SPLENDID SUCCESS

Weather Man Favors Chautauqua Good Attractions Do the Rest

PEOPLE ARE WELL SATISFIED

Which Gives Assurance That the Wayne Chautauqua Assembly is to Be a Permanent Fixture

The weather man has smiled on the Wayne Chautauqua and done his part for the success of the second annual assembly and the high class of entertainments given has done the rest to make it a success and despite the large amount the management has expended for talent and other expenses it is almost certain that from the financial standpoint the Association will come out about even. People are high in their praises of the quality of the talent and they should be for it has been of the very best obtainable and no expense has been spared on that point.

It was a source of disappointment that the first two attractions, Ex-Senator Carmack and Father Cleary could not be given but that was owing to reasons over which the management had no control. General Black Post Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, spoke Thursday afternoon and Rev. Dr. Conley of Omaha spoke on Thursday evening. Friday afternoon Judge Norris delivered a splendid address on the Philippines which was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. Friday evening "The Passion Play" illustrated was the attraction and on Saturday evening "Hawatha."

One of the star attractions of the Chautauqua was the address of Governor Hanly of Indiana Saturday afternoon on "The Patriotism of Peace." The Governor is one of the big young men of the country who have attracted public attention in the past few years and who is destined to make his impress on national history if the reform wave continues. He was listened to by more than fifteen hundred people on the Chautauqua grounds Saturday afternoon. It was however only in the last half of his address that he stirred his hearers to great enthusiasm showing that the people are deeply interested not in the past—but in the present and the future. He impresses his hearers of deep convictions and sincerity of purpose. His language borders on the classical and his word pictures, and climaxes was responded to by genuine enthusiasm. He bore down heavily on the duties and responsibilities of the individual citizen holding him responsible for the conditions that are bad and impressing the audience that the dangers of free government were not from without but from within. That greed and avarice and gain were responsible for most of corruption in public affairs and that the remedy was for the individual citizen to realize his responsibilities and act accordingly. Sunday evening Bishop Bristol delivered a sermon and Monday afternoon gave his lecture on "Brains" which was greatly enjoyed. Tuesday afternoon Dr. Crafts who had been holding morning conferences gave his lecture.

During the course of his address Dr. Crafts spoke as follows: "In the opening pages of the Bible sin introduces us to the city. God made the country, but Cain made the town. Cain built the first city and has been the leading spirit in cities ever since. But the city of Christ is now building on the earth. If we could bring together all the fathers and mothers who put service above self, where their children are concerned, we could build a holy city on earth.

How many of you would walk across the street to hear a preacher whom you knew cared more for his salary than for the salvation of souls? Would you have a physician whom you knew was more interested in his fee than in the saving of the lives of your loved ones? The engineer sees that the bridge ahead is down. He has but the twinkling of an eye to decide what to do; whether to jump and save himself or to stay at his post and meet death to save his train. What does he do? You know what he does; he saves his train. They have in the mountains of Burmah Christian villages where the law of Christ is actually the law of politics, society and business, if these are possible in Burmah, we can have Christian cities here.

Monday and Tuesday evenings Alvin B. Packard the celebrated cartoonist entertained the people. A

Our city ideal has a basis of reality nearer than Burmah and in a larger community than its mountain towns. Toronto, the "Queen City" of the world in morals, which is said to have grown faster than any American city except Chicago in a quarter century past, when compared with old Rome, is seen to be more than half way to the holy city. It allows no liquor dealers in its city council, has given 10,000 majority for prohibition in an informal plebiscite, has no police protected brothels, no police gazettes, no Sunday mails, no Sunday papers. The law of Christ is really, though not fully, dominant.

The great trouble is that people do not know the laws. In the matter of selling corrupt periodicals, the law is often violated through lack of knowledge. You have often noticed when you lifted up a large flat stone how the bugs would run. Well, it is a good deal that way with the violators of the law. A vile publication found in McKeesport when I visited there was stamped out by the mere turning on of the light and ceased to exist within ten days.

There are seven ways to enforce law in an American city, seven kinds of officers whose duty it is to initiate the enforcement of law. The first of these seven strings in the bow of sovereignty is the mayor. The most important function of a mayor, in my judgment, is to protect the boys and girls in their age of adolescence against all shows that are evening schools of robbery and adultery, that teach that crime is heroic or that impunity is gayety. He should require that the libretto of every play should be submitted to him a week in advance of its announcement, as in England, with bill posters also, and with the aid of a committee known only to himself decide, not what plays are good enough to commend but what are bad enough to shut out. This plan, in part, has been tried with good effect, at times, in Detroit, Baltimore, and elsewhere. The mayor can compel such action, for he has power to revoke the license of any theatre if he regards its exhibitions as promotive of crime or vice, and in so doing involves no liability to prosecution for damages for himself or the city.

The second string in the bow of sovereignty is the police, the third the prosecutor, the fourth the judge. All these can and should initiate the enforcement of law. The fourth string in the bow is the sheriff, who is really the mayor of the county, and should enforce the laws if the mayors neglect to do so. Sixth. It is one of the strangest absurdities that only one or two Governors of the United States have discovered what "chief executive" means. It means that whatever, anywhere in the state, the laws are neglected, the Governor shall call upon his officers, sheriffs and police commissioners, as far as they are state officers, to enforce the law as Governor Folk has done.

The seventh way to enforce law is for the people themselves to go into the courts; as every citizen has the right to do, singly or in law and order leagues. Every court is the royal court of the sovereign citizen. The prelude to such action should be the awakening of public sentiment, which will often make the public officers do their duty, and so lessen the work of the league.

At the close of the lecture the following resolution was adopted by the Chautauqua:

Resolved, that we the citizens of Wayne, Nebr., gathered for study of city and town problems at the Wayne Chautauqua, appeal to our Mayor to use his full powers for the control of all shows to protect the young against all exhibitions that presents crime and vice in alluring forms, especially of notorious bandits pursuing heroic or romantic careers that would tend to excite morbid or degenerate youth to a criminal author, and also the yet more corrupting exhibitions that by immodest dress and dances or by suggestive phrases insite susceptible youth and others to lust; and to this end we ask that trusty officers of high character, approved for this purpose by the clergy of the city or some committee thus approved, shall be appointed by the mayor to assist him in judging from bill posters and by examination in advance of pictures to be exhibited and otherwise what exhibitions are so plainly harmful that they should be forbidden. Said officer or committee having authority also to stop a play or show in the midst that has escaped advance condemnation if found to be of unwholesome tendency.

privilege and favoritism; his hope is in the application of the doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none. He has been the victim of all special legislation, and has suffered from the control of politics by the great "predatory corporations." That's the best the boys can do. The farmer has been given the worst of it under a republican administration. He has been made the victim of special privilege. But hold on! How do they explain the red barn and the new house and the piano and the rest? Oh, well, the farmer would be a whole lot better off than he is if the trusts hadn't preyed on him so.

Facts are facts and theories are only theories. The facts are that the republicans have been running things, and things generally have prospered, and the farmers have prospered with the rest. The farmer who pays out his money for the privilege of seeing whether Bryan's theories pan out better than these republican facts is likely to be found kicking himself around the big red barn later.—Sioux City Journal.

Carroll Notes

A very pleasant picnic was held on Wednesday in the grove at the Nate Anson home. The ladies of the Chapin Circle Club, about a dozen in number participated. Some of those who were present were Mrs. John Brugger, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Broad, Mrs. Banann, Mrs. Herbert Taylor, Mrs. Pryor.

Frank Francis had an accident with his auto Monday evening while he was touring west of town. Jim Porter was driving home and he thought he would drive up close behind so as to accustom the team to a machine. When the team got close up they were frightened and the result was the buggy tongue was thrust into the auto breaking the top some. No one was injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jones and son Elmer, Mrs. Enos, Davis and Mrs. Spencer Jones returned home last Friday evening from Wales, Iowa.

Mrs. Jenk Simmerman, who is in the Samaritan Hospital at Sioux City, is improving rapidly. She underwent a serious operation last Friday. She withstood the ordeal well and will be home soon.

George Thorp arrived in town Tuesday evening for a short stay. He says things are in fine shape in the vicinity of Gettysburg.

Certainly Claud Hancock is having hard luck. He had just recovered from an injury to his left hand when on Monday he ran a corner of a chisel into the left thumb clear to the bone. The wound has proven very painful. Then on top of all this trouble he was appointed a member of the town board.

The little eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Jones met with a very painful accident on Wednesday afternoon. It seems that the little one took a notion to climb up on the chicken house. It doing so she fell some distance striking on her left side on a board through which a nail protruded. She struck the nail and the ugly thing pierced her side fracturing a rib. The little Miss is now resting easily.

Friends of John R. Morris of Carroll have prevailed on him to file for the republican nomination for Representative in this district. Mr. Morris is known as one of the most substantial men of Wayne county and if nominated will make a strong candidate before the people for election.

Wausa business men are entitled to a special mention for the enterprise shown in sending to Wayne such a good representation of her "Wausa Improvement Club" to participate in the parade at the Wayne Chautauqua. The writer has never been in Wausa and while the town is not large and its trade territory is limited we take it that the town is making the most of its opportunities and progressing more rapidly than some other towns similarly situated. The train was a fast freight from Omaha and was a double header. TEXAS LANDS

A WISE OWL WATCHES EVERYTHING

So does the man, either renter or land owner, who HAS IN MIND

The question of investing in real estate, the safest and most profitable of all investments in these panicky times.

YOU, MR. RENTER,

Why should you continue to pay tribute to some exacting land-lord, when the amount you annually pay him for the simple use of his ground would more than meet the amount of your payments due each year on a tract you might purchase of us, and at the expiration of a reasonably short time you would OWN THE LAND and have a LIFE OF EASE, PROSPERITY and INDEPENDENCE before you?

YOU, MR. LAND-LORD,

Why will you allow your money to accumulate and lie in banks, at rates of interest varying from TWO to FOUR per cent, taking the chance that when you want to use some WALL STREET BANKER may say to you that you can't have it? We say, WHY do this, when you can by a safe and judicious investment place the same money in land that is profit bearing, and is bound to double in value, and is safer than ANY BANK ON EARTH.
