

The Surest Thing FOR SKIN DISEASES

It's no disgrace to contract eczema and it may not be necessary to continue to suffer.

Skin disease is one of the most difficult problems of medical science. Whole libraries have been written on the treatment, but if you are suffering you don't need the symptoms described—you know all about that.

Most cases of skin diseases are curable—some fast, not.

THE VERY FIRST RESURRECTION

The Distinction Between Jesus' Resurrection and All Others.

Enter Sunday's New Meaning—Pastor Russell Shows Scriptural Differences Between Awakening the Dead and Resurrecting the Dead—Several Were Awakened Before Jesus, but He Was the First—Resurrected—The Church's Resurrection—The Subsequent Resurrection of the World.

St. Louis, Mo., March 29.—Easter is just a week away. It is the most important day of the year. It is the day when we remember the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Not possible to hold. St. Peter declares that it was not possible for Jesus to be resurrected. He was perfect. It was the Father's will that Jesus should demonstrate His obedience even unto death.

The resurrection of any of these persons would have meant much more than was accomplished in them. It would have meant their restoration to the full image and glory in which they were created.

The Pastor made it clear that the Church of Christ consists of the truly essential in all denominations. Several some of the most important features which are barriers not authorized by Scripture.

purchase a pint of whiskey, and procure such reasonable credit therefor as to enable him to make payment through expected remittances from abroad. He was asked why he wished the whiskey and he said it was for purely mechanical purposes, to-wit: splitting fire for the oil company. It is, however, his expected remittances were hardly sufficient to acquire the whiskey for credit, he would give an order on the railroad company, or, if the druggists wished, a check on any bank they might name. His purpose, he said, was eventually to purchase a barrel of whiskey with which to lubricate his axle handle, but he now desired only a pint. He said he supposed some people might think he drank it, but they were mistaken. He was a strict temperance man and rejoiced in common with all good men, to see such a great reformation taking place in this country and especially in this town, as appeared by the election of the temperance ticket this spring. He had thought of obtaining a ball and delivering a lecture on that subject, and if his valuable time permitted, he would do so. Having thus eloquently expressed himself, he struck an attitude, and waited for the medicinal lubricator to be dished out. Alas, he waits still, for the hard-hearted druggists refused, and the unprincipled Lord John Bunsell took forth into the cold world with his axolotl dampened and his desire to lubricate his axle handle unappreciated.

FALL OF THE INCAS.

Fate of the Great Race That Has Left Only Traces Behind. What became of the people who built the Inca empire? Were they the ancestors of those stolid and down-trodden Indians whom one sees today peddling their rude wares in the market place of Cuzco? Mr. Bryce discusses the question in his "South America." He says: "The sudden fall of a whole race is an event so rare in history that one seeks for explanations. It may be that not only the royal Inca family, but nearly the whole ruling class, was destroyed in war, leaving only the peasants, who had already been stricken under their entire accretions. But one is disposed to believe that the tremendous catastrophe which befell them in the destruction at once of their dynasty, their empire and their religion by fierce conquerors incomparably superior in energy and knowledge, completely broke not only the spirit of the nation, but the self-respect of the individuals who composed it. "They were already a docile and submissive people, and now under the spirit of the nation, but the self-respect of the individuals who composed it. "They were already a docile and submissive people, and now under the spirit of the nation, but the self-respect of the individuals who composed it. "They were already a docile and submissive people, and now under the spirit of the nation, but the self-respect of the individuals who composed it.

VALUE OF GRASSES.

They Are in a Measure the Most Useful Plants in the World. Probably the grasses are the most useful plants in the world. It may be that more than half the individual plants in the world are grasses. It is a great family of more than 6,000 species, embracing nearly all the plants that they rarely reach an inch in height and plant bamboos of the tropics that sometimes grow to be 100 feet or more.

Corn is a grass plant, and wheat, rye, oats, barley, rice and sugar cane are all grasses. Then there are alfalfa, sorghum, Kaffir corn, broom corn—all grasses.

The number of species of grasses is enormous, yet we have adopted into our system of agriculture, but a few sorts. In part that is due to the ease or difficulty of seedling grasses. Timothy grass, for example, is so easily sown and the seed so easily gathered that it is sooner set of any and has become the standard hay grass of northern climates.

In some regions of Kentucky blue grass is the almost universal pasture grass because it comes in of itself. In other regions with different soil, loam and lacking in lime redtop has possession. Naturally the former follows the line of least resistance, yet it is by no means certain that he has adopted into his agriculture all the best that nature has provided. Some day we shall do more toward using new neglected grasses.—Joseph E. Wing in "Meadows and Pastures."

The Glacial Epochs.

Several times in recent years it has been observed that great explosive volcanic eruptions (Kilauea, Fuji, Katmai) by charging the upper atmosphere in the isothermal region with fine dust have markedly diminished the amount of solar radiation received at the surface of the earth. It is supposed, according to Professor W. J. Humphreys, that the effect of this process was to reduce the temperature of the air at the earth, since the dust scatters a great amount of the solar radiation. Thus a period of excessive volcanic activity, if long continued, would produce the thermal conditions of an ice age. The geological record is said to furnish evidence that such a period actually began shortly before the last ice age and has coincided with diminishing intensity to the present time.

Changing Taster in Perfumes.

Perfumes were in common use in the ancient world but it is curious to notice how views have changed as to the pleasantness or otherwise of various odors. The smell of aloes is now disapproved, but was highly prized by people; but in the old days aloes, both as a solid extract and as wood, formed a staple perfume or aromatic. Sagron, too, was the most popular perfume of the Romans and was much in favor in England until about the sixteenth century. But who would tolerate the smell of saffron—London comes a person nowadays?—about Chroule.

CURIOUS MANX LAWS.

Food and Drink Alone Are Taxed and Debtors Are Imprisoned. In some respects the law of Man is one of the most backward portions of the British empire. All the revenue is raised by taxes on food and drink. There are no death duties, no property tax, no land tax. The working classes are unprotected as well as over-taxed. No factory laws exist, and no attempt has ever been made to limit the hours of shop assistants, although Manxland is essentially a nation of shopkeepers. Then, although usury is forbidden by law, imprisonment for debt is still legal and is commonly resorted to.

LUXURIOUS KITCHENS.

They Used Silver-Lined Saucepans in the Old Days in Rome. While the housewife today provides herself, and with reason, on the quiet and conveniences of her establishment, she need not think that centuries ago other women in other lands were not equally well provided. Indeed, the kitchens of Roman women were much more luxuriously fitted out than most of our kitchens today. Now, in the days when the Roman empire was at its height if you went into the culinary department of an elegant establishment you would find a variety of silver and shewels that were handsomely and luxuriously decorated. The frames, too, that would cook turkey eggs at once and pastry molds shaped like shells and an infinite assortment of griddles, frying pans, cheese graters and nut chisels. The toilet tables of the Roman women were well supplied in the same lavish fashion. Ivory combs, perfumes, cosmetics, hairpins, even an elaborate toilet case, have been recently unearthed. Safety pins, too, which have for a long time been considered a strictly modern invention, could be found on their tables. But they had no brooches nor any glass mirror, the kind they used being of silver or other white metals.—Chicago Tribune.

"Pail Mail"

Even the BRITISH THE LONDON TRIBUNE. are not agreed upon the proper pronunciation of "Pail Mail." The Pail Mail Gazette has published scores of letters on the subject. One writes: "Henderson Carter, being in part as follows: 'If really does not seem to matter much whether Pail Mail used to be 'Paille Mail' or 'Pawl Mail.' Both are probably incorrect etymologically. I had an old grandmother, one of the old school. Were she alive today she would be about 110. She always spoke of it as 'Pail Mail.' But then she understood most of the old-fashioned pronunciations, such as 'haylock' for blue, 'oblige' for oblige, 'sassafras' for sassafras and 'gould' for gold. This may have been, and probably was, a sheer affection on her part. Anyhow, she stated a new manuscript by bearing how he could knock on a front door."

Some Old Beliefs.

The old beliefs prevail in southern Europe, and a tragic comic instance reaches me from Venice a cockatoo, kept by a British resident as a pet, and been accustomed to pronounce about the roof garden when the family went up there. But one day recently it extended the constitutional a neighbor's roof and was promptly shot by him. He subsequently offered as a complete explanation the plea that he thought it was a niece and that there was a very young baby in his household. Now, students of ancient Greek and Roman augury know that the perching of an owl on the roof foreboded death to one of the inmates, while Orta is among those who charge screech owls with sucking the blood of infants.—London Express.

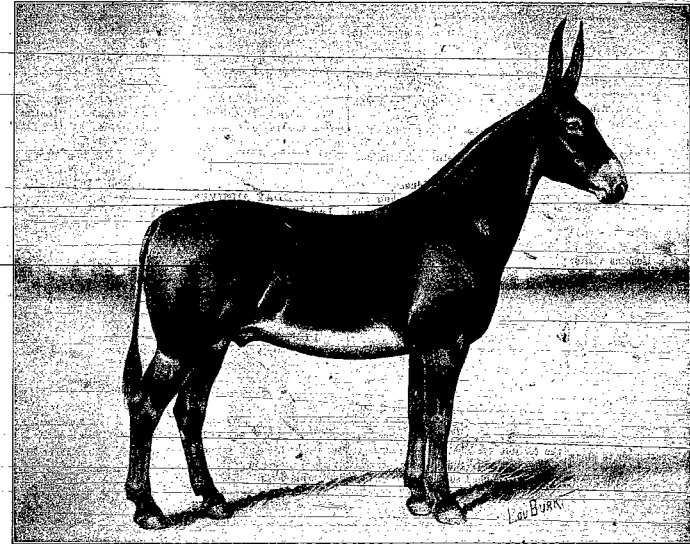

Various Kinds of Wisdom.

Wisdom is of many kinds. Natural, long lived, we call genius; the college kind is a factory made article, knows an unending common sense in hand and generally homemade, and there is an imitation known on the street as "Wim." In society as "pre-sonce" and in the Bible as "hypocency."—Life.

Old Habits. "I believe that phrenologist is a fake." "Why?" "He asked me in an absentminded way if I didn't want a shampoos. Tried to tell me such a lot of nonsense, but I have my suspicions."—Pittsburg Post.

Experiences. "I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know no way of judging of the future but by the past."—Patrick Henry.

SULPHUR SHOWERS.

Not Sulphur at All, Only the Pollen Grains of Pine Trees. Many people think that in spring and especially in early summer it happens that after a shower the edge of every pool of water in the streets and along the sidewalks will be bordered by a fine white deposit. As the water evaporates this ring remains as a fine powdery mass, so much resembling sulphur as to have given rise to the name "sulphur showers." The so-called sulphur is, of course, not sulphur at all. When examined under the microscope it is found to be made up of a mass of the yellowish pollen grains of pine trees. Instead of consisting of a single cell, it does consist of three cells, that of the two larger cells being the ordinary fertilizing principle. The two air containing cells are larger than the other and act as balloons to buoy it up in the air. In places and allied trees fertilization of the cones, by which they are enabled to set and develop seeds, is accomplished by the pollen grains. The pollen is produced in immense quantities and is transported through the air to the cones, which are often on separate, widely distant trees. This is often happens that the pollen gets up to the higher currents of the air, is carried for long distances and is only brought down to the earth by the rain. Hence the so-called shower of sulphur.—Harper's Weekly.

How Wheat Perspires.

When you are perspiring furiously in the dog days of May, you may naturally be led to think that an ordinary field of wheat is giving off moisture quite as profusely. Between the months of April and July, according to Sir James Dewar, a field of wheat perspires sufficient moisture to cover the surface of its ground to a depth of nine inches. Another interesting fact is that it requires three and a half gallons of water to produce three grains of wheat. Speaking of the solar radiation in tropical places, Sir James says that in six hours about four-tenths of a square mile receives heat equivalent to the combustion of 1,000 tons of coal, while an area of 1,500 square miles receives an equivalent heat equivalent to 100,000,000 tons of coal—the whole estimated coal output of Europe and America.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Drummer's Tender Heart.

The merchant traveler had just finished a story of a disastrous fire, to which his firm suffered severely. "And what did you do when you heard of it on your journey?" inquired his friend. "Oh, I sent the boss a long telegram of sympathy. He likes that kind of thing. Cost me quite a crown." "Half a crown?" exclaimed the other incredulously. "Oh, I charged it to my expenses, of course," explained the traveler. "Kindly feeding and thoughtful economy could go no further."—Manchester Guardian.

Pleasant Excuse.

Guest—Walter, are you sure this is your coat? Walter—Yesah. Guest—But I've found a tooth in it. How do you account for that? Walter—That's all right. I don't know, but I reckon that coat must have been biting his tail.—Sphinx.
