RAIN INTERFERES WITH LOCAL GAMES

Series of Games Next Week

Wet Weather Prevents Needed Practice—Notes on Recent Games—Players Behave Well.

The rain hurts. The boys can't even practice and we need having practice badly. Any team doing the best of a season. We can't win without hitting. We have the hitters, once they get going. By the end of next week five members of the team ought to be hitting 300 or better. Watch next week's paper for the averages.

The best team doesn't always win, it is clearly shown by that score. Winside 2, Wayne 0. We made eight hits to their six, but—Well, Slightly is going to make his feet behave next time and several other things are going to happen. Watch us Tuesday.

Do you know base ball. Figure this out: The first man up hits a three-bagger in a close game and a score means a great deal. What should the next batter try to do?

Here's another: The bases are full, with no one out, in a game where one score means a great deal; three general way hitters are next at bat. What should the next batter do? Both of these plays came up in the Winside-Wayne game and both teams missed their opportunity. What was the result?

In the Stanton game with the bases full and one out, J. M. Strahan hit a short infield fly over the pitcher, which no one caught. The man at first scored and J. M. was safe at first—at least he was not called out! Was he out? You ought to know.

Why is Shelly so expert at going through that wire fence after those long hits? Ask anybody who owned a watermelon patch last summer, between here and Wakefield? They know.

Martin Ringer will not play second regularly during the balance of the season and the management wants it known that they regret it more than anybody. We would rather lose any man on the team than Martin. He has given his time and his best efforts for 105 four years and has been a credit to us to the team and the town. His work claims his time now, but when he can spare a day to play we will be mighty glad to have him.

Have you noticed how free from kicking and "erabbing" all the games have been? The managers of all the teams seem to be in co-operation of the players in trying to make the game clean and sportsmanlike as well as attractive to the lady fans.

Don't forget—We play Norfolk Wednesday and Madison Friday, on our own grounds. The grandstand is free to ladies.

$500,000.00 Titanic Losses Paid By The Northwestern Mutual Life Ins. Co.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin

It might seem that a half million in Titanic claims would be a large drain on a life insurance company but for a company like the Northwestern that has weathered three large financial panics and which has a record of 55 years of successful business, it is scarcely noticeable while many a small company might, under like conditions, be forced to the wall. You will never regret to place your insurance with a company like the Northwestern that is able to take care of such large death claims.

The Northwestern has made a record breaker on two vital points, especially over that of 206 old line insurance companies doing business in the United States:

It paid in 1911 the sum of $1,780,117.00 more in dividends than in death claims. It being careful in selecting good, clean risks.

It paid $6,618,846.00 more in dividends than its actual cost of management, it being economical in business management.

The Northwestern had on January 1, 1912 the sum of $285,575,219.44 in admitted assets which are largely secured by first mortgages on real estate and loans on policies issued by the company. The company has the sum of $280,600.00 in first mortgages ON WAYNE COUNTY LANDS which is as good as gold. Over $6,000,000.00 first mortgages on eastern Nebraska farms. No funds loaned on sandy land. (The public's money is always well cared for with such security in the Northwestern.)

The Northwestern issues over thirty different kinds of policies and you can get anything you want in the insurance line. If you want a straight life policy it will pay you to investigate the Northwestern and get my figures or those of any of my agents before placing your insurance with orders or assessment companies whose rates will sooner or later raise.

Get a Policy with The NORTHWESTERN and You Will ALWAYS Be SATISFIED.

CARNIVAL AND BASE BALL TOURNAMENT

SUCCESS—DESPITE WEATHER

Big Crowds Attend Shows Under Canvas—Wayne Wins Two Out of Three Base Ball Games.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, large crowds attended and enjoyed Savidge Brothers' carnival, and the base ball tournament last week. The Flying Ballwings excited unusual interest. The different attractions were liberally patronized. The three under canvas was the central attraction, and the feet was packed at every performance. Saturday evening over 1,000 people witnessed the presentation of "The Cub and the Boss." Every play was first class, and was thoroughly appreciated. Catching the ball, the Savidge Brothers are well pleased with the closing days of their carnival season. They went from here to Hartington.

Closely matched ball games at the park three afternoons last week received the spirits of lovers of the national sport. Though the weather was unsettled and threatening a good-sized gathering witnessed each contest. Wayne won two of the three games played. The score on Thursday when Carroll played Wayne, resulted in a score of 8 to 3 in favor of the latter. Friday Wayne defeated Stanton in score of 4 to 2. Saturday Wayne went down before Vinsida, the result being 1 to 0. Following tables show how each game was played:

WAYNE COUNTY TOWN IS MAKING HEADWAY

A Herald representative made a brief visit to Sholes-Pringle, accompanied by Prof. Ben P. Robinson. That town is not large, but by showing considerable growth and improvement this spring, and is supported by its high educational attainments, as is found in the state.

The Wayne County Hotel, started at Sholes a few months ago, is putting up a splendid two-story brick building. The bank will occupy the lower floor as soon as it is completed, and the lodges of the town will occupy the upper floor. The institution has made large business gains since it was established, and its future shows promise of continued growth. The vicinity around Sholes amply warrants the banking enterprise.

Dr. Cook who recently located at Sholes, is putting in a drug store and is kept busy looking after the health of the community. Peter A. Hansen owned to Sholes lately and opened a barber shop, and it is said he is a first class barber for the business. William Lambing, blacksmith, is putting the finishing touches on a new house. The tin-jug brothers, hardware merchants, A. E. McDowell, lumber dealer, and Closson Brothers, proprietors of the general store, have big stocks and generous patronage. Having a rich country to draw from, and handling good grades of things people want, they are doing well.

WAYNE COUNTY CASE IN SUPREME COURT

The action in the supreme court involving the question of ownership of the old fair grounds at this place, was given attention last week when briefs were filed. The court has given the defendants, who are represented by William V. Allen, William T. Bowling and James Britton, until July 3 to prepare and file another brief, covering new points brought up, and the county responds, until August 6 to file an answer.

The Lincoln News publishes the following in regard to the case: "A warm debate was staged in the supreme court today over the proposition whether the county of Wayne could confiscate the twenty-six acres of land owned by the Wayne County Agricultural society." The county scored a victory in the lower courts, and the trustees of the society and the speed association which succeeded it appealed. The county's claim is based on the fact that it expended $300 in fitting up the grounds back to 1888 and had contributed to it in past years under the law allowing counties to aid agricultural societies. The court's attorney contended that the society is a quasi-municipal corporation; that the corporation and not the individuals purchased the land for the purpose for which the corporation was created, and cannot now, because the money they paid for the stock was used to buy the ground, that under the law the creation of an agricultural society is an act of a municipal corporation to promote agriculture, horticulture and the mechanical arts, and when the agency exists the county holds such property for the benefit of the inhabitants of the county; that an agricultural society that has received aid to improve or fit up its real estate becomes a party to a contract with the inhabitants of the county giving the aid to the farmers of which there is a joint dedication to the purposes of the society.

"The trustees insist that at the time the society was organized there was no state law providing that where a county assists a fair association the land forfeits to the county when no fairs are held for two years. They insist that even if there were such a law it is unconstitutional because it takes property without due process of law and takes private property without compensation. The men who bought stock in the society did so for the purpose of promoting the interests of the county, and it was urged that because after twenty-one years of non-renewable investment, they decided to hold no fairs, they could not be penalized by taking away from them all that they had invested. It was pointed out that the legislature is not supreme under the present form of government, being but one of the organs of the sovereignty which resides in the whole body of the people, and like any other department of government can exercise no power outside the limits which are delegated to it. When it steps beyond that boundary, its acts, although they may be legislative in form, are void as any other department or officers transgressing their authority."

"One studious investigator announces that we are on the verge of social bankruptcy; another professes to see in the worst the promise of greatest good; both agree that the condition is one of change. But all who are concerned may take comfort. The advance of the race has been made through just such conditions as these. Every page of history shows a parallel; the worst that seems so dominant is but the prelude of a better thing to follow. Substantial advancement is sure to follow the agitation, but only such as can be founded on the sure basis of due order. The laws that govern the advance of the race, although they may not be written down in fixed language, operate with certainty and exactitude."

"The most discouraging feature of the present situation is the apparent danger to the state with order, to diverge from the safe-path of experience, and to achieve by a short-cut the goal. This is not novel, for the same conditions have been noted many times, and the end has always been a retracing of the way until the mistake was corrected. Impetuously, their characterless, their selfish, their narrow, their mean into many blinders, but they have shown an equally marked aptitude for correcting their blunders, and starting anew. So imminent danger that threatens because of apparent loss of regard for

COMMENCEMENT OF THE EIGHTH GRADE

SIXTY-TWO RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

Rev. Alexander Corkey Gives Interesting and Instructive Address—Court Room Full.

The commencement exercises for the eighth grade, held at the Wayne county school were held in the court room at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The boys and girls living in the vicinity of Taylor came in early, and the trains from Bloomfield, Norfolk brought others from Sholes. Carroll, Hopkins and Winsida until the total eighth graders numbered sixty-two happy and intelligent young people all anxious to receive the credentials to which they were so well entitled. Parents and friends of the graduates came in very early and were organized and some remained standing in the hall.

At the hour appointed the long line of graduates filed into the place reserved for them and the audience quietly arose while Rev. Floyd Blessing pronounced the invocation. Miss Terrell came and rendered a vocal solo suitable to the occasion and pleasing to her audience.

Following this Mrs. Littell introduced Rev. Alexander Corkey of Wayne, who for almost an hour entertained and instructed those who heard him. It is not possible to give his address in full, or even a part of it, but his plea was that the young people be grateful to parents and teachers who made it possible for them to attain what they had that they take advantage of the opportunities to achieve greater things, and that they make their lives lives of service to some field regardless of how humble it may seem.

The solo, "There is a Green Field Away," sung by Willis Fleetwood, needs no comment as the name of the singer is sufficient.

President U. S. Coan of the Normal college after a brief and fitting speech, presented the diplomas to the graduates. Mr. Coan showed the interesting statistics that the eighth grade graduates is better prepared for life's work than he who is not such a graduate. The high school, he said, gives one the advantage over the eighth grade graduate, and the college education still increases one's chances for success.

The occasion was one long to be remembered by the graduates who participated in it, and by their parents and teachers. It is doubtful whether any county in the state can show a larger percentage of successful applicants. It would seem that these exercises should be an incentive for others to remain in school until they, too, have completed the course. Wayne county has caused to be printed and to be printed for or rural as well as its village and city schools.—B. F. R.

ORDER AND PROGRESS.

Omaha Bee: Americans are just now indulging in a riot of ideas, which may in due time be effectively coordinated, but at present seem an inextricable confusion of vain efforts to find a royal road of human happiness. Political business, such as life in all its manifestations, have been caught in the maelstrom set whirling by the demand for "progress," and seem spinning helplessly in the drift. A spirit of pseudo progressiveness has possessed the so-called old order is attacked from all sides at once by the clamorous advocates of change. And many of these latter imagine they are the promoters of progress, or at least of the best of which will be good for all. Others, wedded to things as they have found them, are apprehensive of the conditions, seeing only disaster ahead if the vaguely outlined plans of the "progressives" come to fruition.

"One studious investigator announces that we are on the verge of social bankruptcy; another professes to see in the worst the promise of greatest good; both agree that the condition is one of change. But all who are concerned may take comfort. The advance of the race has been made through just such conditions as these. Every page of history shows a parallel; the worst that seems so dominant is but the prelude of a better thing to follow. Substantial advancement is sure to follow the agitation, but only such as can be founded on the sure basis of due order. The laws that govern the advance of the race, although they may not be written down in fixed language, operate with certainty and exactitude."

The things that are orderly and exact may be averted by a return of calm and deliberate thinking after the clamor of the agitator has been quieted somewhat. None of the institutions on which the liberty of the people has rested is seriously involved; abuses that have grown up under the law will be removed and a better way of doing things may be found. But it is not conceivable that the fundamentals of our government will suffer. Even in the confusion of disorder may be discerned the workings of order, and out of it all will come progress. For it is true now, as it always has been, that through all nature are revealing purposes, plans, and the minds of men are broadened with the process of the same. Order must rule that progress may come.

Good form

Here Are Bargains Worth While. It is not often you can save so much on goods that are right in season. This unusually big cut in prices is due to the extremely cool weather which has interfered greatly with the sale of these goods.

Company Manners. To begin with, there should be no such thing as "company manners." True courtesy springs from the heart and it is only selfishness that makes some of us invariably turn a smiling face to a stranger and reserve our scowls and bad tempers for our nearest and dearest. It is as important that children should early be instructed in the duties that they should read and write for some people are taught to be deferential to their elders, to be polite and generous to their playfellows, and are instructed in all the small courtesies of life they will have been given something which will help them greatly to achieve success in after years, no matter what their position. The children are great imitators, and it is impossible to teach them these things if the father and mother are not courteous to each other.

$1.75 White Waists at Only $1.00. There is an extraordinary reason for selling these new waists at so much below cost—namely the extremely cool weather which has cut the sale of these white waists down fully one-half.

$3 and $3.50 Low Shoes (Last Season's Styles.) on sale at $1.50. These are oxford and strap pumps in kid and patent leather which were left after last season's selling. The leather in them and the making is just as fine as you'll get in any $3.50 or 3.00 shoe.

Spring Coats at a Good Reduction. Just fifteen coats left. They are all new and late styles having come in during the last few weeks. There are several white serges, two tan serges and six are of mixed cloths in gray or tan.

50c Silk Tissue Dress Goods at 30c yd. If you have not bought your summer dress here is a chance to save handsomely on the materials. These silk mulls are fully as pretty and much more serviceable than silk. The designs are copies from silk foulards that sell at $1. There is a nice assortment of patterns from which to choose.

Birth Announcements. Many people do not like the idea of announcing the birth of a child in the newspapers, says Florence Howes Hull. They argue that it is not a matter to interest the general public, but only the friends of the parents. The old English custom was to tie up the door knocker with a white ribbon as an announcement of the happy event. A pretty modern method is to have baby's name, without any prefix, written or engraved on a ring and this is fastened to the visiting card of the mother with a small box of white ribbon and sent to relatives and friends through the mail.

Good Form in Dress. Few women know how to put on their clothes. This sounds like a very startling statement, but let us stop and think over the matter quietly. How frequently we see women with dignity, well made and even well cut blouses, and yet how few appreciate the beauty of the garment, and why? Because the blouse is not pulled down tightly at the waist line and fastened to give either by hood or floor and safety pins. Then, too, the collar is probably not carefully bowed so that it will fit the neck snugly. Each woman should study the shape of her own neck, not some one else's, and find just where the bones must be placed in order to make the collar fit well. A still better plan is to take a piece of heavy paper and cut a pattern for the collar which exactly fits the throat and then have every collar made from that pattern. Curve it down under the chin so that the collar will not break, then let it stand up high just back of the ears and in the middle of the back.

The Art of Accepting Gracefully. I wish that there were more of the graciousness of fortune or gifts. Did you ever think how rarely flattered are the abilities of most persons along this line? Many of us can give beautifully. We can say the prettiest phrases, write the timely good wish to accompany a gift, but when it comes to receiving graciously our energies are overtaxed, and we become embarrassed, ill at ease and sometimes very tactless. Learn to receive as well as to give. Let your gratitude be shown in as fine a way as your generosity. It can be acquired.

A Prompt Repulse. The invitation to dinner or luncheon should be answered without delay, and in the reply it is well to repeat the name of the host to prevent any mistake. Do not accept an invitation with a proviso "if nothing happens." Remember that your hosts may want to fill your place with another guest if you cannot accept.

The Poet Philosopher

Old Gomer, of a Kansas town, was never known to wear a frown, or for many a day he might be seen smiling along his way, and TIMBERTOGS does his work from day to day, he goes on a wooden leg. And every time he goes out doors, he mires some peevish gait who roars about his evil luck; some fretful gent with leg of flesh who, with scientific comeliness, proceeds to run amuck. Stron men with legs of flesh and bone, just stand arid the streets and groun, while tamer pegs along, and puts up his long legs through, and sounds his joyous whoop, and makes his life a song. Old Gomer never sits and broods over the banal's sentiments, to fill the air with his "I'm a philosopher" air. He brags about that basswood limb as though it were a prize. Sometimes I'm full of woe and grief, convinced the world brings no relief until a man is dead; and as I wait that things are wrong I see old Gomer hop along and then I seek my head. I've noticed that the men who growl, the ones who storm around and howl, and the ones who are mostly Fortune's special gift; and then the man who never frets but is one with red elm knees.

I used to guide a safety plow drawn by two buckskin mules; the honest sweat streamed from my brow and lay around in pools. And as I labored in the IMAGININGS field I saw the rich drive by. "I wish that I like them were heeled," I sadly used to sigh. "How full of soul is the man whose wealth is in holes, like his, who doesn't have to drive a span of bayouise mules all day! It isn't fair that one should back upon a golden stack while t'other man pursues a task that breaks his heart and back. And now I ride around in state, deferred to by the throng; and I have greenbacks by the crate, for which I need to beg. I look with envy at the hale who ply their farming tools, who wish and wish they had my seeds while whirring up the mules! "It isn't fair," I sigh, "that some should back in perfect health, while my insides are out of plumb and can't be cured by wealth. I'm old and battered up in the truth, and would rather enjoy the peaceful days of youth, the first gift of the gods! It isn't fair—there's something wrong! I'm 'n' too shortwinded now to push those buckskin mules along and guide the safety plow!"

My sisters want to vote today but they're in despair! The lady barber didn't come in time to fix their hair—they want to help MARCHING ON the uplift, but they wear the girls are marching on! Some of them are at stake and every girl should vote; but should she venture to the polls in common walking coat? Perhaps 'twere better far to wear the new style zephyr—the girls are marching on. The ballot is a sacred thing, and when that hour is here, the bones of our ancestors will shade their sepulchers; but should I take her parcel or wear her winter furs? The girls are marching on! "The right to vote," my sisters say, "is quite too sweet, we wish it is a wholesome pastime that we long have sorely missed; for we have soured on crokinole and we have tired of what! The girls are marching on! I, as my sisters how they'd vote if they should vote today; she gets the problem, weighty thought, and this is what they say—"We'd vote for Mrs. Jimson votes, then vote the other way." The girls are marching on.

All day she is toiling, she's baking, she's boiling, she's cleaning the window's, she's sweeping the floor, she's THE HOUSEWIFE sewing on patches and picking up matches and chasing the agents away from the door. She's cooking, she's canning, she's scheming, she's planning, she's looking for dust with her eye to a lens; she's laboring hard in the early spring garden, she's begging the neighbors to keep up their hens. She's dying to dress, and spitefully confesses she'll look pretty well when they're tucked inside out; she's putting up pickles to save a few nickles, she's whacking up cabbage to make into kraut. There's no rest or play time through all the long daytime, there's nothing in sight that would make her heart glad; and when she's sitting, she takes up her knitting to feckle it sock or a muffler for dad. Oh, why should a woman do tasks superhuman! What pleasure to her does existence accord, and what is the guerdon that pays for the burden—where finds she the profit, and where the reward? The husband is coming, a fondly humming, he calls her a good thing and today she's ready for a ready, face bright, eyes sparkling, she seems quite content with such payment as this!

"The beautiful things are the things we do; they are not the things we wear, as we shall find when the journey is through, and the BEAUTIFUL roll call's read up there. THINGS—We're illustrating the latest styles, and the amount that beats the laurels of the beautiful things are the kindly smiles that go with the helping hand. We burden ourselves with pleasing gowns, that neighbors may stop and stare; but the beautiful things are diamonds of state that the righteous wear. There are beautiful things in the poor man's coat, though empty of honor and credit; love and service are such, though that husband and wife may hold. There are beautiful things in the lowest slum where wandering outcasts grope; when down to its depths they see you come with message of help and hope. The beautiful things that we mortals buy and flash in the crowded street, will all sink when we come to die, and march to the judgment seat. When everything's weighed on that fateful day, the lightest thing will be gold. There are beautiful things within reach today, but they are not bought or sold.

When he wrote a letter he used up a quire; he strung words together with fervor and zest, and told of the weather, the crops and the price of—ha! Mary was having much grief with her hair; he told of the spavin upon the bay mare; the big potted garden; he was ever thought worthy of attention by intelligent people and that was that the public school teachers might possibly use the Bible to teach sectarianism. The speaker indeed declared this to be a disgraceful slander on our public school teachers. "No one wants sectarianism in our public schools," he insisted. "The teaching of sectarianism in our public schools has always been against our republic, but it is our patriotic duty to cherish morality in our schools, as this is the prop on which our political prosperity depends. Since we make blasphemy a crime amongst us, we are in duty bound to teach the children reverence. There is as much sense in refusing to allow Lincoln's Gettysburg Address to be read in our public schools because some teachers might possibly use it to teach partisan politics as there is in objecting to any way to daily reading from the Bible because some teacher might use it to teach sectarianism. The objection is childish, and it is the only objection ever entertained by any intelligent American to this magnificent improvement."

SERMON ON BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The sermon by Rev. Alexander Corkey at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening has elicited much favorable comment, and the Herald is pleased to reproduce it in part and substance as follows: Last Sunday evening Rev. Alexander Corkey gave an address at the Presbyterian church on the Bible in our public schools. This movement was not originated by the church, but was the result of observant patriotism. This movement should have the support of every patriot in America because it was a return to the practice of the fathers in the best days of our republic; and it was a practice in harmony with the very spirit of our institutions. The chief advocates for this movement in the interests of all the public schools are the leading educators who are in charge of our schools. The speaker paid a high tribute to the public school teachers and declared that they were faithful to the trust given them by the people, as they took deep interest in the development of the boys and girls, not only mentally but physically and morally as well. The speaker also mentioned the solemn words of George Washington in his Farewell Address in which he declared that "religion and morality were indispensable supports to political prosperity," and he called on politicians, even if themselves devoid of piety, to "cherish and respect them." An association was founded on the Bible, as Andrew Jackson so forcibly declared, and it was the best held in the highest veneration by all the leading founders of America, it should have a place of pre-eminence in every educational institution supported by the State. "Daniel Webster once declared," said the speaker, "in prophetic words the intimate relation between the Bible and our nation: 'If it is not our duty to descend to abide by the teaching and authority of the Bible we shall go on (as a nation) conspiring and to conquer, but if ever we, or our descendants, neglect the teaching or authority, no one can tell how sudden a catastrophe will overwhelm us and bury our glory in profound obscurity.'"

The speaker also mentioned that educators were calling for the improvement by referring to the resolutions of the National Teachers' association in Minneapolis in 1902, and the Michigan State Teachers' association in 1911, as well as by quoting leading Nebraska educators, including Hon. James E. Dolan, the present state superintendent of public instruction and Superintendent J. H. Kemp, ex-President of the Northeast Nebraska Teachers' Association. In his own experience as a teacher in the public schools for twenty-four years, State Superintendent Deibel opened his schools every morning with a reading from the Bible, declaring that he believed it was the most helpful thing he could do for the morals of the children. The speaker then took up the objection that our supreme court had ruled the Bible out of the public schools. "This is the latest kind of a slander on our supreme court," he said with emphasis. "Not only has our supreme court ruled against every motion to such a foul, ignorant, and disgraceful decision, but on the contrary here is the very language of our supreme court in regard to this very matter." The speaker then quoted from the court's decision in 1902 as follows: "The law does not forbid the use of the Bible in the public schools; it is not prescribed either by the constitution of the states; and the states have a right to declare it as such to be unlawful." Further comment on this case the supreme court says in regard to the Bible: "Its contents are largely historical and moral. Its language is unqualified in purity and elegance. Its style has never been surpassed. Among the classics of our literature it stands preeminent. It is a book which, since such a book is in our possession to give daily readings from it in every public school in the land is the solemn duty of the people, and it is very true to our country not to give it this preeminence."

Drove of horses, colts, cows, calves and pigs tramp up and down the streets regularly every night. They take partial pains to travel on the sidewalks, and if what is not a man in general appear and chatter they are breaking up the walks and tramping them all out of shape. A Banker Hill celebration took place at St. James, Cedar county, on Monday, June 17. The Ponca band went up and discoursed sweet music on the occasion. We are informed by one of those who attended that the celebration was held in finest grounds that of large numbers were present and that the affair was in all respects a success. D. C. Patterson, esq., the superintendent of schools of Wayne county, was in town on Tuesday. He speaks most favorably of the crop prospects in that section this year, and states that it is rapidly rising up. The county seat is being growing and will in a short time become a large place. Possessed, as Wayne county is, of some of the best lands in the state, it offers great inducements to settlers. The one thing needed is a convenient market. To attain that object they will have a railroad. Of course it should be the C. & B. H. fizzle, but very likely the Omaha and North-western railroad will come to this section of Wayne county at last. It is to be hoped that the citizens of Omaha will see to it that the road is pushed forward into Wayne and Dixon counties at once.

Three years ago they owned a good farm near Portland, Ia., which they sold at a sacrifice and moved to Kansas, a country that seemed to be more full of promise than this. But after a failure of crops for three years they concluded they had seen about enough of a scorched soil, so loaded their wagons and started for their former homes. They say there is still no show for a crop in Kansas this year, even if our recent storms did extend to that country, as with plenty of moisture all they could do now would be to plant corn, which would only be a stunted growth at best. At the time they left Kansas the fields were almost devoid of verdure and the soil resembled one's yard that has not had any

IDEAL TYPE OF ROAD PAVEMENT

A Combination Highway to Be Tried in New Jersey.

GOOD UNDER ALL CONDITIONS

A. A. Meeker, State Highway Engineer, His Novel Plan For Making Serviceable Roads With Strips of Different Materials—Would Be Cheap.

The question is being asked on every side, "What is the best pavement for country roads, especially those that are subjected to a mixed motor-and-horse drawn traffic?"

The answer to the question embraces several factors. These may be summarized under three general headings, utility, durability and cost. The most useful pavement is best described by the phrase coined at the close of the eighteenth century by the framers of the original tariff act: "that is, it must be smooth, hard and convenient for travel at all seasons of the year."

A pavement that meets these requirements leaves nothing to be desired. In New Jersey we have an abundance of good material in certain sections, while in others it is lacking. The gravel in some portions of south Jersey makes an excellent road for six months of the year if the gravel is not too heavy. The trap and dolomite of the central and northern sections make a good road at all seasons, but they have two bad qualities—one that they become dusty in dry weather, the other that they break up and rattle under heavy travel. To combat these two evils various bituminous materials have been employed, but the proper materials were not employed, have been satisfactory, except that the surface is slippery in cold weather.

To overcome this objection it is proposed to build our trunk lines as follows: Pave the twelve feet in the center of the road with a mixture of stone and asphalt and on each side of this in plain macadam pavement—four feet wide by four inches deep. In slippery weather on a road of this sort the horses can travel on the stone or earth side, allowing one wheel of the wagon to run on the bituminous pavement if the driver so desires and having a sufficient room for an automobile to run in the center. By following this method three ends would be attained—first, the roads would be able to travel over the road without stopping second, a most satisfactory and wider pavement would be had for less money—and third, there would be less obstruction to traffic.

A continuous pavement sixteen feet wide would cost more per mile than a combination pavement twenty feet wide built as above suggested, and as an added advantage of the latter the traffic would be distributed over the entire road.

A pavement laid according to this plan would also be free from the disagreeable and unsightly drop at the edge of the other kind, so that when a vehicle is on a road of this sort the horses can travel on the stone or earth side, allowing one wheel of the wagon to run on the bituminous pavement if the driver so desires and having a sufficient room for an automobile to run in the center. By following this method three ends would be attained—first, the roads would be able to travel over the road without stopping second, a most satisfactory and wider pavement would be had for less money—and third, there would be less obstruction to traffic.

ROAD WORK HINTS.

Bad roads have been tried and convicted of highway robbery. Wake up and realize the cost to you of bad roads.

Every road built adds value to the whole country. It will immediately improve the condition of earth roads.

One will never be able to calculate the loss to the farmers from bad roads.

Bad roads have much to do with the highest of living. Don't try to check the good roads over.

The combination of holes, mud and ruts is an expensive possession. One should devote some thought to preservation as well as construction and to drainage as well as surfacing.

The chief cause of the bottomless condition of roads is the lack of proper drainage. In any circumstances place sod, roots, organic material or without dust or mud on the surface of a road.

Bad roads make any kind of transportation difficult, unpleasant and wasteful of time and labor.

The "penny wise, pound foolish" policy is always better than the one created by the people, for they want good roads and plenty of them.

Thomas Nelson Page Tells of Benefits in Matter of Good Roads.

"Of all the material affairs of the country at present," says Thomas Nelson Page, the roads, "are the most important and far-reaching. Every improvement of our roads is a direct increase in the value of our property and a direct assistance toward the improvement, physically, morally and mentally, of our people. It is not too much to say that in the southern portion of this country we are fifty years behind at least a part of the north in this matter of roads, and we are 200 years behind Europe, at least in this matter of good roads, which I have traveled, extending from the northern felds of Norway down to the southernmost points of Italy and Spain."

"One thing need to be educated in this matter of good roads, as much as on any other matter in the world. It takes a long time to establish a new idea in the minds of a great conservative population, but this new idea is taking root among our people and will in time become established. The new idea of farming is being introduced, which is already increasing materially the productivity of the soil and the knowledge of our farming population as to the value of improved methods, and it is as certain as any other law of nature that the same will come. The only thing that we should do is to postpone until our generation are all dead and buried whether we shall bring this improvement in our own time and get the benefits of it—whether we shall use our knowledge and our opportunities to give to the rising generation the benefit of the same."

Benefits which come directly from a great system of good roads opening the way to enlightenment and comfort of all kinds of whether we shall have the benefit of it or suffer from such a system and possibly even from the want of knowledge that such improvement is essential.

Better Highways Will Increase Church Attendance.

"At the national good roads congress Bishop Fallows said: 'The roads are the chief factor in the distribution of goods in the country. Districts would not only increase the church attendance, but would improve the general moral tone of the community. It is a work that is worthy of the assistance of all the churches in the country.'

"That is good gospel. A man's ideas are never always better than the fair surroundings. Order, neatness, usefulness, constitute a sort of high plane of thinking. Given the character of the material conditions of a road, it is inevitable that the progress of a community. A bad outlook pulls a man down like a bad companion. Ohio State Journal.

Women to Help Beautify Roads. The Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs has joined in the good roads movement in that state.

It is a matter of regretting the advisability of making fine roads or establishing cross state highways, the women will make a plan for the abatement of landscape disfiguring signs and signs on the roads. The cross-state routes that the roads might be made shady and more beautiful.

BUILD ROADS TO SUIT THE TRAFFIC

Spend More Money and Use the Right Kind of Material.

WILL BE CHEAPER IN THE END

Chief Engineer Dean of Massachusetts Tells How to Overcome Difficulty of Building a Road to Withstand Both Horse and Motor Drawn Vehicles.

The necessity for building roads to suit the traffic they are to bear was emphasized by Chief Engineer A. W. Dean of the Massachusetts highway commission, formerly state engineer of New Hampshire, in an address made at the New Hampshire good roads congress in Concord, N. H.

"A road should be built to withstand the traffic passing over it, according to Mr. Dean, no matter what it costs. If an expenditure of $12,000 per mile is required to construct a road to carry a certain amount of traffic without undue subsequent outlay for maintenance, and if a road costing less will not sustain the traffic without too large maintenance charges then it is economy to expend the larger amount in the original construction. It is also better, he held, for a state or a municipality to build one mile of good road that will remain good without a large maintenance cost than to build two or three miles that will remain in good condition only a short time.

Before building any section of road the kind and amount of traffic that it carries should be ascertained, the future traffic should be estimated and considered as regards both kind and amount and the character of the surface to be laid thereon determined, taking into account also the nature and availability of material. If after having made such determination and estimating the cost of the work it is found that the funds available are not sufficient it is much more economical to build a lesser mileage than originally planned than it is to build the whole length and employ an inferior construction.

The ordinary water bound macadam road or a carefully constructed road of a good quality of gravel will stand a large amount of horse drawn traffic, but will not withstand automobile traffic. On the other hand, an ordinary water bound macadam road with a blanket surface of asphalt or tar will withstand automobile traffic, but will not stand horse drawn traffic. To build a bituminous road that will withstand both kinds of traffic the bitumen must be incorporated with the upper portion of the road either by the mixing method or the penetration method.

In connection with the subject of road surfaces and motor traffic Mr. Dean argued that the new method of transportation of merchandise by motor trucks has not been in use for a sufficiently long time not to be sufficient amount to permit determination of its exact effect on roads.

The number in use is increasing very rapidly, however, and the capacity of the trucks is being increased to an alarming extent, according to Mr. Dean. This, he held, is a matter that should receive the attention of road-making legislators. If the use of these vehicles increases as rapidly during the next five years as it has during the past five, he said, it is impossible to predict what its effect on roads and bridges will be. It is possibly not out of place, he said, to suggest that the solution of the problem lies in the passage of laws making the weight of the motor trucks to be carried over the public highways by motor trucks, in order to preserve the roads and bridges.

Water Bound Macadam Road in New Hampshire.

It is a lecture was recently delivered by a lecturer on the road problem to the Royal Institution in London on "The Road, Past, Present and Future." The lecturer said the problem was to find the best mode by which a road should be built to suit the traffic that would not be broken by traffic, so that the transit might be easier for both passengers and goods, a road which would form neither a hindrance nor a danger to motor vehicles and create no dust when the weather was dry.

One thing was universally recognized—that the road of the future should be a road that would be adapted to whatever kind of stone was used the stone should be held together so that it would form a crust. The lecturer suggested that what he termed a "carpet" of stone should be adopted as the covering.

The carpet, he thought, should be made of bituminous material mixed with sand and placed on the roads in various thicknesses according to the nature of the traffic. It should go on in liquid form, solidifying quickly, but always remaining resilient and elastic. It is possible to mix the crust of the road that there could be no shifting of the surface below.

The advantage of such a carpet, it is felt, is that it will always protect the crust, and just as a carpet on the door softens the step so would this carpet for the roads lessen the noise and reduce the shock of rolling wheels. It is felt that an excess of bitumen would not be a disadvantage, as the original cost of a road so laid would be more than that of a mud bound road, but spreading the cost over a series of years it would probably be no great, since the crust of the road itself would not have to be renewed.

Mud and the Direct Market. The London market has opened a city market, designed to bring farmers and consumers together for direct selling. About 1,000 housewives flocked to the market to buy their goods met by one solitary farmer. He had driven eight miles with two chickens, twelve dozen eggs and a barrel of apples. The roads for miles round were packed with mud, and the market had not been sufficiently advertised to persuade the farmers that a trip over such roads would be worth the trouble. The market is one of several things needed by the grower can spend time to sell his own product in small lots.

GOOD ROAD DON'TS.

Don't leave grass and weeds on the shoulders and in the gutters. Don't dig the mud out of the gutters and throw it upon the road.

Don't leave dirt in piles on the road. Don't throw grass and weeds over the road surface. Don't dump stone or gravel on an old road without first preparing the surface to receive it, because you thereby cause willful waste and wasteful work.

Don't expect travel to spread and rub the material, unless it is a soft material, and unless it is of the money spent is wasted by this method.

Don't put new material on an old hard road surface before first picking or loosening the old covering. It is good for the quarry. Don't expect to get a good road for the taxpayer and road user. Don't try to do work without proper equipment.

FARMERS ARE VITALLY INTERESTED IN GOOD ROADS

They Are the Ones Who Suffer Most From Bad Highways.

It is the farmer who is most directly vitally interested in the improvement of the country roads. Whatever may be the ultimate destination of farm products their first movement is over the country roads. Every improvement in a highway, be it a waterway, a railway or a wagon road, means an enlargement of the opportunities of all those engaged in any kind of business contingent to it.

Operating a farm is in the highest sense conducting a business in which a high grade of intelligence is required to insure success. The farmer is our greatest producer. His products are his crops of meat and foodstuffs. Unlike the manufacturer, he cannot load his products in cars at the scene of their production and be relieved of the responsibilities of transportation. He must fall the duty of hauling his entire salable production to the nearest and best market—perhaps a mile or probably twenty miles. With bad roads, his loss must be heavy, for the weather conditions are most unfavorable, thus keeping him and his team away from farm work.

This haulage must be counted as a part of his production. It requires labor, time, wear and tear of teams, all of which are elements in reducing his profits, and the advantage of the farmer in the matter of other things being equal, goes to him who, living along a good highway, is able to more cheaply transport his products. Of two producers—one of whom lives ten miles from market and the other the other fifteen miles on a good road—the first, although closer to the market, will have no advantage over the other living farther away.

CARPET FOR ROADS.

An Improved Elastic and Durable Cinder is a Necessity.

A lecture was recently delivered by a lecturer on the road problem to the Royal Institution in London on "The Road, Past, Present and Future." HOW TO BUILD A SHELL ROAD

A Surface Binder Is Absolutely Essential.

LAXITY OF THE OLD METHOD.

No Economy in Using This Kind of Road Surfacing Unless Proper Care Is Taken to Roll and Wet It Thoroughly—Raw Shells Best.

For many localities about the sea coast shells have proved to be both convenient and valuable for use in surfacing roads. Their maximum value is had for moderate traffic roads and over sand, but they have also been used to advantage, where cheaply had and where better material was expensive and in heavy soils.

The usual practice has been to shaly spread, without much care and from piles dumped in the roadway, a layer of shells over the unprepared soil, natural drainage, leaving the traffic to consolidate the shells, which it gradually and reluctantly did, says Major W. W. Crosby in the Good Roads Magazine. The surfacing is so poor that natural drainage, leaving the traffic to consolidate the shells, which it gradually and reluctantly did, says Major W. W. Crosby in the Good Roads Magazine. The surfacing is so poor that natural drainage, leaving the traffic to consolidate the shells, which it gradually and reluctantly did, says Major W. W. Crosby in the Good Roads Magazine.

It is required, however, a considerable expense for patching up the kept in good condition, especially as the amount of traffic increased, and in many cases the use of shells has been abandoned because of this expense and of the decrease resulting later in the proportionate prices of stone and shells.

After constructing and maintaining several roads under the above described methods for a period of several years, I became impressed with the lack of economy thus had, and with the belief that many of the defects—such, for instance, as the forming of potholes or the "sinking" of the shells when used over clay subgrades could be avoided by different methods. In using shells over clean sand rollage is not so important, as the subgrade is necessary and it is necessary provide all fills of the sand have been properly settled. All that may be necessary are trimming and setting the surface to secure uniformity in the thickness of the shell layer without waste. Neither is it important to provide a moderate churning up of the sand subgrade, but it may be impossible to roll the roller. This can safely be disregarded when not excessive and the sand is not so loamy or clayey as to possess marked cohesiveness. In use of shells over loamy subgrades, however, the specifications should be strictly adhered to. Further, on some clays a layer of clean sand from three to six inches thick between the shells and the subgrade can be advantageous.

To secure satisfactory results plenty of water must be kept on the shell road by sanding, watering and rolling as to have it ring under horse traffic. Identically as does first class macadam. However, it is always better to use this important feature and to depend on the adhesiveness of the powdered shells to remedy a lack of binding. Shell roads built with insufficient binding will always be lumpy and expensive to maintain.

Fresh raw shells are to be preferred for these surfaces, though steamed shells will give fair results. The steaming seems to take some of the toughness and life out of the shells. Dressed shells, procurable in many places, have never been used by me, but it seems that an excess of water with them would be detrimental and should be avoided as much as possible, especially where frost action on the surfacing is to be expected.

The result of the proper use of good shells is a most satisfactory surface for light traffic. It is pleasantly resilient, smooth, though not objectionably noisy, and it wears in appearance and especially so on dark nights, when its whiteness may be a decided advantage to the driver.

Frost, or rain, coming from the road surface, produces a splendid growth of soil on even the sandiest of shoulders and thereby increase the effective width of travel way.

NEBRASKA EDITORS WILL MEET AT OMAHA

Omaha, Neb., June 10.—A resolution declaring against the use of ready-printed containing ads. and another, favoring the passage of a bill to appropriate $50,000 annually for advertising Nebraska, were the more important of the deliberations of 17 editors of the state who attended the annual meeting held in Lincoln on June 4 and 5.

The anti-ad bill occasioned much discussion among the editors, some contending that the association should not permit itself to become involved in differences of news furnishing companies. Through the mediation of the resolution was suggested, it was deemed advisable to let the action of the organization stand and thereby avoid further clashes.

The publicity bill was unanimously passed. The meeting was one of the most successful in the history of the association, and a hundred and thirty-one, including the families of the Nebraska editors, registered and attended one or more sessions. A varied program, featured by much shop talk, was offered and the papers were well received, without exception.

C. C. Rosewater, general manager of the Herald, suggested the formation of a federation of associations, the object of the proposed organization being to promote a closer cooperation among the various interests of Nebraska and to further the interests of our great state. Mr. Rosewater thought the Nebraska association was the organization that could make such an institution a power for better Nebraska.

The question of a paid secretary for the association was referred to a bureau of which Frank G. Edgerton of Geneva was made director. Mr. Edgerton was authorized to effect plans for the office of a special secretary.

An innovation for next year's meeting has been decided upon by the new officers. On Sunday, preceding the convention, members of the press of the state will occupy the pulpits of the Omaha churches and talk to Omaha citizens on subjects that are of vital interest both to Omaha and the state. Assurances have been received from many editors that they will deliver addresses.

Secretary Johns is the originator of the plan which will prove quite popular. By way of diversion, the editors attended the ball games, took an automobile ride about Lincoln, were given a reception in the governor's mansion, were lunched at the Nebraska state experiment station, and were guests of Lincoln at a banquet on the closing day.

Omaha citizens are pleased with the privilege the editors gave to be hosts of the 1912 meeting and already plans are being laid to make the 1913 meeting one that the Nebraska pencil pushers will never forget.

CONCRETE BRIDGES.

Harrison News: Wayne county is building concrete bridges. There has been a great deal of talk in this county about building of concrete. But that is all it has ever amounted to. One commissioner was elected on a platform of concrete bridges. But there has not been a bridge built of that material since he was elected. It is said that concrete costs more than steel. That should cost a trifle more than steel, but there is another important difference. When you buy a steel bridge, even a good one from a honest company, you send all of your money out of the county. You have the bridge but your money is gone. But when you build of concrete, most of the money goes into labor and sand, only a fraction you remember. The best part of the money in the county, and then you have your bridge and your money too. It is so important a difference that it is worthy of consideration of business men.

It is now well known that not more than one case of rheumatism in ten requires any internal treatment whatever. All that is needed is a free application of Chamberlain's Liniment and massaging the parts at each application. Try it and see how quickly it will relieve the pain and soreness. Sold by all dealers.

To save time and labor in making children's gingham and percale dresses, go to Or A. Morris Co. store and see the dresses they have already made. Sizes 2 to 12 years. Price $1.00 to $2.50.

THINKS ROOSEVELT MEN WILL NOT BOLT

Lincoln, Neb., June 10.—Governor Altrich today declared he did not believe there would be a bolt of Roosevelt men at the Chicago convention in the event that President Taft controlled a majority of the delegates.

J. C. Harbison of this city, and Nathan Morrison of Omaha, two of the delegates from Nebraska, both declared themselves as willing to leave the convention if Roosevelt was unable to control it. E. L. King of Osceola, expressed himself as opposed to bolting, for Governor Altrich's sake. Nothing could be gained by a bolt. That would give the bosses an excuse to throw the responsibility of Taft's existing defeat upon the friends of Roosevelt. If strong arm tactics are to rule at Chicago, then the men who perpetrate them will have to assume full responsibility of the consequences in the Roosevelt election.

The Nebraska delegation was instructed for Roosevelt in the recent state-wide primary and Governor Altrich is counted among the warm supporters of the colophon.

NEWSPAPER ANNOUNCEMENT.
There never was such a fine in the history of newspaper journalism as the reading, and it is important to read a paper of impartial views—one that is free from any office-seeking or office-holding influences. The important thing is a great newspaper like the Lincoln Journal is to get real readers, as it has no trouble finding them by its quality. It is for this reason that our managers are to make a special price which we will make only $2 for the daily and Sunday paper until January, 1 1913—much less than the regular price. At that time the paper will stop coming unless you order it continued and pay in advance for it. You really cannot afford to be without this capital city paper when you can secure it at such a price. Send us the Lincoln State Journal today and the paper will come to you regularly the remainder of this year. It will be a lively year, too.

TO ALLING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Wayne.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lumbago, backaches, etc. The poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills; a remedy that has cured thousands of such cases. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Wayne woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. D. S. McVicker of Wayne, Neb., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills a few years ago when I was suffering from dull pains across the small of my back and a bearing-down feeling in my loins. This remedy cured me and at that time I publicly told of my experience. I am now willing to confirm my statement by the following:

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Pleasant Game.

The ball game last Saturday. Winside vs. Wayne was a dandy. No wrangling or calling the umpire "rotten" as is usually the case, and the Winside boys returned feeling good, and all speak a good word for the Wayne team and the way they were treated. The score was 3 to 0 in favor of Winside.

Poor Exhibition.

Last Friday our ball team went to Wakefield to play ball. Some of the fans went along and were very much disappointed. They were Wakefield boys and in the near trip south, first to his mother's home at Owensville, Mo., then to St. Louis, and will reach home in about a week or two days. We know no young couple starting out with a brighter future than Billy Flier and Hamm-Sonsenbergh.

Butter, Eggs and Cream.

Listening to some gentlemen discussing the amount of butter, cream and eggs shipped from Winside each month, prompted the reporter to go out among the business men and ascertain as near as possible the amount of business done in that line for the past month, as follows: Butter, $807; eggs, $4,000, and cream, $4,000, making a total of $8,807 for the three articles. If you doubt these figures call on the gentlemen in the business and they will verify the above statement.

Two Farm Sales.

Through Loud & Smith, our real estate firm, two transfers were made last Saturday. George and Paul Utecht sold to Gilbert French of the Merchants State bank, their 160-acre farm about four miles southwest of town, the price being 875 cents of the A. B. Cherry farm, five miles west of town. Now occupied by Walter Morroy, was also sold to George Utecht at $100 per acre. Dr. Cherry bought this farm ten years ago for $30 per acre. For ten years the farm has not failed to produce a crop that paid good interest and now sells at a profit of $70 per acre. Dr. Cherry has no kicking ground.

Mrs. McCusky Honored.

Last Saturday evening, about thirty friends of Mrs. W. H. McCusky gave her a genuine surprise and a rose shower. Mrs. McCusky is one of the oldest residents of the town and is now packing her goods preparatory for leaving the town for good and expects to make Denver, Colo. her home. This prompted the ladies to get into and congratulate her for her love and esteem in which she is held by the ladies of Winside. A daily lunch was served by the guests, and the hostess was showered with beautiful roses and bouquets, and no doubt Mrs. McCusky will look back many times when far from here to the rose shower and her good friends who planned it.

Garden Spot of West.

On last Friday afternoon the writer, together with his better half, had the privilege of driving across the country to Wakefield with Walter Peterson and family in his Overland forty-five horse power touring car to witness the ball game between Wakefield and Winside. It is hard to make pen picture of the country. The view from the west, from Winside, the water and roads were perfect, the larger pastures were full of sleek cattle and hogs, the fields of waving grain and corn rows so straight and being cultivated, the large modern farm houses and beautiful barns set in groves of forest and fruit trees, all made a picture for an artist. Let one who is looking for a home in the garden spot of the west, travel from Winside to Wakefield and Wakefield and he will cry Eureka!

After dinner Mrs. Lewis of Wayne, rendered a very beautiful solo, playing her own accompaniment, also Mrs. Brown of Winside, sang with Miss Nannie Cassell at the organ. The lesson was then taken up with Mrs. Wheeler as leader, and a very pleasant and instructive one proved to be. They were then served with ice cream and cake. The Bible circle extended a cordial invitation to the department to meet with them and the ladies of Wakefield at Wayne in two weeks. The ladies then went to the park to wait for the train.
