Sold in This Country

FORD MODEL T
FOURING CAR
Four Cylinders.
Five Passengers.

Fully equipped with Extension Top, Automatic Brass Windshield, Two 6-inch Gas Lamps, Generator, Speedometer, Three Oil Lamps, Horn and Tools - (an equipment many other manufacturers charge from $250 to $300 extra for) - all for $830, f. o. b. Wayne.

Economy in Operation.

This is quite an important subject. The purchase price of a car means quite a little sum, but it is what the car will cost to operate after you buy it that is most significant. Light weight construction made possible by the use of vanadium steel means more mileage for the Ford. The Ford Car can be purchased for from $18.00 to $22.00, while the tires for most cars cost from $40.00 to $60.00. The Ford Car requires about one-third the amount of gasoline used by the ordinary heavy car and will easily run twenty miles to the gallon.

The Ford Cars are sold fully equipped with windshield, speedometer, top, five lamps, at a price so low that other cars cannot compete. The Ford is also one of the best hill climbers made.

4,574 Ford Cars were sold in March, and 5,155 in April this year. 30,000 Fords will be made to meet the demands of 1911.

John Wanamaker of Philadelphia bought fifty of these Fords. The Bell Telephone Company of New York bought sixty-five Ford Model T's. The New York City Fire Department bought ten Model T Fords, for the use of their Chiefs of Divisions. The immense sale of this car proves it to be the most popular car on the market today. Boil four ounces of rice in cold water, taking care to let it absorb all the liquid; to this add one tablespoonful of finely grated cheese, one teaspoonful of chopped onion, one-half cup of finely grated bread crumbs, and one spoonful of ignited suet, pepper and salt to taste; bind this ingredients with the yolk of two eggs, mixed thoroughly, and roll into balls, covering with the yolk of an egg, roll in crumbs and fry in fat.

Frank Harrison, editor of the Capital a political paper at Lincoln, is engaged in a vigorous campaign for La Follette for president. Frank is a politician all the time, and the very great burden of saving the people rests on his shoulders.

Some towns whose census returns fall far short of expectations, are inclined to blame the enumerators. The same charge extended to finding fault would, if devoted to boosting, fit the population so that when the next census is taken there would be no ground for complaint or apology.

A few papers keep up recollections of the ancient and offensive practice of taking spiteful flags at each other. Doing an editor has really done something that is a menace to the peace of the world, the public does not wish seeing his hide stripped off and hung on the fence by a selfish business man.

Complaint is urged in some towns that retired farmers retard progress, but such complaint cannot be justly made in Wayne. People who have left their farms and come to this city to live are economically progressive citizens. They are in favor of improvement and new enterprises, and can usually be found active supporters of any forward movement.

There are five boys and five girls in the Wayne high school graduating class. This is a rather more favorable showing for boys than usual. The rule everywhere for years has been many more graduates than boys graduate. But the recent showing indicates that the male gender is picking up in the way of educational ambition. In time, at the present rate of masculine mental evolution and agitation, there may be more boys than girls completing high school courses.

It would be granting derision promotion in Hixon county, despite its reluctance to do so, to promote a clerk to the clerkship. A. N. Porter has served as deputy for a long time, and through experience has become well qualified, but, of course, in the subordinate class. His high salary would be paid for his services. While a deputy receives neither honor nor due compensation. If the voters of Hixon county should decide to give their deputy clerk the position, they would be justly rewarded services rendered, and would be doing in politics exactly what they would do in managing their private business—grant promotion on merit.

Fremont is preparing to have a big watermelon barbecue on the Fourth, and invite the surrounding country to join in the festival. Watermelons from the surrounding sections of the south, served with a lavish hand on the Fourth, are believed to guarantee more joy and greater security to health than the erstwhile custom of shooting fireworks. As the watermelon is a vegetable within or one from without, the former is given preference. And the feast proposed is in accordance with the law, whereas fireworks have been tabooed by the state. As between the stomach and the purse, the former is to be desired, because it is perfectly legal and in good form.

The column devoted to a revival of the early days mentioned that in 1853 one of the first stores in Omaha was a City and 30 cents per dozen in La Porte. The difference in prices was due to local demand. The reason the price of eggs in these later years does not drop so many times and does not vary so much from the general average is because of the business organizations which can distribute the product and preserve a portion of it if necessary. This system prevents scarcity of prices, which would otherwise be an overstocked market and raised prices at another time. When local demand used to regulate prices, no producer was sure of profit. He might get a good demand, or he might get the big system of handling and distributing supplies, whether eggs or other farm productions, gives stimulus to prices and makes them uniform and dependable.

We would be a juror if we did not appreciate the kindly feeling manifested to the newspapers by George White of Randolph in his speech at the Commercial club yesterday. It is a respect, a high value of the services of the press, and his sentiment naturally creates a warm spot for him under the heartardium of the average editor. However, the depression which his portrayal might have conveyed, that editors are struggling half-clothed and half-fed in the vineyard, frequently being by ingratiate and always inadequately compensated, probably applies to old-time conditions, but is seldom true today. If an editor is a charity-seeking scoundrel, an envious soul of creeping dependence, putting himself in an attitude to be kicked at the convenience of others, so that he may have something new to think about and mourn over, he is a genuine individual anchored in any other field of endeavor, is, of course, unfitted for business, and is likely to drag along precariously. But there is rarely a newspaper man of that sort today. Most editors are men of broad views, and business, they employ business methods, and are not afraid of hard work, and thus they succeed. Newspaper advertising has become indispensable to success everywhere, and so there is a steadily growing market for the chief purveyor of the newspaper has to offer. As a permanent and healthy business, it compares with any other.

AS TO RECIPROcity

It is suggested by the Wayne Herald that there should be a reciprocity treaty between Omaha and the smaller town of Nebraska. It is a wise and reasonable suggestion, but it will not be accepted without some discovery of a plausible knock against it. Omaha Examiner.

No considerable number of people will knock on reciprocity between cities and towns. The individual who will knock on fair reciprocity will knock on his own town and kick his own nest to pieces. The reason there are not closer relations between Omaha and the state is no doubt due to lack of appreciation and indifference to possible mutual advantages. Lack of reciprocity is not so much due to knackers as to absence of widespread interest and failure to fully mature good results that may be accomplished. Reciprocity between cities, like reciprocity between nations, is eminently fair and certainly advantageous. If the interests of each are properly considered and not quarreled—the manufacturers and wholesalers of Nebraska, whether at Omaha, Lincoln or elsewhere in the state, ought to have all the trade of Nebraska, and they in return ought to merit it not only in the goods but in a co-operative effort toward the development and upbuilding of all sections of the commonwealth. Wayne needs a railroad from the south, and would like to have the benefit of the proposed electric line from Omaha to Norfolk. Other towns want things and in all prospective enterprises Omaha can be influential and helpful.

SUCCESSFUL SENIOR

A good house witnessed the entertainment given by the senior class of the high school at the opera house last night, and the event was successful in every way.

SUCCESSFUL SENIOR

The program opened with a splendid piano solo by Rollie Miller, with Miss Nangle at the piano, Herbert Welch sang "The Nightingale" and the audience was enraptured. Vocal solo rendered in his usual pleasing manner. The class play, "The Mishaps of Minerva," was presented in a way which reflected great credit upon the ability of the members of the senior class. They acted their parts creditably and were heartily applauded by the appreciative audience. A very unfortunate feature of the event was the fact that Tom Gehring, one of the accomplished seniors, was taken sick Wednesday morning and was not able to take his part. Margie Kohl of the tenth grade was substituted in Tom's place, and no one could tell what Margie had been practicing all day with the rest of the cast. Margie always makes an effort to do what is assigned her, and she never fails. The class play was followed with a recitation of poems by Eugene Miller, and the class will be missed by Miss Miller and Irma James. The class will contain some very good advice for the younger classes and teamed with beautiful sentiment toward the teachers, the students and the subjects. In their will the seniors presented to the juniors a small speech, tied with the senior colors, with which they are to "dig" their own. It is Mr. Miller and Mrs. Miller, and to Mrs. Phillips a beautiful school-convener spoon. Lastly, to the high school was presented a beautiful picture of the coliseum at Rome. While Miss Miller was reading the will Irma James presented the gift at the proper time and unveiled the picture. The program closed with a piano duet by Annie Bristol and Eugenia Palmer, two of the most accomplished musicians of the senior class. Miss Pauline Vogel is expected this evening from Germany, where she has spent the past six months. She is a candidate for county treasurer. Mrs. O. E. Travis left Tuesday as a republican candidate for county treasurer. It is understood that Lambert Roel will also be a candidate for that office.

Uncle Walt

The Poet Philosopher

My trusty wheelbarrow is a beautiful and its narrow, it's painted a long and delicate green; it's strong and it's WHEELBARROW handy; it's simply a beauty—a beauty—wheelbarrow I never have seen. With joy that's abiding I take my wife riding; the climes in the barrow; I wheel her around; and motorists give me wide by riding by me. But little I care for their laughter and sound. My good old wheelbarrow goes straight as an arrow. I push it before me with jubilant feet; whatever 'twas made for, it's mine and it's paid for, and so I don't envy the auto I fear. I'd rather go wheeling my barrow and feeling raiment grow moist with a rich, honest sweat, than ride in a carriage like groom to his marriage, and have the sad knowledge that I will be Of all the world's curses there is nothing that worse is than going in debt for the things we don't need; so, blithe as a sparrow I push my wheelbarrow. Step Tab on my nutcracker, get onto my apeed.

I live in the land of Endeavor, where nothing is counted in vain, where poeple are busy forever, and no one has time to be happy to complain. Out here in the world of the idle you talk of your sorrows and fears, and even the feast and the bridal repast with the splashing of foam; but we, who are busy with work with plow and with axe and with loom, in the beautiful land of Endeavor, care not for your stories of gloom. Out here, in the land of the talkers you're breeding a difficult race; you wear your grouchies and knickers, who swear in your indolent place; your land, thus encumbered, will never be peaceful and happy like mine; in the far away land of Endeavor this life is all roses and bliss—Oh yes, you may get that, too, if you are not a loafer. You can't get that, though, and leave all the troubles behind, which now, in a pestilent legion, are gnawing away at your mind; but first you must honestly sever the fetters that bind you, and then in the land of Endeavor you'll take up the happy man's trade.

I might go up and down the street and talk the hours away, while your ears are full of people who say— "WHAT'S the busy day?— THE USE?" might on Vital Topics dwell, discuss and talk—through my hat, and here folks say— "I care you well, but what the use of that? I might repeat the tales I hear, the gossip and the lies, and bring the sad and gray trail to some poor creature's eyes. I might make fun of Jimmie and his folks, and give the Gulgway or riding out Wigwag's ride; but what's the use of that? I might display my stock of guile, and prove that it is great, and show that I am full of bile, of envy and of hate; I might produce my empty cloth, and show you that I am a rat, and be a first-class all round grouch, but what's the use of that? I've noticed that the sheep who's aim to croak the same old song, which winds up with the sad refrain, "What's over is wrong," has that about many friends as some old Thomas cat whose chat at midnight's hot accents— there is no use in that!

I saw the aviator soar far in the windswept void, and said: "He really ought to be more usefully employed. He's apt to fall AVIATOR a hundred miles should he fall, and he's apt to be a nuisance while he's circling above the crowd, they're serving no good end. Some day he'll break his aerial neck while pointing downward feet and it'll be his own fault— he's alive, he's alive, he's alive, he's alive. I have no wish to see a man who's apt to fall the sweeping plain; I'll keep on raising prairie hay, and sell it, hale by bale. The man who makes two bales of hay, come forth— there are his grown, contributors to the public good, and he's apt to be a nuisance while he's circling above the crowd, they're serving no good end. Some day he'll break his aerial neck while pointing downward feet and it'll be his own fault— he's alive, he's alive, he's alive, he's alive. I have no wish to see a man who's apt to fall the sweeping plain; I'll keep on raising prairie hay, and sell it, hale by bale. The man who makes two bales of hay, come forth— there are his grown, contributors to the public good a large and handsome share."

The growing old. That fact faces bristles to my eye the tears—the music of the dinner horn no long DREAMY or charms my ears. "I OLD AGE summoned to the growing old, and go with me. Dig my sword and carve the fragrant meat. I nibble at the stately feast; I care not for the high; I am not hungry for the toast; the egg or succotash. And when I've had my fill, I'll take my sword and carve the fragrant meat. Ah, you! Ah you! Ah Richard Roel, I'll

SYNOPSIS.
Evan Blount, 60, ex-"Boss" David Blount, 44, Senator Sagebrush, 30, was elected by Patricia Moore, Gentry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is building the line through the mountains of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrels.

Senator demands that the railroad use the use of crooked methods. Gentry is elected by Patricia Moore, Gentry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is building the line through the mountains of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrels.

The senator proposes raising Evan Blount's salary. Gentry offers him a position with the Transcontinental railway, which is building the line through the mountains of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount quarrels.

CHAPTER VII A BATTLE OF COURAGE.

BLOUNT had been holding between two opinions. The fighting blood in him prompted him to stay and see the end of the thing, and the fear of the unknown urged him to move. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

But on the other hand, the claims of blood could not be altogether ignored. The campaign for political purposes was inevitably to favor his father's side, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

Why, then, was he so torn? He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two. He was torn between the two, and he was torn between the two.

...within the next few days I will be in the city again. On the other hand, if Evan had intended to remain in the mountains, he would have had to have crossed the mountains, followed by the private car portage, through the mountains, followed by the private car portage, through the mountains, followed by the private car portage, through the mountains.

"Well, senator," he said, with a certain dogged emphasis, "I'm here. Let's see what we can do out of this. And together they entered the elevator, which as chance would have it, passed, in ascending, the car in which the young man was carrying down his trunk.

"I suppose we may cut out the preliminaries and come to the point at once," he said, "I don't know what you had definitely announced to your son as a candidate for the attorney generalship. Have you?"

"The senator was opening a box of cigars, and his reply seemed of doubtful irony. "The primaries do the nominating in this state, Senator. I didn't know you thought that," he asked quickly.

"See here, Blount. You come 3,000 miles to brush this thing out with your son, and you don't know what you are opening up to your son or not? That is a plain question, and I'll like a plain answer."

"I told you two weeks ago what I meant to do, McVieker. You wouldn't believe me. I'll say it again. If you want to hear it."

"And I told you two weeks ago that I would not state your own price for an alternative. Yes, and I told you my price, if you were not to remember that I know."

"You said you wanted me to turn everything over to the railroad administration. I don't want to go to do any such thing. What I want to know now is what it is that you are offering to your son for the practical part of your consent."

"What to buy me outright this time?" said the boss, still smiling goodly. "We," McVieker was going to say, "we bought you before," but he changed it to a less offensive formula.

"We have had an exceedingly successful one in the past. Blount, and we should have now. We can't let you go to your son for attorney generalship. That's out of the question. If you put your son in as public prosecutor you give us but one object in view. You mean to squeeze us till the blood runs. We're willing to discuss that object before the fact."

"I don't want to see before a member of times and in a number of other ways," said the mild counter suggestion.

"I don't want to see before a member of times and in a number of other ways," said the mild counter suggestion. "I don't want to see before a member of times and in a number of other ways," said the mild counter suggestion.

well as the jailing of the "little ones." It was not impossible that you may find yourself a broken man at the end of it. "I'm taking all the chances," was the even-tempered rejoinder.

"But there is one chance I am sure you haven't considered," said the senator. "I know as much about him as you do, or more, perhaps. For I have taken more pains to keep tabs on him for the past few years than you have. He is clean and straight. Blount is a son of a gun."

"I don't like the sound of that," said the senator. "I don't like the sound of that," said the senator. "I don't like the sound of that," said the senator.

"You'd set the house afire over my head, would you, Senator?" he asked. "You'd set the house afire over my head, would you, Senator?" he asked.

man whose invitation was in some sense a compliment. It was at the precise moment when the butterfly doors of the lobby opened that Mr. McVieker said his quarry that the house selection called the registry clerk. A tall, dark, thin man was waiting, ready to hand, for his room assistance to be called. He answered to the question with a smile over the wires of one of the upper doors.

"No, senator," the clerk was saying. "The room is occupied. I'll see with Mr. McVieker. I'll try. For I don't know what the room is for. I'll send a boy right away, though."

It seems to us that the average dress reformer overlooks a lot of useful work in selecting an occupation. It is more important to you than good digestion? Food must be taken to be converted into blood. When the digestion fails the whole body suffers. Chamberlain's Tablets are a rational and reliable cure for indigestion. They improve the action of the bowels, purify the blood, strengthen the stomach, and tone up the whole digestive apparatus to a natural and healthy action. For sale by all dealers.

A young man who wants to try a new job every week has overestimated the value of a varied experience. Poley's Kidney Remedy Acted Quickly. Mr. George Frothingham was bothered with kidney trouble for many years. "I was persuaded to try Poley's Kidney Remedy, and before taking it three days could feel its beneficial effects. The pain left my back, my kidneys acted straight-up, and I am so much better. I do not hesitate to recommend Poley Kidney Remedy," Father's Pharmacy.

It is also difficult to understand why a good-looking girl wants to wear the kind of a hat that conceals her face. In the Wake of the Measles. The little son of Mrs. O. B. Palmer, Little Rock, Ark., had the measles. The result was a severe cough which grew worse and he could not sleep. "One bottle of Poley's Kidney Remedy Compound completely cured him, and he has never been bothered since." Croup, whooping cough, measles, cough, all yield to Poley's Kidney Remedy and Tar. Get the genuine. Get it in the salt package always. Refuse imitations.—Fisher's Pharmacy.

Do your summer by sweating early and avoid the rash. Warning to Railroad Men. E. S. Bacon, 111 East Street, Bath, Me., sends out this warning to all railroad men. "I am a doctor on the railroad, my work caused a long and painful operation of the kidneys, and I was miserable and all played out. A friend advised Poley Kidney Pills, and from that day I commenced taking them. I began to feel a strength, the inflammation cleared and I am far better. I have been for twenty years. The weakness and dizzy spells are a thing of the past and I highly recommend Poley Kidney Pills."—Fisher's Pharmacy.

Lots of It in Wayne But Daily Grow- ing Less. The kidney's cry for help. Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed. Not one so important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is no clean blood. Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble. It is the kidney's cry for help. Head it. There are what overworked kidneys need. They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys, help them to do their work, never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Read the proof from a Wayne citizen: R. B. Smith of Wayne, Neb., says: "Some time ago I had severe pains in the back of my head that were worse every time when I stepped or lifted. I had to pass the kidney secretions two hours or so. Frequently and felt tired and depressed. I tried all the time. Don't know Pills but had relief. WAYNE MAN HEARD

GETTSBURG SPEECH

DAVID CUNNINGHAM WAS THERE

Clearly Recalls the Occasion of President Lincoln's Famous Utterances.

The address of Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg is one of the best known speeches of ancient or modern times. It is a masterpiece of brevity and power. It shall last. It was the poor fortune of two of Wayne's citizens to hear this address. Mr. David Cunningham and Mr. J. M. McCree. Both of them were members of the occasion, and in an interview Mr. Cunningham recalled some of the scenes of that memorable occasion.

"At the time of the battle of Gettysburg," said Mr. Cunningham, "I was living in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, about sixty miles away. Some of the people of our county went over to help bury the dead, but I did not see the funeral until it was over several months later, when, accompanied by a neighbor, Mr. Matthew Rogers, who still lives in Juniata county, I went over to attend the dedication services at the Gettysburg National Cemetery. This was on November 19, 1863. I had seen Abraham Lincoln in 1861, when he went through Harrisburg on his way to Washington to be inaugurated, and my chief gage was going to Gettysburg on this occasion was to hear Edward Everett, who was a celebrated orator of that day.

"We arrived at Gettysburg on November 18, and I went over a large part of the forenoon. There were many graves of the awful fight. Some of them so hastily made that the bodies were not properly covered. We could see where the houses had been struck by shells, and the trees still bore the marks of the bullets and cannon balls. By that time most of the shells had been gathered up and were on sale in the town. I found an unexploded shell which I carried home.

"There was great excitement when President Lincoln arrived. Soon after arriving at Gettysburg Mr. Lincoln met Mr. Burgh. This was the old man that took his side at the time of the battle and went out to fight the rebels on his own account. The president walked down the street arm in arm with John Burgh, and the crowd went wild with excitement. When the time came for the ceremony at the cemetery I went out there early, but the crowd was so great that I had to be content with a place a long distance from the front stand. Edward Everett spoke first, and his address was two hours long. The crowd thinned out somewhat and I managed to work my way near enough to get a seat where I could see and hear the words. Mr. Everett was cheered again and again when he had finished, as he was a splendid speaker and a man of much polish. There was a great contrast between him and Lincoln.

"As the president, tall and gaunt, with a care-worn face, came forward, you could feel that the crowd did not expect much of a speech from him. A hostile cheer: 'Oh, how I pity him. What a load he has to carry!' He began to speak slowly and deliberately, without any notes that I could see, and the crowd was soon as still as death in great grief to give that address that is now known everywhere.

"Fourteen and seven years ago, he began, 'our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation, so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are here on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of it as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, and we are honored to do so. It is rather to say that we are here to dedicate to the great task remaining before us. It is rather to say that we are here to increase devotion to that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion that we here highly resolve that those dead shall not have died in vain. That this nation, God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.' When he had finished, he turned to the audience and said: 'Some troops, about one hundred or so, cheered, but the audience looked one another in the face, and said earnestly to one another: "I don't care." Abraham Lincoln said: "I don't care." Yes, they the crowd realized they had just heard one of the grandest speeches of all time, but it was evident that the president had the people with him to a man. Soon after the speech he returned to the hotel. His party left the grounds and returned on their special train to Washington.

"I was 23 years old at the time," Mr. Cunningham concluded. "I remember well the excitement of those days. I cast my first vote for Lincoln in the fall of 1860. We called him 'Honest old Abe,' and 'Abe the rail-splitter.' Delegations used to march through the streets with banners and flags. We soon came to believe in him and after the surrender at Appomattox everyone recognized that he was a man of destiny."

PLACED UNDER BOND TO KEEP THE PEACE

The hearing on a peace complaint filed by John Coleman against Richard Ritze, was heard in Judge Britton's court on Monday, and the result was that Ritze was placed under a peace bond of $200, to be paid to Coleman and his neighbors, living five miles southwest of Wayne. It appears from the evidence that Ritze went to Coleman's place and had an altercation with him, followed by a fight in which Coleman knocked Ritze down a number of times. Ritze's appearance showed that he had been through a rather vigorous mill.

AUTHORITIES ESTABLISHED

Lincoln special to Omaha Bee: The coroner's jury which investigated the death of Charles Brookman, killed Saturday night by Martin Sisk of Omaha at the Lincoln stadium, brought in a verdict exonerating the authorities of the institution of any blame in the matter. The overworked condition of the asylum, the jury declared, made the crime possible, and that the blame should not be placed on Sisk, who will be pardoned and must serve a life term in the institution for his crime, the officials assert.

TAFT ADOPTS LINCOLN'S RULE

Washington correspondence of the Washington Eagle: President Taft keeps Lincoln's rule in mind. "I have never seen any text on it at a glance, a rule of conduct which throws an interesting light on his conception of his duties as chief executive of the nation. In the cabinet room, which he entered with the following of the White House, stands a long and wide mahogany table. This table is surrounded by large, comfortable chairs, one for each of the cabinet officers. President Taft's chair is at one end. The seats are simply furnished. The table is usually bare except for a few writing pads, pens and inkstands. When the president's place, however, stands a little end, holding a frame, which includes the following words, printed in clear type:

"I have tried to read much less, however, all the attacks made on me, this should meet as well as closed for my own sake. I do not desire to speak. I know how the very best I can; and I mean to keep on doing so until all right. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out all wrong, the angels swearing I was right would make no difference. Abraham Lincoln."

Mr. Taft is particularly fond of this sentiment by the great war president, and seldom has it out of his sight during working hours.

Rubber From Beans

Exchange: It has taken the Germans two years to get beans for rubber. The process has now been patented by a man in this city. He has been in the soy bean, treating it with nitric acid, and then heating the material to a given temperature, whereupon it becomes viscid and tough, like crude rubber. It can then be vulcanized by the addition of sulphur the same as vegetable rubber, and used for the same various purposes.

Various other processes for producing rubber from beans have failed to be adopted in practice owing to the high cost of operation. It remains to be seen, therefore, whether the soy rubber will be put on the market in a way to compete with natural rubber.

The investigations are being continued to determine the number and position of streptococci in the milk.

LIFE HISTORY OF JUNE EGGS.

Interesting Facts Concerning the June Bees and Corn Lard.

Wallace's Farmer: An Iowa correspondent reads as some of the brown beetles about these four or five to each lard, which are commonly known as June bugs. He writes:

"We have a corn field badly infested with these bugs. What are they? This field was in soil 'year before last' and was broken up last spring and put in corn, which produced a fairly good crop. Would you advise planting corn again this year? If not, would you advise sowing millet?"

These brown June bugs, which are so common during May and June, are the grown form of the fat, white grub that are often noticed in turning over old soil. The brown beetles during May and June lay their eggs in great numbers and occasionally in corn fields, but never in clover. The eggs hatch into white grubs, which burrow around in the soil, eating grass roots. For two years and sometimes more these grubs grow and gradually they become fat and round. Then they enter a resting stage during the latter part of the summer. When this resting stage ends, as it does during the early fall, the brown June bugs wriggle out, but they remain in the ground until the next spring. In plowing for his corn our correspondent has disturbed these June beetles before they had a chance to get out of the ground and lay more eggs on grass. "What shall they do with the grubs?" this year's crop of corn no damage; they did their damage to his corn crop last year when they were in the white grub stage.

depend entirely on local conditions. As far as the white grubs are concerned, they may do a small amount of damage this year, but not nearly so much as last.

Electrostruck Eggs

It is possible that the peculiar life of a cold storage egg, which is something not easy to mistake, may be removed if experiments now being made by an electrical company are successful. Says Invention: "An egg is claimed that when fresh eggs are placed in cold storage the eggs are alive; that they are slowly frozen to death, and that in spite of the present quality of the ice, the eggs do not taste good when cooked. It is believed that by electrocuting the eggs the natural fresh taste may be retained and not removed when eggs are placed in cold storage. The eggs are killed by placing a metal rap over each end of the egg, and then throwing on a pressure of 500 volts."

Dressed Eggs

Well-sewn eggs fifteen minutes, cool, separate whites from yolks, grate the yolks and chop white fine. Make a dressing of one cup of cream, one tablespoonful of oil, a small lump of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Cook the dressing until very thick, and add the chopped whites to it. Put this in the dish and cover with the grated yolks.

Crop Rotation and Legumes.

Crop rotation in which the legumes, such as cow peas, soy beans, vetch, alfalfa and the clovers, are grown in a place, will build up the soil and place an unprofitable farm upon a paying basis. Plan a rotation that will improve the fertility of the soil, and at the same time keep the weeds and insects from the farm. This is progressive agriculture.
