered at the door and said slowly: "It is my duty, Vera. Good night."

"Good-by," she corrected.

It was a month afterward, Orloff Stevanovitch had never been found. Vera had received word from him and he was safe on his way to America. The girl was very lonely, but there was jubilation in her very manner and her eyes were joyous and happy. Orloff had escaped and soon Sergio would come. Why had he not come before? Ah, she had known that he would do it for her.

One evening at sunset she saw a man coming toward her hut. It was Sergio. She ran to meet him, his face and joy in her manner. He caught her hands, and gazing into her eyes, said: "Ah, Vera, you do love me, do you not? You have welcomed me back? You have retraced your words?"

"Of course," she said, and led him into the house.

"Then let us forget that night, Vera. It is stamped on my brain in letters of fire, but your love will wash it away. We shall forget, shall we not?" and he drew her toward him.

"As you wish, Sergio," she replied, "but I know you would do it for me. I knew you would let him escape."

"Let him escape?" he cried, "but, Vera, I did not!"

"You did not?" she repeated, dazed.

"No. Oh, now I see. You thought"—and he strove, but for dying from his face. The girl turned from him.

"Vera, I understand. You misunderstood. But you never know the truth. It was an accident. I did my duty to the best of my ability. We searched and searched, but we missed, where I do not know. I am sorry that you do not understand. Women cannot understand. Men have a code of honor and duty which they must follow, and if they break this law they must pay the forfeit, and the forfeit is this: that they are no longer worthy to love a pure and honorable woman. Our lives and honor are linked together and therefore is lost when honor is severed from it. But you are a woman. You cannot understand. I will leave you, Good-by."

At this Vera turned: "Stay, Sergio," she cried, "I do understand. Women, too, have their code of honor. I once promised to be your wife. Our code demands that we never break our word. And I, Sergio, am a faithful follower of this law."—Waverley Magazine.

Not until the Ohio river overflows will we really know that spring is near.

Taft carried off the whole works in Ohio. That is, the whole delegation to the republican national convention will be shouters for the Secretary. Senator Foraker to the contrary notwithstanding.

Talking about high taxes how would you like to live in New York City where the cost of running the city government is $36 a year for every inhabitant of the city or an average of $150 per family. And this does not include state taxation.

"Missouri is Going Dry" is the heading of a news item. It does not refer to the Missouri river but to the "show me" state where a number of counties have recently went "dry." It is said that local option now prevails in 67 of the 114 counties.

Only about one in eight of the republicans of Cedar county took part in the primary election for presidential preference and Taft won by a large majority of the vote cast. The primary principle is all right but the voters should take more interest in it as the real sentiments of the voters cannot be secured by just getting an expression from one eighth as that is no better than the caucus system.

The Winside Tribune feels badly because the Wayne county republicans seem disposed to line up with the Roosevelt-Taft forces. The republicans of Wayne county, we believe almost to a man heartily endorse the Roosevelt policy and if the president will not accept a renomination they want a man who will continue his policy, and according to Roosevelt himself Taft is the man who represents the present administration and its policies.

Why is it that every democratic paper in Nebraska wants the republicans of Nebraska to endorse LaFollette and to oppose Taft for their choice for president. If, as our democratic friends claim, Taft is a weak candidate and LaFollette such a great man and such a great vote getter, they surely want their peerless leader to win, and they ought to rejoice at what they call a mistaken policy. But the truth of the matter is, our friends, the enemy, know that if Taft is the republican standard bearer, William J. Bryan is sure of a third defeat.—Columbus Journal.

A month ago there was state wide interest taken over mysterious disappearance of little Lillie Olson from her home in Thurston county. The disappearance of the child is no less a mystery now than then, but it has almost if not entirely forgotten by the public. This is only one of the many instances that goes to show that Americans do not live in the past but in the present and future. They are shocked or pleased or surprised at anything out of the ordinary that gives them momentary thrills but no sooner is one incident discussed but it is cast aside and then another is taken up. The avidity with which the sensational is grasped by them is almost on a par with the excitable temperament of the French and is in contrast with the characteristics of some other European countries.

Congressman Boyd, in the face of strenuous opposition, won a victory in the house of representatives by having his amendment appropriating $12,000 to rebuild the bridge across the Niobrara river connecting the town of Niobrara with the State agency incorporated in the Indian appropriation bill. Congressman Hinshaw, member of the Indian affairs committee of the house, offered Judge Boyd's amendment, against which a point of order was made by Chairman Sherman of the committee. Mr. Sherman reserved the point of order that Judge Boyd might explain the conditions which prompted the amendment. And this the representative of the Third district did in a manner that won him friends. While his speech was short it was entirely comprehensive to the extent that it satisfied the chairman of the committee and he withdrew the objection which he had made against the amendment, even though it was new legislation. It was Judge Boyd's maiden effort, and what is more to the point, he won his contest.—Norfolk News.

An informal meeting of the Wayne school board and directors of the Commercial Club was held Tuesday night for the purpose of discussing the matter of the building of a new public school building on the site of the present school. This is a problem the school board has been anticipating for some time but have put the matter off until now because of the crowded condition of the present quarters demand some action before very long. The school district is out of debt and it is the opinion of many citizens that now is the time to take some action for a new public school building. The people of Wayne are public spirited enough to want the best public school facilities of any town of its size in the state and it is not likely there will be serious objections to any reasonable proposition. The sentiment expressed at this meeting was favorable to some move being made soon for a new building and in whatever is done it would be a year or more before new quarters would be ready for use. It is likely the school board will call for a special election to be held along about May for the purpose of voting on the proposition to issue bonds for a new public school building.

If there were any who were looking for fireworks at the meeting of the town council last Monday night they were disappointed as the proceedings were not enlivened with anything sensational. The council heard arguments pro and con from the attorneys of both sides. Attorney Fritzen of Norfolk appeared for the anti-saloon league. After hearing a statement from both sides the council did not feel sufficiently enlightened and asked the attorney's to file briefs by Saturday giving more definite statements. The hearing before the Governor is set for today at Lincoln and there is no telling where the end of the controversy is.

Many Sleepless Nights, Owing to a Persistent Cough—Relief found at Last

"For several winters past my wife has been troubled with a most persistent and disagreeable cough, that invariably extended over a period of several weeks and caused her many sleepless nights," writes Will J. Hayner, editor of the Burley, Colo., Bulletin. "Various remedies were tried each year, with no beneficial results. In November last the cough again put in an appearance and my wife, acting on the suggestion of a friend, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The result was indeed marvelous. After three doses the cough entirely disappeared and has not manifested itself since." This remedy is for sale by Raymond's Drug Store.

Save Money by Buying Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

You will pay just as much for a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as any other cough medicines, but you save money in buying it. The saving is in what you get, not what you pay. The sure-to-cure you quality is in every bottle of this remedy, and you get good results when you take it. Neglected colds often develop serious conditions, and when you buy a cough medicine you want to be sure you are getting one that will cure your cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy always cures. Price 25 and 50 cents a bottle. For sale by Raymond's Drug Store.

Beware of Frequent Colds

A succession of colds or a protracted cold is almost certain to end in chronic catarrh, from which few persons ever wholly recover. Give every cold the attention it deserves and you may avoid this disagreeable disease. How can you cure a cold? Why not try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended Mrs. M. White, of Butler, Tenn., says: "Several years ago I was both ered with my throat and lungs. Someone told me of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, I began using it and it relieved me at once. Now my throat and lungs are sound and well. For sale at Raymond's drug store.

You can always tell a young husband from an old one by the way he acts when he goes after a bucket of water, says Uncle Hiram. Three months married he swings the pump handle, whistles and smiles and casts covert glances at the house as though some one were looking at him from the window. One year married, he swings the pump handle more slowly, smiles occasionally, and seems to be annoyed because the meal is late. Two years married he looks sour and glum, kicks the ca. over the coal house and looks at the house as though he would like to choke somebody. Three years married he sits on the doorstep and smokes while his wife works the pump handle.—Ex.

Good Cough Medicine for Children

The season for coughs and colds is now at hand and too much care cannot be used to protect the children. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when he has a cold. The quicker you cure his cold the less the risk. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the sole reliance of many mothers, and few of those who have tried it are willing to use any other. Mrs. F. F. Starcher, of Ripley, W. Va., says, "I have never used anything other than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for my children and it has always given good satisfaction." This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given as confidently to a child as to an adult. For sale by Raymonds Drug Store.

LAND! LAND! LAND!

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit, berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one-third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

RENTERS, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

COME TO THE NEW LAND and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

DON'T WAIT! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte Valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

FARM OWNERS, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here for from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte Valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

INVESTORS: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quick for you.

WRITE TO-DAY FOR FURTHER INFORMATION. Local real estate dealers correspond. We can make some money for you.
