Larson Nelson.
The marriage of Miss Esther Nelson to Mr. Ed Larson took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Walcott, at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Rev. Craft of that place officiating. Miss Loretta Callen of Winslow, played the wedding church. The bride was gown in a dress of white lingerie with Irish crocheted trimming.
After congratulations, a four-course dinner was served, covers being laid for two to five. The table was beautifully decorated with white roses and smilax, and the elaborate course menu reflected the chosen colors of the bride, green and white.
The bride, one of Wakefield's most popular young women, was for a number of years a student at the State Normal in Wayne, and is a graduate of the domestic science department of the school at Redwing, Minn. Her groom, formerly of Wakefield, has for a number of years been engaged in the lumber business at Iman, Neb. After a few days' visit with friends and relatives, Mr. Larson and bride will leave for their new home at Iman, and will be accompanied by the good wishes of many friends.

FORMER WAYNE GIRL WEBS.
News has reached Wayne of the marriage of Miss Blanche Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Elliott, who moved to Powell, Wyo., two years ago. Wayne friends will extend hearty good wishes. The Powell Tribune of September 6, has this to say of the wedding:
In the presence of about fifty guests occurred last Wednesday evening, at 6 o'clock, the marriage of Mr. Harry Clarence Wilcox and Miss Blanche Elliott, two of Powell's honored young people. The home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Elliott, was the scene of the beautiful ceremony. The rooms were decorated profusely with white sweet peas and mignonette with background of blue and white paper paper. In one corner was the wedding arch of asparagus, sweet peas and mignonette, under which the bride and groom stood during the nuptial ceremony. Miss Ruth Wilcox, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Miss Blanche Wilcox, a brother, attended the groom. Little Miss Helen Elliott acted as ring bearer.
Immediately at the hour appointed the wedding party proceeded from an adjoining room to the parlor, during which Mrs. Katzenbach sang, "I Love You Truly," with piano accompaniment by Mrs. C. G. Nelson who sang "Beulah—James A. Shack" employed the beautiful ring ceremony of the Presbyterian church in joining the candidates in holy wedlock. The ring was borne on a white rose by Helen Elliott. The bride wore a gown of light-blue messaline and cream durbess fabric with a lower bouquet of white roses and sweet peas, the bridesmaid wearing light blue silk mull and carrying a bouquet of white carnations. Following a shower of congratulations and best wishes, the guests repaired to the dining room to participate in a three-course luncheon prepared by Mrs. Bush, which was delightful in its appointments.
The newly wedded young couple left on Thursday for a short trip to Billings, and announce that they will be at home after October 1. In the ceremony above mentioned the Tribune is pleased to note the union of two of the "Community's" best and most highly respected young people. Miss Elliott has been active in religious and social affairs and Mr. Wilcox has won the reputation of a skillful business man and farmer. An eighty-acre farm two miles south of town, which Mr. Wilcox has acquired will be the scene of activity of these young people, and as they establish their new home all extend to Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox their very best wishes for happiness and success.

Roosevelt criticizes both Taft and Wilson. No one is exactly right but himself.

Do your shopping in Wayne. If the town isn't good enough to trade in, it isn't good enough to live in.

While claiming to espouse the cause of the people, Colonel Roosevelt acts and talks more like a would-be monarch than any individual in America since the beginning of the republic.

What assurance have the political bosses and capitalists who are contributing funds to the bull moose party that they will not be relegated to the same club by the erratic bellwether or six months hence?

Did you ever see an old sinner who had just got religion seek the conversion of those who had always had religion? Of such experience we are reminded by Roosevelt, in the new role of reformer, welcoming life-long reformers to reform ranks.

It is surprising the colonel could have led down the president seven years without thinking to favor some of the things which he now demands with frenzied fury. For instance, while he is at this time finding fault with the tariff, he didn't give the slightest attention to the subject when he was in office.

A democratic paper quotes Congressman Dan Stephens as saying that President Taft is a most agreeable man to meet, is very plain and makes his guests feel at home when in his company. That is the opinion of a democrat, who has inspected President Taft's manners at short range, and yet the president is accused of being an aristocrat.

In the course of an address at Lincoln Tuesday, J. L. McBrien, former state superintendent, and now a leading bull moose, is reported to have made the declaration: "Taft has his Rockefeller test. Wilson has Bryan tobacco trust, and Roosevelt has Perkins of the steel trust." It would seem, then, that one who has a powerful bias for the colonel, does not deem him free from trust influences than the other candidates.

The democratic editors in this district have undertaken the raising of campaign funds. Editor Murray of Ponder, has made a substantial start, and others are working the same way. If Wilson should be elected, these democratic editors may be rewarded with postoffices. Many postoffices are now managed by republican editors, and democratic editors no doubt yearn to supersede them.

Senator Cummins who has announced that he would support Roosevelt though not abandoning the republican party, has found it convenient to go to Europe on official business, expecting to return just in time to vote. He is finding the feat of riding a bull moose and an elephant at the same time so difficult that he is no doubt pleased over the excuse to leave the country for a few months.

Some one has pertinently suggested that the wild reformer, being out for mere prestige, doesn't want to wait for a reform measure to be put into practice before going after another one. If he accomplishes a piece of legislation today, he is ready with something new tomorrow. He doesn't care so much about the operation of a new law as he does about the excitement and publicity of passing it. He is looking for popular favor.

Roosevelt behaves toward those who disagree with him more like a prize ring pug than like one who is asking support for the highest office in the United States. Whatever is desirable in his platform will find practical application quite as soon as though he were elected, and his vengeful manner, doing violence to the teachings of school and church, and striking a blow at the standard of behavior which the young are asked to observe, is alone ample reason why he should be overwhelming defeated.

Not a great deal of consolation can really be felt by any political party over the returns from Maine. They would be positively encouraging to the republican party if it were not for the prospect of disruption due to the bull moose party. If the new organization, and if Taft were strength from the democratic column, he could carry the state. Otherwise it would go to Wilson. Of course Roosevelt does not stand a ghost of a show to carry Maine. The only thing he can do to divide republican ranks and throw the plurality vote to the democrats.

WHY MAKE A CHANGE?

The Federal Republic, which has manifested the most pronounced tendencies makes this important confession regarding the Taft administration:

"Taft supporters are pointing with pride to the prosperous condition of the country and asking the voters to continue these magnificent conditions and make no change while we are doing so well. It must be confessed that this is one strong argument in favor of the Taft administration. While there are some things that should be changed, yet every political party is never that more prosperous than it is right now. Of course as long as we have plenty of sunshine and rain, no political party can deprive us of our good times altogether, but it is a fact that the political policies of the government cut some figure, and if it would be possible for any political party to never that would in any way interfere with our general prosperity."

If times are good under the present administration and there is danger of being injured by making a change, what emergency calls for the election of either Roosevelt or Wilson? Why not re-elect Taft and avoid risk?

ABUSE OF BARTHOLDI.

St. Louis City Journal: Colonel Roosevelt professes to be an exemplar of the square deal. He professes to be a great disciple of the people in behalf of justice and the common rights of man.

The following is taken from his tirade at Des Moines on Wednesday: "I see that Mr. Taft's His-Name, that Congressman from East St. Louis, Bartholdi—he was one of the high-waysmen—has asked Mr. Cummins to debate the Texas, California and Washington contents at Chicago. I hope Mr. Cummins will refuse to debate with a pick-pocket the ownership of a watch he has just stolen. If the police are handy I'll hand him over to them. If they aren't I'll tend to him myself."

How is that in the line of uplift? The colonel reached Iowa from Missouri. He hung his outbreak on an Iowa twig.

But who is Richard Bartholdi? He is one of our foremost German-American citizens. He came to this country when a boy, received a classical education, learned the printing trade and has remained a newspaper man ever since. At the time of his election to congress in 1882 he was editor-in-chief of the St. Louis German-American newspaper of wide influence and high standing. No man in the west has higher rank as a representative of German thought than Richard Bartholdi. By temperament and education he is a gentleman. He is a forceful writer and debater. In his nearly twenty years in congress he has maintained unequalled reputation. Prior to coming to congress he was a member of the public school board of St. Louis and in 1891 was elected to its presidency. In 1904, under the administration of Roosevelt, he was elected president of the Interparliamentary union, and in that connection he has spent time abroad and rendered distinguished service. He is a member of the committee on foreign affairs. He is a scholarly man, uniformly courteous. Roosevelt would have praise enough for Bartholdi if Bartholdi were a moose. But the distinguished Missourian remains a republican.

TWO PICTURES.

Omaha Bee: An editorial in the Chicago Tribune contrasts the pictures with the declaration that few in our history are more dramatic, and the pictures are these of the early nineties, and the full-fed prosperity of today. The writer recalls an expedition into western Nebraska on a melancholy errand eighteen years ago, when he was crowded on an Omaha newspaper. "There was famine in the land, and wherever he traveled in the bitter cold of that winter deserted farm houses stared at him like hollow eyed ghosts of hope abandoned. Barns and lots were empty and the remains of farm machinery stood forlorn in the wind-swept fields. In one corner a lone, disconsolate gray wolf-shank shivering away."

Against this disagreeable memory he holds up another picture: "The other day the Burlington railroad, reporting on some of the conditions of the Nebraska of 1912, noted the fact that there are in the state 1,625,000 acres in the state—average of one to every forty-eight inhabitants. In some districts every farm is equipped with one."

TWO MEN CONTRASTED.

Worshiper Works: This article is intentionally a mere collection of personal impressions; it is confessedly subjective. I am going to conclusion to set down here recollections of two evenings, one with each of the principals and perhaps the most agreeable hours I ever spent with them. They are not to be taken as an impartial, but they are and spirit of each occasion I may speak. The first one was with Mr. Roosevelt, soon after the close of his presidential term, and near the end of the voyage on the Hamburg, when he was enjoying his first opportunity in many years to see the west as it really was. He had passed Gibraltar, and entered the Mediterranean; we were steaming toward sunset along the coast of Spain. I joined Mr. Roosevelt for a walk on deck.

We gazed together at the purple headlands, overhanging the glittering waters of the Sierra Nevada. Mr. Roosevelt's spirits rose in sober elevation as he gazed at the land which had been the theatre of the long struggle between the Moor and the Christian, and turned from that to look down at the fabled since the earliest history began. He talked of the Hellenic adventurers, who had sailed out of the Pillars of Hercules; of the ghastly fleets of successive generations that had glimpsed the splendid panorama of the shore—galley of Phoenicians, transports of Libyans going to the Punie waters—down to the magnificent modern armadas, whose prows had cut the indigo waters.

It was a delightful hour, for Mr. Roosevelt has a vivid martial and romantic imagination. But his talk was all of expeditions of war, descents on the coast, burning cities, pirate, heroic raids, actions at sea. This I will say, that he had to be reminded, that the biggest fleet that had ever sailed was the navy of the United States, which Jason would have swooned, and Villeneuve stared, and Nelson been confounded—had been here by his own orders. I reminded Mr. Roosevelt of that, and he stopped in his walk and looked over the rail and back again, and broke into a grin and a chuckle, and exclaimed: "By George, that was a smart lot!" And then he broke to real enthusiasm, and told with uplifted fist and flashing eyes what that fleet would have done if it had ever had a chance, by George!

The second was a late autumn afternoon at Beverly-by-the-Sea. It was on the eve of the long tour of the country with President Taft and his mother. He had labor Mr. Taft had got ahead of his work (a most unusual thing for him, it may be said) and he had an hour or two for rest. He used it sitting before the dying log in his study and meditating out loud on the subject that really lies near his heart; the prospect of international peace.

I was the only listener. For an hour the president soliloquized. It would have startled the conservative patriots could they have heard him. There was no length to which the head of the nation was unwilling to go to avoid bloody conflict, no length, I mean, in the direction of substituting arbitration for war. There was no account of which the tongue of man can utter that he did not pour out upon the savage selfish folly of standing men up to shoot at each other because the governors of their countries have been unable to agree.

"That is all. Mr. Taft's thoughts in his evening hour turned to peace. With that best of intention of which those who do not know him capable, having his defiance into the face of the hollow popular sentiment that passes for patriotism, Mr. Taft talked of peace, Mr. Roosevelt, on another evening, watching the sun go down, had babbled of battles.

EDITORIAL EXCERPTS.

Norfolk News: Another Roosevelt controversy is pending, this time his adversary being Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, formerly chief chemist of the department of agriculture. Colonel Roosevelt is laying claim to credit for the enactment of the pure food law and Dr. Wiley is not only denied that the former president deserves any credit for it, but he charges (Colonel Roosevelt with responsibility for the establishment of the Remsen board, now so widely condemned. This is the board which is responsible for the fact that the use of bicarbonate of soda as a preservative is prohibited.

Bixby in Lincoln Journal: With party politicians the platform is a mere expediency; it means nothing to them. In committee at convention time these men never discuss a party creed upon its merits. What they wish to do is to frame up an appeal to the people that will catch votes. For that reason, Mr. Roosevelt's attack upon the democratic platform seems childish and insane. It might be hoped that a triumphant democracy would come within a mile of doing the things it promises to do; it would be entitled to the greatest victory a party ever achieved. But the platform in reality represents the sentiments of a paltry minority of those who have an earthly show of breaking into congress. So it is really of no vital significance whatever. If the people would get into the habit of electing honest men instead of politicians; if the nations of trust and responsibility, the commonest and most indispensable of the Lincoln Journal: The next step in settling the political muddle caused by the breakup of party lines in Nebraska will be the resignation of the progressive candidates for elector from the republican ticket and the substitution of the names of men who, if elected, will vote for President Taft. It is well known that the progressives as a party favor this course, but do not care to commit themselves to it until they have secured an undoubted right to appear on the official ballot under their new party name. This being true, republicans as well as progressives are now interested in seeing the success of the proposed legal action to give the new party a place on the ticket. This one accomplished, virtually all of the cause for friction between the different wings of the party will disappear.

Wyomont Tribune: Senator Borah was recently passed through Chicago. He is an interesting character. He had the reputation of following the strenuous and vengeful colonel into a third party. The senator heard all the contents before the national committee at Chicago and he has found nothing in the decisions arrived at by the committee to justify him quitting the party. He can not be accused of being a man wanting in moral sensibilities. He does not believe the Taft nomination was "stolen." The position of the distinguished progressive senator from Idaho finds a parallel in the announced intention of Ormsby McHugh of New York, to support the republican party and its nominee. He says he is a republican and that as a matter of course he will continue in the party. He was the attorney in charge of Colonel Roosevelt's contests before the committee. He could not foresee nor did he expect, he says that there would be another party or that his distinguished client would lead it. The moose party has no attraction for him. Taft and McHugh are two pretty good guides to follow.

Wyomont Tribune: Senator Borah was recently passed through Chicago. He is an interesting character. He had the reputation of following the strenuous and

LIGHTS THAT FAILED.

Gloom Reigned When Thursday and Charlotte Bronte Met.

Those do not always shine who should, as many a chagrined host or hostess has found out. Amusing in retrospect, if not colored at the moment, must have been the occasion when Charlotte Bronte, "the little lady from Yorkshire of whom all England was talking," appeared at the London house of the author of "Vanity Fair."

"The story is told in Lewis Merville's 'The Thackeray Country.' Thackeray gave a dinner party to meet Charlotte Bronte in June, 1850, and among the guests were the Carles, the Proctors, the Brookfields, Mr. Crowe, Miss Elliot and Miss Perry.

"It was a gloom and silent evening." Lady Ritchie has recorded. "Every one waited for the brilliant conversation which never began at all. 'Miss Bronte returned to the sofa in the study and murmured a low word now and then to our governess, Miss Truelove. The room looked very dark; the lamp began to smoke a little; the conversation grew dimmer and more dim; the ladies sat round still expectant. My father was too much perturbed by the gloom and the silence to be able to cope with it all. Mrs. Brookfield, who was in the corner in which Miss Bronte was sitting, bent forward with a little commoquence, looked brilliant and was not the center of the evening.

"Do you like London, Miss Bronte?" she asked. Another silence, a pause; then Miss Bronte answered very gravely: "Yes—no."

"After Miss Bronte had left I was surprised to see my father opening the door close with his hat on and with his finger to his lips, walked out into the darkness and shut the door quietly behind him. Othereum by the gloom and constraint, he was running away to his club."

TERROR OF A BOMB.

A Dramatic Incident of the Political Campaign in Chicago. Here is the story of a Russian anarchist outrage in the words of one who was nearly killed in the explosion: While strolling at Cannon St., Jones' studio and of "Revolutions" met the Grand Duchess Elena of Russia, who gave him an account of the idea of an escape from the peril which surrounded us. Presently out of the darkness came the clear, calm voice of the czar. My children, let us pray! The sound of his voice, with its reassuring us as to his safety so far, relieved the awful strain on our nerves and brought comfort to our hearts.

"When the echoes of the explosion died away a dead silence succeeded, which, united with the darkness, was appalling, so dense as almost to be felt, conduced to render our helpless position still more painful and unendurable. We dared not move, the darkness so thick as almost to be felt, surrounded us. Presently out of the darkness came the clear, calm voice of the czar. My children, let us pray! The sound of his voice, with its reassuring us as to his safety so far, relieved the awful strain on our nerves and brought comfort to our hearts.

"The Copper." There are two theories as to the source of the term "copper" or "copper," the familiar name for an officer of the law in the north of the middlewestern gamia. One derives it from the letters C. O. P.—central office police—but the other and more usual explanation of the words is that it referred to the eight point star made of copper and surrounded by a copper ring worn by the Metropolitan police of New York in the late fifties. This badge, a large affair, which was fastened to the buttonhole by a chain about four inches long, was later superseded by a special badge of smaller size.

Far His Own Pleasure. "I suppose your wife was more than delighted at your raise of salary, wasn't it?" "I haven't told her yet, but she will be when she knows it," answered Brown.

"How is it that you haven't told her?" "Well, I thought I would enjoy myself a little couple of weeks first." Judge.

Cupid's Recall. "Father, what do you think of the result?" "Well, my dear, I hardly know. Some people think it is dangerous. But why do you ask?" "I sent Ferdie away last night, and now I'm sorry."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Long, Long Run. "I believe honesty pays in the long run." "So do I, but I often wish it were not such a mighty long run."—Chicago Record-Herald.

REPORT OF SUMMER CONFERENCE OF C. E.

Report of a C. E. summer conference at Storm Lake, Ia., held Sunday evening before the C. E. society of Wayne, by Miss Bernice Moler:

I arrived in Storm Lake about 7:30 Tuesday evening and took a cab to the lake, which is a distance of about five blocks. The conference was held on the bank of the lake in a beautifully kept park, which was a most delightful place for us to spend a week, to say nothing of a week of conference where one is free from all cares and can have the opportunity to come in contact with people of such splendid personality. The lake is to the south of the city. It is about two miles wide and over seven miles long, and the small hills and beautiful groves of trees surrounding the lake make it a very picturesque scene. There is a summer resort across the lake a short distance away.

There were about forty small tents in use as well as the lecturers and directors and teachers lived. These were arranged in rows, making small streets and alleys, and in appearance resembled a small town. There was a large tent in which we had our meals. There were three long tables reaching from one end of the tent to the other, and we were allowed to eat three meals in the same place and no more. They arranged the tables in sections of two, giving each section a name, then one stood at the door, with a box of slips containing the names corresponding to the names on the table, which we drew and then located our table. This made it most interesting for us in that it gave us no chance to go cliques, but got every one acquainted by this changing from place to place. Mealtime was a very pleasant function of the day, in that the people at the different tables would see who could give the best yells and songs about their table and that was always passed by very quickly and every one enjoyed it very, very much.

The little tents were equipped for four occupants, which was a very good arrangement, especially for those who were in the same fix as myself—know no one on arriving. It rained several times, and very hard, but we did not mind going up in the night and holding up the awning in the rain. We had a bed, or finding one covers soaked in water; this was just a part of the fun. The weather was cool all the time, and at no time during the whole conference, was a person uncomfortable with a wrap of some kind on. We had a few rules, that we had to comply with, which were very strict. Every one in the tents at 10 o'clock went right out at 10:00. No one out of the tent before six in the morning and the regular rising time was at seven. No one could take a walk before breakfast, but we were to rest as much as possible. Breakfast at 7:30; after a short transmission every one went to bed.

From 8:15 to 8:30 was quiet hour, led by Rev. A. B. Marshall, president of the Omaha theological seminary of Omaha, Neb. I, myself, was greatly impressed by Rev. Marshall's fine personality. He was one of these men whose goodness shineright out on their faces, and he said everything in such a way that one could not help but think he was surely a man of God.

Each morning Mr. Marshall gave a text which we were to commit, and repeat the next day. Through the entire week Mr. Marshall's lectures were on Prayer and he gave us these verses from the bible to show us many places in the bible where we were told to ask God for his blessing. He made the great importance of asking God for our needs. From one end of the bible to the other are the strongest evidences that God wants us to pray and the bible is full of answers to prayer. The cases of Abraham and his prayers over the wives, Jacob and his altar upon which fire rained out of heaven in answer to his prayer, the blind man who asked God to have mercy upon him and God had mercy and gave him sight, are just a few of the examples.

If the people would only do their part in praying, the world would be conquered. So many people's prayers are not answered because they are not sincere. If in the things we are persistent in, that we keep asking for, that we get. Also, the lack of desire which makes our prayers in vain. If there is some place in our life that we have not put away, thoroughly surrendered to God, the blessing of God cannot reach us. We must believe that God is, and come with the thought that he will hear when we ask a good thing. If we go and do what God wants us to go and do, our lives may well be compared to a ball which is unbound, starting at the right end it unbinds rather smoothly and without much difficulty, but if we do not let it go, it will wait us to be like a ball unbound at the wrong end; our lives are full of troubles, snags and knots.

Mission study was the next class. I took "The Uplift of China," as I thought this was one of the greatest countries and problems, and therefore would be interesting to study about. Mission study taken "The Uplift of China," met at 8:55 with Mr. Nicholas of Celwein, Ia., as leader. Mr. Nicholas requested each one of us to go to our homes and organize a mission class for the purpose of studying the great question.

The second day I was on the affirmative of a question to be debated. It was: "Resolved, that the Chinese are Better Equipped for Economical Competition in the Twentieth Century than the Anglo-Saxon." We were able with very little trouble, to give them some of the very strongest points to strengthen our side. The Chinese had a system of commerce, good form of government for that time, but Christianity was lacking.

The Chinese are, as a people, uneducated. Only fifty out of every 1,000 men can read and write. One out of every thousand of women can write. There are 1,250 non-Christians to every Christian. At this time we took up the great problem to be overcome, which is practiced more by the women than men on account of their unhappy lives. The women of China are held just about the same as slaves. Individualism is out of the question; no one dare to think of such a thing. The people who would like to do things to better conditions dare not do them.

From 9:55 until 10:25 was recess, and recreation period. From 10:25 to 11:15 was General Methods class, with Rev. William Ralph Ball, assistant superintendent of the department of Young People's work, as leader. At this time we took up the important things in the organization of a Christian Endeavor society, and the work of each one of the officers, committees and members.

From 11:30 to 12:05, there was an hour period which consisted of four classes, Methods of Junior and Intermediate Workers, a study of the Boards of the Presbyterian Church and Bible Study class. I chose as my topic the Junior Work. Miss Edna Brack, superintendent of missionary extension, Minnesota Christian Endeavor Union, St. Paul, Minn., was class leader in this work. She is a lady of splendid personality and every one loved her very much.

From 1 o'clock until 6 we had no work to do, but had a good time and we surely had it or it was not our own fault. There were long tramp around the shores of the lake and through the woods, base ball, in which the girls took part, or rather had a game of their own each day. We became quite expert at the game. At four o'clock we had a hot tub and steam bathing. One afternoon some of the boys of the conference got up a bunch to go out on the lake in the launch. This was on Wednesday. So at 1:30 fifty of us went for a sail on the lake, going over to the summer resort on the lake and around the full length of the lake, a distance of ten or more miles. Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Commercial club had cars at the park to take us around the lake and in the evening, after supper, they took us around the lake in launches. We surely had a lovely time, and everyone enjoyed themselves. Saturday afternoon we had "stunts." Each of the different classes could only come to the point Christ wants us to come the Foreign Mission problem would be solved. The responsibility upon us is greater than ever before; we have more money, more men. We have less time than we ever had before to do this work; each day brings us near to the end and for this reason our responsibility is greater. Each Christian has a greater responsibility than that of the past Christians. We are not Christians because we want to be, but because God has chosen us. He has a purpose for every one of us, and we must measure up to our responsibility.

Friday evening Mr. J. W. Cochran, secretary of the board of education of Philadelphia, spoke to us. He said the church of Jesus Christ is moving like a mighty army. Is our army really working or is it on dress parade. Do we belong to the class who are going to do something, or are we in the class who are in the bottle? Am I following God's great plan for my life? Each one of us is a world, and God has a plan for each of us just as he has a plan for the universe. If we could catch up with him, it would not take long to do the great work. God blesses every one who comes to keep the open shores of the world.

Sunday morning we had breakfast about 8:15, and in nearly every instance the program was carried out just the same as on other days. The Presbyterian Sunday school of Storm Lake met at the conference, and the two were combined. Sunday evening at seven we came to supper service out at the bank of the lake, after which we had our regular evening services.

On Monday afternoon the president of the Buena Vista school, invited the conference to his home for a reception which we enjoyed very much. The evening services each night began about 7:45. Each night we had a different speaker. At 7:45, a hall unbound at the wrong end; our lives are full of troubles, snags and knots.

Mission study was the next class. I took "The Uplift of China," as I thought this was one of the greatest countries and problems, and therefore would be interesting to study about. BUSY CELL TOILERS.

The Bloodless Work They Constantly Perform in the Blood.

The blood cells are important members of the cell community and are exceedingly numerous, there being over 100,000,000 of the red blood cells in each cubic centimeter of the blood. These red blood cells move in the blood currents, carrying through the arteries each its little load of oxygen, which it transports to the distant tissues. These red blood cells are large, oval and flattened, and are returned, carrying through the veins the debris and waste products of the system to the great reservoir of the lungs, where the waste is burned and thrown off from the body.

OLYMPIAN GAMES The Famous Contests in the Days of Ancient Greece.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN WAR. Battles Might Be Forgotten, but Time Was Reckoned and Measured.

From the Years of the Olympiads. The Fivefold Contest, the Pentathlon. According to tradition, the oldest of all Olympian games were established by Zeus in honor of his success over Cronos in his struggle for the sovereignty of heaven.

The first of the games, according to this tradition, was simply a foot race, in which there were said to have been four original contestants. This straightaway foot race continued to be the only Olympic game till the fourteenth Olympiad.

The pentathlon was a rough and tumble "high" game, and consisted of throwing a javelin and a discus, wrestling and hurling the javelin. All contestants were admitted first to the javelin, and then to the discus.

A Case That Throws Light on the Problem of Apparition. It is not at all necessary to resort to the supernatural as the only sufficient explanation of apparitions.

It is not at all necessary to resort to the supernatural as the only sufficient explanation of apparitions. In truth, there is one insurmountable obstacle to regarding them as supernatural manifestations.

NERVE WON HIM LIBERTY.

Quick Wit and Daring Ruse of a Russian Revolutionist.

Nowhere outside of the pages of fiction would we expect to find an incident or the following from the personal story of the Russian revolutionist Narodny: Narodny had just jumped from a window to escape the police.

"He automatically obeyed. I slipped on his coat and hat and to all appearances was a soldier of the czar. I walked past the guarded gate of the yard out into the street. There were thousands of soldiers. I saw my friends being brought down from the hall and put into the black vans, about which stood guards of Cossacks.

"The change of a word. "Spoken" did not surprise me. I was shocked originally. It was unknown to Johnson in this sense. To him a "sparker" meant a person who takes long steps with agility.

"No immediate danger. The person about to improve the golica hour—When a man reaches the end of his rope, he is often in the nature of things, expect to live very much longer and [ ]

"Mistaken Idea. "It may be laid down as a broad proposition," said the professor of political economy, "that you cannot get something for nothing."

"Safe. "Of course I don't want to criticize him, but don't think he was altogether right for David to say 'all men are liars.'"

The Hat Question in 1793. The Handel Festival was originally given in Westminster Abbey, and the official notice of 1790 announced that "no ladies will be admitted with flaps, and they are particularly requested to come without feathers and very small hoops, etc., etc."

Out of Her Line. The horny handed son of toil who had just inherited a fortune went to see a manicurist.

The Exceptions. Mrs. White—And do you mean to say that you and your husband always agree about everything? Mrs. Black—Always, except, of course, now and then, when he's out of humor or big-headed or something of that sort—London Dispatch.

Horace Greeley and an Autograph. In his "Recollections of a Busy Life" Horace Greeley tells the story of how he once dealt very effectively with a persistent autograph hunter.

The Lion's Share. It is really not the male lion, with his terrific roar and formidable appearance, that the explorer fears, but the lioness.

Cure For Hysteria. A young lady of Cardiff who fancied she was ailing went to the surgery of the family doctor and commenced the interview with "Doctor, I'm dying."

The Work That Tells a Story. Better the roudest work that tells a story or records a part of the richest without revealing. There should not be a single ornamental put upon great cities buildings without some intellectual intentions—Ruskin.

Correcting Him. The Husband—I was taken by surprise when you accepted me. The Wife—You were taken by mistake, John. Don't make any mistake about that—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Up to Date. Howard—is your hotel up to date? Coward—Indeed it is. They furnish sleeping parlors with every bedroom—Philadelphia Times.
