SUNDAY NIGHT FIRE IN BUSINESS BLOCK

Lewis-Building Burned. Restaurant Operated by P. B. Snaewert Destroyed by Fire - Origin is Unknown.

Sunday night, fire destroyed the building located south of the Boyd hotel, and occupied by the restaurant of P. B. Snaewert. All the contents of the building were destroyed. Mr. and Mrs. Snaewert and child lived in the second story and had retired for the night. When they were aroused by the alarm at 9:30 the fire had made such headway that they had a narrow escape.

The fire started in the rear of the building. The firemen fought the fire from the rear and front, and succeeded in preventing the flames from communicating to neighboring buildings. Barring under the roof and being difficult to reach, it was a hard task to check the fire and get it effectually under control.

The restaurant fixtures and supplies were valued at about $1,000, with insurance of $700. The building which is virtually a total loss, was insured for $200.

Mr. Lewis is undecided what he will do in regard to rebuilding. He says if he could lease a good modern building, he would put one up.

NEARLY AN INCH OF RAIN. According to the gauge at the Wayne State bank, a little over three quarters of an inch of rain fell last night. In contrast with the weather last week, which was uncomfortably hot, the elements this week have been too cool for comfort without fires.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. B. Buetow, September 3.

THE COMMISSION FORM

D. S. Dalbey, a leading and influential citizen of Beatrice, Neb., was in Wayne yesterday, having come by automobile, accompanied by Mrs. Dalbey, Mrs. Ford Lewis, and Mrs. Samuel Rinaker. They were here to look at land, located north of town and owned by Mrs. L. A. Dalbey. She has a man of business and enterprise, and is capable of valuable public service. He pointed out to the Herald editor some important public improvements that have been made in Beatrice during the past few years and attributes the forward movement largely to the commission form of government which the city adopted. Under the commission system, a few men are elected to assume the responsibility of managing public affairs, and the politics is largely eliminated, and city affairs are handled in a sound business fashion. Mr. Dalbey who speaks advisedly, thinks Wayne would make faster progress under the commission form of government. The Herald would like to see it tried here.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Taylor of Pierce, who had been visiting Mrs. Taylor's aunt, Mrs. Fruden, at the Hotel hotel, left this morning for Randolph, where they will visit friends for a short time.

Frank Powers and John Payne were in Norfolk Tuesday to meet the state of the country's finances, and are confident of the future. They express themselves as believing that trade will be lively and money plenty. William Meyer of north of town, who had been in Rochester, Minn., for six weeks, taking treatment, returned home Saturday morning. Mr. Meyer had been suffering from asthma and bronchial trouble, and had been at Rochester several times for treatment. He is feeling extra well now and his friends hope that he will continue improving. The Rural Home society met Thursday, August 20, at the pleasant home of Mrs. Eph Beckenbauer. The program consisted of "an outline of the causes and location of the foreign war, given by Mesdames Neeley and P. M. Corbit, followed by a general discussion. The hostesses served a delicious three-course luncheon at the conclusion of the program. The society was pleased

NEBRASKA FLOUR.

Omaha Bee, Aug. 22.—Nebraska has enjoyed at least one big benefit from the European war, according to Omaha millers and users of wheat flour. Since the war scarce sent prices soaring on northern wheat flour, much more flour made from Nebraska wheat has been used, according to persons conversant with that business. The best part of the situation, they say, has been that folks who did not use Nebraska flour before, and thought it was not as good as the northern product, have found since trying it that it is just as good, so they intend to keep on patronizing home industry. Prices went up much more on the northern flour than on the local variety," Rome Miller says. "I therefore told my bakers to try the Nebraska flour, although they had always been opposed to trying it before. But after a thorough trial, they reported that it was satisfactory, so I am going to keep on using it hereafter, as I believe in patronizing home industry." Other heavy buyers of flour have had similar experience with the Nebraska product since the war sent prices up. Nebraska millers are said to be enjoying increased business as a result.

Jews and Chinese

Lincoln Journal: Barnard Drachman, president of the union of orthodox Jewish congregations of America, has sent copies of a prayer for peace between the warring nations of Europe to the rabbis of all congregations affiliated with the union. This is its closing paragraph: "May the eyes of the children of men be opened that they may see that they are all brethren, children of one Father; may they dwell on earth in love and brotherliness, in peace and in harmony; may they serve Thee with a sincere heart, and may the redeemer come to Zion, Amen."

A prominent Chinese Chinaman is Wong Wie. Here are some of his comments on the war as given to the Commercial Tribune: "They call us 'heathens.' What do Chinamen do or have done that is more heathenish than war and all it involves?" "They may say the Chinese are not manly. But I ask what distinguishes man from the lower animals except it be the possession of reason, of the supremacy of mind over mere force?" "The Chinese believe that nation be the most manly that practices gentleness, the qualities of a man, not an immature child or one of the lower animals. We do not confuse coarseness with courage, braggadoocio with bravery."

"It is hard indeed for a Chinaman to understand this thing. I know from personal observation what fine men there are in the countries now at war. They see things ordinarily in a very true light, but in this one thing of war they seem to contradict themselves in all other things." "The Chinese have much to learn from European races and especially of their offspring in America, but we cannot comprehend the mental attitude that endures war." "Now we know after these nations are exhausted with strife, after millions of dollars of property have been destroyed, after innumerable men are killed, that there will be a congress called to treat over a settlement. The Chinese mind asks why not have this congress of reason before rather than after the fight, and thereby avoid the fight?" "Perhaps it needs no such examples of the spirit of the alien races to humble the pride of the western world. Our right to 'civilize the world' is sadly shaken by the spectacle of the civilized world now at war. It seems to the part of the world whose habits and religion we presume to reform."

WAYNE LADY WRITES FROM THE WAR ZONE

RELATES HER EXPERIENCE

Miss Edith Stocking Says War Declarations Were Unexpected by Tourists.

London, Aug. 14, 1914. Editor Huse, Wayne Herald.

"Kind Friend: Though not 'war correspondent' for your paper, yet thinking you might like news from the 'front,' I send you this short article from London, which I received after a thirteen days' stop in Paris."

"Our party of four drifted happily through Germany, Switzerland and Bohemia since June 21, hearing occasional rumors of war, which were always discredited when we made inquiry with regard to the actual situation. The people did not want war. 'Simply a war scare'—so we went on our way rejoicing. In Cologne, the night of July 27, we saw our first street demonstration. In Amsterdam, being uneasy about being so far removed from Paris, whence we were bound, we made careful inquiry, and our fears were quieted, and we thoroughly enjoyed peace-loving Holland, until we reached The Hague, when the whole situation burst upon us, and we realized to some extent the impending events."

"When we were told that even while we were talking, all men in Holland who had seen service since 1894 had been ordered out, we knew the Hollanders at last had war forced upon them. We started for Brussels upon the first train leaving Hague, reached Antwerp in the middle of the night, and found we must unexpectedly stay the remainder of the night as we could get no further. The government, filled with foreboding, had ordered the evacuation of the city. The excited mass of soldiers already mobilizing at the Antwerp depot, preparatory to entraining early in the morning. Every man had his enlistment papers in hand and knew exactly when to report. The entire city was sleepless, and early in the morning the city bells notified other soldiers to entrain. We started to Brussels upon a train carrying soldiers. Reached there safely, and found thousands of cavalry, infantry and soldiers with new snaffles as well as bayonets entangling as fast as trains could be brought into the depot for them. It is needless to write our day was an exciting one. We started for Paris upon a 7 o'clock train loaded with frantic people—some heartbroken at leaving relatives going to the front, others, like ourselves, anxious to reach Paris, a city from which it is easy to reach London."

"Words cannot describe the tumult we found at Paris when at last, after 1 o'clock, our train pulled into the Gar de Nord depot. All France was interested in the sending out of the troops. No porters were to be had. Omnibuses ordered to the front, street cars not running. Our troubles were small ones compared to others we saw. We were finally located and since that time have spent thirteen days in Paris, during which war has been declared, and the largest armies of the world has ever seen have been mobilized. We have watched the part France has played in and about Paris. Perhaps you may be interested in some of the minor details. The French declare it is not a war of the people, but one of the politicians. The people at large only knew of the probability of war July 30—the same time we became convinced of the seriousness of the situation in Hague. Every strategy is being bent to face the situation. France has not been caught unawares. Some five years ago, looking forward to the possibility of war, the enlistment time of her soldiers was changed from five to three years, by vote of parliament, which means here as with us, vote of the people. The Paris papers state the French army is not quite as large as that of Germany, but Belgium claims 320,000 men in the field. Holland has three corps, Russia six millions, and England 2,000,000 men, so the average Frenchman feels confident of winning, though they all admit Germany has the best fighting machine the world has ever seen. Every omnibus in Paris was confiscated by the government, filled with fresh beef—not cold storage—and sent to the front. All owners of autos were asked to bring their autos to the Hotel de Invalides, and turn them over for Red Cross work. I saw hundreds upon hundreds of the finest autos standing empty, without anyone in charge, waiting to be driven to the frontier. The government has taken charge of the milk supply of the country, and children and mothers are to be supplied first. Every woman dependent upon some soldier is paid twenty-five cents per day as long as the war lasts, and is allowed ten cents per day for each child. No one living in rented rooms or houses pays rent, as such rents and window taxes have been abolished. We are told by those who seem to know that France has $8,000,000,000 in gold; in every home, however poor, money is secreted, all of which will be given gladly to the 'cause'; that France is 'one great family,' everyone to help in a common cause. There is no braggadoocio anywhere. All believe the war will be the greatest in history, yet expecting victory with the aid of England and Russia. France they tell me, has been getting ready for six months; has ample provisions

When you publish this, the expected battle will have been fought, and the world will know the result. As I have been writing this, I have listened to the volunteer butlers who have volunteered for service in the "King's army"; young boys, 16 to 20. They expect to go to Egypt, but do not know where they will be sent. I will close by hoping when this comes to hand, peace will have been declared, though I do not expect it to be. I will add I still hope to sail home from Glasgow, though my hope grows fainter every day. With best wishes for my Wayne friends, I am Sincerely, Edith Stocking.

ROAST BEEF.

How pleasing is the juicy roast-old England's Lutwork and her boys
when—these boys grew stout?
Well done or rare, as you may choose, it builds up bones and strengthens thews—I praise it all day long. A chicken now and then is good, although when old it tastes like wood, and wooden bird is bad;
but when too oft this bird is sprung
—then though it's succulent and young, it makes the eater mad.
The turkey, at Thanksgiving dished, is that for which we long have wished,
and pictured in our dreams; but when at four successive meals it has been dished, a fellow feels, like suffering some screams. And thus it is with geese and fish, and nearly every other dish that's of the fleshy kind; served now and then they're simply great, but served too oft they agitate the patient's soul and mind. But good roast beef is always fine; I place it in this
of mine, and hate to partise or stop;
and when I've chewed a juicy slice,
I sound my walt' whoop once or twice, and go and whip a cop.

HEADACHE.

I wrap a rag around my brow, and say, "I have the headache now,"
when some renowned, acknowledged bore, comes knocking blithely at the door. The bore is told of my distress, and goes away, but thinks I guess that all my fibres, conveniently ache, would strike the doctors as a fake. My friend announces that the place needs cleaning up, it's a disgrace. "Go out," she begs, "and take away those old tin cans and bricks and hay, and make the whole blamed place appear as though white folks were living here." Whereat I heave a hefty sigh, and wipe some briny from my eye, and say, "Ah, naught would please me more! I dearly love just such a chore! But Fam' Feeling half-wad—had—I have a headache in my head." The headache has its daily use; it is the finest old excuse! Without it would life bead be so blue!—We couldn't dodge things as we do. But now, when things unpleasant come, with wild abandon, we pretend we're dumb, and to our chambers we repair, and nurse our gilt-edge headaches there.

CHARGE IT.

"Just chalk it down," the poor man said, when he had bought some boneless bread, and many costly things, his wife and brood of brats to feed—the most of which they did-not need as much as you need wings.
He buys the richest things in town,
and always says, "Just chalk it down. I'll pay you soon, you bet," and payday evening finds him broke, his hard earned plunks gone up in smoke, and still he is in debt. The man who doesn't pay for cash lays in kind of costly trash, that he could do without; he spends his coin on goods unless you pay. The poor man for his money swears, and he should pay for what he gets, just when he gets the same; then, when he goes his nickles to buy, and sees how fast the prickles fly, he'll dodge the spendthrift game. If you begin to name your stamps, some day with treadpops in your lamps, this writer you will thank; when man in grief and sickness groans there is some good savings bank.

SLEEP.

I go to roost tired out and sore,
and sigh, while yet awake, "There's no use living any more, life's such a grievous fake. It's nothing but a bunch of fool and tears and things like those; my heart is sorer than a holla, I have so many woes." While grumbling thus I start to snore, until the bedsprings rock, and then, for seven hours or more, I sleep around a block. Ah, far and wide my snore

is rung, till wakened neighborly ye'll, I learned to sleep when I was young, my tutors taught me well.
For seven hours, or maybe nine,
I sleep with ardent zeal; then in this withered heart of mine, new energy is felt. I murmur, as I don my vest,
"How foolish is despair! I don't endorse those dismal wags who say that life's a snare. I'm glad that I have work to do, and wish I had some more; I'll gaily toil the long day through, on every evening chore,
I feel as fresh and free from aches as Adam, ere his fall; bring on your wildcats and your snakes, and I shall whip them all!" "Oh, sleep!" fris the only dope that's never known to fail—that brings new courage, faith, and hope, when man is tired and stale.

NO PROGRESS.

I have a sort of notion that David Daniel Duke will never get progressing traps and cages at Jimson's jinnecrack store, and draws the same old wages he drew five years before.
He's never known to study or read,
a helpful book, his mind is like a muddy and dark and turbid brook.
The fellow who advances, who rises
from the groove, will never sidestepresents his knowledge to improve;
he'll burn the midnight candle, and to himself he'll say: "I would be a burning scandal to fool my time away." But David never ponders o'er books that brace the mind, but through the streets he wanders when's done the daily grind. A quiet game of poker now holds young David down; again, with crimson cheek he paints the sleeping town. An evening at the movies to David seems sublime; while other lads improve, he's just blowing in his time. And often in the morning when he shows up for work, his head's a horrid warning, and in his mouth there lurks those tastes of pink and yellow, the consequence of cups, which tastes inform a fellow he's going to the pups. The waste of time is fatal, bad habits are a snare; the dump is dark and hateful, and David's headed there.

THE COP.

I'd hate to be a peeler, and tread
the pave of brick, the goat for every squealer who thinks he has a kick.
He tries to do his duty, nine cases out of ten; the burglar fierce and shifty, all sorts of strong-arm men,
the hobo and the killer, the bad man with a past, he'll chase from post to pillar, and run them in at last. His lie he doesn't reckon when tracking deadly foe; wherever perils beckon, the peeler has to go. The cop must be a wizard, a Sherlock
in disguise, and know, from A to Z, the wicket's lures and lies, and he must be a scrapper to master hoodlums rude—and yet he must be dapper and well groomed as a dude.
The manners Chesterfieldian he must possess, of course, or we shall take his shield in, and fire him from the force. A Crichon he'll resemble; in nothing he'll be lax, or surely he may tremble, for he will get the news. As he leaves any lot and does like milk, and meek as a dove, as Bryan—at fifteen bones a week! I'd like to be a copper, on feet that creak and ache, the goat of every lawyer who has a kick to make.

the crowd was well satisfied with the attractions furnished.

one of the cases to be heard will be the now famous Flege case, and it will be the third time Flege has week's Wayne papers that fire al-they lost quite a bit of stock. They got the records and office furniture out, and will locate at the new place at the corner of the new building.

Randolph Times: L. F. Holtz has been shown some samples of his irrigated farming near Burley, Idaho, and the samples are on exhibition at the Ours & Brown shop.
The spring water measures about three and one-half feet high, the timothy about four and one-half,
and the alfalfa a good length. There are two samples of alfalfa, both cut August 9. One sample is from a field cut twice, and will be ready
the last of August for the third time.
The other is taken from alfalfa grown when only seven months old to the acre. Next year, Mr. Holtz plans to have about 72 acres of this crop, and is planning to feed it all.

Laurel Advocate: R. E. Nune-maker has probably the largest watermelon patch in the northeast. Nebraska, if not in the state. He has ten acres of melons, and the outlook is that he will have an excellent crop. He has a number of varieties, and the early ones are just beginning to ripen. Mr. Nune-maker always has a large patch of melons,
but never before has the size of field
he has this year. He has orders for six carloads to be shipped, but would not promise to fill them. He says he will supply the home demand
first, and then if he has a surplus he may ship some. In the morning season, it is nothing for from twenty to fifty automobiles to visit his place in a day, coming from all the towns around to eat and purchase melons.

undertaken in this line, and it is a big one. The editors of both papers

Elegance in Home Furnishings without Excessive Cost

You will be amazed and delighted to see what wonderfully good furniture you can own at remarkably low prices by furnishing your home here.

No matter whether you need but a single piece or two or a complete home outfit, you can always double the purchasing power of every dollar you spend with us.

Our furniture is not the kind that is made for one to five years—but for generations. It is honest furniture, sincere furniture, the kind you ought to own.

Whether you are young folks just starting your first year, or old timers who have tried every kind of furniture ever made, it will pay you to look through our stocks NOW. They are very complete.

about the county, who cooperated in the production should not be overlooked. It will prove very interesting to Winside people and former residents, as many business houses and homes are pictured and described besides a number of farmers who are engaged in handling and breeding high grade stock. Mr. Gant, the manager, has worked hard in making the edition a credit. It would be putting it mildly if we would say it is the best we have ever seen.

That's the game of politics—Forget it.
Does this seem a world of sin?—Forget it.
Are your spirits dark within?—Forget it.
Do all men prevaricate?—Are all liars? Is that straight?—This your course, at any rate—Forget it.

MORE ADVICE.

(Sixty in Lincoln Journal).
Does the vote give you the blues?
Forget it.
Did you make the race and lose?
Forget it.
Were you given cuffs and kicks,
Victim of man's unkind tricks?

Follow not the beaten road—Forget it.
Cast aside your heavy load—Forget it.
How you braved the wind and sun
When you thought that you could run;
How the other fellow won—Forget it.
Generally speaking, contesting an election is the poorest job.

MORE PEOPLE

Every day, more and more people are realizing the many advantages of carrying their money in a home bank and paying their bills by check.

The safety, the freedom from worry; the ease with which they can keep accurate tab on their income and expenses; always have just the right change, and a receipt for each and every cent paid out, whether on account or purchase.

There are many other advantages, very material advantages, which we would like to explain to you.

If you have no bank account we cordially ask you to come in and start one with us. No matter how small, your account will receive the careful and conservative attention of our officers.

UNDER A VOLCANO

A Town That Lives In Perennial Dread of Extinction.

COLIMA'S CRATER IN ACTION.

It's a Solemn Spectacle For the Dwellers in the Shadow of the Volcano. Peak When "Old Faithful" Explodes, as It Does Regularly Once a Year.

It is singular how indifferent to a persistently threatened danger human beings can become, even when the danger is of a deadly nature and may imperil their very lives. Harry H. Dunn, in the Montreal Herald, writes of a case in which a whole town of people live in the constant threat of extinction by a volcano.

The volcano of Colima, the "Old Faithful" of centers, which explodes regularly once a year and it was almost dead for an exhibition. "The shoals begin soon," droned the keeper. "Maybe today, maybe tomorrow, maybe not for a week, but it is the middle of September, and it is his time."

The old man had secretly flushed with a bubble, black as night, crowded itself out of the broken end of the mountain, which was known as a pot of fire. Even by night, however, by day it was terrible, with its barren, lava coated sides, its gas exhaling clouds and its fire that was so hot that it melted black and thick and ominous.

It seemed that the town below us had been long since. The dingy, for which its two or twelve thousand inhabitants had been waiting was about to happen. The mighty drama was about to be enacted before their eyes.

The roots filled with people. Here and there a woman screamed; many others held their hands to their eyes as if they were blind. The children's cries and questions from children's rows on the night air, and the bells in the churches began to ring, slowly at first, then more and more rapidly.

There Are Many Ways of Doing It, but Take a fluid remedy from a medicine glass or from a silver spoon. Chemical action of some liquids upon brass creates a knowledge of some of the things that are done in the kitchen.

Unless directions require you to take medicines full strength, it is better to take a few drops of the medicine than never take doses larger than those specified in the directions. Better that they be smaller.

Be sure never to put medicine back into the bottle. Never fall to shake the bottle before you use it. The contents, if there be any sign of sediment, shake the more. Unless directed otherwise you should never use a medicine in a glass or bottle with a stopper of wax.

The worst thing to do in an accident on the water is to founder around and shriek and cry. That expends the air from the lungs and makes it difficult to keep him from sinking if he grasps it by the rim or by the handle so that the air is imprisoned under the hat.

It is not ductile at all. Copper and tin mixed together produce an alloy with a higher specific gravity than either of its constituents, and the same weight will occupy less bulk. Copper and aluminum produce a beautiful white blue alloy.

By mixing together eight parts by weight of bismuth, five parts of lead and three parts of grain tin an alloy is produced which will melt at so low a temperature that a spoon made of it will melt when it is immersed in hot tea, and yet the melting point of each of its components is at least twice that of boiling water.

MIXED METALS.

Some of the Curious Results Shown in Various Alloys.

In the beginning of man's acquaintance with metals only the softer ones, such as copper, gold, silver and tin, were utilized and worked up into alloys, weapons, etc. It was only discovered that an alloy of copper and tin produced a reasonably hard metal called bronze, which was suitable for cutting instruments and, although not as hard as steel, was easier to work and did not break.

THE EARLY DAYS IN TWO COUNTIES.

From the Wayne Herald, September 6, 1888: The thermometer occasionally marks a temperature a little too near the front line to be enjoyed until the corn gets thoroughly ripened.

By the almost unanimous opinion of all who attended the reunion and fair at Norfolk last week, the Wayne land was given first place over all others that were there.

H. H. Moses bought the quarter block just south of E. M. Smith's residence of J. E. McFarland and will build a residence and barn at once, for which he has let the contract to Philco & Son.

The Wayne academy opens today. A complete curriculum for a three years' course is arranged. This course begins with the Latin language, higher mathematics, and corresponding branches, and ends with Cicero's orations in Latin, and the fourth book of Anabasis in Greek. The course is two-fold, classic and normal. The executive committee of the board of education is expected on the ground very soon to complete arrangements for the new building.

From the Wayne Herald, September 19, 1895: A large number of Wayne people are attending the state fair at Omaha this week.

At the home of the bride's parents, in Brenna precinct, Wednesday, September 13, took place the marriage of Mr. True Prescott and Miss Edith Tidrick, Rev. W. W. Theobald officiating.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hoguewood, Thursday, September 12, 1895.

Commercial club pamphlets are being turned out rapidly. They will be distributed through Iowa, Illinois and other states during the next month. The men who raised sugar beets this year, as the Herald predicted, are the fellows who reap a profit from their labor. Diversified farming pays. The Wayne county fair of 1895 is a thing of the past, and with it has gone the county's satisfactory financially. It was a success in many respects, especially the exhibits in floral hall and agricultural hall, and the poultry exhibit.

From Ponca Journal, September 12, 1895: "Straws," according to an old saying, "indicate which way the wind blows." On the train which left this place Tuesday morning, were forty-one gentlemen, and as a matter of amusement a vote was taken to see how the train had stood on the presidential question, which resulted: For Blaine, 27; Cleveland, 17; Butler, 4; St. John, 1; no choice, 2.

It has been reported that Mr. Curtis has a letter from the general attorney of the railroad, stating that if the county seat is removed to Martinsburg, the railroad company will at once extend the road from Ponca to that place. This story has been circulated extensively, and in order to arrive at the facts, Judge Hayes wrote to Hon. J. D. Hovey of St. Paul, the general attorney of the road, concerning it, and the reply received this week from Mr. Hovey states that he has not written or made any such letter or statement. Parties wishing, will find his letter at Judge Hayes' office, and there can see for themselves the utter falsity of the rumor that the road is to be extended to Martinsburg.

COLUMN ADVOCATING WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE (Under Auspices Local Committee.)

Facts About Suffrage. Union Workers: At the present time, over three million, six hundred thousand women in the United States can vote for president.

In November, 1911, equal suffrage amendments will be submitted to the voters of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nevada, Montana, Nebraska, Missouri, and Ohio.

Wherever any country, state or community has granted women a measure of suffrage, women are still enjoying it, although in many cases the original franchise right has been enlarged and extended.

The legislatures of the two oldest suffrage states, Colorado and Wyoming, have formally adopted resolutions declaring woman suffrage to be an unqualified success. The legislature of California has passed a resolution calling upon congress to pass an amendment enfranchising all of the women of the United States.

The California legislature of 1913 passed many laws of special interest to women and children. Though many of these laws had been introduced in earlier sessions of the legislature, they failed to pass.

This legislature met in January and remained in session one month, during which time bills were introduced. In February they adjourned and returned to their homes when a campaign of education on legislative matters was carried on throughout the state. All women's clubs and organizations held meetings and organized these bills and measures.

In March, the regular session of the legislature convened when this remarkable number of bills of interest to women were passed.

The creation of an industrial welfare commission has been one of the conditions under which women and minors labor, with the power to invoke a minimum wage in any such industries.

The original of an immigration commission to investigate and prepare for the coming of immigration with the opening of the Panama canal.

The red-light injunction and abatement law, placing the responsibility of disorderly houses upon the property, rather than upon the inmates and providing for the prohibition of such houses.

The extension of the eight-hour law for women to include nurses in training and workers in apartment houses.

The age of consent, raising the age from 16 to 18.

The establishing of a state training school for girls, separating it from the general institution, and providing for the most approved correctional methods and vocational training.

The teachers' pension law, granting pensions of $500 a year to those who have served thirty years, with a smaller pension to those disabled in less than that time.

The juvenile court law, amending the law in order to separate dependent from delinquent children.

The joint guardianship law, giving women equal rights over their unmarried minor children.

The mothers' pension law, amending the law which provided for state institutions caring for orphans and half-orphans; providing that such funds could be used to care for the children in the mother's own home but without increased appropriation and creating three children's agents properly to investigate the families to which such funds are given.

The creation of a commission to compile data and statistics concerning mothers' and old age pensions.

The net container law, specifying that packages shall be marked with the amount of net contents.

The weights and measures law, providing for a complete standard of weights and measures, and the regular inspection of dealers.

The Roberts' bill, prohibiting the destruction of any foodstuff fit for human consumption.

The workers' compensation law, requiring compulsory compensation for injuries, and establishing a system of state industrial insurance.

The requirement of the state's signature to legalize the assignment of a man's wages.

The amendment of the child labor law, reducing the work day from nine to eight hours, and restricting the granting of permits to the attendance of children.

In California there is practically no child labor excepting in street trades. The creation of a water commission, with authority over all water in the state.

traffic in women between countries; similar to the Mann act law, providing for the coming of immigration with the opening of the Panama canal.

The amendment of the liquor laws, prohibiting the sale of liquor between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m.

The law providing for equalizing of certain inmates of insane asylums and state prisons.

The psychopathic parole law, providing for the parole of persons mentally abnormal, but not dangerously insane, under the custody of psychopathic prisoners.

In the matter of prison reform, all sentences except for murder are made indeterminate; straight jackets and cold showers are prohibited; arrangements are made for the payment of wages to certain convicts, and for rendering assistance to discharged prisoners.

The billboard law, prohibiting billboards of more than ten feet in height, also "spite fences" of more than that height.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs advocated its special bill the health certificate for marriage, requiring a certificate of freedom from venereal diseases of all persons applying for marriage licenses. The bill was fought on the grounds of sentiment, medical practice, and constitutionality. It was amended to omit the requirement of such certificates from women, and passed in that form. However, in amending the bill, the wording was made vague and incorrect, and Governor Johnson was obliged to veto it on the grounds that it would have been inoperative and unconstitutional.

The Case of L. L. Cantelou. The case of L. L. Cantelou, Clarendon, Tex., is similar to that of many others who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "After trying a doctor for several months, and using different kinds of medicine for my wife who had been troubled with severe bowel complaint for several months, I bought a 25-cent box of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After using the second bottle, she was entirely cured. For sale by all dealers.

Not So Strange After All. You may think it strange that so many people are cured of stomach trouble by Chamberlain's Tablets. You would not, however, if you should give them a trial. They strengthen and invigorate the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Mrs. Rosie Rish, Wash, Ind., writes: "Nothing did me the least good until I began using Chamberlain's Tablets.

It is decidedly the best medicine for stomach trouble I have ever used." For sale by all dealers.—Ad.

WATERY HUMOR.

The Brand of Practical Jokes That Royalty Seems to Like. King Alfonso of Spain delights in playing practical jokes upon his friends and masters of his household. Recently when Lord and Lady Wimborne were his guests, in connection with the visit of the English polo team, he showed them through the magnificent gardens attached to the royal palace at Madrid. Leading his guests into a trellised arbor, the king stopped to one side, pressed a button, and both English and Spanish were soaked by a deluge of water that poured down from a concealed shower bath. The king was convulsed with merriment, and his guests had to laugh with royalty, whether they liked the joke or not. The late King Edward, it is related, when a young man, at a house party decided to take a full out of a rather generous fellow guest. Aided by one of his suit, he placed a bucket filled with water over the door of his room and then sent for the company one. As the latter entered the room the bucket was upset and he was drenched, to Albert Edward's great joy. The "ditcher" took the lead in spring past, and making his excuses to the hostess, returned to town at once. The next morning when he opened his eyes he saw this personal advertisement: "If I'll return to his friends sit will be forgiven him."

Upon another occasion, at a private view of the pictures at an exhibition in the old New gallery, Albert Edward had a hearty laugh. An artist, who was somewhat of a poseur, wishing to impress the Prince of Wales with his knowledge of art, kept walking backward, exclaiming that he would like to capture where the best view of the picture was to be had. The prince nudged his companion and indicated they should look on. As a result the artist was not warned, and he stumbled backward into the basin of the fountain among the goldfish. Neither the artist nor the goldfish saw the joke, but Albert Edward and his friends did.—New York Sun.

You Are Master of Your Fate. No power in society, no hardship in your condition, can depress you, keep you down or know, influence, power, virtue, influence, but by your own consent.—William Ellery Channing.

An Astonished Landlord. Last year the Chicago Nationals were taking a long job on their exhibition tour, and for some reason their train became stalled for a couple of hours. "There was an dinner attached to the secretary told the conductor to wire ahead to a certain town and have seats reserved at the station restaurant for the party. This the conductor did. On arrival at the town thirty-two half starved athletes piled out of their car and hustled for the eating place. As they sprang inside they were by the proprietor who threw up both hands in amazement. "Only nine chairs had been reserved, the remainder being occupied by three amiable travelers. "Why, the wife I received said a baseball nine was coming, so what else would I do?" was his explanation.—Ed A. Soewig in Leslie's.

"WHAT WERE YOU DOING?"

Tennyson's Luck. The story of how Lord Tennyson won the Newbiggin prize at Oxford is worth telling: three examiners were selected to pass judgment on the competitors' essays, and the last of these to whom Tennyson's essay "Tithing" was submitted, being of an indolent disposition and seeing what he took to be the best "single" "good" essay, appended to several of the lines, affixed, without troubling to judge for himself the merits of the work, a similar mark of approval and thus secured for the future laureate the coveted prize. That same evening the three examiners met, and they were surprised to find the wisest talk it had been first to read the poem, "made you think so highly of your Tennyson's effort?" "I don't know," cried the others, in amazement of surprise. "We only followed your lead. You were forever marking the lines with a 'g'." "I tried their colleague. "That wasn't a 'g'—that was a note of interjection to signify that for the life of me I couldn't make out what the fellow meant."

The Scrap Book

Stopped to Count It. If the Englishman has deep rooted convictions regarding the "cleanness" of the Scot, he has himself to blame, for he seems to delight in noting the more than poking fun at this: that characteristic of his race or, at any rate, at a quality which is often confused with meanness.

Sergeant Sandy Lawrence, a battie of the Scotch foot, has himself to blame for an amusing story of the time when he won the queen's prize in 1882. Sandy expected that his £250 would be presented two days later, but with the other prizes, by the Duchess of Teck and received with surprise the advice that he should proceed forthwith to the cashier. "He went, and finding he had to deal with a general old comptroller, he inquired where was not to receive his money from the hands of her royal highness. "They used to do that," said Sandy. "Why don't they do it now?" "A 'twinkle-remie-into-the-old man's eyes as he replied. "Successful Scotsmen used to stop and count it!"—Perron's.

Fate. The sky is clouded, the rocks are bare. The zephyr of the tempest is white in air. The winds are out with the waves at play. And I shall not see you here any more today. The trail is narrow, the wood is dim. The pathner clings to the arching limb. The "ion's" whelps are abroad at play. And I shall not see you here any more today. But the ship sailed safely over the seas. And the hanters came from the chase in line. And the town that was builded upon a rock. Was swallowed up in an earthquake shock.—Bret Hart's.

The Dailly Drive. The late Pete Dailly, whose memory is alive in many a social people gather, was a great hand for staying up late. He never went to bed as long as there was anywhere else to go.

Mr. Henry Furciss tells a funny story of a high legal dignitary, who, when solicitor general, had to appear before a committee to receive the honor of knighthood. "What am I to do?" he asked nervously of the official at the door. "Sitting the action to the word, he immediately fell on his knees, and, like the funny man at a child's tea party, he crawled along on his hands on his knees. Here late majesty was overcome by laughter, all the more as when she retreated "the little man followed."

And yet the little man rose to the highest post in his profession, and stood by the majesty's side as the chancellor of England to read her address to the house of lords.—London Globe.

A Real Jolly Evening. A column of Robert May's "Accomplish Cook" published in 1655, will serve to stage the dinner featured by many foreign critics that English cookery lacks variety. One of May's recipes is for the construction of a ship of construction. With gun charged with actual powder, and a case of pies, containing live frogs and birds. After giving directions as to the amusements, he proceeds as follows: "This do, to sweeten the stretch of the powder let the ladies take the eggshells full of sweet waters and throw them upon the gun as you proceed. "This being over, by this time you may suppose they will desire to see what is in the press; when, lifting first the lid of the gun, and then the powder, which makes the ladies to slip and shriek; next after the other pie, whence come out the birds, who, by a natural instinct, flying in the air will put on the candies; so that, what with the flying birds and skipping frogs, the one above, the other beneath, will give you an edict and pleasure to the whole company."

Klem Had the Correct Dope. Hered's opinion concerning an incident of the Giants-White Sox tour around the world. Umpire Klem was judging a game at Sydney, N. S. W. "The Sun" critic was at the game, and fast ball out across the plate. "Strike one," sang out the umpire's helper. "That was below my knees," said Sam with spirit. "No," replied Klem, "your knees didn't come up when you were sent back; you only imagine they didn't."—Leah's.

STARTLED HIS HOSTESS.

One of Eugene Field's Practical Jokes in Two Acts. There are many stories incident to the career of the late Eugene Field, who not only wrote songs for the children, but who was at times fond of practical jokes, which illustrate his inimitable humor. On one occasion he played an unexpected part at a dinner given in honor of himself and his wife which, while it had serious side, was made all the more enjoyable by the grave deportment of Mr. Field. The dinner was given by a leading Chicago family. When all were seated Mr. Field repaired to the pantry, only to return in a few moments with a dozen or more costly gold embroidered wineglasses, the property of his hostess, which, to her silent astonishment, he proceeded to hand over each glass to a guest one by one, a souvenir of the occasion. Great was the merriment when it was realized that the hostess had not contemplated parting with her cherished glassware. But Mr. Field was not content with returning them to the pantry by previous arrangement with the butler, he took up a tray of old bottles and other broken glassware and, pretending to stumble, dropped it on the floor, apparently shattering the valuable wineglasses. The feelings of the hostess may be imagined, for it was some time before the real situation was understood.

Home Happiness. A few more smiles of tender sympathy, a few more tender words, a little more restraint on temper, more to be contented with what we have, and half happiness to those with whom you live.

His Own Was Too Much. The late Sir John Astley, affectionately remembered as "the Astley" was not content with his standing in parliament. A tiresome "heckler" asked him, "What the New-Whigs, what the thought of Sir Wilfrid Lawson's will and spirit."

"What do I think of Sir Wilfrid Lawson's wine and spirits bill?" cried indignantly Sir John. "I don't think of it all. That's his affair; not yours or mine. I can tell you if you like that my own last year was a jolly stiff too big."

straightened Out the Blunder. Beef was very scarce in London during the siege, but General Sir Ian Hamilton, then a colonel, insisted that "horse is not half bad when properly cooked, when one is used to it." "fact," he said, concluding a discussion. "I have a joint cooked tonight, which I hope will suit all. Of course it's best to eat tonight. Every one at the table preferred the beef, with the exception of Colonel Ward and Ian Hamilton, who ostentatiously abstained from the beef, from the "horseflesh." The dinner was nearly over when one of the servants whispered a communication to Ward, which he read as follows: "I'm distressed gentlemen," he announced to the startled company. "A silly mistake has been made. Those joints were mixed up somehow—when you have a look at the horse. My folks are annoyed. But if you'll be convinced now that the meat is splendid stuff. I'm sure you all seem to enjoy it." Glances were exchanged; mistakes were twisted. Nobody seemed ready with a response. "Then a voice from the bottom of the table cried out, 'Oh, don't distress yourself, Ward! I thought some mistake had been made, so I just changed those dishes as they stood on the sideboard, which you Ian Hamilton who had the horseflesh all right!'"

Suffering by Proxy. Senator Warren of New Jersey was worried by distraction by the importunities of a person who had a grievance against the interior department. The senator called up Secretary Lane, who had been worried by the same person.

"Will you listen to his story?" asked Hughes over the telephone. "It will not," Lane replied. "I've heard it," urged Hughes desperately. "I've reported some one to hear the story?" "Yes," answered Secretary Lane. "I would not have it run off.—Saturday Evening Post.

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. May, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as May's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here:

AERIAL GYMNASIACS.

Lincoln Beachey will loop the loop, fly upside down, and fly sideways in an aeroplane at the Nebraska state fair, September 7-11. He will make three ascents each day regardless of weather conditions. Beachey is considered the greatest attraction in the United States this year.

COUNTIES INTERESTED.

Activity in the county exhibit section of the Nebraska state fair indicates that there will be a decided increase in the number of county exhibits in the new agricultural-horticultural hall, September 7-11. Counties in the west and northwest sections of the state are making commendable efforts to boost their communities by extensive agricultural displays.

FROM VIEWPOINT OF ONE WAYNE VISITOR

Blair Pilot: C. K. Gaydou and the editor took in the state tennis tournament at Wayne last week and we certainly had a good time. Wayne certainly has a bunch of tennis boosters for a city of its size less than the population of Blair by about five hundred. They have about eighty members of their club and many of them are leading business and professional men of the city. They spent about $200 fixing up two extra courts for the state meet, besides about $200 more for their own time. But they now have three fine courts, the fastest we have ever seen. They fixed up a dressing room and shower bath in Harry Fisher's barn, on whose grounds the courts are located, and everything was mighty handy. We arrived at about 10:30 and the drawings were made shortly thereafter. The men, both Mr. Gaydou and the writer drew failed to show up, and we won the preliminary round by default. The first man we played was Gary of Fairmont, who won the championship of the tournament, but failed to defeat Harry Koch, the state champion. Gaydou and his man had a set apiece and were four- all, but the other fellow had a streak of luck and won out, though Gaydou and his man were well within the consolation singles. We both had the pleasure of defeating one man, but were trimmed in the next round. We saw some mighty good tennis, and got acquainted with a bunch of mighty fine fellows. There's a sort of fellow feeling between tennis players that is even stronger than lodge-brotherhood. It is almost a fraternity, with the members bound together by the simple fact that they play tennis, and are interested in this one international game. The winners of Wayne were men of that kind to the visitors, entertaining them in their homes for the entire week. A smoker and get-acquainted meeting was held at the courthouse the first evening, and all the visitors were royally banqueted the second evening. L. A. Kiplinger, a boyhood friend of George Doll of this city, was the toastmaster, and he certainly made good. Mr. Gaydou came home Saturday morning, but we remained to see the finals in singles and doubles that forenoon. We didn't see the challenge round in the afternoon, as we left at 2:42. Coach Stiehm invited the players to go to Lincoln next year and become guests of the Country club, which was accepted. In all probability, the next meet will be held in Wayne, and for they certainly are royal hosts, and if the invitation is extended to return, the players will be too grateful to refuse it. Moreover, they know they will be treated right.

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE.

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS.

Your mountain is only a molehill to other people. Generosity with other people's money is the most common kind. If a crank has enough money, he is merely classed as an eccentric person. While he gets no medal, the judge of a baby show displays considerable nerve. One should at least be an artist before attempting to dodge the consequences of his delivment on the ground of an artistic temperament. "Let us be up and doing, our useful chores pursuing, no matter how the war dogs howl. Though French attack the Easton, and there's a funny shooting, it isn't for this land to growl. The war of all the ages, which clutters up our pages, is leaving us in paths of peace, though it should spread to China, far past the river Drina, and even take in Russia and Greece. It is an old world riot which shatters peace and quiet, and scatters many kinds of woe. 'Tis not of our creation, and this somewhat free nation should merely stand and watch the show. Watch war lords storm and thunder, and some may have a notion who's right across the ocean, perhaps you aren't one to judge."—Rufe Hoskins.

MODEL DAIRY.

A model milk house, a model cow barn, a silo, and a calf barn will be features of the dairy and pure food show in the old agricultural hall at the Nebraska state fair, September 7-11. Superintendent Andreas plans to have specimens of five breeds of dairy cows on exhibition. Deputy Food Commissioner Harman has arranged for a big display of pure food products, and will demonstrate how the pure food laws of the state are enforced.

CHILD'S PRAYER.

(Bible in Lincoln Journal.)
—L. H. Robbins, in the Newark News, offers a "child's prayer" that will live and be repeated long after the sorrows of the present European war are forgotten:
"I pray this night not for myself, dear Lord,
For all I need thou freely givest."
"I pray for those poor children o'er the sea, Beneath the angry shadows of the sword."
"Look down on them, dear Lord,
With tender eye,
Those little ones who hear the cannon's roar.
Those helpless babes behind the sealed door,
Whose fathers go to fight, perhaps to die."
"O Thou who lovest little children so,
Open the eyes of warring men to see
That children bear the weight of enmity
And heaviest feel the crushing battle blow."
"Pity them, Lord, forbid that wrathful men
Shall burden childhood under such a debt.
O turn aside the nations' conflict yet
And swiftly send the children peace again."

Keeps Lit in a Stiff Wind

One thing you'll notice when you light a Safe Home Match is that it keeps lit in a stiff wind.

The flame "flickers," of course, but it does not go out.

The stick is absolutely dry—that is one reason for the superiority of Safe Home Matches. Another reason is, the head is unusually large.

America's and Europe's Use of the Telephone

The city of Chicago has more telephones than the entire country of France, Omaha more than all of Spain, Minneapolis and St. Paul more than all Italy, and Des Moines more than Greece and Portugal combined.

Wherever government ownership of telephones has been tried the rates are higher and the service poorer, and the number of telephones, per capita, lower, than under private ownership in America.

Here is the record of government ownership in five leading countries of Europe, and that of private ownership in America:

Scores of Wayne Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty. When they fail to do this, the kidneys are weak. Backache and other kidney ills may follow. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the tested kidney remedy. Wayne people endorse their worth. W. H. Hogewood, Wayne, Neb., says: "About a year ago, my back was so painful and lame that I could scarcely get up after sitting. I had other symptoms of kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills had been used in our home for a similar complaint, and had given such great benefit that I finally decided to try them. I was not disappointed with the results. I found relief almost immediately, and in a short time I was cured. I have since been free from kidney complaint, and in return for this permanent cure, I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills whenever I have had an opportunity."

The publisher of the Field's State Gazette, at Wynnewood, Okla., writes us the following letter and permits the publication of same in gratitude for what ZENSAL did for his grandson:
The Zensal Co., Oklahoma City, Okla.
Gentlemen: At the age of 3 months my little grandson's face and head were covered with a dry, scaly excema—in some places the flesh was raw and we had to tie the little fellow's hands to keep him from scratching. Two doctors had the case, but we saw no change. I was carrying my old dog in my paper, so decided to try your preparation—Two jars of Dry Zensal produced a cure. Within the baby began to fret and cry, an application of Zensal would stop the itching and the little fellow would go to sleep. Six months have gone by with no return of the trouble. Thankfully yours, TOM C. Fields.
