The Missouri river is gradually taking up this farm, mortgage and all.

Wayne always gives the Savidges a full house. The main floor and gallery of the opera house were crowded Monday night when they presented "The Cry Baby." Elwin Strong in the leading role pleased everybody and his support was complete. The play pictures western life and is full of interesting situations. Walter Savidge's management is shown in the selection of talent and conduct of every performance. He is making a phenomenal success in the show business, and Wayne, his home, is mighty glad of it.

S. R. Theobald received a letter the first of the week from M. S. Davies, written at Spokane where he and his wife had stopped for a visit en route home. After leaving Spokane, they will make one more stop at Bismark, S. D., before reaching home. Mr. Davies writes of many interesting experiences in California where they spent the winter. One pleasing pastime was a fifty-mile auto ride through the orange belt as guests of L. P. Orth, formerly in the drug business in Wayne, but who now lives in California.

Walter Savidge closed his theatrical season Monday evening with the presentation of the "Cry Baby" and will spend a month in Wayne organizing for the carnival season which will open here June 4 in connection with a base ball tournament. Mr. Savidge has been very successful with his dramatic company the past season, and will resume the carnival business better equipped and stronger in all respects than ever before.

TEMPER TURNED LOOSE.

Though it seems incredible, there are women who, once thoroughly aroused and mad, can crush their usually seraphic, dove-like natures and convert themselves into veritable tornadoes of wrath and vituperation. One was in town Tuesday. She was delayed in getting letters which had been put into the postoffice box of some one else by the same name. She didn't get the letters in time to catch a certain train, and then she seethed with rage. She occupied the attention of the postoffice force for a time, and hurled thunderbolts of denunciation so fast that there was no chance for defense. Mild-mannered explanations were swept away by verbal cloudbursts. Excuses were engulfed by avalanches of barb-wire words. Pacification was spurned. War was courted. The scene showed how some women can become furiously militant when once thoroughly riled.

Grocery Facts Worth Considering --

This is the time of year when you are wanting a change from the heavy winter diets; the natural desire is for green vegetables and fresh fruits; no doubt you read the ads in the city papers of grocers that handle these goods as they come on the market. There are few people who realize the advantage of the city grocer over the country in getting this line of goods. The city grocer has their buyer of this department go to the market each morning and buy the amount that is needed for that day's sales and it is also possible for them to replenish their stocks in a very short time should they need more. Now the country grocer must buy this line by mail and is unable to go in person and pick out goods with the care that is possible for his city brother to do. I have made arrangements with a responsible man to take care of my needs while he is on the market buying for several city stores, thereby giving me the advantage of being there in person and being able to get the large quantity prices. This will not make me a great deal of money on green stuff alone, but combining the delivery of your groceries, fresh fruit and vegetables will make it possible with your co-operation, for me to continue giving quality Groceries, Fresh Fruits and Vegetables as they appear on the larger market.

Cheese Facts Worth Knowing--

Our shipment of fresh cheese each week is continuing to grow in popularity as new recipes are tried that are found in magazines. The old time way of eating cheese and crackers in quantities for lunch was found to be unhealthy and did in a way cause cheese to be cut from the list of articles of food. Today it is combined with different fresh vegetables and fruits making it one of the most popular as well as wholesome items one can eat.

Let me have your Grocery orders and find how much better it is to be able to get the markets' best establish all at one phoning or call.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

When I'm triumphant at the polls and my majority opprobrials, I know the people rule; the people in whom virtue has the high...
VOX POPULI souled people who despise corruption's noisome pool. When I have beaten Luther, crowd the people's side is ringing loud, the voice that nobly dares; I am their emblem and their sign, their voice is just the same as mine, my voice the same as theirs. But when I get it in the peck and leave the polls a dismal wreck, vox populi is still the cohorts of the people. Kings have formed conspiracies and rings to thwart the people's will. Oh voters who for pure things yearn, say, will you never, never learn to vote for none but me? When I am defeated Freedom grows, and Virtue weeps o'er mouldy bones. Vice wins the victory, I am alone the people's voice, and when I win the stars rejoice, and all the spheres are glad; but when I lose our sacred Vox is like a ship cast on the rocks, and righteousness is sad.

That old philosopher who spent his best years in a tub, and growled in peevish discontent—he was a tiresome dub. In youth he stained the landscape red and hit the places high; in age with sore and aching head, he raised a doleful cry. The world, he said, was out of plumb, and men were mostly fakes, because his mouth was feeling bum, and he was full of aches. He lay upon his hoghead couch, and ranted, wept and sighed, and worked up such a frightful grouch that it has never died. It seems surprising that his fame, like Banquo's ghost, won't down, while men who played a wiser game have failed of all renown. While this old duffer kicked and whined a million cheerful jays, who never murmured or repined, went on their useful ways, and they have moldered into dust, unhonored and unsung, while fame rewarded him who cussed until he broke a lung. We should rejoice that times have changed; the chronic grouch today is shunned as one who is deranged, whose head is full of why.

The pampered gourmet wishes for fancy kinds of dishes, kinds fit for Kings and queens; but to the humbler diner there's naught on GREENS earth that's finer than good old-fashioned greens. For months my soul was sighin' for spinach, dandelion and other wholesome yarbs; they are the sign and token that winter's back is brokep—the burgher that herbs. Oh, greens! There's nothing heats 'em! The man who daily eats 'em has better grub, by jing, to still his stomach's growlin' than ever yet was known in the palace of a king! Oh, greens! Our mothers stewed 'em, our fathers gladly chewed 'em, and hence those rugged sires who cleared the woods and parried and scrapped with wild beasts bairy, to guard their cottage fires. Note all those famous creatures whose proud and handsome features appear in magazines; if you but knew their story, you'd find they rose to glory through having eaten greens. All garden sass is splendid, and never may be ended the fame of peas and beans, may naught decrease the numbers of squashes and cowcumbers—but best of all are greens!

The gentle season goes its gait and soon will vanish from our ken; then summer, with its heat on straight, will broil the panting sons PASSING OF men. The heat will SPRING soak us day and night and man will cuss it as he fries; and all the doctors will unite to tell us how to swat the flies. I try to be a cheerful jay, but I confess, with downcast face, I hate to see the spring go 'way and sizzling summer take its place. I always multiply my sins beneath the burjing summer skies, when health department bulletins inform us how to swat the flies. I try to be an optimist, but even cheerful hearts grow sore; last year I slew a scientist who left a pamphlet at my door explaining that I am to blame when'er a human being dies because I shun the swatting game and don't exterminate the flies. A bard can take his lyre and sing with emphasis and fiery zest, concerning harmonies of spring, of babbling brooks and all the rest; but poets never take their harps to sing that time of brazen skies, when all the scientific sharps are telling how to swat the flies.

At this season man's afflicted with a score of grievous ills, and he's frequently addicted to the use of costly pills; or he buys THE REMEDY some bottled liquor made of barks and buds and leaves, and it makes him all the sicker, till his soul within him grieves. There's a cure for human creatures, there's a balm to heal them all; let them sit upon the flood, sit on a watch the boys play ball. Pity him who whines and wheezes over every little ill; if we brood o'er our diseases, they will grow until they kill; let our ailments be forgotten while we scratch for fun or fame, and they'll find their job so rotten they will of an jump the game. No one thinks about his liver, no one thinks about his gall, while he makes the welkin quiver, looking at a game of ball. Uncle Henry was complaining of the aches that racked his form, rheumatism, in him reigning, made his language blue and warm; and he blew himself for potions till he stood without a cent; and he soaked himself in oceans of ill-smelling liniment. Then he went to see a battle 'twixt the Pirates and the Blues, and he made the welkin rattle with his cockadoodledoos. Now there's not a better feeler underneath the spangled frame; every day he whips a peeler after witnessing the game.

MINES, Leading Jeweler

I toiled like a Turk last summer with shovel and hoe and rake. "My garden will be a hummer," I murmured, "and no mistake." A IN THE GARDEN roundelay blithely yelling, I labored in sweat and wash, and planted the stately melon and also the queenly squash; and quoting the works of Buian and quatrains from Pope and Gray, I planted the fragrant onion and succulent bale of hay. And all through the sizzling season out there in my yard I wrought, and often my feet were freezin' when otherwise I was hot. When other folks went a fishing, or hiked to the three-ringed show, I toiled in my garden wishing that I with the rest could go; but he who is bent on raising abundance of garden sass, who hopes for a crop amazing of spinach and sparrow grass, must cut out all vain excursions, steer clear of the giddy boys; for him there are no diversions, no fishing or other joys; And this is a man's reward in the day when the toil is done; a big pile of weeds in the garden, and a shortage of wholesome fun.

TORNADO NEAR HERE SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Black, ugly looking clouds gathered in the southwestern sky Sunday afternoon, and for a brief time suggested a tornado and the possible need of cyclone cellars. But the clouds scattered before reaching Wayne, and resulted in nothing aside from a light shower of rain. A few miles east of here, it is reported the wind was severe, doing slight damage to trees in spots.
In Vicinity of Norfolk. Monday's Norfolk Daily News: Wagging its tail like the rope of a balloon swaying to and fro, a tornado cloud passed over the business portion of Norfolk just high enough not to do any damage in the city and just high enough to be unnoticeable to but few

No one knew a tornado had passed through the city until the tail of the funnel-shaped cloud struck the roof of the H. E. Howard breeding barn on East Norfolk avenue, damaging that roof badly. Not a board was pulled loose but a jagged crevasse in the big roof shows a break which could only be made by some terrific force. Several thoroughbred horses were in the stalls beneath but not one of them was hurt. Two large pieces of timber were driven through the upper floor of the barn, but with this exception the lower part of the structure was not damaged in any way.
Those who were standing on a porch near the barn declared the crash sounded like thunder. It all happened so quickly that those watching did not witness the actual breaking of the timbers on the roof of the barn. The crash came and left—they then saw the damage.

Some freaks of the cyclone occurred a few yards west of the barn. Here a haystack was taken high into the air and deposited, upside down in a field. The shingles on the roof of the barn were turned white, almost a brand new color, showing that either steam or electricity were contained in the cloud. About 8 10-penny nails were drawn from a bee box, and the box was not damaged. The top of another box was broken as if struck with an ax, while all other parts of the box were not touched. A Fannell system chick brooder containing many small chicks was demolished and twisted into splinters, but not one of the chicks was hurt. The bottom of this brooder was not touched and every nail remained in its place in the bottom-boards.
The twister struck the barn at 3 o'clock and the rain cloud which followed brought enough rain to raise the Northfork river considerably.

The twister picked up a cow which was grazing peacefully in a field little to the southwest and carried the animal several rods. The animal belonged to Frank Canote and those who witnessed the landing declare the cow was on a dead run immediately after striking the ground.
The storm continued southeast and the tail slightly touched a barn belonging to Adolph Thiem, moving this building a few feet. The funnel then disappeared in a southeasterly direction without doing further damage.

Mr. Fisher has been engaged in the real estate business at Wayne but decided there was a good opening here and purchased the above stock. STORM INTERFERES WITH TOWN SHIP MEETINGS.

Last Sunday afternoon the severe storm which broke over this part of Wayne county seriously interfered with the success of the "teams" who went out from Wayne to hold religious services in various parts of the county. However, the men were well pleased with the receptions accorded them, and there is much enthusiasm in regard to the meetings next Sunday. Messrs. Redmond and Bright went to Winside on Sunday morning and report a very good meeting. This service was held during the forenoon. Ray, Gorst, accompanied by Messrs. Marsteller, Clasen and Blair proceeded to Grace church, but the large crowd which had assembled was already beginning to leave for their homes when they arrived as the sky had a very threatening appearance and a storm was imminent. In coming home this team was caught in the rain, and pulled into town with some difficulty. The team which went to Wilbur precinct noticed the coming storm and arrived in Wayne just ahead of the downpour of rain, making a fast run over the rather rough roads.

Messrs. T. H. Jones, Lewis and Brittel reached Carroll before the rain came, and had a very successful meeting after the storm had cleared away. However, the rain had fallen so heavily that a return trip in the automobile was impossible, and the party remained in Carroll until Monday morning when they returned on the train.

The team which was assigned to the McEachen school house reached the McEachen homestead before the storm, but a meeting was impossible. After enjoying a friendly visit with the McEachen family this team, consisting of Rev. Corkey and Messrs. Ferguson, C. S. Conn and Coleman, motored to the R. R. Smith home in the vicinity, and an hour of social converse and sacred song was enjoyed. The team returned home in the evening after the roads had dried somewhat.

All the places where the meetings were called off are anxious to secure teams for next Sunday, and arrangements have been made accordingly.

MARYLAND FOR ROOSEVELT.

Theodore Roosevelt won in the Maryland primaries Monday by a majority of about 4,000 over President Taft. Champ Clark carries the state by a plurality of about 4,000.

Baltimore, Md., May 7.—Theodore Roosevelt today clung to the sixty-six delegates to the state convention which the Maryland preferential primaries gave him yesterday and although this was but one more than the majority necessary for control, and the returns from many of the counties outside Baltimore are incomplete, enough have been received to establish his victory and the defeat of President Taft.

Democratic returns, incomplete, but apparently conclusive, give Champ Clark 72 delegates, Woodrow Wilson 44, Judson Harmon 4, with 4 votes from two counties still unsettled.

Get State's Sixteen Delegates.

These, however, cannot change the result. The Clark men claim both these counties and if established these claims would make Clark's vote in the state convention 91 and give him his plurality over Governor Wilson. Governor Harmon carried only one county, but the Harmon men believe his vote played an important part in the result, since they say much of it would have gone to Governor Wilson if the Ohio governor had not been in the race.

This means that both Roosevelt and Clark will take from Maryland to the national conventions a solid block of sixteen votes.

Deadly Glasses.

A contrast to the Venetian glasses which were popularly supposed to fly to pieces if poisoned liquor were poured into them were glasses which poisoned all who drank from them. The poison was crystallized at the bottom of the glass, from which it was indistinguishable, and as it dissolved very slowly it could be used many times with deadly effect. Some such glasses can be seen at the British museum.—London Chronicle.

Happy Thought.

Abby, the littlest girl of the family, was seated at the breakfast table one morning. As usual, eggs were served. POLICE OF RUSSIA

The Trick They Work to Gather In Political Suspects.

CAUGHT IN THE MOUSETRAP.

When, After a Secret Arrest, the Snare Is Set It Holds All Who Enter, Regardless of Nationality, Dress, Social Position or Official Rank.

Although the peculiar form of police ambuscade known as a mousetrap has had its highest development and its widest application in Russia, writes George Kennan in the Century, it did not originate in that country, nor did it receive there its strikingly appropriate appellation.

It was imported from France a century or more ago, and the name that it bears was given to it by Alexandre Dumas, in 1829. The distinguished French story teller described it in "The Three Musketeers" as follows:

"The invention of the mousetrap does not date from our days. As soon as societies in process of formation created police, the police in their turn invented mousetraps. As our readers may not be familiar with the slang of the Rue de Jerusalem and as it is fifteen years since we applied this term for the first time to the thing, we may be allowed, perhaps to explain to them what a mousetrap is.

"When in a house of any kind a person suspected of crime is arrested the arrest is kept secret, four or five men are placed in ambuscade in the first apartment, the door is opened to all who knock, it is then closed after them, and they are arrested so that at the end of two or three days the police have in their power all the persons who are accustomed to visit the place and that is a mousetrap."

Dumas does not explain that the trap is set and the first arrest made at a late hour of the night, generally between 1 and 3 o'clock a. m., so that the mice will not become aware of it and avoid the dangerous locality. You may call upon a "politically untrustworthy" friend in the evening, drink tea with him, discuss the state of the country and go home at midnight without having seen or heard anything to excite suspicion or suggest peril, but if you return to the same house or apartment early the next morning you are liable to fall into a mousetrap.

The trap, moreover, catches and holds every person who enters it regardless of nationality, dress, social position or official rank. Russian revolutionists are accustomed to assume all sorts of disguises, from the blue frock coat and wrinkled top boots of the gendarmierie to the sword, epaulettes and golden cords of the general staff, and if the czar himself in the uniform of the Preobrazhenski guards should visit inognito a house in which a trap had been set he would be arrested promptly and sent to the nearest precinct station house for identification.

No discretionary power of any kind is given to the police officers in charge. The mice caught may not look at all like the mice for which the trap was set, but even if they appear to be grubs or lizards or small, blind kittens they must go to the station house for examination and judgment.

In every large Russian city the police keep an alphabetical list of all persons who are believed to be in sympathy with the revolutionary movement or who for one reason or another are regarded as politically untrustworthy. Such persons are liable to be arrested on suspicion at any time and are almost sure to be taken into custody after the assassination of a high official when there is no clue to the assassin, and the police hope to get a clue by a dragnet system of arrest and investigation.

At such times a hundred arrests or more are often made in a single night, and in the houses or apartments of the persons made prisoners mousetraps are set to catch all comers. The police in charge of the traps are strictly enjoined to send to the nearest precinct station house every person caught, no matter what he may look like and no matter what plausible account he may give of himself. Revolutionists and terrorists often wear uniforms, and a man who declares that he is a colonel of gendarmes or even a general of division may really be a dangerous conspirator in disguise. The instructions given to the trap tenders are always implicitly obeyed, and they sometimes bring about results of an extraordinary and wholly unforeseen character.

JURY RECOMMENDS LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Lincoln, Neb., May 5.—Charles Morley, the only surviving member of the trio of state penitentiary convicts who broke jail March 11 after killing Warden Dehdant, Deputy Warden Wagner and Guide Heilman, was today found guilty of murder in the first degree. The jury recommended that he be sentenced to life imprisonment.

The jury returned its verdict at 2:20 this afternoon, having deliberated since 5 o'clock Friday. From the start the jury were agreed that Morley should be held guilty of first degree murder. Under the Nebraska law, however, it devolves upon a jury to recommend the penalty as well, making the choice between death and life imprisonment.

On this point the jurors held several heated debates, the majority at all times favoring life imprisonment, according to statements made by jurors today. Morley received the verdict quietly, breathing a sigh of relief when the clerk read the final words of the sentence, which saved him from the gallows. His mother wept during the court's brief session. With two companions, "Shorty" Gray and John Dowd, Morley escaped from the Nebraska penitentiary about 2 o'clock on March 11. The three met in the prison chapel, shot to death Deputy Warden Wagner as he sat in his office adjoining the chapel and blew open with an explosive the iron gate leading to the outside corridor. Warden Dehdant, meanwhile, opened fire on the trio and was killed in the interchange of shots. Guide Heilman also met death in the fight in the corridor. Sheriff's posse and hundreds of volunteers hunted for the fugitives for four days. On March 18, in a running battle in Sarpy county, thirty miles from Lincoln, Gray and Dowd were killed and Morley surrendered.

The Carroll Index has lately installed a new printing press and other new equipments, and the paper shows considerable improvement in appearance and matter under the management of R. R. Atkinson who lately took charge of the plant.

The Herald is informed that the local business of the railroad company was one-third larger in April this year than it was during the same month last year. That record ought to induce the company to view the Wayne territory with a friendly eye.

Calvin H. Blaker: The quiet man who stays all his life at home, who confides good word here and there for his neighbors, who keeps his animals and other amusements at home, who tries to keep his own front yard clean, and his yard, too, and who pays his debts and does his work without ostentation, is the real backbone of every community, and the fact that he avoids publicity and flaunting displays of all sorts does not lessen his worth.

In every small town there is a young man who has held a job with most every concern in town. But he doesn't good from long, and while the experience he acquires may be worth something, he is slated for trouble in a competition to cash in for as much as the youth who tackles something and sticks to it. Perseverance properly directed has often been known to hang one on genius which generalizes, trying to cover the whole scope of human effort as it passes. A man who sees all his opportunities in the distance is apt to overlook something worth while under his nose, or otherwise in close proximity. Go to the building, then human experiment station, and learn the possibilities of winning by hanging on.

BURRESS BROS' STALLIONS

We will have the usual number of big ton draft stallions at our barns in Carroll this season, consisting of Percheron, Belgian and Shire, also a good French-Coach stallion.

It pays to raise the best; good draft horses never were higher than they are this spring, and in spite of all talk to the contrary, good heavy drafters will remain high-priced.

Wayne county is noted for heavy drafters and we are doing all we can do to better them.

Call and see our stallions and get our terms.
