The Story of "Bell Monopoly"

Every dot on the map shows where there is a telephone exchange. Three-fourths of them are exchanges of independent companies, and one-fourth Bell exchanges.

The pyramids tell the story. To be exact, only 23.5 per cent of all the telephone exchanges in the United States are Bell-owned. The great ma-majority are owned by independent companies, but connected with the Bell System.

In comparatively few places—in only 9.2 per cent of the towns, are there two telephone companies.

There are only 10.6 per cent of all exchanges in the country which do not have Bell connections.

More than 8,000 independent companies connect with the Bell System. Our aim is universal service—not universal ownership. Bell lines reach more than 70,000 places, or 12,000 more than have postoffices.

Recognized Advantages

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most medicines in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough but loosens and relieves it. It aids expectation and opens the secretions which enable the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.—Ad.

For any itching of the skin, for skin rashes, chaps, pimples, etc., try Dean's Ointment. 50 cents at all drug stores.—Ad.

How to Prevent Bilious Attacks

Coming events cast their shadows before. This is especially true of bilious attacks. Your appetite will fail, you will feel dull and languid. If you are subject to bilious attacks, take three of Chamberlain's Tablets as soon as these symptoms appear, and the attack may be ward off. For sale by all dealers.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

NOT WORTH WHILE

The night of death will soon descend; a few short years, and then the end and perfect rest is ours; forgotten by the busy throng, we'll sleep while seasons bring fresh beauty to the grass and flowers. Our motto in this world is briefness; why getting into care and grief, why have a troubled mind? And what's the use of getting mad, and making folks around us sad, by saying words unkind? Why not admire the best and most, why not be content and serene, from spite and envy free? Why not be happy while we may, and make our little earthly stay a joyous jubilee? We're here for such a little while, and then we go and leave the job for which we strive and strain; worn out and broken by the grind, we go and leave our words behind, such efforts all in vain. We break our hearts and fret our souls, acquiring large and useless rolls of coins and kind things, and when we reach St. Peter's Town, they will not buy a sheet-iron crown, or cast off pair of wings. Why scheme and sweat and toil and save? The money will not buy a grave much better than the one in which the village pauper lies; in this brief life that man is wise who has his share of fun.

HOMELESS

When the wind blows shrill with a deadly chill, and we sit by the cheerful blaze, do we ever think of the homeless, shivering, his weary ways? The daylight's gone and we're sad and yawning, and comfort is all around; do we care a whoop for the dismal troop adrift on the frozen ground? You eat and drink and count your chink as you sit in your easy chair; and you've grown hog-fat and baneath you hat there's hardly a sign of care. Do you ever pause, as you ply your jaws, deploring the oyster stew, to leave a sign for the waifs who lie out doors all the long night through? It was good of Fate that she paid the freight and planned you here at ease, while the other lads, who are shy of roads, must sit in the park and freeze. But she may repent ere your days are spent, and juggle things all around, and the bo may sleep on your mattress deep, and you on the frozen ground!

HELPING HANDS

Good friends may help you at the start, and head you for success and fame, but on your own undaunted heart you must depend to win the game. I often think that helping hands are prone to injure more than aid; when they're withdrawn, the helped one stands undecided and afraid. He's learned on others to rely, his courage leaks away, effusions; and he who started out for pie, is satisfied to gather prunes. Not all unLUCKY is the youth who says, "I have no friend to help; I'll have to hoe my row in sooth, with none to aid me when I yelp. My comforters, like those of Job, will jar me more than they will bless; so I must show this cheap old globe what sort of mettle I possess." So he at once gets down to tacks and wheels whatever tool it is, the pen, the bucksaw or the ax, as though he meant to make things whiz. And, having learned to make his way, without the help of any man, he gains success, while 'tother jay we rided, is an also ran.

SUFFERING AND SUNSHINE

I find it hard to sing and dance when up and down my jaws there prance those jumping aches which render the nerves, and spoil the temper with their curves. And yet the other plan won't do; I've walked the floor the long night through; I've cursed a blue and blooming streak, white holding hot cloths to my cheek; I've used the language of despair, I've howled and yowled and pawed the air, and kept the neighborhood awake, and none of that relieved the ache. So why not smile and dance and sing? There's nothing in the other thing; when once those aches begin, I'll grind my joints and push a grin three times around my face and back, and hold it there till jawbones crack. Then I'll folk with "How brave he is! He beats that Spartan youth, gee whiz!" But when I yell, those people say, "He ought to take his face away; he keeps the neighborhood on thorns because his blamed old teeth have corns; he sneers our dust and spoils our nights; with no respect for human rights!" The man who bravely bears his ill, and smiles, while swallowing his pills, gets admiration without end; while he who groans can't find a friend.

The Mystery of the Pelican

A Story of the Sea During Wartime.

By F. A. MITCHEL

On the 1st of October, 1914, the ship Julia Brown sailed from New York for Genoa, Italy. She was an English boat, owned by Americans and converted after the great European war broke out to a United States vessel. She carried a cargo of copper. Whether it was intended for Italy or was to be forwarded to a country engaged in war I never knew, but I did know that copper was in great demand at that time.

I never knew that, although we were sailing under the stars and stripes, our captain was constantly on the lookout for war vessels, though I had not seen whether at that time copper had become so contraband of war.

We steered a course south of that usually taken by ships bound for the Mediterranean in order to take as little risk as possible. There are few vessels to be met with in that part of the world's waters, and we did not speak a ship till we were in longitude 32 degrees 30 minutes west, latitude 28 degrees 20 minutes north, and then we spoke a vessel we came upon because she had been abandoned.

She was a small steamer of about 500 tons. Our captain, after satisfying himself that he would not be obliged to make port as a prize, I signaled the captain, telling him what I had found, and he came aboard to have a look at the ship and cargo himself.

We concluded, that the vessel had sighted a man of war and that the crew, expecting capture, had concluded to get away as best they could.

We concluded, that the vessel had sighted a man of war and that the crew, expecting capture, had concluded to get away as best they could. Several ways by which they might have escaped—was in a fog or by boarding a faster vessel than the pursuer. The captain decided to try to get to sea.

The captain concluded to try to get to sea as best they could. He could be taken to Europe her cargo would be very valuable, but of course there was danger of capture by war vessels if they were taken to sea.

One unexpected discovery was made when we were within a few miles of the steamer. We found in a storeroom we supposed to have been intended for the captain's box that in the room I might find something that would throw light on the case. I made a careful search.

...six knots more than I, since she drew up on me rapidly. It did not matter much what her nationality, for if she caught us she would take our cargo. If she were a neutral and we could prove ourselves neutral we would not be liable to seizure, but unfortunately for us we had no papers at all.

It was about 5 o'clock in the evening when we discovered the cruiser, and by the time it fell dark she had approached within five or six miles of us. I ordered every light put out, but she brought a searchlight to bear on us and immediately after our gun after us. That is a friendly gun, and she turned a searchlight on us that not even a searchlight could penetrate. The cruiser lost us and did not find us again.

"The next day one of the crew came to me and reported that the man was in great fear that the ship was being hunted. Means had been heard. I sent for the man who had heard them and ordered him to take me to the part of the ship from whence they seemed to have emanated. He led me to a lower deck, where there were a few stowaways. I opened several of them, but found nothing. Then suddenly a sound of some one crying came from one of the cabins. I opened two doors before I located the sound. Then trying a third, I found it locked.

I knocked, but my doing so only seemed to increase the crying within. "The stowaways," I said, "and wish to serve you."

"Then why have you locked me in here?" I asked. "Without food or drink?"

"The voice was that of a woman. I told her that if she would open the door I would explain the matter to her of which she might be ignorant. She replied that she could not open the door, for she had not the key. Whereupon I decided that if she could not open it I would.

"Look out!" I cried. "I'm going to break down the door." Then, drawing back, I was met by a woman, and a few men.

Inside was a girl about nineteen years old. She was dressed in her nightgown, and she was holding the opening door. Crouching back, she was evidently uncertain whether we were friends or coming to do her harm. She was very pale and weak, and I saw at once that she was starving. Before questioning her I sent for food, which I gave her sparingly. Then I carried her up to the storeroom where I had found her men's clothing.

"She told me that this had been her room—she had been taken from it by several members of the crew to the one in which I had found her.

As soon as the girl was able to talk, fully expecting that the mystery of the Pelican was about to be solved, I asked for her story. I was doomed to disappointment. She knew—very little more than I did. Her father was had been master of the Pelican. He had sailed from a small port in the States. He had told his daughter before a trip with him, but nothing more. One morning when she had tried to leave her storeroom she found the door locked. She had been trying to get to sea, but she would not have left her room to try.

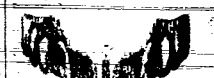

I spent whatever time I could spare in trying to comfort Helen Bradford, and since only a few days ago she had been in love without knowing it, I thought she would be glad to hear of the fact that we could do about a knot more than she.

C. K. Rash, who killed his wife and three children January 27, 1897, said when he was confined in the city jail, was removed to the penitentiary at Lincoln on account of a rumor of lynching. In Omaha Rash made a statement to a Bee reporter. In part he said: "I must have been losing my mind. I had heard of sit-ting-church-and-I was called upon to do it. I was at a hay stack on a hill near the house and I had a vision. There was going to be a battle and the house was filled with my enemies. The next night I went to church again. I prayed and another man prayed and the preacher, also. After the service I saw a warning stone belonging to the preacher. I put it in my buggy and went home. Upon arriving at the house I told my wife she must die, that God had ordered it. Then I hit her with the stone and it broke in two. I secured the pieces and hit her again and again. Having killed my wife I must kill the rest of them as it seemed they were all a part of the enemy I was to overcome. Then I killed the children with the same stone." The Bee says the prisoner showed no feeling indicating that the horror of his crime troubled him. He was calm in his conversation and actions and dismissed the tragedy as if it were an ordinary transaction of every day life.

They all demand it. Wayne, Like Every City and Town in the Union, Receives It.

People with kidney-ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought lasting relief to thousands. Here is Wayne evidence of their merit.

Mrs. Henry Hansen, Wayne, says: "Three years ago I was annoyed by sudden pains in the small of my back, caused by exertion or the contraction of a cold. There was a steady, throbbing ache across my loins and I was so lame and sore that I could not get up after sitting. Headaches and dizzy spells annoyed me and the kidney secretions were in bad shape. Nothing brought me any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me, and there has never been the least return of the trouble.

Price, 50¢ at all dealers. Don't simply ask for kidney remedy-get Doan's Kidney Pills-the same that Mrs. Hansen had-Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
