

ENROLLMENT AT THE WAYNE STATE NORMAL

REGISTRATION ALL WEEK

New System of Registration Works Successfully—Class Work Began Tuesday.

The fifth year of the Wayne Normal as a state institution opened Monday, and present indications point to the largest enrollment of students in the history of the school.

The registration cards show that a large per cent of the enrollment comes from this section of the state, all of the counties of northeast Nebraska, twenty-five in all, being represented in the enrollment.

Stenton Gosmann who used the railroad company for damages alleged to have been caused by his property in the southwest part of town on account of water backed up by an embankment on the right-of-way after rain, effected a settlement this week for $51, and the case has been dismissed.

NEW TRIAL SOUGHT BY WILLIAM FLEGE

Lincoln special in this morning's Omaha Bee. The case of Wilhelm Flege, accused of the murder of his sister, Louise Flege, came before the supreme court on a motion for a retrial.

Mike Harrington and J. J. McCarthy appeared for Flege, who was present in the courtroom. They ask for a new trial on the alleged failure of the judge to take into consideration the condition of Flege's mind when he had been indicted by the grand jury.

Flege was convicted of the murder of his sister, in the district court of Dixon county, and sentenced to the penitentiary for life, principally on the evidence of Albert Eichtenkamp. The supreme court granted a new trial and a change of venue was taken to Thurston county, where a verdict was given of guilty of manslaughter, and he was given an indeterminate sentence of from one to ten years.

GOEMANN SETTLES WITH RAILROAD CO.

Stenton Gosmann who used the railroad company for damages alleged to have been caused by his property in the southwest part of town on account of water backed up by an embankment on the right-of-way after rain, effected a settlement this week for $51, and the case has been dismissed.

An hour Friday afternoon with the story of the "Magdalen Brothers," from Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Book."

Pupils who enrolled recently are John Marsteller, sixth grade; Ella Shurtliff, seventh grade; Paul Kighel and Ralph Carhart, eighth grade; Byrdie Marsteller, tenth grade; Alfred Hanson, ninth grade; Cooper Ellis, twelfth grade.

Miss Huyc, of the art and domestic science departments, attended the county fair at Concord Friday and Saturday, judging the domestic science exhibits Friday, and the fine arts, including the school exhibit and China painting, Saturday.

The kindergarten children are interested in the topic of "Homes" this fall. The first week was devoted to "Our Kindergarten Home." This week, "The Real Home" is under discussion, and the observation of a house in construction proves interesting.

"Football is claiming the attention of the boys at present. With Lewis Hoguewood, Miner, Moran, Powers, Milner, and Sears, 'old men,' and the two new men, Ellis and Porter, who are working up well, Wayne High should have a good team."

The Rural Home society will meet with Mrs. J. M. Bressler, southeast corner of 7th and S, Thursday, September 24. All members are urged to be present.

Save the CREAM It's Valuable

At the present price of cream and butter the saving of every pound is of importance to every farmer engaged in dairy pursuits. The milk feeding of young calves for the first five weeks requires more or less of the whole milk, which, if it could be converted into butter or cream, would amount to at least $6 on every calf.

The Use of Security Calf Food has solved this problem. Farmers can now raise good thrifty calves without a drop of whole milk. Security-Calf Food when mixed with separated milk is equal to whole milk and the calves drink with a relish. It does for calves what malted milk does for babies. My guarantee insures you satisfaction in every particular at 1-4 the cost. Over fifty farmers in this vicinity are using it with success. Will you try it on my 30 day guarantee?

DR. CORKEY TAKES UP DUTIES AT BELLEVUE

Monday afternoon, Dr. Alexander Corkey left Wayne to take up his new duties in Bellevue college. He will have charge of the departments of history, sociology and bible study, and as he has specialized in these branches of education, he expects to greatly enjoy his work at Bellevue. In addition to his college work, he will continue his literary activities, and, to some extent, will represent the college at various ecclesiastical functions. Mrs. Corkey and Miss Lucile Corkey will move to Bellevue this matter of christ in Nebraska, that kind of education which leads to true success in life, and which develops young men and women into effective Christian citizens worthy of leadership in all fields of life's activities.

Bellevue college is one of the important and growing Presbyterian institutions in the middle west. Although somewhat behind her sister schools in this matter of christian education, Nebraska is fast proving herself able to develop educational institutions of the christian-type, which are second to none in the country. It is the firm of the leaders in the Presbyterian church to make it possible to obtain in Nebraska that kind of education which leads to true success in life, and which develops young men and women into effective Christian citizens worthy of leadership in all fields of life's activities.

WHEN WISDOM COMES.

Chicago Record-Herald: The slaughter along the German and French English battle line is appalling. Thousands are shot down and thousands advance to take their places in the lines of attack and defense. And then the awful process is repeated.

Those soldiers who press forward in the heat of combat, full of patriotism, zeal and courage—we know what they think. But the wounded, perhaps dying, soldier, under the open sky and the peaceful stars, when the tide of battle has ebb'd over and beyond him—how does he feel about it?

We fancy him, as he feels himself on the brink of another world, filled with a great peace and a great forgiveness. How strange it must seem to him at that time, that many about him actually go forth to slay their brethren! How unimportant the things that a little while before seemed of such tremendous moment!

(Queer, he must find it, that men can look up into that vast, benign sky and not feel its peace and calm enter into their souls! Strange that men who have watched the same bright, high, mysterious stars should think their small affairs worth slaughtering each other for! Incredible that men should not realize that all men are brothers. After all, that all of them have fathers, mothers, wives, sweethearts, children; that in almost every little village there is a white-spired church, beloved from childhood, where men go, as their fathers went before them, to worship the same God and to learn the same lesson of peace and forgiveness! All the foolish pride, all the foolish hereditary hates, all the ideas that sever man from his fellow man, all the sophisticated arguments of statesmen about the need of war—how false they must seem to him as he lies in the shadow of Death's majestic wing, alone with himself and the peaceful night and the memories of home!)

All the fierce lust of battle, all the desires of victory, all the will to slay and to be slain, must seem to him like a story told to charm and frighten children—a tale made up of strange, impossible things, an echo of a morbid dream in the deep peace that comes over him beneath the sky and stars.

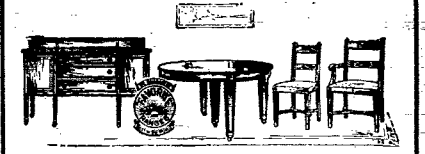

Love of home, family, fatherland—patriotism, yes! But these sacred ideas, we fancy no longer seem to imply that the homes and families and fatherlands of other men should be devastated. They demand that they also be restored. They mean a love that embraces all the other families, a patriotism too high for hate, too broad for war and conquest.

Truly, the dying are wise. Truly, the sorely wounded, after the frenzy has died away, must see things that are truly dark to men who, thus confused with life and action,

Assuredly many of them must feel in their inmost souls that all the arguments that set men against their brothers have been answered in that deep moment when the land grows dark and sleep seems strangely sweet.

After the war, when men's hearts are broken and their hearts to make

FAREWELL SERVICE FOR DR. ALEX. CORKEY

Sunday evening, the Baptist, Methodist and English Lutheran churches of Wayne joined with the local Presbyterian church in a farewell service for the pastor, Dr. Alexander Corkey. The house was well filled, in spite of the disagreeable weather.

Rev. B. P. Richardson of the Baptist church, in charge of the service, Rev. H. B. Jones of the Lutheran church, offered the prayer, while Rev. C. L. Myers of the Methodist church, spoke fittingly on the help of the community of Dr. Corkey's effective work in Wayne. Then J. H. Kemp spoke most appreciatively on behalf of the Presbyterian body, of the place that Dr. Corkey occupies in the lives of so many of the people.

After some special music, Dr. Corkey was given an opportunity of responding. He told of the joy of his four years' work among these people, and that while he had failed many times, in his efforts, his ideals for christian character had never been lowered. He spoke of the larger work to which he was going, and that he hoped to keep in close touch with the work of the ministry even though he was leaving the parsonage.

The spirit of christian fellowship prevailed throughout the evening, and the audience sang together as the closing hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Altogether it was a pleasant evening of fellowship, and a fitting farewell to one who has been closely identified with the work of the community.

TRUTH TRIUMPHS.

Wayne Citizens Testify for the Public Benefit.

A truthful statement of a Wayne citizen, in his own words, should convince the most skeptical about the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. If you suffer from backache, nervousness, sleeplessness, urinary disorders or any form of kidney illness, use a tested kidney medicine.

A Wayne citizen tells of Doan's Kidney Pills having done more convincing proof of merit? Mrs. J. C. Hanson of Wayne, Neb., says:

"I have no reason to withdraw anything from the public statement I gave three years ago recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. I had a serious attack of kidney complaint, and I suffered terribly from headaches, dizzy spells, and a tired, languid feeling. The kidney secretions were unnatural, and I had a dull, heavy ache through my loins. In a few days after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, I felt better, and improvement continued until all symptoms of the complaint disappeared."

Uncle Walt - The Poet Philosopher

CAREFUL TALK.

Of course, we talk about the war—that can't be helped, by the way; for that is what we're living for, to talk of Vital Things. We'll talk until our throats are hoarse, we'll jabber day by day, but let us, in our brave discourse, be careful what we say. Why sit upon the greaser's bench, or stand along the curbs, and roast the Germans or the French, the Austrians or Serbs? The justice of each nation's cause can't be settled by you, so you'd be wiser to shelve your jaws, and show your howdy-do. The feeling now is too intense; why make it doubly deep? 'Twere better far to paint your fence or else deburr your sheep. This combat gives my soul a wrench, and starts the scolding brine; for I have friends among the French, and German friends are mine; and there are Britishers I love, and Russians I admire, and, oh, I hate to see them shove each other in the fire! How I look forward to the day—God grant it soon may come—when all of them will cease to stray, and sound the martial drum. And meanwhile I can do no good by springing foolish talk, so I shall save my pile of wood, and get my corn in sheck.

THE FINE SEASON.

How sweet is the Autumn, that's now at the door! The hot winds, dod rot 'em, will scorch us no more. The schools are in session, with blackboard and switch, the children are thrashed on fractions and Latin, the schoolmaster's railing, the kids work the brain; too long were they fooling at home, raising Cain. No more are they pitchin' their indoor baseball; there's peace in the kitchen, there's calm in the hall. The cornfield is yellow, it glows in the sun; the husbandman's plow is counting his moan. Dame Nature, the tinter, is staining the leaves, and soon we'll have winter, but nobody grieves; of grub we have plenty—our gods let us thank—and eighteen or twenty fat hocks in the larder. How peaceful and tender, the autumn world seems; it has all the splendor of world's seen in dreams. The wearisome worry of summer is over; the hideous hurry is needed no more; there's loafing and languor where there was once a world from Boston to Bangor, from Yankton to York.

THE BOOK REVIEWER.

He views the pile of printed junk, in covers made of cloth or leather, that he must read to earn the plunk that keeps his frame and soul together; and as he views, his spirit sick, his mind grows bluer yet and bluer. "The idiots who, wade in ink!" exclaims the haterick book reviewer. The same ink, the same gorgeous lines, the same hack authors and their brothels! The writers new, who make their bids for fame by imitating others; the melodrama raw and red, the maiden and her vile pursuer. 'Wont someone else be making heads of the plunk, the wretched book-reviewer. The book of words that breaks the heart, with halting lines and doleful pith; the novel, resolutely smart, that treats of idle rich and riches; the Kaufman type of ripe romance, that takes us through the slum and sewer, and makes white slaves of pried aunts—"God saves us!" cries the book reviewer. And there is always 'Op-penheim, whose diplomats and dukes are dismal, and Austin Freeman who in crime is sounding deep, the abyssal; the Tired Freewaker scans the heap for something better, stronger, newer, and scans in vain then goes to sleep—his job has killed the book reviewer.

SEPTEMBER.

September, the smiling, month of delight, entrancing, beguiling, is with us tonight. September, the pleasant, of generous fame, is answering, "Present!" when called is her name. September's the guerdon for all we have borne, she bears the burden that made our hearts mourn. She pays for the grilling we got in July; she says, "I am willing your teardrops to dry; come rest on my bosom, and if you have fears, I'll see that you lose 'em, my own stricken dears!" She pays for the glaring of midsummer suns, the sweating, sweating, the beetles and flies; the pains and the rigors of long August days, the fleas and the chiggers—ah, nobly she pays! Here comes "Presenting" already we've cheered, we're not being distressed, are scorching my beard; her nights come a creeping from some cooler clime, and man in his sleeping makes up for lost time. The meadows are golden, the heavens are blue, the year is unfolding its best.

ings to you. You cease to remember the troubles you've known, since gentle September comes into her own.

SOARING PRICES.

The clock strikes one, the noon hour's done. I must resume my toiling; man date not sleep if he would keep the blooming pot a-boiling. For every hour the price of flour and other grub's advancing; all things scarce to raise the price, the C. of L. enhancing. There's threat of war in Labrador, according to dispatches, 'sbow must pay far more to-day for cheese and parlor matches. There's too much rain in southern Texas, fresh rain and kindred news, for we must blow far more, you know, for overcoats and slickers. The war on Serbs affects such herbs as we are fond of chewing; it takes more cash for succotash and the price of beef and mutton. The stop of hay at Hudson's Bay is poor, so folks are saying, so Hyton tea is costing me just twice what I've been paying. Bright killed the geese in northern Greece; I would not care for them, but that, amaked, I find it raised the price of beef and mutton. This graft seems queer to me, my dear; it makes no odds what changes, on land or sea, on lake or sea, the C. of L. advances.

MEAN WORDS.

It's ill to say unpleasant things about your noisome neighbors; for all your mean and thoughtless things are edged like swords or sabres. The man you speak about will hear your words—'till fraught with malice, and on your dome he'll put an ear, or the schoolmaster's railing, the kids work the brain; too long were they fooling at home, raising Cain. No more are they pitchin' their indoor baseball; there's peace in the kitchen, there's calm in the hall. The cornfield is yellow, it glows in the sun; the husbandman's plow is counting his moan. Dame Nature, the tinter, is staining the leaves, and soon we'll have winter, but nobody grieves; of grub we have plenty—our gods let us thank—and eighteen or twenty fat hocks in the larder. How peaceful and tender, the autumn world seems; it has all the splendor of world's seen in dreams. The wearisome worry of summer is over; the hideous hurry is needed no more; there's loafing and languor where there was once a world from Boston to Bangor, from Yankton to York.

Six months are allowed for creditors to present their claims, and one year for the administratrix to settle said estate from the 22nd day of September, 1914. The Order Clerk with the Oklahoma State and Door Company sends us the following in appreciation of Zensal:

Oklahoma City, Okla., October 25, 1911

The Zensal Co., Oklahoma City.

Dear Sirs: For years I suffered with moist eczema on my limbs. A number of physicians tried to cure me without success, and finally I determined to try the X-Ray treatment for it. It was to my good fortune that I met one of your salesmen, and I decided to give it a trial. It is going to the expense of the X-ray treatment. A fifty-cent jar of Moist Zensal completely cured the eruption—in fact, I used not more than two thirds of a jar. The first application for my neck, arms, and legs, itching and burning in two or three days the skin began to clear, and in ten days' time the eruption had entirely disappeared, and I have not been troubled since. I heartily recommend your Moist Zensal to all eczema sufferers, for it is so marvellous and quick. Yours very truly, Arthur G. Brodie, Order Clerk.

Ask about Dry Zensal and Moist Zensal.

In the palace of hearing '87 he has been plowing about this Chicago street until he has reverted to a state of semi-savagery and has entirely lost his knack at walking on an expensive rug or hardwood floor. His case is indeed an interesting one.

When they were safely outside Victoria's door the other reporter, who was new for an interview, a servant let them in and bade them walk down the hall to Mr. Higginbotham's library. Just as they were entering the main room a high priced oriental rug slithered with Vic Murdock and he fell with a low thud like a German comical party nearly striking the polished floor.

The other reporter without waiting to introduce himself turned to Higginbotham and began a learned discourse on the cubans leading up to Victoria's great fall.

"Here is a young man who at one time showed great promise," he said, "but he has been plowing about this Chicago street until he has reverted to a state of semi-savagery and has entirely lost his knack at walking on an expensive rug or hardwood floor. His case is indeed an interesting one."

And he went on in that vein for some moments while the hearer wondered at how he was entertaining a pair of psycho-pathic refugees.

My name's Murdock. May I ask yours? My name's Dunne—Pete Dunne, replied the other reporter. The name meant little to Victor Murdock, for that was before it had become identified with the Dowley articles.

Years passed, a few months ago Congressman Murdock was crossing the lobby of a New York hotel and he noticed after a long time that he himself had looked out the way a person will, to see who witnessed his fall he found himself gazing into the prosperous looking countenance of Finley Peter Dunne.

Instantly Dunne recognized Victor and inquired sympathetically: "Gracious, man. Haven't you learned to subdue a rug yet?"—Philadelphia Record.

Two Kinds of Love. There are two kinds of love—the beautiful love that finds its reward in the doing of service, and the selfish affection that demands servitude. This last never brings real happiness.

Only a Collection. This was told by a minister who seemed to really enjoy it: A little boy was sitting some of the plates and give that to the dog. So after dinner he picked the little bits of fat and bone and gristle that were left and took them to the dog. When he got to the dog some one heard him say, sadly, "I mean to bring an offering, Fido; but I've only got a collection."

On one occasion when the king and queen of England visited Duncaister together very elaborate preparations were made for their reception. The city was lavishly decorated, and one enterprising tradesman, desiring to display his loyalty, laid the words, "Heaven bless them both" outlined in paper flowers across the front of his shop. Unfortunately he forgot to remove a large business sign that was just above.

Heaven bless them both! Bless them both! Bless them both!

At the time of the Volturno disaster a literary critic for a certain New York newspaper was acting as substitute for a copy reader, who was ill. It fell to him to write a head for the story of the disaster. The story was full of statistics, of course, and he was told to extend them all to a big black line to extend across the page, leaving the newspaper. He thought for some time, then several attempts and finally submitted this: "O Restless Sea! Every body's."

SAME OLD TRICK. With a Barbecue Comment by the Victor Murdock used to be a reporter in Chicago, and one of his first assignments was to go out after a photograph of a man named Higginbotham, who had just been made president of the Chicago Women's Fair.

At the door of the Higginbotham home Victor met another reporter who was new for an interview. A servant let them in and bade them walk down the hall to Mr. Higginbotham's library. Just as they were entering the main room a high priced oriental rug slithered with Vic Murdock and he fell with a low thud like a German comical party nearly striking the polished floor.
