MRS. E. R. CHACE DIES AT HOME IN STANTON

Mrs. E. R. Chace, mother of C. A. Chace of Wayne, died at her home in Stanton Monday evening, March 8, 1915, aged 84 years, 2 months and 27 days.

Mrs. Chace suffered a stroke of paralysis about three years ago, and another attack in the year when she became helpless. Friday night she began to fail rapidly.

All the surviving members of her family were at her bedside when she died. Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home of the deceased by Rev. Mr. Poucher of the Congregational church.

Mrs. Chace was a native of Ohio, and was married at Hamden, that place, to E. R. Chace, November 30, 1851. The family moved west in 1861, locating in Buchanan county, Iowa, and eight years later moved to Barton county, Missouri, in quest of a milder climate.

In 1883 she came to Wayne, where she lived a few years after the town started and saw a comparative wilderness and a land of luxuriance and prosperity. Some members of the family having located at Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. Chace moved to that place eight years ago.

Mr. Chace was the first mayor of Wayne, and an influential and highly respected citizen, died November 15, 1912. Mrs. Chace was a kindly, hospitable and helpful woman, and Wayne people remember her with high esteem.

Besides being survived by two brothers and two sisters, she leaves the following sons and daughters: C. A. Chace, Wayne; Charles and Nathan Chace, Stanton; James Chace, Pilger, Minn.; Mrs. M. Leod, and Mrs. Syl. Pearson, Stanton; Mrs. Mark Miller, Sioux Falls, S. D.

UNDER SERIOUS CHARGE.

C. M. Gray, representing himself to be an insurance agent, who went from here to Winfield last week, was charged with Wayne last Thursday, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, complaint having been filed by County Attorney Lyle Martin at the instance of Lyle Martin who claims to have been defrauded of something over $24,000 in the county jail awaiting developments.

FRED GILBERT TO BE HONORED.

500 Gun Clubs in Nation-Wide Celebration Arranged for Veteran Trapshooters

A conservative estimate shows there are at least one-half million trapshooters in the country and it is safe to say that the history and records of Fred Gilbert, the greatest trapshooter who ever entered the game, are familiar to all.

Twenty years ago, in October, 1895, to be exact, Fred Gilbert, a product of the prairies around Spirit Lake, Iowa, and entirely unknown and unheard of outside of his own precinct, made his debut in the shooting game at Baltimore, Md., and in the contest for the world's championship he vanquished a field of the best shots ever gathered together, and instantly ascended the ladder leading to the topmost niche in the history of trap-shooting fame, from which, it is conceded by all, he has never been removed, as, in all the years that have passed, his equal has not been produced, and very likely never will be.

As a man and a shooter, Fred Gilbert is in a class by himself. Quiet and reserved, gentlemanly and courteous to all, he has gone on through the twenty years of his career, shooting in every state in the Union, in most of the provinces of Canada, and even in England, Scotland and on the Continent, earning the respect of all who saw him by his wonderful marksmanship, and endearing himself to hundreds and hundreds of sportsmen who were fortunate enough to know him in close contact with him. Honors he has won, enough to turn the heads of a dozen men, and yet through all the victories and midst all the honors he has never anything but "Fred" Gilbert to his intimates, the shooters, and they are legion, and scattered broadcast throughout the land.

To properly commemorate the twentieth anniversary of Mr. Gilbert as a shooter, a gigantic nation-wide celebration has been arranged in his honor. On March 17, he will attend a complimentary shoot and dinner in Wilmington, Del., at which a large number of prominent trap-

There's no excuse for anyone not keeping their hands in the very best condition when Felber's Hand Lotion overcomes all skin troubles, such as roughness, rawness, chapped hands, and harsh, dry skin. A 25-cent bottle will benefit your hands and delight you immensely. Try it.

Throwing Your Voice Across the Continent

Talking by telephone 3,400 miles across the American Continent is now an accomplished fact. The celebration of this latest and greatest achievement in the art of telephony only recently took place.

This great triumph is the product of American brains, American initiative, and American scientific and technical skill. The service that is thus opened to the public is not equalled or approached in efficiency and comprehensiveness in any other country in the world.

The Bell System and its independent connecting companies now have 21,000,000 miles of wire and 9,000,000 telephones, or 65 per cent of all the telephones in the world, located in every nook and corner of the United States.

Truly, This is a Great American Achievement

NEWS LETTER FROM STATE LEGISLATURE

Lincoln, Neb., March 9.—Both the Senate and the House experienced a little touch of partisan politics during the past week. One line of contention in both houses being the alleged activity of Mr. Arthur Mullen in relation to items of pending legislation and a contention between Attorney Reed (Republican) and the State Rail Road Commission (Republican) in the house, which also seemed to take on the color of partisan politics. In the Senate a week ago, a resolution was offered by Quincy Rees (Republican) on the legislative activity of Mr. Mullen. It is said that this grew out of the issue represented by S. F. 6, the bill providing papers for the Omaha Water Board to engage in electric lighting etc. in that city. During the week Senator Greig of Harlan, offered a motion in the Senate to expunge from the Senate records the Mullen resolution which named Mr. Mullen and some other well known citizens of the state. The issue was strenuously contended, but resulted in a substitute for Mr. Mullen's trends, and motion cut to the matter out of the Senate Journal prevailing. In the House a similar issue was precipitated by Mockett of Lancaster, who is floor leader for the Republican minority. Here also the element hoping to give Mullen a swift upstart were equally unsuccessful. Mullen's friends secured a victory over their opponents. A contention precipitated by the complaint of Attorney General Reed as the legal adviser to state officers he was being ignored by the State Railway Commission in important litigation conducted by that body. The instant session of the House of a resolution by Langin of Greeley requiring the Railway Commission to consult the Attorney General in these matters. This took on the color of partisan division and was decided along that point rather than the merits of the resolution. The Langin requirement being finally adopted by the House after a spirited contest occurring in two or three different legislative days. Also of a political cast was the joint memorial to Congress in approval of President Wilson's purchase Bill. This memorial had passed the House and came to the leged necessity of a petition of their energies. Connected with this effort was the filing of a notice in the House on Wednesday, said to be signed by 19,685 citizens of Nebraska expressing an "honest doubt" that the railroads were receiving fair remuneration for their services and asking that their plea be given careful attention. The petition was signed by representatives 6,924 business men, 529 wage earners, 2028 farmers. Howard, MP granting municipal franchise to women was recommended for passage by the House. Its apparent approval of suffrage subject to qualification, as it received this favorable advance as the result of a vote on its author, which was planned to prevent him indulging in a long speech on the subject which he was known to have prepared. The House passed a bill providing the giving of jobs to relatives of elected officials and killed the "house" bill which proposed to offer bond lands of the state for sale, a vote of 35 to 51 against. By a vote of 32 to 31 the House passed the bill creating a supreme court commission of three members to be appointed by the court. H. R. 16, the "bill" which provides the "recall" for every elected officer in the state from highest to lowest, including the judges of all courts, passed the House with only seven negative votes recorded against it. The general salaries appropriation bill was presented in the House by Finance, Ways and Means committee. It evidently had been prepared by Chairman Norton of this committee but the bill should not be amended in any particular by the House and it was rushed through to approval in the short period of forty minutes. Even a typographical error which a member offered to amend was refused consideration, thereby confirming the belief that Chairman Norton had decided that no amendment whatever should be recorded in the House. The bill shows a number of reductions in official salaries, and it is alleged that these reductions confined largely to those employees drawing the smaller salaries from the state. House members who opportunity to amend declared that many of the salary cuts are not genuine economy, but are a direct slap at efficiency, as will be amply proven if the program is carried out. House members are already besieging the Senate asking for amendments on the bill to make it conform more nearly to their ideas of justice, equity, and reasonable regard for efficiency. That the bill will be extensively amended by the Senate goes without saying, and it will remain to be seen whether the "stream-roller" method used in the House are in the end effective. Most court for Omaha; regulating sale of hog serum; physicians lien on judgment in personal damage cases. The House was in a mood for killing and took the axe in no less five of the eight bills under consideration. Those approved provided: Penalty for unauthorized use of the doctor's title "M. D."; and permitting jeweler to sell repaired goods after six months. A motion adopted to send all appropriation bills to the top of the calendar indicates that the end of the session is approaching and that the fact is recognized even by the members. Senate during the week where it was approved by a vote of 17 to 12. A red hot issue appeared to be wrapped up in S. F. 166, which confers certain powers on the general government to impound certain unused, flood and waste waters of the state. The bill passed early in the week without much apparent notice, and went to the House in regular course. Friday the Senate awakened to the fact that it had given away a great deal more Nebraska water than it had intended to do. It led to an effort to recall the bill from the House, which resulted in the hottest senatorial battle of the session. Those who desired to curtail the gift of water as it stood in the bill were successful in requesting its return to the Senate for amendment, which will take the line of cutting down the authority of the United States very materially should the element which pulled Sioux City has started the clean-up season early and seems to be making considerable headway.

Fancy leads where sound sense would not go. Many who fall coming out as the cause an overwhelming abundance of the former.

The weather has had a disturbing influence on business the last few weeks but is reasonable to presume that the long spell of unfavorable elements will be followed by an auspicious season in which trade conditions will be more active than usual.

The Fremont Herald, democratic editorials endorsement to the policy of non-partisan newspapers. It believes newspapers should be independent of party ties in consideration of public questions and publication of the fact that the Herald editor was recently defeated in primary for the Fremont postmaster may have been influential in showing the utter futility of running a paper for mere party favor.

Some statesman with an inflated idea of the pertinaciousness and cunningness of newspapers, has introduced in the legislature a bill to make them uniformly gentle and well behaved. By his bill, the statesman proposes that, should still further hammer means of publicity—the greatest safeguard of the public and of American institutions. An occasional exception to the rule of integrity leads the author of the bill to make a general and unwarranted attack on newspapers. The legislative majority will serve the public best by quietly chloroforming the bill and filing it away with other discarded measures.

The ingenious and resourceful banking department of the federal government requires more and more elaborate and complicated reports from national banks. The reports banks sent out are bigger and ask for more detailed information, requiring more work and thus more expense. The banks may well wonder what the banking department of the government will be able to think of next to require in the way of reports. These points, thus far untouched, may suggest consideration. The gender, weight, age, bust measurement, condition of teeth, digestion of feet, religion, nationality, and politics of each depositor together with a separate and complete history of each antecedent back to Adam.

It is interesting to note the favor bestowed on ex-President Taft by newspaper editors were strongly opposed to him three years ago and while the Herald appreciates the ability and high character of the former president, it believes that Justice Hughes, former governor of New York, is more generally favored at this time for the republican presidential nomination next year. Speaking of ex-President Taft, the St. Joe News, which was aggressively anti-Taft in 1912 has this to say: "There were a great many American citizens who by their votes in 1912, said William Howard Taft had been a poor president. Now everybody is saying he is a mighty good ex-president. Mr. Taft has grown greatly in public esteem since he left the White House and today stands abreast with the greatest of American statesmen and patriots."

The federal government seems bent on adding to the burdens of corporations, big and little, from year to year, until such an organization has become almost an intolerable nuisance. No matter how small the corporation, nor how small its net earnings, it is required to pay a tax and furnish to the internal revenue department statistics that exact a labyrinth of figuring that would otherwise be useless and unnecessary. A few years ago a corporation on net earnings no matter how small they happen to be, increasing hardships inflicted on corporations by the government make it advisable to avoid such an organization if business can be handled otherwise.

Mrs. John D. Haskell was hostess at a "pantry show" for Miss Minnie Fredrickson Saturday afternoon. After the guests had assembled, Miss Vena Green began to play "The Maiden's Wedding March" and to its music appeared Miss Berth Hanson, the Misses Howard, Berth, Leamer and Eberstein, dressed as flower girls, with their arms filled with gifts, which they laid at the feet of the bride-elite. A host of housewifery by the guests was also presented to Miss Fredrickson. A delicious two-course luncheon was served.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fredrickson at high noon Wednesday, when their daughter, Miss Minnie Harrett, became the bride of Mr. Edward Sandahl, jr. The rooms were beautifully decorated in shades of pink and white, the bride's chosen colors being Nile green and white. With Miss Edna Sandahl at the piano, the eight girls attended the girls singing the bridal chorus. Next followed Roy Fredrickson and Ernest Sandahl and the Misses Nettie Sandahl and Edith Jackson as bridesmaids. Then came Miss Weberg of Pender, cousin of the bride, as maid of honor. She was followed by the bride and her father who met the groom and best man, Fred Sandahl at the altar. Rev. Seel read the impressive wedding ceremony, which united their lives. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white crepe de meteur, with lace draperies. Her veil was caught up with sprays of smilax; she carried a beautiful shower bouquet of white roses and hyacinths. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore gowns of white-chiffon over green, and carried arm bouquets of white roses. After congratulations were extended, the sixty guests found places at three long tables and partook of a four-course wedding dinner. Short talks were made by Rev. Seel and Rev. Mr. K. and Mrs. Sandahl left on the evening train for Lincoln and after April 1 will be at home on the groom's farm southwest of town.

SYNOPSIS.

Frank O'Connell, young Irish patriot is shot and wounded by British soldiers while making a speech in England. Angela Kingnoorth, an English society girl, who defends him.

Angela takes O'Connell to her brother's home and helps to nurse him. He recovers, and she and the girl, Constance, leave him.

O'Connell when well is sent to jail for disturbing the peace. He finally writes Angela that he has finished his sentence.

O'Connell and Angela wed. She has espoused the Irish cause. Her brother a member of parliament, is very angry.

CHAPTER VII.

A Communication From Nathaniel Kingnoorth.

THE months that followed were the most pleasant of my life. My life as he would, he could do no really remunerative employment. He had no special training. He had to start out of some front was not cultured and lacked the glow of eloquence he had when speaking at the meetings. He had to learn to write on news papers. But his lack of experience anywhere handicapped him. What he wanted to earn during those months of struggle was all too little as the time approached for the great event.

Angela was now entirely content to wait for the great event. She had spent O'Connell's waking and sleeping. nothing was too much to give her. The fact that her brother had cabled strengthened the belief that he had been shot. She opened the cable and read it. Then she fell back on the pillow, with a low, faint moan.

She was up in a moment. O'Connell returned from a vain search for work he found her senses with the cable in her hands. He tried to restrain his without success. He sent a neighbor for a doctor. As he watched the poor, patient face, his heart fell to bursting. He thought of the death of his mother, as he lay on his back, his eyes closed, his hands clasped in prayer. He became conscious of the cable he had found tucked in her hand. It was very brief. All it said was:

You have made your bed. Lie in it. SATHAN.

Toward morning the doctor placed a little note of humanity in O'Connell's arms. He looked down at it in a stupor. It had really come to pass—the child—Angela's and his. A little baby girl! The girl that from this child, born of love and in sorrow, seemed to have been sent to me as a punishment for my sins as the hot tears flowed down his cheeks. "A woman in one of the adjoining flats," he had kindly offered to look after the child for him. The doctor led him to the bedside. He looked down at his loved one. A glance was over Angela's eyes as she looked up him. He tried to smile. All his suffering was forgotten. She knew only love and life. She was at peace. She raised her hands. His eyes transparent now, to O'Connell. He pressed it to his lips.

"My baby, bring me my baby!" He took it from the woman and placed it in Angela's weak arms. She held it and again. The child wailed pitifully. The effort had been too much for Angela's falling strength. Consciousness left her.

Just before sunrise she woke. O'Connell was sitting beside her. He had never moved. The infant was sleeping. He wakened her with a touch. The woman watching her.

Angela motioned her husband to bend over her. Her eyes sparkled with childly brightness. He put his arms about her. Her lips were very faint.

"Take care of our baby, Frank. I'm leaving you and God help you—and keep you and bless you for your love of me." She passed out.

"Her own brother, yet tell me!" asked Peg, writhing in pain. "I'm full!"

"Little girls clung to a matron's skirt, although no one recognized her thoroughly," said O'Connell, while a large part of the determined article of the Irish every day, including the English laws, depriving them of the right of free speech and of meeting to spread light among the people. The English laws, depriving them of the right of free speech and of meeting to spread light among the people. The English laws, depriving them of the right of free speech and of meeting to spread light among the people.

What changed O'Connell more particularly was an action of a band of so-called "patriots" who operated in many parts of Ireland—maiming cattle, running gaols, during the season of farmers who did not do their bidding and who shooting at landlords and prominent people connected with the government.

He avoided the possibility of imprisonment again for the sake of Peg. What would befall her if he were taken? He continued thought that preyed upon him was that he would have nothing to leave her when his cell mate, a little man, with a red nose and a little money, when he had a small surplus he would spend it on Peg—a shawl to keep her warm or a ribbon to give the woman of color to the drab little clothes.

On great occasions he would buy her a new dress, and then Peg was the proudest little child in the whole of Ireland.

Every year on the anniversary of her mother's death O'Connell had a mass of flowers for the house of Angela's soul, and he would kneel beside Peg through the service and be silent for the rest of the day. One year he had a candle blessed in the name of Our Lady's saint and he stayed long after the service was over. He sent Peg home, but, through Peg's own fault, he was not in the church, she kept watch outside until her father came out. He was wiping his eyes as he saw her. He pretended to be very angry.

"Didn't I tell ye to go home?" "Ye did, father."

"Why didn't ye obey me?" "Sure an' what would I be doin' at home, all alone, without you? Don't be cross with me, father."

They went back to their work. They walked home in silence. He had been crying, and Peg could not understand it. She had never seen him do such a thing before. And it was not as if he had not seen right that a man should cry. It seems a weakness, and that he is of the baptismal waters on O'Connell and Angela's baby, and it was Father Cahill's voice that read the words.

She was christened Margaret. Angela, one night, when it was nearly dark, she heard a faint cry. She went to christen her Margaret, after her mother, since all the time in Angela came from her mother.

"I liked much to name the little Angela. But his dead wife's wishes were prominent. So Margaret was the name chosen. It was long too distinguished a name and too long for such a little bundle of pink and white humanity. It did not seem to her. So she called her Peg, and 'Peg' she remained for the rest of her life.

Looking large in Peg's memories in after life was her father showing her St. Kevin's hill and pointing out the ground on which he stood and spoke that day, while her mother, hidden by that dense mass of trees, saw every movement and heard every word.

"Then somehow her children thought of Ireland and hatred of England—to thinking all that was good of Irish men and all that was bad of English."

"Why do ye hate the English so much, father?" she asked O'Connell once, looking up at him with a puzzled look in her big blue eyes and the adorable brogue coming fresh from her tongue.

"Why do ye hate them?" she repeated. "I'm good cause, Peg, the darlin', he answered, and a deep frown gathered on his brow.

"My baby, bring me my baby!" He took it from the woman and placed it in Angela's weak arms. She held it and again. The child wailed pitifully. The effort had been too much for Angela's falling strength. Consciousness left her.

He sent Peg home, but, through Peg's own fault, he was not in the church, she kept watch outside until her father came out. He was wiping his eyes as he saw her. He pretended to be very angry.

"Didn't I tell ye to go home?" "Ye did, father."

"Why didn't ye obey me?" "Sure an' what would I be doin' at home, all alone, without you? Don't be cross with me, father."

They went back to their work. They walked home in silence. He had been crying, and Peg could not understand it. She had never seen him do such a thing before. And it was not as if he had not seen right that a man should cry. It seems a weakness, and that he is of the baptismal waters on O'Connell and Angela's baby, and it was Father Cahill's voice that read the words.

She was christened Margaret. Angela, one night, when it was nearly dark, she heard a faint cry. She went to christen her Margaret, after her mother, since all the time in Angela came from her mother.

"I liked much to name the little Angela. But his dead wife's wishes were prominent. So Margaret was the name chosen. It was long too distinguished a name and too long for such a little bundle of pink and white humanity. It did not seem to her. So she called her Peg, and 'Peg' she remained for the rest of her life.

Looking large in Peg's memories in after life was her father showing her St. Kevin's hill and pointing out the ground on which he stood and spoke that day, while her mother, hidden by that dense mass of trees, saw every movement and heard every word.

"Then somehow her children thought of Ireland and hatred of England—to thinking all that was good of Irish men and all that was bad of English."

"Why do ye hate the English so much, father?" she asked O'Connell once, looking up at him with a puzzled look in her big blue eyes and the adorable brogue coming fresh from her tongue.

"Why do ye hate them?" she repeated. "I'm good cause, Peg, the darlin', he answered, and a deep frown gathered on his brow.

"My baby, bring me my baby!" He took it from the woman and placed it in Angela's weak arms. She held it and again. The child wailed pitifully. The effort had been too much for Angela's falling strength. Consciousness left her.

Just before sunrise she woke. O'Connell was sitting beside her. He had never moved. The infant was sleeping. He wakened her with a touch. The woman watching her.

Angela motioned her husband to bend over her. Her eyes sparkled with childly brightness. He put his arms about her. Her lips were very faint.

"Take care of our baby, Frank. I'm leaving you and God help you—and keep you and bless you for your love of me." She passed out.

"Her own brother, yet tell me!" asked Peg, writhing in pain. "I'm full!"

What changed O'Connell more particularly was an action of a band of so-called "patriots" who operated in many parts of Ireland—maiming cattle, running gaols, during the season of farmers who did not do their bidding and who shooting at landlords and prominent people connected with the government.

He avoided the possibility of imprisonment again for the sake of Peg. What would befall her if he were taken? He continued thought that preyed upon him was that he would have nothing to leave her when his cell mate, a little man, with a red nose and a little money, when he had a small surplus he would spend it on Peg—a shawl to keep her warm or a ribbon to give the woman of color to the drab little clothes.

On great occasions he would buy her a new dress, and then Peg was the proudest little child in the whole of Ireland.

Every year on the anniversary of her mother's death O'Connell had a mass of flowers for the house of Angela's soul, and he would kneel beside Peg through the service and be silent for the rest of the day. One year he had a candle blessed in the name of Our Lady's saint and he stayed long after the service was over. He sent Peg home, but, through Peg's own fault, he was not in the church, she kept watch outside until her father came out. He was wiping his eyes as he saw her. He pretended to be very angry.

French Remedy for Stomach Troubles

The leading doctors of France have for years used a prescription of simple table salts, for chronic stomach trouble and constipation that acts like a charm. One dose will convince. Several cases of years' standing are so many people are getting surprising results that we feel all persons suffering from constipation, lower bowel, liver and stomach troubles should try Mary's Wonderful Remedy. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere with positive understanding that your money is refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

For Stomach and Liver.

L. N. Stuart, West Webster, N. Y., writes: "I have used Chamberlain's Tablets for disorders of the stomach and liver off and on for the past five years, and it affords me pleasure to tell you that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effectual, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by all dealers."

Recognize Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to my customers because I have confidence in it. I find that they are pleased with it and call for it when again in need of such a restorative. I have used it myself. I have recommended it to my friends. I have seen it cure many cases of coughs and colds. For sale by all dealers."

HERALD EXCHANGE GLEANINGS OF WEEK

Walden Republican. We hope the senior class will adopt the recommendation of the board and wear caps and gowns at the commencement. For the sake of looks, class unity and distinction, and economy it is the sensible thing to do!

Dakota County Record. Orin Garwood, who has been editor of the Dixon Journal during the winter was up for a Sunday visit at his farm on Walker's Island. He expects to close up his work there in the near future and return to his agricultural duties for this summer.

Bixby in Lincoln Journal. "War," says a Minnesota minister, is a clash of life for the good or evil or between right and wrong." Stuff and nonsense! War is a clash between evil on the one hand and the same thing on the other hand. It is the colossal, inexcusable crime of the centuries, exemplified now by herism in the name of civilization.

Norfolk Press. Joe Dobbin who moved here from his farm near Hoskins a few years ago and owns a nice residence property in the west end of town is spoken of as a possible candidate for mayor. Dobbin is honest, responsible, has the time to spare and we believe would make a capable man in either the chief executive's chair or in that of a councilman.

Tekamah Journal. Mrs. D. W. MacGregor left Monday morning for a three months visit with her daughter, Mrs. Rennie, at Los Angeles. At this time Mr. and Mrs. Rennie and baby expect to return with Mrs. MacGregor as they have come to the conclusion that California is not particularly attractive to them. Rev. MacGregor accompanied his wife as far as Omaha on her western journey.

West Point Democrat. Henry Hottman loaded his goods and shipped them to Wayne this week, where he will go to farming again on his place one mile east and two miles north of town. He has been off the farm the past three years, during which time he and his estimable family made their home in this city. Two years ago he paid a visit to the old country. We are sorry to see him go, but he will come back often and see his old time friends. We wish him and his folks well in their Wayne county home.

"Hairless" Poetry.
Bixby in Lincoln Journal:
I remember so well in the years that are gone
How the men went about with their whiskers all on.
There was then no invisible germs to be feared.
Now we look all in vain for the man with the beard.
He has gone from our sight, saving now and then one;
He has vanished away like the mists in the sun.
Yes, he has a halo of youth 's upon his fair brow—
And his face is as smooth as a stubblefield now.

Lincoln Journal: The trouble surrounding the administration and the ever-widening breach in the democratic party have caused gossip to reawaken concerning the possibility of bringing the old republican party together on one candidate and a single platform. Colonel Roosevelt seems to be out of consideration as a regular republican candidate. If he appears in the national arena in 1916 he is likely to be at the head of a war party or a party devoted to active national defense. Among republicans the only one who just now much discussion of the possibility of drafting Justice Hughes for the nomination. The practical difficulty in the way, his refusal to be a candidate, might be surmounted by bringing out a large body of favorite sons. This would make the nomination of any out of them a virtual impossibility. After taking a few ineffectual ballots a committee could then be appointed to wait upon Justice Hughes with the request that he stand for the nomination. It is the most interesting under-currents of the early discussion deals with the possibility that ex-President Taft may prove a strong figure in the republican convention. There is no doubt that he will be the most interesting figure in recent months. But the demand for his nomination has yet hardly reached a whisper. The real call seems to be for Hughes.

every section of the state, from the far northwest section, from the long Kansas border line across the state from south to north, from west to east, the condition is the same—Nebraska is under a cover of moisture and snow which no previous record duplicates. The condition is as unusual as it is altogether welcome; its meaning is, that this early in the year there is an antidote to last into the months to come against adverse conditions that might come in the crop growing weeks of the year. It is remarkable to see conditions of superabundant moisture so universal over the state. The plains country to the northwest and in the far western sections have not seen in years so much moisture as has settled in the soil during the present winter months. Through the central and eastern sections moisture conditions elsewhere in the state are emphasized, and the two or three million acres of winter wheat are under a March blanket of snow, with the fields so saturated that spring winds can carry no threat of injury when they come. Great as was the winter wheat crop last year, it entered its growing season with no such universal good prospects as those surrounding the wheat crop of Nebraska as it emerges from the winter months this year. How far down moisture conditions reach is shown in the almost impassable condition of high ways; no such an era of bottomless ruts has been on in Nebraska for years. Even in the western section of the state the people are finding a daily topic of discussion in the conditions of their highways.

Throughout the range and cattle districts of the state the same depth of snow prevails, and stock men feel assured that the grass growth on the plains and through the sand hill districts will be unusually heavy this year. The cattle country is as happy over the prospect as is the winter wheat belt, and corn growers see opening conditions for another great crop beyond comparison, because of the stored and surface moisture that the present winter has given Nebraska. The crop of 1914 has brought to this state business conditions equal to those of surrounding Missouri valley states. It has lifted Nebraska to the front rank in states of largest production. If we shall realize through the exceptional good prospects of the present, another crop year equal to the past, its effect upon the state, its prosperity and business advancement will be far more noticeable than has the crop of 1914 been. For there will be no empty bins to fill, no flocks and herds to build up, no delayed expenses to meet because of previous losses. The largest factor in the 1914 crop has been bringing things up to a new basis of fixed and prosperous conditions. If upon this new basis we place a record crop of wheat and corn in 1915, with an already secured great enlargement of herds of cattle and swine, what may this state not expect in the volume of prosperity coming to its people? The outlook is here for all and more than herein briefly pointed.
