Present Opportunities For The Young Breeder

J. M. Coleman, one of the extensive swine breeders in this county, had a paper at the farmer's institute last week under the above heading and said among other things the following:

"It has been said that advice is something we all like to give but are loath to receive. I feel there are breeders of former years of experience who could give better ideas than myself, and from whom I would gladly take pointers. Don't buy a little half-grown gilt to start with. Let the breeder of experience fool with them. Buy a developed brood sow and she will teach you how to raise a litter of pigs if you give her half a chance. I much prefer a developed sow with my short experience. Don't buy some old worn out spud at a price that will enable the old breeder to buy a good one. I know whereof I speak. I am not guessing. If prices this winter in the bred sow sales are as they were last fall the pig sales the greatest opportunity awaits the young breeder that we have seen since the foundation of the breed, and the earlier he gets busy the better. A man with $600 last fall could have bought one of the young boars of the breed and from five to ten of the finest gilts of the year. We believe the hog business to be the greatest live stock industry in the world. Anything that will reproduce itself from eight to ten times a year is sure to be a money maker if business methods are employed. The great cattle ranches are being broken up into small farms to produce the beef, of this and other nations, and he will not be content with the long horned relic of antiquity, but will select some beef breed and produce a better and consequently higher priced article, and the pig, in whom his satanic majesty once received a right decent ducking, will also ascend the incline. They are talking 100 bushels per acre corn all over the corn belt, and the corn shows of Nebraska are creating as much enthusiasm as did the gadatorial contests of Rome, and of far greater moment, since the first teams with civilization and culture and the last was besmirched with degradation and destruction.

I believe the day is not far distant when corn, the king of cereals, will parallel wheat the year through in price, and when that time comes we will have to have $8 and $10 pork, the whole year through. This will compel the destruction of the hazel splitter, thistle roter, which will give way to the more improved types as did the savage to the civilized. I believe the time has come when it does not pay any farmer to handle any but pure bred stuff. This should appeal to the young breeder. I believe every farmer should handle only registered stock of all kinds. The only extra cost is in starting and that will soon come back to him in the extra funds he gets out of the same amount of feed.

In your anticipation of the business you should first consider whether or not you like the hog business, and if you do, and can feed pork hogs, you are qualified for the pure bred business. Then consult your finances and see what you are able to buy and care for. I would always rather bank on making a breeder of a man of moderate means who keeps his pigs thrifty and slick and talks about them as a part of his living, than the man of thousands or millions, who talks about his fine hogs as a side line and has an expert looking around trying to raise hogs on so-called scientific plans and keeps them in hot houses and half feeds them, when the common sense man sees that all those pigs need is fresh air, sunlight, and good slop. The new breeder should plan to attend a week's circuit, which he can do at small cost, and thus get acquainted with one of the best bunches of enthusiastic business farmers of the country. Go to the man holding the sale and ask him whether that sold well or developed good. Don't get troublesome to him. But these are important questions and if the seller would consider their importance in keeping the new breeder in the business, he would go to considerable trouble in the matter. We want men who become breeders to stay breeders. The idea that if one gets a dozen comes in does not appeal to a business man as a sound theory. I would go to some one in whom you have confidence, and who has been successful, and ask his advice or his help to select your sow, and notice the type he selects. He will most likely select a feminine, high-backed, good footed, motherly looking sow. The field men and auctioneers (whom some delight in terming that gang) are able to, and willing to give wholesome advice. They are in touch with family traits, winning and selling merits, and your success determines theirs to the extent that a successful breeder helps and a non-successful one hinders the progress of the business. They are anxious to have new breeders start as well as old ones continue.

I, myself, never was an advocate of a new breeder, unless abundantly supplied with means, jumping in and buying the high rollers, although I have taken flights bordering on the ethereal realms and have had the pinions of my ambition scorchered not a little and really enjoy flights now.

If you can not attend a sale in person let some one in whom you have confidence carry your bills and look for snaps and he will get you a good bunch of stuff. You should get a uniform type established in your mind and select them as near like that as possible. I have no respect for the animal with a long ped-

Was a Success

The H. R. Ryan Shorthorn cattle sale last Saturday was largely attended, there being a number of out of town bidders and buyers present. The bidding was active and the prices realized were very good. The average price a little over $82 each. The highest prices paid for a single cow was $130. One cow and calf brought $157.50, and one bull $160.00. These prices show three things at least. One of them is that the farmers believed that they were getting some good stock; secondly, that they realize the importance of the best breeds on their farms, and thirdly that they live on easy street so far as financial matters are concerned. The entire sale was a little over $4,000, and nearly all of it was in cash, only two notes being given for the 49 head of stock sold. Below may be found the names of the buyers and the prices paid.

Takes Exceptions

The Wayne county institute is a thing of the past. Not many farmers attended. The farmers regard it to a certain extent a fad. And it is not to be wondered at. They hear so much that does not apply to the western farmer. Such as silos. If they were put in use it would take more than 40 per cent of the population to handle the corn stalks alone in their green state and corn would go up in price. I do not think the silo man is well versed in this county. In regard to appropriating more money for the institutes one of the speakers said they were starving for an institute, in places. It is strange with free mail, farm journals, telephone service, and as many good farmers scattered all over the state that they cannot read and take lessons without raising money by taxes. It breeds a lot of salary grabbers to go over the country and tell us some of the things that would be impossible to put in practice, and tell us how we should treat our hired men not treat them as brutes. That was a slam on the farmer. After paying $25 to $35 per month and treating them as a member of the family. You can't get the farmers out by such talk.

It reminds the writer of seeing an article in one of our leading papers to have a law passed to have all the county poor farms set apart as an experimental farm, also each district school to have five acres, as they have plenty of young men competent, and would like the job. If the state farm has such young men let them get out and get to work and help us produce, and not put themselves up as a servant to the expense of the tax payers, and we will watch them and learn. Then we will know that our money has been well spent.

Gets a Title

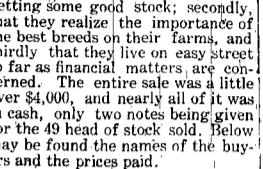

Thomas James, one of Wayne county's good farmers, residing four miles west and three south of Carroll, was in Wayne Saturday afternoon and perfected his title to eighty acres of school land which he bought twenty years ago at $7 per acre. Mr. James has one of the nicest home farms in that part of the county, well worth $100 per acre, but which it is not likely that he would sell at any price. He could not get a deed to the land before as such lands are sold on a twenty year plan. The land cost him—that is the $0—$560, and he has had to pay 6 per cent interest all these years, amounting to $30 per year, until the past year it has been five per cent, thus he has paid $600 interest on the $560 investment, but of course has had all that the farm has brought him in besides the improvements he has made.

Wayne Wins from Creighton

Wayne won the basketball game from Creighton Saturday evening after a hard fought contest by the score of 22 to 23. A clean game all around was played and the team work on both sides was great. The features of the games were the basket throwing of Williams of Wayne and the guarding of both teams. Creighton made a great showing and a tie looked very probable. Wayne went to Creighton for a return game last night, which will probably end the basketball season for Creighton who have only lost one game out of five played. Two games have been won from Winnetoon, and two from Plainview.

The line-up:
Wayne Position Creighton
Williams F Strain
Cristinsor C Joyce
Goodsell F Philbrick
Whitmar G Briggs
Chinn G Hooelstra
File sub Saunders
Referee—Hamlen; umpire, Sears.

The Cost of Packages

In the widespread discussion of the increased cost of living some attention is being paid to the great change which has come about in the manner of supplying most of the necessities in common use. Comparatively few people nowadays ever buy or even see a whole salt codfish as in the old days. Such salt fish as is used in the family comes from the grocery store or market, boneless and in packages, which have added materially to the cost, dried beef and bacon in the same way, instead being sliced at the market in quantities to suit purchasers. Crackers, biscuits, raisins, oatmeal and so on and on, through all the long list, are bought in packages rather than in bulk by a large proportion of consumers, and at an increase in the cost, because the form is slightly more convenient. In fact, it is obvious that the cost of the package, showy labels and other accessories, is the result of a decided preference on the part of the consumer, but it makes a material increase in the course of a year in the living expenses of the average family.—Manchester Union.

High Title Denied Washington

A friend calls attention to the fact that Washington, although commander in chief during the Revolution and again in 1798 during the French war, which did not really happen did not bear the title of full general. On July 2, 1798, President Adams nominated him "to be lieutenant-general and commander in chief." This was followed by the act of March 3, 1798, of which the ninth section read "that a commander of the army of the United States shall be appointed, and commissioned by the style of general of the armies of the United States," and that the present office and title of lieutenant-general shall thereafter be abolished. President Adams, jealous for the executive prerogative as commander in chief, made no appointment under this act and Washington died as lieutenant-general.

DEPOSIT EGGS IN THE SEA

Manner in Which Eels Are Bred is a Recent Discovery Made by Scientists.

The Straits of Messina are channels of immense depth, through which a wide tide surges, and owing probably to irregularities at the bottom there are whirling eddies which have the effect of bringing up from the depths below many marine creatures which are rarely seen except in the deep sea trawls.

It was here that the larval form of a fresh water eel was first discovered, an incident which threw a blaze of light on the life history of a very mysterious fish.

All kinds of theories had been given forth with regard to the propagation of the eel. Some naturalists declared they bred in fresh water, others that they visited the estuary for spawning purposes, but thanks to the discovery of Messina and later captures of the eel in its larval form it is now practically certain that after mature eels drop down our rivers in autumn they hie them to exceedingly deep water in the sea and there deposit their eggs.

From the egg comes a little ribbon-shaped creature, the larval form. In due course this changes into an eel of still smaller size, strange to say, and these small eels or elvers afterward ascend our rivers and there remain until they reach maturity, when they in their turn descend to the sea and history is repeated.

New Missiles for Weddings.

It is quite singular how of late years a decided objection to the ancient custom of rice and slipper throwing after the bride and bridegroom has sprung up, so much so that several comparatively new ideas have of late come almost universally into vogue.

Instead of the hard rice pellets, which occasionally are thrown with too much vehemence to be pleasant, some brides go in for substituting the tiniest ladies' slippers as well as horseshoes made entirely of soft silver paper. These resemble a sparkling shower of silver. Other brides lean to providing their friends with dried rose or other sweet smelling leaves to be thrown after them.

QUEENSLAND'S WATER TREES

Wise Provision of Nature That is One of the Curiosities of the Region.

One of the curiosities in natural history in the colony of Queensland is the provision by nature of a supply of water in the roots of certain trees. On these roots the aborigines formerly depended for their water for several months of the year.

There are several kinds of trees in Queensland from which water can be obtained, including three species of eucalyptus, and the kurruping. The eucalyptus consists of a gum, which is the largest of the back country trees, a box and mallee. The first named is the most preferred, as yielding the greatest quantity. This tree resembles the red gum in appearance, the leaves being a little narrower and of a silvery color. It grows chiefly on sandy or light loamy soil and throws out numerous lateral roots at a depth of about nine inches from the surface of the ground. The position of these roots was ascertained by the blacks by repeatedly jabbing the points of a spear or sharpened stick in the soft earth at a distance of about six or eight feet from the trunk of the tree. The soil was then removed with a wooden shovel for some 20 feet or more and the root cut off at either end. This was then cut up into lengths of about 18 inches, the bark knocked off and the lengths stood on end in some receptacle to contain water. In many cases the blacks used a bag made of the entire skin of the male wallaby. As soon as all these pieces were placed on end the operator, beginning with the first placed, put the end in his mouth, and by a vigorous puff expelled the remaining water. The size of the roots chosen was, with the bark on, about the thickness of a man's wrist. The larger ones being more woody and less porous, contain little or no water. The water is beautifully clear, cool, and free from any unpleasant taste or smell.

SET AVERAGE MAN THINKING

Could There Be Anything Sarcastic In What She So Quietly Set Forth?

"How sad it is," said the Average Man to the Average Woman, "that you are a tiresome creature—considered, of course, from a purely impersonal standpoint."

"I am interested," said the Average Woman. "Pray go on—as far as you like. I'm in the mood where real candor is the only thing I care for. Why then, am I tiresome?"

"Because of your limited range. For example, your conversation is exclusively confined to babies and bridge, servants and cigarettes clothes and cotillions."

"How interesting!" exclaimed the Average Woman, "and how true! That suggests an idea. I shall reform."

"In what way?"

She smiled ambiguously. "Hereafter," she said, "I shall widen my range of thought to include business, sport, woman and the quality of tobacco and rum, interspersed occasionally by the telling of indecent stories."

The Average Man had nothing to say. Indeed, for the first time in his life he was actually thinking.—Life.

SMALL FARMS OF PORTUGAL

Their Division Into Diminutive Portions Due to Survival of Antiquated System.

The Portuguese are an extremely conservative people. Every man follows rigidly the methods employed by his father and forefathers. In very many parts of the country the old wooden plows are still used.

When a man dies, instead of one of the heirs taking the whole property and paying the remaining heirs for their parts the whole property is divided into as many parts as there are heirs. More than this, each separate part of the property is thus divided.

Thus if a property consists of 10 acres of pasture land, 80 of vineyard and 10 of grain land and there were 10 heirs, each heir would receive one acre each of grain and pasture land and eight acres of vineyard. This process has been going on for a very long time, so that now in the most fertile part of Portugal the land is divided into incredibly small portions.

The immediate result of this is that the product of the land is barely sufficient at best to sustain its owners. South of the river Tagus, on the other hand, there are enormous tracts of excellent land lying unused, but it has been found impossible to induce the farmers of the north to move into this region and take up large holdings.

Pet Mispronunciations.

"Have you ever noticed," asked the teacher in English, "that a great many well-educated people persistently pronounce at least one word incorrectly? I know a college man who for some mysterious reason always says 'timidity' for 'timidity,' and he drags this oddity into almost every sentence he speaks. Mrs. Smith's pet word is 'preduljee,' while Mrs. Jones can't help saying 'gulgantic.' Just listen to them, and you'll hear the same people repeating over and over such mistakes as 'predeliction,' 'circutuous,' 'cupolo,' etc. Some one must have called their attention to it, I suppose, but they have grown attached to their way of pronouncing, and don't like to change."

Tributes of Affection for Paris Dead.

Foreign visitors to the cemetery of Pere La Chaise in Paris often wonder at the tributes of affection deposited on the graves. Many French people refuse to believe that their dead cannot enjoy the good things they used to like when alive.

Mothers bring fruits and sweets and leave them on the tombstones of their children. The graves of older people are frequently spread with wine, beer and tobacco, and there is (or was last year) one affectionate father who leaves a potato salad on his son's tombstone every Sunday. Parisian street prowlers are of course well aware of this practice, and despite the vigilance of the cemetery guardians manage to pilfer many a meal from the graves.

WITH UNEXPECTED ENDING

Story Contains All the Requisite Details Yet Seems to Fail of Satisfaction.

The merciless heat made the passenger's gasp as the limited plowed its way steadily across the western plains. Dreary, monotonous, was the vista of sand scrub which greeted the eyes of the wearied travelers. To add to their discomfort, above the muffled roar of the train arose the continuous wailing of a child. More than one man cursed softly and sought refuge in another car—all, as it happened, crowded. Finally a harsh-looking passenger spoke.

"Why don't you keep that brat quiet?" he snapped.

The mother, a forlorn-looking woman clad in rusty black, looked pathetically up at him. "I'm trying to," she faltered. "But, you see, the heat and the long journey—"

A new expression stole over the harsh-looking passenger's face. "Give it to me," he said in a tone of marvelous gentleness; and the poor mother placed the fretful baby in his arms. Whereupon he threw the child out of the window.

When in December an epidemic of typhoid fever raged in the Swope household, during which eight persons were stricken and one, Chrisman Swope, died under conditions that caused much apprehension among the attending nurses, John G. Paxton, the executor, and Mrs. Logan Swope, mother of Christian, instituted a vigorous investigation.
