DATE FOR RAILROAD HEARING IN COURT

According to the date fixed by the supreme court, the railroad company is given until July 2, 1912, to file its brief in its appeal from an order of the state commissioner for a new depot at this place. After its brief is filed, the other side will prepare and file a brief. The case will be orally argued and finally decided. The court may be persuaded to consider the case at an earlier date if it is hoped so for the present generation would like to enjoy the comforts of a modern depot.

PAUL WEISS COMING HERE AS ORCHESTRA DIRECTOR

I. Paul Weiss is the genius who directs the Killary Ladies' Orchestra, one of the big musical attractions that will play in this city Chautauque week. Mr. Weiss has been in this country but a few years, but in his work as director of this great musical organization has become famous. He is not only a great orchestra director, but he is known as one of the best violinists playing before American audiences. In all of his travels he is accompanied by his sister, Miss Doris Weiss, an accompanist of fine ability.

YOU BUSY MAN in the store or office or shop or field—or anywhere. Ask any one what's good for that grouchy feeling that comes from constant worry and work.

They will say a rest—a change.

They will tell you to get away from it for a few days—get out into the open—get your mind off of it.

A week at a Chautauqua is what you need.

It will be an entire rest and change—a healthful and delightful retreat.

Hear that fine music and those great, big, brainy men and women who know how to entertain—who give you something refreshing to think about.

And it's a splendid affair you are helping to maintain.

You know you want it in your community.

Get the most out of it while it's here.

WHY YOU SHOULD GET A CHAUTAUQUA SEASON TICKET

There are two ways in which you can attend the Chautauqua. One of them is on the season ticket plan. The other is by buying a single admission ticket at the Chautauqua gate. On the season-ticket plan, the cost is about 15 cents a number, on the other plan it varies from 25 cents to 50 cents.

The season ticket can be used by only one person at a time, but it is transferable among the members of the family. Not only is it the cheaper way to you, but it is better for the Chautauqua's success. A community's interest in the Chautauqua is measured by the sale of season tickets, and the success of the Chautauqua depends upon the sale of those tickets.

It has been found in years of experimenting that the sale of single admission tickets at the gate is only a portion to the sale of the season tickets that are sold before the Chautauqua starts.

Therefore, if a community has been so thoroughly canvassed and our Chautauqua has been so thoroughly advertised before the opening date as to result in a large season ticket sale, the single admission sales at the Chautauqua will follow in about that proportion. And if season tickets cannot be sold, it is rarely possible that single admission tickets can be sold.

The Chautauqua's success depends upon the support it gets from the community, and it is the community that fixes Chautauqua standards. If you get a season ticket, you are helping to maintain the Chautauqua, and you are making it possible for yourself and every member of your family to enjoy this big week at the minimum cost.

PREACHER WHO MAKES GOOD AS CHAUTAUQUA LECTURER

The Rev. P. N. Lynch is a preacher who has made good as a Chautauqua lecturer. The Rev. Mr. Lynch is the pastor of a large, rich, aristocratic city church, but he himself is a most congenial and a most democratic man.

REV. P. N. LYNCH
And perhaps it is because of this genial, unassuming way together with his broad learning and scholarship, and ability as an orator and lecturer, that he can succeed as a lecturer to the community.—Chautauqua, Lindeneo, Mr. Lynch is one of the best of lecturers who will speak at the Chautauqua in this city this summer.

JOHN H. KATH, Mayor.
Attest: Forrest L. Hughes, Clerk.

THERE is a changing demand in Chautauqua programs—a demand for more entertainment. We are meeting that demand.

The presenting of seven of the best musical companies that money can buy, on a seven days' Chautauqua program, is a new feature in Chautauqua work—a feature that is meeting with favor.

Every change we have made has been for improvement; it has been to make the whole affair more pleasant and more enjoyable for you.

Wheat! Wheat! Wheat!

We buy all grades of wheat and pay 2c above market price for same. If you need flour for the coming year it will pay you to store your wheat with us. We give you in return for each bushel of wheat

28 lbs. of SUPERLATIVE Flour and 10 lbs. of Bran or 8 lbs. of Shorts, or 33 lbs. of SNOW FLAKE Flour and 10 lbs. of Bran or 8 lbs. of Shorts.

We have an up-to-date elevator and you can dump your wheat. No more shoveling.

STARS OF TWO CONTINENTS.

Their Songs Stir Americans, English, Germans and Every Nationally—They Are Gorgeously Costumed.

Came in northeast Nebraska promptly to turn out big. A few rains would in some of the largest yield of corn in the history of Wayne county. Favored by good rains, this part of the state ought to be prosperous this fall, with business activity in all lines.

A 7-year-old Kansas boy killed his father by playfully pulling a rifle up and pulling the trigger. The victim did not know the gun was loaded. He picked it up in the dining room and aimed it at his father. The boy was a favored one within the reach of a 5-year-old boy might reasonably be expected to terminate seriously.

While the appeal on the part of the school company from the order of the state commissioner is pending in the supreme court, it may be well to see if there are any other things the Commissioner would like to have the contractor do at this place. The club should not allow members to stand in the way of asking for any changes or improvements that may be needed.

Some papers assume that the state convention is a judgment of the state administration. It is, however, while others declare it was enthusiastic. If a paper has been radically against Taft, its editor persuades himself that the convention's commendation of the president was weak and rather perfunctory. The paper favoring the administration thinks the endorsement was strong, and conclusive evidence of popular feeling in the republican party.

The Herald passed into the hands of the present management one year ago. A review of what has been accomplished in twelve months shows gratifying progress. A Merchants' Institute machine and other equipment have been installed and the station has been steadily lifting its standard. The Herald is not merely a Wayne paper. Its plan has been to cover the county, and to become as much a source of interest to people in other towns and in the next history, as it is to Wayne. In satisfying this ambition, the paper's increased circulation shows it has been as successful as could have been expected in one year. We intend to develop one of the strongest papers in the state because we have the richest county, and the most wide-awake folk. Our editorial views touching politics, religion and social questions may not always meet approval, but they are presented to you, and we don't feel grieved if they are kicked aside as worthless. The editorial feature is a small part of a paper, and is dropped in to give expression to the peculiar ideas of the editor at the moment to have any. The Herald will continue to progress, and hopes another year will find it far in advance of what it is today.

THEY PLAY IRISH MUSIC

The Killarney Ladies' Orchestra—a Dream of the Chautauqua Manager.

STARS OF TWO CONTINENTS

Their Songs Stir Americans, English, Germans and Every Nationally—They Are Gorgeously Costumed.

The Killarney Ladies' orchestra is the result of a unique idea that came to Manager Horner of the Redpath Chautauqua System here.

Manager Horner may not be Irish himself, but he is exceedingly fond of Irish music.

Irish music, he said once, has always been more or less a foreigner to us. And there is no reason for it.

"There is so much that is good in the music that comes from old Ireland that I am going to have a company organized that will specialize in Irish music, and the best Irish tunes."

And so Ralph Dushar, the greatest talent organizing genius in the world, was given the task of organizing this great company.

It was a big dream that came true. Manager Horner and Miss Dushar have brought together stars from a dozen of the greatest musical companies both in America and Europe.

The result has more than exceeded the expectancy even of those who dreamed of great results.

The Killarney Ladies' orchestra plays and sings music from the simple Irish ballads to the great Irish classics.

They are dressed in rich green costumes, and the stage decorations are all in green.

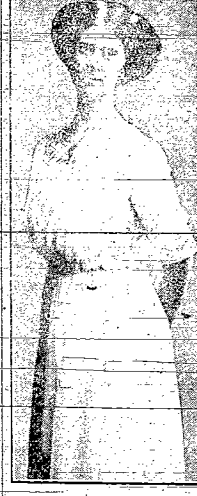

They are directed by Mr. I. Paul Weiss, a violinist of more than national fame.

It is the only great musical organization in this country that makes a specialty of music from the Emerald Isle.

And their music stirs Americans, Scotch, English, Germans and every other nationality, for there is a most fascinating charm in this old Irish music.

TO THE VOTERS OF WAYNE COUNTY GREETING

As I am a candidate for the nomination for the office of Sheriff, I take the liberty of addressing you in this way. I am asking for the nomination for the office of Sheriff on the Democratic ticket.

For nearly a quarter of a century I have lived in Wayne county and have been identified with the interest of the county during this time. It has been my pleasure to help elect many worthy men to office, but I have never before asked for a county office. I have held the office of constable in Wayne precinct for 7 years and I am familiar with the duties of the County Sheriff and I am nominated and elected to this responsible position, I pledge myself to serve the people faithfully and conscientiously and to make an official record that will prove worthy of the support given me at the polls.

I may not be able to meet you all during the primary campaign which ends August 15th. Hence I take liberty of bringing my candidacy before you in this way, and assure you that anything you may do in my behalf will be greatly appreciated.

Let me remain very truly yours,

SYNOPSIS.

Evans Blount, son of "Boss" David Blount, Senator of Nebraska, has been rejected by Patricia Ann, Dick Gantry offers him a position with the Nebraska National Bank, after fighting his father, McVickar, head of the railroad, and "Boss" Blount.

The boss demands that the railroad stop the use of crooked methods. Dick Gantry meets him at the office, and sees a man who takes him for a job.

Evans is kidnapped by a band of men, and taken to a mansion near the railroad. The house is Wartrace Hall, Senator Blount's home, and the woman is Patricia Ann.

The senator proposes raising Evans for attorney general despite his young man's recent arrival in the state. Evans, however, his father called a political traitor.

McVickar defies Senator Blount to surrender Evans. Patricia and her geologist father arrives at the Blounts' capital.

McVickar's request Evans join the railroad's forces as division controller and political worker. He favors Evans, but decides that honesty is made a rallying point by small political hangers on of the road.

Evans has a disagreement with Gantry about the road's mixing in politics. His father plans unknown to him to have him invited to open a dinner in mining town.

Blount tries to do business with the railroad. He is refused. He has a talk with Mrs. Blount. Blount wants a rebate from the railroad. He is refused.

Evans is referred to Evans and is advised by Mrs. Blount to go to the railroad. He is refused. He is refused.

Evans' last-minute visit to the railroad reveals the road's misdeeds. In a rage he resigns. Evans holds up the resignation. Evans insists that it go through to McVickar.

Patricia refuses Evans again. She wants him to stick to the road and work for change in politics. He resigns and is sent into a speaking tour.

"It is Kiltregore," said the traffic man. "Better let him get one that will give time," was the impatient comment. Then: "Sit down and bring the situation up-to-date, and talk fast. Time is precious here." Gantry drew up a chair and gave a fairly resume of the political situation. Everything had been done that could be done, and for the time being, the senator's railroad forces were about to meet the issue at the polls. At one point, and only one, the senator had been elected to the "boss" deal," he explained. "It has been rather awkwardly handled, and if Evans Blount should happen to succeed in getting me during the day I shouldn't like to answer for the consequences."

"You ought to have made sure by getting me out of the way," said the senator with a smile. "You are just common bangles—a you and Kiltregore—both of you."

"There's a limit," Mr. McVickar. We couldn't very well ignore him and carry him off to a dungeon. We have tried every way we could to muzzle him. So far as I know he hasn't been doing anything since you were here last week, but I had to put one across on him about the quality of the freight rates."

"What did you do?" snapped the vice president. "I carried him what purposed to be a cartoon copy of the legal notice of a reduction. He doesn't know yet that he has the only copy—that the notice hasn't been posted to one station, as required by law. He won't find it out until after tomorrow, when it won't make any special difference."

"Your expedients have all been pretty crude," Gantry. You seem to persistently forget that you are dealing with a young man who has a fine lawyer; that the chances are ten to one that young Blount discovered your plans fraud at once. Go back to the office and think up some scheme that will keep him busy today, too busy to smell out the facts in the Gantry office."

"I'm all in," Mr. McVickar, and that's the best thing I can do for you. No other idea left in it," he confessed despairingly. "Can't you help us out a little, Mr. Blount?"

"I'll do my best to face with the inventive test," the vice president did not hesitate a moment. "If I have to go to your thinking for you. Go back and get into communication with Gantry. Tell him the time has come to get the speaker of the house. He has been playing four years ago on McVickar. The speaker of the house. He's under the microscope. He's shaking his head dubiously. "I'll do what you say and do it quickly. But candidly, I don't think you can do it. If Blount should happen to go at him just another sign, there might be consequences of another sort. Gantry is pretty sure it is."

"Never mind about the consequences," Gantry said as I tell you to. Then go around to the telephone exchange and tell the manager that I want a branch operator—a man if he's got one—on this long distance wire; that you and I have a conversation between the capital and David Blount's country house, and that my wire is to be kept open to you and to Kiltregore all day long. Get the wire set up and guard the telegraph wires up here."

"Yes; all the way out from the cut-back," Gantry said. "All right. That's all. Now make that boy of yours burn the road getting back to the office."

The railroad organizer for the capital, the "pay boss" some called him, said Blount's son saw the door to a chamber of hidden facts slowly opening before him. For some reason Gantry, the twice bogged and sold, had been dropped, and his actual position now was plain revenge.

"It's in the registration lists in four wards of this town. They've been cooked up two or three. I've got the lists of the crooked names right here in my pocket," Blount exclaimed. "The names of six; know, and the names of six. But I'm the man that can know in them extra stops, and more than that, by grabs. I'm the only man who has been invited to go to it. I'll show him."

Blount's heart was in a wild, and his heart was pounding like that of a man who finds himself looking over the verge of a hazardous chasm.

"What is it that you want to do, Gantry?" he asked when he could control his voice sufficiently. "I want to give Sheehan and his machine a good thrashing, and to see if you can make anything out of the fact of the false registration?"

"You shouldn't touch that matter," said Blount coldly. "You get any one else to swear to the facts with you?"

"Sure I can. I can get a half dozen of the boys in my own gang that'll do anything for me."

"It was up to Blount finally and quickly, when Gantry said: "You've got to get your own facts straight. I'm hoping that you will find it out until after tomorrow, when it won't make any special difference."

"By cripes, I'll show him!" said Blount as he went straight to the editorial rooms of the Daily Capital. He had had every document in the editorial rooms of the Daily Capital. He had had every document in the editorial rooms of the Daily Capital.

"What is the matter?" queried Blount. "Have you heard?" said the editor. "Somebody has been only known to be the gathering up a lot of false registrations of citizens, involving a half a dozen of the best citizens in the state. The stuff came to us by a lot of newspaper routes that it is to be published. It's a corker. There'll be 10,000 people challenged in this state at the polls tomorrow, and no man living can tell what the outcome will be."

The matter which would appear under during some leads the better. He would have collected, carefully edited and printed, that it would be out all that might perforce, anybody but the machine and the machine's boss—his father.

"Blount was sure to be the man in the capital, if not in the entire state, who would have the courage of his convictions and the high sense of duty to act, and not to quail."

"I've got 'em, a full dozen of 'em," growled the editor, throwing a thick packet of papers on Blount's desk. "Now, then, what do I get out of it?"

"Blount stopped short and whistled as if the demand had been a blow. "You'll get just what any other criminal gets when he turns state's evidence," the editor said. "You won't be prosecuted and sent to the penitentiary, as you deserve to be. Now get out of here and don't let me have to tell you twice."

Gantry made a move as if he would repossess himself of the packet of affidavits, but he was stopped by the danger signals of the editor's eyes.

"No, you don't!" he said sharply. "I tell you to go—do it. And as you go, before the whole crowd, wear out, muttering curses."

"When the corridor door had closed behind the traitor Blount put the affidavits in his pocket and passed out quickly through the anteroom. He did not turn back to look back."

"Somebody sent a boy up to ask for you, but I sent word that you were not in, as you told me to."

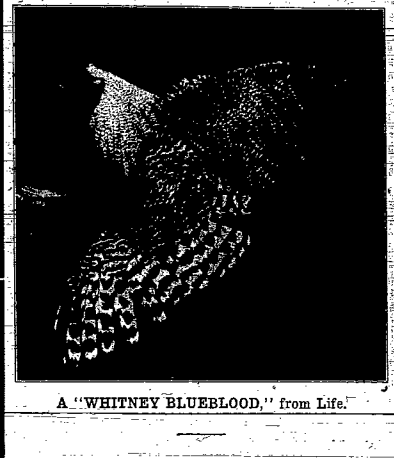

Evans realized that he had unthinkingly been barred out with all the other outsiders. And now she would drive to Wartrace Hall without him, and the terrible thing that must be done would be done before he should see her face again.

THE EARLY DAYS IN TWO COUNTIES

From the Wayne Review, published at Lawrence by Hunter & Childs, August 6, 1881:
Mr. Jordan who bought land in this county drove in his flock of 1000 sheep one day last week.

The Review complains that northeast Nebraska papers are busy trying to trace the county seat from Laporte to Wayne and back.
The Review registers vigorous protests because of the delay in completing a bridge over the North Platte.

Wayne is building up very rapidly and the prospects are that before the railroad is completed it will be a pretty fair town, after which it will only be a question of a few months before it will take rank with the average cities of the northwestern Nebraska.

At the present time there are four families residing within its limits, while houses for James Britton and Charles Johnson are being rapidly completed, and will be ready for occupancy next week.
The old Harbushburg store, owned by James Insaid, has been moved over and will be enlarged as fast as workmen can do it.

From the Wayne Herald, published by H. V. Seal, August 15, 1901:
The brick house erected for the residence of Edward and Pearl Strout.
George Seal is expanding for the new business house of J. P. Gaertner.

Rev. F. P. Barker preaches his farewell sermon at the Presbyterian church Sunday, August 16.
Just sixty days after planting corn in this part of town, A. C. Howard catches a stack of corn to rot.

Mr. John Connor, ex-county treasurer of Wayne county, buys property in and adjoining Fort Scott, and plans to move there the coming spring.

From the Wayne Herald, published by W. H. McKen, August 15, 1901:
Wayne defeated Stanton in a ball game by a score of 7 to 1.
F. A. Desbroth has decided to move to Chicago and there engage in the real estate business.

The little son of August Dangberg, being without of town, was kidnapped by the fact by a horse and master and fastured law home and other injuries.
August Samulson reports that his corn will yield twenty-five bushels to the acre, and that Fred Peterson's corn will go thirty-five bushels to the acre, the latter being the best crop of corn in the county.

From Fance Journal, published by Wm. Huse and W. N. Huse, August 13, 1911:
This Journal contains the following notice to candidates presented in an editorial vein, and it was probably appropriate to the time when it was written.

During the past week many candidates for office have appeared before the voters and by their friends their names are displayed about the political arena. Those who are thus dragged in to run by their admirers should be grateful for an office, especially a county office, is a big thing, especially in a pecuniary point of view, because there are only one or two offices which pay the wages of a dirt shoveler on the railroad.
But though holding a county office may be a poverty stricken employment, yet it is a position of trust, dignity and honor, the which ought well to support a man and his family without any money at all.

The happy man who after great trials and sore tribulations elected to office, should be grateful for the office, especially a county office, is a big thing, especially in a pecuniary point of view, because there are only one or two offices which pay the wages of a dirt shoveler on the railroad.

... assure even the most pressing business concerns, and devote yourself, body and soul, to improving your constituents with your own eloquence and humanity, and this importance. By this means you will become popular, and still gain votes when you campaign for reelection.
If your constituent desires to borrow money, your money lend to him if you have any money, which possibly may have if you have not been in office a great while. You must take time to divide and inquire with careful solicitude as to the health of himself and family. All these things will possibly in the future make your calling and reelection sure. And above all there is one thing which you, if expecting to be some a candidate again, must prominently keep before the public, and that is your poverty, and the fact that your office has cost you far more than you ever made in it. The salaries of all county officers consist simply of fees.

Now these little fees are trivial matters compared with keeping up a generous and noble reputation among the people. Hence, if after doing official work for a constituent, he should ask you to trust him for the fees, you must rejoice in the honor, as though the honor of trusting him was inexpressible. And being so overwhelmed with the joy of trusting out your fees, you should also, especially if it is near another election, take your friend out and treat him. You must not ask him to trust you, but you should trust him. You should not ask him to trust you, but you should trust him. You should not ask him to trust you, but you should trust him.

... need what you earn, you are now, in your exalted and glorious position, the property of those who placed you there. By this course you will gain renown, and when you come before the people again they will say to you, "He is a first rate good fellow, he never made anything in the office, and he is poor, and he'll vote for him."
If you are not a candidate, here is a nice card to play on an elderly constituent, out whose vote you are not sure of. You will meet your constituent and say to him: "How do you do, my dear sir? I have not seen you for a long time. I have hoped you would bring down your very interesting family and make us a visit. Yes, you have a very fine family, a generally bright and intelligent lot of children, especially your son, who, I should think, would make an excellent assistant in one of our county offices. There is no young man in the county who could do better."
Now change the subject and after talking about the price of wheat, come to the subject of the fall election. Then say, "Ah, by the way, my friends have been talking about my running for the office of..."

... It is not necessary to say another word. Your constituent is now cooked and ready for the fall election. And for a reward at this stage of the game is to get away from him as soon as possible, yet in a mild, affectionate and respectful manner. You are aware of his vote and influence, and where of his money. His money will work all his might for you with neighborhood noisy boys, who will work with their mothers, who will work with the heads of the families, who will come to the polls and will check it for you.

... It is possible that after election, Tom may want a clerkship, and you would of course give it to him if unforeseen circumstances and an unfortunate financial combination of untoward events had not prevented it.
This card should not be worked on more than one head of a family in each election district; as it might lead to serious mind, indeed, dangerous complications. When you first see the man, say to him, "I have a favor to ask of you, if you will take the time to call on me, I will show you wonderful things, and you will be surprised and regret, because of course you knew nothing of what your friends were about to do, and you did not investigate them to do it. You will, however, be very much finally contented to see and receive your own private business on the altar of your country. From the time you are first talked of for an office until your nomination, and from that time until your election, and afterwards during your office, if you take the time to run again, you must carry an amiable and placid countenance and a disposition showing sweetness and kindness from every pore.
If you come to town up in brief, if you take the course of humbly, devotionally and self-sacrificingly walking before your constituents, presenting an object and submissive demeanor, never disputing, but always agreeing with your voters, and being good for nothing, then those who snub you, and in all respect showing poverty, self-abnegation and a lively appreciation of the honors conferred upon you, you may be reasonably certain of holding your office during your natural life.

NEWS-ITEMS FROM HERALD EXCHANGES
Herald: J. F. Crosby returned Monday morning and stored the rest of his household goods and Tuesday morning left for the New York. He was not located permanently as yet but rather expects to engage in business at Sioux City.

Herald: W. F. Aschenbrenner this week sold the life insurance and belonging to Chas. Chase, in the north-east corner of Pilger, next to the Wayne county line, to Carl Wheeler for $17,000. This is considered a good price for household improvements and ten miles from town.

Randolph Enterprise: Down in Wayne county this fall F. B. Bense of Hocking is in the race for the republican nomination and will be opposed by Chas. Reynolds from the democratic side of the bottle. Bense is possibly capable, is of the highest integrity, and if elected will make an efficient official.
Randolph Times: While talking with a young fellow from Wakefield last Monday he told us that there had been a frost at Wausau Sunday night. As Wausau is dry we want say that he saw two moons where there should have been one but is very evident that he had been drunk in the city of "freeze." Don't say anything about a "frost" this time of year unless you have sufficient evidence that you care to make public.

Wayne Tribune: A letter to the Tribune editor from Mrs. B. M. McIntyre conveys the information that the doctor's father was operated upon successfully and that the old gentleman, in spite of his years, is doing well. The doctor, not some of his family, was killed in the big wreck as some Windie friends were afraid of, evidently, for surely Mrs. McIntyre would have mentioned it in her letter if any of them had been in the neighborhood. Cedar County News: The sale of the prairie schooner is again seen in the land of the Dakotas. A pathetic picture. The writer remembers seeing the prairie of eastern South Dakota dotted in the white centers of wagon wheels and round driven by drought from lands that are now worth from $50 to $100 per acre. The early settlers had bought too many harvesters and not enough hoppers. Their money had eroded here, here, and a failure of crops drove them out in flocks, back to lands that had been more thoroughly subdued. Those who were too poor to get away are now in many cases the best off. Country and ports western South Dakota now wage years to develop that country but some day it will blossom as the rose.

Saturday's Norfolk Daily News: The 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Knauth, farmer living eight miles north of this city, was brought here Friday and placed in charge of a physician, who found that the boy was suffering with a broken leg as the result of a fall from a tree on his parents' farm. Young Knauth was picking apples in a tree when he slipped and fell head-downward. His foot was caught in the crotch of a limb and he hung suspended there until the heel of his shoe was torn loose, releasing him from his dangerous position. The parents did not regard the injury as serious, but finding the boy could not walk, they brought him here. The fracture is not considered a serious one.

Madison Chronicle: The Norfolk News has been building railroads and other industries for years. Now they are on the point of discovering crude oil in the vicinity of Norfolk. They will keep at it until they get something out of it. They have discovered that crude oil comes up in the spring near Varnersville. We can get them one better than that. We have a farm 9 1/2 miles north-east of Norfolk, in section 29, Hocking precinct. Wayne county, which has springs on it and crude oil can be found on the water any time of the year. We say crude oil, but we never give it a chemical examination, however it is only in appearance. We have been firmly of the belief for several years that the day would come when oil wells would be a reality in his section of the county instead of imaginary.
