THE KINDERGARTEN AND PRIMARY SCHOOL

(Continued.) The Kindergarten in the public school is an integral part of a system. It bears the same relation to the primary school as the primary bears to the secondary, and the secondary to the high school.

The principles of the kindergarten are the principles of the fundamental educational laws. The kindly old gentleman who founded the kindergarten, had long since written "The Education of Man," in which he expressed a philosophy of education so profound, so comprehensive, and yet so practical that its so-called developmental method dominates all modern educational thought and experiment.

There is a great diversity in the quantity and the quality of the preparation for education given the child in his home. No child experiences a blank left entirely to chance and from a purely pedagogical standpoint, it is the province of the kindergarten to receive this heterogeneous class of children, and by awakening and guiding their self-activities, unhooking their powers of observation and perception, training their hands to some dexterity, and by leading their spirits toward self-reliance, self-control, self appreciation, self-confidence, fairness and co-operation, to prepare them for the work of the school.

not tarry long, give him less work and that better adapted to his future needs. What is needed is not faster work, nor more work, but better work. The kindergarten child may not do his work any faster but undoubtedly he does do it easier and more intelligently than the child who has not received the kindergarten training.

WAYNE NORMAL VINS GAME WITH NORFOLK

Norfolk Daily News, November 9: Wayne Normal, Norfolk, 7. In a spirited lineup, Captain Emery's squad marched out to the recreation, to prepare them for the work of the school. Primarily, it is, with the work of the teacher in any grade, to prepare the child to live his life but and drum corps and a large crowd of spectators who prepared him for the work of the secondary grade, co-ordinating the related studies, for as Captain Emery said: "That which follows is always conditioned on that which goes before," and so new subject of instruction should be brought to the pupil unless he feels at least vaguely that it is based on what he has learned in his previous work.

I have my place so arranged that it does not require many waiters to serve the people. Small Profits and lots of business is what we want. Yours truly, ED. ELLIS, Proprietor admited a moment more of play would have tied the score or possibly given Norfolk a victory of one point.

A large crowd saw the game which, though somewhat tame in the first quarter, suddenly changed into such a desperate battle that every foot ball enthusiast on the side lines became excited. Schellie, Koerber, Landers, Logan, Chase, Hosman and every man on the Norfolk lineup played wonderfully well in harmony with the direction of Captain Emery whose star playing won the admiration of both the side line fans and the husky players on the Norfolk team.

Round Oak...Riverside Base Burners

Certainly one of these beautifully designed, and economical stoves should appeal to your sound judgment when you buy a base burner. Everything a late model stove contains is built into these 2 stoves:

Three flue return. Nickel removed in one minute without touching a bolt or screw. Ground joints, and the best of iron.

In fact, there is nothing lacking in either of these stoves—and three beautiful designs from which to make a choice.

Story and song, play, work and pictures in the kindergarten give the child these clear mental images which alone make words alive and usable. The beginning of the kindergarten is the beginning of sounds of animals, machines and tools in the songs and games of the circle. The custom of marking the child's daily work with his name not only cultivates his sense of individual possession, but incidentally familiarizes him with the form of the written word.

Drawing and designing begin with the crayola, block scissors and clay of the kindergarten, where free drawing, painting, cutting and modeling are the actual self-expression of the child.

"Music is what Henderson calls a 'human art.' It is used as a means, not an end. It stimulates the will to do, cultivates the senses and emotions, with out which activities are mechanical; it is a vehicle of expression to the child. In a single moment of music is taught in the kindergarten the accuracy of pitch and purity of tone and the soul is brought into beautiful responsiveness to musical rhythm and expression.

Not only the foundation but the ideal system of all physical training lies in the plays and games. To play is the child's most beautiful—energizing pathway to physical development. From free play to play and organized games from games to competitive sport and athletics, lead him on from kindergarten to college whence he enters upon his life work trained to that quick obedience to law and that cheerful co-operation with fellow-men.

It appears to develop early in the child, and while the man who never was a member of the kindergarten would be atrocious, yet the wide kindergarten teaches acquaintance of and provides light exercise for this sense when it manifests itself. Counting the child on the floor, the petals of the flower and all such concrete work gives positive pleasure and is the first logical step in number development. It is impossible to play calculate the exact time required for the child to ascend from the perception of the concrete to the perception of the abstract number conception. The why this is the natural ascension.

With one and one-half minutes to the child mind. Why pull him up by the roots from the kindergarten to transfer the plant him prematurely in the primary school only to hurry him from grade to grade? Is it to get rid of him, to keepers end the game by announcing make room for his little brother? Is it to keep him moving? Or is it to give him a competitive exhibition of the teacher's ability to keep him moving? Or is it to give him a competitive exhibition of the teacher's ability to keep him moving? Or is it to give him a competitive exhibition of the teacher's ability to keep him moving?

Matters changed altogether in the third quarter when Captain Emery leveled ginger bats his lineup by being let touchdowns were not until the third quarter that the plucky Norfolk eleven found their light weight an envailing in attempts to jolt the normalites, who scored two touchdowns a goal kick and a goal miss in the first period of playing. Gilgiersleeve and Lehn took the ball over the Norfolk goal in the first period after Norfolk had scored a touchdown. The game was played with a few fumbles. The Norfolk playing in that period was not up to the standard of the locals and the second quarter found the normalites confident. They were met, however, with stubborn resistance and no points were gained in that period of play.

Norfolk Almost Wins. The last period of the game was desperately fought on both sides. The Norfolk men were apparently wounded and seemed playing for time. Once Schellie scrambled over the backs of four Norfolk men with the ball under his arm. Later Norfolk was penalized for a foul, but the ball remained in Wayne territory with Norfolk making good on every down. While the Norfolk men were endeavoring to get back their wind the Norfolk players played whirlwind football, endeavoring to take the pigskin over the goal line before the timekeepers called time—one end of the game in which they seemed handicapped. With the ball one yard from Wayne's goal post and the time called time. The referee, however, blew his whistle after the play was in full progress, instead of blowing "time" the moment he saw the off-side play. This lost Norfolk several precious minutes of time and evidently a touchdown.

VALUE OF HOME DUTIES

A girl in her teens with too many and too costly clothes on her back, gets self-conscious and vain; and loves admiration—and you grow-ups know the next step. A simple, pure hearted girl, who has a place in a home, home work and home duties, has her heart there, and no boy can steal it! Even when maturity comes and a real man comes and a real affair of her heart comes, yet such a girl leaves home and there only after her hearting. But a girl who is at home only at the table and in bed won't leave that home. Work makes things sacred. The child whose home memories are not belied by work, who is not needed and does not feel the need, will not love home. And if she doesn't love the home of her childhood she will possibly love no other. She will go anywhere for anything. Home will mean nothing to such a woman, and if she is respectable she will only lack the opportunity to be a bad woman and is good only through circumstances or by the necessity of an ugly fate. She will curse any man she marries.—J. Knox Fish.

As a result of the late election, the number of living ex-presidents will be doubled March 4. If either Taft or Roosevelt had been elected, this exception to the rule would not have happened. Having two living ex-presidents instead of one may be worth something in the country.

The Omaha Examiner suggests that W. B. Bryan would probably not want a position in Wilson's cabinet, and therefore that he ought to boost Metcalf for a place. Secretary of state suggested for him. He is big enough for the state, and Democrats and Republicans alike would be glad to see him get it.

Four more states—Kansas, Michigan, Oregon and Arizona—were added at the late election to the list allowing women to vote. And as a matter of fact, the 19th is not far distant when women will be granted the right in every state. Thus, succeeding generations will wonder why there ever had been discrimination against one of the sexes in exercise of the electoral privilege.

In view of the impending scramble for the local nomination which will be made to fall in February, 1914, Democrats will develop a lot of healthy and active factions that ought to compare favorably with any republican party ever had. If Democrats need any information to aid in promoting powerful factions, they can get it from republicans who have had experience in that line.

Democratic leaders express anxiety over the burden of responsibility which follows success at the polls. A political party is more extravagant in making claims when it is out than when it gets in and feels the weight of duty and responsibility. Pleasing theories are multiplied in the pre-election contest. But when the winners get down to business, responsible for results, theories that are impractical are usually taken out of circulation until needed again by professional campaign wind-millmen. Only those who depend on politics for a living or for coveted prestige would design to discredit a party in power without ground or reason. The masses, not looking to politics for direct financial advantage, are well-wishers of any man or set of men directing the affairs of government, regardless of party association. The country is on a sound foundation. The United States treasury has an abundance of money, the markets are healthy, and plenty and prosperity generally prevail. With such stability, a change in the administration, prompted by responsibility to exercise caution, should not cause a serious deflection from the course of good times now enjoyed.

Differences among republicans during the late unpleasantness were largely over men rather than principles. They could not agree on leadership. All republicans favor about the same principles, and the late election showed a plurality of the people supporting such principles. When republicans separated over the question of leadership, the democratic could not fail to win. Wilson had less votes than Bryan in 1908, but a divided opposition led to an easy victory for the New Jersey governor. And if the republican party wins in the future, it must quit fighting over leaders and get together on principles, eliminating from both sides leaders that make union impossible.

The subjects of J. A. Wayland, founder and owner of the Appeal to Reason, socialist paper published at Girard, Kas., ends a manifestly unhappy life—one that sought the shadows and portrayed and magnified existing evils. Friends of the man say he was despondent over the death of his wife. The editor of his paper said Wayland was worried over a pending suit in the United States court against the Appeal. But he left this note: "The struggle under the competitive system isn't worth the effort; let it pass." Whatever the direct cause, self-destruction was no doubt the culmination of a life devoted to gathering clouds and repelling suns. Feeding class hatred, cultivating the false notion that capitalists have a monopoly on the good things of life, that there are no opportunities for men of small means, that the earthly struggle is black with the despair of inequalities, wrongfully measuring torment by dollars, and forgetting other reasons for happiness, would naturally and inevitably produce a state of mind that might reasonably be expected to yearn for death and oblivion. The pitiful fate of Wayland should encourage appreciation of the good that can be found in the world. It should be a warning to those prone to point out only the bad. Both good and evil exist and either can be found. While there are inequalities, what one lacks in one respect is usually made up in another. The law of compensation operates with the exactitude in all walks of life, and every man pays the price in whatever he does or fails to do. Mr. Wayland possessed a large intellect, wasted by fostering greed and discontent, shutting out the light and failing to see and appreciate the good.

The dog days are the hottest part of the year, a period which the ancients associated with the heliacal rising of Sirius, the dog star—that is, when Sirius set our own sun crossed the meridian at the same time in midsummer. The great heat was supposed to extend from twenty days before the rising of Sirius until twenty days after. The Romans dated the period from July 3 to August 11. Dingley, the astronomer, says the dog days are no longer identified with the rising of Sirius owing to the effects of precession, the star rising later every year. In time Sirius will cross the meridian in midwinter. At present the dog days are popularly supposed to extend from July 15 to Aug. 16, but are not associated with the star. This is the hottest and most unpleasant period in our latitude.

Sirius, the dog star, may be easily recognized, as it is five times brighter than any other star in our firmament. It rises out shiny "times more light and heat than our own sun, but is 55,000 times farther away. He now rises about 10 1/2 degrees south of due east and in our latitude is with us from October to May. In midwinter he is high in the sky for ten hours every clear night. Christian Herald.

UNCLE JAKE DIDN'T AGREE.

The Old Man Upheld His Reputation For Being Content.

"Uncle Jake" was one of the characters of Halloway. He was as deaf as a post—when he wanted to be—and as contrary as a bundle of sticks. One of the neighbors came into his yard one day and said: "Uncle Jake, I'd like to borrow your wagon this morning. Mine is having a spring smashed."

"You'll have to speak louder," rejoined Uncle Jake. "I don't hear very well, and I don't like to lend my wagon anyhow."

The old man was an expert maker of ax handles—an occupation in which there is more art than the unskilled would suppose. One day he was on commission. One snowy day, as Uncle Jake came stamping up the steps of the store, another old fellow who was known as Uncle Horace remarked to the men lounging about the stove: "I'll treat the crowd if I don't make Uncle Jake agree to the first thing I say."

"No, it ain't," replied Uncle Jake at once. "I'll make good good money, but that one you've got to be the kind people there. They don't know no better!"

And Uncle Horace treated the company to sardines, crackers and cheese.—Youth's Companion.

SMALL SAVINGS.

A Lecture on Economy That Mark Hanna Delivered to Dingley.

Mark Hanna did money—making a large way. Nevertheless he was not averse to giving his serious attention to little things on occasion. Senator Hanna one afternoon in the Washington board of trustees. Seeing Representative Dingley—head of the tariff law—just entering the front door, Hanna walked forward and took a seat beside him.

The conversation fell along the lines of business. Representative Dingley said that every class of business and industry was prospering. "Every one," said Hanna, "seems to be making good money."

Dingley protested. He knew of at least one man who wasn't himself. "It's very simple, Dingley, very," replied Hanna. "You pay four cartage with a truck that will haul one hundred dollars. You may have noticed that I paid my fare with a ticket. I buy them six for 25 cents; therefore I save 20 per cent for myself. That's the opportunity that if they would only learn how to put that easy made 20 per cent on the credit instead of the debit side or their accounts."—New York World.

Trees That Give Light.

Among freaks of nature in trees there stands conspicuous one known as the Asiatic star tree. It is enormous in tall, growing to a height of about sixty feet to eight feet, while from the ground up to a distance of about forty feet the trunk is perfectly bare. From that point there springs a number of twisted limbs, which about out clusters of long, pointed leaves, and it is these grouped together, that emit at night a clear, phosphorescent light. This gives the tree a spectral appearance and is very deceiving to travelers, who frequently mistake the glow for an illuminated window of a house. The light is not brilliant, but is of sufficient strength to allow of a newspaper being read by it. It does not flicker, but glows steadily from sunset to daybreak.

On the Slopes of Vesuvius.

Despite the danger to which they are exposed, from 80,000 to 100,000 people live upon the slopes of Vesuvius, besides the 500,000 inhabitants crowded into Naples. The reason is that the fertility of the soil is perennial, the perils only occasional. The volcanic ejecta are rich in aluminum, silica, magnesia, lime, potash and iron, which by their decomposition go to make splendid land. Some of the best vines in Italy grow on the skirts of Vesuvius if the volcano were away not one-tenth of the many cultivators could subsist in the same area.

DOGGED THE TRAP.

The Way Dr. Wayland Was Not Cornered by His Son.

Dr. James H. Angell tells in his reminiscences the following enjoyable story of his college days at Brown university under the presidency of Dr. Wayland:

The doctor's son, Heman Lincoln Wayland, one of my classmates, inherited from his father a very keen wit. The passages between father and son were often entertaining to the class. One day, when we were considering a chapter in the father's textbook on moral philosophy, Lincoln rose with an expression of great solemnity and respect and said:

"Sir, I would like to propound a question."

"Well, sir, what is it?"—was the reply.

"Well, sir," said the son, "in the learned author's work which we are now perusing I observe the following remark, and then he quoted:

"The class saw that fun was at hand and began to laugh.

"Well, what if it?" asked the father, with a merry twinkle in his eye.

"Why," continued the son, "in another work of the same learned author, entitled 'On the Limitation of Human Responsibility,' I find the following passage:

"It is indeed absurd. Clearly the two passages were irreconcilable. The boys were delighted to see that the doctor

BOUGHT HOUSES ON FIRE.

Quaker Trade That Enriched Cato and Crassus in Ancient Rome.

One of the scintillating businesses in ancient Rome is mentioned by Juvenal in his "Satires," and we hear of it also from historians. It consisted of buying houses on fire.

The speculator hurried to the scene attended by slaves carrying bags of money—and others—carrying tools. Judged the chances of salvage and made a bid to the distracted house owners, who were glad to accept anything as a rule. The bargain struck in all haste this earliest of the assurance set his slaves to work and secured what he could. Sometimes even he put out the flames and so made a coup.

It was a business for capitalists, but the poorest who speculated in a small way could hardly lose if he had presence of mind enough to grasp the

Rudest Man of His Age.

This Cato the elder and, above all, Crassus, the foundation of their wealth. The latter had a passion for such gambling. He gradually collected a force of cartographers, masons and such artificers—slaves of course—who reached 500 men. Not only did he buy houses on fire, but also, enlarging upon the common practice, he made a bid for those adjoining which stood in danger. His proposals were commonly welcome, so helpless were the people and so great the peril. By this means Crassus became the greatest owner of house property in Rome.

John Hunter, the famous British surgeon, anatomist, physiologist and medical writer, who died in 1793, was one of the rudest men of his age. He returned home late one evening from his round of professional calls and found his wife entertaining a few friends. Grinly he walked into the center of the room, stopped and looked around. "I know nothing of this tick up," he said, "and I ought to have been informed. As I have returned home for the purpose of studying, I hope the present company will retire at once." They retired.

"Even a policeman can't arrest the flight of time," said the funny man.

"Oh, I don't know," rejoined the matter of fact person. "Only this morning I saw a policeman enter a side door and stop a few minutes."

STORY OF A PRACTICE DRILL.

What Happened After the Order to "Fire!" Was Very Different From What Would Have Occurred Had Cordeite and Projectile Been Used. The order is given to load. Some one, ten feet to starboard, has a mass of bright steel tubes and twist back and the breech of the gun goes open.

Epilogue the lifts lift itself with a crash and spins out the projectile on a metal tray in line with the open breech. The golden tongue of the rammer shoots out again and pushes the projectile into the chamber, extending itself apparently indefinitely until the projectile has disappeared.

ARITHMETIC OF MUSIC.

Piano Note Vibrations Range From 32 to 4,096 Per Second.

The pitch of a musical tone can be calculated arithmetically. While the human voice in song is something of an unknown product, the notes of a musical instrument are adjusted according to the number of vibrations per second made by each note.

Thirty-two vibrations is the number designated for the note of C, three octaves below middle C on the piano. The next C has twice the number of vibrations—64; the next twice that—128; the next 256; being middle C.

These figures have not always been the same—The early instrument makers of Europe and many disputes regarding the measurement of the musical strings and pipes that determined the pitch.

The celebrated high C of the soprano voice has a vibration of 1,024. There is a note, middle C on the piano, which is called the "concert C" because it has reached a note above, thereby causing her vocal cords to vibrate at a speed of 2,048 times per second.

HID THE HANKERCHIEF.

There Was a Time When It Was an Unmentionable Article.

The old handkerchief is old and interesting. There was a time when it was an unmentionable thing—an article to be kept out of sight and referred to only in a whisper.

The state of things obtained up to the time of the first Napoleon, when the Emperor Josephine brought it forward for a personal reason. The only defect in her beauty was an irregularity of the teeth, and to hide this she used a delicate little handkerchief, which from time to time she raised to her lips.

In England the evolution of the article which is now so openly displayed by women was equally slow. There was a time when it was forbidden to mention it.

So you want to marry my daughter? "Yes, sir."

"How any money saved?" "Yes, sir."

"Could you let me have $5,000 on my unsecured note?" "I could, but I wouldn't."

"I guess you can take care of her all right. She's yours, my boy, and here's a five cent cigar."—Washington Herald.

David T. Jekyll of Highmore, S. D., who apparently is elected by a plurality of 60 for representative from Dakota...

In the early 90s Jekyll was a driver of harness horses and also owned a galloper of two. He was a son-in-law of the late R. T. Knoles...

Jekyll gained quite a reputation as a "hush" driver, and always an enthusiastic horseman...

When racing was good in the middle west, Jekyll drove Nettle Lee, a pretty little brown trotter...

The uncertainty of a political campaign is akin to campaigning a horse. The analogy doesn't look good but it is...

Jekyll, of Hyde, appears to be about three lengths in the lead in driving finish. If he does not knock his horses...

Jekyll's campaign for office made horsemen who knew him reminiscent last night. The mention of his name...

"He was always of derby caliber, sound and despatched. No one seemed too long for him. He must have had his speed down to a second before going to the pits..."

"I'll never forget this race. They tipped a coin for positions had the Englishman won. He took the outside of the track. Didn't know my better."

"The race was over before the Englishman woke up. Well, here's to Jekyll, of Hyde."

CONSOLATION

Although the outcome may not please, Why should we sulk and fret? With optimistic friends...

The big sun sheds its gorgeous light Upon this sin-cursed sphere; The moon does very all at night...

Let's count our blessings, one by one, Instead of getting sore, Now that the harvest will run For office any more."

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS. Amagodon in politics reminds us of Link Preston's race horse. People always "counted" Link by saying the horse made a mighty good race. One trouble with scenery is that it doesn't amount to much for agricultural purposes. Generally speaking you are more to blame for your troubles than the administration. A refrigerator is a great institution for cold storage purposes, but it is a poor source of inspiration.

That little girl of yours—she'll soon be having her hair "done up," and too, she will be outgrowing her childish ways—and you haven't had her picture taken since she was in long dresses. You don't exactly want to keep her as she is—but you do want to keep the memory.

COURT ETIQUETTE.

Multry Millions Fractured His Diplomatic Post and His Diplomatic Post.

A witty New York society man said at a dinner, purporting of court etiquette: "Court etiquette is, after all, very like ordinary etiquette—the laws of common sense govern it."

"Did you ever hear how Multry Millions lost his under secretaryship of our legation in London?" Multry derided his fate. His common sense was lamentably lacking.

"It happened years and years ago. King Edward last just come into his own, and Multry Millions was dining for the first time at Buckingham palace."

"The dinner was a state one. The splendid gold plate from Windsor glittered on table and sideboard. To Multry, when the entrées came on, the deaf Queen Alexandra said:

"How long have you been living abroad, Mr. Millions?"

"Four years, ma'am," Multry replied in a loud voice, for he knew enough, of course, to speak high and to say "ma'am."

"What? I did not hear," said Queen Alexandra.

"Four years, ma'am," Multry shouted.

"But she repeated, 'What?'"

"Then Multry leaned forward, and, with a polite and amiable smile, he bowed four thanks to the deaf before Queen Alexandra's face.

"He resigned the next morning," Exchange.

THE BARREL.

Strong From Without and Sometimes Doubly Strong From Within.

Nobody knows who invented the barrel. It has been used since time immemorial.

Barrels are used for all manner of articles, solid and liquid. There are barrels for holding sugar, salt, apples, potatoes, and so on; for all sorts of oils, from the heaviest lubricants to the most volatile products of petroleum; for beers, wines and all sorts of beverages. It is estimated that the barrel is the strongest structure of its size that can be made from an equal amount of wood. Its contents are frequently the strongest that can be made from a railway or while the truck is taken from beneath for repairs. Yet the primitive barrel is put together without nails, screws, bolts or pins. It is entirely self-fastened.

The barrel is smaller at its ends than it is in its middle, so that the wooden hoops, self locking, may be driven on, tightening the staves and pressing the heads into the staves. Although not caulked, barrels are water tight. A small barrel is a keg, a big barrel is a cask, and a still bigger barrel is a hoghead.—Harper's Weekly.

Hotel-Tips In Advance.

The Japanese custom of administering the hotel tips immediately upon arrival is being copied by St. Paul, Minn. In former days the Japanese innkeeper made a small charge for the food he supplied, cost price for the room, and the guest, on arriving, made a present of money to the house and another to the servants, indicating thereby both his own social rank and the class of accommodation he expected. It is only these presents, it is said, that were polite for him to write "common stuff" or "rubbish" on the paper in which he wrapped them up. Fearful confusion resulted when Europeans began the custom of tipping first. Presented with a bill for the ridiculously small sum of 2 shillings, they thought a shilling tip handsome, when as much as 10 shillings was probably anticipated.—London Chronicle.

Bread Upon the Waters.

When Victor Hugo was in exile in Brussels he was asked to start Godfather to his son Charles. Rochefort accepted and in looking for a suitable present saw in a curiosity shop a silver tin ornament which attracted him and which he bought, though the price was 25,000 francs. When after 1870 Rochefort was sent to New Caledonia, and his property confiscated, Victor Hugo sold the ornament for the benefit of Rochefort's family. It turned out that it was the work of Roateodon Cellini, and it brought in 200,000 francs.

Franklin's Fate Prefigured.

The fate of Franklin, the explorer, was unwittingly prefigured, and on the eve of his starting on his last voyage, at the hands of his own devoted wife. As he lay dozing on a sofa Lady Franklin threw something on his feet, on which he awoke in consternation, saying: "Why, there's a flag thrown over me! Don't you know that they lay the union jack over a corpse?"

A Charity Dance.

PLINY'S COUNTRY HOMES.

The Famous Roman Loved the Luxurious Life of His Day.

Pliny gives us a minute and loving picture of his country houses—of Como, where he was born and which he bequeathed with its townhouse to his nephew; of the scene that, soothed and charmed the young, no longer young, in his old age.

Still soothing and of power to charm one still.

Of his elaborate and splendid villas in Tuscany and at Laurentum, which he describes with a detail of singular interest to the antiquarian, halls, baths, libraries, porticoes, sitting rooms for the day and for the night, for the company, for privacy; chambers looking out upon the wide prospect, sea or stars, chambers hidden and secluded, where no noise of busy people comes, no murmur of the waves, no tumult of the storm, nor glare of lightning—day, if you wish, not even the light of day, when the shutters are closed; trim gardens, with flowers and fruit and shade, and over the whole dwelling gladsome vines, creeping from roof to roof up to the highest peak of all. They knew what luxury was, those wealthy Romans, and Pliny was by no means one of the wealthiest.

We hear not only of Pliny's abodes, but of his friends and he was a man to have many of them. The most august was the Emperor Trajan himself, and a collection of letters survives exchanged between the two when Pliny was governor of the province of Bithynia and Pontus. The most interesting of these deal with the treatment of the Christians and show the attitude of a humane and kindly Roman gentleman toward those who he felt, must be punished, not because they held outlandish beliefs, but because they refused to recognize the supreme control of the chief deity.—Gannell Bradford, Jr., in Yale Review.

ORIGIN OF A FRENCH DISH.

The Order Mischief Received and the Way He Filled It.

The names bestowed upon certain dishes have often an origin entirely different from technical considerations. This is true of the well known epigramme d'agneau a la Mischief or a la Toulouse, as it was more frequently called. Mischief was the cook of a young French marquis of the century when Pliny was governor of the province of Bithynia and Pontus.

On a certain occasion she gave a dinner to the officers of the regiment Choulet-Carriere, leaving the epigramme d'agneau a la Mischief, as they had attended on the previous evening, at which the host had entertained them with many new and brilliant epigrams. The marquis supposed that "epigrammes" referred to culinary surprises. Consequently she summoned Mischief, her cook, and ordered him to prepare some epigrams for dinner on the following day.

Mischief was greatly troubled as to how he was to obey the order. He recoiled, however, that he had in the latter some very superior lamb, braised the breast, removed the bones, cut the meat into pieces and bread crumbed and fried them. He then cooked the cutlets, arranged them on a dish alternated with the braised breast and served them with a suitable garnish under the name of epigrammes d'agneau a la Mischief, by which name, or a la Toulouse, the concoction has since been known.

The Tongues of the Balkans.

Too many languages are spoken in the Balkans. A traveler in that region writes of the babel: "Turkish, Bulgarian, Serbo-Croatian, Roumanian, Armenian, Greek, Albanian, Kutva-Vlachian, Chircian, the language of the gypsies, Spanish, the language of the Jews of Spanish or Portuguese descent, and the language spoken by the German, Austrian, Roumanian and Russian Jews. Add to this Arabic, Persian and Syrian, large numbers of Slav dialects: Italian, on the northeast coast of the Adriatic; Russian, in the northeast; parts of Roumanian; various Austro-Hungarian idioms spoken in Bosnia and Herzegovina; and the Caucasian languages of the Circassians and Georgians." Not one of these languages is of common use.

A Vicious Fish.

In South America there is a small fish that not only attacks its fellows of the sea and river, but is frequently devoured by the land animals. During certain seasons have to ford the streams in which the caribuis are found. Bathers are often attacked by them, the sharp, club-shaped teeth tearing off from the flesh wherever they attack. They are perfect scavengers, eating the animals that float down the river—dead or alive.

The Beginning.

"How many stars can you see?" she asked.

"More than than you," he said.

"How do you make that out?" she asked.

"I can see your eyes," he said.

And that was the beginning of it all.

The Reason.

More Like a Judge.

"That young fellow is a chip of the old block, isn't he?"

"Rather a tooth of the old rake," Judge.

From from all creatures comes the look of fate.—Swift.

evening to a card party. We were not present, but the conversation around town the next day all ran in praise of the party, the good things they had to eat, Ed Cullen's appetite; in fact they all voted it one of the best times ever had.

Eight cars were employed to take the party out, the weather was fine and there was nothing to mar the occasion. It is to be that Mrs. Tidrick's lunch was calculated to suit the taste for future parties; if so the town ladies came home a little discouraged.

Death of Mrs. Rew. "Mrs. Rew is dead." These are the words that came over the wire last Saturday at 6 p. m. and a profound gloom overshadowed the hearts of all the people of Winside that night. The wind singing in the foliage without seemed to mingle in the sadness of all around about us as they wept tears of sympathy with the husband and the three motherless children. Mrs. Rew was a woman who possessed traits of character and personality of the highest type in the entire community surrounding her home there was no woman more widely known or more highly respected than Mrs. Rew. She brought love and sunshine to every one with whom she came in contact. The funeral services were held at the home Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Alexander Corkey of Wayne, and the remains were taken to rest in the Winside cemetery. Miss Annie Frazier was born near Des Moines, Ia., March 12, 1867. One year later her parents moved to Richardson county, Neb., twelve years later they moved back to Silver City, Ia., where she married Samuel H. Rew, February 20, 1889, and came to Winside, Neb., fourteen years ago. She leaves a mother, husband and three children, Clarence, Bessie and Dorothy; three brothers, Ernest, George and Tom; and one sister, Mrs. Leo Peterson, besides hosts of friends, to mourn her death with sincere and unfeigned grief.

FEARS THE FRIGATE BIRD. The Booby Even Catches Fish to Feed His Merciless Master. The booby never leaves the broad seas, when his harsh cry is heard from the Hebrides to the Faroes and from the cliffs of Scotland to the coast of Norway. He revels in the storm and screeches above the crest of the sea. The booby has great feet, yellow eyes and a beak that is covered with a yellow cap. Each of its wings is three feet long and its neck is so soft that it folds that it fears no enemy but the frigate bird.

The frigate bird is the terror of the birds of the sea, though he ignores at last the booby's screech above the crest of his wings, the frigate cannot fish; he is forced to remain in the air. But as he cannot get fish in the air and as he requires fish for his nutrition, he presses the booby into his service. When hungry he swoops down upon the booby and gives it a vigorous thrust in the throat. Then fast the booby's mouth is open and he is caught in it drops out. The frigate has only to give one peck at the booby's throat to get his dinner.

The frigate bird attacks the booby attacked by the frigate has noth in its mouth. When the frigate pecks in vain he belabors his slave with his wings and the sea is troubled and terrified; the frigate catches fish—Harper's Weekly.

COLORS IN FLAMES. And Why Candles or Lamps Light Appear White to the Eyes. There is a relation between the color of flame and the energy of the combustion causing it. The more vigorous and the more brilliant the flame, the more refrangibility of the light. A flame burning in a tardy and restricted way emits rays that are red. When burning in a more complete and effective manner the emitted rays change to violet.

The flame of a candle or a lamp consists of a series of eccentric luminous shells, the innermost being the most dense. These shells of flame emit light of different colors, the innermost one—that in direct contact with the dark core—being red and having a temperature of about 1000 degrees centigrade. The outer shells of light which are orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet.

The reason that some flames are red and yellow is that they contain a great amount of different colored light is this: When we look upon such a flame all of the rays issuing from the different layers or shells of flame come to our eyes and are received by the retina of the eye at one and the same time. This can only impress with the sensation of neutral or white light.

The Nine in the Calendar. The figure 9, which came into the calendar on Jan. 1, 1883, will stay with us 111 years from this date, or until Dec. 31, 1993. No other figure has so long a consecutive run, and the 9 itself has only once before been in a race which lasted over a century—that which continued from 1800 to Jan. 1, 1883, until Dec. 31, 1899, a period of 111 years. The figures 8 and 7 occasionally fall into odd combinations, but the 9 is the only figure reserved for a longer period than a hundred consecutive years in our calendar since the present mode of calculating dates was introduced. It is also clear that "from their retina" upon the ground among the numerals it is an impossibility for either them to appear in date—neither the conditions nor the
