A Clean Scalp and Healthy Hair

Many of your friends have found that a luxuriant growth of hair—soft and glossy—and a scalp free from dandruff will result from the use of

Nyal's Hirsutone

This is the procedure—

Wash the hair with warm water and a pure soap—rins thoroughly—rub the scalp with a stiff brush—apply Hirsutone—rub it in well and dry the hair before combing.

Please understand that Hirsutone is not merely a hair-wash—it is a tonic—a food.

While it thoroughly cleanses, it also prevents bacterial action—stimulates and stimulates the roots of the hair—removes all dandruff—prevents its return—and preserves the natural beauty and color of hair.

Nyal's Hirsutone should be in your dressing-table.

It sells at 50 cents and $1 the bottle.

Whatever a good drug store ought to have—and many things that other drug stores don't keep—you'll find here. Come to us first and you'll get what you want.

Edison's Masterpiece

AT JONES' BOOKSTORE

The EDISON DISC PHONOGRAPH shown for the first time, a successful culmination of thirty-five years spent by Mr. Edison in his endeavor to perfectly reproduce sound.

In 1878, Mr. Edison invented and patented the first disc phonograph, but not until 1913 has the great master permitted a disc phonograph to be offered to the public in his name.

Mr. Edison has discovered the secret of recording and reproducing tone and tonic colors, a new and superior method of recording only known to the Edison-Recording-Laboratory.

Until now the delicate beauties of music have baffled reproduction as they were either lost recording or so weakly reproduced as to be entirely lost in the noises common to disc records.

This wonderful musical instrument can be heard at

Jones' Book Store

Come in and listen. You can not help to marvel, applaud. Mr. Edison said: "Let the public ear decide."

On motion council adjourned sine die.

Wayne, Neb., May 6, 1913.

The city council of the city of Wayne met at the council room in special session, pursuant to the call of the mayor, this being present: Mayor C. A. Grace and Councilmen John Larison, J. G. W. Lewis, Herman Lundberg, W. O. Hansen, George A. Lamberson and J. P. Gaertner. Absent, none.

The official bonds of the city treasurer, H. S. Ringland, and city clerk, J. M. Cherry, were examined and on motion approved.

On motion the applications of William Demmever, C. B. Hedrick and C. M. Martin were accepted and licenses ordered issued to operate pool and billiard halls in Wayne for the coming year. The eyes and ages were called and all members voted aye.

On motion the application of O. P. Deppin & Co., for license to operate a pool and billiard hall on lot 3, in block 21 of the original town of Wayne, Neb., was rejected for the reason that three licenses had already been granted and the granting of another license would be against the welfare of the public, there being three licenses already granted within a radius of one block of the proposed location.

On motion the application of John Nichols for license to operate a pool and billiard hall on lot 5, in block 20 of the original town of Wayne, was rejected for the same reason.

On motion the petition of James Britton to operate an opera house and moving picture show on lots 1, 2 and 3, in block 22 of Wayne addition to Wayne, was approved and license ordered issued.

On motion the petition of F. A. Nance to operate a moving picture show and vaudeville on lot 8, in block 21 of the original town of Wayne, Nebraska, was approved and license ordered issued.

The mayor submitted the following appointments with recommendations as follows:

man Lundberg, John Larison and W. O. Hansen who shall nominate and employ all help in their department, purchase coal and all other supplies, have charge of all extensions of the water mains and electric light lines, to see that there is an efficient man in every position, and to have charge of the light and water plant subject to the approval of the mayor and council.

Street and alley committee: George A. Lamberson, John Larison and W. O. Hansen who shall employ all labor needed on the streets, purchase all material and tools for the street work, and have control of the team and all matters pertaining to their department, subject to the approval of the mayor and council.

Finance committee: J. G. W. Lewis, J. P. Gaertner and Herman Lundberg, who shall confer with the other committees, ascertain what money is needed for each fund and how much is available, and devise ways and means to meet the city's needs, act as auditing committee and see that all funds are kept in their proper account.

Park commissioners: John T. Bressler, J. H. Massie and G. H. Fisher. They shall have charge of all the parks including the city hall park, employ all labor and purchase all material necessary to keep the parks in good shape and to do all other things necessary to the maintenance of the parks, subject to the approval of the mayor and council, and shall make report in writing to the council at their first meeting in May and November.

Water commissioner: J. M. Cherry. He shall read the light meters, fix the rates to be paid by the consumers for electricity and water within such limits as is fixed by the ordinance, and collect all moneys receivable therefor.

Chief of Police: George L. Miner. He shall have the care and custody of the city hall and see to it that no gambling, bootlegging or other business is suffered or permitted within the city of Wayne.

City attorney: Fred S. Berry. He shall attend every meeting of the council and supervise the legal part of all its transactions, see that proper record be made of the acts of the council, to prepare or examine all resolutions, ordinances or proposed ordinances when requested to do so and see that they are in legal form and to take charge of all cases in which the city may be plaintiff or defendant and shall not be interested in any lawsuit which would interfere with his representing the city's side of the case.

On motion the appointments and recommendations of the mayor were confirmed.

On motion, J. G. W. Lewis was declared elected president of the council.

CHARGED WITH DEATH OF WAYNE COUNTY MAN

Ainsworth, Neb., May 5.—The district court convenes today with a large crowd. One of the important cases to be heard at this term is that of the state vs. Frank Farrar, charged with an offense against his own daughter. In addition, the charge of the murder of John Knuff on the evening of the 15th of December 31, 1912, near Long Pine, was made today before Justice DeLong, at Long Pine and the defendant was bound over to the district court. The state was represented by John M. Cutler, the county attorney, and by Judge James J. Harrington of O'Neill. The defendant was represented by A. W. Spangford.

Monday's Norfolk News: Knuff, a son-in-law of Farrar, formerly lived at Ainsworth. It is claimed he had considerable trouble with Farrar and that they had quarreled on several occasions. On the day Knuff was killed neighbors testified the two men had met on the road, one driving to and the other from Long Pine. They were quarreling. Later in the day, Knuff's miss reached Long Pine but Knuff was missing. A search disclosed his body lying in the road near where the two men had met. Farrar was arrested on the charge involving his relations with his daughter, pending an investigation of the death of Knuff.

DEBATING HONORS EQUALLY DIVIDED

EACH STATE NORMAL IS VICTOR

Negative Side of Same Question Won in All Contests—The Wayne Debate in Detail.

The triangular debates held at Wayne, Peru and Chadron last week resulted in a victory and a defeat for each institution represented. The question for discussion was, "Resolved That the minimum wage should be established in all industries," the home team defending the affirmative side of the question and losing in every case. Wayne won the decision from Kearney and lost to Peru, Peru won from Kearney and lost to Chadron and Kearney won from Peru and lost to Wayne.

The heavy rain on Friday having damaged the railroad track east of Emerson, the Sioux City train did not reach Wayne that evening until 10:30. The delay made it impossible for the judges to be present at the time set for the contest, and the debate was therefore postponed until 10 o'clock the following morning.

Professor Gregg who accompanied the visiting team, acted as presiding officer and Dr. G. A. Stephens of the University of Nebraska, Professor A. B. C. Jacobs of Tekamah, and Miss Berdie G. Scott, principal of the Norfolk high school, served as judges. The discussion of the question was opened and the affirmative very ably presented by Tracy Kohl, whose part in the debate was to show that the establishment of a minimum wage is sound in principle. The speaker contended that it was merely a continuation of a long line of other approved practices that it extends its labor the same right guaranteed to organized capital; that it is a step in the attainment of social justice.

Mr. Kohl was followed by Ivan Winslow of Peru, speaking for the negative, who undertook to show that the minimum wage will not do away with industrial evils; it will not remove the sweat shops; it will not raise wages uniformly, but will reduce the wage of the skilled workers; it will increase the problem of the unemployed.

John Rockwell, the second speaker on the affirmative, gave argument to show that the minimum wage is practicable. He traced minutely the close analogy existing between the working of the minimum wage and certain other admittedly workable and tested plans of economic adjustment relying on the proposition that if these things worked the minimum wage will also work. He also produced facts to support the statement that wherever the minimum wage has been tried the results have been decidedly in its favor.

Miss Ruth Keith followed for the negative, contending that the minimum wage is neither sufficient nor efficient to meet present industrial problems. She contended that the industry problem remains it exerts no influence over the market; that it will cause degradation and inefficiency by increasing the amount of money to be spent in patronizing cheap theatres, dance halls and saloons.

In continuing the discussion for the affirmative, Alfred H. Lewis's first proposition was that the minimum wage would be beneficial because it would increase the effectiveness of the agencies of production, and whatever increases production of useful things benefits all. He asserted that not only will the minimum wage increase the effectiveness of agencies of production, but it will help to solve problems of social reform. His last point was that the minimum wage is a recognition of the solidarity, the unity of all human life. For society as a whole there is no alternative course; all men must be granted their rights as human beings.

Harrison Lane gave a strong argument in support of the negative side of the question. He claimed that the minimum wage would have no beneficial effect on the industry of the country. It had failed in Victoria and would be ineffective here. It would be detrimental by driving away capital where the industry is compelled to pay more than it can afford; that the cost would be necessary by establishment and enforcement of the law would exceed any benefit derived; that the provisions of such a law would not be applicable here.

Each speaker was then allowed five minutes for rebuttal argument. Tracy Kohl closed the debate with a strong defense in favor of the position taken by the affirmative, and while the audience was silent for the benefit of the judges, the school joined most heartily in singing "The Pale Blue Dot" and the "The Barmecide Song."

The vote of the judges showing a verdict for Peru, was announced by Dr. Stephens.

That it was a good debate with honors going even, is generally agreed. The two boys made a splendid showing and have proved themselves to be good losers. The Peru debaters were been and will awake and make a strong showing for the negative side of the question. The fact that they won a unanimous decision speaks for itself.

But the most pleasing part of the contest was the evidence of good fellowship between the opposing teams. The greatest courtesy was extended to the Peru debaters, and the students of this school were accorded the best of treatment by Professor Gregg and the young people who consisted for honors against Wayne. In a letter written from Omaha, Professor Gregg says:

"Coming along the way, we have had time to take an inventory of our experiences in Wayne and all our debaters feel the generosity with which everybody treated us while there. In dependent of the results of the debate, our debaters will carry away pleasant memories of Wayne. I myself feel that they had a chance to observe an exhibition of genuine magnanimity on the part of your young people when the final result was announced."

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

The pitcher is pitching, the batsman is trying to push the ball in the old-fashioned way; the umpire is umpiring; the fielders are bumping; the game is going on. Two thousand mad creatures are perched on the bleachers, the grand stand is full and the fences, the same, the old and the youthful, the fair and the foul, are watching the game. The growing taxpayers are watching the players, forgetting a while all their burdens and wrongs, and landlord and tenant are saying the game will come to this town where it surely belongs. The fougler, and toiler, the spoiled and the speller are looking together for the best of the fair, and face of long standing, as one are demanding the blood of the umpire, his hire and his hire. The game is progressing, slow and distressing and our boys are all rattled, the audience groans! But see how they rally! O, score keep tally! We'll win at the finish, but see how we rally! The long game has ended, we fans have all waded back, back to our labors, our cares and our joys, once more we grade and steady—and yet ever ready—to stake a few plunks on our own bunch of boys!

Youth goes to bed and ere his head has fairly hit the linen, he falls asleep, his slumbers rest him. YOUTH AND THE NIGHT this happy night is slumbering and soaring, though humors crash and lightnings flash and waterspouts are pouring. He leaves his couch without a groan when morning light has kissed him, refreshed and braced, his sleep has chased all worries from his system. The old man goes to his repose with troubles beyond number, for hours must pass, he knows, alas! ere he gets next to slumber. He'll thrash around and every sound will wake him if he does, the tomat's howl, the watchdog's howl, the rooster's "Cock-a-doo!" His head is crowned with pilgrims' feet along the para go bounding; he hears the doctor's dinant blocks the leader bawls announcing. The cricket seems to let out screams as loud as horns or whistles, his pillow fair, he'd promptly swear, is stuffed with bricks and stones. He swats from eyes and kicks and sighs, the sweat from his forehead is streaming down his face and morning breaks, he feels like forty flies. Oh, youth, glad youth, you have the truth, the sun-up, talk the night! He who can't sleep the joys of sleep is drawing princely wages.

Throughout the land, the cheerful grangers are planting corn or sowing seeds, or heading off the risky dangers that come from April.

BUSY DAYS told of weeds, The gleaming plowshare splits the prairie, the harrow drives its length along; the hired man lays a toll-sung merry, and listens for the dinner bell. One never thinks of man, who is the hardy-handed son of toil, who defies frost, his mud, his horses and leaves his trunk mark on the soil. In town we're trading, selling, buying, producing nothing as we go, while the husbandman is trying to make his corn and taters grow. In town we are a lot of talking of things that don't amount to shucks, and while we keep the watch on the farmer's raising-bean and duck. The grand old granger still produces the things that make the whole world fat, the hops, the turkeys and the geese—there is no nobler job than that. While statesmen raise their use-less shindy, while speculators blow their horn, while jawinisms wear their pathway windy, the farmer's raising wheat and corn. So let us watch the earnest tiller pursue his miles across the prairie; he is our bulwark and our pillar—to him we should take our hats.

The man who pays a trifling tax is always out with battle ax, condemning his denouncing that, and titling INCONGRUITIES. The man who doesn't pay his debts, whose creditor in sorrow sweats, is always finding signs of graft in public men and public craft. The man who lets his weary wife do the washing to sustain his life is always acting with his jaws discussing needed helpful laws. The man who has no traps to guard his fifteen water-birds in his yard which howl all night till neighbors weep or call for poison in their sleep. The man who falls in all he tries on some high office has his eyes on, he will make the ship of state, although he cannot pay the freight. The man who has a private joy too often roasts the thirty plug who boldly seeks the shining bar where forty-rod and gutter are. The man who plays a quiet game in some resort unknown to fame is always when he hears of chaps who waste their substance playing cards, and some who preach the love of man, the helping hand, the kindly plan, expounding divers creeds and gains, are track like beeswax to their wails.

It's weary work, when we old men wait, remote from the mad world of hum; we wait and watch by the garden gate, for the steps that waiting never come. So many wait for the coming of the messenger that never again arrives for the twinkling of eyes, for the whir of wings, for the friends who are not alive. So many wait in the tumbled wreck of their early hopes, I wena, I'm waiting now for a little check from a monthly magazine. The check was coming in the long ago, when my heart was young and heavey, but it doesn't come and it tumbles slow down to a misty gray. The postman comes on his round, by heck, and over the gate I lean, and he brings me about, but he brings no check from that monthly magazine. My gray hair falls on my wrinkled neck, and my eyes have lost their sheen. I have waited so long for that promised check from an eastern magazine, if it were work for the old, old men, who wait as the shades descend, for joys that will never come again; for comrades and guest and friend. To wait and watch by the garden wall, for the things that are past and gone, fill the sun goes down; and the shadows fall, my right eye is staring on the sky, my way to remain on deck till your system is filled with spleen, and wait I wait for a needed check from a journal magazine.

When the rich and the dice are prone to think on the folly of human greed; he toiled and worried to get more chink than a mortal could ever see. TOO SOON. (Sixty in Lincoln Journal) The air was warm, he took 'em off, for he was not afraid, and now the caphead has a cough that cannot be allayed.

ANOTHER HEALTHY PROBLEM. "Tennah Journal: The popularity of the moving picture theatre as a form of cheap entertainment for the masses has directed attention to several of its undesirable features. In Chicago, the prevalence of the health problems called into existence when children attend these theatres daily. Most of the inadequate buildings are cheap stores remodelled for the purpose, often without adequate provision for ventilation. It is estimated that the air in one of these theatres will pass through the lungs of the audience in from six to eight minutes." They therefore complain as the Chicago Health Bulletin remarks, "The health problems called into existence by modern customs and conditions." It tries all over the country, the problem is practically the same, involving the role of contact or close association in the spread of "colds" and various infectious diseases. It is a matter of observation that the incidence of the various infectious diseases of childhood immediately increases on the opening of the schools in the fall on account of the increased opportunity for contact between infants, children and non-infected children. It may, therefore, be reasonably assumed that the close contact in the moving picture theatre is also a factor in the distribution of infectious diseases. Since it is not easy to exclude those who have diseases from our communities, where diseases exist, well-considered regulations as to ventilation and sanitation should be enforced for the protection of the public. Occasionally a man invests in a patent sign lighter and stops mouthing matches for a day or two. A widow who handles the life insurance as a business satisfactory to the neighbors probably has the greatest ability. Assuming, of course, that she or he can die.

FIFTY YEARS AGO GREELEY SAID "YOUNG MAN, GO WEST!"

TODAY PAYNE SAYS: "YOUNG MAN, GO EAST!"

Fifty Years ago Greeley said, "Young man, go west," because land was high in the east and cheap in the west.

Today Payne Says, "Young man, go east," because land is high in the west and cheap in the east.

Greeley's Advice Then was good, because the west was the land of free homes. It was a country unknown and on the eve of marvelous development. It was the time when the west was opening up to get a foot-hold in the new country. The idea of being a pioneer in the west was attractive. Payne's Advice Now is no good today for a young man to get a foot-hold in the new country. The idea of being a pioneer in the west is attractive.

The Past Fifty Years have seen remarkable growth development in the west—Greeley's foresight was good and those who followed his advice have built an empire. Much eastern money has been drawn into the west, and the west has practically robbed the east of many of its farmers.

The Next Fifty Years will see greater development of farm land in the east than has ever been known. This is true because of the great manufacturing centers, density of population and demand for farm products. These manufacturing centers are consumers, not producers, and the people must be fed.

Advice From the Dead is sound, but a man outlives even the best of advice, because the world moves. Continuing to follow the advice given by Horace Greeley means you must make your home in Alaska, or the Islands of the Pacific, or take a final plunge off the western shores of our country.

Suggestions From the Living are more forcible, because the living know what the east wants and knows where the best opportunities are for investment, and where the conditions are most attractive.

Opportunities Fifty Years Ago. Horace Greeley with his wonderful foresight, could scarcely have comprehended what the west offered fifty years ago. He could not, in his wisdom, foresee the building of all the great railroads, the establishing of great cities, the founding of a commercial and agricultural empire. It was not possible to see, nor predict, what was in store for the man who were pioneers fifty years ago. The conditions are changing, because there is too more farm land to be had in the west, no more agricultural frontiers to be had, but only the filling in of the undeveloped land.

Opportunities Today are even more attractive in the east than they were in the west fifty years ago. The east has not been standing still while the west was growing.

If you would like further particulars as to what we have to offer there, or if you want to know something about the farms we have for sale, with prices, etc., please write us at once or see our local agent.

By cultivating an appetite for dandelion greens, people would attack the yellow pest and the high cost of living simultaneously.

Imagine the trouble one would have if he were related to and associated with an English suffragette. In connection, all other troubles would sink into insignificance.

It must have been somewhat of a job to Secretary Bryan to trample on his old-time doctrine of states rights by attempting federal interference in the legislative affairs of California.

There are so few official places to fill compared to the number of applicants that to be elected by disappointed men that congressmen who do the recommending will be fortunate indeed if they manage to hold together enough strength to be re-elected.

An epidemic of diphtheria at Lincoln started from a milkman who had what he supposed was merely a sore throat. The case of the diphtheria had been to deliver milk to customers, and it appears that he also delivered diphtheria germs, of which he evidently had a big supply. It view of the fact that disease germs spread rapidly from milk, it would look as though there should be some legislation compelling greater care on the part of dealers.

Many will earnestly endorse the suggestion of James J. Hill that it would be an advantage to the country if congress would adjourn for ten years. We elect members to congress and pay them real money for service that is often injurious to progress and the best interests of the masses. If the country would retire the whole bunch for ten years, there would undoubtedly be better times and more contentment.

As proven by the way the depot proposition was handled, when Wayne undertakes to do a thing, it does not fail. The spirit of enterprise that raised money with which to build the new station in Wayne is the same spirit that has been manifested whenever public interests would thereby be advanced. Other things should be done, and it is up to the executive committee of the Commercial club to take the lead. The proposition for a new modern hotel building should be pushed forward. Main street ought to be paved. The side streets of Wayne ought to be kept dragged and smooth.

Bettrice is naturally discouraged over failure of its public wells to furnish an adequate volume of water. For many years it secured its supply from the Blue river which is about half water and half mud, and the result was that one could drink it unless he had been endowed with the internal works of a mudstrutter. It was fairly satisfactory for moistening lawns and would have been desirable for mud baths if it had contained medicinal properties. Homeholders usually had their own wells, and thus a city of 10,000, with its modern improvements, had to use individual pumps like a village of 500. But a few years ago the city determined to make another effort to get better water for its public mains, and accordingly sank a lot of wells at big cost. These wells met the demand for a time, but now have failed and a new source of supply will have to be found. The condition is discouraging, but the city is not daunted, and will continue the search for subterranean rivers until it finds one of sufficient volume.

Reverence of Mother's day, next Sunday, as fixed by custom and government's proclamation, quickens memory of one to trust forever. If one is a good citizen, he usually has enough loyal friends to lead him to regard the world with a large measure of satisfaction. But he must win and hold his friends by right conduct, by dealing justly with others, by reflecting good character. Filial devotion inspires children to respect parents even though they may be just moderately deserving. But there is a limit to filial respect. Parents may become so unjust and unworthy that even their own offspring will shun them. A child may become so disobedient and wayward that father will turn cold and indifferent. But not so with mother. No matter how bad one may become, mother, though sorrowing over imperfections and anxious for betterment, never for a moment weakens in the constancy of her love and devotion. No man can sink so far into the mire of shame that a mother will not reach him with her forgiving spirit. No matter how worthless one may become, she stands firm and never forsakes him. Her love is as big, as pure, and tender as love. No sacrifice is too great for her to make for her children. A man furrowed by age is still her child and the object of her warmest sympathy and solicitude. Nothing limits maternal love. It does not require favorable conditions. Under any circumstance it glows forever. And mother's love will find quick and hearty response in any man of normal sensibilities. Though she may have passed beyond mortal view, and her physical form, so familiar to one's sight and touch, may have dissolved into nothingness, the impress of her generous and noble spirit remains to uplift, encourage and cheer. Whether her real self—the surviving life flame that radiates warmth and trust love—is here or in eternity, every normal creature remembers her with sincerest gratitude and esteem—cherishes memory of her useful thoughts, and whether she be among the living or departed, is influenced by her noble example to be better and do better.

WHO IS NOT A FRIEND?
Beatrice Express. The Chicago Tribune very aptly remarks:
"A friend! What is a friend? My friend is he who laughs with me, who weeps with me; one who encourages, praises, rebukes, who eats terrapin or turkey, or bread and salt with me; who comes to me at the wedding feast, or stands with me beside the coffin; who listens to my hopes, my fears, my aims, my designs, who rejoices in my success, who does not despise me in my misfortunes."

We might add, who is not my friend? He is not my friend who professes to laugh in my hours of joy and to weep when I am sad; one who encourages me and praises me to my face, but when my back is turned stabs me to the heart with ridicule and unkind words. He is not my friend who eats turkey or terrapin with me on Sunday, and on Monday tells of my shortcomings and holds me up to laughter before a world of strangers without defense.

A gossip can be a friend to nobody. The word friendship is but a rattle in the throat of a scandal-monger. Enemies to the whole world, they are enemies to themselves, sitting at the window of life, during last some of the honesty, and some of them with their eyes, and to them shall be denied the opportunity to start a story on hollow wings.

Remember friendship unalterably demands constancy, faithfulness, fidelity, honesty and none of these belong to the scandal-monger.

AULD FOOLS' GAMBL.

The Custom From Which All Fools Day Takes its Name.

Most people call April 1 all fools day, whereas it should be April 1, i. e. old fools' day. The appellation probably has its origin from the following explanation:

In a draught of times, between 10 and 12 o'clock on the night of April 1 it was customary for all those young women who dared to venture into a street were met by their friends one behind the other.

At the footing of an owl they commenced slowly running round and round, to the accompaniment of such words as these:

Ban-man, ban-man.
From horns, back and by,
Leap high, leap low,
Come and run with me.

Thereupon, side by side with those of the girls destined to be married within the coming year, the phantom of a ban, or white man, appeared, and if any of the girls were going to die within the year a black man was seen. Once while this ceremony was in progress the spirit of a very old, tottering white man put in an appearance and attracted such emphatic attention to the girl he ran with that the other performers were much amused.

The object of their amusement was subsequently ascribed to such an extent by every one in the village that they fled from the neighborhood, marrying before the year was out a strange children old enough to be her grandfather.

After this event the ceremony was gradually styled the "auld fools' gambol."—London Answers.

Dead Sea Stillness.

The Dead sea is a vast lake about 250 miles long and 15 miles wide. The waters of the lake are for an immense distance tolerably transparent, but salt and bitter beyond bitterness, and so buoyant that one can float upon them like a cork, and swim if it is only necessary to move the hands. The surrounding scenery is grand in the extreme and in parts singularly grand. But the stillness is oppressive, and oppressive, for there is no sound of animal life or song of bird ever heard on the lonely shores of the famous lake.

Shelley and the Kiss.

The supreme laureate of the kiss is Shelley. The word is seldom absent from his shorter lyrics. Here is one stanza laden with kisses:

See the mountains kiss high heaven
And the waves kiss one another—
Hills and valleys kiss, the forest
It disdains its brother,
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeams kiss the sea.
What are all these kisses worth
If those kisses not me?

WHIRL OF THE TORNADO.

Beside it the Rush of the Cyclone is Comparatively Harmless.

An whirl right for a terrific English is being traced over at least by scientific authorities on the weather who object to having the tornadoes which rip through towns now and then or carry away isolated farmhouses, called "cyclones." The distinction made by the experts in meteorology is plain, but the public is wedded to the "cyclone."

The word has gained wide acceptance in describing the furious local storms which rush forward along a more or less direct path while they whirl with far greater velocity on a center which may be only a few feet in diameter. If a boy's top spins upon one end of a board and the board is tilted so that the top slides quickly along it, all the while revolving at high speed on its point, the onward sweep of the tornado is closely imitated.

It is the spinning motion which is the swiftest and most destructive. The advance of the storm may be as rapid as that of many a comparatively harmless gale. The twisting motion is estimated at not less than 200 miles an hour in the most violent ones.

The true cyclone of the West Indies, the China sea and other parts of the tropics is entirely different. Its force is spent in a furious wind that seems to blow almost straight ahead, while the storm revolves, more or less fully, around a circle the circumference of which may be many hundred miles. A tornado wrecks its fury on a strip of land usually only a mile or less in width. The cyclone sweeps scores or hundreds of miles of sea or shore.

But "cyclone" is intruded in popular usage as the name of the typical "twister" of this country, and "tornado" has a poor chance.—Cleveland Leader.

THE PRISONERS' CIPHER.

A Puzzling Code That Was Discovered Only by Accident.

Prisoners in jails are generally very ingenious, so much so, in fact, that it has been frequently remarked that if they were not so they might as well be honest purveys they would thrive much better than as criminals.

One branch of ingenuity is displayed in the plans they make to escape with ease with one another. They construct cipher codes, but the officials generally manage to translate them.

Recently in a western jail the guards encountered a cipher that proved too hard for them, and it was a good while before the puzzling messages were made out, and then the key was accidentally discovered by a man in a foggy, as smart a routine as ever was behind the bars, invented the puzzle.

The writing was on long, narrow strips of paper, on the ends of which were letters and parts of letters that apparently had no connection and from which no words could be formed.

One day a deputy who was passing the cell of a prisoner saw him passing a long strip of paper around an octagonal pencil. He took this paper away and on it were the mysterious symbols that had so puzzled the warden.

But the deputy got an idea from this, and going back to the office, he wrapped the strip around an octagonal slotted pencil and after several trials he just did it so that the parts of letters fitted together and made a sentence, though the writing was very fine.

The writer had adopted the simple ingenious plan of carrying the lead pencil with the paper and had then written along one of the flat sides, on the end of the pencil, as many letters as could be written between the pencil and the paper. As it was originally found it could be easily understood.—Dallas News.

Almost the Speed Limit.

"No man is a coward to himself," said the war veteran oracularly.

"At Chattanooga one of the men in my company left camp at night and no one saw him till after the battle, when he appeared in camp unharmed and unharmed. Some of the boys used him of running away, but he wouldn't admit it."

"I'm only retained in good order," he declared.

"I heard of the matter, and a few days later I asked him if he had any idea how fast he had retreated."

"Well, I'll tell you, cap'n," he said. "I'd been at home and gold after the factor folks that see me passing would have thought my wife was right sick!"—Youth's Companion.

A Story of St. Paul's.

A singular fact in the history of St. Paul's cathedral, London, is that the first stone which the architect ordered the masons to lay on the foundation of the former cathedral, destroyed by fire, was part of a sarcophagus, on which had been inscribed the single word "Resurgam" ("I shall rise again").

The prophecy was fulfilled, for out of the ruins of old a veritable poem-immortal has arisen.

His Umbrella Scheme.

"Yes," replied the man with a flourish in his eye, "if somebody please this one up, it's gone. It was a charge of grand larceny."—Washington Star.

Rambler Motor Cars

The Jeffery works at Kenosha, Wisconsin, where 96 per cent of all Cross Country cars are made.

IN a little one-room shop on South Water Street, Chicago, before the big Chicago fire of 1871, Thomas B. Jeffery, with two helpers—a man and a boy, laid the foundation for the great organization behind the Cross Country car.

In forty years from this modest beginning—twenty-one of which were devoted to building up the bicycle industry, this organization has grown—until today five million dollars are invested in the Jeffery factory equipment alone, and every dollar's worth of it is paid for.

EVERY intelligent man and woman in America surely recalls the fact that the Rambler bicycle was the most popular bicycle of its type during the days of bicycle progress.

Fifteen employees of this company have been in the organization for twenty years and over; fifteen from fifteen to twenty years; twenty-one from ten to fifteen years; and three hundred and thirty-three from one to five years.

THE factory ground area today is one hundred and four acres and the floor area twenty-five acres.

Ask your banker what the name of Jeffery stands for in the motor-car industry and consider well before you choose a car the standing and experience of the maker.

A beautiful four-color reproduction of the Cross Country, from an oil painting by R. Philip Brinard, is ready for mailing. See the Cross Country by all means, at any Jeffery branch or dealer's display room, but send for the picture anyway.

FARMER MOVING TO A STRANGE COUNTRY

The man who leaves a Wayne county farm, amidst pleasant social conditions, to move to a strange country runs the risk of finding associations not so agreeable and healthily as those he left behind. The following from Wallace's Farmer explains the value of the social asset:

We have a letter from one of our subscribers, that emphasizes and illustrates a point that we have often made when speaking of a farmer moving into a strange country. This subscriber left a good Iowa farm, in a good neighborhood, and moved into a strange country, with the idea that his old home-grounds were like his old home. He says:

"I do not wish to mingle in the beer drinking, Sunday dancing and gambling, that seem to be the favorite and general pastimes of all people in this vicinity. My family and myself have lived to ourselves as much as possible, but I have no desire that my young folks find such pleasure as the young folks here do, getting drunk and all kinds of rowdiness. Therefore, we have been the target of all kinds of abuse and remarks from strangers and strangers. It is galling to us. Living the best life we can and wishing to do the right thing by our children, we find it useless. I have invested my all in my farm. I do not like the idea of moving, as a move is a loss, but I have decided to leave this settlement, even should it mean financial loss."

We presume that quite a number of our readers have made this or similar mistakes. The mistakes were not all made by moving into a foreign country, as this one seems to be. There are American communities in which it is quite as unpleasant to a stranger or foreigner as in a foreign country. Some of our foreign communities, in fact, are among our very best communities; while some of them, like some American communities, are the worst.

The point we make is that land has a social value, and this social value differs with different people and different communities. If we wish to get the best out of life, and particularly where a family of children is to be reared, it can be done only amidst congenial associates, and not only congenial associates, but associates with high ideals of life. For after all, the ultimate object of working land and farming is not to make a living easily, nor to speculate on the advance of land, nor to make money, but to rear a family of good, upright, useful citizens. If a man succeeds in doing this, his life is a success. If he fails, he matters much more money he makes, his life is not a success. We know of no greater calamity that can befall a man than to have any of his children go wrong, take up with low associates, and form evil habits. This is a grief and a sorrow which is not easily healed. We might go farther and say: one that may be healed and that we carry with us to our graves.

Many of these neighborhoods can be redeemed, provided there are even a few men in them who might have high ideals, and who realize the value of the church, the school and a good community. Then either we are a dreamer, but a reality, has been demonstrated. Therefore, if you have made a mistake and are in a bad neighborhood, associate with the best people in that neighborhood and try to reconstruct it. If there is a church in the neighborhood, much more than any other institution attend it. You will always find good people in the church, people with whom you can agree on the essential principles of right living. Enlist the school teacher. Do your best to see that the sports of the community are elevating instead of demoralizing. For sport it self is neither one nor the other, but takes its character altogether from the people who engage in it. If having tried these methods faithfully, you have failed, then there is only one thing to do and that is to move away from that bad neighborhood. Before you select a new location, be careful to see that the surroundings are at least reasonably satisfactory.

Stanton Pickett: Today the city of Stanton, Neb., held its biennial application-licensing for licenses. The next step will be to vote through the initiative and referendum upon the lowering of the liquor licenses and if this carries we may have saloons anywhere from thirty days to six months' after this city board put two saloons out of the way. It was thought that the other way would come across and apply for license, but it is said that the remaining three were afraid to apply because of charges that were held back by the mayor.

MOTHERS' DAY CALLS OUT PROCLAMATION

Lincoln, Neb., May 8.—Governor Marchand has appointed his signature to a tribute to the mothers of the state in the proclamation setting the day apart, which is as follows:

"By force of precedent the second Sunday in May of each year has come to be known as Mother's day in many states of the Union."

"Being in full sympathy with the sentiment which sets aside one day in the year to do honor to motherhood, I hereby designate Sunday, May 11, 1913, as Mother's day."

"To every man, every day in the year is Mother's day, but it is well to set aside one day from all the rest to give public expression to the love of all human sentiments, the love and affection that is due to motherhood."

"I recommend that this day be so observed that it will bring hope and cheer to the unfortunate and peace and joy to all, and that your charity be as broad and tender as a mother's love."

"Given under my hand this 5th day of May, 1913."

JOHN H. MORREHEAD, Governor.

J. H. BOYD, Contracting Painter and Paperhanger.
