MISS SARA J. KILLEN WRITES FROM NAPLES

BEAUTY OF GERMAN FLANT LIFE

People and Conditions in North Europe Differ Greatly From Those in Southern Part.

Naples, Aug. 1, 1913. Dear Herald: It has seemed so good to get the home paper each week, and they have been very prompt in reaching me. Wayne seems a great distance from Italy. In the mad rush to see things, we have not had time to enjoy them, and we have been too busy to see the things that were so interesting to me.

In Germany, we were charmed with the beauty of the country. The baroque architecture and the colorful gardens with their roses, geraniums, and the windmills and the red tiled roofs, often moss-covered, among the green trees made the German country beautiful. The cities with their soft tones of white houses, and windows boxes full of bright blooming plants, the junks, fountains and statuary were equally attractive.

We passed through the Tyrol and found them the most unusual of all. The people were friendly and easy, and exceedingly courteous. It was a rainy day and the streams were swollen and turbulent. At one place, we were held up for several hours by a landslide.

Prosecco wine, Italy, the whole appearance was changed. Different trees, different crops, different people. It was difficult to believe in listening to their jargon that they were not quarrelsome. They were a friendly, conservative people. We seemed to have reached the land of our own kind. In Italy, corn and grapes seem to be everywhere, growing in the same field. The farms of northern Italy is not very different from Nebraska. And it is in about the same latitude. As we came south, we found the eggplant, the olive, the fig, the orange and lemon, with some tropical plants. We were very comfortable in Italy. The people do not seem to be so friendly as the people in the north. They have enjoyed sailing on the bay and our visits to Sorrento and Capri.

That the 'proper' style of mankind is now in Naples. We have walked on the bank streets at evening, where they have the common stove, and the milk market. The queue lasts of the milk market. The queue lasts of the milk market. The queue lasts of the milk market.

Uncle Walt

The Poet Philosopher

To do things right, with all your might—that is a goodly matter. I've quoted this in side my hat—and if you don't you'd ought to do things right, as leads your light, with your might, with your hope abiding; to do your best and let the rest to Jesus go doing. With such an aim, you'll win the game, and see your fortune founded; and goodly boots, boots any crowd that ever man's equipt. To do things right, bravely fight, when fate puts you unfairly, to pay your way from day to day, and treat your neighbor squarely. That doctrine fills all wants and still, the landlord's qualms and terrors, and guides him straight at goodly gain through all the field of errors. To do your best, within your best; a cheerful heart undaunted—that is the plan that brings a man all things he ever wants. All finding, caring and making of matters are not very handy; but when it comes to finding plans, folks say I am a dandy; and my receipt is short and sweet, and easy one to follow; just to do things right, with all your might—it beats all others hollow.

I sit me down in the logbook with a loaded pipe and a corking look of the battling Red Beach kid, and I do not know what the sensation is. SOLD COMPOST. What plans they form to do, or what course propose to all of their tricks I'm blind. At the tariff grid they may break their backs, they may strain themselves at the income tax as often they have before. I've seen a man who goes on a rampage, but through his own sense with a gun and a ball of gore. I'm reading now the heroic tale of mighty men in the article, making their fearful trips. I do not work to do these colossal things and I do not want to see the impingings may do with their shabby ships. I'm tired of facts, though they're 'Vital Things, I'm tired of measure that comes through. I'm tired of the White House news, it's good to read in the desert place with a husky team and a frozen face, and a pair of willow shoes. It's good to travel with Roy E. Beach away-away to the snowy reach of the far Alaska strand, to leave awhile by the firkin road the daily grind and the heavy load, and this sad, sad ride laden.

When the world seems dark and gloomy, as a bear, and the luck is fairly growing worse and worse, then it's good to read in the desert place with a husky team and a frozen face, and a pair of willow shoes. It's good to travel with Roy E. Beach away-away to the snowy reach of the far Alaska strand, to leave awhile by the firkin road the daily grind and the heavy load, and this sad, sad ride laden.

THE MIDDLEMAN more present if there is a stray man present, who must take the most unhand him and the curse. Just at present, we're in the land of the living, since all ends on March five, again, then in 1913 fell on the same Sunday as that year—the first time since then this has occurred. Moreover on Easter Sunday, this year, she received word of the death of her son, William, of Seattle.

Mrs. Pickering had resided here fifty-five years. She celebrated her sixtieth wedding anniversary, with her venerable husband, on June 8 of the current year. Surviving are the now bereaved 'bedroom' of sixty years ago, and one daughter, the wife of Dr. John J. Williams, of Wayne, Neb. Dr. Williams is an alumnus of the college of medicine, St. W. D. Clark, of 1869. John A. Pickering, who passed away in Iowa City, Ia., in 1896, was a native of Seattle, Wash., where he spent many months in the early part of his life. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. W. D. Williams will officiate.

Mrs. Pickering was a woman of estimable character, and lovely nature, and the calling away of this splendid personality leaves a void which will be sorely felt by many a heart in the University City.

TO INVESTIGATE COMPLAINT. Lincoln correspondence Saturday. The State Engineer has ordered that the irrigation board has been requested to go to Hartington to investigate a complaint made by George W. Kelly and several citizens regarding the letting of contracts for bridges in Cedar Rapids. The complaint is in the nature of a petition and was filed in the city court. The board has paid out in the last four years $100,000 for bridges and that the contracts for steel were let at eight cents per pound when the same contracts were offered at 10 cents per pound for four cents. The people up there want Mr. Price to look into the matter and see what can be done. A man will be sent from the office in a few days. Sometimes a man steals it and when it's a plain thing, by giving away.

The hot winds shimmered from the South and made the people uneasy, no better blasts ever left the mouth of old Neovias. The corn was withered where it stood, the grass was withered, and in the pasture and the hand the planting cattle strew. I saw a sad-eyed farmer stand and view his stunted field; he had a perch for his hand, the which he did not wish to merely stand and look around, but one who's stunted and sick, as you might look if someone found your outfit with a brick. I centered blithely up to him and spoke some words of cheer. "Don't let your eyes with tears dim, the look will change next year. The first man's garments are not torn, but Joe he tore his hair, because he sees his fields of corn burned up by the scorching sun. You've the wind with you, but the same will come in figure, so dance and sing, and when you're glad—despondency's a crime." That's why I'm sitting up in bed, too sore to sweat the flies—a fabled position on my back, a beefsteak on my nose. Yes, when I'm on my feet again, I'll give you all helpful songs, and sing the story of some of men to dance on joyous heels. I shall sing a merry note, but I will always be more cautious when I choose the poet to hear my ecstasy.

I'm thankful that Autumn will shortly be here; the flies—wafah me sweat—will then disappear. I'm thankful that August's full moon will be missed; for it's the symbol of the month in the first. I'm thankful that winter is coming, for then we begin to have fun on the place; how sweet to the farmer, how sweet to the soul, the trusty laborer, the kindling of the wood, the snow on the hill, the snow on the hill, the snow on the hill.

CARD OF WILL. I'm thankful that winter is coming, for then we begin to have fun on the place; how sweet to the farmer, how sweet to the soul, the trusty laborer, the kindling of the wood, the snow on the hill, the snow on the hill, the snow on the hill.

DEATH OF MRS. PICKERING. Mrs. Mary A. Pickering, who died at her home in Iowa City, Ia., Monday, was the mother of Mrs. J. J. Williams of Wayne, Neb., and was known by many here. The Iowa City Daily Press of Monday contains the following in regard to her:

Mrs. Mary A. Pickering, the beloved wife of George A. Pickering, both of whom were natives of Iowa City, passed away this morning at 10:15 at the family residence, 318 South Gilbert street.

She was in her eighty-third year. Originally she was born on February 24, 1830, in Wayne, Neb. In 1913 fell on the same Sunday as that year—the first time since then this has occurred. Moreover on Easter Sunday, this year, she received word of the death of her son, William, of Seattle.

Mrs. Pickering had resided here fifty-five years. She celebrated her sixtieth wedding anniversary, with her venerable husband, on June 8 of the current year. Surviving are the now bereaved 'bedroom' of sixty years ago, and one daughter, the wife of Dr. John J. Williams, of Wayne, Neb. Dr. Williams is an alumnus of the college of medicine, St. W. D. Clark, of 1869. John A. Pickering, who passed away in Iowa City, Ia., in 1896, was a native of Seattle, Wash., where he spent many months in the early part of his life. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. W. D. Williams will officiate.

Mrs. Pickering was a woman of estimable character, and lovely nature, and the calling away of this splendid personality leaves a void which will be sorely felt by many a heart in the University City.

TO INVESTIGATE COMPLAINT. Lincoln correspondence Saturday. The State Engineer has ordered that the irrigation board has been requested to go to Hartington to investigate a complaint made by George W. Kelly and several citizens regarding the letting of contracts for bridges in Cedar Rapids. The complaint is in the nature of a petition and was filed in the city court. The board has paid out in the last four years $100,000 for bridges and that the contracts for steel were let at eight cents per pound when the same contracts were offered at 10 cents per pound for four cents. The people up there want Mr. Price to look into the matter and see what can be done. A man will be sent from the office in a few days. Sometimes a man steals it and when it's a plain thing, by giving away.

The Telegram Herald announces that it is thirty years old, and boasts that it has never been "licked." Would it know if it were "licked?"

Governor Fors who used to be a republican but who was three times elected chief executive of Massachusetts as a democrat, has lately announced his intention of returning to the republican ranks. Whether he has had his ear to the ground, or for some other reason has experienced a change of heart, is not explained.

Some time ago, the foreman of the Herald's advertising department sent specimens of ad. setting, which were passed on at the late meeting of the Kansas Press association, to the editor of the Inland Printer with respect that the fifteen best be returned, marked according to rank, and it is interesting to note that the sample winning first place at Omaha is not one of the fifteen selected by the leading printer's publication. This shows that authorities on ad. setting, like doctors on diagnoses, often disagree.

Responding to a flood of letters asking him to fix a time for offering prayer for rain, Governor Hodge of Kansas, declined, saying: "I believe in the efficacy of prayer, but not in the case of flood or drought." Why draw the line against prayer, but not in the case of flood or drought? What does he believe prayer will do? Would he believe in the efficacy in case of drought? Would it furnish a source of grasshoppers? How does the governor of Kansas happen to know that prayer will do some things and not others. It is likely the governor would favor praying for the general welfare, in which efficacy could not be proven. If he believes in prayer at all, it is plainly unreasonable to assume that it is potent in some things and impotent in others.

August is not a very stirring month. It is usually hot, and follows a long period of hot weather. People are frayed. Their nerves have been assaulted by long waves until they are worn, and their enthusiasm has exuded and evaporated with their perspiration. They don't feel like doing things, and they don't do any more than necessary. Another hindrance to August as a month of spirited action is the fact that it lies between seasons. Farmers are watching their crops mature and merchants are preparing for the fall trade. August is not an overly pleasing month, but was evidently deemed necessary as a filler.

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS.

Some experts do nothing but dig up the mistakes of their predecessors. After you are fired it is easy to imagine that your employer is dishonest.

Restaurants meals are frequently had enough without adding ragtime to the injury.

What has become of the fallacy that a dog trotting over a bridge will throw it down?

Always try to remember that it takes longer to correct a mistake than it does to make it.

A man who is never in a hurry seems to accomplish about as much as the rest of us who rush around.

If a man keeps the house from getting away while his family is away, he believes in his own housekeeping.

So many brides have been deserting their husbands here of late it is naturally concluded that marriage is a Menace.

It is easy enough to fish without fish, but that would be fatal to a fisherman's neighbor who insist that something stronger is equally necessary.

COSTLY TREATMENT.

"I was troubled with constipation, indigestion, and spent hundreds of dollars for medicine and treatment," writes C. H. BIRSE, of Whitlow, Ark. "I went to a St. Louis hospital, also to a hospital in New Orleans, but no cure was effected. On returning home I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets, and worked right along. I need them for some time and am now all right." For sale by all dealers.—A.D.

STAGE MANNERISMS.

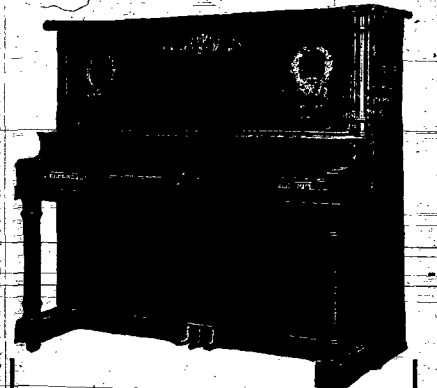

Grossmith Rebelled Against Imitating Charles Matthews.

Wedon-Grossmith in "From Studio to Stage" has written some sensible things about the practice of imitating the methods and mannerisms of great actors, a practice that was "once more fruitful than it is now. On his return to London he played a part that had been played many years before by Charles Matthews and he had established a sort of orthodoxy in his presentation. Mr. Grossmith relates: "I was asked by the producer to do the same business that Charles Matthews did, and when making my exit at the end of the first act the stage manager said: 'Why? Why?' " "Why? I asked. " "Charles Matthews did it," he replied.

"Never," said I. "Not having had the good fortune to see the great Charles Matthews, I naturally can't imitate his methods, and I must do things my own way."

"Really?" said the producer and, looking at the other members of the company for support and encouragement, in his best effort to win acquiescence he said: "I have heard a rough press notice, but a brilliant actor, Mr. Wedon-Grossmith is in America, but is going to improve on Charles Matthews in London?"

"That's not quite the point," I replied. "Charles Matthews did it, but I don't know. At any rate, he was a gentleman in every part he played, and I am much afraid his imitators have ruined his business. For it doesn't seem to me possible that Charles Matthews would make an exit from a drawing room in the possession of ladies throwing his coat and entering over his head, and whether he did or not, I absolutely decline to do it!"

When I was advised to use Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I used two bottles of it and it gave me permanent relief," writes R. W. Hill.

A Boy Today

A Man Tomorrow

THIS boy has all the earmarks of good rearing. He has been brought up by a good mother. If he follows her guidance he'll do nothing very bad. He will not wreck any banks or commit any crimes. He'll be a good citizen.

But the question is, who, besides his mother, will influence this lad in the next ten years or so?

What sort of an impression of the world is he going to get, now that he is stepping out into it?

It all depends on what is thrown in his way.

There are good influences that he needs.

Think of what it would mean if a boy could spend a few days of each year at this period of his life at a Chautauqua.

He would hear inspiring lectures by world-famed orators, he would learn the truth about entertainment, that the best of it suggests nothing but the clean. And he would hear music that would stir his soul for a love of the beautiful all his life.

Thousands of men owe much to the inspiration of the Chautauqua.

How much more it would have been worth had they known something of its influence as boys.

From Ponca Journal August 26, 1890: The Cedar County Nonpareil has been ordered for sale. In addition to the Nonpareil, there is to be another paper started in Cedar county. That is a good county for one newspaper, but it will not support two, and the struggle and competition will kill both.

Judge Barnes and Messrs. Orr and Higgins were out hunting on Monday with varied adventure and experience. Their dog was bitten by a rattlesnake. The dog still lives, however, and so at last accounts, does the snake. In their travels, they were in the vicinity of a certain hog trough battle which we described several weeks ago. But in spite of the calamities and trouble which seemed to take pleasure in writhling during the week, they bagged several (nearly or less) of chickens, snipe, quail and woodcock, and would have shot a deer or two, had opportunity occurred.

Siox City Journal.—A correspondent of the Youngstown, O., Echo writes in this newspaper what he probably intended for a description of the Isola "volcano." It is very evident that the writer has never been at the place he sets to describe. His description while he says "White at Ver-million we improved the opportunity and visited Smoking Mount, seven miles west on the Nebraska side. For miles up and down the river along our pendular bluffs rise, in some instances to the height of 400 feet, and break away towards the interior into table lands or high-prairies. The mound has a history dating as far back as the early explorations of Lewis and Clark, who visited and made brief mention of it. It was then burning, and for upwards of sixty years so continued. In some places, the sides, where fallen away are so hot as to be impassable for the naked hand. There are occasional crevices or openings in the summit, and sides, from which a moderate amount of heat issues, but little smoke, a stone dropped into these can be heard rumbling along face-over-mountains and trees without any perturbation, as if stopping abruptly."

THE GET TOGETHER SPIRIT.

Tecumseh uncertain: There is the proper spirit of get together on the part of the merchants of Wayne, for they are not indifferently-judicious, and afraid "the other fellow" will get hold of a time that each ought to pinch. As a result, a week of special sales was planned and pulled off during the last week. Each merchant made a "deedle" on a certain article at a certain time, the whole being fixed by a committee. Consequently in the way of inducements, there was "something doing" all the week. And what was the outcome? In many other towns the size of Wayne, the merchants were sitting around, pinning the strings, clucking and cawing all the time, the government and everything but everybody else. There, being no business, they could put in their time brushing the cobwebs away from the doors, or wondering about among their stock, watching the different stuff become unassailable.

At Wayne, extra help was secured for the stores, and the proprietors and help worked like troopers early and late. An extra policeman had to be pressed into duty to park the automobiles, and the whole while the thrifty folk, in true metropolitan-style, fought at it that bargain counter, and the mee-folk grabbed hold of this and that bargain. Stocks were ruffled, and stuff was not allowed to become unobtainable. The merchants, with smiles on their faces, took their "wads" to the bank and swelled their accounts, allowing themselves to rake off the cash discounts on the fall goods when they arrive. Not more the store than the city was bettered. Bill Smith had a toothache after he had eaten one of the special meals prepared for the occasion at a dining restaurant, and the dentist got four bits of Bill's money for the relief he gave. The dentist's appearance at the store-troop's case and what an excellent set of false teeth that gentleman was making for six and one-half bones, and he ordered a set for his mother-in-law at once.

Merchants from the southern part of the county, who had driven miles, attended the sales, got into a discussion of an old feud and blows were exchanged. The police court got busy, and the town's finances were improved, and the judge raked in a nice fee. Four lawyers came in for retainer, and the town marshal got his fee for the two arrests. In the rush for bargains, women fainted and children were crushed, and this gave work for the town doctors. Down at the lively burning place, the store was full, and the local automobile garage secured contracts for a few new machines that week. The editor of the local paper received donations of a load of cobs, a peck of turkeys, and $3 in real money. And the occasion was not confined to one or more to the townspeople, either. Everybody went home with loads of bargains, and feeling "bully" over their purchases, to say nothing of the line time they had shown some. The former claimed he had won $40 on horse trade while in the burg, and all of them found ready markets and good prices for their produce. Two women from the rural district happened to meet for the first time in years in one of the stores. An occasion of meeting, and the women finally figured it out that they were half-sisters, and that somewhere, along about half way through the multiplication table, they were related to nobody, and that they were the daughters of a certain deceased estate which is being closed up in another country. Taking advantage of her mother's earthy watchful eye, now given to a counter of ribbon bargains, Widow Jones' red-headed, hair-lined daughter, a very nice specimen for the moment and doped with St. Scroggins' hired man. From every corner of the county comes prizes of Wayne and its business men, as well as the declarations of the people on the farm that they will not visit the place ever more frequently in the future. And when the dust of the activities had settled, the tradespeople were feeling so good they loosened up their purses, and the result was a general trading among

When a man has suffered for several years with colic, diarrhoea or other form of bowel complaint, and is then cured sound and well by one or two doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, as is often the case, it is but natural that he should be enthusiastic in his praise of the remedy, and especially in this case, of a severe attack which threatened most of the time. LATE R. B. SCHNEIDER

The Fremont Tribune paid a fine editorial tribute to the memory of the late R. B. Schneider, saying this among other things:

"Mr. Schneider was a man who grew up in the last great boom. He had the advantages of schooling, he wrestled knowledge of men, of the world and of books from his companions, from travel and observation, and from reading.

"Proving himself worthy, he found friendship among the best and strongest men of his day, the state and the nation, and these in the end laid their tributes of appreciation upon his bier. His was not a vaunted strength, for he, as all strong men do, knew his limitations as well as his capabilities. Thus, though quick to act, he was always ready to avail himself of the best arguments for a cause or a proposition.

"Having by flashes rendered judgment upon the facts, and thus acquired conviction, he stood unwaveringly to it. And he brought to the support of his convictions a wonderful fertility of resource. Adding to these his belief in the ultimate triumph of right, we find in his life a record of noble achievements. It is a great thing to be able to progress when the average man suffers from arrested development. It is this indispensable quality that must be possessed to place one above his fellows."

CITY COUNCIL

Wayne, Neb., Aug. 16, 1913. The city council met at the council room in regular session, there being present: Mayor C. A. Chase, and Councilmen J. W. Larson, J. H. Huesteter, W. O. Hansen and G. A. Lander. Absent: J. P. Gaertner and John Larson.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The mayor appointed R. H. Huesteter, city engineer. On motion, appointment was confirmed.

The following claims were examined and on motion allowed and warrants ordered drawn: General and ... $ 2.35 Wayne Herald, printing office, ... 27.75 Nebraska Telephone Co., phone 705 ... E. J. Huesteter, surveying ... 2.00 Electric light fund: J. S. Livingstone, labor ... 6.75 H. S. Ringland, labor ... 8.99 Interstate Electric Co., wire ... 17.19 Western Electric Co., ... 1.00

Estimate of the cost of constructing certain walks was filed by the city engineer. On motion, council adjourned.

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS. Then there is the kind of dignity that ... A sick man, who needs a vacation, ... Mothers will eventually get pensions, but fathers will always have to hustle. Probably the time is near when waiters will not only expect a tip but demand it.

When an Atchison colored man ... While a woman may be afraid of a mouse, she can bluff her husband and other well-known rabbits. ... When a young man has a much-esteemed report to speed limits, no messenger boy has been in luck of a lassy.

Young couples sometimes make the mistake of making the honey-moon trail longer than the honeymoon. ... Eight-year-old whiskey is another form of fiction which may boast a large circulation like the monthly magazine.

Most diligent searcher is the one a man makes for a match when he wants to smoke and the moaning facilities are lacking. ... A young man has a much-esteemed fear, which is one way to accept for war and football and other unpleasant subjects.

John Johnson and Short Jones will argue. "I'll hit and admit it," but I learned it from a reporter," said John Johnson. "Yes, and you were a reporter," replied Short.

Frank-Bills will be distributed August 21 as a day in an Atchison week-end to dispense the assertions made by her friends that she is a gold-hearted and an unsympathetic and unfeeling mother and woman. She recently took her life to be a danger to her life.

to sweep over each ringle that dropped and quiver at each snip of the shears, she went more calmly without staying to watch the saving and harrowing operation, leaving the boy to come home by himself. The Atchison woman's defense is that she went home so she wouldn't see.

Does it ever occur to the writer of circular letters that the waste baskets of the fair lands are already overflowing? It is in the losing team, you will observe, that finds most fault with the umpire.

Father is another abused animal frequently overlooked by the humane society. He is from the children, too much of the patience in this world is devoted to fishing.

An Atchison man is so mean that it is believed he would collect damages from an amateur professional basketball player for the side show. A number of them are restricted throughout the audience.

An Atchison mother who lets her children have their own way, excuses herself on the theory that it won't hurt them. But that the fingers are flying off and leaving them to the tender care of a stepmother, but that they will soon bump up against the school teacher, and a little later the whole world.

The upper part of the building which was occupied by Mr. Hixson and family, was also damaged. The household goods were insured for $500. An electric storm was raging at the time, and the fire was not discovered until the whole interior of the building was in flames.

WANTS TO SEE THE MOTION PICTURE "THE LIFE OF CHRIST SEVERAL". One of Wayne's good people was out in California this last spring when the pictures of the life of Christ were being shown in the larger cities of the first time following the return of the expedition from Palestine, where 150 pictures were taken. ("The pictures are so good that I want to see them again," he said. "There is so much to see that I am glad of a chance to look at them again.")
