Mrs. Pile Writes Two Interesting Letters.

Editor of Herald:—

Only a line, for I am tired. This has been a busy week as all my weeks will be while in this beautiful country.

We landed in historic Plymouth October 21st at 1 P. M. Never was I so glad to be at a journey's end. A Representative of the Mosely Commission met us, which was very pleasant, for although in a land of strangers you felt someone had an interest in you. Plymouth is a wonderful place. Plymouth, Davenport and Stonehedge, are three separate cities with a combined population of a quarter of a million. The great industry here is ship building. That is the Government Docks. Here we saw the great war ship Tamara, which is to be launched Nov. 17, and also the war ship Collinwood, which was launched a year ago. These ships are of the Dread Naught class. The last named will not be ready for service for another year. Eighteen thousand men are employed on these ships. These docks line the Bay for two miles and cover over 300 acres of ground. We were shown over the whole plant, which is considered quite an honor, I am sure we appreciated the privilege.

Every stone of Plymouth seems teeming with History, as does every part of England, we have visited. It was here that Francis Drake was born, and here that that Spanish Armada went to pieces. Here the merchants gave the ships that enabled the Pilgrims to reach America. Plymouth has a most equable climate. No frosts of any consequence. The flora is beautiful. Twenty miles north of Plymouth is Dartmoor the great convict prison of England. This prison was built to care for the French and Americans captured in the war of the Revolution. It is now a convict prison. But I must stop, saying we have visited Exeter, Bristol, Hereford, Worcester, Stratford on the Avon, Warwick Castle, ruins of Kenilworth Castle, and are now at Oxom. My next will be longer.

Yours, Mrs. Pile.

Editor of Wayne Herald:—

Really I have been so rushed that I have not but little time for letters, but will write you a few things that may interest my Wayne friends.

My last was regarding Plymouth. We left Plymouth for the city of Exeter. Raleigh was born here, and it was here he used to meet with the many prominent men of that period and discuss the questions of the day. There is also a Cathedral here, one of the most beautiful, as it is of the Decorative style. Exeter is famed as an educational city. We visited Training schools, I will not, however, at this time, say anything about education, but leave that for another time. We were in the noted Devonshire country, where the cream, they claim, is unexcelled in the world. The country through which we pass is simply beautiful. I do not see why people should wish to go California winter after winter, when here is a climate similar to southern Cal., for it never freezes, but that vegetables grow the year round. Then there is so much history. Seemingly every stone and clod teems with history. Don't think for a minute I should wish to live here. No flag to me looks so beautiful as the stars and stripes. We do not see it often, but when we do we feel we have met a dear friend. Our stay in Exeter was not long, but as everything is carefully arranged we were enabled to see and hear much. From Exeter we went to Bristol, an old city and a most interesting one. We visited the Fish Pond Training school, which was most enjoyable. During the day I asked the head mistress if she knew where Hannah More's first school had stood. This was the school my grandmother attended and thus I was much interested in knowing something about it. Imagine my pleasure to have her tell me it was only two blocks away. The church my grandmother attended is still there as is also the school. The last named is in Fish Ponds Park and is a sort of a museum containing many things that were a part of it while in the possession of Hannah More, who was the first English woman to establish a school for the higher education of women in England. Thus my visit to Bristol will be one of great interest to me.

From Bristol we started, as we supposed, for Hereford, but got on the wrong train, and before we were aware we were speeding towards Wales, in the opposite direction from the point we started for. The conductor was most gracious and said to remain on the train and we would meet the other train at Cardiff, which we did, and reached Hereford. The politeness of these R. R. officials is something wonderful. Just imagine a conductor thanking you when you hand him him your ticket. We have the yet to meet one who has not thanked us. Not only the conductors, but porters, cabmen and all. They are certainly fine people.

Hereford is another Cathedral city. We visited this Cathedral and then journeyed on to Worcester. This Cathedral to my mind is the most wonderful and most beautiful. It is full of history. In it lie the remains of King John and Prince Arthur, eldest son of Henry Seventh. When I stood beside his sarcophagus, I could not help but wonder if the religion of England would not have been entirely different had he not died before his father. His dying made Henry Eight King and the marrying of Arthur's widow caused so much trouble. Here were many things calling to mind much of Henry Eighth's career as well as of Cardinal Wolsey. But I must stop or you will not wish to hear from me again.

I am having a most delightful time. Have met many American teachers, several from Ohio, who were acquainted with my people, also Mrs. Andersen of the Omaha schools. Have an invitation to the reception of Ambassador Reids, Nov. 3. So you see I am seeing something of high life.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Pile.

Not Official

Neither in the tabulated returns in the Herald last Thursday or in the amount of majorities in the county did we claim that they were official figures. The canvass of the votes was finished so late that we did not have time to compare the first figures from the returns with the official statement, hence the majorities for the various candidates were a little more than we gave them. They are as follows: Taft 240, Sheldon 189, Boyd 156, Williams 232, Randall 303, Morris 269, and Davis 187, which still further shows that chairman Meigs and his assistants are entitled to all the words of praise you may give them.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

Such is the True Story of Mrs. Elmer Lundberg Formerly of Wayne.

Our readers will be greatly interested in the strange story that has recently become known to the friends of Mrs. Elmer Lundberg, the wife of the former editor of the Carroll Index.

Last spring Mr. and Mrs. Lundberg, who were then living in Wayne, went to Atkinson, Neb., to visit Mrs. L's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Shotts. While walking down the street one day they met a lady who was a stranger to them who looked intently at Mrs. Lundberg. Then she surprised them by asking, "Who are you?" Mrs. L. told her, and then the lady asked, "But what was your maiden name?" She was told that it was Blanche Shotts. Then she said, "You are Eva Bennett. I knew your mother—and you are her very image." Of course, the Lundbergs asked her what she meant, and then this strange story came out.

A family by the name of Shotts lived across the street from the Bennett family in Regas Falls, N. Y. When little Eva Bennett was but two weeks old and her mother was still in bed, Mrs. Shotts went over to see the Bennett baby. The baby was sick with colic that afternoon and Mrs. Shotts asked the nurse to let her carry the baby home with her and doctor her. The nurse consented. A few hours passed and the baby was not returned, and was sent for. To their amazement and horror the Shotts home was found vacant, with no trace as to their whereabouts. Detectives were sent out and for years the search was kept up, but no Eva Bennett was found. It has now become known that the Shotts had no children of their own, and they coveted the baby so much that they planned to steal her from her parents. Their household goods had been packed and sent away, and it only remained to get possession of the baby. That was easily accomplished and they left the city immediately. They went first to Indiana, but later moved to Atkinson, Neb., where they still live. They named the baby Blanche Shotts and she never knew that they were not her real parents until she had grown to womanhood. At the time of her marriage to Elmer Lundberg they strongly objected, and when asked for a reason they acknowledged that she was only an adopted child and said that they did not wish her to marry Mr. Lundberg because of the character of her mother, which was misrepresented. Mr. L. was determined, however, and they were married. It was not until the day they met this strange lady on the street in Atkinson that they found out the real state of affairs. This lady told them that the father was now dead but that the mother still lived at the old home in New York, and was one of the finest, most cultured, and most respected women she had ever known. When the Shotts were asked if this was the truth they had to admit that it was.

Mrs. Lundberg immediately entered into a correspondence with her mother, and last summer she and her husband went to New York to see the new-found relatives. They discovered that the mother was not only a lady of the highest character, but that she possessed wealth as well as culture. They also discovered that Mrs. L. had a brother who is a prominent lawyer in the east and two cousins are regular contributors to magazines, having achieved literary fame. Shortly after their visit to New York Mr. and Mrs. L. went to Seattle, Wash., where Mr. L. has a fine position. Mrs. Bennett now makes her home with her daughter in the west.

Mrs. Lundberg says that she now remembers being sent in a room at one time for two days and two nights, and it was not in punishment; but she thinks now it was because the Shotts thought some detective was on their track. When the story was told to her of the deceit practiced by the Shotts she said it was not hard to believe that they were not her real parents for they had not been good to her.

The host of friends in Carroll of Mr. and Mrs. Lundberg will join with us in heartily congratulating them on their good fortune in finding their long lost mother and brother and hope that they will enjoy many happy years together as a reward for the long separation.—Carroll Index.

May Strike Us

There is considerable talk in railroad circles about the contemplated action of the Milwaukee road in building an extension from Omaha to connect with its new Pacific northwest line. The Milwaukee road is one of the heavy freight handlers between Omaha and Chicago and it is looking for a connection link between Omaha and some convenient point on its new trans-continental line. It has had covetous eyes on the rich Elkhorn valley for a long time and the knowing ones are strong in the belief, that it surely will be tapped. In case this thing comes to pass, West Point is likely to be on the new map. It might be well to keep a weather eye open for a chance of this kind.—West Point Republican.

It might also be well for Wayne to keep its eye open for this talked of new line. If the road goes to West Point or near there, there is no reason why it should not be brought to Wayne on its way north. In fact, a look at the map will show that such a line through here, thence to Belden, Crofton and the northwest, would give a scope of country tributary to it that would make such a line a paying one from the very first. We shall have more to say of the project if it shall begin to take shape.

Uncle Sam's employes are evidently doing something down in the Panama zone on the big canal project. During the month of October the dirt removed amounted to 3,282,276 cubic yards. Col. Goethals, superintendent of the work, says that vessels will be passing through the canal by January 1, 1915.

A number of sections in the north central states that in the early days raised considerable wheat and later oats and corn are now having a measure of success in the raising of winter wheat. In spite of this fact, not much can be expected from it, as a continuance in it without the observance of a proper system of crop rotation can in the end mean only soil depletion and impoverishment.

E. W. CARMACK SLAIN

FORMER TENNESSEE SENATOR SHOT BY YOUNG ATTORNEY.

Carmack in the Newspaper Had Assaulted Col. D. B. Cooper and Had Been Warned to Desist—Shooting Done by Col. Cooper's Son.

Former United States Senator Edward Ward Carmack, editor of the Tennesseean at Nashville, Tenn., was shot and killed Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock by Robin Cooper, a son of Col. Duncan B. Cooper.

Mr. Carmack was going north on Seventh avenue and Col. Cooper and his son, Robin, were approaching Seventh avenue on Union street. Soon after they came in sight of one another the shooting began, Robin Cooper, it is said, firing two shots and Senator Carmack one. Col. Duncan Cooper, it is said, drew his pistol, but did not fire. Senator Carmack fell to the ground almost instantly. Robin Cooper was shot in the right shoulder, but was not badly hurt.

It is understood that the trouble is one of the results of the democratic gubernatorial primary in which Carmack was defeated. Carmack had since become editor of the Tennesseean and had printed several editorials about Col. Cooper.

Within the past few days, it is asserted, Col. Cooper notified Carmack that these editorial criticisms must cease. Monday morning another editorial in reference to the colonel, appeared in the paper and this is supposed to have been the immediate cause of the tragedy.

As Senator Carmack fell at the edge of the street Col. Duncan Cooper put his arm around Robin Cooper and walked a few feet down Seventh avenue to Dr. R. D. Fort's office, where the slight wound in Robin's shoulder was examined and treated.

An ambulance carried the body of Mr. Carmack to an undertaking establishment. The pistol of Carmack, a .32-caliber, was lying at his side with two of the chambers empty when the body was picked up and was turned over to an officer.

DEATHS OF RUSSIAN CRUELTY.

Fossils Tied to Horses and Dragged to Death. Stories of battles between Russian governmental troops and the military organized among the Russian people were told on the witness stand in New York by Jan Leitz, a former neighbor of Jan Poren, whom the Russian government is seeking to extradite. Asked why the militia had attacked the government soldiers the witness replied:

"Because they had taken twenty-three of our comrades, tied them to horses and dragged them face downward over the ground."

"One of them," he said, was Otto Freilberg. The witness described the mutilation of Freilberg's body. He also told of five other bodies that he had seen at the same time. "One, he said, had been 'all broken to pieces.'"

The witness then told of the election of Poren as an officer of the militia. In relating the incidents in connection with his own flight from Russia, Jan Leitz told of hiding in forests in the deep snow in his efforts to escape from the government authorities.

SHOT DOWN IN THE STREET.

New York Postmaster Victim of Would-Be Assassin. Postmaster Edward M. Morgan, of New York, while on the way to his office, was shot at Monday by Eric H. B. Mackey, a stenographer, who then shot himself in the head and heart, dying almost instantly.

At first it was feared Morgan's wound was fatal, but upon closer examination the physicians found the single bullet fired by Mackey at Morgan struck the latter in the right side of the abdomen and passed out at the left side without penetrating the walls. There is no internal bleeding and there is no apparent reason why Morgan should not recover.

Morgan regained consciousness while the physicians were working on him. He said he never saw his assailant until he was confronted by him, and knows of no reason for the attack.

Sloux City Live Stock Market. Monday's quotations on the Sloux City live stock market follow: Top hogs, $4.00. Top cows, $5.70.

Whisky Goes Up in Smoke. Whisky valued at $125,000 and buildings worth $15,000 were destroyed by fire at Danville, Ky., Sunday night. The government loses the taxes on the whisky.

Machinery for the Florida. The Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company was the lowest bidder for installing the machinery in the battleship Florida, being built by the government at Brooklyn.

Race Question Decided. In deciding the case of Berea college vs. the state of Kentucky favorably to the state the supreme court of the United States Monday held that states may constitutionally legislate to prevent co-education of white and black children from attending the same schools.

Root Not in the Race. Secretary Root Monday stated he is not a candidate for the New York senatorship to succeed Platt.

CUBANS TO TRY AGAIN.

President and Congress Will Be Elected Saturday.

On Saturday next elections will be held throughout the island of Cuba for president, vice president, senators and representatives in the lower house of congress to whom, according to the present program, will be committed the fate of the restored Cuban republic on the termination of the government of intervention Jan. 28, 1909.

The troops of the United States will be withdrawn on that date, which is three days in advance of that originally got. In order that their departure may mark the anniversary of the birth of Jose Marti, the Cuban patriot.

Preparations for the elections are now complete. All of the election officers have been appointed, the electoral boards organized and the last ballots distributed and the whole island is absorbed in the outcome of the struggle.

The conservatives are headed by Gen. Mario Moncal and Dr. Rafael Montoro, the presidential and vice presidential candidates respectively, while Gen. Jose Gomez and his former bitter rival in the party leadership, Alfred Zayas, are the nominees of the liberal party, the Migueltusa and Zavalista factions, which finally united their forces in support of Gen. Gomez. It is assumed beyond peradventure that absolute fairness will characterize the elections, about which safeguard has been cast by the provisional government. Both of the political leaders have given assurances that they will accept loyally the result of the popular verdict. There is practically no difference in the platforms of the two parties, both having as their chief plank the preservation of the republic, equal rights for all citizens, the encouragement of agriculture and commerce and the maintenance of friendly relations with the United States. The struggle is, frankly, for the possession of the government and the control of public patronage.

DESPERATE BATTLE IN RAID.

Four Persons are Killed at Birmingham, Alabama.

A raid on an alleged "blind tiger" at Birmingham, Alabama, cost the lives of Policemen Little, a Mr. Womack and a child of J. W. Harris was fatally wounded. Policemen Little and Jones had gone to the suspected place, which is a private residence. Jones remained in front of the house while Little knocked at the back door, and when Womack, who was stepping there, opened it and saw the officer he began firing. Harris, who owned the house, heard Jones coming from the front, and also began shooting, the officers returning the fire. Harris was fatally shot, and his child was struck by a stray bullet.

"How in the world did you accomplish this?" demanded the astonished superintendent. Truth About the Century Plant.

The century plant, so named because of the popular idea that it blooms but once in a hundred years, in one sense makes good its name, for it blooms only once then dies.

In the genial climate of southern California it reaches maturity and blooms in fifteen or twenty years, while in colder climates the period may range from forty to fifty years. There are many species of the Agave family, native to northern Mexico, where it is called the Maguey. The plant furnishes "pulque," the national drink of Mexico.

At the time of blooming the plant throws up a single stock of rapid growth to the height of twelve to twenty feet, from which the tassel-like flowers sprout forth. This great flower stalk draws all the sap and vigor from the body of the plant, which soon withers and dies.

At the base of the thick green leaves are found little suckers, each with a root, which, when planted, at once begin to grow. The end and edges of the leaves are well armed with stiff sharp spines, the prick of which is very painful.

Mulching Roses.

Your roses will come through the winter in much better condition if you will give them a heavy mulching of manure. Put on enough so that when it has settled there will be a three inch mulch. Do not apply the mulch until the cold weather has come—the middle or last of October.—Garden Magazine.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Mich. lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read at the time. At last when it seemed as if I were literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have come back with the return to health.

BOZARTH ON TRIAL FOR LIFE.

Insanity the Plea of the Defense in Case of Greenwood Murder.

In the district court in Plattsmouth Friday before Judge H. D. Travis was tried the case of Matt Bozarth, charged with murder in the first degree for killing James Dyer in Greenwood Oct. 21, 1907. The plea of insanity was made by the defense. The body of Dyer was found after the murder had been committed, but the man only gave one gasp after his arrival, and found two wounds had been made in his abdomen and one in his heart. H. H. Weideman testified that he saw Bozarth approach Dyer and put his left arm around his neck and plunge the knife into his body three times. Weideman caught hold of Bozarth and held him until the arrival of City Marshal J. J. Andrews, who assisted in taking the knife away from him and placing him in jail. Several witnesses corroborated that statement. Depositions were read from the wife of Bozarth and from several of his brothers, all telling of his unreasonable state of mind at the time of the murder. His brother also testified that insanity had been in the family for years, one cousin being an idiot and another one less seriously affected the same way. Dr. John T. Hayes, superintendent of the asylum for insane in Lincoln, testified that he had examined the prisoner and believed him to be insane and that he would never be any better. Drs. J. H. Hall and E. D. Stansbury, of Plattsmouth, testified that they believed Bozarth to be insane.

County Attorney C. A. Rawls appeared for the state and A. N. Sullivan for the murderer. The case was given to the jury Friday evening and they returned a verdict Saturday forenoon, finding the prisoner was guilty of murder in the second degree.

RECONCILIATION EFFECTED.

Davis, charged with killing Dr. Rustin, he and his wife will go to some place where they are not known and begin life anew. When Mr. Rice came to Omaha the woman refused his offers of reconciliation, but late Saturday night he visited her again and over their old love letters and other mementoes of their honeymoon days the old love was rekindled and she promised to share his home again.

SHOOT'S GIRL BY MISTAKE.

A Young Nebraskan Fatally Wounds His Sister.

As the result of a shooting affray near Alliance Saturday night Lizzie Brainer is in the hospital fatally wounded, and her brother, Charles Brainer, who did the shooting, and her sweetheart, Frank Augustine, are in the county jail. Brainer objected to the attention of Augustine to his sister, and when the young couple went riding the brother followed them. Miss Brainer was wearing the fur coat of her escort, and mistaking her for the man Brainer shot her at short range. Discovering his mistake he fired at Augustine, but injured him only slightly.

Work on the Nebraska Corn Products company's new building at Beatrice is being pushed as rapidly as possible. The Burlington is building a switch to the plant and it is likely the other railroads will do likewise.

HEARST CASE FEDERAL COURT.

Haskell's $600,000 Libel Suit Goes Over to Uncle Sam.

The $600,000 libel suit of Governor Charles N. Haskell, against William Randolph Hearst was removed from the state to the federal court Tuesday on an order signed by Judge Lee S. Edgerton. The petition, asking for the removal, was filed by M. H. Hearst himself before a New York notary and was filed by John W. Batten, Hearst's local attorney. It set forth that Mr. Haskell is a citizen of Oklahoma and Mr. Hearst of New York, and asks that suits be removed under the rule that suits between citizens of different states may be tried in federal court when the amount is over $2,000. The removal of the case may raise the legal point which was discussed when the suit was filed, whether a suit in which both parties are non-residents of the state can be removed to federal court. There was a difference of opinion among attorneys on this point and it will probably be threshed out before Judge Munger on a motion to remand the suit to the district court.

"I would rather try the case in federal court than in the state court," said Ed P. Smith, one of Haskell's attorneys. "If the federal court has jurisdiction the state court cannot give punitive damages while the federal court can. If we try it in state court we cannot recover on our claim for $200,000 punitive damages. If we try it in federal court the jury can return punitive damages in case it sees fit. If we are satisfied federal court has jurisdiction over the case we will not fight Mr. Hearst's order of removal. If, however, we decide the federal court has no jurisdiction we will fight it because if the court has no right to try the case, any judgment we might secure would be void."

The question of the jurisdiction of the court will be threshed out in federal court. The order has been signed and the district clerk's office is now getting out a transcript to file in federal court.

Mr. Hearst filed a $500 bond as required by law. It is signed by the National Surety company, of New York.

BOY KILLED BY COMPANION.

One Young Hunter is Accidentally Shot by Another.

Edgar Lambert, a 14-year-old son of P. A. Lambert, cashier of the First National bank at Ogallala, was accidentally shot in the head and killed by Leslie Whitcomb, a 14-year-old son of E. L. Whitcomb, while hunting on the Platte river.

The two boys, accompanied by Basil Sparks, another boy of about the same age, were out duck hunting on the sandbars southwest of the dyke about three miles west of the city. At the time the accident occurred the Sparks boy was about half a mile away from the others. Leslie says they saw a duck of ducks coming and they both knelt down to shoot. As the ducks came they were in line with the boys. Leslie fired and just at that instant Edgar stood up, the charge striking him in the back of the head and carrying away the side of the skull. He fell on his face and never moved after the Sparks boy and the two wrapped the body of their companion in an overcoat and carried it to the boat and started for the dyke. On account of the sandbars they were obliged to get out and pull the boat. Both got in the water and quicksuck up to their armpits and reached the dyke almost exhausted and chilled after struggling with the boat for an hour and a half.

MASON CITY BANK CHANGE.

Mason City Banking Company Absorbs First State Bank.

The Mason City Banking company has purchased the First State bank of that city and will hereafter conduct the business of that institution in connection with the banking business of the Mason City Banking company and the same office. This is the oldest bank in Cass county and one of the oldest in that section of the state. It has successfully gone through all the panics and hard times of the last thirty years, and has been one of the strongest and safest institutions of the kind in Nebraska. Its officers will remain the same: P. H. Marley, president; C. E. Copley, vice president; R. E. Walker, cashier.

Death from a gunshot wound inflicted by herself with suicidal intent was the verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of Mary Weiss, who shot herself in the heart Monday night at 1056 Georgia avenue, Omaha, where she was boarding. Dementia is supposed to have caused her to take her life.

Omaha Man Accidentally Shot.

Vernie Matteson, 21 years old, son of H. H. Matteson, of Omaha, who was visiting at the John McQuarrie home in Omaha, accidentally shot himself seriously but not fatally, with a .22-caliber revolver. The ball passed through the body and out through a window.

BRYAN'S STATE SOLID

REPUBLICANS PROBABLY SAVE ONLY ONE CONGRESSMAN.

All Other Republicans Beaten with the Possible Exception of Norris in the Fifth District—State Legislature Will Be Heavily Democratic.

Returns on Tuesday's election, while far from complete, are sufficiently definite to confirm and emphasize the first report that the democrats have made a sweeping victory in Nebraska. While the pluralities for the victorious party are not phenomenally large, they are complete, the state ticket and candidates for congress in most instances running parallel with Mr. Bryan, who was expected to lead the ticket by several thousand. Complete returns from a third of the counties and scattering precinct returns from most of the remainder show that Bryan will have a plurality of not less than 10,000 and Shallenberger, democrat, for governor, and the balance of the democratic state ticket by hardly 1,000 less.

Nevertheless the democratic victory does not stop here. At least three, probably four and possibly five Nebraska congressmen are demoted to the fourth district, because of exceeding from the week. Nearly complete returns from every county in the Fourth district show that Hibshaw won by nearly 700 votes although his district gave Bryan a plurality. There is a close fight in the Fifth district, between Norris, republican, and Ashton, democrat, with the chances favoring the former at present. Not enough returns have been received from the Sixth to base an estimate, but the trend in the district is democratic.

The greatest surprise of all is the overwhelming majority the democrats will have in the legislature. Of the 133 senators and representatives elected, but eighteen republicans who had won. These, of course, are incomplete, but but the republican committee concludes the democrats will control both branches.

Nebraska's New Governor.

A. C. Shallenberger, the governor-elect of Nebraska, has been prominent in Nebraska politics for years. In 1896 he was the fusion nominee for governor, but has been a resident of California ever since. He was elected to congress over W. S. Morlan, and two years later was defeated by George W. Norris. He is a good mixer and a shrewd politician but is only a fair speaker. Shallenberger is of German descent and is about 50 years of age. He owns 1,300 acres of land near his home town, Alma. He is president of the Bank of Alma. He has been a resident of Nebraska twenty-five years and of Omaha eighteen years and has a fine home in town and a good residence on his farm. He raises fullblood Shorthorn cattle on his farm.

Summary.

J. P. Latta for Congress.

Congressman Boyd has been defeated and James P. Latta, of Tekamah, has been elected by a majority of probably 1,500. Chairman Dan Stephens, of the democratic committee, claims Latta's majority will be 2,000.

Dawes County.

In Dawes county Sheldon leads Shallenberger by 123 votes, with a few small precincts to hear from. M. P. Kincaid, republican, leads Westover, democrat, by 192 votes, with a few precincts not in. The democrats elect George Adams senator. The Fourteenth district elected a democrat, Charles Chase, as representative, and the thirty-third district elected a republican.

Boyd County.

Boyd county was carried by the republicans by 70 votes. The amendments carry. Attorney D. A. Harrington, democrat, was elected senator over Donohoe, republican, by 35 majority. Representative Talcott, democrat, was elected by 276 majority.

Dakota County.

Dakota county complete gives Taft 729, Bryan 728, Sheldon 716, Shallenberger 690, Boyd 744, Axtell 701.

Brown County.

Returns slow coming in. Six precincts out of ten in Brown county give Taft 474, Bryan 414. Five precincts give Sheldon 459, Shallenberger 405.

Cedar County.

Fifteen out of 21 precincts in Cedar county give Boyd 1,120, Latta 1,133. Latta will carry the county by 113. Boyd 1,198, Latta 1,012. Boyd, republican, 1,299. Boyd, republican, 1,007. Representative Morris, republican, 1,326; Pilger, democrat, 1,018.

Are You Satisfied With Election?

An election makes some feel that a great injustice has been done to some of the defeated candidates, and for that reason they feel dissatisfied with the returns. To all who do not feel happy over the election we would say that we will be pleased to have you call on us for relief. We have a positive cure for anyone who looks into the future with regret. We can make life pleasant for you. No matter how many different cures you have tried, don't give up until you have seen us. During thirty years experience we have never failed to give relief when our directions have been followed up. Our cure is pleasant to take and at once makes the world a more desirable place to live in. We never yet have known an affliction of any kind that could not be helped by wearing Staley Underwear. If you are wearing it you know that we are stating facts. If you never have worn it, it is impossible for you to realize what a change it would make in your life. It is our surroundings in life that makes us happy, and when you get surrounded with a suit of Staley underwear, your nervous system is at once affected and instead of pain and unpleasant imaginations, you will smile and the world will look cheerful. No, don't think this an advertisement for Staley underwear, for we are really interested in having you well and happy, and we are willing to do anything we can to make you forget any disappointment you may have over the election. Much of our future success depends on your success, and we know that we cannot be successful if your health fails. You will enjoy better health by wearing Staley underwear than you will by not wearing it. We will succeed better by having you live a healthy, happy life, than we should if you were less successful. So you understand it is a mutual benefit for us to make you well and keep you happy. If you have any doubt about Staley underwear doing for you all we claim it will, we invite you to call and see us, and let us explain to you why we are so confident that you will receive great benefit in wearing it.

Will you come? We are ready to receive you.

JOHN H. KATE.

At State Teachers Meeting.

E. P. Wilson, superintendent of Wayne schools, presented the report of the committee of the Nebraska educational commission on history in the grades. This report recommends that the teaching of history in the grades be directed primarily towards ethical and patriotic ends, its main purpose being the awakening of ideals and the formation of character. The report recommends that the first three years be devoted to stories and myths taken from Greek and Roman sources and from the early ages of mankind. It recommends that the fourth and fifth and sixth grades be devoted to American history. In the fourth and fifth will come the early period down to and including the French and Indian wars, in the sixth, the civil and Spanish wars, with emphasis on heroic biography. The seventh and eighth are to be devoted to American and European history, and about ten minutes of each period being devoted to the latter. Professor Persinger of Lincoln and Professor Anderson of Kearney, differed radically from the views of the committee as to the proper aims of history teaching in the grades. In their view, its purpose should be correct thinking and independence of judgment, rather than the teaching of ideals. A committee was appointed of Professor Persinger, Professor Anderson, and Superintendent Wilson to prepare a report and to confer with the committee of the educational commission.

"The College Boy."

The College Boy is not a so-called rewritten version of some antiquated almost forgotten comic opera, or old show with a new title, but a bright sparkling up-to-date musical comedy with beautiful catchy music and original comedy. The management states emphatically the attraction is strictly moral and refined as it totally lacks that element of vulgarity and coarseness often found in similar organizations of lesser note. This is the original College Boy and the same that delighted theatre goers for three consecutive seasons and now bigger and better than ever. The College Boy has been declared by press and public as the greatest success of all successes that have gone before. Judge for yourself on Nov. 16th, at the Opera House.

New Congressman from Third Started as Farm Hand

Senator James P. Latta, of Tekamah, Neb., who has been elected to congress from the Third Nebraska district on the democratic ticket, was a farm hand near Tekamah forty-five years ago. Latta walked into the community where Tekamah now is during the winter of 1863, tired and footsore, penniless also, and went to work. He had walked from Jackson county, Iowa, something like 400 miles. It was intensely cold. He began to earn a living by chopping wood. The next winter he taught school and from the proceeds of his school teaching and his labors he secured a small piece of raw land and began to farm on a small scale for himself. Gradually he added another, and then live stock industry attracted him. He moved his family to Tekamah in 1880, particularly to educate his children and give more personal attention to the banking business, in which he had become interested. In 1877 Burt county sent him to the legislature. In 1906 he was elected to the state senate from the Seventh district with a safe majority. He is 64 years of age. He has a wife and two grown sons.

Study Missions.

Wm. House and wife who had been in Sioux City for several weeks where the old gentleman, who is 72 years of age, underwent a serious operation, got home just in time for William to cast his vote for Taft, being taken to the polls in an automobile. Since then he has been making material gains and has been able to walk down town once or twice.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. church will meet with Mrs. Sharpe at the parsonage next Friday evening and begin the study of their year's lesson. At the close of the lesson an hour or so will be spent in a social way. All of the members are requested to be present and the gentlemen are also invited.

Get Your Sunday Dinner.

The Woman's Federation will hold a food sale in Neely & Craven's hardware store next Saturday afternoon and 4 other Saturdays following. The proceeds of the sale are to go toward buying books for the public library. You can get an awful good Sunday dinner at these sales for a little money and be helping a good cause along.

Not Really a Sale.

It was reported last week that Charley Lund had sold the quarter section of land he purchased a few weeks ago of J. W. Bartlett, at a material advance. The sale has not really been made as yet. A gentleman by the name of Munsinger, of Tabor, Iowa, has taken an option on the farm at $125 per acre, until he can see what he can do with his Iowa farm. If the sale is made it will be the highest price ever paid for a quarter section of land in this county or vicinity.

Good Improvement.

W. L. Fisher, south of town, one of our good farmer friends, has been making some very decided improvements about his premises, recently. He feeds a good many hogs in the course of a year, using a great deal of cooked food and has had a cement trough placed all around his feeding pen and a cement floor in the same. This enables him to keep his pens in fine shape as they can be cleaned and scrubbed out with very little trouble. There is nothing like being abreast of the times even in the raising of hogs.

New System Installed.

The loose ledger system has just been installed at the court house, B. F. Feather, the county clerk, is the fortunate individual to get a try at the new system and finds it much better than the old. By this method and a large type writer and proper ribbon, records can be much more readily kept as each leaf can be type written before it is placed in the book and the cumbersome handling of the big volumes is done away with and they are kept in better condition. It is one of the good innovations that are constantly taking place in the management of county records.

Will Finish Church Basement.

At the last meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church it was decided to undertake the finishing off of the basement of the church. The ladies are sure to make a success of the undertaking as we have never known any number of ladies to engage in any given work and make a failure of it. It is proposed to finish it up in accordance with all the latest approved methods of church basements, with kitchen, dining room and other accessories found to be of utility in church work for social gatherings, suppers and the like. The first steps toward the work were taken Monday.

Times Do Change

Dr. R. B. Crawford, one of the pioneer settlers of this section, in fact one, and the only one remaining of the original thirteen organizers of Wayne county in the spring of 1869, will go to southeastern Texas, the last of this week or the first of next to remain for the winter at least. The doctor is practicing medicine more or less of the time in Chicago but has always looked upon Wayne as his home, and says he will always have a very kind remembrance for the place and a warm spot in his heart for her. The doctor has seen great changes in the development of the country, as there was not a foot of soil broken and only one lone hut in the county when he took up his abode here. He has seen the price of land climb up by degrees until now it reaches over $100 per acre. At one time he was the owner of an entire section of land just north of town, owning the quarter section for which Bartlett received over $100 per acre, and which the doctor sold several years ago for $22 per acre, and thought he was getting a big price.

If you are cold when you come to town you cannot do better than to drop into Whalen's and get a cup of hot chocolate or coffee. Only 5 cents.

RELIGIOUS ACROBATS.

Dangerous Aerial Slide Annually Performed in India.

India offers many curious things in the way of religion, and the strangest of them all is the aerial slide, which is performed annually at Kulu, in the Himalayas. At a point where there is a cliff overhanging a precipitous gorge several hundred feet in width and a hundred feet in depth a rope is made fast to the rock. The other end of this is carried across the gorge and there secured to a stake. The total length of the rope between the two points is when drawn taut 2,500 feet, and the end attached to the cliff is several hundred feet higher than that fastened on the opposite side of the ravine. Thus a slide is contrived, and it is a dangerous one to all appearance.

It is down this incline that the performer has his path. For the lofty journey a sort of saddle is provided made of wood, with holes in it, through which the rope passes. But before a start is made the whole length of the rope is wet to prevent the saddle from catching fire from the friction. The performer sits astride this seat, and to his legs are fastened bags of sand, which serve two purposes—they enable him to maintain an upright position during his lightning-like descent, and they increase the momentum. The lower end of the rope is carefully wound with bits of carpet to check the speed before the stake is reached. Without this precaution the performer would be dashed to pieces.

The terrific velocity of the descent for the first few hundred yards is shown by the stream of smoke that trails from the wake of the saddle, despite the fact that the rope has been wet. Afterward the incline diminishes somewhat, and the pace becomes correspondingly slower. By the time the goal is reached the jheri, as the performer is called, is able to come to a standstill without disaster.

This slide in the air is supposed to reveal the will of the gods as to the crops of the approaching season. If the perilous trip is accomplished in safety a plentiful harvest is assured. Naturally, therefore, every care is taken to minimize the dangers of the performance. The ceremony is of ancient origin, and those who engage in it are chosen from a small caste apart.—New York Tribune.

A MEDFORD STORY.

Legend of the Phantom Ship and Its Mad Pirate Captain.

The town of Medford, Mass., has a legend of a phantom ship beside which the Flying Dutchman is only a peaceful merchantman. The Medford story runs that a ship laden with rum and gold and silver bars put out from that place in the days when the Spanish main was infested with pirates. It was headed for a West Indian port, but got into the doldrums and was so long becalmed that water and provisions gave out, and all hands perished of thirst and starvation. When the wind came up again the ship sailed away with her ghastly crew, was seen by a buccaneer, chased and overhauled.

The pirate captain made fast to his prize without firing a single shot, and, attributing the vessel's nonresistance to fear or lack of arms, he was the first man to leap on board. But the rope with which the captured ship had been carelessly lashed to his own parted under the strain of the seaway, and he found himself rapidly borne away from the vessel.

A stiff breeze filled the sails of the derelict, and before his own vessel could overtake it night descended on the ocean, and the pursuing ship lost sight of it altogether. Left alone in pitch darkness on the grewsome sea, the pirate went mad with terror and, seizing the wheel, raced away before the wind and, according to the legend, was condemned to range the seas forever thus in command of his horrible prize.

Woe to the ship that encountered it scudding along by moonlight or in the lightning's glare, manned by skeletons and steered by a shouting, gesticulating madman, and when on several occasions it was sighted in the fog off Medford it was considered as the herald of storm and disaster and the loss of many ships.—New York Press.

Jenny's Quick Method.

Jenny's uncle, who was a school-teacher, met her on the street one beautiful May day and asked her if she was going to the Maypole dance. "No, I ain't going," "Oh, my little dear," said her uncle, "you must not say 'I ain't going.' You must say 'I am not going.' And he proceeded to give her a little lesson in grammar. "You are not going. He is not going. We are not going. You are not going. They are not going. Now can you say all that, Jenny?" "Sure, I can," she replied, making a courtesy. "There ain't nobody going." —Ladies' Home Journal.

Jury at the Theater.

An unusual spectacle was witnessed at the Theater Royal, Nelson, Auckland, when the jury, who had been locked up three nights because they could not agree to a verdict in a murder case, were allowed to witness a living picture display. They had expressed a desire to attend the theater as a relief, and the judge consented.—Auckland News.

Bright Prospect.

"My dear," said the banker to his only daughter, "I have noticed a young man (attired in a dress suit in the drawing room two or three evenings each week of late. What is his occupation?" "He is at present unemployed, father," replied the fair girl, a dreamy, faraway look in her big blue eyes, "but he is thinking seriously of accepting a position of life companion to a young lady of means."

High School Notes.

Mr. Madden visited the 6th and 7th grades Friday. Miss Hughes' room are preparing a Thanksgiving program. There are four teams hauling stone and brick for the new building. As the report goes Bryan is the happiest man in the U. S., including Mr. Taft.

"Down to Sleep," by Helen Hunt Jackson, is the November poem for the 8th grade.

The 6th grade has nearly completed their geography booklets in which they are very much interested.

The 10th graders are grappling with the list of 90 originals at the close of the first book of geometry.

The 8th grade appreciates very much the large International dictionary furnished them by the school board.

Miss Wallace's room are preparing a program for Thanksgiving. The parents of the children are invited to hear the same.

Prof. Wilson returned from the teachers' convention at Lincoln Saturday. Mr. Bryan and Governor Sheldon both addressed the teachers during the convention.

The men that are working on the new school house seem to imbibe great activity from the sunshine, and it is the hope of the editor that the sun will keep on shining.

School opened Monday morning without a single one absent or tardy. Oh! the Wayne High School is lifting up its head and the people of Wayne will behold her abreast with the foremost schools of the day.

Two Cases Decided

In the proceedings of the state supreme court last week we note the following in relation to two cases appealed from Wayne county from the decision of Judge Welch. Both cases were of the same nature and were appealed from the police court to the district court, both of them being for the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors. They were carried to the supreme court on the ground of error, Judge Welch holding that the appeal bond from the police court to the district court was never perfected and therefore the cases could not be determined by the district court, from this decision the defendants in the cases appealed. Wilbur was the prosecuting attorney in both cases. As the two cases were identical the one decision covers them both. They were: Ramsey vs. State, Error, Wayne. Affirmed. Calkins, C., department No. 2. Thomsen vs. State, Error, Wayne. Affirmed. Calkins, C., department No. 2.

1. While a recognizance given under section 324 of the criminal code may be entered into in writing, it must be executed or acknowledged by the principal and surety in the presence of the magistrate taking the same.

2. In an appeal to the district court from the judgment of a magistrate imposing fine or imprisonment a rule to compel the magistrate to make a further or amended transcript is properly denied where the application for such rule fails to allege additional facts which would affect the determination of the question before the court.

The State Journal at Lincoln says of the case: The judgment of the district court of Wayne county dismissing an appeal of Peter Thomsen, a saloonkeeper who was convicted before a magistrate of selling intoxicating liquors to minors, is sustained by the supreme court. Thomsen gave an appeal bond before the police judge. It was given in writing but not executed as acknowledged by the principals and surety in the presence of the magistrate taking the same. Thomsen tried to get the district court to compel the magistrate to make a further or amended transcript to show that he signed the bond in the presence of the magistrate, but he failed to allege that the surety was ever present in court to sign or acknowledge the obligation. The supreme court holds that the application for an amended transcript was properly denied by the district court in this case for the reason that it would have availed the defendant nothing to show that he signed or acknowledged the obligation in the presence of the court without also showing that his surety executed it in like manner.

Will Improve Any Figure

Even a figure inclined to matronly fullness may show the slim, shapely back of a girl—in this WOOLTEX Beauclève coat.

It is especially adapted to add to the grace of the slender woman. The lines are excellent. The coat is absolutely plain except for the narrow, tailored straps cleverly arranged to decrease the size of the waist.

The high waist-line and full back are the latest model. Black broadcloth only.

It's tailored in the WOOLTEX way—that is, with as much attention to the hidden parts as to the surface. This is but one of the many WOOLTEX models—all showing the same high quality of workmanship, material, style. Let us show them to you. The price will surprise you by its moderation.

The Hoskins Headlight has joined in the demand that County Superintendent Littell be a candidate for re-election. Everybody seems anxious for a chance to redeem themselves.—Winside Tribune.
We certainly are in favor of Littell being a candidate for re-election not to redeem ourselves as quoted, but for the simple reason that the service rendered the county and schools well deserves the support of the voters of Wayne County. While it is true a few parties in the county have been making Littell a target for many sarcastic remarks we are, nevertheless, cognizant of the fact that he has been one of the best men that has ever been County Superintendent and the bitter attacks that have been made against him are the result of having obeyed the law and discharged his duty. Whether he will seek re-election to his present office we have heard nothing but in case he does there will undoubtedly be a few voters, at least, that will forgive him for obeying the law and discharging his duty and give him the support he deserves.—Hoskins Headlight.

THE FLOUR QUESTION

is a most important one in every household, but more especially in those where the bread, biscuit, rolls and pastry are baked at home. The wise and economical housewife will find better results, in the way of better and purer and more wholesome bread—and more of it—by using our famous flour in preference to any other. It contains more nutriment in the way of gluten and phosphates—the best part of the grain.

The Madison Post says: While it is recorded that Christ at one time fed a multitude of five thousand with five loaves and two small fish, yet petty democratic office seekers should remember that Governor-elect Shallenberger can not reward five thousand claimants with the fifty positions at his disposal, and that the surest way to break down his administration is for every ten penny politician in the state to demand an appointment.

When Chas. Riggs and son arranged for the production of The College Boy they evidently had in mind a form of entertainment that would appeal to all classes. That their original ideas and subsequent formation of them were based upon keen observation is known by the remarkable favor with which the offering has been received for three consecutive seasons. The song and comedy features embrace novelities that appeal to every one—from the gallery to the critics in the parquette. There is not a dull moment in the whole performance, it giving the comedian Bernard Riggs, and supporting cast ample opportunity of demonstrating their talents as singers, dancers and farriers. The plot is a pretty love story and the songs and musical numbers are "hits," every one. The College Boy comes to the Opera house November 16.

Revival of Old Swindle. Local banks have received a circular letter warning them against a revival of the so-called "Spanish swindle". The letter has been mailed by a leading firm of bankers in New York to all its correspondents in the United States, in an effort to protect the public against the swindlers. The "Spanish swindle" came into prominence about ten years ago, when a number of Americans were victimized. An American receives a letter from Spain, telling of a minor heir to a valuable estate who is looking for a guardian. The "heir" bears the same name as the American, thereby giving the impression that they are relatives. After more or less correspondence the American is asked to advance several hundred dollars to pay legal expenses and the "heir's" expenses in coming to this country.

Pete Kautz left for Rochester, Minn., Wednesday morning to be with his brother who was to undergo a surgical operation.

Monte Barto reports that John Weatherholts like their new home, are well pleased with the country and think they will find it a pleasant place to live as well as a good one in which to make money.

The Hoskins correspondent for the Wayne Herald certainly made Fred Buss "sit up and take notice" last week. In their last writeup, among numerous personal mention, they announced the fact that the stork had got busy again and left a pair of twins at the Fred Buss home. Upon being approached by his friends the next morning with words of sympathy Fred stoutly denied the arrival of even one baby, much less two of them. This is certainly one on Fred and a big one on the correspondent. We believe the latter should "set 'em up."

Monte Barto and Louie Ziener returned from Gordon Sunday and it was with some surprise that people learned that Louie had traded his drug stock for a 480 acre farm there. He has not fully decided whether he will move there or not but we hope he will see it fit to continue to make this his home. The parties he traded with have not arrived to take possession. The business Louie traded was a good one and we are told that he has received a valuable farm, with good improvements and everything ready for business.

We heard of a man in this vicinity too, who has large sums of money out drawing good rates of interest and who has much property, howling because the times are such that wheat is high priced and his flour costs him more. This is certainly the limit! A man that begrudges his fellow man, who raises the wheat, a good price for his products because it causes him to squeeze a few pennies out of his hoard to buy flour. Such people are the ones that always set up a roar when the town wishes to make some badly needed improvements that will raise the taxes a little. Such cold blooded greediness is the ruination of any town.

CARDS IN CHURCH.

They Were Not Uncemmon in the Old Days in England.

Frequent cases of card playing occurred in churches in olden days in the high or curtained family pews that were to be found in several parts of England.

A case of card playing was mentioned by the poet Crabbe as having occurred in one of those pews in Trovbridge parish church. Mr. Beresford Hope stated that card playing was not uncommon in churches having curtained pews, where those occupying them were screened from the observation of the rest of the congregation, and that one of the Georges is credited with taking part at a game of whist in the church he attended.

The church at Little Stanmore, in Middlesex, has a luxurious room pew which is approached by a special door and staircase.

The old St. Paul's cathedral before the great fire of London was used by business men as a sort of exchange. The portico was let out to hucksters, and in those days gambling and cards are both said to have been indulged in without let or hindrance within the cathedral.—London Standard.

THE GUILLOTINE.

It Was Not Invented by the Man Whose Name It Bears.

In a book published by Hector Fleischman in Germany the story of the origin of the instrument of execution which was named for Dr. Guillotin in the days of the reign of terror is fully detailed. "There is no truth in the story, as long believed," he says, "that the great old physician invented the machine which was named for him and by means of which he is said to have lost his life shortly after its adoption. Guillotin, in keeping with the spirit of his time, proposed on Oct. 10, 1789, that all offenders, regardless of their birth or station, should be dealt with alike by the law, and six months later he proposed to the government that 'convicted murderers should be beheaded by means of a simple apparatus.' The mechanism of which he and no one else had any idea at that time was spoken of as the 'simple apparatus' by the humorists of the day, and the phrase was used to make its proposer ridiculous, so that when a machine finally was adopted the title of the time named it guillotine. The government evidently recognizing the value of the suggestion, asked one (Antoine Louis, a surgeon at the Salpêtrière, to devise a machine and later gave a similar order to a carpenter by the name of Guillon, who offered to construct an instrument for decapitation for 5,600 livres. (This was considered too high a price) and the contract was given to a German cabinetmaker by the name of Tobias Schmidt, who received 824 livres for the accepted model in 1792. Schmidt made guillotines for all the provinces, and the industry brought him a moderate fortune, which he proceeded to squander in Paris, while Dr. Guillotin, who never had anything to do with the making of a machine which bore his name, continued to practice his profession quietly and unostentatiously in Paris until he died there on March 26, 1814."

A TEMPERANCE UNION.

Members Limited to Fourteen Drinks of Liquor Daily.

"Signing the pledge" is no new thing, as is proved by researches in Italy. Interesting particulars of what would appear to be the earliest examples of written pledges to abstain from gambling and excessive drinking are given in the Tusin Stud Medevali by Signor Girolamo Biscaro, who has discovered three such documents in the archives of Milan. The first of these records is an oath sworn on the gospels by Giacomo Pasquali and Armano Duca to the effect that for two years they will abstain from gambling in Pavia or within three miles thereof and will likewise refrain from inducing others to gamble on their behalf. The penalty for any breach of this oath is fixed at 5 soldi, payable to Paolo Bovarolo.

In the second document Perand de Bono promises Umberto de Proto to abstain from gambling for a certain period, exception being made on behalf of the game of bismontro, at which, however, he was not to lose more than 2 denari on any one day. Further, he undertakes not to visit any inn for drinking purposes before the hour of vesper on Monday. A breach of either clause of the pledge involves the payment of 5 soldi to De Proto. By the third document Siero Ferrario expressed his willingness to pay 12 denari to his brother Lampario should he be persuaded to play for money in any place of public resort or to spend more than 2 denari on intoxicants in any one day.

The motive for these contracts is not stated, but it is presumed that they were entered into by employees whose masters wished to keep their proclivities in check. There is nothing in the documents to suggest the existence of any organization for the promotion of temperance. The honor of being first in the field in this respect therefore still rests with Germany, where two temperance societies were founded in the sixteenth century.

Of these the Order of St. Christopher was formed by Sigismund de Dietrichstein on Jan. 18, 1517, and the Order of Temperance by the landgrave of Hesse on Dec. 25, 1600. The members of the one order were pledged to abstain from toast drinking, and the members of the other undertook not to drink more than seven glasses of liquor at a time, and that not oftener than twice a day.—Chicago News.

Miss Noyes is going to Manila, where she will be wedded on her arrival, to Rev. Rex Moe, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Moe of Fremont. Miss Somers will be claimed as a bride probably at Shanghai by a young minister who formerly lived at Fort Scott, Ia., but who is now in the missionary service in West China.

Will They Meet?

Messages were sent out of Lincoln Saturday asking the members of the legislature if they would support a bill before a special session of the legislature providing for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors in this state except where such law may be suspended by a municipality by a three-fifths vote. This message purports to come from Governor Sheldon.

The last legislature failed to pass a county option bill and there was no plank in the republican platform on this subject. Since the election there has been talk of a special session to be called by Governor Sheldon. No amendment to the constitution can be submitted to a vote of the people by a special session and in lieu of a constitutional amendment there is talk of a statute prohibiting the sale of liquors except where a municipality suspends the law by a three-fifths vote. The next legislature in its regular session in January would have an opportunity if it is desired, to repeal any statute passed at a special session.

They Are Interested.

About the most enlivening topic when bankers meet one another, now-a-days is what the next legislature will do in regard to passing a bill for the guaranty of deposits. The election of a governor and a legislature committed to that idea opens up a rather gloomy prospect for its opponents. Most of the national banks are determined against the proposition, owing to the possibility that some of their depositors will transfer accounts to the state institutions when the guaranty plan goes into effect. Naturally the state bankers who believe this measure has just antagonizing the measure than their brethren of the nationals.

If Nebraska is to go democratic we will be glad to see that party in power get a majority in the legislature. We will expect lower taxes, county option, higher wages for railroad employees, bank deposits guaranteed, less money expended on state institutions and the railroad commission shorn of some of its power. The democratic party will have a chance to make a record.—Emerson Enterprise.

"The King is dead, long live the King." Immediately after the election word was sent out from Omaha that the county option movement was hopelessly dead, but later evidences are that it is still a live issue as it is claimed that those in favor of county option have a majority in the legislature.

PAYING FOR A MEAL.

It Was Worth About a Shilling to Pick Those Bones.

Colonel Ebenezer Sprout of Revolutionary fame was born and bred in Middleboro, Mass. He was always fond of a joke and was quick to seize an opportunity to indulge his propensity, as the following incident illustrates. His father, also a Colonel Sprout, kept a tavern. One day while Ebenezer was at home on a furlough three private soldiers, on their return from the seat of war, called for a cold luncheon.

Mrs. Sprout set on the table some bread and cheese with the remnants of the family dinner, which her son thought rather scanty fare for hungry men. He felt a little vexed that the defenders of the country were not more bountifully supplied. The soldiers, after satisfying their appetites, asked him how much they should pay. Ebenezer said he would ask his mother. He found her in the kitchen.

"Mother," he said, "how much is it worth to pick those bones?"

"About a shilling, I guess," she answered.

The young officer returned to the soldiers and, taking from the bathroom till 3 shillings and smiling genially upon them, gave each man one and with good wishes sent them on their way. Mrs. Sprout soon after he had done with the money for the soldiers' dinner.

It is apparent from the above that Ebenezer was worth to pick those bones, and you said a shilling? I thought it little enough, for the bones were pretty rare, and I handed the men the money from the till, and they are gone."

Mrs. Sprout could not find heart to reprove her favorite son for this misinterpretation of her words, and then, she, too, loved a joke, and so after an instant's grim look, she laughed and said it was all right.

LAND OF THE CROSSBOW.

The Deadly Poisoned Arrows of the Lissoo Sharpshooters.

On the wild frontier between China and British Burma is a barbarous tribe which has no civilized supervision. George Forrest, an English traveler, thus describes the chief weapon of these people: "If I had to suggest a title for a book on the upper Salwin I should call it 'The Land of the Crossbow,' which is the characteristic weapon of the country and the Lissoo tribe. Every Lissoo with any pretensions to chieftainship has at least two of these weapons—one for everyday use in hunting, the other for war. The little children play with miniature crossbows. The men never leave their huts for any purpose whatever without their crossbows. When they go to sleep the 'nukung' is hung over their heads, and when they die it is hung over their graves. The largest crossbows have a span of fully five feet and require a full of fully thirty-five pounds to string them. The bow is made of a species of wild mulberry of great toughness and flexibility. The stock, some four feet long in the war bows, is usually of wild plum wood. The string is of plaited hemp and the trigger of bone. The arrow, of sixteen to eighteen inches, is of split bamboo about four times the thickness of an ordinary knitting needle, hardened and pointed. The actual point is bare for a quarter to one-third of an inch; then for fully an inch the arrow is stripped to half its thickness, and on this portion poison is placed.

"The poison is invariably a decoction expressed from the tubers of a species of acoutium which grows on those ranges at an altitude of 8,000 to 10,000 feet. The poison is mixed with resin or some vegetable gum to the consistency of putty and is then smeared on the notched point. The 'feather' is supplied by a strip of bamboo leaf folded into a triangular form and tied in a notch at the end of the arrow, with the point of the arrow outward. The reduction in thickness of the arrow where the poison is placed causes the point to break off in the body of any one whom it strikes, and, as each carries enough poison to kill a cart horse, a wound is invariably fatal. The immediate incision is the usual remedy when wounded on a limb or fleshy part of the body, but at Chengka the uncle of the Lappo chief showed us a preparation which resembled opium drops and which he said was an effective antidote.

"With few exceptions the Lissos seemed to us to be arrant cowards, but the crossbow and poisoned arrow are certainly most diabolical weapons. An arrow from a war bow will pierce a deal board an inch thick at seventy or eighty yards. Some of the Tseokun natives were so expert that they could hit a mark four inches in diameter repeatedly at sixty to eighty yards. As no one goes anywhere without his crossbow and his barakun quiver full of poisoned arrows and as every village is at feud with every other village mutual suspicion is inevitable. In open fight the Lissos are usually careful to keep at a respectful distance from each other and behind oxhide shields which protect the whole of the body. But if battle is rare, murder and sudden death by ambush in the jungle are common."

A PARISIAN RUSE.

The Dressmaker's Lure That Ensnared the Americans.

Grace Margaret Gould tells in the September Woman's Home Companion some of the ways the Parisian dressmaking establishments sell their goods to American women. Here is one ruse that she saw worked in one of the biggest establishments in Paris:

There was a sudden and evident commotion among the employees. "The princess! The princess! She has arrived!" they cried.

American eyes began to bulge.

Out from a magnificent equipage stepped a regally gowned grand lady, attended by footmen and maid and received by the whole hiving establishment to the neglect of all other customers. She was in a gracious mood this day and easy to be pleased, praising their past efforts and selecting several of their new creations without regard to cost. After she had made her departure amid like exclamations there was no need of the saleswoman bothering her head over suggestions. Every American woman present wanted a gown copied from the one the princess had bought, and she got it after much pleading and at a price far beyond the limit she had set.

And the point of this fable is this: The princess was no princess, but an employee of the house.

Every French gown has two prices—an American price and a French price. It is needless to say which is the greater price.

Along about April the cry goes up, "The Americans are coming!" and then the prices go up too.

Along about November, when the Americans have left, you might almost say they are giving away gowns, only the Frenchman never does give away anything. Then it is that the Frenchwoman in general and the French actress in particular selects her wardrobe.

A worried smile came to the woman's face, but she took back the paper and wrote something on the back thereof.

Radishes.

Radishes originated in China, where they have been cultivated for many centuries and sometimes grow as big as a man's head. In Germany the old fashioned country mothers cure hoarseness and cough with radish juice mixed with sugar candy. The radishes of today have no flavor, no character. Formerly their sharp, biting taste made them palatable.

The Bad Spot.

An Irishman one day was told to put up a signboard on which were the words "No Motorists—This Hill Is Dangerous."

A way went Mike with the signboard and placed it at the bottom of a very steep hill. A few days later his employer went to see how the board was put up and, finding it at the bottom of the hill, sought and found Mike.

"You blooming fool!" he cried. "Why didn't you put that sign in the right place?"

"Shure and ain't it?" asked Mike. "Don't all the accidents happen at the bottom?"—Harper's Weekly.

Somebody is going to be fooled on the county option business this winter. Now and then you hear supporters of Governor-elect Shallenberger declare that he will sign a county option bill if it is put up to him. The legislature appears to be plugged against it this time, but the Omaha brewers think they know what to depend on in case it becomes necessary to call for an executive veto.—State Journal.

The philosopher on the Gate City at Keokuk gets inquisitive after this manner: If you think you're wise and well informed just see if you can answer these questions: You have seen hundreds of white horses, why did you never see a white colt? Why does a horse eat grass backwards and a cow forward? Why does a hop vine twine to the left and a bean vine twine to the right? Why does a horse staked out by a rope unwind it while a cow winds it up into hard kinks? Why does a horse get up on his front feet and a cow on her hind feet? And why does a dog always turn around three times before lying down?

School Savings.

The village of Newman Grove, or rather the school district pertaining thereto, beats the country to the government savings bank. As described in the news reports, the Newman Grove plan is to collect savings deposits from the school children, the same being turned over to the school district and invested in county and school district warrants. In that way a part of the local floating public debt is carried by the children who are incidentally educated in habits of thrift and benefited to the full extent of the interest rate on the warrants bought. The plan is very like that of the debt burdened European countries, who use their postal savings banks as a means of borrowing immense sums of money from their own individual citizens. The fact that there is little floating school and county debts in Nebraska these times seems to put a hampering limit on the possible development of the localized "postal" savings bank as instituted at Newman Grove.

Great Newspaper Man.

Few newspapers in the United States are able to command the services of as brilliant a corps of correspondents as the Chicago Record-Herald. Its choice of Walter Wellman to represent it at Washington is a good illustration of its wise policy of getting the best there is to be had. Mr. Wellman has won a national reputation as a magnetic and resourceful news writer. And now he is preparing to cinch his reputation for originality and daring by trying to reach the north pole in an airship.

Whatever may be the results of Mr. Wellman's daring attempt to reach the pole this summer in an airship and send the results of the voyage at once to the Record-Herald by wireless telegraphy, the Wellman-Record-Herald expedition is sure to be conducted by Mr. Wellman with the same cool courage and whole-souled enthusiasm that have made him an ideal newspaper correspondent.

Mr. Wellman was born in Mentor, Ohio in 1858. At 14 he began his newspaper experience, establishing at that age a weekly paper in the little town of Sutton, Neb. In 1884 he became the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Herald, for which paper he visited the West Indies in 1892 and located the landing place of Columbus, marking the spot with a huge stone monument. In 1894 he made his first dash for the pole, reaching the latitude of 81 degrees northeast of Spitzbergen. In 1898 he tried the same fascinating quest again, penetrating as far as Franz Josef Land. On both trips he had wonderful success in discovering new islands and securing new scientific data which have been of great value to the American Geographical Society. His voluminous writings for scientific periodicals and popular magazines have shown the same incisive thought and keen insight that have marked his journalistic work.

BATTLE OF THE NILE.

Where "the Boy Stood on the Burning Deck."

CASABIANCA AND HIS FATE.

The Facts About the Little Hero of Mrs. Hemans' Famous Poem, His Father and the Tragedy of the Doomed French Flagship, the Orient.

That was a lucky child who in the latter part of the last century escaped the ordeal of standing up before a circle of relatives and friends—outwardly enthusiastic and admiring, inwardly often greatly bored—to repeat those well known if somewhat inaccurate lines that tell us how "the boy stood on the burning deck." Whether nine times out of ten, the infant reciter or for that matter, any of the members of the applauding family circle could have given the date and place of the occurrence may be doubtful. The forty lines of Mrs. Hemans' gave them all the history that they craved, and when the parrot-like performance closed with "faithful heart" a sentimental maiden aunt would sigh, a liberal uncle bestow largesse to the extent of half a crown, and that was all.

It was in 1798 that young Casabianca, the ten-year-old son of the commodore of the French flagship Orient, stood amid the awful devastation of the battle of the Nile. Bonaparte had himself sailed to the ill-fated Orient from Toulon in the previous May, taking with him a good stock of burghundy and also that famous "camp library" of cabinet editions, including forty volumes of English novels, in which the Bible and the Koran were clasped under the head of "politics." More important still for those who love the picturesque details of history and great men, he was accompanied by his then private secretary, Louis Antoine Fauvelet de Bourrienne, from whose always entertaining if not invariably accurate pen we have a capital account of the voyage to Egypt.

Much of the time was passed by Napoleon Iyng in his berth while Bourrienne roved to him and in promoting discussions on various questions among the scientific and other distinguished men who accompanied the expedition. The flagship carried a population of more than 2,000 souls, and the cry of "Man overboard!" was not infrequent. On these occasions Bonaparte displayed a side of his character to which full justice is not always done. Bourrienne describes his agitation till a rescue was effected as extreme. On one occasion a false alarm was raised during the darkness of night, and the supposed "man" proved to be the quarter of a bullock which had dropped from the rigging, but Napoleon rewarded the rescuers even more liberally than usual, pointing out that their exertion had been for what they believed a human life.

The fleet arrived off the coast of Africa on July 1, and here Bourrienne and his "Memoirs" leave the squadron to accompany the army and his chief on land. Bruye's, the French admiral, had during the voyage expressed forebodings as to the result of an encounter with the British fleet. Nelson, who sailed from Syracuse on July 25, was confident, but well knew the price he might be called upon to pay. When Captain Berry said, "If we succeed, what will the world say?" Nelson replied: "There is no if in the case. That we shall succeed is certain. Who may live to tell the story is a very different question." For himself he made that famous anticipation, "A peerage or Westminster abbey."

The battle began at 6:30 o'clock, half an hour before nightfall. Nelson, on board the Vanguard, flew his colors in six places lest they should be shot away. In a few minutes after the ship had gone into action the crews of the first six guns were swept away by the terrible fire of the French fleet, and twice again during the fight were fresh crews called for. The shot which struck Nelson on the head from his forehead a piece of skin which, falling over his one useful eye, rendered him for the time being totally blind. Carried to the cockpit, he insisted on taking his proper turn among the wounded for the surgeon's attention. Soon after 9 o'clock at night, while he was still below, a cry arose that the Orient was on fire. Unaided and unnoticed in the confusion, Nelson made his way up, and presently from the quarterdeck his voice was heard shouting orders that the boats should be lowered to go to the assistance of the Orient's crew.

The doomed French flagship had but just been painted, and quantities of all inflammable material littered her deck. Bruye's, the admiral, was dead, but Louis Casabianca and his little son were still on deck. At 10 o'clock the ship blew up. "There came a burst of thunder sound," and although the commodore was not at the time lying "hincussous" of his son, as the poetess has it, for both were seen clinging to a floating mast after the explosion, neither father nor son was among the seventy members of the crew who were saved by the English boats.

From the mainmast and ironwork of the Orient Captain Hallowell of the Swiftsure had a coffin made, which "memento mori" he presented to the admiral that he might at the close of his career of glory be buried in one of his own trophies. Nelson received this offering in the spirit of the giver and even kept it set up on end in his cabin till the remembrance of his favorite servant brought about its banishment.—London Globe.

CURIOSITIES OF DIET.

How Nature Adapts Food to Man and Man to Food.

GREAT VALUE OF CEREALS.

Why People Can Eat Bread at Every Meal Without Getting Tired of It. The Fruits of the Burning Tropics and the Fats of the Frozen Arctic.

Modern science has shown that nature provides food for mankind with marvelous care and foresight. The human system requires a certain amount of protein daily to replace worn-out muscle and tissue. Fish and meat supply this in large quantities. In hot climates, however, these spoil so quickly that their use is limited. Nature, as if to compensate for this, has given to certain tropical fruits a much larger quantity of protein than northern fruits contain. Thus government analysis shows that figs have five units of calories to the ounce, dates two and five-tenths and bananas one and five-tenths. Apples have five-tenths, peaches nine-tenths and pears seven-tenths. Probably the figs and dates tested had lost part of their moisture, and some allowance should be made for this.

The Arab can, therefore, maintain his vigor on a diet chiefly plucked from trees. Henry M. Stanley and his white companions subsisted almost entirely on banana flour for two years in the African jungle. Their freedom from disease was in part attributed to the wholesomeness of this diet. The dried banana contains 20 per cent of protein, about double that of ordinary wheat flour.

At the opening of the mango season in Jamaica many of the natives practically live on this fruit for two or three weeks. They fairly revel in it. An Englishman who was familiar with the science of diet could not only maintain his health on this fare, but actually grow sleek and fat. He knew that an effort to live on the fruits of his native country would result in weakness, sickness and eventual death. Chemical analysis showed, however, that the mango contained enough protein to supply the bodily needs.

If nature has been this kind in adapting food to man's uses, she has been equally so in adapting man to his food. You may have wondered why people can eat bread at every meal without tiring of it. The difficulty of eating one meal a day for thirty days is well known. Even such delicacies as asparagus and strawberries cause an aversion when served too frequently. Nature sends men a never failing appetite for cereals because they are altogether the most valuable of foods. They contain a considerable amount of protein, their salts are of importance to the organism, they are readily digested when properly cooked, and they furnish a great deal of nourishment in small bulk.

Thus wheat flour, cornmeal, oatmeal (dry) and rice (dry) have more than 300 units to the ounce. Baked potatoes have 32.7 units, cabbage leaf 3.2, spinach 7, asparagus 9.5, apples 18.4, strawberries 11.4, spring chlorea 19.5 and tenderloin of beef broiled 6.9. If a man tried to get even half of his nutrition from the coarse vegetables which have a considerable indigestible residue, he would have to eat pounds of them daily, and his stomach would be sadly overburdened. Nature gives us the desire for a varied diet, and science shows that this is altogether the best for us.

In the arctic regions there is little vegetation. Man must live almost wholly on animal foods. Fish and meat would not suffice, because they contain only proteins. These would replace worn-out muscle and tissue, but could not be burned in the body to generate heat and energy. Fat, however, consists of carbon and hydrogen, which are the chief components of the foods of vegetable origin and supply the fuel needed by the body. The polar animals have fat in abundance, but residents of the temperate and cold zones can eat it only in limited quantities. To them the mere thought of chewing chunks of grease is nauseating.

The children of the frozen north, however, are endowed not only with the ability to eat and to digest large quantities of fat, but with keen appetite for it. One who is sensitive to such impressions must turn away when he sees the natives of southern Alaska, the Thlinkits, swallowing seal oil flavored by salmon berries with the gusto of a boy over ice cream. The Eskimos, farther north, will eat blubber, slightly cooked in the flames, to an indefinite number of pounds.—New York Tribune.

Her Object Attained.

"Forgive me, my dear," said the gossip humbly, "but I thoughtlessly mentioned to Mrs. Brown the things that you told me in strict confidence." "There is nothing to forgive," replied the wise woman pleasantly. "It was for that very purpose that I told them to you in strict confidence."—Chicago Post.

Getting Even.

"You are half an hour late this morning," said a schoolmaster to a scholar. "Yes, sir," replied the boy, who had been "kept in" the day before. "It was late yesterday when I got home!"—London Tit-Bits.

We give altogether too little importance to what we say to others and too much to what they say to us.—Eliot.

Influence of Mountains.

The influence of the mountain is pure and holy, giving strength and simplicity, encouraging the older virtues, discouraging the newer vices. In the hill men of Wales we see this clearly enough. Go where you will among the wilder and more mountainous parts of Wales and you will find that rare independence and self reliance which are not marred by a curiously defiant discourtesy. You find there those that are truly "nature's gentlemen."—London Standard.

GENESIS OF FEAR.

Gray Cells of Our Brains Stamped With Ancient Terrors.

The average man would sooner face a 200 pound human antagonist than a fifty pound dog which he could choke to death in three minutes. I have seen a charging ram scatter half a dozen men, any one of whom could have mastered the brute in a moment, and not one of whom was in ordinary matters a coward. There are instances on record of men who with their bare hands have held and baffled an ugly bull, but it was only the pressure of grim necessity that taught them their powers. Put a man against an animal and the man looks around for weapons or support, whether he needs them or not. There was a time when he did. For man, today the most lordly of animals, was once well nigh the most humble of them all. He has come up out of a state in which fear was the normal condition of existence—fear of violence, of the dark that gave opportunity for violence, fear of falling, of animals, of being alone. And into the plastic gray cells of our brains are stamped these ancient terrors, a living record of the upward climb of man.

The baby shows this record most clearly. In him the prints of heredity are not yet overlaid by the tracks of use and custom, and therefore in him we may most easily read our past history. He is our ancestor as truly as he is our cotemporary, and his every shrinking gesture and frightened cry are chronicles of the younger world, tales of the age of fear.

They tell of the days when man was not the master of the earth nor even a highly considered citizen of the same, but a runaway subject of the great eating monarchs, whose platter was tooth and claw, a humble plibelian in the presence of the horned and hooved aristocrats of woods and fields. They speak of the nights when our hairy sires crouched in the forks of trees and whimpered softly at the dark—whimpered because the dark held so many enemies, whimpered softly lest those enemies should hear

Had Seen Them All Before. Once while James Whitcomb Riley was visiting a town where he was booked to give a reading a committee called to take him in a carriage over the city. In acknowledging the compliment, he said:

"I'll go with you, gentlemen, provided you promise that you will not show me the new courthouse, the new town hall, the new bridge, the new school building and the new jail, for I've seen them all a hundred times in as many towns, and they invariably wear me out before the time arrives for the curfew to rise on the evening entertainment."

An Everyday Story. "That Gus is certainly a nifty dresser. He has a suit of clothes for every day in the week."

"Why? he has the same suit on every time I see him!"

"Yep; that's the one!"—Cleveland Leader.

King Solomon Heartily Endorsed
"Will Double in Value Within a Year"
Says the Mayor of Frisco
Have you read the last "Little Miner"? It is a double number and tells lots of good things about King Solomon
"Profit and Loss" one of the best Mining Magazines in the country sent a mining expert up to Frisco to look over the camp and especially over King Solomon. His opinion was written for "Profit and Loss" and is copied in "The Little Miner." It covers three pages as the writer goes into every detail. Here are a few sentences.
"This energetic company has driven a crosscut tunnel over 2100 feet into the steep side of Royal mountain, which contains some of the strongest true fissure mineral veins in the state of Colorado."
"No property in the Frisco district is worked in a more modern, scientific fashion than that in which the King Solomon is being operated now."
"So the King Solomon is not a prospect but a real mine. The work on the property has been done with a view to making future heaving mining operations easy and a large tonnage can be mined with facility when the company once gets ready to extract its ores."
Speaking of the Management The Writer Says:
"It is conservative as could be desired, and has shown rare business judgment to date in handling the company's affairs."
Conclusions of the Mayor of Frisco
In answer to an enquirer the Mayor of Frisco writes a strong endorsement of King Solomon. You should read his letter--it is in "The Little Miner." Here is one sentence:
"In conclusion, allow me to state that your holdings in the King Solomon Tunnel and Development Company, in my opinion, are gilt edge and I believe will double in value within a year."
