does not speak favorably of conditions in the western country. He says Colorado is especially dull. Monday was an infernal day in point of weather. A stiff breeze, charged with Kansas heat, ground an infinite number of infinitesimal particles of dirt into everything and everything. The weather reminded one of the future orthodox abode of the unrepentant. Corn was somewhat hurt, but it is believed the most diabolical combination of elements possible to be fixed up cannot prevent a half crop. Judge W. F. Norris and wife of Washington, City, are expected in Wayne the last of this week to visit relatives and friends. They are on their return home from a ten-day to Twin Falls, Idaho. Judge Norris used to live in Wayne, and is well known to the Wayne people. Dr. Powell is a graduate of University of Pennsylvania, of Philadelphia, and a practitioner of over twenty years' experience. He is contemplating taking up his residence in Wayne having formed a favorable opinion of the town.

LOW WATER PRESSURE DUE TO BROKEN PUMP

Sunday and Monday nights, one of the pumps at the power plant water trouble, causing greatly reduced water pressure. So much water has been used in an attempt of the heat that suspension of pumping operations soon diminishes the supply in the standpipe to an alarming extent. The water was so low in the standpipe Monday night that connections might have been serious if fire had broken out. People should be careful to observe rules in the use of water, and not leave hydrants open unnecessarily.

WAYNE BEATS SIOUX CITY AGGREGATION

A fair sized crowd was present at the ball park Sunday to witness the game between Wayne and a team representing a clothing firm of Sioux City. Magroze, Ringer, Powers and Ellis played the outfield for Wayne. The features of the game were the play made by the Wayne team in the sixth inning. After a long run, Magroze caught a fly ball and by quick work, played the ball to Henry who in turn threw the ball to Peck at second base. The third out. In the sixth inning, Magroze and Henry in the seventh inning, the former was quite badly injured, and was compelled to leave the game, his position being taken by Ed Ellis.

PROGRESS OF LOCAL TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The city singles handicap tournament is now in full swing, and a number of good matches were played this week. One of the most conspicuous features of the tournament is the number of "upsets" in the matches so far played. Frank Morgan, city champion, was defeated by P. C. Jones in two hand fought sets. Morgan was handicapped by being compelled to use a strange racket, while Jones played one of the best games of his career, and he will, no doubt, be a strong contender for a title in the finals. Another interesting match was that between Howard Blair, which was won by the former after a strenuous three set match. The outcome of the Lewis-Nance match was rather surprising, Nance winning in straight sets. The following is a summary of the matches played: First round--Craven defeated Welch, 6-4, 6-3. P. C. Jones defeated Hickman, 6-4, 6-2. W. Hahn defeated Kemp, 6-3, 6-3. Morgan defeated Fox, 6-4, 6-4. Pile defeated Kiplinger, 7-4, 6-4. Second round--P. C. Jones defeated Gamble, 6-4, 6-2. Morgan defeated W. Hahn, 6-4, 6-3. P. H. Pile defeated Koll, 6-3, 6-4. Nance defeated Lewis, 7-5, 6-4. Ringland defeated Blair, 6-4, 2-6, 10-8. Third round--Jones defeated Morgan, 6-3, 6-4.

Fuchs of Pierce, was a visitor Monday and made arrangements for his son to enter school at the opening of the term. David J. Townsend, a student of the Normal for the past two years, left Tuesday for Chicago, where he will enter the Armour Institute of Technology for a four-year course in architecture. Miss Sara J. Keller, who has been touring Europe during the summer, sailed on August 27, and will arrive in Philadelphia Friday, September 5. She will return to Wayne in time to take up her work in the art department. In announcing the guests to be represented in the training school this year, there was an error in the above printed list. After an editor has labored in the delectable slavery for many years, it naturally desires to be treated for the postoffice appointment. After defeat, he doesn't feel the same swelling enthusiasm that originally possessed him when he learned the Stephens plan.

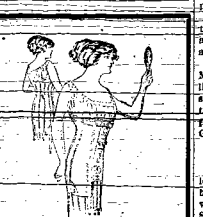

The editor of the Concord Journal confesses to a powerful passion for cucumbers, and neighboring gardeners have been trying to satiate the same. He indicates a willingness to keep up the cucumber bombardment as long as the supply lasts.

We write with satisfaction that the murder of an editor in Oklahoma is not only to be prosecuted, but that he narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of an angry mob. The incident shows that it is not only unlawful to kill an editor, but that it has become unpopular to do so.

The Creighton Liberal which is democratic, says it does not believe Congressman Stephens' primary plan is used to avoid responsibility. The liberal thinks he was born to lead a great reform, and he is preaching this crusade with a determination of rockiness. The liberal editor, referring to Atchafalaya, says if Judge Welch of Wayne is named as the republican candidate for congress, he will carry that county by 1,000 majority.

We learn indirectly that Prophet Hicks blames the planet Jupiter for the hot-dry weather, and predicts that next year will be another one of similar character, though the drought will definitely start in a month later. Nine teen years ago, drought overpread the middle-west, causing crop failures. The northeastern part of Nebraska, then a new one more fortunate than the south Platte country, and harvested fair crops. If it is true that Jupiter has been manning the weather, causing drought, it will relieve the Democratic administration from responsibility in that direction.

It was pointed out by Nels Durbin in the course of his chautauque address last week that farmers should become members of the Commercial club and actively cooperate with townspeople in promoting their improvements and public welfare. Farmers and townspeople are interested alike in building a city like Wayne, and improving the roads leading to it. By getting together frequently and talking things over, all would more clearly understand and more fully appreciate the requirements of different interests and lend their efforts accordingly. Neither can do so well independent of the other. Not only should townspeople work together, but they should secure the cooperation of the farmers in the surrounding territory.

The Run Came In.
Joe Stigden claims that he is the only living rival to John Anderson, who stands head and shoulders above all the rest.

Joe left a tiny red slip on the plate while he held the ball in his hand, and he took the pitcher's hand. There were men on second and third, one man out, the score 3 to 2 one day in the ninth inning when Anderson was playing there back to back. The game was stopped for some reason, and the pitcher at first got on the sack during the play. Joe looked into the infield and saw three men on bases.

The first ball pitched when the game began was hit to the right basemen, who threw home in a matter of time to get the man trying to score. Joe thought the man was forced out and yelled at Danny Long, the first baseman, to get on the sack to complete a double play, while Long yelled at Joe to touch him again.

The runner stopped slubly on the plate while Joe yowled at the first baseman.

Joe retrieved Joe with cold water after he had discovered what he had done.

Branched Him.
Dr. Norman Porritt, the consulting surgeon of the Royal Infirmary at Edinburgh, Yorkshire, England, does not believe in surgery. He says that on one occasion he was called to a butcher's shop to examine a tumor that had been condemned by the medical officer of health as unfit for human consumption. When the case came up for hearing in the next court, one of the witnesses, a butcher, was asked, "Who were present when the meat was examined?" "The witness answered quite seriously, "Dr. Porritt and a number of other butchers."

A Scot's Tune One Scot Didn't Like.
A new admiral—a Macdonald—had succeeded Admiral Campbell in the command of the battleship. The admiral had been in the habit of playing "The Campbells Are Coming" when their former admiral had a dinner party. They did so in honor of Macdonald.

The Best Time the Chief of the Macdonalds had (it tells Admiral Fitzgibbon in "Memories of the Sea") was very angry and went for me—the captain being on shore—and the following day he was playing "The Campbells Are Coming."

It has been customary to play "The Campbells Are Coming" at the dinner table, and being a Scotch air, no doubt the bandmaster thought it would be agreeable to me! Don't you know the text line of the song. The Campbells are coming, the Macdonalds are coming. Never let me hear that one again!

And the bandmaster was ordered to play "The Garb of Old Gaul" instead of "The Campbells Are Coming."

Granny Wins.
The subject of the Victoria bell was given in generation and respect. It was only among her own family circle, where she was "granny" and not "her majesty" that any criticism of her character and disposition was ever heard. There is one amusing anecdote given by Mrs. Hugh Plantinga's wife.

Miss Elizabeth C. Berdan was an interesting character. She was an actress and was in great request as the palace playmate for the young girls. She was a favorite of the princesses, gave them a great deal of pleasure. Miss Berdan was a little, little, little, but simple and inexpensive. "I would like to give you some money," she said, "but I am afraid the princesses would not like it." The princesses were very kind to her. Miss Berdan was a very good woman.

"Shifting Sands."
Scoop had been assigned to cover the lecture of a noted French orator. The ball in which the lecture was delivered was very warm and comfortable and Scoop went to sleep. At the close of the lecture he woke up with a start, and as he rubbed his eyes he saw the lecturer caught the words "shifting sands." That was sufficient for Scoop. At the end of the lecture he straightened up and said to the lecturer, "You have a good man your reading about shifting sands."

When the French orator opened the paper next morning he found himself credited with having given a long talk on shifting sands, the night before. Announcing the matter into his pocket, the Frenchman went with long strides to the editor and denounced an explanation for the error.

"What is the matter?" asked the editor. "Doesn't the article cover the subject fully?"

WALKED INTO THE TRAP.

It Was a Tantalizing Scheme, and it Demanded the Prudent.

There are many stories extant, amusing as well as instructive, of the dodges resorted to by British soldiers who wish to get "installed" home from an undesirable station. There is the case of the sergeant and his dumb man. The sergeant, who was wounded suddenly and temporarily to have gone deaf and dumb, when asked a question, would stare straight to his front in stony silence.

The dumb man was removed to the hospital for treatment, and upon his discharge he was sent straight to his front in stony silence. A tempting array of hospital comforts such as T. Atkins loves—rice pudding, custard, eggs, milk, bread-and-butter, beer. This list of luxuries could be studied by all who cared to read. But day after day—the medical orderlies brought nothing to the poor patient but plain milk. Each morning, in sympathetic haste, the chief medical officer of the orderly in front of the patient whether each and every article of diet had been provided. "The orderly stilly answered, "Yes, sir."

"Did he get his beer with his dinner, all he wanted of it, and his milk punch before he went to bed?" "And again would come from the orderly a cheerful, "Yes, sir."

At last the poor deaf and dumb man's face would reddened, but never a word could he hear or speak. There is, however, a limit to all endurance, and it was for this man that the orderly was called. Fully convinced that the orderly was a thief and a traitor, the sergeant and had been tagging the surgeon for treatment, the patient roared stand-it-to-nooner.

"He's a liar, sir," gasped he at last, "and I don't want to talk for a week!" "Resolute—discharge from hospital and a court martial.

Meets the Plunge.
To do anything worth while in the world we must not stand shivering on the edge of the danger, but we must plunge through as well as we can—Shanny Smith.

No Room For Speeding.
Mr. Atkins was driving over his usual route, and he was talking to a young man whom he was beginning to look upon as a possible and very desirable son-in-law.

"Not so fast, John, not so fast. You make my estate look too young!"

Needed a Lawn Mower.
There was just one tenuous chair in the cottage barber shop, and it was occupied by a stalwart fellow, evidently a blacksmith. Judging from the stolid growth of beard, the patron could not have shaved but once a week on an average, for the growth was like a brush. The barber made a rather pleasant discovery in the case of the recumbent blacksmith, stropped the razor vigorously and shaved into the groom. After he had straddled long and looked over his patron he felt constrained to say:

"What a hair-cut?" "A very satisfactory one, sir." "I mean to be walkin' hard without gettin' there," commented the barber. "Oh, just so on," encouraged the blacksmith. "You doin' all right for them you can't cutty" or your'n?" "I mean to be walkin' hard without gettin' there," commented the barber.

Casey answered to his wife. Elizabeth was going to the ball game. All day he was gone. Night came but she had to take place to the head of the table. Midnight and so Casey o'clock—2 o'clock—3 o'clock—so Casey.

As the 4 o'clock whistles began to blow Casey stumbled up the front stairs into the house and awakened his wife by his efforts to negotiate the stairs.

WIRELESS WAVES

The Electric Voice That Speaks Through the Ether.

Setting Up the Vibrations.
This is the Work of the Oscillator, Which is the Electric Mouth, and its Message Is Caught by the Resonator, Which is the Ear of the Apparatus.

More truly than any other telegraphic device, the wonderful wireless telegraph is speaking to us. It makes itself heard to us as the human voice does by a series of waves moving freely through space.

When a great ray of light is sent out in undulations of varying length and frequency through the air, the wireless "speaks" its voice is conveyed by undulations to the ether, which is a more refined medium than air, carrying the waves of light and electricity as the air carries the waves of sound.

The oscillator of the wireless is a "mouth," sending out undulations in the ether as our mouth sends out undulations in the air, and the resonator is the "ear" of the apparatus, receiving the etherial waves as they impinge upon it, as our ears catch the atmospheric waves that strike them.

We see nothing wonderful in these things, because nature gave us in our needs one instrument to produce them and another to receive them. But she left us to find out for ourselves how to produce and receive these "waves" in the ether. Since we had to make it, we must make it as nature made them. The etherial waves seem to us mysterious, although they are in principle no more mysterious than the waves of air, but they are so because they convey intelligence by sending a current of it along a wire. He pressed a button at one end of the line, and the electric current passing along the wire induced a corresponding motion in a tapper at the other end. It was a mechanical act of amplification, an agency which we now know can be employed more simply and directly by throwing away the wires and making the current pass as a "spark" straight through the ether.

It is true that the language employed does not consist of distinct words, but spoken language—but it is one that can be directly translated into any other known to man, and so it is the most natural of all languages.

Now, let us see how it is employed. First as to the electric "mouth." When a charge of electricity is accumulated on a "condenser," a similar but opposite charge is induced upon another condenser placed near. The air between the two acts as an insulator, but it is a poor conductor of electricity. It is when the charge attains a certain degree of intensity the strain between the two becomes too great, and a spark passes between the two condensers, by which equilibrium is restored.

The passage of this spark produces, so to speak, a shock in the ether, which like the explosion of a gun or the discharge of a battery, sets up a series of waves in the surrounding medium, which radiate away on all sides.

These waves in the ether produce the same effect as the spark on the resonator. The passage of such waves is called an oscillator or exciter. It is a kind of vocal apparatus for speaking through the ether, the great baritone of the wireless, the organ and sheep were roasted whole, pork and beans were cooked in resins, holding fifty-gallon casks, bread was baked in ten-ton flat-iron and

The receiving apparatus is called a resonator, or detector. It may be situated hundreds of miles from the oscillator, but it will catch the waves as they radiate to it through the ether, and it can be made to reproduce them in an audible or legible form by causing them to operate a Morse code and dash instrument, as in ordinary telegraphy by wire.

But the electric voice and the electric eye are in some ways more mysterious than the human voice and ear. We can only produce and hear their messages by a limited range of frequency, and we cannot do much to alter their Sound waves vibrating less than forty times a second or more than 40,000 times are inaudible to us. But electric waves varying in frequency from a few hundred to a couple of millions a second can be rendered perceptible, and it is also possible to construct the instruments that they will send forth and receive in various ranges of waves and be mute and deaf to others.

The electric waves which the electric wave can be detected is almost infinitely greater than that of ordinary sound waves. It was a very faint voice to make the human ear audible across a little river, but, as everybody knows, the electric eye can see a mile or more by night, and is able to detect the electric light heard from the middle of the Atlantic ocean.

And there are enthusiasts who predict that before very long we shall be able to speak by wireless to some other planet. Finally there is somebody there to hear—and understand—Garet P. Service is Spokane Spokesman-Review.

There is no act, however trivial, but the consequences, as there is to be half on such a subject. The

Died, at the home of his daughter, seven miles southwest of Carroll, August 28, Joshua D. Bishop, aged 62 years.

From the Ponca Journal, September 14, 1883.
R. Philleo and wife, daughter Etta, son Fred, Miss Maggie Gaughran, Lieut. tenant Norris and Dr. O'Connell are attending the conference at Omaha this week.

On Friday, Assa Rose brought into town a wonderful catfish which he caught in the river near Ionia. It weighed 16 1/2 pounds and was sold to McKeown & Co.

A heavy frost visited a great section of the western states on last Friday night, doing much damage to crops. Hereabouts, the vines were nearly all killed, but that kind of staples, corn, etc., as a general thing, much injured, though that on the low grounds, while in some localities badly touched, in the high ground crop is all right.

From the Ponca Journal September 16, 1880.
The railroad track between Covington and Demey's Junction is being laid at the rate of three-fourths of a mile per day.

School commenced on Monday. The popular teachers, Professor Walbeck, Miss McKinley and Mrs. Wynant, will conduct the school this fall and winter.

The real toring business seems to be stationary again. The managers are going their best endeavor to accomplish the task before them, but are unfortunately after another clogs their movements.

In relation to frosts: The diary of Mr. Gamble shows a record of the first frosts in the past six years, viz. In 1875, September 21; in 1876, September 29; in 1877, September 17; in 1878, September 10; in 1879, September 7; in 1880, September 8.

When Rev. Mr. Smith takes his departure for South America, there will be another vacancy in the town council. There will then be but three trustees, and the law requiring five, there will no doubt be an election to elect two to fill the vacancies.

The engine of the St. Paul road, which was dumped into the river some weeks ago while crossing from Sioux City to Covington, has at last been rescued from its watery grave, and now stands high and dry on the Iowa bank.

The machinery has not been injured by the action of the water, but the trimmings and cab will need repainting. After going back to the shops for repairs, the engine is to be used to draw the passenger train between Ponca and Covington.

There is no use to tell a nervous man not to become excited; he is always excited.

PERFECTION IN DRESS.—Why do we wear the "waist" and the woman's "bust"? This is ancient history. In prehistoric times, long before the Pelagians occupied Greece, twenty-odd centuries before our era, when man began to enter an era of civilization, it became necessary to make some distinction in the dress of the sexes, which had been up to that time much the same; and it was finally decided to refer the matter to a commission of five gentlemen who solved the problem in the following manner:

An even hundred of the youth of both sexes was chosen from the best families, and they were ordered each in turn, to walk around a circle in a large square. The report of the commission was to the effect that the marking and discoloring of the males were so attractive and perfect that they recommended that each girl should have a separate cover in order to prevent the admiring bearing of men in his movements and to be always in full view and unobstructed. I give in full the commission's report on the females:

"Your commission has given careful consideration to the performance of the female contingent, and has noted the following particulars thereof: Of the 100, sixty-seven, marched with their toes turned inwardly; of these, forty were effected in the left foot, 37 in the right and twenty in both feet. But three of the lot showed perfection in planting both feet. Each of the ninety-seven imperfects had the arch of their shoes worn on the inside and twisted outwardly corresponding to the defect stated—that is to say, the forty with the left heel worn and twisted thirty-seven with the right and twenty with both heels. In this respect, no fault is found with the three exceptions, whose heels appeared to be in perfect condition. In marching, the same result was found in a serious defect, for which we can find no term in describing other than "wobbling." The three exceptions we are glad to say, were without defects.

"Considering the painful sight of a wobbling pair of legs with turned-in toes at the extremities, for a front view, and the fearful sight of feet worn to one side inwardly and twisted outwardly for a rear view, your commission recommends that women's dress shall conform to a style that shall conform from view both legs and feet."

ARCHBISHOP GLOBE RIGHTS.—Sometimes a woman is a scold, because she enjoys being paid in pity.

It is not always barefacedness that makes a boy fail to say "thank you." You can't keep as cool as the summer underwear ads might lead you to believe.

A beautiful complexion may be a work of art so perfect you can't tell without tasting it.

You may have observed that a railroad's conscience—food—never grows very rapidly.

The rule is that if there is plenty of love in a book, the women will read it quite extensively.

When John Johnson was a young man he thought he was in love, but he was not. He was in love with a girl.

Sometimes you don't hear of an actress after she marries until she gets about to get her divorce.

"Fish have fooled me so often that I have great admiration for the enterprising expert who catches them with artificial bait."—Rufus Hopkins.

"I have a good home," sighed the cheerless caller, who wore a coat of tan and fever blisters, "and as soon as I feel my store clothes, and as soon as I feel my store clothes, I intend to devote some time to enjoying and appreciating it. Lately I was lured to a lodge in some wilderness, where I could commune with nature, and enjoy the great beauty of fresh air and fresh air."

There was there, all right, but it was badly disturbed up by mosquitoes, night, and flies and fifty-seven other varieties of ditch-digging insects by day. To be exact, the lodge was a tent, in which no man accustomed to our complex civilization, and modern conveniences can be comfortable, even on a rainy day.

Outgoing yachts are better equipped, and I used to envy the convicts as I went to the mat with man-eating mosquitoes and other fly-by-night denizens of the wild. True, there was plenty of fish, but few fish, and but few fish.

Surprise my piscatorial longing at the butcher shop, and live contentedly in striking distance of a house with screen doors and a bath tub. There is a great educator, but you see here a graduate of the waste places, who has not particularly proud of his degree.

On Tuesday evening, the service will be held at 8 o'clock, and the love towards us in that while we were yet without strength in the time of our need for the ungodly." On Wednesday evening, Rev. Alexander Corkey preached from the text, "What is that to thee; follow thou me." As this is Mr. Klipping's neighborhood, where he was brought up, friends have been much interested in his work, and he has been faithfully proclaiming the gospel to his old friends and associates.

Beginning next week, the mid-week services will be devoted to Bible study for a number of weeks. The subject will be "The Epistle to the Corinthians" will be studied.

The third Sunday in September, has been set apart as Rally day in the church and Sunday school.

NEBRASKA STILL LEADS.

Recently a Wisconsin city, inspired by wild and wild reports of the effects of the protracted dry spell in Nebraska, wrote the governor offering free pasturage for Nebraska live stock. This Wisconsin town, admirably generous, had been deceived by false reports sent out to "luring" friends. The Lincoln Commercial club made a quiet investigation upon learning of the generous offer from Wisconsin, and discovered the following: "The Wisconsin test had been accepted for one million acres of corn, sorghum and some thing like 110,000,000 bushels of corn. If necessary, Nebraska could send along a whole lot of wheat from 60,000,000 bushels of wheat. Nebraska had 1,913 corn crop, but points with pride to the fact that her corn crop will turn out more bushels per capita than that of any other state. In common with her sister states, Nebraska has suffered from the up and down of the market for corn. She has come to the front as usual with more wheat per capita, more corn per capita, more alfalfa and hay per capita, more apples per capita, and more corn per capita than any of her sister states. She appreciates the kindly sympathy of Wisconsin, but with all these crops and more than $210,000,000 deposited in her banks, state and national, Nebraska expects to pull through the winter in pretty good shape.

OBITUARY.

Celia Louisa Dainkurt was born in Denmark, May 7, 1846, and died at her home in the 1913 corn crop, being aged 65 years, 3 months and 20 days at the time of her death. Deceased was married to C. M. Sundahl September 19, 1868, and in 1874 she removed with her family to America and settled in Washington county, N. D. In 1885, they came to Wayne county where they have since made their home. To this union, eleven children were born, all of whom survive, except a daughter, who died in Denmark. Those living are: Thomas E., William, H. V., and L. E. Winside; Mrs. A. L. Hulbert, Sholes; Mrs. Gelland, Riverton; Mrs. Hansen, Vona, Colo.; Mrs. Jenn Thompson, Wayne, Mrs. Josephine, H. S. S. Deceased was preceded in death two weeks ago by her husband, and it is thought the shock hastened her death. Mrs. Sundahl suffered a paralytic stroke five years ago, and had since been an invalid.

Funeral was held at the Baptist church at Carroll Friday afternoon at 3:30 and was attended by a large concourse of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Sundahl resided in Wayne a few years, but they were highly respected. From Wayne, they removed to Sholes, where they lived until the time of their death.

"Here, his" requested the boy, hurrying in from school before time, "hang my hat up behind the stove. 'Is it wet?'" "No, but teacher sent me home to tell you to warm my jacket for us." Judge.

The Logic of It. Kelly is in a fix. He says to pay that man now, I can't pay it. He says to pay that man later, I can't pay it. He says to pay that man never, I can't pay it.

Mr. Honeybrook was, to Educator Martin with the death in 1890, was her beloved companion and support. In 1870, Mr. and Mrs. Martin with their family moved to Council Bluffs, Io, where they remained until December, 1881, when they moved to Wayne county, Neb., settling near La Porte. Soon afterward, they located in Wayne, where the home has since been.

Into the home there were born seven children, three of whom still remain—Mrs. Almeta L. Hartpence, Lohman; Mrs. Nettie, and Charles, Charley A. Martin of Wayne. Besides these three children, Mrs. Martin leaves twelve grandchildren and six great grandchildren to mourn her going. Two brothers also survive, James Lewis—Nashville, Tenn., and J. B. Lewis, Postville, Io.

Not only did she minister a mother love and care to her own large family, but upon the death of a daughter, she received into the home the young orphaned grandchild, and bestowed upon him the same motherly affection. And one of the great joys of her last years was the devotion and love of this grandson, S. H. Alexander, now living in Denver, Colo., unable to reach her today.

For sixty-two years, Mrs. Martin was a member of the Baptist church, for thirty years a member of the Wayne Baptist church, and during this long period of church membership, her life was a life of service for the cause she loved and for the Christ who had saved her. Living as she did, in early days, she encountered hardships and inconveniences in her religious life unknown to us. Yet supported and encouraged by the Christian Association and faithfulness of her husband, she remained always devoted and loyal to her church and her master. One great burden of her late years was the consciousness that she was unable to attend public worship, but she kept the church and its work, and, in her heart, forgot to be present, yet with a beautiful spirit of resignation, she yielded to her position and accepted her lot.

Grandma Martin was a woman of great patience, fortitude and usefulness. Her life could be described in the words, that told of her Savior as one "who went about doing good." She had a mother's heart, a mother's spirit of self-sacrifice, always putting herself in the place of another, for the spirit of the Lord in the providence of a merciful Father, it was her lot to be helpless for almost two and one-half years, and to receive the tender ministrations of other loving hands. This was her cross, to be helped by others, for the spirit of her life was always to be helping another.

But uncomplaining, contented she lay, accepting God's way as the best. Sometimes wondering why she could not go home, yet with a sweet nothing of resignation, she would say she heard the summons: "Come home." She did like the "lived," with the support and help of the divine Father, and we can say of her, what the inspired writer said: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, from henceforth, they will not suffer pain, but will rest with their labor, for their work follows with them."

CHOCOLATE AS A FOOD.

It should be eaten After and Never Before Meals.
Chocolate is one of the most wholesome and healthful foods. It is especially good for eating after meals. Nothing can be worse than chocolate eaten just before a meal, for then it irritates the appetite. Chocolate should consist of equal parts of sugar and cocoa. When it contains as much of that cocoa as the fine candy stores does, more than three times it loses much of its real value.
Koenig, the great German chemist, who has done so much to enlighten the world on the value of foods by publishing his analysis of them, says that chocolate contains 6.25 per cent of protein, 52 per cent of carbohydrates, 2.5 per cent of fat, 1.35 per cent of tartaric acid and 35.70 per cent of sugar. 40 per cent of cocoa butter, 10 per cent of glucose and 10 per cent of other carbohydrates. Therefore it is highly nutritive.
Adolescents, polar explorers and mountaineers cherish this well. In the Swiss Alps it is usual to carry a chocolate in the pocket and to eat a little of it whenever needed.
The best chocolate is fattening and should therefore be eschewed by those who have a tendency to the fattening propensity. It is an ideal addition to the diet of a vegetarian.
Caffeine and cocoa are almost as potent as alcohol and are the cause of many of the injurious effects upon the nervous system which are for many people the great drawbacks of these drinks.
Chocolate is best when made over a water bath to avoid—New York World.

A Knight In Tepee.
The late Sir Gordon Sykes, says the Manchester Guardian, had a way of his own of taking his walks conformed. A visitor in the neighborhood of the west coast of the island of Corfu for his morning round wearing only three overalls. When he felt snuggled he would take off one and then two and lay on the grass, head down. The person who found him overcast and returned it to the house he recalled the "ward of a child." This was no doubt the children boy who killed Archers.

The Scrap Book

Contents Unknown.
When former Governor Hawley of Idaho was prosecuting attorney in the mining districts of the state a reformer was hit Idaho City, and the reformer was made as conspicuous as possible for the whisky sellers.

A general-store keeper was suspected of selling liquor without a license. Hawley summoned the driver of a freight wagon before the grand jury to testify whether he had hauled whisky four times to Idaho City for the store-keeper.

The driver was sworn. Hawley questioned him:
"Did you or did you not haul a barrel of whisky from Boise to Idaho City on May 12 and deliver it at 10 Black street?"

"Oh hauled the barrel," the driver swore, "but I don't know what was in it."

"Don't know what was in it?" roared the attorney. "Wasn't the barrel marked?"

"No, sir."

"Then how dare you tell the court that you don't know what was in it?"

"Because," answered the driver, "I sold 'Fragrant Whisky' on way out by the barrel and 'John Doe' on the other, and I don't know which was in the barrel!"—Saturday Evening Post.

It Was Notley.
The hand-to-hand or commercial traveler, is a disturbing element in the small Norwegian hotels, says Mr. E. K. Daniels in his book, "Home Life in Norway." He comes and goes at all hours of the day and night and is always accompanied by a racket which is not conducive to slumber.
I remember one night or rather early morning being called from blissful dreams by a terrific din.—Doors were being slammed, heavy chairs being dragged, and the sounds of screeching feds were all over the house, and dominating the whole, like an oboe in a band, was a wailing, wailing, wailing, demanding the production of a hot water.

"But," stipulated the voice in a tone of unaccountable innocence as I got out of bed and proceeded to dress (for sleep being out of the question, tell me first, is this thing I have heard about your establishment true? Because, if it is, I prefer to bestow my patronage on some other house in town.—Tell me, is this really hotel?"

Yes, He Was Fond of Her.
A small touring company was going the round of some of the English coast. Everywhere the audiences were delightful with the juvenile lead-in body—she was so bright and fresh and girly that the entire male portion of the audiences readily fell in love with her.

One evening a youthful admirer of the manager of the touring company, a rather fishy looking, bearded man, and proceeded to look for an introduction to the charming little lady.

He had, he said, enjoyed her acting so much, "it must be very pleasant to know her," he suggested. "I expect you who see her so often are very fond of her."

"Well, yes," admitted the manager. "Yes, I am rather fond of her."

"Perhaps you've known her for some time?" asked the admirer.

"Yes, quite a long time," agreed the manager.

"That can't be so very long," interrupted the other. "She's little more than a girl." Then a harsh snigger came to him. "You—you're not her mother, are you?"

"No, no," said the manager. "I'm her son."

No Doubt About It.
There is an amusing story connected with Dr. Chavasse, the bishop of Liverpool.

Chavasse is the father of two boys of (Wine, and soon after Mrs. Chavasse had laid down for the second time a curate from a neighboring parish was asked to read the Sunday morning sermon in Dr. Chavasse's church. By an extraordinary coincidence the curate was one of the boys.

"Quite a noble game came from one of our members of the congregation," said the curate, "and the same members' management, the curate gave at them in shocked surprise. Then, hearing that there might be something in it, he went to the curate and explained his text in a loud, clear voice."

"We are better than one," he said. "As he went on to be calling attention to his little flock, he was interrupted by a sniggering with London Globe.

ALL IN THE SAME BOAT.

The Selected an Unlucky Time For Their Gastronomic Crime.
Most people have a net aversion, and that of King Edward VII. was no exception. The odor of the fragrant bulb on another's breath was simply maddening to the usually clean monarch. In this connection an anecdote is related by C. W. Stammer, who was the king's motor mechanic in his book, "What I Know."

The royal party was enjoying a vacation at Harritz, Stammer confesses that the sergeant footman, the king's courier and the postmaster lunched together in the kitchen and outdoors one day, and soon afterward the king wanted to see the postmaster. So the courier, named Felix, called the sergeant footman, named Hawkins, and the king was proceeding to tell him, when he stopped short, looked at the sergeant footman and said:

"Hawkins, you've been eating onions?"

"No, your majesty," protested the unlucky Hawkins.

"Yes, you have. I'm sure you have. Send Mr. Hiley here at once and Mr. Felix."

"Yes, your majesty."

The sergeant footman withdrew and presently Postmaster Hiley was announced. The king called him to his side and was declining to read him a telegram he wanted him to dispatch when he suddenly burst out:

"Hiley, you've been eating onions?"

"No, your majesty," said the postmaster, instinctively recoiling.

"Yes, you have. It's disgusting. The courier then entered the room and approached very warily, but his majesty's sense of smell was keen, and all Felix's efforts to suppress the facts in the case were unavailing. The king looked up sharply, and then he said and groaned:

"If you haven't been eating onions too."

Persistence.
Persistence is a power prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.—Walter Dill.

Two Surprise Parties.
A party of twelve persons occupying the depths of a celebrated mine arranged that a lunch should be partaken on the 1,500-foot level. Four large baskets were lowered, both food and substantial, were therefore lowered to the depths. These descended first among a group of lower Cornish miners, being on the 1,200-foot level, who, in the absence of any instruction, decided, after much discussion, that it must be a national calamity or something of the kind never before and that this was a kindly little compliment from the heavens. They therefore fell on the tables with much energy and made short work of the danities. When the exhausted pneumologists, after their tramp through the mine, returned to the surface, they discovered only two empty hamsters and what twenty barrels miners full of chicken salad, champagne, mashed potatoes and other things due to a Cornish breakdown.—London Express.

The Functionality Really Was.
Ethel-Barney was "sitting the feds" to a birthday party.

"There'll be a birthday cake, I suppose?"

"Yes, there'll be a cake, never fail." was the reply.

"And candles, of course?" went on Ethel-Barney.

"My friend," said Miss Barrymore, "this is to be a birthday party, not a torchlight procession."

Put If Where It Was Most Useful.
Cricketer was introduced into a certain district of India by a clergyman from England, who hoped that the game would foster a manly spirit. All went well, according to the author of "A Little History of India." The boys learned to play a match was arranged with a neighboring school. Then the clergyman saw the boys from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and was most useful.

"When the day came the team turned out for the match full of quiet confidence, but with all their confidence they were completely routed. The clergyman said to the boys, 'I'm afraid, wasn't have you done with those 15 ruses I gave you?' "Well, sir," said the boys, "we tried to use them, but we had to spend it all on the umpire." They won.

ACQUISION CLOSER SIGHTS.
What has become of the U. S. mail? No man can do a day's work and wear a watch at the same time. No demand seems particularly unreasonable to the gent who is making it. When a young girl marries an old man, people wonder how much he paid. To my many men must on doing their working at home in the bosom of their families.

By the time she is 5 years old, a girl begins training by bespeaking her little brother. While a bolt looks better than a suit, it is hard to make it do the things as no longer in style.

Politics frequently throws a good man out of a job, but he know about politics takes a skilled with him to fry fish he hasn't caught.

In an effort to make their later life miserable, too many people glance back at the happy days of childhood through a magnifying glass and improve time to throw on the reverse lever. But time keeps going full speed ahead, and in the present part of the crime but satisfactory, it may be largely your fault.

At least, there is little consolation in looking longingly down the back track, and thinking how happy we used to be. As a matter of fact, children have their joys as well as old folks, and they are probably about as large in proportion to size and fighting strength. Every boy wants to grow up and get shaved at a barber shop, and enjoy other manly privileges, and he won't be satisfied till he has them. It won't be satisfied then either, because you, but it pays to show. Digging into the past, don't get in all right occasionally, but it isn't a gold mine, if worked as a steady occupation.

THE OPEN LETTER STAGE.

Congressman Dan Stephens has reached the open letter stage in his defiance of his manner of dealing out post office appointments. He addressed one to the editor of the Norfolk Daily News last week. In that letter he may be best heard. He demands to know whether they shall have a closed primary or an open primary, in which latter members of both parties are permitted to participate. In distributing postoffice appointments the congressman says he is trying to get away from the deposit system, and the News makes this reference to that point: "The weakness of Dan Stephens' postoffice primary plan lies in the fact that he claims to be getting away from the 'spoils system' when he is in fact getting away from it straight. The spoils system was merely the theory that 'to the victor belongs the spoils.'" Mr. Stephens still insists on the theory that "to the victor belongs the spoils," but he has recently adopted a different method of attaining the plan—a method which he hoped would permit him to keep out of local rows.

Later, the congressman addressed an open letter to Edgar Howard, democrat of the Columbus Telegram, in answer to the latter's editorial pleading with him to cut out the practice of allowing republicans to name postmasters. His letter to Edgar Howard is rather caustic, thus showing among leading brethren of the democratic household the existence of personal bitterness that has reached a feverish stage. Following is the letter to Mr. Howard: "I have read with much interest your editorial directed to me and entitled 'The Advice of a Friend.'" The plaint of each of your loving editorials of advice to me is your request that I should open an open or closed primary and let republicans to name democratic postmasters. Of course it will make no difference to you for me to say over and over again that I do not allow republicans to name postmasters—that the democrats of each town decide whether they want an open or a closed primary, and that in the fifteen or more primaries held the great majority have been democrats, primaries, and where they have not the candidates and the democratic committee for a democratic caucus have ordered that all be allowed to vote.

"Recently you made the Nellig election a subject of attack upon me because you claimed republicans elected a democratic postmaster, and in this case a democratic caucus ordered an open primary. While I favor an open primary myself, I have always held the question to be settled by the democrats of each town affected. Would you advocate the taking away of this inherent right of the democrats affected to determine their own fate? You say 'if you favor democracy.'" "Your protest against allowing republicans to help elect democratic officers seems to me the rankest inconsistency on your part when you have so often helped republicans to elect democratic candidates. It follows that democratic candidates who have been officially chosen by the party to which you claim allegiance. In my case, I carefully safeguard the rights of the democrats to these postoffice positions by directing that only those democrats see to it that only worthy democrats can get on the ballot. After that, it seems immaterial to me who votes. The man winning will be a worthy democrat. In your case, however, you have in recent years allowed democratic candidates officially chosen through a legal primary, thereby repudiating the wishes of the democratic party that it has often been an open question in the minds of many democrats whether you have set down the name more than once. It is nothing like so bad, Edgar, to let republicans help elect worthy democrats to office as it is to help republicans elect unworthy democrats as you have so often done in the past.

"I would not have you think me ungrateful for the assistance you have given me in the public press. Of course I am a little old-fashioned in thinking that friends usually administer criticism privately first. But I won't insist on that point. If you say you are my friend, I must take you at your word, but you won't mind, Edgar, if I sincerely pray that your kind may not multiply. Too many friends like you would be too much, even more so than I can safely take on, unless it should prove that you already believe in the back by contrast and bring to me the support of men who believe in public men practicing what their party preaches in its platforms.

"Your very truly, Dan V. Stephens."

THE TWO BARONS.

They Had a Trying Time in the Royal Court of Bulgaria. Did he not the royal court of Bulgaria in his disgrace some time ago and Baron Edekerdorff, the prince's erstwhile governor, gave the world children more fun than anybody? Was a right, indeed, and it was a right, indeed, in the early part of that year, under the plea that his neighbor, Baron Edekerdorff, stored wood that he could not store, he changed his rooms from the wing to the main body of the palace, much to the disgust of the prince, who threatened to get rid of him. They soon hit on a plan. His new quarters were so far from the telephone that he had to pass any call three times over a larger distance. One morning he got so urgent a call that he hastened out in his pajamas. On his way back he found the way stopped. Every corridor and staircase held a sentry, who solemnly declared his royal business the crown prince had given orders that nobody was to pass.

The prince himself guarded two exits, and the poor old baron spent an awful quarter of an hour waiting for the large hall and dodging the blood pillars when a minister passed through on his way to the king. The suit, bearing signs of laughter, came to look and laugh. The joke worked so well that the baron returned to his quarters to his old quarters that very day. But he grew cruder and cruder. The crisis was reached when, furious that a republican was going on in the palace when he wanted to sleep, he rose, locked all the dressing room doors and took the keys to his room "sooner than let anybody see his sweat-stained. The king heard of it and sent him out on an unlimited leave. In the meantime Baron Edekerdorff, whom Edekerdorff had got in disgrace by the reports of his outrageous snoring, had had no summons to go to the king for weeks and weeks and was getting quite uneasy, as the man who does not enjoy royal conversation frequently soon loses prestige. One day at last a summons came and told him he was not to stir from his rooms that day, as the king might want him. Edekerdorff waited and waited. At last, three weeks later, somebody mentioned his name before the king, who exclaimed, "Good heaven, I told him to wait for me three weeks ago! He sent and found the poor old Prussian still waiting. Through three weeks of glorious Balkan spring weather he had not dared leave his rooms—Harper's.

Contentfulness. We ought to be as cheerful as we can if only because to be happy ourselves is a most effectual contribution to the happiness of others.—Lord A. B. O'Connell.

Trapping a Deaf. Mr. Frederic Harrison told the following story of a deaf Oxford, once of Christ Church college, Oxford, a typical "head" of the old school, whose studentship in the college did not escape the notice of his father, a student of the house, in spite of formal orders of the tutors that no under-graduates should have leave to attend the Derby, succeeded in getting it by telling Dr. Galsford that his tutor had decided that not even the Dean should be allowed to refuse him. "What?" said the dean. "They tell you I cannot give leave? I give you leave, sir—and report this order to your tutor."

Didn't Water the Landscape. Thomas J. Pence, who pulled off a prize piece of work in managing President Wilson's campaign publicity work, turned into an amateur watercolorist one evening and ordered a water-cress sandwich.

The writer set it before him, and he began to eat. He had not taken three weeks ago, and the supply of water-cress was not.

I had a high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, and always recommend them whenever I know of anyone in need of a kidney medicine."
