THE INCUBATOR FACTORY

THE FINISHING TOUCHES

Completed Within Ten Days and Ready for Operation Preparing for Busy Season.

Two days the building for the incubator factory will be completed and the machinery in shape for operation. Only the finishing touches on the office rooms will remain to be done, and these will be hurried forward as fast as possible. The factory will soon begin grinding out incubators. The help will be increased as the season advances until January 1 when a full force of 100 people will be employed.

With the completion of the main factory work will begin next week on a warehouse of galvanized iron, 25 by 100 feet. This will be finished at an early date and used for housing machines.

Misses Kate and Raymond are busy getting settled in their new quarters and ready for the opening of the busy season. An incubator factory requires an immense amount of busy business matter, and the work of compiling and issuing it is no small task. Twenty thousand catalogues will be distributed, besides a lot of circulars and letters. This busy business of the incubator is growing and a success beyond expectations is a source of satisfaction to the public as well as to the proprietors.

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL NEWS

President Conn visited the State Normal school at Kearney Wednesday.

Mrs. Conn and Mrs. Brittle went to Sioux City, Iowa, Friday on business.

A Lanning of Omaha visited the Normal last Friday and sang at the Normal festival.

A. McLaughlin, representing D. C. Heath & Company, made the school a short visit last week.

The students and members of the faculty were glad to have a call from Dr. Gorst Tuesday morning. His visit to the students was one of instruction and helpfulness.

Professor Hantmer has worked up a good interest in athletics and to-day that on Saturday, October 22, a game of football can be arranged between the Normal and some other school.

Barb Moles, formerly of Wayne but now residing at Phillips, South Dakota, has written for information regarding the course of study in the State Normal school. Mr. Moles is especially interested in the commercial course and hopes to return soon and complete the work of this department.

A Glee Club of young ladies of the Normal has been organized and normal music has been sent for. It is certain that there is some good talent among the members of the club and that they will be able to furnish some good music before the close of the semester. This work is under the direction of Professor Laws.

Members of the class in writing and speaking are beginning to choose subjects for the prize oration. A good deal of time will be consumed in the preparation of these. The contest will not take place until winter. Meanwhile all the great models of oratory from the speeches of Patrick Henry to those of Bryan and Beveridge are being studied.

In a letter from Professor J. M.

Wiley he states that he will reach Wayne about October 14. Professor Wiley will have charge of the commercial course and this department will be greatly strengthened under his leadership. Professor Wiley comes to us from Shenandoah, Iowa, where he has had charge of the department of commerce in the Western Normal college.

Miss Rose Bartosh of Dodge, Nebraska, enrolled as a student in the Normal school Monday morning. Miss Bartosh completed a three-year high school course and has entered the teachers' training course of this institution which leads to an elementary state certificate.

The school has just issued a twelve-page bulletin, which will be mailed this week to all the teachers of Northeast Nebraska and to others interested in education. This bulletin is the first of a series to be published this year, and any one who desires a copy may secure one by addressing President Conn.

The class in Hamlet has found a new hypothesis as to Hamlet's sanity. It is that Shakespeare himself may not have had a fixed opinion on that point. This is at least as intelligible as a great deal that has been written on Hamlet's sanity. Both the Shakespeare and the Browning classes are this week considering the question of what constitutes a fitting theme for great literature.

The Normal was well represented in the meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Teachers' association held at Emerson on last Saturday. There has been much favorable comment on the excellent address given by Dean Hahn at the general session, his subject being "The Law of the Gang." Superintendent H. H. Graham of the South Omaha schools and president of the State Teachers' association, was present and through him Professor Hahn has been invited to deliver the same address to the teachers of South Omaha.

The Browning class held its first session in the high school building Monday evening, October 3. The next meeting will be in the model school building Saturday morning at 9:00 o'clock. If desired there will be two sections hereafter, one to meet Saturdays in the morning, the other some evening, during the week. It is believed that in this way both teachers and housekeepers may be accommodated. Any interested are asked to visit the class whether fully determined to join or not.

The prospects of the Y. M. C. A. for the year 1910-1911 are very bright. Every male member of the faculty, every young man in the dormitory, and also many students from the city, are members of the association. President Conn addressed the first Sunday afternoon meeting, and was followed the next Sunday by Dr. Gorst, pastor of the M. E. church. Bible study will also be made an important feature. Meetings will be held every Wednesday evening, led by some member of the faculty.

The Catholic Club of the State Normal school has an excellent organization and will hold two regular meetings every week. These young people have a mid-week service at 6:15 p. m. Wednesday evenings and a service at 2:15 p. m. Sunday. The officers for this semester are: president, Anna M. Kohls; vice-president, Edward W. Hesse; secretary, William Crevier; treasurer and librarian, Florence Bernard.

Mrs. E. B. Young led the Y. W. C. A. devotional meeting last Sunday afternoon. Her invitation to the girls to call at her home from 4 to 5 o'clock every Saturday afternoon is very much appreciated, and Mrs. Young has become a great favorite with the young ladies of the Normal School.

The class in physical geography is very large and the majority of the students are doing excellent work. The relief features of the earth, the work of the atmosphere, of ground water and running water have all been carefully considered. Professor Hickman feels justly proud of the results so far accomplished.

Country life and farming, air and sunlight, the soil, and drainage and ventilation are some of the topics that have received the attention of the class in agriculture. The students taking this subject find it not only interesting from a scientific standpoint but intensely practical as well, and they are entering into the work with a zeal and enthusiasm which can mean nothing but success.

The Y. W. C. A. has outlined a very excellent plan of work for this year. Devotional meetings are held Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock and Wednesday evening at 6:30. The Bible study class meets at 9:00 a. m. on Sunday, Miss Piper teacher. The Mission Study class will meet jointly with the Y. M. C. A. at 7:00 o'clock Friday evening of each week. Miss Helen L. Senter will have charge of the special music for all the services of the association.

Work in the manual training department is well in progress. Classes have been organized in the normal department in elementary wood work, blacksmithing, wood turning and cabinet making. The ability of the persons taking the work is marked, and with careful and individual instruction the product of this department will be equal in quality to that of the best industrial schools. Those taking these courses of instruction will not only be able to do the work, but also to present it in the public school classes. The boys of the fifth and seventh grades of the Model school are given two lessons a week in elementary carpentry. The interest in this class is great and will serve as a good example of the possibilities of manual training in grades below the high school.

Miss Elizabeth Kingsbury is entertaining her cousin, Miss Zay Philbrick, of Racine, Wisconsin.

Mrs. J. T. Bressler and Mrs. Ella J. Pile were welcome visitors Wednesday morning. Mrs. Pile will start for New York in a few days to spend the winter, and took this opportunity of meeting with the members of the faculty and students before she leaves Wayne. Mrs. Pile's address of convocation was well received, and those who were formerly students of the Nebraska Normal college were especially well pleased to meet her again.

The chapel periods of the past week have been remarkable for the excellence of the general exercises, and the interest shown by the students in this part of the work of the school. The address given Monday morning by Professor Britell of the department of physical sciences deserves special mention. The subject chosen was "Education," and it was made exceedingly practical and especially helpful to the students. Professor Britell spoke in part as follows:

"If asked why you are in the Normal school, I suppose you would answer, to get an education. If I should ask you what you mean by an education, what would your answer be? Education is difficult to define. In fact I suppose that few could give any very satisfactory explanation of what they do mean by education.

"When a person is skilled in mathematics we say he is educated. We say the same thing of the one skilled in law, in medicine, in music, in art, in history, or in language. They all differ in the things they have acquired and yet we use the same term to describe their attainments. Since they differ in the things they have obtained it becomes educated it is evident that education does not consist of a definite quantity or quality of facts acquired. "What then is education? What is the thing common to all, which forms the basis of classification? Is it attributes of mind as intellect, judgment, reason or will? No. Educated people differ widely in judgment, in reasoning power and strength of will. "Education must then be a condition of the whole mind as a unit. It does not consist of facts gleaned but in power of mind produced in the gleaming which gives to the mind the tendency to do more and better service than it could have done without the process of thought developed by study.

"In the mastering of any subject there is developed in the mind both a dynamic and potential energy, a sort of reserve power, which renders that mind more able and more active than before. This is education and like all growth comes slowly and almost unknown to the individual. A new strength is there for an emergency to sustain and direct the possessor.

"Jean Valjean, in Victor Hugo's novel Les Miserable, by years of toil at the oars as a galley slave developed strength, which in the crisis of the overturned cart holding the driver in the soft mud where death must come in a few moments, that enabled him to lift the cart by crawling beneath the load and lifting it from the imprisoned driver by the great strength of his arms and shoulders.

"Webster's reply to Hayne is a fine illustration of the reserve power of a human mind gained through years of study and intense application.

"Education is not confined to the school room, the home or the church but results from our environment whatever that may be. Education is the result of external stimuli and is just as constant as the stimuli. There is no vacation in our educational processes so that we must not permit any thing to enter into our mental activities which we do not wish to grow into the fabric of our minds. Harboring wrong thoughts, evil purposes, or diseased fancies, even for a short time mar for life the finest touches of our mental fabric.

"A mind acting along a line of thought once, forms the tendency to act along the same path again and this tendency is increased every time the mind is allowed to act along that line. We see this in the person that gives himself up to brooding along some line and in time this tendency becomes so strong that the balance of the whole mind is lost and the individual becomes insane.

"Right lines of mental activity improve the individual, while wrong lines degrade, blight and in the end may destroy all the higher attributes of the mind. How necessary then it is for us to live only in the environment of the things that tend to produce right thinking if we are to become educated along useful and elevating line of thought.

"Teachers are always endeavoring to cause the mind of the student to act along paths which will elevate and improve. This is right and in fact is all that can be done. There is no way to efface the path of mental action once it is formed. If a tree grows where you do not want it you can cut it down, weeds can be pulled up, cattle with horns can be dehorned but wrong paths of mental activity can not be dehorned, or cut down, or pulled up. The past cannot be erased.

"The lines of mental activity in your mind are the ones you have permitted and there are no other lines there. They have been grown (educated) into the mind and are as much a part of the individual as the hand or arm. We may now define education as the growing into the fabric of the mind right activities and powers.

"You are here to receive an education. You are here to develop right activities, right lines of thought and elevating tendencies of life. You are here to cultivate those powers of mind, and only those, which will best fit you to become a friend or a teacher of others. You are here to grow into the noblest manhood, the truest womanhood of the age, to become men and women fitted to fill the highest and best positions in our country. The realization of the high ideals is the education you seek."

Threshing of small grain is in progress, and the yield is generally turning out well. The greatest yield of wheat heard of in this vicinity was on the farm of Ed. Greir who threshed forty-nine bushels to the acre. Wheat from four acres sold at Weber Brothers' mill for $176.52 or $44.13 an acre. On Jas. McIntosh's farm oats yielded from thirty-five to forty bushels to the acre, and wheat from twenty-five to thirty bushels to the acre.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith of Colorado Springs, are visiting relatives in Wayne. Mrs. Smith is a sister of Mrs. H. F. Wilson, Mrs. Robt. Mellor and H. S. Ringland.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS HERE

INSPECT LOCAL GROUNDS

Some Proposed Improvements—Discourage New Depot for the Present Needs of City.

A number of railroad men visited Wayne Tuesday to inspect the local railroad yards. The party comprised F. E. Nicholes, division superintendent, of Omaha, and J. F. Glas-cow, superintendent of bridges, and B. P. Pierce, road master, both of Emerson. Superintendent Nicholes pointed out improvements that will be made at the depot yards, including a good-sized sewer pipe to carry off waste water.

As to building a new depot, he was disposed to discourage the idea at present. He is understood to have suggested that Wayne would in due time have a new depot, modern in all respects. However, Wayne citizens think the improvement is already overdue, and that there should be no longer delay. Traffic out of this point, due to the growing travel and freight of a flourishing city, besides the increasing traffic from the branch line, makes accommodations at the depot insufficient. Platform space, size of depot and its conveniences do not comport with the size and importance of Wayne. The present generation would like to share in the comfort and enjoyment of an up-to-date depot.

But a depot is only one of several improvements that ought to be made. The city should move in the right direction by building a city hall, and encouraging other building operations that are needed. The business district would not be so far behind the residence section in looks if more modern buildings were put up city hall, federal building and a few others.

While persuading the railroad company to do its part, let the city do its part toward building enterprises.

Are Your Pigs Full of Worms?

Pen them up. Do not give them anything to eat for one day. This is necessary to get their stomachs empty. A worm medicine is best on an empty stomach. Then give WORMITE in thick slop made of ground feed morning and evening for three days. The number of worms that will be killed and expelled from your pigs will make you think they are worm factories working overtime. If your pigs are wormy, you cannot give them Wormite too soon.

IN THE VICINITY

Stanton Pickett, Chas. McLeod has been quite sick for several days and has been confined to his bed most of the week but hopes to be out and around in a few days.

Stanton Register: The delinquent tax list appears in this issue and is the shortest one ever printed in this county. Only fourteen pieces of town lots and land are advertised.

Laurel Advocate: A. T. Henry and two brothers from Wakefield are spending the week with another brother on a homestead in Rock county. Chickens and ducks being plentiful and the fishing good their chances for a great outing seem excellent.

Winside Tribune: Willie Templeton arrived home from South Dakota to Friday evening, but says he will remain but for a few days. His mother came with him as far as Sioux City where she stopped off to visit, and came on to Winside Sunday accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Holcomb.

Winside Tribune: Mr. and Mrs. John Mundy arrived home from Illinois where they have been visiting for some time Saturday night. Mrs. Mundy suffered a paralytic stroke a few days ago, and was in a pretty bad condition when she arrived home, but since then has been improving.

South of town news in Wakefield Republican: Otto Johnson returned last Saturday from South Dakota where he had been to look at his land. He reports that crops are not so good there. He also stated that South Dakota is all right but Nebraska and especially Wakefield, is still better.

The Hartington Herald says a feature of the late board meeting was the presentation of a petition asking for the submission of the question of township organization to vote at the November election. The petition bore more than the requisite 250 names and the question, accordingly, will go on the ballot.

Randolph Times: Attorney Millard of Hartington has gone to Broken Bow to defend John Christopherson, a former Crofton lad, charged with manslaughter. Christopherson is a druggist and it is alleged he gave a customer tarter emetic instead of cream of tartar, a liberal dose causing the death of the buyer.

Wausa Gazette: In the first part of September we heard many farmers say that if frost would hold off a couple of weeks or so we would be assured of a bumper corn crop and one of excellent quality. It is now the sixth of October, nearly six weeks later, and to date there has been no killing frost. True it has frasted one or two nights, but has not yet 'froze' as tomatoes are yet blooming, and they are as a rule the first to go. Thus corn is ripening in first class manner so that even the late planting will make a good quality.

Winside Tribune: A very serious accident happened to Gus Gosh, a young farmer living nine miles southeast of Winside, last Sunday. He was driving a single horse, when it became unmanageable and ran away, throwing Mr. Gosh to the ground and besides smashing the buggy, the horse was injured so badly that it had to be shot. Mr. Gosh was very badly injured about his face. His nose is broken and his face cut and bruised in many places. Dr. Cherry was called and dressed his wounds and he is now getting along as well as could be expected.

The plan is to put in a common battery exchange and rebuild the entire plant, the cost of improvements to aggregate about $20,000. An improved system will give better service, and should be appreciated by patrons.

TEACHERS AT EMERSON.

The Northeast Nebraska Teachers' association had its ninth annual meeting at Emerson, October 8. The meeting was one of the best ever held, there being about 400 teachers and school people present. Many well known school men of the state outside of the district were in attendance.

In the forenoon sectional meetings were held in the high school building. Music was furnished by the Emerson schools for each of the morning sessions. Every teacher whose name appeared on the program was present and prepared. Teachers taking part from Wayne county are: Alice Brown of Winside, who read a paper in the rural section on "Some Difficulties and Their Remedies," and Blanche Young of Carroll, who read a paper in the primary section on the "Refining Influences of Stories and Poems."

In the rural section which met in the large assembly room of the high school there was scarcely standing room. Much discussion was induced by the paper on the "Spirit of the School," some teachers refusing to be responsible for "everything that is lacking" in a school. Superintendents Teed of Dixon, Miller of Cedar, Tarrent of Thurston, ex-Superintendent Ritche of Cheyenne and others defended the position taken by the writer of the paper.

In the afternoon a general session was held in the opera house, presided over by W. D. Redmond of the State Normal. Superintendent Graham of South Omaha was the first speaker and announced the state teachers association which meets in Lincoln in November. Superintendent Dixon of Tekamah spoke on "Attention, How to Get and Keep it." He made it clear that a teacher or speaker is responsible if he does not get the attention of his class; that it is something that cannot be commanded by will, but must be secured involuntarily. He developed the idea that we are largely what we are by the things to which our attention has been called. Mr. Redmond next introduced Dean H. H. Hahn of Wayne who spoke of the "Law of the Gang." He made the point that we cannot overlook or entirely overcome this law; but that we can direct and work with it until it becomes a help in developing the child.

Before the next speaker was introduced Mr. Herbert Welch, a senior in the Wayne high school, rendered two very fine bass solos. Deputy Superintendent Perdue gave a very fitting close to the program in his description of the ideal country school. That this is not so visionary after all is indicated by the fact that Dixon county has several at the present time. The Sholes consolidated school was also given as an example.

Before adjourning Superintendent Kemp introduced the following resolution which was adopted by the assembly.

"In view of the increasing cost of living to teachers, and the cry of insufficient funds to pay more, be it resolved that it be the sense of the teachers of this association that we favor a revision of the present law in such a way that a separate levy be made for teachers' salaries, and a distinct and separate levy be made for other expenses of the school."

"Resolved, also, that we favor a maximum of at least 25 mills for teachers' salaries and a maximum of not less than 15 mills for other current expenses."

"Resolved, further, that we as teachers use all honorable means to have such a measure enacted into a law at the coming session of the legislature."

DEATH OF MRS. OTTE.

Mrs. Wibke Catherine Otte, nee Rohwer, died Thursday, the 6th inst., at the home of her son, Henry Otte, nine miles northwest of Wayne. She was aged 78 years, 8 months and 13 days. For five years she had been an invalid, suffering from paralysis. Funeral services were held at her late home on Saturday, with interment in Greenwood cemetery, Rev. J. H. Karpenstein officiating. A large number of sympathizing friends attended.

Mrs. Otte was born at Jevensstedt, Schleswig, Holstein, Germany on January 29, 1832. She married Jurgen Otte, and to the union two sons and one daughter were born, being Hans and Henry Otte and Mrs. M. Kossik. The surviving members of the family have the sympathy of many friends.

A GOOD POSITION.

The pleasant purgative effect experienced by all who use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and the healthy condition of the body and mind which they create, makes one feel joyful. Sold by all dealers.

CAPT. BOGARDUS AGAIN HITS THE BULL'S EYE. This world famous rite shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: "I suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and used several well known kidney medicines, all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley Kidney Pills I had severe backaches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my own self." Feibel's Pharmacy.

HOW BENTON WON LIFE'S BATTLE

By JOSEPH W. FOLK
FORMER GOVERNOR OF MISSOURI
COPYRIGHT BY JOSEPH B. BOWLES

THE SIDE of Missouri, was to bring them together again, one a senator from another state, and the other as a candidate for the presidency of the United States. A year or so after the fight Benton moved to St. Louis, where he opened a law office in connection with a newspaper of which he became editor. He became prominent at once, in the discussion of public questions, and took a leading part in securing the admission of Missouri into the union. After a few years' residence in Missouri he was elected by the legislature one of the state's first two United States senators.

Declined Money Profit from Public Service.

Immediately upon his election, with scant regard for his official integrity, Benton called all of his clients to his office and told them his clients could do better for themselves by being his clients than by being his clients. He refused even to recommend an attorney to them, lest this might embarrass him in his public duty. His idea of public office was that an official had no more right to use his public functions to aid personal friends or to advance his own fortune than he would have to put his hand into the public treasury and take money therefrom to pay a private debt. Through all his official career Benton was true to this ideal and was inimitable and above reproach from any venal standpoint.

Championed "Missouri Compromise."

Benton's career of constructive citizenship was the greatest Missouri of the west has produced. He came upon the stage of public activity with the compromise of the Missouri compromise, which was largely his work. He left public life with a reputation that has not faded with the years. Under his compromise Missouri was admitted into the Union though it was some years later before the state was formally recognized as a slave state. With the revelation that no state created out of the Louisiana purchase, north of the southern boundary of Missouri, should be admitted with slavery. It hushed slavery agitation for a decade, and any attack upon it for a time was resisted by south as well as north. Benton was 33 years old when he took his seat and had lived scarcely half the years given to him. Monroe was just beginning his second term as president, Calhoun was secretary of war, Henry Clay was speaker of the house of representatives. In the Senate Benton was supported by Clay against Jackson, but ever after that he was Clay's political enemy and Jackson's warmest and strongest supporter.

Father of Homestead Law.

To Benton more than any other man is due the fact that there is no frontier in the United States today. What was a wilderness west of the Rocky mountains fifty years ago is now settled by happy and prosperous men and women by reason of his effort in securing the enactment of the homestead law. Benton established the policy of selling public land at a maximum of $1.25 an acre, giving preference to actual settlers and securing to settlers the right of preemption. This made settlement easy, and streams of sturdy men and women began at once to pour westward.

Benton looked into the future farther than any other statesman of his time. In answer to the taunts that the western country, particularly Oregon, would never be anything more than a hunting ground, he prophesied that the time would come when there would be more people west of the Rockies than east. He advocated the construction of a military road to New Mexico, and was so earnest in his support of the idea of a transcontinental railroad that his enemies charged him with being mentally unbalanced on the subject, and even his friends feared he was too enthusiastic. In one of his speeches he prophesied that the Pacific coast would soon become the depot of Asia and advised sending ministers to China and Japan—a proposal that has since been considered extremely humorous.

Brought About Specie Payments.

It was through Benton's effort that specie payments were established and that all our money became based on gold and silver. So earnest was he in the demand for a specie basis that he was nicknamed "Old Bullion," and in his speeches often referred to himself by that term. He was at first inclined to favor a protected coin system, but in 1825 he was elected to the senate and in 1827 he introduced a resolution for the free sale of gold and silver. The line of effects of the tariff upon the prosperity of the west had been represented in this hour. Why how much reason let facts respond and people judge. I do not think we are indebted to the high tariff for our fertile lands and navigable rivers; and I am certain we are indebted to these blessings for the prosperity we enjoy. While he opposed the protective system he voted for a protective duty on lead, which was largely produced in Missouri. In this he made the mistake that has been made by so many senators and congressmen of this day, who say they oppose protection, but vote for protection on the products of their own states, thereby placing themselves in the position of not being able to successfully question the justice of the demand of those in other states for a larger share of protection for themselves.

After the election of Andrew Jackson to the chief magistracy Benton became the right arm of that great president. In the attempted nullification of the tariff laws by South Carolina, Benton made effective Jackson's ultimatum to that state demanding submission to the law, by engineering the passage of a compromise tariff bill which stopped everybody from talking of fighting, but satisfied nobody.

Fought United States Bank.

Jackson's greatest battle was against the United States bank, which he declared must either be put out of business or it would run the government. Benton led this fight in the senate. He brought up the question in 1817 by submitting a resolution to the effect that it was not expedient to re-charter the bank. The war against the bank raged fiercely for years. It had many powerful adherents and obtained the support of a number of members of congress, as was shown later by investigation, through what amounted to brazen bribery in the way of favoritism on loans. In the midst of the fight the presidential election of 1822 took place and Jackson was triumphantly re-elected. Shortly after this Jackson made an order withdrawing the public funds from the bank. This precipitated a tremendous public uproar and the senate adopted a resolution censuring Jackson for the act. Benton immediately began a fight to expunge this resolution from the record, and finally, in the last days of the Jackson administration, the motion prevailed amidst great excitement and the resolution of censure was expunged by having a black border drawn around it and across its face the words: "Expunged by order of the senate, January 16, 1837." Jackson deeply appreciated the value of Benton's support and years later, on his deathbed, said to a friend: "Tell Col. Benton I am grateful."

Benton was the supporter of Jackson's successors to the presidency, particularly of Van Buren and Polk, but after Andrew Jackson, the president up to the Civil war wielded little influence compared with those before, and were largely engaged in a game of hide-and-seek on the slavery question.

In 1848 the anti-Bentonites carried a majority of the Missouri legislature, and a resolution was passed demanding that slavery be permitted to exist in territory north of the Missouri compromise boundary and insinuating the senators to vote accordingly. Benton denounced this resolution as treason, and refused to play it. He said it did not represent the sentiment of the people of the state and he appealed from the Missouri legislature to the Missouri people. The struggle was bitter and intense. As Benton was up for reelection, it being the close of his fifth term as senator, the effort was to control the legislature which was to elect the senator for the following term. Neither side obtained a majority of the members and a deadlock resulted to be broken by the anti-Benton Democrats combining with the Whigs and bringing about Benton's defeat.

The old warrior was not dismayed and kept up the fight. In 1832 he was sent to the lower house of congress from St. Louis as a Union Democrat. For thirty years he had been absolute dictator in the politics of Missouri. His word was final, and his wishes law, but the tide had turned, and for the remaining years of his life he steadily fought against him. Yet at no time in his career does Benton present a more inspiring figure than when, with his back to the wall, crowded on every side by foes, he continued to battle for the principles he believed in. By compromising and by truckling to the public sentiment of his state he could have regained his seat in the senate, but he would have lost the love and admiration due the brave man who prefers defeat with the right to victory with what he considers wrong.

Benton's mannerisms were marked and did not tend to make him popular with the masses. He seemed egotistical to the point of absurdity, yet in respect to the casual observer stern deep and required extraction. "Why was this not taken notice of on the spot where the duel took place?" he asked. The editor was as much in the dark as the doctor. At the moment of the duel he had fired into the air and his adversary also took a distracted sort of aim. There had evidently been no intention of doing the slightest harm on either side. The editor felt nothing as he left the field and had shaken hands with his antagonist as a sign of reconciliation. How a bullet came to be lodged in his thigh was simply one of the mysteries of dueling.

Another Boom for the Crops.

"Not many delegates appeared at the Esperantist congress that met in Kansas."

"No. Most of them stopped off and hired out as harvest hands."

Strategy.

Bessie—But didn't you say I would try to kiss you, why you wouldn't stand for it?

Peggy—I didn't. I sat down in a hammock.

The future and saw the approval of coming generations whose views would not be obscured by the passions and excitement of the moment. When the news of his death reached Missouri there was an entire change of sentiment and all classes united to do honor to his memory. They then realized that the mightiest man of Missouri was dead, the man who towered above friends and foes. All the state was in mourning and his funeral at St. Louis was attended by more than forty thousand people.

Saved Missouri to Union.

It was the fight Benton made that enabled others when the war came, to keep Missouri in the Union. If Missouri had seceded there probably would have been a different story to tell than that which came from Appomattox.

So Benton won life's battle by simple honesty, by perseverance, by bringing ideals and remaining true to them in sunshine and in shadow. His influence will be felt for good as long as this republic lasts, and the failure to secure political preferment at the end of his life by giving up the fight accentuates the grandeur of his character. He lost for the moment, but in losing he gained for all time. For him there was victory in defeat. The lesson of his life is—it is not essential always to win, but it is essential to keep the faith.

The Mystery of a Duel.

Having fought his duel and saved his honor by firing a shot in the air, the editor of a French provincial newspaper went back to his desk and the incident had quite left his mind when he felt something strange in his thigh. He looked and found that he was bleeding profusely.

A doctor was called, who discovered that a bullet was embedded in the editor's thigh some two inches deep and required extraction. "Why was this not taken notice of on the spot where the duel took place?" he asked. The editor was as much in the dark as the doctor. At the moment of the duel he had fired into the air and his adversary also took a distracted sort of aim. There had evidently been no intention of doing the slightest harm on either side. The editor felt nothing as he left the field and had shaken hands with his antagonist as a sign of reconciliation. How a bullet came to be lodged in his thigh was simply one of the mysteries of dueling.

DOINGS AT THE CAPITAL

Big Harvest From Unredeemed Money

WASHINGTON.—The United States government in fifty years has accumulated $13,000,000 from unredeemed money. A long-standing question, namely: How much does a government make through the failure of its citizens to present its paper for redemption? is answered fairly accurately for our country, in these figures. Expert mathematicians in the United States have figured on the problem, and the results they have obtained by different methods are so nearly identical as to lead the layman to feel confident that they have hit somewhere near the mark.

Obviously the difficulties surrounding the statistician wishing to tabulate the gains of the government from this source are almost insurmountable. If accurate figures are what he is looking for, the destruction of paper money of all sorts goes on rapidly throughout the country, yet this fact is never reported to the treasury. So the mathematicians have had to take the complete figures of the government redemption division, and by comparing the average life of notes, the average percentage of actual redemption, and other items of that sort, have been able to work out a fairly accurate percentage of paper money that is either destroyed or is in such hands that it will never reach the treasury for redemption in gold.

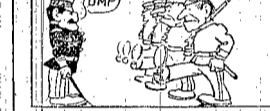

Well-known authorities who have worked independently on the subject found, when they compared notes, that they had reached substantially the same result—that of all paper money issued the government escaped payment on from one-tenth of 1 percent to about one-half of 1 percent. This, of course, means that the government makes on the paper money it issues a commission varying between the percentages set forth. The most definite result shows a gain of approximately one-eighth of 1 percent, a total gain to the government amounting to $13,241,000 since the beginning of our paper money—about half a century ago.

In its accounts the government, to be absolutely "safe," puts the percentage of destruction of notes at the lowest possible point, so that there is no chance of its finding itself worse off than it had imagined in the event of a run on the treasury. In the treasurer's statement concerning notes it always entered under the caption "unredeemed," an item of $13,000,000, in spite of its estimate of $13,241,000. This is entered on the "redemption" side of the account and subtracted from the amount outstanding, thus covering the balance.

All sorts of causes contribute to increase the amount of paper money that will never be presented for redemption. First is perhaps the most important cause, the increased use of the note and the more general use of paper for making the cash supply are annually reducing the loss from this cause. Then there is a sort of inertia that money seems to have which keeps it out in the country once it is started in circulation, even though it be of an issue supposed to mature at a given time. Shipwrecks, too, are responsible for some of the loss. Lastly, there are the collectors, and it is probable that every fairly good collection of United States paper money accounts for at least one piece of every denomination that has failed to come back to the treasury.

Army Wanting in Marching Ability

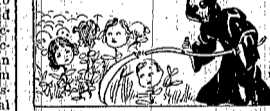

THE United States army has lately undergone a series of severe criticisms. Authorities have stated the existing conditions from every point of view, and in their reports have delivered their opinions in a fearless manner. In a report recently made public one inspector points out the case of a whole battalion of artillery starting out in the Philippines without a single field of view and one of the batteries commanded by a second lieutenant of less than two years' service. In one department alone, it is stated, the line officers were absent from duty with their commands under detail, and altogether, the inspector says, the situation warrants the prediction that results of a disaster kind must sooner or later be realized.

People who think the United States army stands at the top of the profession would be ridely jarred to learn from Inspector General Ball that the field army is wholly unprepared for field service. He says the new regulations are almost entirely ineffectual or dependent upon the experience of European armies. Our transportation is the same as at the beginning of the civil war, for our army has so far failed to make use of automobiles, traction engines and other modern appliances in the field. The weaknesses could be quickly developed if the present armamentary corps could be replaced at least once by the march of a complete army corps. Very few of our officers have ever marched with more than a regiment.

To remedy these conditions, Maj. Gen. Wood, chief of staff, has issued orders which will change materially the training of the army. The inspector general will be required to submit the report to an expert inspector in the field, in addition to the present inspection, which is described in some quarters as being little less than an inquiry into the accounts and garrulous work of the troops. The new inspection will be designed to show the efficiency of the troops in the theoretical work taught army officers in the various schools and provided for in the various drill regulations.

First Report on Infantile Paralysis

THESE were 500 deaths from acute anterior poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis, 116 from phthisis, 45 from rabies, or hydrophobia, and 9 deaths from leprosy in 1909, in the death registration area of continental United States, which comprises over 85 per cent of the total population, according to the census bureau's forthcoming bulletin on mortality statistics for 1909, submitted to Census Director Durand by Dr. Cressy L. Wilbur, chief statistician for vital statistics.

It is reported that of the 562 deaths from infantile paralysis 552 were of white and only 17 of colored persons. There was a somewhat greater incidence of disease among males and an increased mortality in August, September and October.

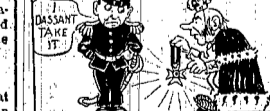

The bulletin states that no statistical segregation of infantile paralysis as a cause of death has been made heretofore, but the increasing importance of the disease and its wide prevalence throughout the country in the form of local epidemics, render a statement of the mortality important. Many outbreaks have occurred in this country, the most important of which were those in Vermont in 1894 and in New York and Connecticut in 1907.

The 569 deaths compiled for the registration area for 1909 were widely distributed, and indicate epidemic of epidemic prevalence in many parts of the country. It should be remembered, the bulletin points out, that the census data relate only to registration sources, and that for the registration states the deaths are only those returned from the registration cities contained therein.

Phtisis is a new disease in the mortality statistics, the bulletin states. Only 23 deaths were returned from this cause for 1909, and no deaths for any previous year except one for 1904. Such deaths undoubtedly occurred, but were not recognized and were consequently returned as due to other causes or as of unknown cause.

Gifts of Potatoes Vex Uncle Sam

HALF a dozen resolutions authorizing acceptance of gifts by American military men and diplomatic officers from foreign rulers were turned down last session by the house committee on foreign affairs. Accompanying the rejection was a report tending to discourage any such efforts in the future.

In strong language the committee pointed out that the provision of the constitution prohibiting the acceptance of such gifts by Americans in official life was drawn wisely by the fathers of the country in the interest of the integrity and perpetuity of the republic. Underlying the prohibition is the thought that those accepting such gifts would be under more or less obligation to the giver, and to that degree, at least, weaken his allegiance to this country.

The most noted exception to this rule by congress was the authorization of acceptance by former President Roosevelt of the Nobel peace prize, amounting to about $30,000. Colonel Roosevelt turned this money over to the department of commerce and labor to form the basis of a fund for expenses attending arbitration and the peaceful settlement of disputes between capital and labor. Before granting the authorization in this instance, congress had full knowledge of what was to be done with the money. The prize was awarded to Colonel Roosevelt for his efforts in terminating the war between Russia and Japan.

The action of the house committee arouses new interest in the notable collection of valuable and curious gifts, presented by foreigners to official Americans which this government has not authorized acceptance of by Americans and which are now in safekeeping in the national museum and in the state war and navy departments.

His Best Order.

It had been a dull season, and the two young travelling salesmen were comparing notes. "I had just five good orders in the last month," said one. "You beat me, anyway," said his friend. "I got only three orders, and the third one was from the firm told me to come home."—Youth's Companion.

BRIGHT SCENES IN FINLAND

Pleasant Change for Traveler After the Dreary Cities of European Russia.

The pleasant province of Viborg, Finland, from a recent book by Harry de Vries. There are few countries so absolutely dissimilar (save climatically) to Russia proper and Finland. Everything is different, commencing with the currency for rubles and kopars have now disappeared to give place to pennies and marks, the latter being equal to a French franc. The contrast is especially noticeable as regards towns and their inhabitants. Thus there are few cities in European Russia which do not appear dreary and depressing to a stranger. Moscow and Odessa are exceptions, for the first named is undoubtedly picturesque, while the gardens, boulevards and well-paved thoroughfares of the other present a striking contrast, to say the least, with its general impression of gloom and eye-squalor.

Viborg is barely eight miles from Petersburg and yet it awakes today in another world in a cozy hotel bedroom. Its windows overlook a scene more suggestive of sunny Spain or Italy than the frozen north.

The picturesque town nestling against a background of pine forest and blue waters of the harbor sparkles under a cloudless sky, the wood-faded castles of Viborg, with its crumbling thirteenth-century battlements, and last but not least the general air of life and animation are indeed pleasant to contemplate after the dreary streets of the Russian capital. Viborg is, perhaps, the least imposing of all Finnish towns, for many of its dwellings are built of wood, which, however, is generally stained a dark red color, cleaner and more cheerful looking than rough, weather-battered logs.

Pleasant also is it to saunter through the picturesque old streets, to ransack the silver shops and come suddenly upon a market place lying in the shadow of quaint old gabled houses, where the fresh-baked breads, curries and cobbles and canvas boots packed with fruit and vegetables recall some old-world town in far away Brittany. Everything has a clean, bright appearance, and the fresh, pine-scented sea breeze is grateful indeed after muggy, indolent Petersburg.

Now that the comet has not killed anybody, let us turn our attention to July 4.

THE WAYNE HERALD WANTS GOVERNOR TO PROTECT HIM

WANTS GOVERNOR TO PROTECT HIM

Dietz Has Long Conference With St. Paul Man.

DEPUTIES MAKE THEIR WILLS

Wife of Cameron Dam Defender Promises to Urge Husband to Submit Peaceably to the Authorities.

Winter, Wis. — John P. Dietz wants to see Governor Davidson. He so informed G. W. Froelich of St. Paul, following a long conference at the Thornapple homestead.

It is reported here that Froelich argued for three hours without Dietz saying a word. Then he suddenly made up his mind and dismissed the visitor.

Mrs. Dietz told the St. Paul man she would use her influence to get her husband to give up to the authorities.

Froelich went to the Dietz homestead following the decision of Sheriff Madden to declare an armistice to permit him to make a final attempt to induce the Cameron dam man to surrender under promise of bail change of venue and good counsel.

Deputy Sheriff Roy Van Alstyne, Fred Thorburn and Nels Paulson have made their wills in view of the possibility that their days may be numbered. They declare they could have shot down Dietz several times as from their stations in the woods surrounding the clearing they could see every move made by any of the beleaguered family.

Families of men serving as deputies in Sheriff Madden's posse are receiving many threatening letters and there are many more in the post office undelivered to men now at the front. Father Philmon of the Catholic church here has pleaded to be allowed to go to the scene of the expected battle so as to be at hand in case there are casualties.

POLICE ON WRECKERS' TRAIL

Los Angeles Sleuths Assert Trace of Fiends is Found.

Los Angeles, Cal. — The police Wednesday confirmed a report that the trail of the supposed dynamite conspirators who are believed to have wrecked the Times plant had been struck in this city.

I regard a second clue which we have quite as important as that which is engaging the attention of the detectives in San Francisco," said Chief of Police Gallagher.

An incident of the day was the arrest of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, proprietor of the Times, on the charge of having intentionally killed Andrew Gallagher, a San Francisco labor leader, in the columns of the Times. General Otis was taken into custody while preparing to attend the funeral of Wesley Leaves, the young stenographer to whom he dictated the article on which the libel was based.

Colonel Proves Skill in Saddle When Auto Frightens His Steed.

New York. — An automobile that came around a sharp curve on the road near Sagamore Hill narrowly missed hitting Col. Theodore Roosevelt and probably doing him serious bodily harm.

Colonel Roosevelt was astride a spirited black horse, and his rough rider experience stood him in good stead, for he managed to spur his mount out of danger just as the big touring car swept around the curve.

The automobile was occupied by Mrs. Frederick Southack, widow of a millionaire real estate dealer of New York. As the machine swung around the curve it looked for an instant as if the colonel would be knocked off his horse and thrown onto the hard macadamized road.

Clarke, through whom the Standard Oil company makes its official announcements to the public, has issued a statement to the effect that the company has entered on a thoroughly mapped out campaign to increase the consumption of kerosene in European countries and the lands of the Orient.

The move in this campaign is the reduction of the prices of oil in those countries. Mr. Clarke's announcement says in part: "The Standard Oil company has inaugurated a campaign to increase the world's consumption of refined oil. The level of prices for refined oil today in the United States is lower than at any time during recent years, and as a direct result of these prices the consumption of refined oil in this country is now being actively pursued abroad."

CANALS FOR BENEFIT

LESSON FROM EUROPE SHOWS HOW WATERWAY IMPROVEMENT HELPS RAILROADS. HAS A CREATIVE EFFECT

Construction of the Manchester Ship Canal Shown to Have Reassisted Many Dying Towns—Many Give Similar Experiences.

In previous articles it was shown that the waterways carry goods more cheaply than railroads do or can and compel the railroads to carry for less than they otherwise would, and then the claim was made that the improvement of waterways is a benefit to the railroads with which they compete. Several instances were given to support this claim and many more might be given if space allowed, for the writer, who has studied the subject for 25 years, has found many instances of benefit, and not a single instance of harm, to railroads from the improvement of waterways. It is now in order to see if we can find a reason for this rather surprising result.

Waterways, as has been said before, produce benefits in three principal ways—by direct saving in the cost of transportation of goods carried by water, indirect saving, by the lowering of railway rates through the competition of water routes, and by what may be called a creative effect. It is this last named effect which we are now to consider.

Manchester, England, before the construction of the ship canal, was a dying town. Hundreds of stores and thousands of dwellings were empty, factories were closed—some moved away—and population was decreasing. With the opening of the canal all this was changed. Factories reopened, new ones were built, the empty houses were refilled and thousands of new ones built to accommodate the population that came pouring in. And the benefits were not confined to Manchester alone, but were distributed over the whole great industrial region, containing over 8,000,000 people, of which Manchester is the center. It was not only natural, but inevitable, that the great increase in population and prosperity in Manchester and the surrounding region should be reflected in the business and the profits of the railroads there.

Liverpool Also Aided.

Liverpool fought desperately to prevent the building of the canal and the establishment of the new port of Manchester, but instead of being injured by the canal, the business of Liverpool has increased faster than before. During the 12 years before the canal was opened the increase in the harbor receipts at Liverpool was only $10,000; in the same length of time after it was opened the increase was $1,385,000. The 8,000,000 tons of traffic at Manchester have not been stolen from Liverpool, they have been created by the canal.

Frankfort, Germany, before the Rhine-Main canal was improved, was not a dying city but was decidedly stagnant. Mannheim and Mayence on the Rhine, which had been impoverished, were growing rapidly, while Frankfort was growing very little. As soon as the canalization of the river was finished, which was in 1896, the city began to grow and has kept on growing ever since. The population, which was 454,000 in 1885, has increased to 529,000 in 1895, to 556,000 in 1905, and is probably more than 600,000 now. Evidently the people of Frankfort expect their city to keep on growing, too. They spent over $1,500,000 on a harbor when the river was first improved and are hard at work right now building a new and much larger harbor at a cost of $17,000,000. Just as in the case of Manchester, the benefit was not confined to the city of Frankfort; the industrial and commercial life of the whole region was greatly stimulated. Mines long closed were reopened, new industries were started, and today there is an almost continuous succession of factories lining the banks of the river from Frankfort to the Rhine.

Everybody Reaps Benefit.

Hunt the world around and always and everywhere we find that the improvement of waterways sets cities to growing, factory wheels to humming, and commerce to moving in a wider and swifter stream. Railroads get more business in big cities than in small towns, in a densely populated manufacturing region than in one that is thinly settled. Waterways, therefore, benefit railroads—and cities and nations as well—by promoting an increase in population, in manufactures and in commerce. But for one who likes to get clear down to the bottom of things there still remains the question: "Why do waterways increase population and create commerce and industry?"

Consul General Mason, now in Paris, but for some years at Frankfort, says: "German statesmanship was among the first to foresee that the time would come when, railroads having reached their maximum extension and efficiency, there would remain a vast surplus of coarse, raw materials—coal, iron, timber, stone, and crude metals—which could be economically carried long distances only by water transportation, and that in a fully developed national system the proper role of railroads would be to carry passengers and the higher classes of merchandise and the higher classes of merchandise manufactured from the raw staples that the waterways had brought to their doors."

Bigger, Better Than Ever

The interest the farmers took in our Corn show last year is what made it the success it was and the Wayne Commercial club earnestly hopes that they will show even more interest this year. As with the co-operation of the farmers with us in this movement we can have one of the best corn shows in Wayne to be seen in Nebraska.

The Commercial club and merchants of Wayne are giving liberal prizes, and are willing to do all the work in connection with the show. All we request of you is that you make an effort to have an exhibit in at least one of the classes we will have, and with the quality of grain raised here this year, you ought to be able to enter two or three classes.

The premium list and catalogue will be ready in a very few days.

It is unfortunate for one to be so well off financially that he doesn't have to work.

The farmer is likely to be influenced by the condition of the roads in determining the point where he will market his produce and do his trading. A town should see that the roads leading to it are made better than those leading to any other point.

The Lincoln Star warns William Hayward, republican candidate for congress in the first district, that a majority of the people do not agree with his statement that President Taft is the "best progressive of them all." How does the Star know?

President Taft's definition of a progressive republican will impress the average man as sane and sensible. "A party of true progress is not a party of radicalism," he declared amid cheers. "It is not a party of ultra-conservatism," he added and again was cheered. "A progressive republican," the president went on, is one who recognizes existing and concrete evils and who is in favor of practical and definite steps to eradicate them."

The frayed and unsightly structure which is dignified by the name of city hall, could be replaced by a modern building without hardship to taxpayers. The city is so nearly out of debt that bonds for a new hall would be no burden. It is urgently needed and when it is built it ought to be made an ornament to the city. Every new structure stimulates the value of all other property, and among the new buildings demanded by the progress of the times is a new city hall.

The Pender Times appears in its support of the democratic candidate for governor, quite as maudlin and befuddled as the Dahلمان cause would require in order to make its attitude harmonious. Its last issue says the Wayne Herald expressed satisfaction over Bryan's failure to come out for Aldrich. Nothing on which such a suggestion could be based, has appeared in the Herald at any time. The delirium consistent with the Dahلمان candidacy no doubt makes misrepresentation unavoidable.

In assuming control of the Allen News which he purchased from Q. H. Stevens, Henry L. Balsler commends the town as the hub of Dixon county and the spot where the county seat is likely to be located in a few years. The inconvenience experienced by the south half of the county in reaching the present county seat gives some apparent ground for the demand for a change to a more central location. With the growth of parts of the county not tributary to Ponca, it will not be surprising if a county seat contest develops.

If republicans helped nominate Dahلمان, they did so on invitation of the open feature inserted in the primary law by the democratic legislature and approved by Governor Shallenberger. The governor was thus defeated for the nomination by the very amendment which he endorsed. Under the convention system, Dahلمان could not have been nominated. The Grand Island convention was plainly in sympathy with Shallenberger and would have renominated him, and the renomination of Shallenberger would no doubt have met the wishes of a majority in the democratic party. Therefore, the primary, aggravated by the open feature, defeats the will of the majority. What can be done with the law is a problem. In theory, it is ideal. In practice, it has not come up to expectations.

William Prince, republican candidate for representative, is capable of wisdom and sound sense in the deliberations of the legislature. He is one of Wayne county's well known farmers, and he possesses the ability to well represent this district. When county option comes up for consideration, he will support what he considers a fair and judicious measure in accordance with the republican platform. He believes in allowing the farmers to help settle the question of prohibition when it appears, and that is all county option amounts to. It merely extends to a county the privilege now held exclusively by a town. Under county option, the farmers would help townspeople decide whether the sale of liquor should be legalized or not. Mr. Prince believes the farmers should have a voice in the matter, and will vote accordingly when the time comes if he is sent to the legislature. But he appreciates the fact that county option is not the only subject that will come before the legislature. He will give active support to the plan to redistrict the state and give north Nebraska the representation that its population deserves. He will do his part in looking out for the best interests of the Wayne Normal. Mr. Prince is a republican who believes the party's legislative record makes the party deserving of popular confidence and support.

A DEMOCRATIC VIEW. The Hastings Republican, democratic, has this to say in regard to the governorship.

A certain bartender well known in Hastings says he will not vote for Dahلمان. He gave the reason for this decision that in his opinion the election of the Omaha mayor would precipitate a campaign for statewide prohibition and that in his estimation it would be safer for every saloonkeeper in Nebraska to take chances on Aldrich and county option rather than to elect Dahلمان with all his radicalism on the liquor question. This bartender is also a democrat and he thinks the only sane course for the democratic party in Nebraska is to turn Dahلمان down and the members of the party make a strenuous effort to elect the congressmen and turn their votes on governor to Aldrich. His logic is that a defeat of the party on governor would in the long run prove a victory for the party, for it is his belief that if Dahلمان is elected the party would be put out of commission in this state for years to come. We give these facts as presented by this bartender to show the variety of opinions on the gubernatorial situation.

MR. BURKETT'S LETTER. Senator Burkett has declined to rearrange his speaking dates in order to accommodate Mr. Hitchcock, democratic candidate, who has challenged him to debate. In the course of a pointed answer to Mr. Hitchcock, Senator Burkett says the following among other things: "You stated in your paper that I voted against putting lumber on the free list, when you know better and know that you are only pettifogging with the congressional record and that I not only voted to place lumber on the free list, but worked and spoke for free lumber. You also say in your paper that I voted to increase the tariff on shoes, when you know that no proposition was made by anyone to raise the tariff on shoes, and that as a matter of fact the tariff was reduced on boots and shoes from twenty-five per cent down to ten per cent, and that I voted for the reduction. You state also that I opposed reducing the tariff on barb wire, when you know that it was an amendment that I introduced that the tariff on barb wire was reduced from $20 per ton to $7 per ton. You state that I voted to raise the tariff on farm implements, when we put farm implements on the free list, and I voted for it and you know it."

"While I was battling away at my post of duty at Washington, trying to help make the tariff bill right, you were taking a pleasure trip through Europe. Your party offered no substitute for the republican bill in your absence and you offered none yourself when you returned, and I do not know what you have to debate about now. You have no record on any public question but the general one of negation. While the republicans may have made some mistakes here and there in the details of legislation, that you might make some capital of, the record as a whole is very gratifying and the prosperity that the republican policies have brought to the people and the progress and the development that America has made under those policies is very satisfactory to most persons. I presume you are no more ready now to defend the record that your party made when it was in power than you were in 1896, and hence you have little to offer to debate."

THE POOR BOY HAS A CHANCE

That was a remarkable story that Mrs. Pile told to the students of the Normal school Wednesday morning, and it is typical of the spirit of the plucky American boy. This is the story: When Mrs. Pile was a student in an Indiana college, one reliable and hard working boy had for his task the ringing of the college bell. One day Mrs. Pile noted his absence and on inquiry learned that Sam was sick, perhaps dangerously. His room-mate said that Sam was working his way in school, and was too poor to have a doctor. He was living in an unplastered attic and his room-mate was his only attendant. Mrs. Pile took upon herself to send the needed physician to Sam's help and he recovered. That boy was S. S. McClure, whose magazine is today known around the world as one of the great influences for good. We are proud to know that S. S. McClure is only one of thousands of Americans who have won greatness and blessed the world against the opposition of poverty in youth. Many are the obstacles that have been and are yet being overcome by our young people in their eager strife for an education and no one need fear for the future of society so long as the poor boy has ambition and opportunity.

It is likewise of interest to note that in this case the American girl, herself a student, did the sympathetic and helpful thing.

This community is proud of the fact that for nineteen years an eminent educator in our midst, with the co-operation of our citizens, built here a school in which the poor boy hid a chance. The same institution, now under state management, is still open to the poor boys and girls who have the determination to do good work in the world. Within its walls other great and good men and women are undoubtedly being trained to take the place of the generation whose influence is now shaping the destinies of society. We have faith that they will do their share in solving future problems since they are the product of the same American spirit that has always given the poor boy a chance.

Uncle Walt

The Poet Philosopher

I am living in the stable with the horses and the cow, and my heart is full of sorrow and of joy; and I cannot hold communion with my loved and loving frau, for she's busy canning peaches every day. O, she's busy canning peaches, you can hear her frenzied screeches, as she sears and puts the clammy thing away. I am living on bologna and the cheaper grades of slaw, and I patronize the hydrant when I'm dry; I am full of chaff and thistles, for I stum in the straw, and I often wake the horses when I cry. For my wife is teaching that her mind will be recovered by and by. O my wife is canning peaches and the house is full of steam, and the neighbor women also do the same; you can see them in their kitchens, you can hear them prance and scream, and their peaches are not worth a tinker's blame. Still the wives are canning peaches with a zeal that overreaches, and their husbands are disgusted with the game. It is sad that lovely woman should go batty every year when the frost is on the pumpkin and the plow; it is sad to see her raging with her topknot on her ear, and the juice of molly peaches on her brow. Once a year she's canning peaches, while her husband sits and preaches in the stable, to the horses and the cow.

THE VILLAGE SAGES

All day we sat and fussed and wrangled about the cost of living; our voices rose, like sweet bells jangled, severe and unforgetting. "Our kids," we cried, "must live on crusts, and wall like the blamed immortal trusts are out for plunder." We gave the tariff law a jolt that made it shiver; each orator unloosed his holt in terms uncivil. "If I," said one, "the skill could boast of some great rhymers, in burning stanza I would roast the Morganheimer!" "Have no credit in the town," said Colonel Seller, "and all because I'm trampled down by Rockefeller!" "I've been evicted from my home chased out by high rents, and I am doomed in want to roam, by haughty tyrants!" And then the man who owned the store, where we'd been talking, remarked: "You fellows make me sore you'd best be walking! Your arguments are thin as foam, and weak and spindling; and while you yawn, your wives at home are splitting kindling. The plutocrat may hold his sway, with pomp and bunting, but he is better than the jay who's always brunting!"

POOR, TIRED AND STOCKS, THE FATHER

Father came home sore and surly from his labors in the mart; came home from the hurly-burly with some wormwood in his heart; for the luck had been against him in the war of bonds and stocks, and the other brokers fenced him up and pelted him with rocks. So his heart was sad and bitter, mangled by misfortune's pokes; like a wild and savage critter he kept ranting at his folks. And his wife was scared and worried by the smoking things he said, and the children, frightened, hurried pale and trembling off to bed. And poor father roared and ranted, and he kicked at this and that, and he pawed the air and panted and he threw things at the cat. He was awful in his dudgeon, and his wife sat weeping there, when she should have got a bludgeon; or have slugged him with a chair. Oh the wrathful man who raises in his home, at close of day, fifty kinds of brimstone blazes is a chicken-hearted jay; and his wife is weak and drollish if she bends before the storm; she should get a club and polish off his wild, rambunctious form!

Man shaves with all his might, and keeps the lather flowing; he shaves by day and night, and whiskers keeps on growing. The corn may wilt and die in hot winds that are blowing beneath a brazen sky, but whiskers keep on growing. The crop of wheat may fail, the oats may make no showing, while ruined farmers wail, but whiskers keep on growing. I've lost my crop of beans, there are no peas surviving; but still my whiskers are flourishing and thriving. The plants that bring us men all kinds of care are needing; we labor in the sun; at hoeing and at weeding; when shipped they bring us dough, to pay us for their cradling; and still our whiskers grow, and need no cultivating. We do not sprinkle them with Paris green and water, the ravages to stem of bugs that gnaw and slaughter; we do not set up poles between the rows of whiskers, or set our traps for moles, field mice and other friskers. Our whiskers need no care, no chemicals to nourish; they rear their fronds in air like island palms, and flourish. But in the marketplace, where people buy and market, the whiskers on your face won't bring a bogus quarter. And that's the way things go throughout the world, my neighbor; the things that bring us dough are fruits of care and labor.

WHISKERS

I walk through the streets of the city, as gay as a bumblebee, and my heart it is singing a ditty of gladness and sunshine and glee; and then I encounter some fellows—the heart music suddenly stops; for they lean on their green umbrellas, and talk of the weather and crops. I call at the home of a lady; my heart and my soul are at ease; I swallow some drinks lemonade, and pretzels, and fragments of cheese; I'm speaking of poets and mystics—how quickly the mercury drops. For some one is springing statistics concerning the weather and crops! At-tired in my modest alpaca, and collar of Byronic roll, I call at the store for tobacco, for smoke always comforts my soul; I light up my trusty old briar, when in come some chinking Pops; their voices rise

Sometimes, when I contemplate dying, I feel a cold thrill of despair; I feel that the seraphim flying around in the ether up there, may weary of singing their choruses, and send their harps back to the shops, and sit in a circle and bore us with talk of the weather and crops. The Last Judgment, Matt. xxv: 31-46. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me. Matt. xxv: 40. Verse 31—Are these words of Jesus to be taken as a parable, that is figuratively or literally? Why? When will be the day of judgment? How long will it probably take to render judgment upon all the people that have ever lived? Verses 32-33—Where at the present time are all the bad people, and all the good people, that have died since the birth of the human race? By what rule, or law, will the separation of the bad from the good be made? Will a man's orthodoxy have any weight with the judge in that great day? Why? Will a man's heterodoxy, if he has been ruled by the law of love, in any way prejudice the judge at the judgment day? Why? Why may we hope that many, who have never heard of Christ among the heathen, will be found among the sheep at the judgment? Verse 34—What is the nature of the kingdom which God has prepared for his children? The sequence of cause and effect is relentless; for example, poison kills. Like maggots like, sin produces suffering. In what sense is this law the explanation of the statement, "the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world"? Verses 35-36—If the "kingdom of heaven is righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," do all those who essentially inherit that kingdom (who are loving and kind to everybody)? Why? Why is it impossible for a selfish man to inherit the kingdom of heaven? Verses 37-40—Why does Jesus take an act of kindness done to a fellow man as done to himself? From the standard here given what is the most important work that a church, or an individual, can be engaged in, and why? (The question must be answered in writing by members of the church.) Since the church have the same zeal and the same compact organization for caring for the poor, comforting the sick and making glad the sad, as she has for missionary work? Why, or why not? Verses 41-42—What does the expression, "sweeping first" stand for here? Is the punishment of the wicked everlasting, because God would not be willing to forgive in the future state, or because the character of the wicked is fixed, having no desire for forgiveness, or for both these reasons? Without any formal sentence, why is not a stingy, hard-hearted, close-fisted cruel man, who pays no heed to the pitiful cry of suffering around him, necessarily in an eternal hell? Who does the identification of Jesus with his people really make them one with him? Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 23rd, 1910.

There was plainly no intention on his part to disregard the state law. Mr. Davis who was the complainant, is the registrar of births in this county.

ROBBERS' ATTACK BANK.

The bank of which H. E. Mason, formerly of Wayne, is cashier, at Meadow Grove, was dynamited early Sunday morning, but the robbers became frightened and did not make the haul which they expected. The Norfolk News of Monday gives the following account of the robbery from its Meadow Grove correspondent:

Robbers, probably five in number, broke in the plate glass door of the Meadow Grove State bank about 4 o'clock Sunday morning, and with the aid of dynamite or nitroglycerine blew open the vault door leading to the safe. About five charges were used but the robbers were unable to blow the safe open. Seeing they had aroused the townspeople, about whose homes they placed guards, and being unable to blow open the safe, the robbers escaped from the town at 5 o'clock with a top buggy and two bay mares which they stole from a local livery barn.

Before starting their operations on the bank, the robbers made a thorough patrol of the town and found a young man named O. Echols on the railroad tracks. Echols was returning from Norfolk and the robbers slugged, bound and gagged him and put him in a box car. He broke his bounds at 5 o'clock, about the time the robbers left the town.

After depositing Echols in the box car the robbers placed a guard at the home of H. E. Mason, cashier of the bank, and one at the Fields barber shop, next door to the bank. Then with blacksmith tools they smashed in the plate glass door of the bank and entered.

Mr. Fields heard the report of the first charge of dynamite which blew open the vault door, then a series of other explosions, about five in number, took place in rapid succession on the safe door, which did not respond to the heavy charges.

Mr. Fields was soon busy with the telephone and, whispering to the central to connect him up with Mr. Mason's residence, he told the cashier that the bank was being robbed.

Mrs. Mason kept a vigilant watch on the guard in front of her home while Mr. Mason and the family dog made their way out of the house from a rear door. The dog upon leaving the house, barked furiously and made hasty retreat to the door. Mason, however, went up an alley toward the bank, reaching there just a few moments after the robbers had left the place.

The barking of the Mason dog is believed to have frightened the robbers away after they found that the dynamite was not doing its work.

After leaving the bank, the men went to the livery stable and commanded, at guns' points, that the boy in charge, George White, put out the lights and lie down. The robbers then hitched up a team to the single buggy and drove toward Norfolk.

Before the robbery attempt, the burglars took tools from the J. Carr blacksmith shop and then got three revolvers from Joe Beach's hardware store, plugging the balance of the guns in stock by driving cartridges into them. They cut out a glass window in the hardware store to get in. At the bank they smashed in the glass door by means of a sledge stolen from the blacksmith shop.

It is believed these are the same men who a week ago Sunday morning made an attempt to rob the Antelope county bank at Oakdale. No money was secured in that attempt, either.

Immediately after spreading broadcast the news of the robbery attempt, H. E. Mason, cashier of the Meadow Grove State bank, who was about the first man on the scene after the robbers had left the bank at Meadow Grove, ordered out automobiles and, followed by four machines loaded with armed men, he traced the yeggmen, who drove in the single top buggy which they stole at the Meadow Grove livery stable, along the river toward Norfolk.

When reaching Stoley's slough, three miles east of Battle Creek, the buggy was discovered in the brush south of the river. The harness had been carefully laid in the vehicle and the two baymares were haltered and put into a pasture about 100 yards further away, where some cattle grazed.

Mr. Mason and his party found the stolen team about 7 o'clock, a. m. and then the trail was lost. The four Meadow Grove automobiles came on to Norfolk and reached here about 11 o'clock. Mr. Mason asked Chief of Police Marquardt to send out deputies, and, although Constable John Flynn, John Krantz of the Live Stock Owners' Protective association, and Martin Kane, former chief of police, had already gone out in search of the robbers, the chief ordered about ten more men out and these were later joined by scores of volunteers who searched the entire countryside. Sheriff C. S. Smith of Madison, Sheriff Stucker of Stanton and Sheriff Miller from Antelope county were among the man-hunters.

It is believed that at least three of the men came to Meadow Grove on the late passenger train Saturday night.

At midnight an excellent supper was served, and all had a delightful time. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson returned Saturday from their trip, and at once commenced house-keeping on Mr. Hanson's farm, adjoining the Buetow place.

VOTES COUNTED TUESDAY OCTOBER 25.

A Gold Watch for Third Prize.

The votes in the automobile-piano subscription contest will be counted on Tuesday, October 25, for the first time, and the standing of the contestants announced in the paper of that week. All contestants should get busy at once so as to have a good showing when the votes are announced the first time. Your friends are always willing to help you if they see you are doing your part and you will find it an easy matter to secure subscriptions and renewals. There is not much accomplished in this world without an effort and it will pay to make an effort in this contest on account of the valuable prizes that will be awarded at the close. Not many contestants are in the race and it is going to be easy to secure the two big prizes, but besides the automobile and piano we are going to give other prizes, so that every contestant working all the way through will be awarded a prize. We have made arrangements with J. G. Mines, the jeweler, to furnish the third prize. The winner of this prize will be allowed to go to Mr. Mines' jewelry store and select from his mammoth stock of watches a fifteen jewel Elgin or Waltham movement in a twenty year proven case. This makes one of the very best watches sold and it will certainly please the winner. Other prizes will be announced later.

It is not too late for new contestants to enter the field and secure one of these prizes. Remember no one candidate can carry off all these prizes, and that there will be a prize for everyone working throughout the contest. While one contestant may be working for the automobile why not you get in and secure the $300 Tryber piano that is on exhibition at F. H. Jones' music store. Some parts of the county are not yet represented and we would be glad to have a good lively contestant in every corner.

The list of contestants now stands as follows: Look over the list and when you pay your subscription be sure and cast your votes for one of the contestants. It costs nothing extra to vote when you pay subscription to the Herald or Nebraska Farmer.

LAWSUIT OVER STOCK FOOD

Attorney Fred S. Berry has just received from the United States circuit court of appeals at St. Louis the record in the case of the First National Bank of Shenandoah, Iowa, vs. Liewer, which he tried in the federal court at Omaha last fall, representing the defendant. Mr. Liewer is a farmer who had some dealings with the Wonder Stock Powder company, of Council Bluffs. He claims he bought three hundred pounds of stock food of this company and that he signed what he thought was an order for that amount of stock. The company claims he bought $2400 worth of stock food. Some time later the bank at Shenandoah notified him that it held his note for $2400 and interest, stating that it had bought it and asking him to remit. Liewer refused to pay and the bank sued him at Omaha in the United States court claiming that it was an innocent purchaser of the note and had paid the stock food company $2400 for it. The case was tried and bitterly fought, and Mr. Berry won the case for Mr. Liewer. A large number of technical points are involved, besides questions concerning innocent purchasers of negotiable paper. The case was appealed by the bank and is now in the United circuit court of appeals, the highest court except the supreme court at Washington. Mr. Berry will go to St. Louis in December and try the case there.

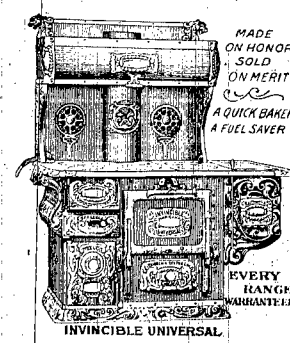

LIBRARY BOARD MEETS.

An adjourned meeting of the library board will be held Thursday evening. J. C. Ecker, aside was in Wayne Tuesday.

SUCCESS IN LITTLE CHICKS

Proper Feeding Is the Great Secret—Half Dozen Methods, Any One of Which Is Good.

Do not allow anyone to convince you that there is only one way to rear little chicks successfully. Some methods may be better than others but the fact is that there are half a dozen methods...

I was called upon to decide which of two flocks of chickens were the best. After one of them had been brought up on mistletoe feed and the other on dry feed exclusively...

The result in my case has been that I feed dry feed all the time because it is easiest to do so. When chicks are fed dry feed there is no mussy work of mixing mashers nor is there any fermented feed left over.

The whole secret of rearing chicks successfully, as far as feeding is concerned, seems to be to see that they are kept full all the time.

It is a comparatively easy matter to get eggs in large quantities in the warmer months of the year, but in the winter time when eggs are high in price, the problem is a very different one.

By the old way of farming, the land could be easily overstocked. With the silo and nitrogen-gathering crops, more and better stock can, and should, be kept on each acre.

The trouble of weaning pigs is greatly lessened if there is plenty of skimmed milk. With this feed it is easy to avoid any backset at such a time.

Do not attempt to raise 300 chicks when your accommodations are only suitable for 100. Crowding poultry will breed many diseases.

Plum growers have found poultry especially helpful in keeping down the curculion, and even apples have been considerably benefited.

Isolation, hard work and small compensation is too often the lot of the farmer's wives. These are burdens that need lifting.

The breeding fowls should be kept active and healthy. Free range is the right idea if you can keep track of the nests.

Spanish chestnuts do well in the latitude of Kansas and Missouri and come into bearing in about ten years.

All breeds of hogs look good when taken care of and all of them will yield good money if rightly handled.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Concrete is an ideal material for use in the construction of a granary, except for one feature. In a very damp climate where there are heavy and protracted rains...

If you have raised a good crop of oats this year, feed some of them to your cows. It is the best kind of food for laying hens.

Many a farmer feeds his cows as nearly right as he knows during the time the milk is flowing freely. In the early part of the summer, and then allows her to shift for herself during the late hot summer months...

The dairyman who has a good permanent pasture from which his cows can gather most of their ration during spring and summer and lay up a fresh store of vigor and health from the moderate exercise from the sun and the shade, is indeed fortunate.

More mowers are knocked out in cutting woods than in cutting grass in the meadows. It is a good plan to get a new mower before the old one is entirely out of commission.

A close study of the distinctive qualities and requirements of one's own variety of fowls is not only interesting, but instructive and profitable. Get acquainted with your fowls and let them get acquainted with you.

If the grower can get five cents a pound for his rhubarb in the spring, he is making profit; but by forcing indoors he can get stalks to sell in the winter when the price of rhubarb is ten to fifteen cents.

Upon the fruit farm fowls are of advantage. They keep down the insect pests, and they may have a fringe the greater part of the season without the possibility of doing any damage.

It is a comparatively easy matter to get eggs in large quantities in the warmer months of the year, but in the winter time when eggs are high in price, the problem is a very different one.

The brood sow should be kept in good condition, but without fattening, and should never be enclosed so that she will not have a chance to exercise every day.

About the best remedy for the unsightly disease known as "scaly legs," which is the work of miniature parasites, is an application of sulphur and melted lard once a week until cured.

Undertaking to produce 60 bushels of corn on ground which only a 20-bushel capacity is a mighty discouraging job, but that is just the thing which many try to do.

By the old way of farming, the land could be easily overstocked. With the silo and nitrogen-gathering crops, more and better stock can, and should, be kept on each acre.

The trouble of weaning pigs is greatly lessened if there is plenty of skimmed milk. With this feed it is easy to avoid any backset at such a time.

Do not attempt to raise 300 chicks when your accommodations are only suitable for 100. Crowding poultry will breed many diseases.

Plum growers have found poultry especially helpful in keeping down the curculion, and even apples have been considerably benefited.

Isolation, hard work and small compensation is too often the lot of the farmer's wives. These are burdens that need lifting.

...er you can get your winter wheat ground plowed the better. Wheat is a plant that delights in a firm seed bed and that cannot be obtained if the ground is plowed a few days before seeding.

Prior to and during the molting period feed whole wheat for morning feed in straw litter. The noon feed should consist of cold bran slightly seasoned with salt and cayenne pepper, with well-cooked lean meat, such as hulled heart, liver or lights, cut into strips.

Avoid watering the garden if possible. Use the hose more frequently, but if protracted drought renders the use of hose or watering can a necessity, do the work thoroughly.

Provide a good open shed for the young turkeys to roost in and don't allow them to wander off. Their value is steadily increasing now during the approach of the fall and holiday season.

Clean runs for the chicks are the best preventive of diseases. Keep some thing growing in them, remove all filth frequently and plow under a little straw or hay occasionally if you have ever been bothered with this pest.

The brood sow should have a considerable proportion of bulky feeds such as pasture, roots, etc. This will serve to distend the stomach and prevent her from squealing while, at the same time, keeping her from laying on too much fat.

The net earnings of hens must always depend largely upon such circumstances as breeding, feeding, care, etc., and probably the amount which a hen can earn in a year after paying all expenses may be estimated at between one to one and a half dollars.

A well selected, well managed, well cared for and well fed herd of brood sows will produce two crops of pigs a year better than a good lot of sows given only mediocre or indifferent care will produce one litter.

If good dairy bred bulls are mated with selected range cows the heifers of the first cross will be good milk cows. Future crosses will still further improve the herd if accompanied by careful selection.

There are practically no diseases to which ducks are subject. They can be sickened and killed through ignorance and carelessness by compelling them to submit to improper food or conditions.

Lameness ("bumble-foot") among the fowls is often caused by the roosts being too high or the floor too hard, and heavy fowls jumping thereon sustain bruises which later become more serious.

In speaking of dairying too often everything centers about the butter output. This is only one of the many lines of profit incident to the business.

Kill the old rooster, stew him for several hours and eat him. He is of absolutely no use in the flock at this time of year, and you can easily rear or buy a better one for next spring.

Hay that has been cured and put up quickly retains more of its nutritive value than would be the case if it had become over dry and had lost a lot of its leaves by breaking off.

There is little need of buying expensive grains for swine, when maintained on farms or of feeding much grain, except to nursing mothers or in fitting for market.

Good posts properly set, with woven steel wire fabric from 26 inches to four feet high carrying heavy wires make the ideal hog fence.

Sheep grazing has been found very effective in preventing forest fires in the national forests, when done in a conservative manner.

The most economic way of securing a permanent road bed is through drainage. It solves much of the good roads problem.

The farmer must constantly be looking ahead the same as does the locomotive engineer.

When possible, it is better to ship fowls alive and let the market man dress them, but this is not always possible.

The light, open soils are more likely to lose plant food than the heavier clays or soils that are full of humus.

The increased value of the first crop of calves will go a long way towards paying the cost of pure bred bulls.

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark It as Most Suitable Spot for World's Panama Exposition.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contending for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages.

Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical Point" for this Panama Exposition seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 300 miles from San Francisco there are only 3 large cities with a combined population of just 1,000,000.

The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 732 miles, to San Francisco, 2,317 miles.

Over 75 per cent of the people of the United States give to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

This is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December. Many of our readers will wish to visit this World's Panama Exposition, and if held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip than could go to San Francisco.

Old Violins

And How They are Made

It is claimed that the violins of the 17th century are the finest the world has ever known for tone quality. Why? The old violin makers selected trees from the upper Alps in Switzerland. After cutting the logs in proper lengths, they dropped them in sideways sliding down for two or three miles. The friction created from contact with the skidway caused the logs to become heated to such an extent that when they dashed into the water at the bottom the sudden change in temperature completed the preparation of the timber to be cut into thin strips for violin-making. The claim is that this is what gave the tone to the timber or material from which they are made. Now a few words about

Wayne Flour

And How It Is Made

The most essential thing about the manufacture of flour is to procure raw material of superior quality. This we have done. The best KIND of wheat. The best QUALITY of wheat. The MOST PERFECT berry. Having all the necessary material with which to make flour, we proceed by thoroughly separating, cleaning and washing the wheat before grinding, after which it is bolted, dressed and ready for the packer. The flour is a pure pearly white, having no superior and few equals. It makes flaky bread, splendid rolls, fine grained cake. Try it now.

We will give each newly married couple a sack of Superlative flour with the compliments of the Mill. Application must be made in person at the Mill.

PRESBYTERIAN NOTES

The synod of the Presbyterian church in Nebraska meets this week in Beatrice.

The subject of the morning sermon at the Presbyterian church next Sunday will be "Turning Stones into Pillows." In the evening the subject of the sermon will be "Christianity's Unanswerable Argument."

The brotherhood class in the Sunday school is increasing in interest since it has made the Dr. Linscott Questions, published weekly in the Herald, the basis of its study each Sunday. This class meets after the morning service. Mr. F. G. Philcox was recently elected president of the class and Dr. Gamble is the secretary. The Linscott questions are practical and interesting, and have proved exceedingly profitable in men's classes all over the country.

Evangelistic services will begin in the Presbyterian church on Sunday, November 6. The pastor will be assisted by his brother, Rev. Mr. James S. Corkey, of Winterset, Ia., and Mrs. Emily Collins, of Keokuk, Iowa, an accomplished evangelistic leader in singing. A special hymn book will be used and the music will be a feature of the services. Rev. J. S. Corkey was here at the installation services last spring and his methods in preaching were at that time much admired. He is straightforward, downright, upright and uncompromising in his denouncing of evil and in his approbation of the good. His preaching is essentially virile, and appeals especially to the men and boys, although he does not omit the more tender side of the Gospel, which endears it to all.

An Atchison girl wanted her wedding to be refined, elegant and poetical but her friends think she rather over-did it in this. When she and the groom returned from the marriage altar to receive congratulations, she had the organist softly play, "Meet Me To-Night in Dreamland."

All the Granite and Tinware

and a lot of other hardware stock, which I do not want to handle. This is stock that was in this store when I bought the store, and a line of goods which do not belong in a store of this kind, and as I will need the room for the large stock of holiday goods coming in, I will sell all of this line of goods at net cost to me until it is all disposed of. There are many articles among this lot that will interest the men as well as the women, such as strap hinges, files, barn door latches, shelf brackets, harness rivets, shoe nails, screw drivers, whet stones, bench vices, oil cans and numerous other articles. If you are looking for real bargains call in and look over this table of goods. While they last your money will buy twice as much here as it will anywhere else.
