NEWSPAPER COMMENTS ON THE TAFT-ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGN

WHY T. R. WAS MAD.

(New York Herald.)

It was fashionable to publish letters with his political views to run against Mr. Roosevelt, who was especially discouraging.

MOST INCREDIBLE

(Springfield, Mass., Republican.)
The man who wrote the pledge to join to his political enemies, and also the letter of June 1911 announcing that he would not be a candidate in 1912, nor oppose any other candidate—this man was the sworn foe of deception in whatever form and the only man's club in history was formed under his inspiration, in order that he might emphasize his hatred of people who deviated from the straight line of truth and candor.

AS TO OFFICEHOLDERS' ACTIVITY

(Omaha Bee.)
The complaint about over-zealous activity on the part of federal officeholders in the presidential campaign is groundless. Any one who will think back four years, will find it completely bygone. That called attention to the occupant of the White House accused of swinging the big stick to force the nomination of Mr. Taft as his successor. Mr. Roosevelt's explanation that he never urged any officeholders to support him, but to abstain from so doing, does not explain, for the charges made in 1908 and but feebly denied, were that he urged them to exert themselves for his preferred candidate.

All this, however, misses the mark because President Taft, going much further in the direction of civil service reform than any previous president, has recommended to congress the abolition of the present appointment patronage. Were the reformer who now object to officeholders' activity sincere, congress would by this time have enacted such legislation which President Taft has bound himself in advance to support. It has not been passed this session, not without saying, because this sort of civil service reformers are for giving permanent tenure to federal officeholders only when their friends are holding down the job.

ROOSEVELT AND THE COURTS

(Sioux City Journal.)
In their 1896 platform the democrats handled the supreme court roughly on account of its decision "infringing the income tax law." And the democratic platform of 1908 was not without its criticism by a writer in the Review of Events as follows:

"Furthermore, the Chicago convention attacked the supreme court. Against this precedent of species of statism—that is, the recurrence to the ways and thought of remote barbarian ancestors. Savage do not like a manly and upright judiciary. They want the judge to decide their way, and if he does not they will have him."

Who wrote that criticism of the democrats for criticizing the supreme court? Doesn't the vigorous, incisive language give you a hint? Yes, of course it was Theodore Roosevelt. At that time the courts were exceedingly unpopular and Theodore was at the popular sight in lamplighting them. Since 1896 many of Bryan's policies have become popular, and in Theodore's day that the same plan of dealing with the courts was about due for a popularity using. And of course, Theodore wants to be in on it. And, of course, it is no trouble for him to recall his own decision made away back in 1896.

TAFT-STIMSON-ROOSEVELT

(Sioux City Journal.)
Secretary Stimson's well buttressed progressive arguments in support of Taft must have hurt Col. Roosevelt more than anything that has developed recently, with the possible exception of Senator Lodge's repetition of the Columbus platform after he had got ready to support Roosevelt on various grounds. Secretary Stimson is the leading New York progressive, established in that rank by Col. Roosevelt himself when he picked Stimson to lead the New York campaign as the republican candidate for governor in 1910. The Taft administration was endorsed in the platform on which Stimson made his race for governor, and the achievements of the Taft administration during its first eighteen months meet facts as the earnest of more progressive achievements to come. Since that platform was approved by Col. Roosevelt, Mr. Stimson has become a member of the Taft administration, and has his fellow progressive, Walter Fisher, of Chicago. Both of these friends of Col. Roosevelt have helped to direct the policy of the administration and progressive channels during recent years. Secretary Stimson has been pushing economics in the war department, while Secretary Fisher has been crystallizing a most progressive policy of conservation. If Col. Roosevelt could endorse the Taft administration as progressive in 1910, why Secretary Stimson or Secretary Fisher could have any excuse for not endorsing it as progressive now. Neither, in fact, has Col. Roosevelt. Secretary Stimson was still loyal to his old progressive principles when he endorsed Taft's change of office the other day. That he was no longer praising his old friend Roosevelt was due to the fact that Roosevelt had moved. In remaining loyal to principle Stimson had to stay by Taft. In getting away from Taft Roosevelt had to be disloyal to progressive principles as he had expounded them when Stimson was a student in his school.

TWO PRESIDENTS CONTRASTED

(Brooklyn Eagle.)
The people who read the Eagle have been presented more than once with Mr. Roosevelt's two renunciations and denunciations of a third term, and with his recent acceptance of nomination for a third term, if he can get it. His pledge, his reiteration of his pledge and his violation of his pledge can well be regarded as a political lesson.
"On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms requires the successor and not the former, and under an circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."—Theodore Roosevelt, November 8, 1904.

"I have not changed and shall not change that decision that announced Theodore Roosevelt, December 11, 1907."

"I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me."—Theodore Roosevelt, February 24, 1912.
On June 11, 1901, William McKinley, who had been re-elected for a second term, and who had been urged by some republican leaders to stand for a third term, made the following announcement to the people through the newspapers and himself handed it to the Washington correspondent of the Eagle that day:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, June 10, 1901. I regret that the suggestion of a third term has been made. I doubt whether I am called upon to give it utter, but there are new questions of the greatest importance before the administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in any way. I have even the suspicion of the thought of a third term."

"In view, therefore, of the reiteration of the suggestion of it, I will now say, once for all, expressing a long-settled conviction, that I will only accept a nomination if it is tendered to me, but I would not accept the nomination for it if it were tendered to me." "My only ambition is to serve through my second term, to the acceptance of my countrymen such generous confidence I so deeply appreciate, and then with them to do my duty in the ranks of private citizenship."—William McKinley.

In September, 1901, following the death of President McKinley, President McKinley was assassinated and Vice President Theodore Roosevelt entered on his first term as president. After his election to a second term, in 1904, President Roosevelt issued his two renunciations of a third term in the language given above, followed by his renunciation thereof a few days ago. None of these extracts needs any more comment than they make of themselves to any candid and intelligent mind.

ON THE CREDIT SIDE.

(Detroit Free Press.)
In this year of grace 1912 the American people are witnessing the most remarkable presidential campaign that this generation has known, and one of the most remarkable campaigns in all our history. Against the present occupant of the White House every conceivable attack is being made, and he is being held responsible for the real and imaginary shortcomings and faults of every branch of his party, while his opponents accord him no credits of any kind, except that of a shabby account they prepare for him.
Take the tariff subject as an illustration of this plan of campaign. President Taft is charged with every alleged mistake in the Payne-Aldrich act. There is no show of attempt to take the responsibility. Whatever a critic finds in the law to cavil about, that is Mr. Taft's fault. Yet everybody who can recall the events of three years ago can remember the fact.
The bill was passed through the house of representatives in one form. In another form the senate adopted a bill that was essentially a substitute. When the combined measure went to the president, does not everybody know what happened?

Minors talk to recall the strongest days which followed? There was a vigorous exchange of allusions between the president and the leaders in congress. This debatement went forcibly to the senate that some of the schedules must be lowered, that the republican party went into power pledged to do so, and revision through the president's public interpretation of the platform, and that this pledge must be kept or the bill would not be signed.

The ensuing controversy was almost violent, and in the end the president won his points. He did not get the wool tariff reduced, but the wool schedule, the glove duties and other sections of the act were brought down to the points demanded by the president.

Yet today there is no recognition of this. Mr. Taft is held responsible for the schedules that are called too high by his critics, whereas the determination of those levels was the work of the senate, and the president's only connection with them was to attempt to lower them.

The Payne-Aldrich law has worked many good results, but what credit is given Mr. Taft for any of them? He is blamed roundly for everything that can be construed into a bad effect, although he had nothing to do with any of these matters, and is charged with responsibility for the entire bill without offset for the benefits it produced. If he is to blame for what is thought wrong he should also be praised where praise is due.

The revenue has been brought by the bill from an annual deficit of $60,000,000 to a surplus.

Why doesn't Mr. Taft get credit for this? The revenue of the United States, $1,000,000,000 a year and his presence in the law is directly due to the president's insistence.

Why doesn't he get credit for this? He forestalled the present democratic program by the repeal of the tariff, the only feasible way of getting that addition to the revenue at all speedily. Why doesn't he get credit for this?

The attacks on Mr. Taft over the tariff are not fair. In a large degree they are even true. And the tariff attacks are only an illustration of the entire campaign against him.

The fight against the president is so manifestly unjust that it is defeating its own ends. The American people are too intelligent and too strong believers in the square deal to tolerate such methods, and they will inevitably react in Mr. Taft's favor; indeed they are already creating a noticeable inclination toward him.

THE COLONEL JOKE

(Denver Times.)
Mr. Roosevelt's latest: "It was not until the last three or four months that I was finally obliged to come to the conclusion that there was a real distinction among the people as to who for my nomination which did not come in any way from any personal friends of mine. AND WAS NEITHER INSPIRED NOR ENGINEERED BY THEM." If there is a Nobel prize for humor this will win it for T. R. in a walk.

THE COLONEL MISLED

(Topeka State Journal.)
We believe the masses of the people to whom Taft has endeared himself as a conscientious, broad minded, able president who has executed the functions of his high office with marked and exceptional success, will decide that Col. Roosevelt has not given President Taft a fair deal. * * * Roosevelt's action is too brutal toward Taft. It savors of the expression, "Sixty-six in the ring." It is an action of strength, not justice. The State Journal believes that Roosevelt has been overruled in his best judgment by an artificial environment that has been thrown around him by his advisers. "Sixty-six in the ring," and has taken these to reflect the real presidential feeling and the real attitude of the public on the present situation, when they do nothing of the kind.

AN INSURGENT DEFINED

(Sioux City Journal.)
Col. Roosevelt is versatile in the matter of apt definition. He once defined an insurgent as "a progressive with the bridge off." The colonel is now presenting imputation that he wears a bridge.

STIMSON'S SPEECH HURT

(Sioux City Journal.)
The things in Secretary Stimson's speech seem to have burrowed like "chiggers" under the colonel's epidermis. One was the reference to the colonel's having been "forced in" against his better judgment. The colonel hates to think of anybody thinking of him as being forced to do anything.

The other was the numerous references to the dramatic character of Taft concerning his accomplishments, carrying an obvious reflection on the colonel's record in the dramatic line. The colonel really is a pretty good actor, but he doesn't like the idea of the public's catching on to it. Hence the symptoms

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Improvised means destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what she has done, she has reached a complete nervous prostration. It is of the utmost importance to keep the nerves in a normal condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kline, 311 Michigan St., Toledo, Colo., says:

For many years I suffered from nervous prostration. I was unable to do any housework and could not sleep. My nerves were so bad that I was unable to help my mother. I had to be taken to the hospital. I was perfectly well, but I cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine. If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, lack of sleep, if you are unable to bear even part of the daily work of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but it is all there, why you should delay treatment.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has proven its value in nervous debilities for thirty years, and means to find no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you. Get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine and it falls to benefit your nerve. RETURNED. MILES-MEDICAL CO., ELKHART, IND.

Kidney weakness is the forerunner of many dangerous diseases.

Henry, in speaking of Father Martin, the newspapers are very naturally misled of the plebsian origin. After exhibiting it at Sioux City and surrounding places, Father Martin started with the fossil on a toy case, instead of a journey, as for a Chicago, exhibiting his fossil at all the points of note on the route.

WHY FOR THE WAGON? (Modern Version.)

The wise politician is lamenting. The region of silence right now: The band wagon seems to be wanting.

He's waiting and watching and pray: He's almost ready to burst.

He patiently waits for appointment: To come paying office in right time: While waiting to get the appointment, He knows not just where to wait.

He jumps in the wagon he is ready: To sped for his man he is hot: He looks he is waiting for a "toady."

HAPPY WOMEN. Plenty of them in Wayne, and Good Reason for it.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, After years of backache suffering, Pains of misery, nights of unceasing, The distress of urinary trouble.

Mrs. Henry Hanson of Wayne, Neb., says: "The first year I was troubled by sudden pains in the small of my back caused by excessive or too frequent use of cold. There was a steady, throbbing ache across my loins, and it was so lame and sore that I could not get up after sitting on the toilet. Headaches and dizzy spells annoyed me and the kidney secretions were in bad shape.

Nothing brought me any permanent relief until I used Dr. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

A. G. Old, Lagrippe, then Pneumonia, is too often the fatal sequene, and coughs that hang on, weaken the system and lower the vital resistance.

WHAT WILL HARVEST BE? (Pleasant Tribune)

The Taft boomers at Washington are authority for the statement that George W. Perkins, the partner of J. Pierpont Morgan and the controlling spirit of the harvest trust, is seen from Gifford Pinchot, the chief financial backer of C. Roosevelt. What then, may we inquire, will the harvest be?

THE COLONEL AND THE MAG-NA-NATZ (Sioux City Journal)

No doubt George W. Perkins of the steel trust and the harvest trust, had a good reason for his call on Col. Roosevelt. No doubt both the colonel and the trust magnate—yet to call him a "convalescent of great wealth"—had a good reason for not taking the public into confidence as to why and wherefore.

How Cold Causes Kidney Disease.

Partly by driving blood from the surface and congesting the kidneys, and partly by throwing too much work upon the kidneys.

When you have rheumatism in your foot or in any part of your body, it is not a sign of weakness.

There seems to be a general rule that the typewriter (neuter gender) will have properly only about six weeks at a time.

John W. Sichelsmith, Greenboro, Pa., has three children, and like most children, they frequently talk.

When you have rheumatism in your foot or in any part of your body, it is not a sign of weakness.
