Our Sunday evening services begin Sunday our new church year begins. Purpose to make it the best year of your life.
Do the fifty-two Sundays of the year suggest moments of highest fellowship to you, or days of illness and loneliness?
Lost somewhere between October 1, 1913, and October 1, 1914, several golden Sabbath days, by church members. No reward is offered, for they are lost forever.

The faithfulness of God, during the six years to each of us, should be a strong appeal to every one of us, to pledge our highest faithfulness to him this coming year.
How about it, fellow pilgrims? Does the beginning of the church year find you a little higher up the hill than you were a year ago? Or have you been slipping?
Jesus set his face steadfastly toward Jerusalem. He could not be moved. Going to Jerusalem to him was the supreme test of obedience. His attitude is the only attitude fitting for his followers.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church.
(Rev. F. E. Blessing, Pastor).
Sunday school every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. The subject of the lesson will be "Christ Anointed for Burial," Mark xiv, 1-11.

Regular divine worship every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and in the evening at 8 o'clock. The subject of the morning sermon will be "Excuse Me," Luke xiv, 10-25. One of Christ's most impressive methods of teaching was by parables. The reason Christ's parables were so impressive was because they were based upon something familiar to the listeners. Upon one occasion, Christ went into the house of a ruler of the Pharisees and sat down to eat-bread. While he was eating, he was teaching. One who sat watching with him was moved by his great wisdom and said: "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." Christ, taking advantage of the man's remark, spoke the words of our text, revealing man's indifference to his great opportunity, and how easily he allows the little expression to escape his lips. "Excuse me."
The evening sermon will be the last of the series on the subject of "Life." It will be "Making Good in Life," Philippians iii, 12.

The Truist league will meet at 7 o'clock. Every young person in the church should be present at the young people's meeting. Come, let us enjoy the hour together.

The Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Miss Adda Stambaugh last week, and the afternoon was well spent, being delightful and profitable. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Christ Florb.
At a meeting of the Ladies' Aid society, held September 10, the ladies decided to hold their annual bazaar December 12. Please keep this in mind.

The pastor would like to have the names of all who are intending to enter the catechetical class this year.
A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to worship with us.

The song says "Everybody's Doing It," and if you don't think so, just call at Montgomery's apple car, down at the depot, and see the crowds buying apples by the bushel. Orlaid

MISS STOCKING ON EUROPEAN CONFLICT

Sept. 28, 1914.

Editor Husy, Wayne Herald:
Complying with your request for an article describing the war condition in England as I observed them after September 14, I will try to tell of such things as I feel of general interest to the public and not my personal experiences.

The outward calm of London was almost oppressive after our strenuous experiences in Holland, Belgium and France. Underneath, though, we soon perceived the grim thread of war. At the Tower of London, hundreds of cavalry horses were stabled in the moat. Volunteers were being equipped and drilled within the walls surrounding the grounds of this famous old prison, resting by squads and carrying children around in their arms.

We saw the type of bayonet used in the Boer war, and the newest one manufactured. The latest make has the blade some six inches longer than the old weapon, giving the soldier a greater reach.
I passed the recruiting station opposite Trafalgar Square, where the men from White Chapel district of London report for enlistment. Probably a thousand men from 18 to 23 years of age were eagerly awaiting their opportunity to defend the colors. For the most part, they stood silently facing the statue of Nelson with his empty sleeve, surmounting the immense column in the center of the square, and though they had come from London's notorious slum region, the great many had read Sir Edward Grey's speech before the House of Parliament and were ready to enter the conflict, having no dread of physical hardships. Life had hardened them to that side of the world.

We saw London from the top of a bus several evenings, thus getting into streets we would not otherwise have seen. The little children were marching, counter-marching and executing spies, in a most realistic manner. The spy always stood blindfolded, back against the wall, with folded arms, facing the firing squad, and when the volley was fired, dropped dead with the proper quivering. These grim street waifs, marched, saluted, stood at attention, just as the boys did. They were simply little men, not grown tall.
Every day one encountered the marching troops of England's best. There was no music; just a relentless marching of men who vanished down the street, going one by one where, last of all themselves. As they marched, the people on the sidewalk stopped to see them go by; there was no cheering, just a tense watching for a familiar face, a peering along the line of men who did not even turn their heads, and were "gone." The same thing was repeated daily. Sometimes it was cavalry, sometimes infantry. Always the silence greeted them, just as it had the soldiers of Paris, after the French mobilization was under way. I seemed to me the cost had been incurred and fully realized by everyone, and there was no wish to belittle the task by music.

Edith Stocking.
Every morning at 9:05 Kitchener could be seen entering the admiralty office to move the chess of war. I saw him step out of his auto at the appointed time, gravely, without haste, a true Briton, looking the part he is playing, and I wondered just what his day's work would be that day.
When we left London, we found conditions much the same elsewhere, no excitement, just a readiness to face the issue. Troops were to be seen in the fields, training as we rode from town to town. These were to be ordered to the front in six months, we were told.

At Oxford, two of the colleges were fully fitted up for hospitals, containing four hundred beds, with two hundred Red Cross nurses.
Every undergraduate of Oxford who serves in the war is to have his time of service deducted from the length of time he had yet to study to graduate.
We found provision made for the care of the wounded in almost every town we visited. This has been done at the request of Queen Mary who has asked that all the sick and wounded shall be taken care of as near their own homes as possible. The physicians in many towns are giving lessons in "first aid" to anyone wishing to learn, so there may be sufficient help in ordinary cases should there be too few nurses. The last home in which we stayed in Keswick, England, had three rooms equipped to take care of sick soldiers.

In the schoolhouses in country places, the women were sewing, making winter garments for soldiers. I went into a schoolhouse near Northampton, and there everyone was busily stitching away on red flannel. The little girls were trading around knitting grey socks, instead of knitting as they do here, in this peaceful town.
Our train to Glasgow, August 28, was delayed hours to permit the passage of fifty-train loads of coal for ships. No one knew what ships, or for what purpose, but we were sidetracked wherever necessary to permit the passing of the trains. We did not know until we reached Scotland our ship would sail the 29th of August, as we were unable to obtain information of the sailings. I went to the Donaldson office in London. We simply went to Glasgow in the hope that luck would be with us. It is needless to say, we were relieved when we learned it sailed at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, August 29. We "sailed" there, as the papers say, that is when the electric lights are turned on, the curtains are drawn over the portholes. The vessel had one light fore and aft. The wireless apparatus was permitted to be used only in time of danger. Several large vessels, fitted close at hand, and were signalled by the Morse flash system, but we received no whisper of information, though the wireless telegrapher sat at our table. We asked the names of the vessels, as even that was withheld.
The homeward trip was not pleasant, the ship Cassandra being lightly laden with Scotch whiskey and with an extra amount of water for ballast. She returned to England in three days, laden with soldiers and horses. We landed at Montreal the evening of September 8, and even the customs officers—of whom I stand in a wholesome awe—looked good to me.

When I write from London, I prophesied the great battle would be fought and the issue known before my letter reached Wayne. I have no prophesy to make now, but hope the end is near, though I have no reason to believe it is.
Americans have more to be thankful for than they will ever realize. Such a war as Europe is now engaged in cannot overtake our country, and peace is ours.
Sincerely,
Edith Stocking.

Six Cold Months Ahead

Have you been thinking of the bitter cold days that are swiftly coming—days that will cramp your family into a few drafty, damp, cold rooms—unless you install a Favorite Base Burner.

(The Favorite will fill every nook and corner of your home with plenty of clean, fresh, healthful heat.)

Even in blizzard weather the Favorite keeps upstairs and down evenly warm, day and night. And it saves from $10 to $20 a winter on fuel bills alone.

There are many feet of flues on the Favorite—all set out from the stove and separated from each other. Every bit of heat from the fire must pass thru them and be radiated into the rooms. None ever passes up the chimney.

This is but one of the many exclusive features of the Favorite that insure home comfort and fuel economy. Let us tell you about the others. It is not too early to plan to protect your family against the ills that result from badly heated rooms.

WOMAN OF NATIONAL REPUTATION SPEAKS

Mrs. Reta Childre Dorr addressed an audience at the Methodist church Sunday evening, speaking of the various phases of industrial slavery, and child labor. Mrs. Dorr is a woman of national reputation and wide experience, having been a newspaper reporter and magazine writer in New York City and other large centers of population in the east. She investigated conditions in mills and factories first-hand, becoming herself a worker and living in the crowded tenements of the East Side in New York. She showed the necessity for the child labor. The average income of the adult male wage earner is less than $600 a year, and this is insufficient for the support of a large family. The children are forced to seek employment as soon as they reach the age at which the law allows them to work. The law does not concern itself about the children who are not employed in factories, so there are thousands of children from four to 12 years, working as long as twelve and fourteen hours a day in the tenement sweat shops.

A large percentage of the children who are too young to work and who are not employed in the street, are growing up "delinquent." What is done with the delinquent children? They are sent to jails, penitentiaries, reformatories, and sent to institutions for feeble-minded.

Mrs. Dorr spoke of the great work being done by the juvenile court. She visited and observed the workings of juvenile courts in most of the states of the union. Before the time of these courts, the youthful offenders were confined in the same jails with the adult criminals, and the boy who was in for his first offense, and who probably had no conception of the crime he had committed, came out of jail a criminal manufactured by law. Association with the confirmed criminal is sure to result in contamination of the youth. In this field the juvenile court is doing a great work.

Conflict between labor and capital is one of the great problems now before the student of social conditions. Capital receives the profit, and labor produces it. There has yet a solution, but laws regulating the hours of labor, a minimum wage, and laws providing for shorter hours for women and children are measures that will lessen suffering and hardship endured by industrial slaves. Mrs. Dorr urged that in order to secure legislation of this character in every part of the United States, the women be given the vote.

Mrs. Dorr is a pleasing speaker, and her actual experiences among the industrial workers give force and weight to her arguments.

What Would You Do? There are many times when one man questions another's actions and motives. Men act differently under different circumstances. The question is what would you do right now if you had a severe cold? Could you do better than to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended by people who have used it for years and know its value. Mrs. O. E. Sargent, Peru, Ind., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold, and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by all dealers.—Ad.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

PUNCTUALITY.

The punctual man is a bird; he always is true to his word; he knows that the skate who is ten minutes late is trifling and vain and absurd. He says, "I'll be with you at four"; though torrents may ruthlessly pour down upon him when the clock strikes the hour he will knock with his punctual fist at your door. And you say, "He is surely a trumper! I haven't much use for a chump who is evermore late, making other people wait for him, and then get in the dump." The punctual man is a peech; he sticks to his dates like a leech; it's a pity, alas, that he hasn't a class of beneheaded sturgeons to teach. He's welcome wherever he wanders; the country is full of his friends; he goes by the watch and he never makes a botch of his time, so he never offends. If he says he'll get married at nine, you can bet he'll be standing in line, with his beautiful bride, and the knot will be tied ere the clock has done making the sign. If he says he'll have cashed in at five, at that hour he will not be alive; you can order his shroud and assemble a crowd, clear out to the boneyard to drive. The punctual man is a jay. The biggest success that I know! He is grand and sublime, he is always on time, not late by ten minutes or so.

MISERERE.

Now this mighty war is over, and upon fair Zenda's shore the invader steps no more, we shall sing! Now the war dogs hide their teeth and the sword has found its sheath, we shall place a gorgeous wreath on our king. He has laid all Graustark low, he has stretched the laughing foe, but he doesn't seem to know why he fought; he is trying to recall what it was that stirred his gall, why his soldiers, heroes all, have been shot. Ah, it is a frightful strain on the monarch's weary brain, and he sits in grievous pain, thinking hard; what had Graustark done to me that I seized my snickersnee? Hung her washing on the tree in my yard? Now so many men are dead, and the foe is ragged red, I must harbor in my head some excuse! Now the victory is won, I must think what she had done that I made the carnage run like the sluice! While the monarch thinks and thinks, with a brain that's full of kinks, all his strikers' counter sinks in despair; for the fields are white with bones, orphan's cries and widows' moans and the old men's sobbing groans fill the air. On the farm the starving cow lies the empty manger now, and no more the shining plow cleaves the sod; for the men who tilled the fields and brought home the golden yields now have journeyed on their shields to their God.

HUNTING.

I bought a fine, new-fangled gun, and said, "I'll shoot about a ton of rabbits, owls, and jays; with cartridges and kindred goods I'll roam the prairies and the woods, and thus spend pleasant days. It's long since I have tasted game; domestic meats are all the same, they're tasteless, stale and flat; so I shall wander far and near, and shoot a groundhog or a deer, a chipmunk or a coon. So off I strode, and could feel within my breast the Nimrod's zeal. I had no catfish ear; but everywhere I went, I found on posts, or sticking in the ground, this sign: "No Hunting Here." I walked about a thousand miles, and saw on houses, trees and stiles, the same dog-eaten sign; and farmers, when they saw me, would say, "Keep off my land, by gum, or you will pay a fine." Ah, it would be pleasant to hunt, and do the joyous Nimrod's stunts, far from the maddening crowd, but for that sign which ruins bliss, and is about as bad as this: "No Trespassing Allowed." It is three no place where one can take his nice new gun and shoot a snake, a tree-toad or a fly, or any other birds or signs which say, "These grounds are private—keep away." I pause for a reply.

THE WEATHER.

The weather still is free to all; the lordly titan in his hat is tiller of the ground; the queenly dame has all she wants, and in the washerwoman's haunts, there's weather by the pound. No greedy dealer can remark, "Alas, the prospect's pretty dark, with war in foreign states; our native weather won't suffice, and so we've had to raise the price three bucks per dozen crates." No trusts, to heap coin in their tills, can buy up smaller weather mills; and corner the supply; no Wall Street grates with its money can clinch the weather unawares, and send the price sky high. We're paying more for cheese and bread, for meat and milk, and melted lead, for all the things we wear; for coffins, codlins, corn and cakes, for raisins, rinktums, rags and rags, for bear grease for our hair. We're paying more for all we use, for shaves, for sugar and shampoos, for rough-on-rats and rice; but still the good old weather's free. Dame Nature's gift to you and me—they cannot raise the price! What though all other boons may fail? What though we all may go to jail, as bankrupts, shorn of scads. No tyrant hand can from us wrest the blessing that we love the best—the weather of our days!

KEEP SMILING.

Keep smiling, 'tis better than building a fame as kicker or fretter who's sore in the game. There's no sense in winning a grand renown; far better go grinning all day through the town; from office to tavern as gaily you chase, display a glad cavern dividing your face; all day, as you teeter from courthouse to jail, and sweeter and sweeter, and utter no wail; and as you're ascending your wearisome stair, your smile should be lending its warmth to the air. Your troubles are frightful! Well, wearing a frown won't make the lightning, or batter them down. Old Trouble keeps piling its thorns on my head, but still I keep smiling, and will till I'm dead; when I'm in my casket, all finished my trip, I'll smile like a snicker of hickory chips. Keep smiling, 'tis worth all the long year, than being a miser with chirrups and cheer. Why is the world dingy, and dismal, and gray? Because we are stingy with our graces gay. We groan and we grumble; we whine and we whetse, and don't take a tumble to face such as these. It's every man's duty to chuckle and grin, and thus fill with beauty the world we are in.

PAINTED FACES.

Kind Nature gave my cousin Mary a face that's a delight, with lips as red as any cherry, and brow of snowy white. Her cheeks resemble cream and roses—or so one poet wrote, when Mary's face and queenly posses had robbed him of his goat. She should be proud of her complexion, so radiant and rich, and yet she keep a big collection of powders, paints and sich. And when she's fixed up for a killing, some Lochmuir to chase, blind-men might see that she's been spilling such stuff upon her face. "Ah, Cousin Mary, you are silly," quite frequently I scold: "why should you try to paint a lily or gild the perfect gold? Just leave your face as nature made it, and you'll be slick as cream, but all this dope you use will fade it, and make you look a scream. When you have reached the age of thirty, or maybe, thirty-three, your face will wrinkle be and dirty, a frightful thing to see." But what the use? Gen. Milton makes men are painting every day; they laugh to scorn our mid upbraids and go their foolish way.

Toned-Up Whole System.

"Chamberlain's Tablets have done more for me than I ever dared hope for," writes Mrs. Esther Mae Baker, Spencerport, N. Y. "I used several bottles of these tablets a few months ago. They not only cured me of bilious attacks, sick headaches and that awful feeling not to meet up with my whole system." For sale by all dealers.—Ad.

TERRY COMING AGAIN.

Nearly everybody has seen Uncle Tom's Cabin, or at least a boiled-down version that was supposed to be a dramatization of America's greatest drama, but on Thursday, October 8, Terry's Uncle Tom's Cabin company will produce the original, L. Aiken version, which is seldom used by traveling companies as it requires too many people, and too much scenery for the average company. Terry carries a big company, and for twenty-five years his motto has been "A little better than the rest." This year, he has a good strong company, and one that will never be forgotten. In the big tent on Thursday, October 8.

A Chance of a Life Time and The Opportunity of This Age

For any Man, Father and Son, or Sons, or Two Brothers, to get a fine 400 acre farm and home, all in one body, almost level. just sloping enough for good drainage, close to Omaha and South Omaha, now second largest live stock and grain market in the United States.

DESCRIPTION

There is a very good eight- or nine-room house, good solid stone foundation from bottom of cellar clear up to the house, making a good cellar under the house.

BARN 64 by 80, with capacity for a hundred tons of hay, which is arranged for a hundred head of stock cattle in the barracks on end, thirty-eight stanchions for cows on side, and twenty-six stalls for horses on the other side; may be fed by simply pushing the hay into the racks from this great mow; thus, during the real cold winter months the animal heat from all this stock keeps this barn as warm as many houses heated by a furnace, which means great saving in feed and labor.

Large Convenient Silo

There is an immense silo right at the barn door in the basement of which there is a capacity of from eight to ten tons of bran and shorts for your cows and calves.

A good double corn crib 28 by 32, with large driveway for machinery, hoghouse 12 by 60, henhouse 12 by 30, corn crib 34 by 52 double, and all outbuildings necessary.

Cultivation and Market Facilities

180 acres in cultivation, 65 acres finest hay land in the world, 160 acres in pasture, which has been feeding over one hundred head of cattle, and fifty-three head of mules and horses since early spring, and much of it is now knee high in grass; blue grass, white and red clover with a good sprinkling of timothy. What does it mean to you, Mr. Farmer and Stockman, to be located so close to South Omaha with such a pasture and ever living spring water, where your commission man can call you on the phone, tell you of that good bunch of thin cheap stuff that you can buy from time to time, and within an hour and a half can unload them within a mile and a quarter of your own home and fine pasture, returning them to the yards within sixty days and almost doubling your money?

There is a little spring branch which seldom freezes in the winter, and is always cool and fresh in the summer, never becomes rolled enough to hurt, and is not miry.

The crops will now, as they have in the past, speak for this rich valley soil much louder than all we could say with printers' ink.

Don't wait. Write or Phone today, but better still, get on the train and come and look it over. Remember if not true to our description, we pay your expenses.

Prices and Terms

While we feel that this farm would be cheap at $160 per acre, we are offering it at $126 per acre, half cash and balance on any reasonable terms; would consider good 80 or 120 of equal value in exchange.

If interested at all, drop everything at once and come and investigate this fine valley farm while opportunity knocks at your door.

No better corn, winter wheat, alfalfa, and clover land can be found anywhere.

Last Tuesday night, while the telegraphic reports of the Ohio election were being received at the post office, certain individuals, viz: N. S. Porter, T. J. Welty, and Mr. Heald, were sitting on a rickety table standing near one of the front windows.

They sat in a row, Mr. Welty, (democrat) in the middle, and Messrs. Porter and Heald (republicans) on the right and left. Toward midnight a dispatch was received that Ohio had gone republican by 24,000 majority.

Mr. Heald, in his great joy, suddenly jumped off the table, which thus becoming unpropably ballasted, tipped over backwards and with the force of an old Queen Ann's arm-discharged Messrs. Porter and Welty through the window taking sash and glass with themselves sprawling on the sidewalk somewhat bruised and startled, but otherwise not hurt.

This was the only serious incident of the Ohio election which occurred in this town that night.

EXTRACTS FROM THE HERALD EXCHANGES

Improving Farm. Pioneer Leader: Henry Hanson of Wayne has been here during the past week improving his farm west of Pierce by erecting new buildings, painting and otherwise repairing the buildings. The place is farmed by Mr. Roberts.

Value of Good Faith. Aurora Republican: Commercial club workers cannot be blamed for looking with suspicion upon advice proffered by individuals who have withdrawn their support from the organization and declared that they will have nothing to do with any project which it endeavors to promote. Suggestions for civic improvement are always welcome, but they should at least bear the stamp of good faith if they expect to command respect from men who are doing their best to build up the community.

Escorted to Winner. Winner Chronicle: A jolly party of young people came down from Wayne across country last Tuesday night to escort Mr. D. H. Cunningham and his bride to this city, where they took the afternoon train for Omaha and the west. The attendants were well supplied with rice, and distributed dodgers containing a set of the hedgehog and a description of him to advise his fellow-travelers on the train that he had just been married and to insure his identification.

Remembers Game. Norfolk Daily News: Sam Crawford, the star of the Detroit baseball club, remembers the time when the Norfolk team trounced the West Point team 24 to 0 on the Wayne grounds in a game in which he pitched for West Point. He says, however, that it would be a good game to forget.

L. E. Seymour, a telephone company employe, sent a clipping of a story in the News regarding the game as described by Empire Wood, who refereed the last of the state league series. "Your clipping received the other day in Chicago," writes Crawford. "I will say that as far as I can remember, it is correct. That is going back some, and until I saw the clipping, I had forgotten that I was in such a game. But after reading the clipping, which refreshes my memory, I can remember that such a game was played. It is a good one to forget, though, don't you think?"

How to Meet Competition. Harrington Herald: A woman writes to the Herald this week on the subject of advertising. Editors who advocate a liberal advertising policy on the part of business men might be accused of bias, but the editors of the women who read the newspapers and do the buying must be taken at his par value. They are the ones who are able to estimate correctly the practical results of advertising, and therefore, what they think and say on the subject is of the greatest importance. It is one of the inexplicable mysteries that the local merchant will often allow the mail order house to get away with the business and not raise a finger to stop it. The merchant is growing and reaching out more and more each year, and yet the local merchant appears often to be unconcerned about it. When he wakes up to the situation, and fights the mail order house with his own weapons, viz., advertising, then—and then only, will he achieve the desired result.

No Mighty Poem. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: An eastern editor is worried because his paper has this far given us no mighty poem. Fact is there is mighty life inspiration in this sort of a conflict for anything that looks like poetry. In the first place, nobody can find a reasonable excuse for such a mixup, or see in the distance the remotest prospect of ultimate good to any of the participants. It seems to be a veritable carnival of killing, the result of what might be termed a condition of "readiness to kill." How are you going to write a song when the only theme is a mighty wrong?

And what shall we say of a wicked war That was started with nothing to battle for? They have bulldozed their battlements—straw and high. They have molded their bullets—the Lord knows why. They have called in "reservists" from near and far. And have set them to fighting—so there you are. These are moved by the merciless tides of fate. And there's nothing to do but to pray and wait. There is nothing for poets to write or say When the rulers go crazy and act that way.

New Kind of Banking. Fremont Tribune: We have a new departure in finance when the secretary of the treasury publicly threatens the banks of the country for withholding too large a reserve.

Always, heretofore, it has been esteemed a mark of prudence for a bank to keep on hand a large sum of money to meet its calls. It has always been regarded as wise to have money on hand to meet emergencies. But now, Secretary McAdoo is of the opinion that this can be overdone, and he lectures the bankers of the country against it. It may well be surmised, and as indignantly charged, that Secretary McAdoo is doing this for political effect. He is anxious, just now, when the people are weighing the national administration in the balance to determine whether a democratic majority should be returned to congress, that there should be as little money stringency as possible. There is such a near panic that the public is doubtful, to say the least, whether the administration should be given a vote of confidence. The introduction of the old familiar democratic stamp tax to keep the wheels turning, reminds us again that something is wrong. Secretary McAdoo would compel the banks to cut the strings and loosen up. What is ordinarily "to give a man an evil, because his party needs to have an easier money market. The people have always had greater confidence in the bank that has the largest reserve for a rainy day. That is the kind they put their money in. That is the kind they have been taught—is the most reliable. It is that feature of their published statements bankers have always boasted about. But it seems an unwise thing when the fate of the democratic party is involved. The national secretary of the treasury is going to compel a more favorable "psychological" condition.

It would be a grand idea for all apple shippers to Wayne to donate a box of apples for the children's Christmas tree, and if Montgomery is here at the time, he will surely make the young folks happy.

the last Will and Testament of said Albert E. Van Camp, deceased, and that the execution of said instrument may be committed and that the administration of said estate may be assigned to said executor.

COLUMN ADVOCATING WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE

(Under Auspices Local Committee). Union Signal: At the recent Kansas primaries in the words of the Topeka Daily Capital. "The women cast an unusual vote. In some precincts, more women than men voted. Cottonwood Falls reported that in its precincts near there, most of the election officials were women. Many of the farmers stayed at home at work in the fields, while the women went to the polls. Probably forty per cent of the total vote was cast by the new voters." Union Signal: Of the campaign in Nebraska, Omar Garwood, secretary of the National Men's League, who has been in the state for several weeks, says: "I have campaigned in several states for the cause, but have never before met with such encouraging conditions as I have found in Nebraska. Many of the men say the women don't need to make any demonstrations or sacrifices, and that they are going to give them the ballot as a matter of simple justice." Union Signal: Chipewa Indians of the Bad River tribe, in the largest council of years, held recently at Ashland, Wis., voted unanimously in favor of woman suffrage. "No man would oppose the right of our women to vote," William O'Brien, one of the Indians, is reported to have said. "The hardest part of the home falls on them. They also clear our land and build our fires. They own property too, and know how to vote for the real welfare of our people than we the men."

Here Is Good News for Stomach Victims

Some very remarkable results are being obtained by treating stomach, liver and intestinal troubles with pure vegetable oils, which exert a cleansing, soothing and purifying action upon the lower bowels, removing the obstructions of poisonous fecal matter and gases and preventing their absorption by the blood. This done, the food is allowed free passage and stomach troubles quickly disappear. George H. Mayr, for twenty years a leading Chicago druggist, cured himself and many of his friends of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles of years standing by this treatment, and so successful was the remedy he decided to place it since being placed in the hands of druggists all over the country, who have sold thousands of bottles. Though absolutely harmless, the effect of the medicine is sufficient to convince even the most skeptical of effectiveness, and within 24 hours the sufferer feels the relief. Mrs. Mary's Witness: "I was cured by this oil, and I can't say enough for it." FIEBER'S PHARMACY And Druggists Everywhere.

and again. I feared I would be drawn into the military service, and I was forced to secure emergency papers for my mother. Twice, before the war, I was arrested as an English spy in Switzerland and Italy. Twice after the war was declared, my English cut clothes brought suspicion, and I was again arrested twice in Geneva.

Not one Nebraskan was on the boat with Mr. Voget. He said most of the passengers were from eastern states, and many of them had waited for weeks for passage. Many were musicians and artists who had been in Europe for years. About thirty of these were turned back at this island because they were not American citizens. It was common rumor in Amsterdam when Mr. Voget departed, that England would declare war on the Netherlands because the English believe the Netherlands are favoring the Germans.

Mr. Voget had left before the anti-Mrs. Emil-Moeller, reaching the United States through Holland ports. He says that the Holland steamship line, probably the only one open at Amsterdam now for American refugees, had reported that their last boat would leave for America on September 28. Common rumor had it that the boat leaving on September 19 would be the last and thousands of refugees, mostly English, were waiting for passage.

"It is impossible to explain the conditions which now exist in Europe," said Mr. Voget, "harsh measures were taken against spies immediately after the armistice was declared. English spies were shot on all hands and ordinary policemen shot men who did not step at the first command to halt. When I was arrested in Switzerland, mobilization activities were going on and I was treated harshly. I was usually taken to the police stations, where I was pushed from one officer to another. Little courtesy was shown any person suspected of being a spy. I had little trouble, however, in establishing my innocence in these cases. I succeeded in giving twelve concerts in Europe before the war broke out when the concerts were cancelled. All of the concerts, however, were successful, and the American programs were much appreciated in Germany. My friends, Mr. Erik Leson, a violinist of New York City, and his wife were arrested upon leaving Germany. They carried musical notes and sandwiches in violin cases. The officials believed the notes were spy lists, and Mr. and Mrs. Girkson were locked up and told they were going to be shot as spies. Their identity, however, was soon established, and they received courteous treatment after their arrest."

With much interesting literature, photographs, and old violins, Mr. Voget brought back five hundred feet of motion picture films showing the prisons around Koenigsbruck with a large number of captured and wounded Russian and French prisoners. Since August 1, last, Mr. Voget has traveled all over Germany and Austria. He visited Budapest, Vienna, parts of the country near Liege and got as close to the fighting lines as the authorities would permit. He declares he has studied the war since his musical concert contracts were called off, and he finds that Germans and Austrians lay the blame for the war on England. "I watched the fighting and sections of the German and Austrian people immediately after I landed at Hamburg on the President Grant on June 30. Extras were out, telling of the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand and his consort. It was then that I began to watch the movements which every hour tended toward war."

Mr. Voget made the following statement which he declares is his version of the cause of the trouble in Europe. "The assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria brought forth the greatest and saddest war the world has ever known. The German feeling is that Ferdinand was a great man and would have made Austria as good as an emperor as Emperor William of Germany. The Germans say they have proof that the assassination of Ferdinand was planned in full knowledge of Servians. The Germans knew that when Austria declared war on Servia, it meant war for Germany. After Austria declared war, German bill boards were covered with bulletins and the excitement was higher than it is at the present time. The news came as a clap of thunder from the east by an enemy as surprised agencies seemed as surprised as the German emperor because of the suddenness of the trouble. "The Germans say that up to July 31, the emperor had tried his utmost to avert war. They say he felt proud of the fact that his people have not known war in forty-four years. On the night of July 31, the emperor appeared on a balcony of the palace at Berlin and said that he advised Austria to think the matter over well before acting. He said that he was praying to God for peace. Nevertheless, he expressed the belief that he had done his utmost to come to an understanding with the Russian czar for peace, but he feared that this was unobtainable. War was declared the next day, and the telegrams between the German emperor and Russian czar were made public. The contents of these telegrams, a copy of which I have, seemed to give us tourists much satisfaction. "Then the mobilization started. It was done with great speed. In twenty-four hours thousands upon thousands of uniformed masses had gathered. I watched them marching from the depots to the mobilization quarters like veteran soldiers. Three days after England declared war, a gigantic army was mobilized at Dresden. It caused inconvenience to us Americans in Dresden. The evacuated Germans at first found it difficult to get an American from an Englishman and the latter had been ordered to leave the city. "It seems strange, but Germans claim to have facts which they say show that the German mobilization in its progress that Germany had violated Belgium's neutrality by entering that country. Before the invasion started, I discovered, personally, that practically all British soldiers had left Belgium. "The Germans seem very liberal with their war news. All movements of troops are bulletined openly within German borders, but it is impossible to send anything to the outside world. Germany seems to get more information from all other nations from French and English newspapers than the German spies can supply them. The actual plans in Germany are not given out. German troops destined for the south are first sent away by a motorized route to confuse spies. So careful are the Germans of their plans that even the officers do not know where they are going until they arrive at their destination."

Otto A. Voget who was robbed by two confidence men shortly before he sailed from Hoboken, N. J., on June 17, last, will get all his money back. The man who robbed him is "going straight" in New York, and the traveler's checks are being held for Mr. Voget by the New York City police department.

Voget says he did not know the men were following him and says he never saw them. He carried $600 in German, $250 of which he carried in his trousers pockets and $450 in his inside coat pocket. He presumes that one of the men crowded into him while he was in a New York department store, and succeeded in taking out the money containing the "losing amount." He did not discover his loss until the boat was about to sail. He rushed to the police department and notified the officers. His other money was safe, and the funds he had telegraphed for reached him in time to get him through Europe without any embarrassment.
