THE YEAR AHEAD

The Nebraska Telephone Company, through its local manager, takes this opportunity of wishing its many patrons a prosperous and joyous New Year.

Without the splendid co-operation that this company has received from its patrons, the high grade of service that has been given would have been impossible.

Our constant endeavor is to give you the best and most economical telephone service possible and your attitude and that of every other subscriber hastens or hinders this accomplishment.

of his assailants, which agreed with that of two strangers who had have not been seen since.

Hartington Herald: As State
Labor Commissioner Maupin figures it, northeastern Nebraska is the finest corn growing section of the state. In his annual report just filed with the governor, Mr. Maupin says that, not counting Custer county, which leads purely because of its great size, the best four corn growing counties in the state are Knox, Cedar, Cuming and Platte, where the yield in dollars runs over $2,000,000 for each. Cedar county, with nearly 3,000,000 bushels, leads all others in the state in the production of oats, closely followed by Platte, Knox, Saunders and Madison.
Holt leads in the production of rye, with Antelope fourth and Brown fifth. Cherry and Holt produced the greatest crop of hay, while Boone is fifth in alfalfa production.
Cuming is third, Burt fourth and Saunders fifth in the spring wheat crop, the great winter wheat production being in central Nebraska.

GOOD NEWS

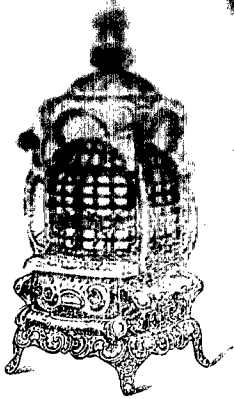

Many Wayne Readers Have Heard It and Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in Wayne are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach.
Many a lame, weak and aching back is had no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are tell-with the old Quaker Remedy. Here is an example worth reading:

Mrs. W. M. Fleetwood, of Wayne, Neb., says: "When I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, I was in such great misery that I could scarcely get about. There was a dull, heavy ache across the small of my back and I was lame and stiff. I had a feeling of tiredness and languor and it was out of the question for me to rest well at night. I felt the beneficial effect of Doan's Kidney Pills immediately after beginning their use and I continued taking them until I was restored to good health.
Whenever I hear anyone complaining of disordered kidneys, I advise a trial of Doan's Kidney Pills.

INVASION OF NICARAGUA BY AMERICAN CAPITALISTS

HONDURAS, in the light of recent developments, is playing the same game as did Nicaragua, and it is expected here that the firm hand of the United States will be felt in north Central America. Republics are at stake to let the threats of Spanish rulers go unheeded, any Spanish officials. One by one as these troubles arise throughout Central America it is the intention of President Taft and his subordinates to force a lasting peace.

It hasn't been long since United States Minister Merry was chased through the streets of Managua by the soldiers of President Zelaya, but conditions in these three years have wonderfully changed. Perhaps no man saw farther into the future of these Latin-American Republics than did Minister Merry. A sea captain on a Pacific Mail liner, he became a student of the native and his country. He probably know better than any other diplomatic official that, left alone, they would never cease fighting.

HON. WILLIAM L. MERRY

As the result of his work in the service, the United States has virtually established a protectorate over Nicaragua. At all times an American warship is within four hours' call by the wireless. An American postage stamp is as good in Nicaragua as it is in Louisiana. Mail for the United States goes through the American consulates and is carried in sealed sacks to New Orleans and Mobile, or to a port on the Pacific coast in another. It is not handled by natives. There is no opening of mail addressed to the subjects of the United States these days, as was common in the past.

Think it is the result of Minister Merry's work and today he is in the diplomatic service in Costa Rica, watching his labor bear fruit.

President Estrada is a good fellow as Nicaraguans go—but he couldn't last twenty minutes as the head of a people who love to fight, if the United States department at Washington wasn't holding his hand over the rough places. They are going to send a commission down there in a short time to straighten out affairs and conduct the first honest election the country ever had. Then J. P. Morgan & Co. will handle the refunding of the $20,000,000 bonded debt. By that time the United States will be well in charge, probably with Consul Moffat as minister and real head of the government.

Just as rapidly as possible Nicaragua is being made a good place in which to live. American capitalists and investors are crowding into the country with rapidity. Now that the days of the revolution are ended—the machete made an implement of agriculture instead of war—the future of the little republic looks bright. Mines are being developed, forests cleared, lagoons drained and homes built. Men from the north and middle western states are causing the hustle. There are business men from St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago and men from numerous smaller cities who are interested financially in agriculture and mining work in Nicaragua. Many are already realizing on their investments.

Along the Rio Grande river there is a wide stretch of territory covered with bamboo, some of which is planted in bananas. Shipments of bananas were taken out of that section for the first time a few weeks ago by the Pan-American company, a Kansas City and St. Louis concern. There are half a dozen small companies beginning operations and within six months fully 200,000 or 300,000 acres of banana will have been planted along that river, which is said to be the best for the culture of this particular fruit of any in the republic. The bananas—about 3,000 bunches—shipped lately were the finest taken into the port of New Orleans.

shoeleather, so to speak a few years ago, and being worth a few dozen millions today.

They have tried rubber and made a failure, cocconut plantations bring forth fruit slowly, pineapples grow large, as do grape fruit and oranges, but they ripen so quickly and the import duty is so heavy that exportation under present conditions is hardly to be considered. Rice does fairly well, while coffee on the west coast reaches a high grade of perfection. The coffee, diplomatic and other officials assure, is the finest in the world.

The chief trouble on the east coast is finding a hillside level enough to stand on and cultivate the product.

The labor question in Nicaragua has the servant girl issue in the United States beaten a nautical mile. One man will tell you he has no trouble in getting labor. If he means real work there is plenty to be done, but from the standpoint of the employer, the task is no easy one. Money means nothing to the average native. One plantation manager told a correspondent he had 60 men working for him and that he transacted business on 500 soles—money money, they call it—a year. This plantation conducts a store, as do the majority. The men are paid in the national currency, which just as steadily comes back into

A NICARAGUAN FAMILY

Mining throughout the country, while being pushed, is not bringing the money returns of fruit. Many men, however, have struck it rich in the mining region. A Canadian by the name of McGinnis, located in the northern part of the Republic and founded the Lone Star mine. Today he is several times over a millionaire. Joseph P. French Canadian, discovered the Bonanza mine from which millions in gold have been taken. The Topaz Mining company is another paying venture. The chief difficulty with the mining is the matter of transportation.

While the earnings of the various mines have proven satisfactory, yet it is in the banana business that the figures presented by American experts prove amazing; they show payment for land, cost of clearing, planting and harvesting at the end of the second year with an additional profit of 50 per cent. on the investment. They are indeed startling, but the men who make them point to the United Fruit company, having started business on a of the coast claimed by Honduras, while to Nicaragua she agreed to surrender her protectorate and recognize the sovereignty of Nicaragua.

Nicaragua in turn, agreed to grant complete local self-government to the Mosquito tribes, but she largely diluted with strains of white and Jamaica negro, and using English as their official language. Nicaragua also bound itself to make a free port of Greytown, at the mouth of the navigable river by which the great central lake of Nicaragua discharges into the Caribbean sea, and for ten years to pay annually to the Mosquito Indians a subsidy of $5,000.

After 19 years less than half of the subsidy had been paid, while in violation of the treaty Nicaragua had imposed duties at Greytown under the pretext that they were to pay the subsidy, and had introduced a governor and a garrison at Bluefields, the Mosquito king's capital, and was otherwise vexing the inhabitants so as to force them to abandon the English language and their local self-government. Finally, after most insolent treatment of the British consul at Greytown, who had been appointed the Mosquito king's agent to receive the arrears, England sent a warship to Greytown. Nicaragua protested that as the British protectorate had been withdrawn and Nicaragua's sovereignty recognized over the coast, it was none of England's business whether Nicaragua fulfilled the treaty stipulations in favor of the Indians. But the captain of the warship was not moved by this, and after much parley the entire matter was submitted to the arbitration of the emperor of Austria.

On two points the Nicaraguan contentions were upheld, first, that the subsidy was of

COUNTRY OF CONTINUAL UNREST

The beginnings of the troubles that wreck Nicaragua at frequent intervals lie back to its discovery by Columbus. A small remnant of Indians has recently been found living on an island near Bluefields, speaking the language of the Aztecs and having traditions of ruling in splendid cities over the subject tribes of the coast.

Those cities, of which great ruins remain, at once attracted the Spaniards to the interior, so that from Panama to Yucatan not an important Spanish settlement was formed on the Caribbean coast, and thus the coast tribes, freed from Aztec domination, remained almost unknown to the Spaniards, having no property worth looting.

Loot was plenty among the buccaners, but fresh food and women they lacked. These the Indians supplied. Commercial relations soon grew up, which speedily developed into an alliance against the Spaniards, by means of which the Indians maintained their independence, until their chief was carried, in 1638, with great pomp, to Jamaica, where he surrendered his authority to the duke of Albemarle and was then crowned and received back his insignia as a vassal king, under a British protectorate, of all the coast from Chiquila to Yucatan, along what is known as the Mosquito coast.

Subject to occasional clashes with the Spaniards, matters went on thus for a century, such successive Mosquito king going to England for investiture and to do homage. Finally, in 1783, by the peace of Paris, England specifically abandoned its protectorate over all of the Mosquito coast, except for the part

Lobster Worsts an Eagle

Pierce Old Shellfish Fights His Captor in the Air and Regains His Liberty.

"The disappearing lobster," as fish commissioners have termed it, might not only remain, but would flourish like any other fish, if it were not for the fact that it is so easily captured. A New York man, and his wife were sitting on the rocks by the seashore watching a big, white-headed eagle soaring in the air. Suddenly they saw it dash down into a pool of water close by them on the beach and reappear, holding an enormous lobster in its talons. It was an old lobster, with a huge claw white with barnacles, but the eagle had it clutched firmly around the back, and at first the onlookers could see the claw hanging helplessly down, the barnacles shining white in the sunlight.

Only for a second though. The lobster on the rock had not yet died away, the large drops of water had not ceased to fall upon its surface from the soaring eagle's feathers, when the lobster suddenly awoke to the seriousness of the situation, and to think with that apparently helpless creature was to act. Up came the white barnacled claw and seized the eagle around the neck.

There was a furious fluttering and beating of wings, a melancholy squawking, and then, landing, and rolling head over heels in the air, the confused mass, eagle and lobster came down again into the pool.

The men rushed forward thinking that they could, perhaps, in some way obtain both combatants, as the splashing of the conflict continued in the shallow water. But they had hardly time to pick up a stone apiece to throw at the eagle before the lobster, feeling itself sufficiently at home again, let go its hold.

Now, with its neck all torn and devoid of feathers, away flew the bedeviled lobster, eagle to a neighboring cliff, while, still brandishing its enormous claws in defiance, the lobster remained at the bottom of the pool.

The Strenuous Ticket.

"A lot of people are complaining that they don't get their money's worth from this railroad," said one official.

"Well," said the other, "well, remember that we'll make the tickets a yard and a half long."

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

A few days ago, the price of something good is soon forgotten, while the quality long remains. In the case of a cow, if the young she will long remain in the farm herself, while her store will last an indefinitely long time. Sometimes it is worth an amount that cannot be correctly given in figures to get a start in a good milk strain.

Swine parasites congregate around the ears and along the spine, and if a mixture of lard and kerosene, half and half, be dripped on the animals at these points while they are feeding, as often as lice are seen, the parasites will soon disappear and not return.

Many people lose their bulbs in winter, even after following some directions supposed to be safe. This is because there are variations in conditions of temperature or moisture which the directions did not cover.

If we are to succeed in brooding any sort of live stock or grala, we must, above all things else, maintain the vigor or vitality of the stock, or else eventually be defeated in our purpose.

Many farmers have discarded all fowls and enter to the duck business altogether as they will produce twice as many eggs in the run of a year than any flock of hens, regardless of variety or breed.

There may have been a time when the cow, in order to protect herself from wild animals, needed horns, but at this day and age there is no longer need for them, for this purpose.

The rule for feeding grain in the Wisconsin experiment station dairy herd is to give as many pounds of grain as the cow produces pounds of butterfat per week.

Your pigs are so partial toward foods rich in protein that they will neglect an excess of that element in stress an opportunity, thereby stunting their growth.

Do not neglect to keep the feet of the driving horses sharply shod. It may save bad wrenches and will greatly add to the comfort of the animals.

Never allow the chickens to drink from a vessel in which the feed must be broken, because they will not drink enough to supply their needs.

Every farmer must realize that he must keep sheep that have fleeces which weigh at least 10 pounds, before this industry will pay him.

A variety of pasture and food makes a pig fatter, and he will take on flesh faster than where he is fed on corn and confined in a dirty pen.

Where it is possible it is best to defer the selection of sow pigs for the breeding herd until they have made considerable growth.

Good use can be made of newspapers when through reading by putting them on outside of henhouse or hog pen to keep wind out.

When cows are given less food than they require for maintenance and milk production the milk production must suffer or the cow.

The primary principle to be observed in the preservation of eggs is the protection of the interior from contact with the air.

What the farmers want is a hog that will give the best returns for the feed which is given him, either big type or little type.

It is useless to attempt to raise early chickens for the market unless you have provided a place to care for them.

The dairyman who does not understand the elementary principles of feeding is not abreast of the times.

Corn and alfalfa alone fed to best cattle will make very large gains in weight, while at the same time the use of well-cured corn fodder in addition to corn and alfalfa will decrease the ration of corn and make the gains less costly because of the low market value of the fodder, and in this way it is usually more profitable than corn and alfalfa alone.

When rolt training is done as it should be, eight or ten half-hour lessons given in systematic order will accomplish more, and put a colt in condition to stand more severe tests than the haphazard go-as-you-please methods now commonly practiced can do in two years.

Don't try to see how warm you can make your hog house this winter, but see how well bodded you can keep it, and how well you can ventilate it. Fresh air is needed by the hog as much as it is by any other animal on the farm.

A day is coming very soon, when butter won't sell as rapidly and at as high prices as it was bringing formerly. And when that day comes, the question of quality in determining sales is going to be more important.

Paint the outside of the buildings in the autumn after the hot weather is past, or in the winter. Oil paint, under cold, hardens so as to be much more durable than when it dries under heat.

The disposition—the likes and dislikes of each cow—may be studied carefully while the animals are around their keeper, and one can then feed and care for them accordingly.

It will not do to allow ducks to share the common lot of poultry in general; not that they require more attention, but rather a different manner of handling and feeding.

There is one thing which vermin cannot stand, and that is fire. The best boxes and roasts held over a big blaze for a moment or two will be entirely rid of the pests.

Build your barns a little larger than you need at the present moment. Few men ever get too much barn room. Plan for future growth, and then see to it that you grow.

Drafts of air cause bad colds, and that means a cessation of egg making. To stop all cracks and crevices with paper and rags is on the part of the poultryman.

Keeps are extremely sensitive to heat. In hot weather their fleece is a burden to them. They are a cold country animal under the most natural conditions.

The profit in poultry raising for market lies in hatching early, pushing the chickens forward as rapidly as possible, and marketing them early in the season.

Do not wash eggs before packing them. Washing removes from the shell the mucilaginous coating which nature provides for their temporary preservation.

Among the essentials of the successful management of a farm flock of mutton sheep are that we treat them in a manner adapted to the nature.

Make a feeding platform for the hogs eight inches high with a wire netting protecting board all around to keep the feed out of the winter's mud.

There is no kind of animal breeding that will pay better than the breeding of horses, but horses that will sell, not dunghills or misfits.

The increase in a flock of sheep represents almost entire profit to the man who has no rentals to pay and keeps his sheep on government land.

Nest eggs are not needed to induce hens to lay. They have no influence whatever over the hens, and have been discarded on most farms.

We must cool the milk in order to stop the ravages of what is now known to be the bacteria that so soon work injury to new milk.

Pregnant ewes should never be kept in the enclosure with the rest of the flock, because accidents are liable to cause loss of the lambs.

The mare should be fed at all times with a liberal ration of clean and nourishing feeds, and should have an abundance of pure water.

Remove the harness and heavy collars during the noon hour. To go over the horses with a stiff brush at noon revives them.

Keep the egg record up every day. If you skip one day, even the rest will all be a guess, and guessing isn't like business.

The three great constituents which plants remove from the soil are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash.

Selling the younger heifers that the other dairyman wishes most to buy is grading the herd downhill.

Clean away the droppings each morning and lice and disease are not apt to bother the hiddies.

In the last hundred years wonderful advancement has been made in the breeding of live stock.

The shelter for swine may be about as cheaply made as that which is made for our sheep.

Early mating of the hens gives plenty of time to test the eggs in regard to fertility.

Crops grown to turn under as manure are cheap and valuable sources of humus.

Ducks have become one of the best laying propositions in the poultry industry.

To those wishing flowering hedges, there is a wide variety from which to choose.

It is possible give the turkeys all the sweet milk they can possibly drink.

You can gain two or three cents a dozen by shipping your own eggs.

Get stable manure on the orchard land during the winter months.

About six months of age is the proper time to wean a strong foal.

Are You Sick or Ailing?

Hood's Sarsaparilla has genuine curative powers, peculiarly adapted to restore health and strength in just such a condition as you are up against.

Elder Harris was making another attempt to induce one of the members of his flock to trade horses with him. "Dat pony o' your'n, Brer Reuben," he said, "is jes' what I want, an' my big bay hos is jes' what yo' want."

Left Both Satisfied. It is a happiness to one of those few surviving ones of the enteric fever.

Some Thing. Jockley—You're right; most people worry over what they haven't got, but I know certain people who worry because of what they have.

Got It. "Got Something Else, Too."

"I liked my coffee strong and I frank it strong," says a Pennsylvania woman, telling a good story, "and although I had headaches nearly every day I just would not believe there was any connection between the two."

"I am to Be Married at Six."

SYNOPSIS. The story is told by Nicholas Trist, His chief, Senator John Calhoun, offered the portfolio of secretary of war to a young man named Trist.

CHAPTER IX. A Kettle of Fish.

Few disputes exist which have not had their origin in woman—Juvenal. I saw the heavy face of Mr. Pakenham go pale, saw the face of the Baroness flash with a swift resolution.

CHAPTER X. Mixed Duties.

Most women forgive a liberty, rather than a slight—Colton. When I crossed the White House grounds and found my way to the spot where I had left my horse, I discovered my dinky boy lying on his back.

CHAPTER XI. Old Women in Malne.

Gray has a quintet of ladies whose age is over ninety years. Mrs. Enoch Merrill's age is ninety-nine years and eleven months.

Tragedy That Points Moral. Is the Love Affair of "Schumpff" and His Fat, Fair and Frail Inamorata.

Discouraged. The expression occurs so many times in letters from sick women, "I was completely discouraged." And there is always good reason for the discouragement.

"So?" she said. "Why so soon?" "Orders," said I briefly. "But perhaps I may not obey orders for once. There is another reason."

"And that one?" "I am to be married at six."

"I turned to enjoy her consternation. Indeed, there was an alternate white and red passed across her face! But at once she was in hand."

"And you allowed me to become your devoted slave," she said, "even to the extent of calling upon a man in a red nightcap, and then, even upon a morning like this, when the birds sing so sweetly and the little flowers show my most sacred feelings!"

"The mockery in her tone was perfect. I scarce had paused to note it. I was absorbed in one thought—of Elizabeth."

"I might have told you," said I at last, "but I did not myself know it until this morning."

"My faith, this country!" she exclaimed with genuine surprise. "What extraordinary things it does! I have just seen history made between the lightnings of a cigarette, as it were. Now comes this man and announces that since midnight he has met and won the lady who is to rule his heart, and that he is to marry her at six!"

"Then congratulate me!" I demanded.

"Ah, monsieur," she answered lightly, "one woman never congratulates a man when he has won another! What of my own heart? Plet! Plet!"

"I do not credit myself with such fatal charms," said I. "Rather say what of my little clasp there. I promised that to the tall girl, as you know."

"And might I not wear it for an hour?"

"I shall give you a dozen better some time," said I. "But to-night—"

"And my slipper? I said I must have that back because I cannot hop along with but one shoe all my life."

"That you shall have as soon as I can get to my rooms at Brown's hotel yonder. A messenger shall bring it to you at once. Time will indeed be short for me. First, the slipper for the horses. The horses for myself, madam. Then the license for myself. Then a carriage. Five miles to Elmhurst, and the train for the north starts at eight. Indeed, as you say, the methods of this country are sometimes hurried. Madam, cannot you use your wits in a cause so worthy as mine?"

"I could not at the time understand the swift change of her features. 'One woman's wits against another's!' she flashed at me. 'As for that!'—she made a swift motion to her throat. 'Here is the trinket. Tell the tall lady it is my present to you. Tell her I may send her a wedding present—when the wedding really is to happen. Of course, you do not mean what you have said about being married in such haste?'"

"Every word of it," I answered.

"Has she fortune?"

"I do not know."

"Have you fortune?"

"God knows, no!"

"You have but love—and this country?"

"That is all."

"It is enough," said she, sighing. "Dear God, it is enough! But then," she turned to me suddenly. "I don't think you'll be married so soon, after all. Wait."

"Ah, then you forbid our banans?"

"If you challenge me," she retorted, "I shall do my worst."

"Then do your worst!" I said. "All of you do your joint worst. You can not shake the faith."

"I am going to Montreal to-night, for one."

"She gave me a swift glance, which I could not understand."

only a trifle portly. Socially he had been well received in our city, and during his stay east of the mountains he had found occasion to lay desperate suit to the hand of none other than Miss Elizabeth Churchill. We had been private, although not enemies; for Jack, finding which way the wind sat for him, withdrew like a man, and cherished no ill will. When I saw him now, a sudden idea came to me, so that I crossed the street at his invitation.

"Jack," I exclaimed, grasping him by the shoulder, "you are the man I want. You are the friend that I need—the very one that I need."

"Certainly, certainly," he said; "but please do not disarrange my cravat. Will you have a Dream with me? I construct them now with three additional squirts of the absinthe." He locked his arm in mine.

"You may have a Dream," said I; "but for me, I need all my head today. In short, I need both our heads as well."

"Jack was already rapping with the head of his cane upon the table, to call an attendant, but he turned to me. 'What is the matter? Lady, this time?'"

"Two of them."

"Indeed? One apiece, eh?"

"None apiece, perhaps. In any case, you lose."

"Then the names—or at least one?"

"I flushed a bit in spite of myself. 'You know Miss Elizabeth Churchill?'"

"He nodded gravely. 'And about the other lady?'"

"I cannot tell you much about her," said I; "I have but little knowledge myself. I mean the Baroness von Ritz. I must be quick. I have in my possession—on the bureau in my little room at my quarters in Brown's hotel—a slipper which the Baroness gave me last night—a white satin slipper."

"Jack finished the remainder of his glass at a gulp. 'Good God!' he remarked.

"Quite right," I retorted hotly. 'Accuse me! Anything you like! But go to this address with it'—I scrawled on a piece of paper and thrust it at him—'then get a carriage and hasten to Elmhurst drive, where it turns in at the road. Wait for me there, just before six.'"

"I was looking at me with amusement and amazement both upon his face, as I went on:

"Listen to what I am to do in the meantime. First I go post-haste to Mr. Calhoun's office. Then I am to take his message, which will send me to Canada, to-night. After I have my orders I hurry back to Brown's and dress for my wedding."

"The slipper in his hand dropped to the floor in splinters.

"Your wedding?"

"Yes, Miss Elizabeth and I concluded this very morning not to wait. I would ask you to help me as my best man, if I dare."

"You do dare," said he. "You're all a-buster! Go on; I'll get a parson—how'll Dr. Haldorf do? and I'll take care of the license for you. If I could—God! sorry it's not my own."

"You are the finest fellow in the world, Jack. I have only one thing more to ask"—I pointed to the splintered glass upon the floor—"Don't get another."

"Of course not, of course not!" he expostulated. His voice was just a trifle thickened, as he left now, to get for the license clerk and I treated the proper document in my friend's hands. An instant later I was out, side, mounted, and off for Calhoun's office at his residence in Georgetown.

At last, as for the fourth time I flung down the narrow walk and looked down the street, I saw his well-known form approaching. He walked slowly, somewhat stooped, upon his cane. He raised a hand as I would have begun to speak. "You will take the railway train at eight. You will be joined by Dr. Samuel Ward, who will give you a sealed paper, which will contain your instructions and the proper moneys. He goes as far as Baltimore."

"You would be the better agent," he added presently. "If this love still goes wrong out of your head, it is not myself you are serving, and not my party. It is this country you are serving."

"On the Dog. A small West Philadelphia boy may be an author some day. He has just finished his first essay. It is on a dog."

"A dog is an animal with four legs, a tail and a pair of eyes. It is not a man. He wags his tail when he is glad and sits on it when he is sorry. A dog is a useful animal because he bites burglars but he is more trouble than he is worth when he tracks mud on the carpet. A bull dog is the king of beasts."

vs.
R. H. Perry, Defendant.

To R. H. Perry, Defendant

You, R. H. Perry, defendant, are hereby notified on the 9th day of November, 1910, the above named plaintiff instituted an action against you in the district court of Wayne county, Nebraska, seeking to recover from you the sum of $1772.50 with interest thereon at 7 per cent. from March 1st, 1910, which said sum is due plaintiff from you under and by virtue of a certain contract for the sale of real estate executed by you on or about December 9th, 1909, which said real estate is described as follows, to-wit: East Half of North East Quarter of Section 9, Twp. 39, North Range 10, East of New Mexico Meridian in Colorado.

Said Plaintiff on said November 9th, 1910, filed said contract, and in the above said cause an affidavit for attachment and garnishment, whereupon an order of attachment issued out of said cause and a notice of garnishment was issued and served upon the First National Bank of Carroll, Nebraska, and thereafter the said Bank under order of said district court paid into said court the sum of $310.20, which said money was the property, money, and funds of the said R. H. Perry, defendant, and which said money is now in the possession of and is held by the clerk of the above said court.

You are hereby notified that you are required to answer in said cause on or before the 29th day of January, 1911, otherwise judgment will be rendered against you in the above cause for the sum of $1772.50 and interest and costs.

The Herald has received from Mrs. W. L. Blackett, nee Leona Hunter, copies of papers published in Stiam where she and her husband have been spending several months. The papers give an elaborate write-up of the king who had just died, and his successor who was coming into power. Part of the papers are printed in English and part in the native language, and the style of journalism is very odd and interesting.

More than 100 delegates attended the annual meeting of the Live Stock Owners' Protective association in Norfolk Thursday afternoon. The report of the secretary of the association showed that only two horses had been stolen in this part of the state during the past year, and that the animals were recovered within three hours, and the thief captured. There are thirty-five branches of the association with a membership of 1,677 and $702 in the treasury. The object of the association is to enforce the law against horse stealing, and the result has been very salutary and satisfactory.

Guy H. Pratt, of Omaha, commercial superintendent of the Nebraska Telephone company, and M. J. Sanders, of Norfolk, district superintendent, met with members of the Commercial club this morning to listen to complaints regarding the local telephone service and talk over improvements. The Nebraska company proposes to make some improvements, rebuilding the plant and putting in a common battery system if the rates may be raised accordingly. It was mentioned that a four-party line for residences under the proposed best system would cost $1 per month, the same rate now charged. Such service would be far ahead of any that could be had from the old plant, with no extra cost to the residence.
