NEBRASKA NORMAL COLLEGE

COMMENCEMENT WEEK

Closing Week and Other Notations of a Good School.

The eighteenth annual commencement of the Nebraska Normal College closed Friday evening with the banquet of the Alumni Association. The programs during the week were all of a high order and all who attended were well pleased with them.

Commencement week was opened Friday evening, July 30, by the Department of Elocution, under the direction of Margaret A. Carroll. The play "Uncle Rube" was given by members of this department at the opera house. On account of the inclement state of the weather, many were kept away from the performance. A good crowd, however, enjoyed every moment of the evening's entertainment.

On Saturday evening, at the College Chapel, was held the annual contest between the Philomathean and Crescent Literary societies. The individual winners for the evening were as follows: Elenora C. Borg (C) received the $10 prize for the best essay; W. E. Williams (C), was awarded first place in the recitation contest, by the judges; Miss Von Brauchitsch (C) received the highest mark in the oration, while Mr. Nordgren (P) received the prize for the best debate. By a narrow margin, the Philos won the contest.

On Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. W. Kirkpatrick delivered the Baccalaureate sermon to the graduating classes. His remarks were full of interest and good advice to all. Rev. Osborne and Rev. Ringer assisted with the services of the afternoon.

The Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A. and Catholic Club held their union meeting in the Chapel at 8 o'clock in the evening. Miss Mahood spoke for the Y. W. C. A., Dan Burress for the Y. M. C. A. and Julia Power represented the Catholic Club. The work of all three Associations has been very strong during the school year.

Monday evening found a large audience in the Chapel to hear the "Ticker Prize Oration Contest." This program was most interesting. After the six young people had spoken, the judges retired to make their decision. The prize of $20 was given to Joseph A. Chicoine, who had for his subject "Duties to our Republic."

The "Mines Recitation Contest" drew a large crowd to the Chapel on Tuesday evening. Many remarked that it was the best of its kind that they had ever been privileged to hear. After the program of eight numbers had been given, the judges announced that Miss Frances Bartels was entitled to the medal given by Mr. Mines. Miss Bartels read "Molly and Jimmie Baker."

One of the most interesting programs of the week was that given Wednesday evening in the Chapel when the "Craven Debate Contest" was held. The question for discussion was "Resolved, That Prohibition of the Sale of Intoxicating Beverages is the Best Solution of the Liquor Problem." Three spoke on the affirmative and the same number on the negative. This program was listened to most attentively and each speaker was well received by the audience. Miss Stine, who spoke on the affirmative side of the question, was given the prize by unanimous decision of the judges.

Thursday evening, the graduating exercises proper occurred. All present listened with a great deal of interest to the address of the evening delivered by Dept. State Supt. F. S. Perdue of Lincoln. At this time, the diplomas and state certificates were presented to the graduates and the prizes awarded as follows:

The Most Substantial Improvement, Grace Soderberg; The Best Oration, Joseph A. Chicoine; The Best Debate, Orva Stine; First Rank in Scientific Class, Amy G. Mahood; First Rank in Teachers' Class, Chas. R. Chinn; First Rank in State Certificate Class, Ernest G. Anderson; The Best Recitation, Frances Bartels; First Rank in Commercial Department, Willard Losey; The Honor Roll, Ernest G. Anderson. During the evening, the different classes entertained the audience with their class songs and yells.

On Friday morning at nine o'clock the members of the Alumni Association and this year's classes met in the Chapel when the program for Alumni Day was begun. Speeches were given by members of all the classes from the first class in 1892 to the present class. Different members of the faculty were also called

YOU'RE going to have this coming fall, a chance to buy and wear the best clothes in the world; the kind of clothes that well dressed men are glad to buy.

Hart Schaffner & Marx

clothes are to be the feature of our line the coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time when you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money. You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all-wool, in every thread of the fabrics; they represent the products of the best weavers in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half dozen other makes put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interests as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart Schaffner and Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and its important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here. They're correct in style, of course; and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that is wrong. Hart Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

There's a lot of inferior, cotton mixed clothing in the market; pretty poor stuff, some of it. It looks pretty good; enough so to enable dealers to charge a good price for it; it isn't as a rule worth what it costs.

upon for brief remarks. At the conclusion of the program, all repaired to the campus where Mrs. Pile had an excellent luncheon awaiting all.

In the evening, at six o'clock, the Banquet Hall was thrown open for the annual Alumni Banquet. The Gymnasium was beautifully decorated for the occasion and the tables were resplendent in all that goes to make up a well appointed banquet. After justice had been done the five course dinner, chairs were pushed back so that all might thoroughly enjoy the toasts to follow. Toasts were responded to by different members of the Association and also Dept. State Supt. Perdue and E. O. Garrett made short talks. The evening's program and the year's Commencement as well closed with all rising and singing the College Song.

Although there were some drawbacks for the school during the year just closed, the year taken as a whole was indeed very successful. There were sixty-two graduates in the various departments. The death of its president, J. M. Pile, during the year, was a very sad blow to the institution but his son Fred, a worthy son of a worthy father, stepped into the breach thus made, and with the aid of his talented mother carried the school year to a successful termination, and will have a better understanding of the work to be done in the coming year, plans for which are going forward all the time. The school, its officials and faculty are a power for good not only in Wayne but all through this part of the state as well.

VACATION

After 48 weeks of strenuous work in the school room, all members of the faculty greatly appreciate the month's vacation they will have this year.

Mrs. Pile and Fred Pile will spend the greater part of their vacation at their comfortable home on the Hill. This makes an ideal place to rest and they are fully enjoying it.

Prof. and Mrs. Puffer and son Harold are spending the month's vacation with the Professor's parents in North Dakota.

Miss Robertson, the efficient secretary, is enjoying the vacation at her parents' home in Holt county.

Miss Kingsbury has gone to her home in Defiance, Ohio, where she will spend the next four weeks in resting up for school work next year.

Prof. Hunter left about the first of the month for Menomonie, Wisconsin, where he will put in his time taking special work at the Stout Training School.

Mr. James Pile is superintending the force of workmen on the Hill, cleaning and renovating the buildings, preparatory to the opening of school on September 6th.

Prof. and Mrs. Bright will remain in Wayne during the greater part of their vacation. They are in the midst of moving and getting settled in their new home on Main street.

Prof. P. F. Sauntry is rusticiating on the farm near Platte; South Dakota. Mr. Sauntry will take his brother's place as head of the Commercial Department.

Miss VanConnett, after a year's work as Director of the Model School, has gone to Page, where she will spend her vacation with home folks.

Miss Carroll will do some institute work during the vacation, but will spend most of her time at her home resting up and getting ready for next year's work.

Prof. and Mrs. Raubach, who have been assisting with the work this summer, are busy getting settled in their new home at South Sioux City, where Mr. Raubach will have charge of the city schools next year.

Prof. Johnson is occupying his room at the dormitory during the vacation. He has considerable work in neighboring towns where he gives violin lessons.

I keep on hand a good supply of Mr. Price's Canning Compound which has been used in this vicinity for several years past with the best results. If you haven't used it ask your neighbor about it.

Golden Wedding

Fifty years ago last Monday Alexander Scott and wife stood together in the sunny days of young manhood and womanhood and gave response to the words that united them together "until death." One by one the years have slipped by since then until fifty of them have gone into the treasury of the past and on Monday evening a number of the relatives of this worthy couple gathered at their home in the east part of our city and brought to their remembrance, in a surprise visit, the fact that it was the 50th anniversary of their wedding day. It was a quiet affair, only a few of the relatives being present, but a host of friends will join in the wish that many sunny years may yet be vouchsafed to them ere the golden bowl of life shall be broken.

United in Marriage

On Wednesday morning, August 11th, at the home of the bride's mother in Wayne, occurred the marriage of Miss Helen M. Pile to Geo. Reid Newton, of Rochester, New York, Rev. Dr. Bithel, of Fremont, Nebraska, performing the ceremony. Following the ceremony, the immediate relatives and friends of the bride were served a breakfast at the home of Mrs. Pile. Every reader of this paper is well acquainted with the bride, who has spent the last 18 years of her life in Wayne. The groom has a responsible position with a railroad company in Rochester, where the couple will make their home. After a few weeks "honeymoon" spent in New York and Massachusetts, Mr. and Mrs. Newton will be at home after October 1st, at 24 Roslyn street, Rochester, New York. We are very sure that all of our readers will join with us in expressing the wish that all the rosy dreams of future happiness by this estimable young woman may be more than fulfilled in the on coming years.

Made a Botch of It

It has just been discovered that the democratic legislature badly mutilated the revenue law. S. F. No. 28, by Fuller of Seward, attempted to provide for the assessment of real estate every two years instead of every four years. The result is more ludicrous because more injurious than the failure of the legislature to prevent the state board from raising or lowering the aggregate state assessment.

The standing committees on revenue consented to change the date when real estate shall be valued for assessment by amending section 121, article 1, chapter 77, compiled statutes, by providing that county boards may in the years 1911 and every second year thereafter equalize real estate by raising or lowering values, but failed to repeal section 105 of the old law which provides that real estate shall be assessed by the county assessors in April, 1904, and every four years thereafter. The object of the original revenue law was to have real estate equalized the same year it is valued for assessment and every four years thereafter, in the even years. The result of the hybrid act of the last legislature is that real estate is to be equalized by county boards the year before it is listed for assessment and the year after it is listed for assessment, during one year nothing is to be done and then the dose is to be repeated. The law as amended by the last legislature does not provide for equalization of real estate the year it is revalued for assessment.

Attorney General Thompson has held that the state board cannot equalize real estate values or change real estate values only during the years when real estate is "valued and assessed," which is plainly every four years. Thus not only the platform pledge of the democrats of 1908 is unfulfilled as to an increase of the total assessed value of the state, but another portion of the law relating to the valuation and assessment and equalization of real estate is rendered worse than worthless.

How It Came True.

"You can't make me believe," Uncle Abner Jarvis was saying, "that there isn't something in fortune telling." His auditors were grouped round the stove in the corner grocery store. "Ever have any experience with it?" asked one of them.

"That's what I was going to tell you," resumed Uncle Abner. "Once when I was at the county fair I saw a little tent with a sign on the outside of it that said Madame Somebody-or-other would tell your fortune for 25 cents. I stepped inside, just for fun.

"A woman with a thick veil over her face was sitting in a chair on a raised platform. I gave her a quarter and she looked at my hand. One of the things she told me was that I was going to have a large party at my house in less than a month, and that it would be followed by a calamity.

"I laughed at that. Thinks I to myself, 'We hadn't had any parties of any kind to our house for two years, and I don't reckon we'll have one quite as soon as that.'

"But it did come true. In about two weeks my wife's Aunt Jane came to visit us, and if you think she ain't a large party you ought to see her. She weighs 287 pounds.

"But how about the calamity?" inquired the man who was sitting on the wall, after a long pause.

"Well," said Uncle Abner, slowly, "she broke down our spare bed the first night she slept in it."

The Right Foundation of Food. Proper food is the foundation of health. People can eat improper food for a time until there is a sudden collapse of the digestive organs, then all kinds of trouble follows.

The proper way out of the difficulty is to shift to the pure, scientific food, Grape-Nuts, for it rebuilds from the foundation up. A New Hampshire woman says:

"Last summer I was suddenly taken with indigestion and severe stomach trouble and could not eat food without great pain. My stomach was so sore I could hardly move about. This kept up until I was so miserable life was not worth living.

"Then a friend finally, after much argument, induced me to quit my former diet and try Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had but little faith I commenced to use it and great was my surprise to find that I could eat it without the usual pain and distress in my stomach.

"So I kept on using Grape-Nuts and soon a marked improvement was shown in my stomach was performing its regular work in a normal way without pain or distress.

"Very soon the yellow coating disappeared from my tongue, the dull, heavy feeling in my head disappeared and my mind felt light and clear; the indigestion, tired feeling left, and altogether I felt as if I had been rebuilt. Strength and weight came back rapidly and I went back to my work with renewed ambition.

"Today I am a new woman in mind as well as body and I owe it all to this scientific food, Grape-Nuts." "There's a testimonial for the famous little book 'The Road to Wellville.' I am not to wonder that I cannot attend to anything else." Did you see the "Yes?"

Miss Desmond had been little more than a week at Inklefield, when, returning home from the neighboring vicarage, whence she had been dispatched with a message respecting some of the local charities to which Mrs. Saville contributed, she entered the drawing-room through one of the French windows which opened on a veranda and thence on to the grounds.

The lady of the house was not there but lounging comfortably in her especial chair sat a gentleman, who, directly Miss Desmond entered, rose and made her a bow—a low which proved that bowing was not yet quite a lost art. He was a tall, elderly man of an certain age, slight and elegant, with fine aquiline features and light-blue laughing eyes that looked as if boyhood still lingered there in spite of the way hair that curled round a rather low but well-shaped forehead. He was carefully, admirably dressed, and indescribably fresh and cool, though it was a burning August day.

"Allow me to explain my appearance here," he said, in a pleasant, youthful voice. "I have taken the exceedingly uninteresting journey from London to this place, and I now await its amiable mistress's pleasure as to whether she will see me or not."

"Has she been told you are here?" asked Miss Desmond, taking off a large garden-hat, which she continued to hold in her hand, wondering who this could be. Mrs. Saville's visitors had hitherto been few and far between, her acquaintances at that season being scattered in remote regions.

"Yes, I believe her major-domo has conveyed my postcard to the august presence." And the stranger, with the air of being very much at home, drew forward a chair, which Miss Desmond did not accept.

"Pray, has Mrs. Saville been long here?"

"About a fortnight."

"And you—have you been here all that time?"

"Not quite."

"Ah! what wonderful resisting power! I should have imagined you would both by this time be extinct from mental inanition." Miss Desmond laughed—a sweet, well-aimed laugh.

"And you can laugh like that!" he continued. "Then your vitality has of course kept my revered sister-in-law alive. It must, however, exhaust your own vital powers to give out ozone—no, what do they call it?—electricity—to such a degree. There is nothing to me so soul-destroying, so deadening, as suburban rusticity. Won't you sit down? I can't stand any longer my self."

"Then pray do not. I do not sit down because I am not going to stay. I thought Mrs. Saville would come in immediately," said Miss Desmond, and began to perceive in some way that this pleasant, talkative personage was a good deal older than he seemed.

"Since you permit it, then," and he sank into his chair with a sigh of relief. "You see," he went on, "this sort of place is just far enough from London to cut you off from all the conveniences of town life, and too near for any of the legitimate amusements and occupations of the country."

Here the butler appeared, and said, "Mrs. Saville will see you, my lord, if you will come this way." The gentleman rose, and made another elegant bow as he passed Miss Desmond.

"What an amusing person! I wonder who he is. Some relation, I suppose, or he would not speak so freely," thought Miss Desmond. "I must not go to Mrs. Saville at present." She too left the room by a different exit, and ascended to her own pleasant apartment, which looked out to the front; a dressing-closet opened from it, and, except for the bed, it was furnished like a sitting-room. After leaning from the window for some minutes, apparently in deep thought, she went to her writing table, and, unlocking a desk with a key which hung to her chain, she began to add some lines to a closely-written letter which lay there.

She had written for a considerable time when the sound of wheels and horses' feet drew her to the window, from whence she saw the gentleman with whom she had spoken in the drawing-room descend the hall door steps to enter a very rusty fly or station cab. He had a comically rueful expression of countenance, and, looking round over the front of the house, his quick eye caught sight of Miss Desmond. To her annoyance, he lifted his hat and gave a slight expressive shrug before stepping into his cab, which drove off immediately.

"I wish I had not looked out," she thought; then, smiling at the idea, it struck her very like an "expulsion." "No doubt Mrs. Saville could be very severe—even cruel; but she is good to me. I had better give her the vicar's message; yet I feel half afraid. This will not do. My best, my only chance is fearlessness."

She paused a moment, then looked away her writing again, and proceeded down a long passage and a short stair to the wing in which was Mrs. Saville's boudoir.

She knocked at the door, and was imperatively told to come in. Mrs. Saville was walking up and down, evidently much disturbed.

"Oh, your pardon," hesitatingly. "Oh, come in, come in! I have been worried by an important look; but I am not to wonder that I cannot attend to anything else." Did you see the "Yes?"

"I did; and he is very sorry, but he has already returned the plans of the cottages to the builder."

"Then he must get them back," very sharply. "I will walk over myself to the vicarage. I want movement. Did you happen to see Lord Everton?"

"The gentleman who has just left? Yes; he was in the drawing-room when I came in."

"He is one of the most contemptible men in England," continued Mrs. Saville—"a mere butterfly at sixty-three. He has only existed for pleasure his whole life, and even now pleasure still pleases him. A trifler of the most trifling description, without an ambition or an aim; worst of all, reckless of how he may throw others into temptation or difficulty. He has injured me past forgiveness, and yet he comes meandering here to try and talk me over to induce me to pardon the cruellest injury that could be inflicted. I told him my opinion fully; but to be seriously angry with such a creature is like taking a howitzer to shoot a humming-bird. Come, Miss Desmond, let us go out into the open air. What o'clock is it? Nearly five? I shall walk round the grounds until it is time to find the vicar."

They paced somewhat slowly across the grounds to a wooded rising ground on the left of the house, from which a view of it and its surroundings could be obtained, and when they had accomplished the ascent Mrs. Saville sat down, as if tired, on a seat placed at the best point of outlook. Her companion had observed that the keen, active woman was stronger in spirit than in flesh, and felt a sort of pity for this rich, prosperous, resolute lady.

"What a sweet, beautiful place this is!" she exclaimed, after gazing at the scene before her for a few minutes. "I think it is the most charming I have ever seen."

"Then you have not seen much," returned Mrs. Saville, testily.

"That is true. I have not seen any fine places in England, and the palaces and chateaux abroad are so melancholy; but who could desire anything beyond the exquisite, graceful, homelike beauty of Inglefield?"

It was, in truth, a delightful abode, sheltered on the east by the upland from which they now looked down; the ground sloped steeply from the opposite side, giving a wide view over a richly-wooded country; while the house, gardens and grounds occupied the level space between. Fine trees stood about, for Inglefield was an old country-house dating tolerably far back, built in the half-timbered style, the first story of fine bricks, the upper part beams and plaster, with high chimneys and many-gabled roofs. The large additions made by Mrs. Saville's father had been carried out in strict accordance with the original plan, and the garden designed to suit it also. A circular lawn, surrounded with flowering shrubs and dotted with several large spreading trees, separated the house from a wide avenue which opened exactly opposite the entrance, over-arched by a double row of great old elms at either side. Beyond, on the left, from a wooded hollow, through which a trout-stream had been widened and dammed into a miniature lake, glimpses of which could be caught when the sunlight fell upon it, rose the smoke from some unseen chimney.

"Home-like," repeated Mrs. Saville. "There is an immense amount of nonsense talked about home. I wish you could see Kingswood, Lord Everton's place; it is one of the finest seats in England—full of family treasures and historic relics—and he would not make the faintest effort to retain it. He might have entered diplomacy—or taken a foreign appointment and saved money. But he is quite content to derive his income from the rent a Manchester millionaire pays him for his ancestral halls, when he might have married the millionaire's daughter and kept it for himself."

"Wed, if the daughter was not the sort of woman he could love, he was right," said Miss Desmond, thoughtfully. "Suppose she was not companionable, that he could not love her, the first place in the world could not make up for that."

"You are a foolish child! The thing called love soon evaporates. Rank, importance, high position, last, and duties due to one's station fill up life satisfactorily. It is a low, mean conception of existence to spend it in personal pleasure."

"Yes, certainly. You are right," eagerly. "To live for one's self alone, in any way, is miserable. But one has a right to try and be happy if it does not interfere with the happiness of others."

"You have been tolerably poor, from what you say," said Mrs. Saville, not unkindly. "Have you been happy?"

Her interlocutor paused before she replied. "Yes, on the whole I have been happy. Sometimes it has been trying to feel shabby and to be unable to get a new dress, to know that lovely pictures and delightful music were within your reach, yet inaccessible. The worst is to want nice delicate things for some one you love and not to be able to get them; that is bitter. Still, nothing can be so poverty-stricken as to have no one to trouble about, no one to love or live for, no one to love you."

"It is, then, very unfortunate for a person of your disposition to have lost your home," remarked Mrs. Saville, coldly.

"It is sad enough; but I have been fortunate in finding friends like Mr. Rawson and his daughter. It is better, too, to believe that there is some pleasant sheltered nook round the next turn of the road than always to look for sandy deserts. Loneliness is the worst evil of all: it is what I fear most."

Mrs. Saville did not answer immediately; then she said, abruptly, "What is your name—your Christian name?"

"My name? Hope Desmond."

"I thought so. It is very appropriate. You have given me a curious mental picture. I suppose it is true, though it is incomprehensible to me, but you give me the idea of being sensible and accurate." Do you not feel that your life has been lost, fruitless, passed as it has been in this constant struggle?"

"No," cried Hope, her dark eyes lighting, and lifting her head with an unconscious but dignified movement. "It has had much sweetness, and I have been of some use. Though I am not clever, I have done what I could; and that will always comfort me. I do not fear the future. Work will come to me. I would not change with any one. I prefer to remain the 'me' that I am."

"You are an unusual specimen, Miss Desmond, and really a profound philosopher; yet you have refinement and taste, age, and culture enough, to enable you to enjoy beauty and elegance, literature and art. I congratulate you; only, if every one was as easily pleased the world would stand still."

"Perhaps so," said Hope Desmond, with a sigh. "I can only see life according to my lights."

Then, after some minutes' silence, she observed how prettily the smoke curled up from among the trees down in the hollow.

"Yes," said Mrs. Saville, "I suppose Lord Castleton has arrived. Inglefield Court belongs to him. It is an older and much damper place than this. I must call to-morrow." She heaved a deep sigh as she spoke. "Miss Deane is one of the fortunate ones according to my estimate. She is her father's sole heiress, and takes the title, too, when she succeeds him. She is pretty, rather accomplished, and decidedly popular. I used to see a good deal of her at one time; now—"

She paused and frowned, then, rising, she said, peremptorily, "Come, I feel rheumatic. I have sat here too long."

Few words passed between the companions till almost at the gate which opened from Mrs. Saville's grounds on a foot-path which crossed the vicarage fields, when that lady said, suddenly: "I expect my son to-morrow."

"Your eldest son?"

"I have but one son," returned Mrs. Saville, fully.

DIAMOND MAKER'S SECRET.

Lemoine's Latest Account of His Process Given in Court. Henri Lemoine, the pretended diamond maker, told what he said was his secret in court, yesterday, at his trial on a charge of swindling, says a Paris letter to the New York Sun. An unfeeling court smiled at him, but he acted as if he fully felt the gravity of the situation.

"I am sounding the death knell of the diamond, and I appeal not to justice but to science," he said.

Then he took a pencil and drew plans of his electric furnace and his crucible, so that the court might follow his explanations.

The furnace is composed of three concentric cylinders fitting into one another, the exterior cylinder of wrought iron, the second of compressed fireproof porcelain. The electrodes are introduced into the cylinder by two openings at the ends so that the arc is exactly in the center of the apparatus.

The crucible is the real triumph of Lemoine, he declares. He carefully drew for the judge and described it as a cylinder made of iron with a double cover of lead affixed in a melted state. Into it he puts chemically pure iron filings, carbon of sugar and mercury. It is to the use of mercury that Lemoine attributes his success as compared with Prof. Moissan in making diamonds.

When the crucible is placed in the furnace the electric current must be turned on progressively in such a way as to melt the lead covers. Then as the arc forms the current should be increased, until the limit of internal pressure is reached, owing to the boiling of the mercury. This point attained, the current must be maintained for several hours. The carbon is thereby dissolved at a very high pressure and under the necessary temperature.

"I believe," added Lemoine, in his most impressive tones, "that the size of the crystals formed is in proportion to the length of the firing. To cool the materials, merely cut the current off and let them cool by themselves."

Lemoine explained that he had studied the experiments of Laetichling and of Moissan with great care and had discovered that the reason why Moissan had only succeeded in obtaining extremely minute crystals was that he had not been able to keep his materials at a very high temperature and a pressure of 2,000 atmospheres for a sufficiently long time. By the use of mercury Lemoine said he produced an internal pressure analogous to that produced by nature in the mines.

"To-morrow probably my invention will be likened to Columbus' egg," he concluded. "Everybody will be ready to say he could have found it out himself; many will say I have copied my process from theirs. However, that may be. I am sure of its value, and I regret that I have been compelled to reveal it to-day."

Lemoine, who is a consummate actor, sat down with the air of a man deeply wronged by a hard world.

The court adjourned the case till June 14 at the request of Maitre Labori, Lemoine's advocate. Presumably Lemoine wishes to give science plenty of time to test his secret.

We have no business whatever with the ends of things, but only with their being.—Ruskin.

WOMEN AND FASHION

Entertaining Quietly.

"These people who entertain all the time in a cheap way make me sick," said a young housekeeper discussing an inexpensive puzzle party a friend had given. "How much smarter Margery's affairs would be if she gave one stunning lunch or dinner a season? It would save her lots of trouble, too."

Ideas like these are the deathblow to hospitality and sociability. Women who cannot give handsome dinners and luncheons give nothing. They limit their entertaining and are burdened by a weight of unpaid social obligations because they cannot have as fine linen or china as wealthier friends.

The power to entertain handsomely is enviable; even more to be envied is the gift of entertaining charmingly but simply. Girls at home and young married women who possess this knack are never lacking in popularity. It is a pleasant thing to welcome one's friends, but when their coming means a splurge that can be ill-forded entertaining misses its purpose.

We need to get back to the simpler ways when having a few guests to dinner did not mean a caterer, several extra waiters and swelled bills. There are brides who pine to show off their dainty gifts of silver and china, who yet keep their pretty things packed away waiting for the time when they can give a costly enough meal to be in keeping. How more than foolish! There are many ways in which young people can entertain at little cost. Eliminate expensive refreshments and costly prizes. These are the things that run into money. What is needed is courage not to do as the rest of your set does.

To Freshen Flowers.

If cut flowers from the florist's or garden are placed as soon as possible in cold water in which a little mild soap has been dissolved, making suds, they will keep fresh much longer than usual, and will even freshen up wonderfully if they have already drooped. Also, if one wishes to keep roses in bud for some time, a soft thread should be tied snugly around the bud, and when ready for use, even though several days after picking, the rose will be found as snug a bud as when first tied up, and, moreover, will not shatter as soon as ordinarily—Woman's Home Companion.

To Decrease Height.

When standing or walking the effect of tallness may be decreased by a slight droop of the head. To allow the head to hang is extreme and accomplishes nothing beyond an unpleasant appearance, while the tiniest droop can do wonders. There should be no stooping of the shoulders, however, for this will ruin the figure and make the girl most awkward. She should hold herself erect, though not stiffly so. Marvels may be done in taking off inches by the manner of hair dressing.

Law of Attraction.

The attractions of men to women and women to men are full of the most perplexing inconsistencies and contradictions imaginable. It is, for instance, a physical law that magnetism is not simple attraction of one thing for another, but the difference of two opposing forces of attraction and repulsion, of which the former is the greater. The same law holds in relation to the attraction of men and women for each other.

Stylish Foulard Gown.

Dotted wistaria satin foulard was used to make the gown from which this model was sketched. Plain satin-covered buttons are elaborately used for decoration, and the Empire waist line is defined by a band of velvet (several shades darker than ground of material) attached in front at bust line by two huge amethyst buttons. Chemise and stock are white Irish crochet lace.

How to Open a Book.

Hold the book with its back on a smooth or covered table; let the front board down, then the other, holding the leaves at the back, then a few at the front, and so on, alternately opening the back and front, gently pressing open the sections till you reach the center of the volume. Do this two or three times and you will obtain the best results. Open the volume violently or carelessly in any one place and you will likely break the back and cause a start in the leaves. Never force the back of the book.

The double row of braiding down each side and across bottom of tunic is done in dark grape soutache. The round chemise and stock of tuckered white silk mousseline is outlined by a wide band of self-tone passementerie. Double bands of same trim the bottom of tucked front bodice, just above the unique girdle of Empire waist.

Should Train Their Nerves.

We hear women talk of "nerves!" as though they looked upon them as their greatest foes. All the physical pleasures of life are brought to us through our nerves, and even the higher joys of the intellectual and the spiritual life we become aware of only through the medium of feeling, and for this reason alone it behooves one to keep one's nerves in a normal, healthful and responsive condition.

The fact that the nervous system is amenable to training and that its habits can be unerringly cultivated at one's own will, and under one's own direction, or with outside assistance is necessary, is a fact of growing importance. This is so because the recent work of scientific men is showing us to what a minute degree nerve habits can be controlled and also because especially in America, our climate and our modern civilization are making greater demands upon nervous force and contribute to the unconscious formation of detrimental nervous habits.

The time has come, prophesied by Mr. Gilman's "neolithic man":

We're going to wear great piles of stuff
Outside our natural skins,
We're going to have diseases
And accomplishments and sins.

Worry, ill temper, haste, laziness, overwork, selfishness, egotism and distrust are in many cases bad habits of the nerves.—Anna Sturges Duryea in the Delineator.

Women Who Do Things.

Miss Anna Pritchett, of Louisville, only 24 years old, is professor of economics at Wellesley College. Miss Margaret Ashton, sister-in-law of Ambassador Bryce, has been elected to the town council of her native place in England. Miss Zella Nuttall, of Chicago, is field director of the Red-Crocker expedition in Mexico. Mme. Louise Bianco and Mme. Jeanne Menard are regular ship physicians on two of the largest Mediterranean steamships.

Beauty's Mar.

The forehead filled with lines is not always a sign of years. Often it is nothing but evidence of bad facial habits. Do you knit your eyebrows when you are thinking of perplexing matters or are down on your luck? If you do you will have a forehead seamed with lines and several deep furrows between the eyes.

A Sad Disappointment. Mrs. Gould gets $36,000 a year in money, and she insisted on the standard that no lady in her position could dress becomingly on less than $46,000 a year. So she's short $10,000 a year alone, not to speak of hotel, carriage and touring expenses. Evidently this unhappy woman is doomed to a life of self-denial. What she wanted was $260,000 a year.

Hot Search for a Shovel. "Lady, I'm de gent you hired ter clean your snow off last winter!" "But, my dear man, it's summer now, and the snow is all gone." "I know, lady; but it's took me all dis time ter borrow a shovel."

Poetry, Fess and Truth. "If I should die, and at my death some friend should come and stand above me—should whisper with his sobbing breath how very much he's come to love me—if he should weep and wring his hands and wail that I had acted fairly—should say that ever from the stands he's boasted me for doing squarely; if he should say that I was right in giving out some close decision against the home team in a fight when he had never cursed my vision; if he should whisper in his grief, 'Old boy, I know that you were straight—I never called you a top-crated thief; nor swore you were a pirated mate; I never clamored for a rope when your decisions looked quite sticky; nor have I yet expressed the hope you'd go where snowballs vanish quickly; I cheered each time you acted well, as thou you were a human being—nor daily gave you merry h— for accidents beyond my seeing; I always thought you did your best, and so no side advice I proffered—I think you fairly met the test whenever the occasion offered.' If these were but the words he said, I'd rise up in my white cravat—it were not enough to wake the dead to get a sudden shock like that—I'd rise up in my coat of white and look around a bit, and then, if I found that I'd heard aright, I'd drop back dead again."—Grantland Rice.

Memories of the War

The Soldier Tramp.

Scene—a city police court.

"Ter honor, I please guilty; I'm a bum—

I don't deny the cop here found me drunk;

I don't deny that through the whole long summer,

The sun-warmed earth has been my only bunk.

I didn't been able fur to earn a bit;

A man with one leg planted in the bit;

Can't get a job—an' I've a strong mis-giving;

'Tont been' cooped up in a Soldier's Home;

"What did I lose my leg?" At Spott's name—

Perhaps you've read about the bloody fight;

But then I guess the story won't re-strictly

From 'em' what the law sets down as right.

I'm not a vag through choice, but through misfortune;

An' as for drink—well, all men have their faults;

But Judge, I guess I've had my lawful portion

Of rough experience in prison vaults.

I served as private in the Tenth New Jersey.

An' all the boys'll say I done what's right;

That ain't a man can say that Abram Bursy

War never found a-shirking in a fight.

Right in the hell-born, frightful roar of battle,

When shot an' shell shrieked thro' the darkness wood,

Sighin' requies in their fierce an' deadly rattle,

You'd always find me doin' the best I could.

"We had a brave o' feller for a Colonel—

We called him 'Sweetie,' but his name was Sweet;

Why Judge, I saw it, by the Great Eternal!

That brave o' cuss'd rather fight than out.

An' you could affus bet your bottom dollar

In battle 'Sweetie'd never hunt a tree, He'd affus push into the front an' holler:

"Brace up, my gallant boys, an' follow me!"

"Well, jest afore the Spottsylvania battle,

Of 'Sweetie' cum to me an' says, says 'Tont let you, Abe, 'tain't many things'll rattle.

I tell you, Abe, 'tain't many things'll rattle.

A tough o'ld weather-beaten cuss like me;

But in my very soul I've got a feelin' That 'I'm goin' to get a dose to-day.

"'Tain't no use fur me to be con-siderin' The fish thoughts that in my bosom fly.

'Fur many years you've been my neighbor, Bursy,

An' they allus found you squar an' true—

Look in our little town in old New Jersey

No one has got a better name than you.

An' 'bout you want yer promise, squarly given.

That if our cause to-day demands my life,

An' you yourself are left among the livin'.

You'll take me back an' lay me by my wife."

"Well, Judge, that day, amid the most infernal

An' desperate bloody fight I ever seed,

Way down in front I saw the daring Colonel

Throw up his hands an' tumble off his steed.

In half a minute I was bendin' o'er him,

An' sez to him that he was not killed out-right.

I loded him up on my back an' bore him

Some little distance back out of the fight.

"The blood from out a ghastly wound was flowin'.

An' so I snatched the shirt from off my back,

For I could see the brave old cuss war goin'.

To die, unless I held the red tide back.

An' 'bout soon I seed he was revivin';

An' heard him whisper: 'Abe, you've saved my life.

Your o' wood shirt, along with your comin'.

Has kept me from that grave beside my wife."

"Well, Judge, while I stood beside him, schemin'.

On how to get him in a doctor's care,

A ten-pound shell toward us came a-screamin'.

Just like a ravin' demon in the air,

An' when it passed I found myself a-lyin'.

Across o' 'Sweetie's body, an' I see That 'tarnal shell, that by us went a-lyin'.

Had tuck my leg along fur company.

"Well, Judge, that's all; 'cept when the war was over

I found myself a cripple, an' since then

I've been a sort of reckless, worthless rover,

But jest as honest as the most o' 'em.

Never stole a dime from livin' mortal,

Never harmed a woman, child, or man—

I've simply been a bum, and hope the Court'll

Be jest as easy on me as it can."

Then spake the Judge: "Such helpless, worthless creatures

Should never be allowed to bum and beg;

Your case, it is true, has some redeeming features,

For in your country's cause you lost a leg.

And yet I feel the world needs an ex-ample

To check the tendency of men to roam;

The sentence is, That all your life—your camp!"

Be the best room in my humble home."

The soldier stared! Dumb! Silent as a statue!

Then, in a voice of trembling pathos, said:

"Judge, turn your head and give me one look at you—

That voice is like an echo from the dead!"

Then forward flung he, grimy hand extended.

While tears adown his sun-browned cheeks old roll,

And said, with slang and pathos strangely blended:

"Why, Colonel Sweetie, turn your head o' your soul!"

—Dan Santiago Carolina.

A Good Strainer Is Necessary.

Dirt-carrying bacteria once in the milk has done its harm, and no number of strainers of any kind yet invented can take out the pernicious germs. The best strainer for the average dairyman is a metal vessel, as shown in the cut, with a wire screen of 100 wires to the inch.

On the Potomac.

During the retreat of Gen. Early's army from Maryland after the battle of Fort Stephens, my regiment, the One Hundred and Twenty-second New York, was detailed to support a section of artillery sent in advance of a Gen. Wright's command, which was in hot pursuit. The opportune arrival of the Sixth and Ninth Army corps in Washington had defeated the plans of the rebel army to seize and destroy that place, and after a spirited engagement upon its outskirts they hastily withdrew towards the dividing line between Union and Secession, viz. the Potomac.

We pushed on rapidly until the heights north of the river were reached, and then halted. The artillery went into position, and after stacking arms, we rushed out to the brow of the hill to see, if possible, some traces of the retreating enemy. We had a splendid view of the country southward and westward. But the enemy appeared in the distance, in the form of Imboden's cavalry only.

While we stood looking off across the country we noticed the attention of the artillery officers was riveted upon a clump of small trees just across the river below us. For some time field glasses were leveled at the little grove, and then came the order to "man the guns."

In a few moments one of the pieces sent a shell screaming across the water, and a puff of smoke sent out from the bursting shell revealed its destination.

What the artillerymen saw objectionable in that little clump of bushes we could not at first perceive. But when a Confederate cavalryman dashed out of there and galloped away toward the distant woodland the mystery was explained. Another shell started eleven more. The whole party took refuge behind an old barn. From that point they commenced their retreat toward the timber, one at a time.

One, two, three, and so they went, until only one remained. "Give it to him, boys!" shouted the captain of the battery as the last lone Johnny made his appearance beyond the barn and began his race for cover.

Bang! bang! went the pieces, and away flew the shrieking messengers of death in pursuit of that poor rebel. We watched closely the retreating form, and as a cloud of dust arose behind and a puff of smoke just in advance of it, we felt certain that the Confederacy had one less soldier fit for duty. Imagine our surprise when we beheld him emerge from the surrounding dust and smoke apparently unharmed and dart away into the forest. "Go it, Johnny!" "Git thar!" and like expressions were shouted from the hilltop, and as he disappeared behind the timber a wild cheer went up from a thousand Union throats.—American Tribune.

Truck Patch and Orchard.

When one of our Western farmers goes down East, he is impressed with the fact that the truck patch, the orchard, the poultry yard and the dairy are relatively of vastly greater importance than in this country where broad fields of grain, alfalfa, spuds and sugar beets are in fashion and big bunches of beef cattle enliven the landscape. The great cities, some of them containing more people than the entire State of Colorado, must be fed from the farms. The products of the West are mainly such as may be readily transported over long distances. But milk, vegetables and small fruits are better, as well as cheaper, if produced near the place of consumption and this line of agriculture has from the exigency of things become the industry of Eastern farmers.—Field and Farm.

Starting Indians as Farmers.

The Cheyenne River Agency will be busy for some time to come, as the distribution of live stock to Indians has commenced. To each head of a family is to be given twenty-three head of 2-year-old heifers, or in case he so desires a team of mares, a wagon and harness, agricultural implements, five cows and $50 in cash, says the Pierre correspondent of the St. Paul Dispatch.

This distribution means that to any of the Indians who desire will be given a start of about $1,000 in value either toward starting a herd of cattle or beginning farming operations without any expense.

Thorough Cultivation.

If the ground is cultivated often enough no weeds can grow, and if the ground for a crop is carefully prepared before putting in the seed, by deep plowing and frequent harrowing, the cultivation required after the plants are up need not be more than 1 inch deep. If this is done after every rain there can be no weeds, and while the cultivation will prevent loss of moisture in the soil by affording a loose covering of dry earth.

Feeding Manure to Plants.

Our people are perfectly satisfied that they can put character into milk and cream and butter by feeding the dairy cow a properly balanced ration and all that she will properly stand. The cow is simply a machine, the soil is simply a machine, and the cabbage head is a machine into which we can put a certain amount of material and turn out from it so many dollars. If you feed this vegetable matter, with high-grade nitrogenous manure you can make it pay.

Acidity and Better Flavor.

It has been a generally accepted theory among teachers of and writers on dairy subjects that the production of good butter necessitates the development of a certain amount of acid in the cream, for two reasons, to develop a desirable flavor and to improve the keeping quality. Recent investigations by the United States Department of Agriculture indicate, however, that "milk made from Pasteurized sweet cream has better keeping qualities and remains free from objectionable flavors for a longer time than butter made from sour cream. If these facts are established it might seem that in the years to come only sweet cream would be bought for butter making.

Commercial Egg Farm.

The production of market eggs is probably the safest branch of the poultry business, and the amount of capital invested need not be very large. In the New England States, New York and New Jersey there are many commercial egg farms, keeping from 500 to several thousand hens. The farmers, too, in this section of the country keep large flocks for eggs for the Eastern markets, and all seem to be doing well and making money. What we need in the South is more egg farms. Lands are cheap, material for housing and labor cheap, and, again, it is not necessary in the South to build such expensive houses. We have every advantage in the Southland for producing eggs at a less cost than our Northern brothers, and with quick and satisfactory railroad facilities to the Eastern markets the South should become the greatest poultry producing section of the entire country.

Other branches of the poultry industry may pay better than egg farming, but none are attended with so little worry and risk and are so certain of steady returns and a fair remuneration for the time and money expended.

Early Plowing Always Best.

Last summer we got a field of wheat stubble about half plowed, when other work called us away. The remaining stubble was turned under early this spring, and the whole field planted to corn. The corn on last summer's plowing is now several inches taller than that on the land plowed this spring, and is ranker and better in every other way.

There is a difference between summer and fall plowing, the difference being in favor of the summer plowing. Turning a green growth into the soil seems to be very much better than turning an equal growth under, but waiting until it has matured and dried before doing it. Here on this farm we aim to do all the plowing possible this summer. It may be hot work but the days are long and one does not need to hurry the teams. Not only is it better to get the work done as soon as possible for any crop to be sown this fall, but our experience proves to us that the earlier the better if corn is to be the next crop.—Farmer's Mail and Breeze.

A Hog Shelter.

The form of individual hoghouse shown in the illustration is 6 feet square on the ground and both doors are hinged so they will open and close readily; 12 foot boards make the side and roof. Use good soft pine flooring.

ing, as it is lighter and much easier to move when necessary than heavier lumber; four pieces 2x4 inch and 6 feet long are for sills; two pieces 2x4 inch and 6 feet long are for ridge and plate. The door in the roof can be opened when the sun shines. Sunshine is the best tonic known for little pigs in early spring, and the door is essential when the sow needs attention at pigging time as a means of entrance and, as is sometimes the case, a very hasty exit.—Breeders' Gazette.

Dairy Notes.

Butter methods are gradually gaining favor.

Working to the best advantage means using brains.

Cold and overfeeding will kill the young calf more quickly than anything else.

Don't try to keep a cow for milk and beef. She will disappoint you every time.

The man with a "dual purpose" dream usually wakes up to find that he is in the beef business.

It's just about as hard to get a good heifer out of a scrub as it is to make water run up hill.

The creamery patron has his monthly cream checks while the other fellow has the store bill.

Every hand separator is built to take care of a certain amount of milk. Don't feed it above capacity.

The best way to insure high prices for dairy products is to make them so good that the people can't help eating them.

The ordinary man may be judged by the company he keeps, but the dairy farmer is judged by the cows he keeps.

The manure spreader will help you to better returns from your dairy herd because it will make the manure more valuable to the land.

Don't sell a good cow because the other fellow offers a big price for her. She is worth just as much to you as she can possibly be to him.

There's a close relation between the type of a cow and her performance, but it is no more marked than the relation between the type of her owner and what he does in the dairy business.

CHILD HAD SIXTY BOILS

And Suffered Annually with a Red Scald-Like Humor on Her Head—Troubles Cured by Cuticura.

"When my little Vivian was about six months old her head broke out in boils. She had about sixty in all and I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which cured her entirely. Some time later a humor broke out behind her ears and spread up on to her head until it was nearly half covered. The humor looked like a scald, very red with a sticky, clear fluid coming from it. This occurred every spring. I always used Cuticura Soap and Ointment which never failed to heal it up. The last time it broke out it became so bad that I was discouraged. But I continued the use of Cuticura Soap/Ointment and Resolvent until she was well and has never been troubled in the last two years. Mrs. M. A. A Vigorous Critic.

Ruskin was always hot on the trail of immature critics, but he seems to have gone beyond himself on a certain occasion, when Chambers' Journal records, when he threw a large quarto at A. Stodart Walker's head because he had dared question the artistic excellence, in the matter of proportion, of Michelangelo's "Moses" in Rome.

After the throwing was over, Ruskin asked:

"How often have you seen it?"

"Oh, half a dozen times," Stodart Walker answered, confidently.

"Good heavens!" Ruskin cried. "No man should dare to give an opinion on any work of art unless he has seen it every day for six months!" adding, after a pause, "and even then" he should hold his tongue if he has used his eyes as you seem to have used them."

Danger in Eye Punctures.

Do not puncture an eye in any circumstances whatever. Binding a wet application over the eye for several hours must damage that eye, the absorption of those professing to have personal experience in this to the contrary notwithstanding. The failure to recognize an existing trouble by blind use of a moist application over an inflamed eye, which application is supposed to remain for an entire night, can only be explained by the supposition that a guardian angel has watched over that misguided case and has displaced the poultice before it had got in its fine work. All oculists condemn the poultice absolutely, in every shape and in every form. Tea leaves, bread and milk, raw oysters, scraped beef, scrape raw turnip or raw potato and the medley of other similar remedies popularly recommended are one and all capable of producing irreparable damage to the integrity of the tissues of the visual organ.—Family Doctor.

The Point of View.

"This man is not insane," said the lawyer, "and never has been. To keep him in an asylum is a blow, sir, directed against human rights, an assault upon the sacred institution of liberty."

"But did you not prove last week, when he was on trial for murder, that he had been born with a raving mania?" interposed the court.

The lawyer smiled in a superior way. "Surely," he said, "your honor would not have believed that this court is on the intellectual plane of that jury."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Contagious Nuisance.

Intemperance may be a nuisance rather than a form of fattery. A writer in the Outlook tells of an incident in a park which is as amusing as it is probable. The teller was asked by a woman for a new envelope for her bank-book. It was passed out, and the lady behind, noting that her own envelope was a trifle dirty, also asked for a fresh one.

The third woman said, "Me, too," or words to that effect, and so it went down the line. When the teller's patience and his stock of envelopes threatened to give out, he determined to call a halt.

A fashionably dressed lady appeared at the window, holding out a perfectly gloved hand.

"I should like one, too, please," said she.

"One what, madam?" asked the teller.

The lady flushed and began to look comical.

"Why," she stammered, "what the other ladies had."

THIS AND THAT

Although wheat has dropped from $1.28 in July to 97 cents for September, has anyone noticed any drop in the price of flour?

The more time you spend in attending to your own business the less time you will have to attend to that of other people.

If we do not have full dinner pails this fall and winter it will not be the fault of the farmers. They have done their full share to produce it.

Twenty-eight million of the new Lincoln pennies have already been coined and 14,000,000 are in circulation, and coinage has been stopped until further notice.

It used to be thought that only the very rich could own automobiles but now in these days of republican misrule and tariff revision even the land renters in Nebraska are buying them.

Over in Java they have organized a company with $10,000 capital to deal in snake skins. That must be a delightful line of business, in catching, skinning, tanning and handling the goods.

Most of the pastors and many of the wealthy church members find it convenient to take a month or more vacation during the hot weather. Vice and iniquity never take a summer outing.

Andrew Carnegie says that Norfolk can have $10,000 of his money toward a public library, but no more. The town tried to squeeze an extra $1,000 out of the iron magnate, thus showing their greed.

President Taft has outlined his fall tour of this country. It will embrace 13,000 miles. He will start from Boston on September 15, his 52nd birthday, and will get back to Washington, D. C., on the night of November 10.

This weather may be very good for the Nebraska corn crop, and it is, yet we are inclined to complain of the excessive heat. Have you ever stopped to think what it must be in the crowded tenement houses? We ought to give thanks every day that we can enjoy the free air of Nebraska's prairies.

Women continue to invade all the field of active sport as well as business. At the base ball tournament at Randolph today and tomorrow they are to have a lady umpire. That she has the ability to knock the stuffing out of anyone who may dispute her decisions is shown by the fact that she has a record of throwing a baseball 229 feet.

John O. Yeiser, who is a candidate for a seat on the state supreme court bench, says: "But if elected, I want it clearly understood that I would not violate my oath of office to render a corrupt decision to destroy the business of a brewery or step out of my position as a supreme judge to become a mere politician to influence the passage of any law. I would attend to the duties of the judicial branch of government and simply sustain the laws constitutionally passed, whether they are wet or dry, daylight or dark, local option or state-wide." Any man who would do less than that is not worthy to be elevated to that position.

If you have a looking glass in your kitchen do not set it where the reflections of the sun's rays will fall on your gasoline stove, or you may have an explosion. A fire was caused in a Nebraska town one day the past week from this cause. The reflected rays became so hot that they ignited the gasoline in the tank.

Some papers and people seem to get the idea that every state or national official, or public speaker is a little tin god and that they can possibly do no wrong nor make a statement that is untrue or different than they may have intended to say it, and therefore no one has a right to criticize anything they may say or do. We are no hero worshiper and believe that so-called great men can do and say things that are open to lawful criticism as well as those in more humble walks in life, and a misstatement is a misstatement whether it is made by the governor of a state or some platform lecturer.

Lost a Hand

H. A. Mafens, who lives three miles northwest of Randolph, transferred here Wednesday morning on his way to Sioux City to have his left hand amputated, the result of an accidental gunshot wound. For some time Mr. Mafens has suspected that someone has been poisoning his hogs, as they have been dying from some cause indicating poison. Tuesday night, hearing suspicious noises in the vicinity of his hog pens, he got up to investigate and thought he detected the form of a man moving around. He reached for his shotgun with a view to going out and investigating and in some manner the trigger caught on some object, and the discharge of the gun gave him the full load in his left hand and wrist, tearing it so badly that amputation was necessary. Dr. Kerley was called, but demed it best for his patient that he go to Sioux City and accompanied him there. Mr. Mafens is a man past middle life and the accident is a bad one for him, but he was in good spirits over it. He has strong suspicions of the scoundrel who has been causing him loss in the death of his hogs, and it is too bad that he could not have winged the foul bird in his flight.

Fire Alarm

Just about six o'clock Wednesday evening, as every one was thinking about supper, the fire bell gave notice that the services of the fire ladders was needed somewhere. The fire was ascertained to be at the residence of Dr. Eells. The run was a long, hot one, and when the hose carts got there it was found they were not needed, the fire being out before their arrival. A freaky gasoline stove was the cause of the alarm. Mrs. Eells had it well generated and her supper partly prepared when the flames suddenly shot out into the room, nearly enveloping her in the flames. She was not much alarmed thinking it was only a momentary outburst, but when the flames continued to pour out uncontrolled and the window casing and other wood work began to catch on fire she realized something had to be done to prevent an explosion and so gave the alarm. A small window directly back of the stove and over it was broken out by some of the neighbors and a few pails of water put the refractory stove out of business in short order. The damage was only slight.

Old Settlers Will Meet

It is said that coming events cast their shadows before. Some of them may do so and some do not, but at any rate the Wayne County Old Settlers reunion will be held this year on the court house square in Wayne on the 26th of August, two weeks from today. These gatherings are of especial interest and value to every old settler in the county as they can come together and recount the privations and pleasures of pioneer days and tell of work well done to make this county blossom like a rose. A good program is being arranged, which will be published next week. Plan to take a day's outing, spend it in the best town in this part of the state, and have the best time of your lives with the old settlers and their families.

Do Much Damage

Considerable damage is being done to telephone, telegraph and electric light poles by members of the woodpecker family. These birds originally built their homes in the dead or dying trunks or limbs of trees, but for some reason best known to themselves, have come to the conclusion that the peeled pole offers better conditions for a home. They have become so ravenous of late that their depredations are attracting considerable attention among those who are compelled to use quantities of wooden poles. Their activities spread over a wide portion of the United States, notably in the South, Southwest and Central West. Cedar poles seem to be the ones most frequently attacked. The birds bore into them at any height from the ground and the holes that they make are often two or three inches in diameter and four or five inches deep. Such an amount of wood drilled from a stick of timber which is carrying a load of wires naturally weakens the strength of the line.

Adams Evangelistic Company at Opera House

Last Sunday evening the Adams Evangelistic Co. received a splendid and attentive audience. A forty minute sacred concert was rendered preceding the sermon delivered by the Evangelist on "God's Great Salvation." The verdict of those present was one of satisfaction and delight. These people surely know how to present music with all its sweetness and effect.

Next Sunday will be another great day. At 11 A. M. and 3 P. M. services will be held, also at 8 P. M. another 40 minute sacred concert will be given preceding a short, crisp sermon. If you did not hear these people last Sunday you have another opportunity on Sunday next.

This Company represents the Church of Christ (Disciples) and expect in a short time to organize and establish their work here permanently. They will also erect a building and locate a minister who will take charge of the work in a short time. All disciples are requested to make themselves known to the Evangelistic Co. either by postal card or their presence at the opera house.

Services will continue every night next week commencing at 8 o'clock prompt. Hear the music. It is worth your while.

New Fire Laws

The following laws passed by the last legislature has been sent to fire departments:

We desire to call your attention to sections 2 and 6, House Roll 72, enacted by the last legislature of the State of Nebraska. This law became effective July 2.

Section 2. "The state fire commission and the chief of the fire department of every city or village in which a fire department is established, and the mayor of every incorporated village or town in which no fire department exists, shall investigate the cause, origin and circumstances of every fire occurring in such city or village, and the sheriff of each county, when requested by the property owner or anyone interested therein shall investigate the cause, origin and circumstances of every fire occurring in his county without the limits of any organized city or village therein, by which property has been destroyed or damaged, and shall especially make investigation as to whether such fire was the result of carelessness or design."

Such investigation shall be begun within two days, not including the Sunday after the occurrence of such fire, and the fire commissioner or his deputy shall have the right to supervise and direct such investigation whenever he deems it expedient or necessary. The officer making investigation of fires occurring in cities, villages, towns or counties shall forthwith notify said fire commissioner, and within one week of the occurrence of the fire, furnish to the said fire commissioner a written statement of all the facts relating to the cause and origin of the fire, and such other information as may be called for by the blanks provided by said fire commissioner. The state commissioner shall keep in his office a record of all fires which may be determined by the investigations provided by this act: such record shall at all times be open to the public inspection.

Sec. 6. "Any officer referred to in section two herein, who neglects to comply with any of the requirements of this act shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars."

The introduction of the automobile as a vehicle of general use will make it necessary for the traveling public to become familiar with another rule of the road. Automobiles very often have occasion to pass vehicles going in the same direction, whereas heretofore this has been a rather rare occurrence where they all used horses. The rule is that the automobilist, or any other vehicle passing another moving in the same direction, shall turn out to the left; the person passed should turn to the right, just the same as when meeting a vehicle. The rule is well established and should be adhered to as strictly as is the "turn to the right" rule in meeting teams. Turn to the right and let the automobilist pass you on your left.

Seriously Injured

A telegraph despatch was received here this morning conveying the intelligence that Del Strickland, one of well known residents, had been seriously if not fatally injured in a runaway accident at Lewiston, Idaho, yesterday. The doctor said Mr. Strickland had sustained concussion of the brain and other injuries and it was hard to tell what the outcome would be. Mrs. Strickland will start for that place on the afternoon train today and it is to be hoped that she may find the outlook better on her arrival than it seems to promise at this time.

Probably few persons except the tillers of the soil fully appreciate the abundance of Nebraska's crops and what it means for another year. Most people have only in mind the great wheat crop which has nearly been harvested and the promising condition of other maturing cereals. But what does it all mean for the next twelve months or more? Reports from over the state say that farmers are turning the new wheat crop into hard cash. A great portion of this, according to a stockman, will be spent in buying large herds of cattle to feed on the heavy alfalfa and prairie hay crop and the long, golden ears of corn to be husked next fall. The horizon never looked so bright for the farmer in Nebraska.

Takes His Life

West Point, Neb., Aug. 11.—Joseph Wachel, the 19-year-old son of Nicholas Wachel, a well known farmer living nine miles north of the city, committed suicide yesterday by blowing the top of his head off with a shotgun. The deceased had been sickly for some time and was partially crippled and it is believed that his condition caused him to become despondent and to take his life. His family are greatly respected in this community and much sympathy is expressed for them.

Threshing Has Begun

West Point, Neb., Aug. 11.—Harvest throughout this section is practically over and threshing has begun. Oats and winter wheat show a heavy yield, spring wheat much lighter. Corn was never better, to all appearance promising much more than an average yield. The weather for the past eight days has been highly favorable for all kinds of farm work and farmers are taking advantage of their opportunities. Business in town is almost suspended, every one available being in the country.

It's Worms That Kill Most Pigs

Watch your pigs. If any have a choking cough, do not grow, are gaunt, rough-haired, are belched, stiff-legged, pot-bellied, or have choking fits, you may be sure they are wormy. If any die, cut them open and examine the stomach and intestines for worms. Give the whole drove a thorough WORMITE treatment. It will do them a world of good even if they have no worms. Pen the smaller, weak and worst ones by themselves so they will get their share. The difference between WORMITE and similar preparations is the thorough manner in which it kills and expels ALL the worms and their nests.

The second game of ball with the Walthill Indians proved to be more disastrous for the home boys than the first one was. Indians 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Wayne 0 0 0 0 2 2 5 0—10
With only a fair sized attendance Wednesday afternoon at the ball park the Wayne boys put up the best game of the season on the home grounds, and with the exception of two or three costly errors, they played gilt edged ball throughout the game and were really entitled to win as they played better ball than the visitors. S., Frank Skeen left field, Reynolds center field, Whittier right field, Sabs pitcher, Blaine Skeen catcher, Fisher umpire. Time of game two hours and the score

PRIZES ARE DRAWN

UNCLE SAM CONDUCTS BIG LOTTERY AT COEUR D'ALENE.

Each of the 105,000 Persons Applying for Coeur d'Alene Lands Has One Chance in 332—Nearly 300,000 Names Listed.

Swarming around a great net covered case, hundreds of eager men and women waited Monday at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, for pretty little Helen Hamilton's eyes to be blinded that she might plunge her hands into a great heap of 105,000 yellow envelopes and draw out the names of the lucky man who had won the right to the first choice of all the 1,500 homesteads and timber lands on the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation.

On Thursday the drawings of winners among the 87,000 applicants for land in Montana's great Flathead reservation will start. Three days are allowed for this drawing. Next Monday morning drawings for the Spokane reservation will be held. Some rich prizes are to be distributed among those who names are first to appear.

RANCHMAN SAVES LIVES.

Tides Ahead of a Rushing Torrent and Shouts Warnings.

Damage resulting from the cloud-burst of Saturday and Sunday afternoons which sent a great wall of water roaring down Dry Creek through West Denver, Colo., proves more serious than at first estimated and will possibly reach $150,000. That no lives were lost Saturday night when a wall of water fifteen feet high rushed down the creek, was probably due to the coolness and bravery of W. R. Garren, a ranchman, who, when he saw the flood coming, mounted his horse and galloped along the stream shouting warnings to the people living nearby. Hundreds of people reached higher ground barely in time to escape the torrent.

CRIME NEAR DETROIT.

Mutilated Corpse Found in Clump of Underbrush.

The badly mutilated body of a woman in about 35 years of age was found in a clump of underbrush in Ham-jack, near Detroit, Mich., Sunday. The condition of the body indicates that the woman was assaulted and killed.

The body has not been identified. It was found by Justice of the Peace Munch, of Highland Park. It was lying on its back with the skirt carefully drawn over the face. The skull was crushed and the face and body were covered with bruises. The clothing was disarranged. A handkerchief, supposed to have belonged to the victim, was found several feet away. It was also her purse, which had been torn open, and nothing which might serve to identify the body left in it.

The ground for several yards about was torn up, and bits of flesh were in the finger nails of the woman, indicating that she made a valiant fight for her life before being overpowered. The clothing is of cheap material, but was neatly made.

NEGOTIATIONS HAVE FAILED.

Japan to Proceed with Antung-Mukden Line.

The negotiations between China and Japan for the construction by the Japanese of the Antung-Mukden railroad in accordance with the convention signed several years ago by Prince Ching, then the Chinese minister of foreign affairs, and Baron Komura, the Japanese foreign secretary, and which have been in progress at Mukden since 1907, have failed, owing to disputes between the contracting parties arising from the interpretation of the clauses in the convention providing for the pooling of the line.

Japan had formerly intimated to the Chinese her intention to proceed with the construction of the line within a time limit which Japan considered reasonable, regardless of China's objection. The entire railroad question, therefore, will be transferred from Mukden to Peking, and this made part of the whole China-Japanese question concerning Manchuria, the negotiations for the commencement of which were concluded July 27.

A dispatch from Tokyo says that Japan Friday officially notified the powers of her intention to proceed immediately with the reconstruction and improving the Antung-Mukden railroad without the consent of China, diplomatic negotiations having failed to overcome Chinese opposition.

The note outlines the entire course of negotiations relative to the improvement of the railroad up to the present. It declares that throughout the discussions China has had recourse to her well known policy of obstruction and procrastination, which has evaded the just and reasonable demands of Japan and raised collateral questions regarding police authority and other matters, thus delaying a settlement.

China's reply of June 24 is mentioned, and the note declares that Japan's rights under the treaty of 1905 were disregarded and the provisions of the treaty wholly nullified thereby.

TAFT TO COVER 13,000 MILES.

His Western Trip Will Be a Notable Journey.

President Taft left Washington late Friday afternoon for the summer capital at Beverly, Mass., and will not return to Washington until the middle of November next. Remaining at Beverly with his family until September 15, he will start west on that day on a tour that will embrace all but eight or ten states of the union and both of the territories in the far southwest.

Before his departure Taft made public a tentative outline of his trip through the west and south this fall. It will embrace a journey approximating 13,000 miles and will be one of the most notable ever made by a president. It will be as diverse as could well be imagined, and no "seeing all America" tour could be devised to embrace as many points of interest in so brief a space of time as President Taft will give to his tour to the Pacific coast and back through the south.

14,000 IN CASH IS TAKEN.

Trusted Bookkeeper in Bank Leaves Cleveland, O.

J. E. Alvord, secretary and treasurer of the Continental Trust and Savings Bank company, of Toledo, O., Saturday announced that $4,000 of the bank's cash is gone and also gave out the information that a trusted bookkeeper in the bank has been missing since July 28. No trace of the employee has been discovered since he left the bank the evening of July 28. According to Mr. Alvord, the teller had put on the time lock fifteen minutes after counting the money in the safe. The several packages of $5 and $10 bills are supposed to have been abstracted during the interim.

Packages of $1 and $2 bills similar in size, were substituted for those of bills of larger denomination, and the bands showing the larger amounts had been shifted to them.

The bookkeeper did not go home that night, and his wife telephoned to the bank the next morning. She disclaims all knowledge of his whereabouts. The books were all found to be in excellent shape. Mr. Alvord said. The loss was covered by a bonding company of Scranton, Pa.

PROTECTION FROM LIGHTNING.

Official of the Weather Bureau Tells How Rods May Be Put Up.

Prof. Henry, of the weather bureau, in a bulletin just issued, entitled "Cheap Protection from Lightning," declares more attention should be given the question in view of the fact that 500 to 800 people are killed and an immense amount of property destroyed by lightning every year. Prof. Henry shows how lightning rods that are "inexpensive yet effective" may be put up by everybody. The following is his list of necessary materials:

Harry Sanford, 16 years old, residing near Franklin, Pa., had his hair cut for the first time in his life. The shorn locks weighed more than a pound. His parents, proud of the luxuriance, refused to allow it to be cut, but he finally decided for himself. Until he was 8 years old Harry wore his hair loose about his shoulders, but of late years he has braided it and let it hang down under his coat.

The local union, which was formed originally with the aid and consent of the union, remained loyal as a body, although some of its members had been won over to the American organization. The company charges that the American labor leaders have sought to divert the Canadian local trade strikers' anger against the company into the mines and preparation made to prevent any forcible interruption of the work. Armed deputies were placed on guard.

FEAR TROUBLE IN THE FUTURE

Officials Take Every Precaution to Prevent Renewal of Outbreak.

Order now has been restored in every province in Spain. Barcelona has been calm for a few days and normal life has been resumed there.

The American minister in Madrid announced on Wednesday that all Americans in Barcelona or in the affected districts during the recent disorders are safe.

The officials at Barcelona are taking every precaution to prevent any outbreak in the future. The terrible repressive measures of the military authorities have left a deep and bitter current of resentment among the masses and fears are still entertained that the rebellion may flare up again in a new form.

GOTHAM HAS MOTH PEST.

Myriads of White and Brown Insects Again Sweep Over New York.

What appeared to be a heavy mid-winter snowstorm was really myriads of small white moths which again visited New York all Sunday night. Again the little pests swarmed into the brightly lighted hotels and restaurants and clouded the street lamps, but this time they were accompanied by millions of large brown moths, some of them five inches from tip to tip, and as these fluttered about the lights they looked like bats. A strange feature of these visitations which this summer are worse than ever before, and which the entomologists are trying to fathom, is what becomes of the moths at the break of day. With the first ray of daylight, they disappear, but no one has found where they go.

Free thinkers of all political parties in Portugal, represented by a liberal committee, presented to the cortes Tuesday a petition for the suppression of the religious orders in Portugal, and the abrogation of the laws against freedom of conscience. Senator Camacho moved the consideration of the subject. When the motion was voted down the galleries protested. On the floor of the House the deputies engaged in a struggle in which desks and chairs were overturned. Twice the chamber had to be cleared. The tumult was continued in the streets. Among other things the petitioners asked the abrogation of the law permitting religious associations to acquire landed property.

MOB TRIES TO LYNCH OFFICIAL.

Fury Is Brought On in City Council Over Politics.

The City Council of Indianapolis was virtually in the hands of a mob from 1 to 3 o'clock Tuesday morning and the feeling was so intense that the police had to be continually on guard to prevent violence. The situation was brought on by a combination of Democrats and Republicans, which had for its object, it is alleged, the appointment of primary election inspectors that would be favorable to N. W. Harding, Republican candidate for Mayor, and Charles B. Clark, Democratic candidate for the same office. Lew Shank is the opposing Republican candidate and Charles Gauss the opposing Democratic candidate.

Councilman Royce, a Harding man, slipped out of the chamber just as the vote was announced in Harding's favor and was pursued by a mob with cries of "Hang the scoundrel!" "Shoot the traitor!" and other denunciations. The mob pressed on his rear, and seeing no other means of escape Royce ran to the police station. Officers succeeded in protecting the trembling Councilman.

PARALYSIS CAUSED BY DUST.

Winona, Minn., Decides to Sprinkle to Destroy Germs.

Winona, Minn., is fighting an epidemic of infantile paralysis, which attacks children between the ages of 6 months and 10 years, and where it does not kill, leaves the victims helpless cripples. When efforts of the Board of Health failed to check the growing number of cases, the State authorities were called in. They said the disease germ is carried in the dust from the streets into susceptible organs of the children. The thirty or more cases are scattered throughout the outlying districts, which are not sprinkled. A special meeting of the Council was held and it was decided to sprinkle the entire city, alleys, streets and sidewalks in an effort to rid the city of the germs. There has been no rain in Winona for over a month.

Engineer Wade stopped the train within a few feet of the obstruction. It is said that the express car contained $250,000 in gold bullion, billed to New York City. A farmer named Chris Berger, found near the spot, was arrested. He pleads innocence, saying he was at the point to flag the train to get into Alliance for medical aid. Berger has a badly torn arm, caused, he says, by the accidental discharge of a shotgun.

It will require $375,000,000 to $400,000,000 to purchase these crops at present prices. No other statement is necessary to emphasize the prosperity that has come once more to the people of the Northwest.

Mayor Tom L. Johnson on Tuesday received the most severe defeat of his career in Cleveland when the Schmidt street railway grant was turned down at the referendum election by a majority of 3,763 votes after a campaign which has been the most bitter of recent years. The vote stood: For the grant, 31,022; against, 34,785.

The Schmidt grant provided for a 3 cent fare line on Payne avenue for a distance of two and one-half miles and was intended as the basis of a system that would absorb all the franchises of the Cleveland railway company as they expired next January and force a settlement of the eight years' fight on terms to suit Johnson. With the defeat of the Schmidt grant, the alternative evidently desired by the public is the so-called Taylor plan, suggested by Federal Judge Taylor, which provides that new grants shall be made to the Cleveland Railway Company on the basis of an income of 6 per cent to the stockholders at a fair valuation, the fare to be as low as this income will allow with good service on all lines.

Mayor Johnson early admitted his defeat and stated that the fight would go on even though he is beaten at the majority election in the fall. What move he will make next has not been announced.

TURK ULTIMATUM TO GREECE.

Porte Demands Declaration of Non-Interference in Cretan Affairs.

The Porte has sent a note to Greece demanding a formal declaration by that country of non-interference in Cretan affairs. In the event of a refusal to accede to the demand, Turkey will break off diplomatic relations with Greece.

Crete was evacuated by the international troops on July 26, and the following day the Greek flag was run up at the fortress and the militia barracks at Canea, the capital of the island. The Cretans lost no time in testing the disposition of the Powers, which had promised Turkey that they would protect the Porte's sovereignty. Since then there has been continuous unrest on the island. The Macedonian and Cretan situation is considered exceedingly grave in Washington.

Heavy damage resulted from a fierce storm of wind, rain, lightning and hail that swept over Western Pennsylvania, doing incalculable damage. TAFT PRAISES PAYNE BILL.

I have signed the Payne tariff bill because I believe it to be the result of sincere effort on the part of the Republican party to make a downward revision and to comply with the promises of the platform as they have been generally understood and as I interpreted them in the campaign before election.

This is not a perfect tariff bill, or a complete compliance with the promises made strictly interpreted, but a fulfillment free from criticism in respect to a subject matter involving many schedules and thousands of articles could not be expected. It suffices to say that, except with regard to whisky, liquors and wines, and in regard to silks and as to some high classes of cottons—all of which may be treated as luxuries and proper subjects of a revenue tariff—there have been very few increases in rates.

There have been a great number of real decreases in rates, and they constitute a sufficient amount to justify the statement that this bill is a substantial downward revision and a reduction of excessive rates. This is not a free trade bill. It was not intended to be. The Republican party did not promise to make a free trade bill.

The Philippine tariff section I have struggled to secure for ten years past, and it gratifies me exceedingly by my signature to give it the effect of law. I am sure it will greatly increase the trade between the two countries, and it will do much to build up the Philippines in a healthful prosperity.

The corporation tax is a just and equitable excise measure, which, it is hoped, will produce a sufficient amount to prevent a deficit and which incidentally will secure valuable statistics and information concerning the many corporations of the country, and will constitute an important step toward that degree of publicity and regulation which the tendency in corporate enterprises in the last twenty years has shown to be necessary.

Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 6, against 4 last week, 4 in 1908 and 4 in 1907.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade.

ALFALFA IN NEBRASKA

IS A VERY PROFITABLE CROP

Interesting Discussion of Ways and Means of Introducing New Hay Stuff Into This Section

The agricultural schools and experiment stations have been giving the study of alfalfa and its uses a thorough analysis, and, as our farmers are more or less interested in this matter we give space to the following deductions regarding this important adjunct to the Nebraska farmer and its certain to become one of the common crops of this State for the following reasons:

1. It can be successfully grown in all parts of the state.

2. It will yield in a single season from two to three times as much as clover and timothy.

3. It has a high feeding value.

4. It enriches the soil.

5. Alfalfa yields heavily. Three cuttings may be expected in this state in a single season, and frequently a fourth cutting.

The college has had marked success at all times when alfalfa was seeded at the right time of the year, and the ground properly prepared. The first cutting this year, made June 18, yielded on the average of 2.31 tons per acre. Not less than two more cuttings will be had this year. If alfalfa is properly seeded, the Nebraska farmer may depend upon from four to six tons of hay per acre annually.

All legumes have the property of taking free nitrogen from the air and transforming it into available plant food by means of organisms which grow upon the roots, forming tubercles. Alfalfa is especially valuable from this standpoint. Its roots contain a high percentage of nitrogen, which becomes readily available for the following crops when the alfalfa ground is broken up.

Except in special cases it is not desirable to keep alfalfa more than four or five years in one place, for the following reasons:

1. In this region alfalfa is at its best about the third or fourth year. After this it is very likely to deteriorate. This will not apply to the semi-arid regions. There the alfalfa, sending its roots deep down into the soil makes a good growth and manages to keep ahead of the weeds and grasses which will not thrive so well without the aid of sufficient surface water.

2. From the standpoint of rotation of crops it is not desirable to keep a field in alfalfa for more than four or five years. It will then furnish a piece of ground for the growing of corn, while another portion of the farm should have been prepared and seeded to alfalfa. Better results in each case may then be expected.

3. The small grain should either be threshed or hauled from the field and stacked as soon as the grain is ready in order that the ground may be plowed. By so doing the ground will, under ordinary conditions, collect ample moisture by August 10 so that the seed will germinate rapidly.

4. When ten acres or more are to be put into alfalfa it is often found quite difficult to prepare the ground as above stated and have it ready, at the proper time for seeding, due especially to the time it takes to scatter the manure. Very favorable results are being secured where the ground is prepared as stated above with the exception of adding the manure. Then put in the seed and wait until along in the winter when eight to ten manure-spreader loads of manure are added per acre in the way of a top dressing. Care should be taken that no more land be put into alfalfa than can be thoroughly manured, for only by so doing have we been able to secure the most favorable returns.

5. The best results may generally be expected from seeding in late summer. The term "fall seeding of alfalfa" is commonly used, but this is improper and misleading. It should be spoken of as late summer seeding. Alfalfa sown in the fall is very sure to meet with failure. It should be seeded not later than the 5th to 15th of August. If seeding takes place in the fall, the alfalfa plants will not have made sufficient growth to withstand the winter. Alfalfa should not be pastured the first season. The growth from seeding time until winter sets in should be six to eight inches, and should be left on the ground for winter protection. A nurse crop should not be used.

6. If alfalfa is to be sown in the spring it should be only in the northern parts of the state, and in this case desirable results have been secured by using a nurse crop. If oats are used at all they should be early oats. Wheat or barley is much better. They are not so likely to lodge. If the nurse crop is heavy, a poor stand of alfalfa is almost sure to follow. Not more than one-half the usual amount of grain should be sown to the acre. Better results may be expected if no nurse crop is used. In this case it will be necessary for the weeds to be mowed down two or three times during the summer so that the alfalfa will not be choked out. It is better to sow in the spring than late in the fall. Late summer seeding is the best.

7. The drill is much preferable to the putting of the seed in broadcast. Where the ground is thoroughly prepared, according to the directions, it will not be found necessary to harrow after the drill. When put in broadcast the ground should be harrowed. Twenty pounds of seed to the acre is recommended. It is best to sow one-half the seed first, then cross the field sowing the other half. By so doing the seed will be more evenly distributed and this is a very important factor as alfalfa does not spread out and take up all the ground as does blue grass, for example. Plants will be produced only on those spots where the seed is sown, so if the seed is sown unevenly there will always be an uneven stand.

8. As hay, alfalfa has no equal, but it must be cut and cured at the proper time. To delay means the hay will become woody and the leaves will shatter off. The following crop will also be injured. It should never be allowed to get into full bloom, but should be cut when from one-tenth to one-fourth of the plants are in bloom. This will generally be during the second or third week in June. The best time to mow for hay is in the latter part of the afternoon, then the sun will not wither up the leaves and transpiration can take place unimpeded. During the evening and night the leaves will throw off the moisture rapidly. Should there be a dew it will soon be lifted by the morning sun, then the alfalfa may be taken for a short time. Care must be taken not to shatter off the leaves. They are the most valuable part of the plant. Tedding will not do this until the moisture content is getting low. It will not be tedding should cease. It will be found that the hay can be hauled in much sooner with the use of the tedder, but it must be used judiciously. By handling the hay in this manner it may be cured in from 36 to 48 hours under favorable conditions. Never cut alfalfa when the dew is on.

9. When the alfalfa field is two years old it should be disced. The disc should be set but very little, the idea of discing being chiefly to split the crowns of the alfalfa plants that they may thicken up. Some weeds will also be destroyed in this process. Blight will sometimes attack alfalfa, especially in the humid regions when there has been an excessive amount of moisture. This will be noted by the leaves turning yellow and falling off, the lower ones being affected first. In this case the alfalfa should be cut at once. The next crop will come on immediately and will not necessarily be affected.

10. There is no other pasture equal to alfalfa for pasturing hogs. It keeps them in a healthy, growing condition and furnishes one of the most economical means of producing pork. One of the best ways to begin with alfalfa is to seed down a field intended for a good pasture. The ground must not be low and wet for alfalfa will not grow on wet land. It is adapted to almost any kind of soil, but kills out wherever water stands near the surface for any length of time.

11. Special care should be taken the first year. There is always a tendency to pasture too closely and especially in this so when a piece of alfalfa is used for pasturing sheep. They relish it greatly and if turned in, in too great a number, they will keep the alfalfa so closely picked that the plants cannot make proper root development, and will be greatly weakened or killed out entirely.

12. The production of alfalfa seed in the humid regions has not proved profitable. The semi-arid regions of the west are better suited for this purpose. Better results seem to be had from seed obtained from the eastern part of Kansas and Nebraska than from that obtained from the irrigated district.

13. Great care should be taken in the purchase of seed. Be sure that it is of good vitality and free from obnoxious weed seeds, some of which resemble the alfalfa very much.

14. ADVANTAGE OF ALFALFA

1. It yields from two to three times as much as clover and timothy and is more valuable hay.

2. It is rich in protein.

3. For hog pasture alfalfa has no equal.

4. It is superior to any other crop for enriching the soil.

5. Alfalfa fed in conjunction with corn will make the most economical gains.

METHODS TO BE EMPLOYED

1. To grow alfalfa, the ground must be put in good physical condition.

2. Add eight to ten loads of manure to the acre.

3. Late summer seeding gives the best results. (From 5th to 15th of August.)

4. The importance of a good seed bed cannot be too strongly emphasized.

5. Sow good seed.

6. Alfalfa must be cut promptly when ready.

Assessed Valuation

The total assessed valuation of the state, as reported by the county assessors, with the proposed changes by the State Board of Equalization, is $399,014,806. Last year the grand assessment roll was $398,930,683, but the board has already announced proposed changes to reach the larger figures and it is probable there will be one or two more changes, though it is not now believed it will be possible to increase the assessment to $400,000,000.

Wayne county shows an increase of $59,310 over that of 1908, and the counties that touch the borders of Wayne show the following increases: Cumming, $85,548; Dixon, $77,890; Cedar, $204,714; Pierce, $111,510; Madison, $112,452; Thurston $220,099; Stanton, $119,669.

Dixon Scorched

Dixon, a small town just northeast of the Wayne county border, is the last one to be nearly destroyed by fire which occurred last Friday night. Six buildings were destroyed as follows:

A furniture store.

The only saloon in town.

The only bank in town, owned by Mr. Rahn, of Newcastle.

A restaurant, in which the telephone office was located.

A meat market.

Lindell's general store.

A half block on the north side of the town was burned. There is no fire protection in the town, but citizens fought the flames valiantly.

It is presumed that the fire was started by a tramp who had been around the furniture store during the day. The fire was started in that store.

Wayne People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late

The appalling death-rate from kidney disease is due in most cases to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, gravel or some other form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidney at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they cure where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home:
